THE WORLD'S FAIR DEBATE

The Advocates of the Various Proposed Sites for the Fair Have An Inning.

FLOWER ANNOUNCES THAT GOV. HILL HAS SIGNED THE NEW YORK BILL

A Heated Debate in the Senate Over the Report of the Killing of U. S. Marshal Saunders in Florida.

THE HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The great battle for the location of the world's fair was begun in earnest to-day. The lobby had been reinforced by the arrival of numerous contingents from Chicago, New York and St. Louis. According to the terms of the agreement as ratified by the house, to-day was and to-morrow will be devoted to the debate upon the availability of the various localities which are in the race, and Monday the members will commence to vote, continuing until one of the cities has received a clear majority. There seems very little foundation for the statement that in the event of New York and St. Louis failing to secure the necessary support those favoring these cities will combine to lay the whole matter on the table—in other words will vote to have no fair at all. There was considerable discussion arising from the opposition to the fair demanding an equal amount of time to speak that was given the different speakers on the other side. Mr. Flower (N. Y.) addressed the house on behalf of New York. He

MADE A KINGING SPEECH,

just at the conclusion of which he received a telegram informing him that Governor Hill had signed the fair bill. The announcement was received with great applause by the friends of New York. Mr. Hill then opened the debate for Chicago. He was followed by Mr. Adams, who also represented Chicago. Mr. Adams' address was a magnificent one and elicited frequent and hearty applause from both sides. He was followed by Mr. McCreary, (Ky.) who earnestly argued in favor of Chicago. Mr. Catechon (Mich.) believed the celebration a matter of practical importance. He favored Chicago, which was the most marvelous city the world had ever looked upon in point of rapid progress. Mr. Taylor, (Ills.) said there was a great country in the west, which the people of New York knew little of, and he desired the fair in the west, to educate the people of New York. Mr. Perkins (Kas) spoke in favor of the fair. The

GEM CITY OF LAKE MICHIGAN

was the proper place for it. As to the New York hotels, he would say it cost as much to reach them from the landings as it did to get from New York to Chicago. [Laughter.] Mr. Lawler (Ill) and Chipman (Mich.) spoke favoring Chicago. Mr. Erank (Mo.) opened the battle for St. Louis. He was followed by Mr. Medringhaus (Mo.) who also extolled the business merits of St. Louis. Mr. Dockery (Mo.) Mr. Stone (Mo.) Mr. Breckinridge (Ark.) and Mr. Caruth (Ky.) all spoke in favor of St. Louis. Mr. McComas (Md.) was for the exposition wherever it was to be held, but the exposition should be held in Washington. Messrs. Lee (Va.) Coleman (La.) and Campton and Stockbridge (Md.) also favored Washington and then the house adjourned until tomorrow. The proposed night session was abandoned.

THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Among the bills reported from the committee and placed on the calendar in the senate was the bill to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to the Quapaw Indians in the Indian Territory. The resolution heretofore offered by Mr. Chandler, calling on the attorney-general for information as to the assassination at Quincy, Fla., of W. B. Saunders, United States deputy marshal, was taken up and Mr. Pascoe continued his remarks. He sent to the clerk's desk and had read various documents, newspaper articles and the proceedings of public meetings, denunciatory of the conduct and character of the United States court and its officers in the Northern district of Florida. These representations, he said, might tend to throw some light on the causes leading up to the sad affair at Quincy. He knew nothing of the matter himself, but he did know that Saunders had already exhibited his unfitness for the office which he held. In conclusion he directing the attorney-general to inform the senate also whether any efforts had been made by the department of justice to correct the action of the officers of the court which resulted in partisan juries, made up mainly from one political party, and if so to report the same to the senate. Mr. Hawley said the remarks of the senator from Florida and the amendment offered by him seemed to be a premature apology for the murder. It was evident that the amendment was intended to mitigate the judgment of the public mind as to a crime which even a democratic paper in Florida had stigmatized as a most brutal, infamous and cowardly murder. The senator had represented Saunders as not having been always a good man; and the fair inference from his remarks would be that there would not have been much objection to Saunders being killed if it could only have been done in a less objectionable way. What Mr. Hawley asked, had the bad character of Saunders and the administration of justice to do with the murder of Saunders?

