

DIDN'T REACH A VOTE

An Amendment to the Forfeiture Bill Perfecting the Portage Lake Canal Co.'s Title.

IT MEETS WITH DETERMINED OPPOSITION AND IS WITHDRAWN.

No Vote Taken on the Measure as Yet—The Tariff Debate Continued in the House.

THE SENATE

A SECRET SESSION. WASHINGTON, May 2.—After the transaction of the routine business the senate went into executive session, this being the first secret session for several days.

The doors were re-opened fifteen minutes later. The following bills were then taken up and passed: The house bill appropriating $125,000 for the enlargement of the Indianapolis postoffice building; the senate bill appropriating $100,000 for a public building at Atchison, Kas.

The senate then resumed the consideration of the railroad land grant forfeiture bill.

Mr. Dawes offered an amendment providing that the measure shall not be considered to impair any rights, legal or equitable, vested in any person or corporation, to any other lands which shall be declared forfeited.

Mr. Berry argued against the amendment. He supposed that Senator Dawes' object was to see that the bill should not effect the title of the Portage Lake Canal company.

Mr. Dawes admitted that that was his object.

Mr. Berry argued that the word "equitable" ought not to be in the amendment. If the canal company had either a legal or an equitable title, it was not necessary to put anything in the bill to protect the title; the courts would protect it.

Mr. Dawes reminded the senator from Arkansas that there was a technical defect in the title held by the canal company and for which it had paid a valuable consideration. If the senator's purpose was to interfere for the benefit of an organization which had put the squatters on these lands, telling them (when put there) that the lands were not open to settlement, but that when the time for forfeiture came they would be on the lands ready to make good their claim from that date, then the senator should vote to lay the amendment on the table.

If the senator desired to protect the purchaser for valuable consideration of land where there was a technical defect in the title, then he ought to be willing to have the amendment agreed to.

This canal company had acquired the land from the state of Michigan, everybody supposing that the title was perfect, but it had been found that there was a technical defect in the title. If the senator wanted to forfeit the bill and to give it to these men who had sent the squatters to these lands he would vote to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. Berry said his purpose was to prevent a canal company getting twenty-five to forty million dollars worth of land for a canal that was never built. It was a fraud which the state of Michigan was trying, and had tried in the last congress, to dump upon the general government. His purpose was to prevent the confirmation of the title of this canal company to these lands and to protect the claims of the honest settlers.

Mr. Palmer said he did not know the effect of the amendment, but if it gave any advantage to the canal company it certainly ought not to be agreed to. The canal company got the lands in direct defiance of the law, and by corrupt methods. It had procured the removal of an honest man from the place of receiver of the public lands at Marquette, so as to be able to make illegal entries on the land. The whole course of the canal company, in the selection of land, which was illegal, and in the wrecking of the original company by a conspiracy, had been tainted with fraud from the beginning to the end.

After further discussion, an amendment was offered by Mr. Hoar, as a substitute for that of Mr. Dawes, which was withdrawn, providing that the act shall not be construed to prejudice the right of the Portage Lake Canal company, or any person claiming with it, to apply hereafter to the courts or to congress for any legal or equitable relief to which they may now be entitled.

Mr. Hoar said he had submitted the amendment to the senator from Michigan, (Palmer) who was willing to accept it. Mr. Berry was not willing to accept it without further examination, and the bill and amendment went over until tomorrow, with the understanding that a final vote on the bill will be had then.

The senate then resumed consideration of the bill to establish a bureau of animal industry.

Mr. Paddock made a speech in support of it, defending it both on constitutional and economic grounds. The bill was then temporarily laid aside.

The senate bill to authorize the building of a railroad bridge at Little Rock, Ark., was passed.

The senate then proceeded to the passage of individual pension bills. The whole number, one hundred and five, passed, forty-two of them being house bills. The bill for the erection of public buildings at Fort Dodge, Ia., (senate bill $100,000) Sterling, Ill., (senate bill $50,000) Duluth, Minn., (house bill $150,000) were passed. The senate then adjourned.

THE HOUSE

TARIFF DEBATE CONTINUED. WASHINGTON, May 2.—The house went into committee of the whole on the tariff bill, Mr. Springer in the chair.

Mr. Wilson (Minn) denounced the protective system. He was opposed to the present tariff because, while it enriched the few, it prevented the expansion of our industries and was unjust to the agricultural interests.

Mr. McComas (Md) said Mr. Cleveland's message and this founding, called Mills' bill, had a common purpose. Both used the surplus as a fulcrum wherewith to apply the free trade lever to dislodge the protective system. Every free trader applauded both. The democracy had under Cleveland, after forty years, renewed its allegiance to England and free trade. This fight was not over the details of this bill but on the broad issue of free trade or protection. Cheap blankets and cheap suits were merely nothing, if labor was cheaper still. Free trade meant UNTAXED FOREIGN COMPETITION it would not only cheapen the few things the workmen consumed, but it would cheapen everything he produced and used. Protection raised the price of a few things the workmen consumed, but also raised the price of everything he produced; and higher wages for what he produced meant a higher standard of life for his home, his wife and his children.

The war cry of the old south was slave labor and free trade. Slavery had gone but these leaders of the old south were here on the floor and were fighting for an English alliance and free trade once more. Free trade was still the dream of the old south whose corner stone was the plantation, wide lands, and an accomplished Jew, enriched by the ignorant man, toiling for a bare subsistence. He pictured the new south, thrilling with mighty enterprises, developing mines, founding the cities, and said Cleveland's message against the protective tariff was an unwelcome friend.

Mr. Lanham (Tex.) said that in view of the conditions which surrounded congress, and in view of the intrepid stand taken by the president he could not see how any democrat could afford to antagonize a general proposition for reducing taxation. The democrats were inflexibly determined to crowd and press the great issue before congress and the country. The agitation would not cease until something had been accomplished. The people would not brook further suspense. The lines were drawn, and men must choose whom they would serve. "Who is not for us, is against us." If a democrat favored protective tariff, let him go into the camp of the enemy. If a republican favored tariff reduction let him come into the army of reform. He was for the bill.

With some amendments. If those could not be had, he would take the bill as it was and give it his earnest support. His principle objection to it was that it was too protective. Passing to the consideration of the wool schedule, he criticized it as leaving the duty on woolen manufactures too high, and advocated a reduction of 25 per cent. In his district there were 1,033,395 sheep valued at $1,196,932, and yet he would vote for free wool without a fear of injuring the people of his district or of retarding the well-being and prosperity of his state. He argued that free wool, instead of being an injury to the wool growers of Texas would prove a benefit to them as it would have the effect of inviting to that state woolen growers of other states where the price of land was high.

Mr. Allen (Mass.) spoke in favor of the protective policy.

Mr. Carruth (Ky.) characterized the protective tariff as a most insidious enemy. It walked in silence and under cover, while it pretended to be giving to the country protection, it was in reality stealing its substance and destroying its life. In conclusion he replied to Mr. Kelley's criticisms upon Kentucky, and paid an eloquent tribute to that state.

The committee then rose and the house took a recess until 3 o'clock, the evening session to be for the further discussion of the tariff bill.

EVENING SESSION. WASHINGTON, May 2.—There were but half a dozen members present in the house during the evening session. Mr. Stewart (Ga) spoke against protection, and Mr. Davis in its favor.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS. THE CHINESE TREATY. WASHINGTON, May 2.—In secret session to-day, Senator Sherman reported back the Chinese treaty from the senate committee on foreign relations with the recommendation of the committee that it be ratified.

