ST. IGNACE has a salt well, and thinks it has an iron mine somewhere under its streets. The salt well is one sunk by the Mackinac Lumber company, and as it produces red brine—and hasn't been "salted" by any less potent agency than nature—there is a chance for a new and valuable industry at that point.

The Duluth Herald states that the advance in the price of pig iron will enable the blast furnace at that point to manufacture pig metal at a profit, and predicts that it will resume work at an early date. No before spring, we learn again. The furnace isn't provided with a stock of ore, and has no rail connection with the Vermillion region, its natural field of supply. Ore might be obtained from Ashland, but the cost of transportation would be too great. We opine, to permit of the furnace being run on Gogebie ores at a profit, even at the price pig iron now commands.

Congress will meet to-day under unusual conditions, this being the first time in nearly a quarter of a century that a new congress assembled with a democratic chief executive holding down the presidential chair. Nevertheless there promises to be nothing startling about the opening of the session. John Sherman will be chosen president of the senate, senator Logan having shrewdly declined the nomination of his party for the place, and Mr. Carlisle will undoubtedly be elected speaker of the lower house. It would be a waste of time to speculate on what the session will bring forth at this stage—"acts" will be before the people in due time, and by these it must be judged. It is a fairly representative body, on the whole, and ought to be able to render a good account of itself.

The Mining News, of Florence, is informed by Supt. Jones, of the Iron River Furnace Co., that the new furnace built by his company will go into blast within a month. The company has now on hand 200,000 bushels of coal, of which amount 170,000 bushels are in the sheds at the furnace. The company expects to be compelled to obtain some coal outside, at least until still more complete arrangements can be made to enlarge the product at home. The furnace will not be run to its fullest capacity at first. This plant embodies a great many features not to be found in connection with any other furnace at present in existence. It will be the only furnace in the world that handles its ore from the mine to the furnace but once, and without the use of a single shovel. Great results are expected, and the paper predicts that every anticipation will be realized.

A SINGULAR PLAIN. The American Manufacturer of the 4th has this editorial, discussing "The Necessity of Cheap Northern Ore."

The only thing in the way of the cheap production of pig iron in the section west of the Allegheny mountains and north of the Ohio river has been the exorbitant price of iron ore. Every other condition is favorable. This incalculable it is, in the past at least, been impossible to throw off. And what has been even worse, when ore has been needed most it has been the most difficult to obtain. The company owning the mines in Michigan and Missouri—from which regions come the ore used in the section named—have pursued the policy of mining and shipping only enough ore—or what they have thought to be enough—to last from the close of one season till the opening of the next. Some years they have mined and shipped enough, and some years they have not. It has depended upon the course of the iron trade, which no person can gauge. The year 1879 furnished a conspicuous illustration. In the latter half of that year the demand for pig iron suddenly became enormous, and prices mounted upward with astonishing rapidity. The demand could have been met if there had been plenty of ore, and prices could have been kept within reasonable limits; for more than half the furnaces were idle. But the owners of the idle furnaces were helpless, their hands were tied, and the buyers of pig iron were obliged to send to Europe for supplies. The ore producers would gladly have furnished the idle furnaces with ore, for prices were remunerative, but they too were helpless—made so by their own policy. In other words, they had limited production to what they estimated would be the season's requirement, and when the "boom" burst upon the country the season was too far spent for them to remedy their mistake, except to a very limited extent. It was too near the period of ice and snow, which interfere with production and utterly prevent shipment by lake.

The foregoing thoughts have been chiefly suggested by the present position of the iron trade. There is an active demand for Bessemer pig iron, at higher and advancing prices; that class of iron is scarce, at least half the furnaces are idle; Bessemer ore is reported to be very scarce, and the lakes will soon be closed to navigation. These facts indicate a possible famine in domestic Bessemer pig iron this winter and liberal importations of foreign Bessemer iron and ore. The active demand for Bessemer iron, and the resulting higher prices for the same, may impart a "boom" to the other classes of pig iron, and we may have, upon a comparatively limited scale, a repetition of the trade of 1879 and 1880, the reaction from which proved so trying to the iron trade in all its branches, from the ore up.