OFFERED AN AMENDMENT

Mr. Pascoe remarked that there was no necessity for the senator from Connecticut working himself up to such a pitch of excitement.

Mr. Hawley—the senator himself worked me up.

Mr. Call condemned the killing of Saunders but declared there had been fewer murders in Florida during the last ten years than in Connecticut or New Hampshire, or even in the national capital. He alluded to the outrages committed by federal officers in Florida and declared it was such acts which led desperate and misguided men to resort to lawless acts to protect themselves. But the first consideration was to purge judicial officers of corruption and impurity. The law could not be executed by ministers of crime. He declared that the senator from New Hampshire (Mr. Chandler) was responsible for murders in Florida and the destruction of the happiness of households there by emissaries of his. He said he would on some early occasion demonstrate that the imputations cast upon the southern people were groundless.

Mr. Chandler was on his feet instantly and went on to relate the circumstances of the assassination of Saunders. He said Saunders had gone off in a buggy with a man named McFarlin alive, and had come back with a man named Mitchell dead. He asked Mr. Call how he connected Mitchell with the murder. Mitchell had been seen in the buggy with McFarlin and Saunders, and Mitchell had brought back the body with glee and rejoicing and when asked whether Saunders was dead had said: "Yes, damned dead." Mr. Chandler said it was the duty of the governor of Florida and the senators from Florida to take sufficient interest in the assassination of a deputy United States marshal and a witness before the United States court to secure, if possible, the arrest and punishment of the criminals. "But," he said, "the governor of Florida and the senators from Florida are engaged in a very different business. What are they doing? They are hunting down a district judge and a United States marshal and district attorney and the senator (Mr. Call) is coming here and defaming a dead man (Saunders) on this floor. That is what they are engaged in."

Mr. Pascoe—I hope that language will be taken down.

Mr. Chandler—Yes, I hope the reporters have taken it down. It may be taken down twice if you choose. The first business of the governor of Florida is to arrest these criminals before he comes here to try and defeat the nominations of judicial officers.

On motion of Mr. Chandler, Mr. Pascoe's amendment was laid on the table, and the resolution calling on the attorney-general for information as to the assassination of Saunders was agreed to. The educational bill was then taken up and Mr. Blair proceeded with his argument. At the close of Mr. Blair's speech, Mr. Faulkner obtained the floor to speak on the bill and the senate adjourned.

TO LOWER RATES.

A Plan of the Coal Men to Work in Conjunction With Ore Shippers.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—A number of well known coal men met at the Grand Pacific to-day to confer concerning Lake Superior transportation rates. A. G. Gates, of Rochester, N. Y., presided. They discussed the advisability of forming some sort of an agreement with the iron and copper ore dealers so that boats might come from Lake Superior to Chicago laden with ore and return with coal. Under the present arrangement boats go from Chicago in ballast. The coal dealers are of the opinion that money could be saved by unloading in Chicago and shipping on the lake to all Lake Superior points. A proposition will undoubtedly be made to the ore men.

Two Times and Out.

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Feb. 20.—William Seeley Hopkins was hanged this morning for the murder of his wife and mother-in-law. The rope broke at the first trial and the condemned man was again fastened up. Before the drop Hopkins walked to the edge of the scaffold and said: "Good-bye, kind friends. I leave the world without an enemy. Farewell, all." He then shook hands with all on the scaffold and said farewell again. The drop was sprung at 10:15, but a cry of horror arose from the assemblage when the prisoner fell to the floor, the rope having broken. The doomed man was picked up insensible and carried onto the scaffold. The rope was again adjusted and the drop sprung 10:31. This time the murderer dropped into eternity.