The committee made two minor amendments, one providing that the prohibitional features of the treaty shall apply to those who are now absent from the country, regardless of any certificates they hold, and the other requiring that the classes privileged to return shall only be permitted to land upon presenting certificates issued subsequent to the present time. Mr. Sherman asked that the treaty be taken up to-day but objection was made and it went over.

ON BEHALF OF CHICAGO. WASHINGTON, May 2.—Congressman Lawler called upon the president today and thanked him on behalf of Chicago for the honor conferred by the appointment of Milville W. Fuller as chief justice. The president said he was pleased to find how universally well the nomination had been received.

YESTERDAY'S GAMES.

DETROIT, 16; PITTSBURGH, 1. DETROIT, May 2.—Conway pitched six innings to-day and shut the visitors out as far as hits were concerned. Sunday scored the only run on an error by Brothers, a stolen base and two put-outs. Twitchell pitched the last three innings and was hit for a single and a double. The features of the game were the heavy batting of the champions and the fine field work of Dunlap, Sunday, Richardson and Rowe. Score: Detroit.....5 2 0 4 0 0 0 5 —16 Pittsburgh.....0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 —1

NEW YORK 3; BOSTON 2. NEW YORK, May 2.—Boston was beaten again to-day. The twin battery, Titcomb and Murphy, did the business. Clarkson and Kelly appeared for Boston. Both pitchers did well, but Clarkson was poorly supported by Kelly. The fielding was sharp and the game exciting. A pretty doubly play occurred in the fourth inning. Brown made an attempt to bunt the ball, but Ewing threw him out at first. The ball was returned by Connor to Ewing just in time to catch Johnson, who was running for third. Both were close decisions. Score: New York.....0 0 1 2 0 0 0 1 —4 Boston.....0 2 0 0 2 0 0 0 —2

PHILADELPHIA, 5; WASHINGTON, 2. PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—Philadelphia defeated Washington to-day by a fortunate bunching of hits in the fifth inning. The weather was cold and cheerless and the game was witnessed by a small crowd. The visitors played a sharp fielding game, but were unable to hit Buffington. Score: Philadelphia.....0 0 1 0 0 0 0 5 —3 Washington.....0 0 0 0 2 0 0 0 —2

CHICAGO 5; INDIANAPOLIS 3. CHICAGO, May 2.—Chicago beat Indianapolis again to-day in a sharply played game. The batting was light on both sides. The Indianapolis players could do nothing with Krock's swift pitching until the last inning, when they earned two runs on Myer's single, Dennis, triple, and a sacrifice. A remarkable catch by Ryan prevented another run. Shomberg was hurt in sliding to second in the first inning and had to be carried from the field. Attendance 2,000. Score: Indianapolis.....0 1 0 0 0 0 0 3 —3 Chicago.....2 1 1 0 0 0 0 1 —5

Weather Indications. WASHINGTON, May 3.—1 A. M.—The signal service reports the following as its predictions for the next thirty-six hours: For Michigan warmer, followed by colder rain fresh to brisk easterly winds.

A Wonderful Scientific Calculation. In the course of a lecture in connection with the London Society for the Extension of University Teaching, Sir James Paget said science would supply the natural life of man with wonders uncounted. He remembered once hearing Mr. Janotia play a presto by Mendelssohn, and he counted the notes and the time occupied. It seemed starting, but let them look at it in the fair amount of its wonder. Every one of those notes involved certain movements of a finger, at least two, and many of them involved an additional movement laterally as well as those up and down. They also involved repeated movements of the wrists, elbows and arms, altogether probably not less than one movement for each note. As there were twenty-four notes per second, and each of these notes involved three distinct musical movements, that amounted to seventy-two movements in each second. Moreover, each of those notes was determined by the will to a chosen place with a certain force, at a certain time, and with a certain duration. Therefore there were four distinct qualities in each of the seventy-two movements in each second.

Such were the transmissions outward. And all those were conditional on consciousness of the position of each hand and each finger before it was moved, and while moving it, the sound of each note and the force of each touch. Therefore there were three conscious sensations for every note. There were seventy-two transmissions per second, 144 to and fro, and those with constant change of quality. Let them imagine it in telegraph wires. And then, added to that, all the time the memory was remembering each note in its due time and place, and was exercised in the comparison of it with others that came before. So that it would be fair to say that there were not less than 300 transmissions of nerve force to and from the brain outward and inward every second, and during the whole of that time judgment was being exercised as to whether the music was being played worse or better than before, and the mind was conscious of some of the emotions which the music was intended to impress.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Quietness of Italian Resorts. The Italians, as a class, are most polite and good natured. They are very curious, but their curiosity is never annoying. I do not think there is any country on the continent where the visiting royalties could be as free as they are here at San Remo. When the young princesses here go out to walk they are never followed about, nor are they ever stared at by even the peasants. They look at them with kindly interest and politely touch their hats, but they are never obtrusive. The visiting party numbers of England will bear no comparison with the quietness and gentleness of the people in the neighborhood of Italian resorts. The royal princesses of England cannot visit any of the sea places of England and attempt to walk in public without being followed by such a mob as to force them at once into retirement.—T. C. Crawford in New York World.

THE PRINCESS MOLL.

It was not very deep laid, and it did not in the end prove altogether successful, but being a scheme, and devised by the Princess Moll, her brother has chosen to record it.

There were four of us in or just out of college when, at the beginning of a long vacation, we were called upon to rejoice at her arrival. "Quite a little princess," mother remarked, when for the first time we stood in a row before her, and presented our comments, or what mother was pleased to term as such, to the roll of music and lace in a bassinet; and somehow from that hour our sister was known as "the Princess Moll."

Tom was in uniform, and I in cap and gown, and for this reason we believed the Princess selected us for her favorites from the first. "Gad!" said Tom, with a mixture of horror and astonishment, "look at her make eyes at me! Do they do that usually at her age?"

But Tom is inordinately vain, and the "eyes" of which he spoke were the mere languid roll of a pair of blue eyes that might quite as well have chanced upon me as him.

Well, Moll had come to stay, we discovered, but with the exception of an occasional cry from the nursery or the roll of the perambulator under our windows, we heard and saw little of her. Tom went back to West Point and Winthrop joined the sophomores of Cornell. To Malcolm and me, who were engaged in choosing a profession, remained the privilege of becoming better acquainted with the Princess Moll.

She had reached the age of 18 months when I was first called upon to rescue her from a position of peril. Gradgrind, the maid—my mother is English, and calls her American servants by their surnames, to their own mystification and resentment—had "stepped off a piece," and left the perambulator oscillating on a ledge of rock at Newport.

It was a charming day, and the Princess was, I observed, as I gathered her from the sand into which the perambulator had eventually plunged, arrayed in her best. She wore a little coat of silky cloth, and a white cap that reared up in the crown in an altogether fetching manner.

Happily no one but Gradgrind, who was instantly threatened with dismissal, received any injury from this mishap; but it was the beginning of a curious alliance on my part with the Princess Moll.

In the extremity of my wrath I banished Gradgrind from the spot. She came back, however, or rather she did not actually go, and besought me, with wringing of hands, not to report her carelessness to my mother. In vain. I was adamant—until she began to cry, when I told her that the thing must never be repeated, and myself adjusted Moll in the coach.

The Princess seemed instinctively to perceive that Gradgrind, whom she never appeared to love, had in some mysterious way come off conqueror in this affair, and pouted her disapproval at both me and the maid. When I stepped back to allow the coach to precede me, she made frantic gestures with her hands, which were encased in small white mittens, and fairly drove Gradgrind from her post. She then bent her eyes upon me in an imperious manner, which caused me to cringe.