These periods of scarcity and high prices, with the succeeding periods of over-production and depressed prices, would be prevented—largely at least—if the ore miners of the Lake Superior region would keep adequate stocks of ore at Cleveland and other accessible points. This might not have been their interest in the past. We do not assume to know. It may not be at present. But we are inclined to think it is. The conditions affecting the ore industry west of the Allegheny mountains have greatly changed within the last two years, and the change is still going on, with accelerated speed. New and important districts have been developed with amazing energy and success, on both sides of the lakes. This of itself has an important bearing on the industry. But the most powerful cause affecting the Michigan and Missouri ore industry is the rapid development of the southern iron industry. The southern operators cannot send their unsmelted ore into the vast region hitherto monopolized by the Michigan and Missouri operators, but in the form of pig iron they can send it into every part of that region unless their northern rivals can sell their ore at much lower prices than they have exacted in the past. The ore miners of Michigan and Missouri depend for custom upon furnace owners west of the Ohio river, and the latter must have cheap ore or abandon their furnaces, and they must have enough of it at all times. Otherwise the southern furnace owners will "occupy the land," and occupy it permanently. Competition from that quarter will be quite different from the periodical competition of foreign manufacturers, a competition that is notably present only in times of scarcity.

It is true that as yet the southern manufacturers do not send Bessemer pig iron into the northern states—but little ore suitable for making that class of iron has been found and developed in that section—but there are ores there that will make iron suitable for basic Clapp-Griffiths steel, and it may be depended upon that it will not be many years until such steel is produced south of the Ohio river. The steel, south, will displace as much northern ore as is sent in the shape of pig iron. We have no intention of trying to alarm the ore producers of Michigan and Missouri, nor do we pretend to know as much about their business as they do themselves, but we are satisfied that it will do them no harm to think over the points that we have called up. Considered as an article in the interest of owners of blast furnaces, and plans for bringing iron into finished forms, the Manufacturer's editorial has its merits. But we fail to see its pertinency as addressed to the miners of iron ore in the regions named. Its gist is that they should produce without reference to consumption, in order that the consumers may never fail of an abundant supply when they happen to need it; and may, further, be in a position to fix the price at a figure low enough to admit of profitable competition on their part with other iron-producing districts. Assuming that the industry of mining iron ore stands in a subordinate and subservient relation to the higher branches of the iron industry, this position might be tenable. But as matters stand it is absurdly taken. Our mine owners are under no obligation to conduct their business solely with an eye to the benefit of furnace-men and mill owners. They have considerable money invested in their properties and plants, and are entitled to the best return thereon that the state of the market warrants and they can secure by sagacious management. It would be very unwise for them to act on the Manufacturer's suggestion, and pile up immense stocks of ore at Cleveland or elsewhere just to guard against possible embarrassment to furnace-men and mill owners from an "ore famine." Nor are they likely to do it, much as they desire to aid the latter in the work of keeping "cheap southern iron" from winning and maintaining a foothold in the northern market. Has the Manufacturer so soon forgotten that the supply of ore at lower lake ports has been uniformly in excess of the consumptive demand for the past three years; that the fact has been taken advantage of by consumers to bring the price of ore down to a point so low that fully one-third of the mines of the Lake Superior region have remained inactive during the past year; and the possibility of such a thing as a scarcity of ore last summer until the probability of it stared them in the face and out of countenance? By that time the season had so far advanced that the mines could not have greatly increased their output for the year had they so desired. It was too late for this when the reluctant admission came from the consumers that earlier in the season might have inspired the mine owners to an increased activity which would have made the year's output, from this field alone, several hundred thousand tons. If there should be a shortage of ore before another season opens, therefore, the consumers and not the producers will be to blame. Their "hand-to-mouth" policy, persisted in after it ceased to be a wise policy, has kept many of our mines idle and prevented those which were wrought from being worked up to their full capacity, and it would be only retributive justice if their effort to hold down prices should react to their disadvantage. We quite agree with the Manufacturer that ore must be furnished as cheaply as possible henceforth, if the iron industry north is to hold its own against all comers. But if the mines are to be wrought on a close margin, so must the furnaces that they supply their product be operated. Only by united effort between them all, by a fair division of the profits and fair assignment of the burdens, can the desired result be accomplished. The ore miner is a tolerably patient individual, but he has a hearty love for a "fair deal," and will never, no never, consent to take a menial's part in the great and noble work of building up and maintaining in a prosperous state the iron industry of the north.