Barked Up the Wrong Tree.

BOSTON, Feb. 20.—A shooting affair occurred in the East Providence Center, R. I., postoffice last evening, when a tough known as Joe Corbett, entered the postoffice, threatening to kill the postmaster and assistant and insisting on running things himself. Oliver E. Medbury, the assistant postmaster, warned Corbett to desist, but he paid no attention; whereupon Medbury seized a rifle and fired at Corbett, hitting him in the side. Reloading the rifle he placed the muzzle to Corbett's head and ordered him from the place. Corbett crawled out and was taken home. His wound is not severe.

No Evidence to Hold Bell.

LEBANON, Ind., Feb. 20.—Samuel Bell, suspected of shooting Mrs. Randall during a prayer meeting at her home Monday night, was arrested and taken before Justice Johnson, but there not being sufficient evidence to warrant the justice in holding him, he was set at liberty. It is said that new evidence against Bell has been discovered and he may be rearrested. Mrs. Randall is still alive.

President Harrison in Pittsburg.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 20.—President Harrison this morning visited the Homestead steel rail mills and other points of interest under the guidance of Andrew Carnegie. At 3 o'clock a public reception was held at the court house, for which elaborate arrangements were made. The building was beautifully decorated and a large crowd was present.

CRUSADERS ARRESTED.

And Leading Lawyers Volunteer to Defend Them—They are now Popular Idols.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 20.—The correspondent of the Post-Dispatch at Trenton, Mo., telegraphs that paper: "Contrary to expectation the thirteen lady and three gentlemen crusaders were arrested at Spickardville yesterday by Constable Francis, no resistance being made and no exception taken to the action. The constable says every courtesy was shown him. They all gave bonds, signed by nearly all the best citizens of the township. The trial is set for Friday in Trenton. They will come to Trenton escorted by a band and two hundred citizens, and will be met at the depot by the temperance ladies of Trenton, headed by a drum corps and will be given a free dinner and escorted around the town. During the trial Prosecuting Attorney Knight will be assisted by Hon. E. W. Barber. Five of the leading lawyers have volunteered to defend the ladies. A mass meeting was held at Spickardville to-day at which it was announced that there were "millions for defense, nothing for a compromise." The people of the country are invited to Trenton Friday. No trouble is anticipated.

TWO "HELLO" ARTISTS

Are Married in Fun Over a Telephone Wire and Now Both Leave of the "o".

LA PORTE, Ind., Feb. 20.—Minnie Worley, aged 22, a telephone exchange operator at South Bend, and Frank Middleton, aged 20, in a like position at Michigan City, became acquainted over the wires during their night watches. Finally Middleton proposed in fun that they get married by telephone and Minnie consented. A Michigan City justice was called in and performed the legal ceremony but without the necessary state license. This occurred last week and passed off as a joke. Now eminent legal counsel pronounce the marriage legal and binding, and say Justice Dibble is liable to imprisonment for performing the ceremony without the necessary license. The groom will go to South Bend to see his bride. Divorce proceedings will probably be instituted unless they agree to live together.

She Played Even.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 20.—While visiting in Middleport, N. Y., recently, Miss May Greze, of Bath, Clinton county, this state, fell in love with Joseph Platt, of the former place. Upon representing himself to be wealthy and unmarried she eloped with him to Canada. Shortly afterward Miss Greze made a visit to Bath, where she discovered that Platt was wanted in New York for embezzling $1,400 from his employers. She immediately set about assisting the New York officers in their efforts to capture her deceiver. She wrote him that she was ill at Bath and desired him to come to her at once. When he arrived at Bath last night in response to her summons he was promptly arrested. He passed through Lansing this morning in charge of officers on the way to New York.