"Ah, but, dear Princess," I mentally expostulated, "we are on the avenue, and it is the hour for Miss Reardon's ride. You couldn't—you wouldn't have your brother turn miserably mad here?"

But the mittens continued to beat the air, until, mattering to Gradgrind, "Keep close beside me, I took my place at the helm, and miserably trundled the coach. Moll gurgled triumphantly, as well she might, for it was the successful preface to her scheme. Daily after that she contrived to attach me to her train, until one morning Malcolm, encountering the interesting trio at the gate, demanded, "Is this the Princess Moll?"

Now Gradgrind, who had a face of the heavy, manly type, and a figure like an encyclopaedia, was not the sort of person to call forth that kind of remark, and I could afford to laugh good humoredly. "Don't you see the fix I'm in—the kind of prisoner of Chillon I've got to be? It's a scheme of Moll's to ensnare me, and there's no more escape for her than from a Norm. She's had me at the casino and on the avenue till I'm the figure of the day. She stops at the bazaar and calls my attention to the rugs, and she even went so far as to demand a Persian lamp, which—heaven help me—I bought for her and permitted her to carry home."

"That my mother looks for her at lunch today, and"— But the coach was lurching violently back and forth, swayed by Moll's angry objections, "N-o-o! n-o-o! n-o-o!" "You have—got—to go," I said intensely, catching her hands, and holding them in the "firm grasp" of which I have read. "Gradgrind is going to take you to Aunt Moll-cent's, and I am going to walk with Miss Reardon."

At this she redoubled her screams, and heaped such terms of infant obloquy upon Miss Reardon that I blushed for my family. "She doesn't always behave so," I explained, weakly. "It is an absurd fancy she has that my 'time is exclusively hers. The sooner she is broken of it the better!" and so saying, I threw the tiny hands back into her lap, and walked resolutely away with Miss Reardon. But I did not enjoy one moment of that walk. The tones of my companion's voice echoed in my ears as baby lamentations. The imploring anguish of Moll's eyes pursued me over every inch of the way. Whether justly or not, I suffered the remorse of a criminal.

"It is very pretty," Miss Reardon remarked, with a touch of irony, one day, "your devotion to that child."

"Yes," I suppose it is your choice of a fad. Some run to nose skin garters and some to terra cotta Derlys. Yours took this form."

"Good heavens!" I protested, "you don't for a moment fancy that it is a matter of choice with me, my dandling after the Princess Moll?"

"Oh, they all make a virtue of their folly. I suppose it is martyrdom, to wear salmon colored gloves, or a bangle for Maribon's sake?"

I fairly groaned. "Oh, that you should so misinterpret me! I swear to you, on my honor, that I have suffered more from the impertinence of that child than tongue can tell. She froze to me from the minute I first committed the fatal mistake of noticing her at all, and to this day she has never once let up on it. What is a fellow to do? She has blue eyes; she has the sweetest mouth in the world; she frowns; she smiles; she wheedles me like a woman of 30. If she were not my sister I should give her poison, or bury her under the doorstep, or— But I can't."

"You might get married," suggested my companion. "She would never speak to you again. They never do."

"So you really suppose it would work that way?" I inquired, skeptically. "I'm afraid she would murder me instead. 'The Princess is dreadfully afraid of my getting married—I have discovered that. She thinks she is deep, but she isn't. No, I can see through her. She has the strangest antipathy to the bridal parties that she sees going into St. Paul's. She commands Gradgrind and me to get past them as quickly as possible. She turns that push cap of hers square away from the bride. Yes, I have discovered that she would seriously object to my getting married."

"So you propose to be tied to her cap strings all your life?" demanded my companion. "If I were you, I should break away from this bondage before the cord becomes a cable."

"It was never a cord; it has always been a cable," I said, hopelessly. "Besides, I am not sure that I could get married, even if Moll were willing."

"No, you should consider that," Miss Reardon was charming, in a Reardon gown, one of those pastorally simple looking things which cost the fortune of a sultan. "To be able to marry involves two things—love and money."

"I should not have said that; but since you have, why didn't you say money and love?"

"Because love has a tendency to make money—for its object, whereas I have never observed that love of the genuine sort was ever evolved out of mere money."

"Oh, if you put it that way! Then you mean—for I prefer plain arithmetic to algebraic symbols—that if a man wished to marry he would contrive to earn the money to do it?"

"That is what I mean. He might have to give up the moose skin garter. He probably would. Very few married men belong to 'the leisure class'; merely to love is an occupation. But then my hypothesis was, 'If a man wishes to marry.'"

"By Jove!" I exclaimed, "you know I haven't the gaiters to give up. Do you think we might venture?"

Miss Reardon looked comical. "You mean to ask whether I would advise you to marry without the Princess Moll's consent?"

"Oh, hang Moll! Do you consent?"

At which she burst into a merry laugh. "What would she do to me? Should I dare to drink coffee any more, or open little packages on my coat after dark?"

'T WAS A GREAT HIT.

Negaunee's Amateur Opera Company Close Their "Season" Feeling That They Have Done Well—The New Presbyterian Pastor—Business Changes, Etc.

The Finale.

The curtain has lowered upon the last act of the comic opera "Rosita," so far as the actors are concerned, for their performance at Marquette Tuesday completed their work. At that place they were greeted by an exceptionally fine audience, and that their humble efforts were appreciated was shown by the applause accorded them. The company was well treated by Marquette people, and it is a pleasure to those composing it to know that they met with such a reception there. The trip home was scarcely noticed, songs and jokes driving away all care. Mrs. Mackenzie and Mrs. Winter had thoughtfully provided a couple of baskets of sandwiches, and the gentlemen of "guff and gore" and their inamoratas soon made away with them. The ladies were heartily thanked for their kindness.

The company has played five nights and on each occasion has made a good name for itself. Prof. Forham, to whom the greatest share of the credit for the success of the affair is due, and his company may well review their work with satisfaction.

A Reception.

Rev. Charles M. Brown and Miss Hurd were married Tuesday in Chicago and will arrive in this city to-day. Mr. Brown having accepted the pastorate of the Presbyterian church here. His bride is a daughter of President Hurd, of the McCormick Theological Seminary, Chicago. Upon their arrival here the couple will be escorted to the Breitung House, where lunch will be served. Afterward an informal reception will be held, giving the congregation an opportunity to get acquainted with the pastor and his wife. Mr. Brown will formally assume the duties of his pastorate Sunday.

Business Changes.

Henry Hesel has closed his saloon and is renovating the place. He will soon open up a first class restaurant. There is room here for a good restaurant, properly managed, and Mr. Hesel will doubtless do well in his venture.

P. M. Tallion has moved into the Tracy building, formerly occupied by S. Beaudry as a saloon, and has started a boarding house and restaurant therein. The "Quebec House" is the name over the door. The building vacated by Mr. Tallion is soon to be occupied.

Angus McDonell has retired from the saloon business and his place will in a short time be opened under the management Messrs. John Jodda and Mors Andro, two men who have for some time been on the Gogebic range.

Clifford Monroe has opened a very neat hotel at Champlain. The reporter had the pleasure of being shown through the establishment a few days ago. It has been newly furnished and everything is in admirable order.

The railroad yards are beginning to show considerable activity. Another switch engine has been put on in the Northwestern yard and trains of ore are moving on both roads.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Hayes was held at the Catholic church yesterday and was largely attended by friends of the deceased.

