Candid, to Say the Least. Candor is a virtue that few possess, but it was exhibited in a "striking" manner an evening or two ago. Two young men, both in a condition of semi-paralysis, induced by an over-indulgence in budge, were sitting in front of a business building on one of the principal streets, when an altercation arose between them. Said one, "You long-legged dude, Tam a (hic) the others to get through. It must be disgood mind to hit you a smash in the mouth!" "Well, why don't you then?" said the other in surprise. "Why," said the first, "because I am too drunk to hit you hard enough to do any good." Their friends appeared, and took them away before any gore was shed.

Perhaps the most striking instance of western states in the line of manufacturing is represented in the placing of manufactured wool goods on the eastern market. A short time ago an agent of Brown Bros. & Co., San Francisco, and of the stain from their ordinary business pursuits college, was yesterday introduced to the MIN-Oregon Woolen Manufacturing Co., visited from 1 o'clock until 5 o'clock P. M. Marquette, and exhibited a line of goods of such superior quality, that one of our merchants. Mr. I. Neuberger, although pretty well stocked with woolen goods, purchased a large invoice, which has arrived direct from the manufactories. A reporter of the MINING JOURNAL heard of this, and had the curiosity to examine some of the goods. From the Oregon company have been received a lot of woven woolen underwear and the finest, heaviest and handsomest lap robes the reporter has ever seen, besides a line of heavy blue overshirts and fine cassimere pants. A novice can immediately see the entire superiority of these goods over many of the popular eastern makes. The Oregon company raise their own sheep, shear, card and spin the wool, and make it up. The San Francisco company obtains all its material from this concern, and in equal excellence. It is owing to these but if so she gives no indication of it. facts that these two houses, who have grown immensely wealthy in the trade, can ship their goods overland to Marquette and points further eastward, and then compete with New York and Chicago amining this arrival, the first manufactured stuffs which have been received in Marquette from the Pacific coast.