N ow Libel Suits Are Threatened.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Feb. 20.—Attorney-General Clapp has written an official letter to Bank Examiner Kenyon, which says the facts in the report of the latter in regard to the American Building & Loan association of Minneapolis do not constitute sufficient grounds for proceeding against the company. The public examiner recommended that proceedings be taken with the view of winding up the affairs of the association. Actions for libel are now threatened against the Minneapolis Tribune, Cashier Foss, of the Merchants bank, of Minneapolis, and Mr. Farwell, of Waterloo, Ia.

A Sad Drowning.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 20.—A special from Port Dover, Ont., says: A sad drowning accident occurred here yesterday. Three boys, George, 12; aged 11; Norman, 13; and Frank Fairchild were skating on Dover Lake. One broke through, and the other two in trying to help him also broke through, and were drowned before help could reach them. Another lad, helping the same lake on foot, also broke through and narrowly escaped the fate of the other three.

Too Much "Accident" Insurance.

St. CHARLES, Mo., Feb. 20.—Charles F. Vail was arrested last night on the charge of murdering his wife. The case is a very sensational one. Mrs. Vail died from a gunshot wound inflicted accidentally, it was supposed at the time, by her husband. Mrs. Vail was getting into a buggy when a revolver in Vail's pocket exploded, the bullet entering her abdomen. They had been married but a short time, and Vail had insured his wife's life in accident companies for $13,000. One of the policies was taken out for two days, and would have expired in a few hours after the time of Mrs. Vail's death.

Four Children Burned to Death.

KINGSTON, Can., Feb. 20.—Last night fire destroyed the residence of John Lister. Four children were burned to death. Mrs. Lister was terribly burned, but escaped by jumping from a window, first throwing out a baby and 5-year-old boy. The scenes at the conflagration were heartrending.

Full Power and Lots of Money.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—The Times says it is announced on practically official authority that the "deal" by which the Northern Pacific company expects to obtain control of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad is being personally managed by Henry Villard. He has full power and lots of money.

No Cause Known.

DIG RAPIDS, Mich., Feb. 20.—Last night Frank Trowbridge shot his wife through the hand and body and then put a bullet into his own body. The wife is alive, but her recovery is doubtful. No cause is known.

NEGAUNEE MATTERS.
 On the Cheshire Range. The Escanaba River, Land & Iron Co., in which Negaunee men have the controlling interest, is now ready for business, articles of incorporation having been recently granted the company by the secretary of state. This company is now in possession of some of the most valuable mineral and timber lands on the Cheshire range, including the old Cheshire and Swanzy mines. It is the intention of the company to work these mines this season, and also to thoroughly explore the territory it now controls. It is well known that there is more than one ore deposit on the range, and the Escanaba River Company proposes knowing their extent and value.

Dust to Dust.
 The remains of the late Adolph Sporey were given sepulture yesterday afternoon, and, seldom, if ever, has there been a more general attendance mourners at a funeral in Negaunee. During the morning a large number of friends took a last look at the face of the young man they had known so well. At 2 o'clock the local lodge I. O. O. F. and the Masonic order marched from their halls to the family residence on Iron street. Shortly afterward the remains were placed in the hearse, and the long procession wended its way to the city cemetery. Here the religious exercises of the Masonic order were performed, and all that was mortal of one who had, in life, been so highly respected by all, was committed to earth.

The Iron Cliffs snow plow was run over the road to the cemetery yesterday, and in its wake followed the snow roller. The two machines made a splendid road and the forethought of the city authorities in doing this was greatly appreciated by those who attended the funeral.

Frank Koob, who was hurt some time ago at the furnace crossing of the Chicago & Northwestern line by a train on that road, will leave in a short time for Chicago to receive surgical treatment. The company has settled with Mr. Koob, giving him $1,500 and transportation for himself and wife to Chicago.

In the report of the benefit concert yesterday morning the name of Miss May Anthony, of this city, was inadvertently omitted from the list of soloists. Her excellent work well merited favorable mention.

Richard Barney opened up his plumbing and gas fitting establishment for business yesterday. Both floors are well stocked with fixtures and piping and a neat sign has been placed over the door.