Republican ward caucuses and city convention, were held Tuesday night to elect delegates to the county convention.

A special train containing D., S. S. & A. officials visited the South Buffalo and other mines on the east range yesterday.

T. C. Yates is moving into the Case street residence vacated by Mr. Marsell.

PERSONAL.

J. E. Suesz went to Republic yesterday. C. A. Avery has returned to Milwaukee. Philip Feilish has gone south on a business trip.

Neil McLeod was in Ishpeming yesterday on business.

T. C. Yates, cashier of the First National, was in Marquette yesterday, having been summoned on a case on trial there.

seals with Ballast. The seals are carnivorous mammals divided into two classes—the Phocae, or common seals, with rudimentary ears, and the Otarine (sea lions, bears, elephants), which have the ears developed. In a late paper before some British naturalists, Dr. A. J. Harrison stated that the Otarine, which inhabit the waters of the southern hemisphere, are supposed by the fishermen to have an internal pouch in which rounded stones are carried to enable the animal to sink below the sea's surface when fat. Observations have shown, however, that the so called "ballast bag" is only the stomach. To account for the presence of the stones in this organ it has been suggested that they are intended to aid in the trituration of food, while other persons believe that they have been accidentally introduced with the food, or in play. Similar rounded stones have been found in seals and sea lions which have been confined in London, and the stomach of a Newfoundland seal which died at Clifton in 1886 contained gravel, nuts and pieces of stick.—Arkansas Traveler.

MARQUETTE, MICH., MAY 3, 1888.

Entered as mail matter of the second class, in the postoffice at Marquette, Mich.

Now let Duluth rejoice with exceeding great joy, for the senate has favorably reported the house bill appropriating $150,000 for a government building there. In view of the figure at which real estate is held in that city, the appropriation is not excessively large, as about one-third of it will be required to purchase a site for the structure.

SENATOR INGALLS' promised "roasting" of Voorhees Tuesday was hardly up to the expectations raised of it by his fame as a caustic speaker, coupled with the provocation given him by the Indiana senator. It was about as good as the rejoinder it evoked from Voorhees, however. The country will now venture the hope that they have got through.

A PITTSBURGH dispatch states that the iron manufacturers of that city and the Ohio valley have formed an association to prevent any conflict of interests, which will consider and settle all disputes that may arise, will deal with prices and production and look after freight rates. From what we gather concerning it, the association is not in the nature of a trust, but is designed to bring the iron industry of that region under the supervision of the best intelligence engaged in conducting it, with the object of guarding against hurtful competition, and preventing disagreements from other causes that work injury to the trade.

An appointment that is generally commended is that of Melville W. Fuller, to succeed the late Chief Justice Waite on the supreme bench. With very few exceptions, the republican papers speak approvingly of it, while the democratic organs unitedly regard it as a very wise choice. It is fortunate that the choice of the president fell upon a man whose appointment will not provoke so much partisan discussion and sectional feeling as did that of Judge Lamar. It would be wearisome, indeed, to have the politicians afforded a pretext for kicking up another such row as they made over the distinguished Mississippian's elevation to the supreme bench.

CLEVELAND advices are to the effect that the vessel rates on ore for the season have been definitely fixed at 95 cents from Escanaba, $1.15 from Marquette and $1.25 from Ashland and Two Harbors. This is for single trips, and will be the basis of all charters. The same rate is made from Ashland and Two Harbors for the reason that several of the vessel owners have large coal contracts for Duluth and Superior, and are anxious to get ore for the return trip. These are fair rates, and the mines will have no reason to complain of the lake carriers this year if they are adhered to.

THE "trust" business is being literally "run into the ground." A peanut trust has just been organized to control the trade in all the leading cities of the country, and ensure dealers a proper margin of profit. We are not informed whether the trust will undertake to limit production and thereby advance the price, or attain the desired end by decreasing the size of the glass used to measure out a nickel's worth of "fresh-roasted" promoters of dyspepsia, but the suffering consumer of peanuts might as well prepare for a squeeze of some sort. It is sure to come.

DR. M. E. WADSWORTH, of the mining school at Houghton, has been appointed state geologist, to succeed the late Charles E. Wright, by Governor Luce. We question whether the governor could have found in the state a man better equipped for the place than the gentleman upon whom he has bestowed it. Dr. Wadsworth is just the man to take up the work upon which his predecessor was engaged when the latter was compelled to lay it down in obedience to the summons that all must obey, as he possesses the requisite scientific knowledge, and was perfectly familiar with what Mr. Wright had accomplished and had in view. The appointment is in every way satisfactory to the people of this peninsula, who will be pleased to learn that the great work planned and partly executed by his lamented predecessor is to be continued by one so competent to carry it on as Dr. Wadsworth.

GOVERNOR SWINEFORD'S persistent endeavors to secure from congress needed legislation for his territory seem to be a fair way to obtain fruition. The Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph of a late date has the following editorial on the bill to provide Alaska with a suitable form of government, under which its people will be given an opportunity to develop its great resources, protected and encouraged by an extension to them of the privileges that other territories of the United States now enjoy:

There is a fair prospect that the immense and valuable possessions of the United States in the extreme northwestern portion of the continent will soon have a territorial government, for a favorable report has been made to congress on the bill establishing such a government, and thereby giving citizens in that portion of the national domain the political and legal rights enjoyed in other newly settled portions of the country.

A resume of the history of Alaska since its purchase by the United States in 1867 is not out of place at this time. All the rights and privileges enjoyed by a citizen of this country were virtually promised to the residents of Alaska by this act, but it was not until five years later that anything was done, and then it was merely annexed to Washington territory as a county. It is true its inhabitants were not numerous, but its lack of civil government was one circumstance which militated against its settlement. What an immense county it was! A tract of country nearly three and a half times as large as Texas, thirteen times as large as Missouri, and eight and a half times as large as New York, all comprised in one county and added for governmental purposes to a territory as far away from it as Boston is from New Orleans!

After this annexation to Washington Territory in 1872, other changes were made in its political status, notably in 1884. But now, for the first time, a serious attempt is being made by the United States to redeem the pledge made to the people of Alaska twenty-one years ago. The law of 1884 gave it a governor, a district court, a United States marshal, a district attorney and a few other civil officials, and extended over it the laws of Oregon. The bill now before congress will give it a local legislature and a delegate to represent its interests in the popular branch of congress.

The area of Alaska is about 578,000 square miles, and its present population about 40,000—about one-half of that of each of the territories of Idaho, Arizona and Wyoming, and two-thirds of the state of Nevada. In general resources it is far richer than the natural resources of any other territory. Its gold mines yield more than $2,000,000 a year, its fisheries are still more productive, and its wealth of timber is practically inexhaustible. Coal deposits of great richness and extent have been found in several parts of Alaska, and it is believed that iron and other minerals will also be discovered. Its soil is capable of producing nearly every vegetable, fruit and grain of the temperate zone, and, contrary to general opinion, its climate is no more rigorous in winter than in the states and territories along our northern border.

There are many avenues for the profitable employment of capital in Alaska. One of the drawbacks heretofore to immigration and investments in business enterprises in that region has been the absence of the political and legal rights and privileges enjoyed by citizens in the other newly settled portions of the country. This particular drawback will be removed on the passage of the measure now before congress to give Alaska a territorial government.

WHIRLING DERVISHES.

DEVOTEES WHO SEEK SALVATION BY SPINNING LIKE TOPS.