ARMED FOR THE ARGUMENT. Settlers in the Iron River District Organizing to Defend Their Claims Against Contesting Cash-Entrymen. Florence Mining News: The settlers in the Iron River district have organized and armed themselves to protect their interests and drive off lumbermen, who are cutting pine on lands they purchased years ago, but which have come into dispute owing to a technical error on the part of the government and the dishonesty of certain piratical shysters at Washington and elsewhere. Contractor Fraser, who is jobbing for Cullerson and others, was ordered off, but he succeeded in settling with a man named Coffin, who, for the consideration of $125, relinquished all of his alleged claims. Mr. Fraser settled at the earliest way out of the difficulty, as he would have lost more than that amount had he been compelled to cease operations for a day or two. Other operators in the district, including R. G. Peters, of Manistee; Sargent, Jennings & Gilkey, and the Menominee River Lumber Co., expect to have trouble. Mr. F. Morrison, agent for R. G. Peters, stated to a Mining News representative that he would stand no nonsense. "I have been instructed by Mr. Peters to pursue a legal course," he said. "We do not hire men to fight, and you could not expect a body of men, armed with nothing but axes, to oppose those armed with repeating rifles. So, if we are compelled to we shall stop, but we will see that the proper authorities protect us, and deal as they should with those who threaten us and place our lives in danger." It was stated a week ago that 111 of the settlers had signed articles of agreement to stand by each other and protect their interests at all hazards. Fifty or sixty of these are armed with rifles and they make a very formidable body. Nightly meetings are held, and it is stated that some drilling has been done. It is quite evident that they will get into serious trouble if they persist in pursuing a course of outwary which has been inaugurated. If they have rights which are being trespassed upon, they can certainly take legal measures to protect themselves and not destroy sympathy they might otherwise have by patrolling the woods in armed mobs, threatening and molesting those who can quote an hundred reasons for believing they are perfectly right.

"A Cinder in My Eye." (Our Boston correspondent writes) "You look brown, hale, hearty and happy, doctor; you have evidently been taking a vacation your self, as well as some others who come under your care." This was what the writer said to his family physician, who meeting him by chance on Washington street recently. "Yes," replied the doctor, "I have been upon a short vacation back in the country, and have enjoyed myself with a quiet rest for a couple of weeks, but—do you see that left eye? It looks inflamed, doesn't it? Well, I had a most painful experience, coming home from my vacation, by railroad. A large, sharp-pointed cedar joist in my left eye, and nothing else, was so bad that I could allow anybody else to do, I was in such agony of pain, would remove it on the way, so I have just come from my old friend Dr. ———, the oculist, who, after treating my eye for a month or so with cocaine took out the cedar without the least twinge of pain to me, and I am happy again. All cocaine is going to be a great blessing to mankind in treating the eyes, and possibly in many other ways."

"I notice you pronounce it 'oc-les-um,' doctor. Is that the professional way?" "That is about as near as the average American would be likely to get in pronouncing the foreign word."

The attempted formation of a branch of the Irish National League in this place should be successful.

The first league polo game to be played here Wednesday evening, will probably attract a good audience. It should do so.

The day passenger train running between Milwaukee and Escanaba, now leaves Escanaba at 8:30 A. M. and arrives at 6:25 P. M.

The Fat Men's polo club practices regularly. Captain Seas insists on thorough discipline, and his men are determined to "get there" if such a thing be possible.

Mr. Mooney's letter in the MINING JOURNAL of Saturday was very favorably commented on by those who read it. James manifests a decided ability as a controversialist, and when he takes the goose quill in his fist to punish an enemy, govt and ink are going to flow in a mingled stream.

Dr. N. J. Lund, of whom Ishpeming formerly boasted, is now practicing in Marquette. Last week he made a flying visit to our neighboring city, and started for the return to Wisconsin on Saturday. While here he went into the Depot House to stake his throat, and was somewhat surprised on coming out to see the train moving off in the distance. His little girl was on board, and he started on a "stern chase" after the moving train, but was unsuccessful in catching up. The spectacle afforded considerable amusement to the people who witnessed the doctor's burst of speed.

The Adelphi Carnival. The carnival at the Adelphi rink Friday night proved a success, though there was every reason for thinking that it would be otherwise. The evening was very stormy and the announcement was made late in the afternoon that the carnival had been postponed. Later, as the crowd began to arrive, it was seen that postponement was unnecessary. Nearly three hundred people were present, and there were fifty makers on the floor. The number would have been much larger had the weather been propitious.