The men from the Ohio factory which furnished the iron are here to build the cells in the city hall. The plasterers are now at work and the structure will probably be ready to turn over to the city on March 1st.

Penglase, Allen & Co., have taken the agency for the Davis sewing machine, and will have two or more of the latest make in fancy woods displayed in their furniture store windows.

A SURPRISE FOR BISMARCK

Partial Returns From the Elections For Members of the German Reichstag

SHOW SOCIALIST GAINS THEIR REPRESENTATION INCREASED

A New Railroad for the "Soe" Forty-Three Bodies Recovered From the Mine at Decize, France—General.

GERMANY.
BERLIN, Feb. 20.—The election for members of the reichstag is in progress to-day and the indications are that to-night Prince Bismarck will be in anything but an amiable frame of mind. Everything points to large socialist gains. The campaign has been quiet and thanks to the influence of the emperor the socialists for the first time in many years have been allowed to pursue their canvass without molestation by the police. No police spies have been permitted to attend their meetings and all their gatherings have been held with open doors. In view of this liberal policy it is not surprising that the socialists expect to send a larger contingent to the reichstag than ever before. In the last body they were represented by eleven members. In the next, which will be convened in three weeks, they expect to have fifty-one. In this event it is not likely that the iron chancellor will repeat his attempt to force the socialistic bill through the new chamber, as they could out-vote the government groups. The size of the vote being polled is phenomenal. A great sensation was created here at 1 o'clock by the sudden receipt of an order from the emperor for all troops comprising the garrison of the city to march to Kreuzberg forthwith. The order was instantly complied with. The people were almost panic-stricken until it was announced that the maneuver was simply one of the military surprises inaugurated by the emperor to test the efficiency of the garrison to repel a sudden attack by the enemy.

CANADA.
TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 20.—A bill has been introduced into the local legislature to incorporate the Sault Ste. Marie & Hudson Bay Railway company. The bill provides for the construction of a railway from Sault Ste. Marie to Moose Factory or some other point on James Bay, in Ontario, with power to acquire, sell and work coal, iron and other mines along the line.

FRANCE.
PARIS, Feb. 20.—Forty-three bodies have been taken from the colliery at Decize, in which an explosion occurred Tuesday night. In addition eight miners, badly injured, have been rescued.

ENGLAND.
LONDON, Feb. 20.—The election to fill the vacancy in the house of commons of the Middle division of Glamorgan took place yesterday and resulted in the return of Mr. Evans, liberal.

The steamer Germanic from New York, February 12th, for Liverpool arrived at Queenstown to-day. She reports having seen a large number of icebergs in the main track of the steamer plying between Europe and America.

In the house of commons, Mr. W. H. Smith stated that under Lord Ashbourne's act the applications for advances of money to tenants who desired to purchase the farms they rented had reached the total sum of $41,513,275 and that upon these applications the sums advanced aggregated $31,878,190. Right Hon. James Stansfield, member for Halifax, moved to add to the address a clause in favor of the formation of parochial councils to be subordinate to the county councils.

An Old Landmark Burned.
PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 20.—An Erie, Pa., special says: At an early hour this morning fire broke out in Weigel town, a suburb of Erie, and destroyed one of the oldest and most noted hotels between Buffalo and Cleveland. The hotel was known as the Weigel Hotel. It was found to be on fire early, but the flames were checked. Two hours later the fire broke out again and the proprietor, J. G. Rhoades, his wife and two daughters were saved only by the greatest exertion on the part of the neighbors. In order to escape they had to leave almost $1,000 in money and many valuables behind them. The loss on the hotel was $1,500.

Banks and Money Lenders Caught.
PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 20.—A special from East Liverpool, Ohio, says: The northern part of Columbiana county was much shaken financially this morning by the unexpected failure of Forney's dry goods and general store. The banks and money lenders are badly shaken. The amount given, $25,000, is exclusive of bills payable for merchandise. The failure is said to be the heaviest that has ever taken place in eastern Ohio, and it is feared that others will be drawn into the wreck who are not able to stand the loss.