A Constantinople Correspondent Describes Some Remarkable Ceremonials—Bowing Low to the Name of the Prophet. Short Seasons of Prayer—Sad Faces.

But to return to the dervish chapel which I was describing. A deep gallery runs around six sides of the large room. On the side next Mecca, where the high priest sits, is a small but lofty pulpit, reached by a narrow flight of steps. Besides this you observe a portion of the gallery is partitioned off and highly ornamented. This, with the screen of gilded lattice next it, is reserved for the Sultan and his harem. From the lofty pulpit a sermon is delivered on some special holy days, but at such times all "Ghairs" are excluded. Indeed, there is little provision made for their comfort at any time. The space set apart for spectators is separated from that occupied by the brethren by a low railing, and it is a motley gathering that fills this space. The center of the floor is sacred to the brethren, and is worn so smooth by the friction of their bare feet that you would think it had been polished and waxed. There is a narrow strip of matting next the rail, on which the brothers sit and kneel. Against the pillars that support the galleries are hung frames containing passages from the Koran. Above the seat of the chief priest is of gold on a dark green ground. The high priest's seat is simply a crimson rug, where he sits cross legged, wrapped in a loose green cloak with wide flowing sleeves. The musicians are stationed in the gallery directly opposite the high priest.

It is an impressive sight when the dervishes enter slowly, in single file, the little gate of the enclosure, with their long light brown cloaks wrapped about them, concealing their hands. They first bow low to the name of the prophet, then with step keeping time to the music from the gallery, which fills the room with its low monotonous strains, they take their places, bend forward and reverently kiss the ground; then, with both hands folded across the breast, seen lost in prayer, their bodies constantly swaying to and fro in time with the music. Now the high priest rises and delivers an audible prayer; the others remain motionless with hands still folded on the breast. At the close of the prayer all bow their heads to the ground, and a weird, barbaric melody peals forth from the gallery.

Instantly the brethren all join in the chorus. The effect is indescribable. Now the sound dies away till it is but as the whisper of the winds among the pines, then it again bursts forth with an energy that appears almost supernatural, followed by another stillness of about a minute for silent prayer. When the low strains are again heard they all rise and slowly follow the high priest three times around the room. With arms still reverently folded upon the breast they bow twice to the name of the prophet—first on the side by which they approach, then on the side opposite—which they manage to accomplish very gracefully without once turning their backs upon the sacred name by slowly revolving upon the right foot.

The procession is closed by a second prostration. When each has gained his place he throws aside his cloak and begins the series of remarkable evolutions which has given them the name of "dancing" or "whirling" dervishes. Meaningless as it all seems to us, to them every rite has a deep significance. Their rapid rotary motion symbolizes the motion of the universe, their low weird music the music of the spheres.

Their dress consists of a loose shirt-jacket and full long skirt of light brown cloth. The right side of the jacket is fastened to the girdle, the left hangs loose. The skirt is laid in deep pleats beneath the girdle. Their rapid revolutions give their full garments a diamond shaped appearance, some of the most expert among them making their skirts stand almost at right angles with the body. The spectacle utterly baffles description. Although the space was somewhat circumscribed they never once interfered with each other's locomotion, but round and round they spun, as if impelled by an unseen power; their eyes half closed, their heads bent toward the right, their pale, thin, passionless faces perfectly immobile, though great beads of perspiration were soon standing on their brows.

If for any reason one of them made a sudden pause, his garments would about him in a singular manner. The time they all paused for prayer, then resumed the rapid motion, with one hand held upward to receive the expected blessings, the other extended downward to scatter them abroad. Finally they resumed their seats on the strip of matting, lashed in perspiration, when one of the brethren, who had seemed simply a spectator, covered each with his hands. Then a dervish whose seat was at the left of the high priest delivered a long prayer, in a solemn but rapid manner, the last word of each section being greatly prolonged. This prayer was for the great ones of their order, the dervishes bowing reverently as each holy name was uttered. When at length the name of the prophet occurred they prostrated themselves on the ground. While they were thus prostrate the chief priest rose to his knees, delivered a short prayer, then took his stand upon the crimson rug. The priests approaching him slowly, one by one took his hand, and pressed it to their lips and forehead. The first that advanced stationed himself at the right of the priest, the second in the same manner saluted the priest and his brother—each in turn performed the same ceremony until all had received the kiss of peace.

As no seats are allowed we stood fully an hour and a half, every moment expecting to see some exhibition of religious ecstasy, but saw nothing of the kind. All the dervishes looked weary and sad, and all were very thin except an African, whose extra avoirdupois, together with the violent exercise, soon brought him to a "melting mood" and he retired to his seat looking but little like one inspired with seraphic visions. Another priest who claimed our notice was a beardless youth whose features cast in delicate mold that you would have turned and looked again and again before fully convinced it was not a young girl in disguise. Another, a slender boy of about 10 years, was remarked by us all because of the look of deep anxiety on his young face, but his rapid motion seemed to fatigue him less than his elders.

Soon the salutations were all over and the chapel was deserted, the whole of the congregation dispersing without a word, as soon as they could reclaim their shoes and umbrellas from the porter at the door.—J. A. Ledyard in San Francisco Chronicle.

A HISTORIC SPOT.

The Wisconsin on Madaline Island as a Summer Resort.

The tract of land sold by W. J. Anderson to the Madaline Island Resort company, as reported in the Wisconsin's Ashland dispatches yesterday, comprised 4,200 acres instead of 3,700 as stated. The land includes some of the most attractive portions of that historic island, and is soon to be developed as a place for summer homes.

COSTUMES IN ALGIERS. Dress of the Poorer Classes—Ample Drapery of the Wealthy. It is a strange fact that many of the natives of hot countries wear almost the same clothing winter and summer, and do not seem to suffer from cold when the thermometer stands at a few degrees, in the severest weather, above freezing point.

THE Uses of Tar. Professor Lunge draws attention to the many advantages to be derived from the use of tar in treating building material. Drain pipes, roofing tiles, building stones, brick, etc., when soaked in a bath of hot tar, become absolutely water tight.

LAUGHTER. As leap the crystal waters from the hills, With nodding flowers along the margins cool, To make the summer fresh and beautiful, So laughter runs along our life, and tells The melodies we love, the sweet "good wills" That help the heart to work the golden rule.

AN UNLIGHTED CIGAR.

ACTIONS OF TWO SMOKERS MEETING ON THE STREET.

True Equality of the American People Shown—Etiquette of Cigar Lighting in Cuba—Street Politeness in Spain, Smokers in England.

It is in small matters that national characteristics are best seen. Nothing, for instance, could better show the true republican equality of the American people than the actions of two smokers meeting on the street.

THE REASON FOR IT. To connoisseurs in cigars the reason for this act is obvious. A cigar which has been bruised against another in the act of lighting it loses a considerable portion of the delicacy of its flavor, and should that one against which it is thus rubbed be of an inferior flavor and aroma, these qualities in itself are, to a delicate taste, completely destroyed.

Swells Across the Atlantic. In going about Europe one becomes very soon convinced that the English gentleman is much the best dressed man on this side of the water.

Mr. Arnold's Impressions of America. Mr. Matthew Arnold recently gave some impressions of America to an audience at Bradford, England. He said that in America all luxuries were dear, except oysters and ice; that American women have a natural, free and happy manner, in pleasing contrast with that of middle class women in England, who look to one class as the only example of "the right thing"; that American buildings are commonplace; that the nonchalant American newspaper is an object of reproach.

