WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—President Cleveland's message, read in congress to-day, opens with a tender allusion to the recent death of vice president Hendricks, and a reference to his distinguished public service, integrity and devotion to duty. A general survey shows that our relations with foreign powers continue to be friendly. There are no questions of difficulty pending with any foreign government. Allusion is made to the appointment of Mr. Keily as minister to Austria, and his rejection by that country. The reasons advanced by Austria, asking for the withdrawal of Keily, were such as could not have the minister to a continue, and the latter result will be but temporary, and that ultimately the price of labor will be adjusted to the charge, but even if this takes place the wage worker cannot possibly gain, but must inevitably lose, since the price of his living will not only be measured in coin heavily depreciated, fluctuating, and uncertain in its value, but this uncertainty in the

THE CLEVELAND IRON MARKET. BOUND IN NEATEST STYLE. 9Sept8 We reprint from the Cleveland Iron Trade Review, of the 5th, the following report showing the state of the iron market at that point on the date named: There has as yet been no relaxation in the activity of the ore market, and it is not likely LOGS AND LUMBER to let up until all the available ore at lower take ports had been sold. Bessemer ores are already practically sold up, and consumers. who are not certain that they have sufficien supplies to last until next spring, are auxsously searching for any odd lots that may be where in the Upper Peninsula. offering. A large proportion of this year's output has been of Bessemer ores, and the total product including the new fields, has been very considerably short of last year's figures. The shortage is attributable to many of the smaller mines producing non-Bessemer ores, which have shut down, and whose product would aggregate several hundred thousand tons. The difference between last year's and this season's figures, as far as it has been made up by new fields, has been mostly Ressemer ores, and the supply of | nen-Bessemer is correspondingly short. As a result when Bessemers could not be found buyers turned their attention to non-Bessemers and found the supply more limited than they had thought. Recent transactions have still further reduced the supply, and, although opinions differ somewhat in regard to the smount unsold and a probability of a stringency is the market for the latter grade before spring, a gentleman well posted in the business, and in a position to know whereof he