Prizes were awarded as follows: First prize, for finest costume, Mr. and Mrs. Anthony; for best single lady's costume, Miss Cole; best single gentleman's costume, Harry Bradley, of Ishpeming; best comic couple, Messrs. Legaux and Reynolds; second best comic costume, Ed. Gibbon.

After the skating there was a ball. It is quite likely that the entertainment will be repeated later in the season.

New Time Tables. The winter time table went into effect on the M. H. & O. yesterday. The east-bound trains arrive, and leave here as follows: Passenger No. 4 (from Michigamme) at 8:52 A. M.; mail No. 2 (from Houghton) at 12:25 P. M.; passenger No. 6 (from Michigamme) at 5:32 P. M., and mail No. 8, from Ishpeming, at 3:25 P. M.

West-bound passenger trains leave as follows: Mail No. 7, at 12:47 P. M.; passenger No. 5, at 5:30 P. M.; mail No. 1, at 3:38 P. M., and passenger No. 3, at 8:58 A. M.

Only trains No. 7 and 8 run on Sundays, and consequently there are only two Sunday trains, instead of six, as formerly.

The Chicago mail train arrives here one hour later than by the summer running time on the Chicago & Northwestern railway.

New Time Tables. The running time of the C. & N. W. railway was changed yesterday. Passenger No. 2 leaves here at 12:55, and passenger No. 1 arrives at 3:15 P. M. Freight No. 26 leaves here for Escanaba at 10 A. M.; No. 28 at 1:30 P. M. No. 25 arrives at 8:43 A. M., No. 27 at 12:13 P. M.

ISHPEMING.

Skating on Lake Angeline will now be in order. The store winds look bright with holiday goods.

Thomas Broken, the man killed Friday morning at the Winthrop, was buried yesterday.

"Dr." Lund has gone back to Marinette again. His visit here was short, but not any too much so.

There was a heavy wind, accompanied by some snow, part of Saturday and during the whole of yesterday.

The mercury dropped to zero Sunday morning for the first time this winter. The temperature was one degree below.

Taxes are due, and can be paid at the Ishpeming national bank. Please drop in and "come down" with the cash.

E. Austin has bought the confectionery store and retail bakery of Wm. Malmberg, on Main street, and will continue the business there.

Manager Jenks, of the Superior rink, is negotiating with a number of attractions, and hopes to secure some of them for an early date.

The libel suit of Frank M. Nottan, against George A. Newett will come on for hearing before Justice Carlson to day, beginning at 9 o'clock this morning.

L'Union Canadienne Francaise did not turn out in a body Saturday morning as was announced. The weather was too chilling for outdoor demonstrations of any kind.

Run Over and Killed. George Schaefer, the boy who was fatally injured Wednesday night by a team, was buried Saturday morning from the Catholic church. It is definitely known that he was run over by Jones & Outhwaite's coal team. The accident happened at nearly six o'clock in the morning, and the driver did not learn of it till the next day. The boy was picked up by some men who were passing by soon after the accident happened. He recovered consciousness before death, and said that he did not blame the driver of the team which passed over him.

This fatal accident should prove a warning to the boys in the city—but it won't. They will learn, like other people, only from experience.

Bel's Sympathizers. A meeting of the French Canadians of the county was held at the hall of the French society Friday night, for the purpose of discussing the late rebellion in the Canadian northwest. The hall was crowded despite the unfavorable weather. The meeting was opened by president Cleo. Meilleur, of L'Union Canadienne Francaise, of this city. After Mr. Meilleur, Dr. A. E. Courdeau, T. J. Dundon and Henry Routhier, of this city; J. H. Primeau, of Negaunee, and P. Dube, of Marquette, addressed the gathering in turn. It was resolved to raise a fund for the family of the late Louis Riel, and the subscription list can be found with John Tibor, at Donahoe Bros' store.

C. & N. W. Time. The running time of the Chicago & Northwestern railway was changed Sunday, Dec. 6th. Passenger train No. 2, going south leaves here at 12:55 P. M., and passenger No. 2 arrives at 3:10, just an hour later than through the summer. The train leaves Chicago at 10:30 P. M., half an hour later than heretofore.

Freight train No. 26 leaves Ishpeming at 9:45 A. M. and freight No. 28 at 1:15. Freight No. 25 arrives at 9 A. M. and freight No. 27 at 12:13 P. M.