Facts in a Nutshell. It is an acknowledged fact that during the last few years no other town in Michigan has made such rapid and substantial progress as the city of Ishpeming. Nearly every incoming train brings in new people who come here to find employment and to become permanent residents of our thriving city. As a result real estate has rapidly increased in value, every desirable building site has been purchased, and the inhabitants are clamoring for more. Many new and handsome residences have recently been built and will be furnished this spring and summer. It was with this expectation that J. H. Quinn & Co., the firm who lay claim to the title of the only exclusive dry goods dealers in the city, laid in such a magnificent spring stock. Especially in carpets they are showing an elegant stock, embracing all the late patterns in Ingrain, Extra Super Three Ply Tapestry, Body Brussels and Wilton Velvet. Parties purchasing of them can have their carpets matched, sewed and laid on the floors if they so desire. They are also showing a nice line of lace curtains, Marcellies bed quilts, table covers, calico quilts, blankets, feathers and pillows, in fact all kind of house furnishings. In Smyrna rugs they have just received a choice line. A call at this immense establishment will convince you they are entitled to the title of the only exclusive dry goods house in the city.

REPUBLICANS MEET.

Delegates to the State and Congressional Conventions, and a County Committee Appointed.

OFFICERS OF THE FINNISH REPUBLICAN CLUB OF ISHPEMING.

Died on Tuesday Evening—Another Dance by the Emmet Guards—Local Events of a Day.

The Convention.

Pursuant to call, the republican county convention met at the Nelson House on Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was called to order at 2:30 P. M. by Wm. P. Healy, of Marquette, chairman of the county committee. E. B. Howard was then elected temporary chairman, and Walter Fitch temporary secretary.

On motion, the chair appointed as a committee on credentials John Q. Adams, H. O. Young and F. O. Clark.

Negaunee and Chocollaw townships were not represented; Michigamme was also unrepresented owing to the inability of delegates J. C. Fowle to attend the convention. The report was adopted.

As a committee on permanent organization and order of business, the following gentlemen were appointed: W. P. Healy, Joseph Kirkpatrick, E. A. Maas, C. Y. Osburn and Peter Pascoe. The committee advised that the temporary organization be made permanent, and the report was adopted.

As a committee of five, to select a list of delegates to the state and congressional conventions to be held at Grand Rapids on May 8th, the following named gentlemen were appointed: H. O. Young, J. M. Wilkinson, Peter Pascoe, John Mulvey and A. E. Sterne.

The committee reported the following list of names and the report was adopted, the gentlemen named being declared elected:

Resolved, That the delegates present at the state and congressional conventions be authorized to cast the entire vote in such conventions, and that no person be authorized, by proxy or otherwise, to cast more than one vote in each of such conventions.

A resolution favoring the nomination of ex-Gov. Russell A. Alger, of Michigan, for president, was then passed unanimously.

The matter of electing a chairman of the county committee then came up, and Mr. W. P. Healy, who had served in that position for the past two years, declined being a candidate for re-election to the position. Col. C. Y. Osburn was nominated and elected by acclamation. A vote of thanks to Mr. Healy for the able manner in which he had filled the responsible position of chairman for the past two years was then offered and passed by a unanimous vote.

On motion, the chair appointed as a committee to select a list of members of the county committee, Messrs. C. Y. Osburn, Wm. P. Healy, W. O. Fisher, John Q. Adams and Peter Pascoe. REPUBLICANS MEET.

W. O. Tislov, Henry Routhier, Nels Majhannan, of Ishpeming; J. M. Wilkinson and John Reardon, of Marquette; D. T. Morgan of Republic.

A vote of thanks to J. P. Outhwaite, for the use of the Nelson House parlors, was then passed, after which the convention adjourned.

Died.
Ingebrigt Wold died at his home in this city on Tuesday evening, May 1st, after a lingering illness of several weeks. The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The deceased was a member of Ishpeming lodge No. 113, A. O. U. W., and that order will turn out in a body to his funeral. Members of the lodge will meet at the hall here at 1:15 P. M. sharp.

Finnish Republican Club.
At "Rauba" Hall, on Sunday afternoon last, the "Finnish Republican Club of Ishpeming" was organized with a membership of 220. A temporary organization was perfected, with the following officers: President, John Ekman; vice-president, Adam Kangas; secretary, Oskar Rikonen; financial secretary, Adam Hirwas; cashier, Jacob Pentilla. The following committee on permanent organization was appointed: John Ekman, Gus Sankilla, W. Isaac, Adolph Flankkii.

This committee will report at a meeting to be held between the 15th and 20th of this month. Regular meetings are held every Sunday afternoon at "Rauba" Hall, on East Division street. The officers of the club expect to have a membership of at least four hundred before November.

Another Ball.
The Emmet Light Guards Dancing club of this city will give another grand ball at Austin's hall on the night of May 18th. Prof. Crim's full band has been engaged for the evening, and the club guarantees that all who attend will have a pleasant time. The Emmet boys wish to complete the uniforming and equipment of all the members of the guards during the present month, if possible, and hope that there will be a large attendance at their dance to be given two weeks from to-morrow evening.

Owing to delay in receiving parts of his press and boiler, Mr. John Ekman was unable to get out the first number of "Finnish" on Tuesday afternoon. If the expected parts arrive to-day the first number of the new Finnish daily will be issued this evening.

The convention yesterday was marked by a greater amount of harmony and brotherly love than has characterized some of the preceding republican county conventions.

Miss Kittle Quinn left the city on Wednesday for her home in Wisconsin, after a very pleasant two months' visit to her brother, Mr. J. H. Quinn.

The city reading room starts out with a fair attendance. It will no doubt become popular in a short time.

The proceedings of last night's council meeting will be given in to-morrow's MINING JOURNAL.

There was a great "gathering of the clans" at the Nelson House yesterday afternoon.

Miss Braddon's Noted Novel.
As a girl Miss Braddon was attracted both to the profession of literature and the stage. She acted in several country theatres, and at the same time wrote short stories and literary sketches, her first little book seeing the light through the press of a provincial publisher. She has written many trifles, both in the way of fiction and essay, before "Lady Audley's Secret" was published. The story of that romance is a romance in itself. Mr. Maxwell had started, in more or less rivalry to Dickens' first periodical, a magazine called Robin Goodfellow. Dr. Mackay was his editor, and Lasswell Wexall was his second in command. There had been some difficulty in regard to the opening novel, in consequence of which the new periodical was upon the eve of postponement, a serious contretemps in the face of its extensively advertised date of publication. The day before a decision was necessary. Miss Braddon heard of the difficulty and offered to write the story.

"But even if you were strong enough to fill the position," was the publisher's reply, "there is no time."

"How long could you give me?" asked the aspiring authoress.

"Until to-morrow morning."

"At what time to-morrow morning?"

"If the first installment was on my breakfast table to-morrow morning," he replied, "indicating by his tone and manner the utter impossibility of the thing, 'it would be in time.'"

The next morning the publisher found upon his breakfast table the opening chapters of "Lady Audley's Secret."

Robin Goodfellow did not hit the public. It did not live to finish "Lady Audley's Secret." Maxwell lost money over it; but he discovered Miss Braddon, whose story took the town in its three volume shape, and laid in the foundation of a lasting fame and prosperity.—New York Mail and Express.