John Smnor's Will.
DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 20.—The will of the late John Smnor, the retired lumber merchant, was filed for probate this morning. It disposes of a large estate the value of which is not given in the will but which is estimated at upwards of $100,000. It leaves his widow $10,000, an annual allowance of $3,000 and the homestead and household effects. Bishop Worthington receives $10,000 for carrying on church work in Nebraska. The balance of the property is given to charitable, religious and educational institutions.

Chase the Landman Bosta.
PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 20.—Mrs. Ida Walker, a saloon passenger on the steamship British Princess, which arrived from Liverpool yesterday, committed suicide on the 11th by taking an overdose of landanum, and was buried at sea the following day. She was the wife of the well-known English bicyclist.

A Double Execution.
PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 20.—Jacob S. Choop and Thomas J. Cole were hanged together this morning. Both were murderers. The drop fell at 10:04 o'clock.

A Debtor, or a Defaulter?

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—William F. Kimball, confidential bookkeeper and cashier for the Richardson & Boyington company, of New York and Chicago, is said to be a defaulter to the tune of $10,000. He was arrested last night in his stylish home in Normal park. During the afternoon the attorneys representing the Richardson & Boyington company filed suit against him on a claim for $10,000. The matter was then presented to Judge Anthony who issued a capias for Kimball's arrest. The officers found the defendant ill in bed, but placed him under arrest while some of his friends went to look for bondsmen. About midnight $15,000 bonds were furnished at the house for the prisoner's appearance in court when wanted. So far as known Kimball had no vices. What he did with the money, if he took it, is a mystery. His friends say he did not take it; that the question is only one of debt. Kimball himself is too ill to talk. The representatives of the company refuse to say a word regarding the matter.

WATCH THE FUR FLY.

A Real Elegant Row Brewing in The Woman's Suffrage Association.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Mrs. Marietta Bones, of South Dakota, a well-known worker in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and for ten years vice-president of the National Woman's Suffrage association, is at the Palmer House. There is a woman's suffrage convention at Washington, and Mrs. Bones was informed that Miss Anthony was about to merge the national association into another organization without as much as conferring with the vice-president. As soon as Mrs. Bones heard of the movement she picked up her duds and started for the battlefield. "Susan B. Anthony is trying to emulate Frances Willard," Mrs. Bones said. "If I am not mistaken the brainy women of our party will rally around me and we will show that Miss Anthony what we folks from Dakota are made of. Then there are other things against Miss Anthony. She issued an appeal to the people of South Dakota for funds. Every time I think of that I almost forget that I am a lady and I want to call Susan B. a trickster. There, I've said it, and that's just what she is, now." Mrs. Bones was so afraid she would miss the first train to Washington that she held a watch in one hand and a time table in the other.

O'Donnell Testifies.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—In the Cronin jury bribing case this morning, the court, in accordance with yesterday's decision, instructed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty in the case of Kavanagh and he was discharged. This left Jeremiah O'Donnell the only defendant. He went on the stand and made an explicit denial of offering to bribe anyone or attempting in any way to get a corrupt jurymen accepted in the case. On cross-examination he became confused and could not remember that he made certain damaging admissions to the state's attorney when first arrested. On re-direct examination it was brought out that O'Donnell had no sleep the night or day before the inquisition in Judge Longenecker's office and having also had nothing to eat for twelve hours, was sick and excited. After evidence as to the credibility of the witness Hoagland, court adjourned till to-morrow.

The Return of the "Skipper."

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 20.—Detective Moses, of Cincinnati, arrived here this morning with papers to take charge of Martin Brockman, who was arrested last night in Windsor. Four years ago Brockman was president of the Cincinnati infirmary. Charges were made against the directors of crookedness in buying supplies, but none were convicted. At the time of the trouble, Brockman, on the advice of his lawyers, skipped to Canada leaving his bondsmen in the lurch to the extent of $20,000. He located at Windsor, started a grocery store, and has been there up to the time of his arrest last night.