Eighteen years ago the Iron Cliffs Store was established, the object being to protect the laboring people of Negaunee from high prices and inferior goods. The old store still remains, and the people are thankful for the protection afforded them. The store suffers from a poor location, being at one end of the town, but has the advantage of a heavy cash capital, and no firm can sell cheaper. More new goods have been received this Fall than at all the other stores in the city. Profits will be cut, and divided with customers, for the store exercises the same protection now that it did 18 years ago.

ALASKAN CURIOS.

Governor Swineford Sends Some Splendid Specimens to Relatives and Old Friends in Marquette.

Beautiful Furs and Skins—A Collection of Articles of Native Manufacture and Usage—Native Grasses and Woods.

On Saturday a large collection of Alaskan curios was received from Gov. Swineford, and placed on exhibition in a window of H. H. Stafford & Son's drug store...

The collection is mostly made up of articles made by the natives, although there are specimens of barley, grass, woods, furs, and skins to illustrate...

The shirt hanging from the gas fixture is made from the large intestines of the walrus and is perfectly impervious to wind and moisture...

The magnificent unworked seal skin exhibited is attracting a great deal of attention. It measures 57x22 inches, and in the beauty of its natural coloring far surpasses...

The swan's skin, plucked, has also caused great admiration on the part of those examining the curios. The down is so thick, so dazzlingly white that it is a revelation to those who have seen before...

Among the articles of native workmanship the ancestral horn spoons attract great attention. The individual who first swears by "The Great Horn Spoon" must surely have been a native of Alaska...

The large fish hook is a halibut hook, made always from red cedar or the heart of spruce roots, and attached to a line of twisted cedar bark...

Perhaps the most beautiful of the articles made by the natives are the silver bracelets hammered out by them. Every woman in Alaska wears them thickly on her wrist...

This exhibit is awakening great interest in Alaska and its people among our citizens. It is a pity that Marquette has no museum or place for keeping any such specimens...

Mr. H. A. Burt, agent for the Detroit Iron company, and now in Detroit, has advised Mr. Wilkinson that his action in regard to selling a tract of land...

Bailey has got the figures for it; Marquette does handle more kerosene and other oils than our city. That was not our point, though.—Iron Port.

The party referred to in the above item has a colleague who is the kerosene editor, and to him is due the credit of looking up the facts.

In summer, when a man wants to be sure of his "mettle and bone," he sends for Fred Merriam, but when the snow hides every landmark that man knows where his line is, he sends for a horse. Watch him shovel snow off his walk for proof of our assertion.—Iron Port.

About fifty locomotives have been sent from the peninsula to Chicago, where they will probably be used in the western trade. It is said 120 switch and yard locomotives are in the hands of the division during the summer, most of them on one train.—Marquette Eagle.

That looks like a big lot of engines to use for yard work on one division of road. Would not 120 locomotives do the work of the division?

cially eligible, while those who do undertake the feat stand no more show of being able to take it all in than a gopher-hole in a freshet. They start out well, but their capacity goes back on them, also their discretion, and they usually wind up the day's performance with a boozoo in a saloon. Let the custom die.

Last night, as the reporter was going home at a late hour, speculating as to the intellectual status of a person, male or female, who voluntarily spends a winter on the shores of Superior, and had about arrived at a decision not flattering to the suppositions individual in contemplation, a voice, that seemed to come from somewhere in the neighborhood of the partially completed Baptist church, rose above the howling tempest and attracted his attention. It was loud, as indeed, it must needs have been to be heard on such a night, and urgent, though not indicative of distress. It was very annoying to be detained for an instant in such an atmosphere at so late an hour, but a feeling of unbridled curiosity and duty prompted the reporter to cross the street and see what occasioned the stentorian hail. The street lamp at the corner of the church building was still lighted, and was making quick trips between a blue blaze not larger than a pea to a white ditto the full capacity of the burner. Arrived at the lamp-post, he looked closely along the front wall of the church, and in the shadow of one of the buttresses saw the figure of a man. "Did you call me?" asked the reporter. "No, sir; I was trying to 'tract' 'tentation of Jan'ter this church. I 'tend here, reg'lar, but I'm snow-blind 't night, an' can't find door. Wouldn't be 'twice of my church, priors 't nighting." "There is no service held there—never has been; besides, it is near 11 o'clock and all the churches are shut up," explained the reporter. "My 'ren, you goat!' 'is Baptist church 'I'm goin' in. Jan'ter! Jan'ter!" But no Jan'ter replied, and the reporter, thinking there would be a good time for Tuesday's paper, resumed his homeward trot.