Frank G. Carpenter comes from Ohio, and is placed among our most popular letter writers. He is tall and thin, has reddish hair and mustache, and his pale blue eyes are indicative of a sanguine temperament. He has a peculiar voice, not unpleasant, and when listening to conversations of interest his face is wonderfully animated. He has great perseverance, and when in search for an interview he is seldom unsuccessful. Mrs. Carpenter is a tall, handsome woman, and wears her hair brushed back from a clear, white brow. Their little boy Jack, 3 years old, is a bright child. He has not commenced his literary career yet.—Washington Cor. New York World.

HARMONIOUS DEVELOPMENT.

"Every writer on education, from Plato to Herbert Spencer, has advocated physical activity as a means of attaining that full orbited and harmonious development of all parts of the human economy so essential to robust, vigorous health." Theorists, then, are agreed upon this as the "ultimate aim of every kind of physical exercise." But we all know how difficult it is to get the best theories put into practice. They may commend themselves as the very best, but they fall far short of their good to men till they can be "made working theories. In this respect the "harmonious development" theory, whether mental or physical, forms no exception to other theories. But once get hold of some motive by which to induce even a few individuals to put a theory into practice, and half the battle is won. If it is really a good theory, its own practical example proves the fact. "Wisdom is justified of her children."

Here is always the difficulty—to get hold of the motives which will influence men and women in such way that they may finally be possessed by the "love of symmetry in form" which has such a "deep moral significance." You may preach the doctrine to children, and your words will be like the idle wind. Even our young men and our maidens will prefer snug fitting garments and handsome raiment covering a bad form to the proportions of Apollo or the beauty of the Venus of Milo not clothed in the fashions of the day. Many men and women staggering along under burdens of ill health, self imposed by neglect of the simplest natural laws, will give your beautiful theory small thought. They will pursue their phantoms of wealth and ambition, while they hug the delusion that they suffer by God's will in their "line of tears." They do suffer, and deservedly, but only because they do not use their own wills to conform their conduct to his good will as revealed in the constitution of their own being. It is useless to set forth to such people the truths of health, the glad tidings of deliverance from many of their ailments by the natural remedies of air, exercise and food. The doctrines of health have always been preached, and men have not heeded.

Let us begin, then, with children and educate them to these high truths. But with children we have to use authority or play upon motives. If we use authority merely the ideas of harmonious development will become distasteful to them. They will break away from authority and break with the theory at the first opportunity of liberty. Put them at what we elders call play, and they often accomplish their own free will what we with difficulty get out of them by force. Now I say that, by their various athletic organizations, young men are doing this very thing for themselves, they are doing it in play. They establish in the colleges a system of training for their various sports which affects not only the members of the higher institutions of learning, but which reaches almost every young man in the land.—Professor E. L. Richards in Popular Science Monthly.

Pictures in the Corcoran Gallery.
A ghastly picture is the "Death of Moses," in which angels bear the dead hero in their arms to the Messiah. This is by Cabanel, and another picture which attracts a great deal of attention is Charlotte Corday in prison, in which the pale face of the enthusiastic girl looks with a sad, determined face at you from behind the bars. "The Lost Dogs," by Van Thoren, is another picture which has been widely copied. It represents two dogs in the snow hugging themselves close together, while the snow falls and the winds blow, and the cold surroundings are desolation personified. This is a favorite subject for copyists, and nearly every other house in Washington has these lost dogs hanging over its mantelpiece.

Some of the finest of the pictures are small ones, and there is many a pretty little gem in every out of the way corner. Some of the landscapes are very fine, and one of the largest landscapes is that of Bismarck, being a view of Mount Corcoran in the Sierra Nevada. Another fine painting is a view of the waves rolling in upon the New Jersey coast, and in another painting Niagara Falls, with its rainbow and the glisten of the water, is plainly seen. You see the mist rising, and you can almost hear the roar of the waters as they dash over the falls.

Another fine painting represents an old sailor, with bronzed face, pulling his boat over the waves. His little 4-year-old daughter, whose fresh young face looks out of a cap, sits beside him, and she has her hands beside his on the handle of the oar. The old fisherman smiles as he looks down upon her, and the little girl's face is full of earnestness. She thinks she is helping her father pull the boat, and the picture is entitled "The Helping Hand." It is an expensive picture, and it cost considerably more than a congressman's yearly salary. There is a picture of a cow here, about three feet long and two feet wide, that cost $7,000, and there are many expensive paintings.

The greatest of American and French artists are here represented, and new pictures are being bought every year. The visitors to the Corcoran gallery are numbered by the tens of thousands annually, and the students who take advantage of its opportunities for art study are hundreds. It will do more good as the years go on, and it will help us toward the becoming of an art producing and art loving nation.—Washington Letter.

A Specimen Letter.
As a specimen of the letters that are received by the Buffalo Business Men's association, the following will suffice:

Mr. Secretary of Buffalo Business Men's Association of Buffalo, I notice your advertisement regarding putting in Watter power in nigeria river and I am a patent Right man I thought I would drop you a few lines now if you want a Butment I have a plain drawing of how to put a Butment in the river and have a plan how to put the wheel in also. I think this will be a success I am willing to go and put it in if you say so I will come and see you as soon as I here from you hoping to here from you soon I remain yours truly J— P— I am a hot man.

His ardor has doubtless cooled ere this. Only two or three out of the entire number of correspondents have submitted detailed plans, the remainder contenting themselves with the elaboration of theories and the presentation of a bewildering array of technical engineering terms and mathematical formula, which are incomprehensible without drawings.—Buffalo Letter.

Advice for Young Writers.
Learn how to write. Don't follow any set style. Follow your own style. Use simple words and short sentences. Hit straight from the shoulder! Learn to write briefly and concisely. You can be picturesque in short sentences as well as in long ones. Write on topics of the day. Look into the human heart deeply and write for men and women of the day. Taboo quotations, as a rule. Never use French, German or Italian words or phrases. Use Anglo-Saxon always. For the first year destroy all you write. Tear up your manuscripts, or put them aside for a month or two, and then revise them carefully. Knock out the adjectives. Don't use superfluous words. Be sure of your facts, and when you have told all your facts stop writing. The editorial, or review, or essay is finished as soon as you have exhausted your facts.—Foster Coates in Sunshine.

REORGANIZATION OF THE REPUBLICAN REDUCTION CO.

Headed for Marquette—In the U. S. Courts Died Yesterday—Lively Crading—St. Ignace Shipping Ore—Notes.

A Marquette Concern.

The Republic Reduction company as reorganized last winter will figure on the shipping list from the port of Marquette this season and as now constituted is a Marquette concern. The company was first organized about a year ago by copper country capitalists who planned to use about the same process with mixed iron ores as is used with success in separating native copper from the rock and for this purpose extensive works were erected at Republic, the company contracting for the use of the great rock piles of the Republic mine which contain a great deal of first grade ore mixed with rock. It was soon apparent, however, that the experiment would not prove a paying one and the company only made one or two small shipments during the season.

When the scheme was abandoned several Marquette parties became interested, principally Messrs. D. H. Merritt, J. R. Devereaux and H. G. Blackwell. They carefully examined the contract made with the Republic Iron company, and finding by the best legal advice obtainable that "treating" ore did not necessarily mean that it was to be crushed, pulverized, washed, etc., they obtained control of the company and reorganized it, with James Corrigan, the well-known Cleveland vessel owner, as president, D. H. Merritt, of this city, secretary and treasurer, and H. G. Blackwell, also of this city, general manager. Thus reorganized, the Republic Reduction company at once began work under an entirely different plan, "treating" the ore found in the rock piles by carefully picking it over, knocking off a bit of rock here and there with a hammer and sorting it into two grades, one perfectly clean first-grade ore and the other a little inferior in quality because slightly mixed with rock. Between forty and fifty men are now employed in this work, and as each man can pick over a good deal of the rock and ore each day the company's shipments will reach a very respectable figure this year, the "product" finding a ready sale with furnacemen.

