Fatally Injured

While walking along the track of the DSS&A last Thursday evening, Carl Strand, an employe of the Cleveland Mining Co., was overtaken by a freight engine at the Third street crossing. He stepped aside to let the cars pass, and in doing so slipped and fell, his heel being caught and crushed by the wheels of the locomotive. The injured man was taken to the Ishpeming hospital, where death relieved him of his sufferings in a few hours. The severe nervous shock which such an accident would give a man of somewhat advanced age and low vitality, was doubtless the immediate cause of death, such injuries not being necessarily fatal. . . .