The Republic rock piles are the accumulations of years, and Republic ore is as good as there is mined, hence the company has a very fair future in view, especially as the cost of sorting over the piles is slight, no extensive plant of machinery or other heavy investment of capital being necessary. The MINING JOURNAL will be pleased to see the company prosper. It is a Marquette concern, and what benefits one citizen of Marquette benefits all indirectly. If there should be "millions in it" then all the better.

Bound For Marquette.

The fine steamer James Pickands, Capt. Smith Moore in command, has cleared from Cleveland with a cargo of coal for James Pickands & Co., of this city. Captain Moore is in an awful hurry to get up here for he has a new addition to the city which he wants to get platted at once in order to satisfy those who are waiting for lots in it. With her captain in such a frame of mind the Pickands will come if she has to walk, and it looks just now as if that would be the only method of navigation possible in the Saucy river for a week or two.

In The U. S. Courts.

The grand jury is still busy, hence not much has yet been done in the U. S. courts. Yesterday in the circuit court in the cases of the United States vs. John Duffin and the United States vs. John Mead decrees in equity were entered cancelling the certificates of purchase of certain lands, made under the United States pre-emption laws, as having been fraudulently obtained and the title to the lands involved was declared to be vested in the United States.

Full of Years.

Mrs. N. Tibor, mother of M. Tibor, of the Marquette Marble works, and J. B. Tibor, city recorder of Ishpeming, died at her home in this city yesterday morning at 5 o'clock aged 82. Mrs. Tibor had been failing for several weeks and her death was not unexpected. She came from a long-lived family, her mother living to be 92 and her brother, in Europe, still surviving. Her husband, who died at Port Washington, Wis., about three years ago, was aged 83 and his brother has reached the age of 95. Mrs. Tibor's remains will be taken to Port Washington at noon to-day for interment by the side of her husband. Mr. J. B. Tibor will accompany them. He will return Monday or Tuesday of next week.

A Busy Corner.

The hill west of the convent building is the busiest place in the city now. It is in what is known as the Baldwin addition to the city and twenty or thirty teams with wheel scrapers and a small army of men are at work grading it and getting it ready to be laid out in lots. Rock and Fisker streets are to be extended through the addition at once.

Wants It Bonded.

Another Marquette man has turned up who feels the necessity of having the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road bonded so that it can deliver imported goods at the Marquette custom house in bond, permitting the payment of the custom duties at this place. Some time ago I. Neuberger purchased a quantity of caps and other goods in Scotland, importing them himself. He had the duplicate invoices and other necessary papers forwarded to the Marquette custom house for the collection of the duties here when the goods should arrive, but now finds that as the road is not yet bonded he will be obliged to have the goods brought on from New York in the care of one of the express companies as the government will not permit them to be taken by the railroad company. This will result in considerable increase in expense but as a loyal citizen of Marquette Mr. Neuberger will still have the pleasure of paying the duties at the Marquette custom house instead of at New York.

At St. Ignace.

On Tuesday the ice crusher St. Ignace went out and broke the ice so that the steamers Republic and Continental could get into St. Ignace to load ore. The Smith Moore got in yesterday making the third arrival there for Republic ore. Five or six steamers are pounding away at the ice near Wangoshance trying to break a passage through the straits. Captain Boynton, of the St. Ignace, says that he will open a passage to Lake Michigan, so that they can follow him back and get through, for $1,000. No one doubts his ability to do it; the job would be a pleasure trip for the St. Ignace.

Marquette's First.

The craze has reached Marquette. The following, labeled "a strong pair", reached the city editor's desk yesterday: ALGER, Harrison, Depew, Allison, Sheridan, F. Aker, Edmonds—Blaine, Lincoln, Stanford—Gresham, Hawley, Ingalls, Sherman, Evalits.

REPORTORIAL PENCILINGS.

Hon. W. P. Healy is making important changes in his residence on High street.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Fluker, of East Ohio street, Tuesday night, a daughter.

The new crosswalk in front of the Nester block on Washington street is a decided convenience.

Mr. C. M. Eveland, of the MINING JOURNAL news office, has moved to 429 West Washington street.

The Grace Holland has cleared from Cleveland for Marquette with coal for the Republic Iron company.

Cleveland reports the charter of the James Pickands at $1.35 per gross ton on ore from Marquette to Cleveland.

Fred Doerr has determined to retire from business and has closed his boot and shoe shop on Washington street.

The Toledo, of Ward's Detroit & Lake Superior line, is loading merchandise at Cleveland for Lake Superior ports.

Mr. I. Neuberger is making some extensive improvements in the rear part of his residence, corner of Arch and Pine streets.

Steel rails have been laid on the south side of the merchandise dock and in the cut, where trains are so busy in the summer handling coal.

As soon as the ice will permit the John Martin to take her scoops far enough out to be dumped the dredge will begin work for the season.

A. J. Otterson, local freight agent of the D. S. & A., and harbor master of Marquette, has had his residence connected with the telephone exchange.

Workmen are busy putting in new coal scales near the Lake street railroad crossing on Main street, the scales having been taken out at the docks.

Freeman is putting the finishing touches on the rebuild of the City of Marquette. Now that she is in the water again with her machinery in place she shows up as one of the best-looking tugs in the harbor.

Of the three yachts arrested by officer Hogan Tuesday two were sentenced to thirty days in the county jail by Justice Meade yesterday and the other was given an hour in which to seek some more congenial municipality.

The Gillett tugs and scoops are being carefully fitted out, though the opening is still a good ways off. Mr. Gillett says that he has so much business ahead for his tug this season that he hardly knows what to start them at first.

The W. U. & Co. dredge was moved over to the Grace furnace dock yesterday from the merchandise pier to have her dipper fixed for work. Her sand scoops have also been pulled out of winter quarters and are being prepared for duty.

The temperature readings at the U. S. signal station yesterday, 75th meridian time, were: At 7 A. M., 31 degrees; 3 P. M., 38 degrees; 10 P. M., 35 degrees. Maximum temperature, 38 degrees; minimum temperature, 22 degrees.

According to the charter the council has given formal notice to obstreperous property owners on Hewitt avenue that condemnation proceedings have been determined upon and after the elapse of the necessary three weeks the proceedings will be commenced.

The Detroit on Michigan soil seem to have struck their gate at last, or to have collided with a pair of bars at least. Mopping the earth with the Pittsburghs sixteen to one, is better medicine for the Michigan bare ball crank than being dragged about in the dust by "Injuopolis," as Mac would say.

Twenty-two of the bents for the permanent coal staging of the merchandise dock for James Pickands & Co. are now in place, and twenty-three more are still to go up. By the new arrangement more coal can be stored there and temporary stagings and "horses" done away with.

Pencilings is asked so many questions about the first boat that he is forced to make some reference to the matter publicly in self defence. To all interested he would say that he is betting that a boat will get into Marquette harbor from below by July 4th but he is not willing to accept any responsibility in the matter and so would not advise any one to make a similar bet because of his example.

The wrestling match between Butler and McPherson takes place at the Casino rink this evening and will surely be an exciting contest, undoubtedly the finest ever seen in the city. Both men are on their mettle and determined to win. McPherson says he is confident he can floor Butler even if the latter does measure off a good many miles in training while Butler is equally confident of his ability to down McPherson.