Murdered After Being Assaulted.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Feb. 10.—A Flemingsburg, Ky., despatch says: It is now thought that Mrs. James Layton, who was yesterday found dead in her room with a note indicating a case of suicide, was murdered. It seems clear that the note was a clumsy forgery. The room shows evidence of a struggle and suspicion rests upon a worthless character in the neighborhood, who apparently devised the suicide notion and forgery to cover an outrageous assault upon the woman.

Won Her Case.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Fanny W. Reading claims that in 1871 she agreed to give James B. Haggin, a wealthy Californian, her right in the "Reading ranch" on the Sacramento river, containing 20,000 acres, if he purchased the mortgage and the indebtedness left by her husband and after selling the ranch to her. She rendered a meagre accounting and she sued for a complete one. Judge Ingraham gave judgment for her to-day and overruled a demurrer by Haggin.

A Boy Murderer.

GREGORY, Mich., Feb. 20.—Tuesday, Stanley Marsh and Alexander Pyper, neither over 12 years old, picked a quarrel with Milton Bailey, about their own age, and put him to flight. In the evening the fracas was renewed and young Marsh stabbed Bailey near the heart inflicting a fatal wound.

Forecast of the Weather.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 20.—S. P. M.—The signal service notes the following as its forecast for the next twenty-four hours: For Wisconsin and Michigan: Fair weather; northerly winds; becoming variable; colder in eastern; warmer Saturday in western portion.

Bishop O'Connor's Condition.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 20.—The afternoon reports from Mercy hospital, where Bishop O'Connor lies, say he is improving. The attendants say he is doing nicely and faint hopes are entertained of his recovery.

More Snow in the Sierras.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 20.—Reports to-day from points on the Central Pacific overland lines from Colfax to Truckee show that another snow storm prevailed in the Sierra Nevada mountains on Tuesday night.

AND CUPID SMILED.

The Novel Way in Which a Saloonkeeper Settled a Little Trouble With His Wife.
NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 20.—A peculiar settlement of marital difficulties was made public to-day. George Kaegi is a prosperous saloonkeeper, doing business at No. 11 Springfield avenue. About a year ago Gustave Berling, a Frenchman, visited the saloon. He could speak nothing but French. Mrs. Kaegi, who speaks French, was called in to talk to him. Berling said he belonged to a wealthy family in France. After that he called often at Kaegi's saloon and was always entertained by Mrs. Kaegi. The neighbors began to notice the flirtation between the saloonkeeper's young and handsome wife and the Frenchman. A week ago the saloonkeeper was informed that a man was acting in a crazy manner on the other side of the street. Looking out he saw Berling, and on going up stairs he found his wife at the window engaged in a flirtation with the Frenchman. He demanded to know whether she was willing to give up her husband and two children for him she again said "yes." Thereupon the husband rushed to her and brought in the Frenchman. His wife then proceeded to pack up her clothes and shortly after left the house with her lover. The husband refused to allow them to leave by the side door, and made them walk through the saloon, where he treated them at the bar and wished them good luck.

SUPREME COURT DECISIONS.

A Large Number of Opinions Handed Down and Court Adjourns for the Term.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 20.—(Special)—The supreme court filed opinions in the following cases to-day and adjourned for the term. The next term commences April 8th. Affirmed—Breckenfelder vs Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway company; Eldredge vs Sherman; Smith vs Lee; Steers vs Holmes; People vs Hicks; Commissioner of Highway of Homer vs Rakers; Daily vs King; Baunier vs Antieau; Ward vs Rapp; Borgardt vs Farmers Mutual Insurance company; Pittman vs Burr; English vs Ayer; Gebhard vs Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee Railroad company; Wheaton vs Beecher; People vs Dyer & Hayes; People vs Malter; Heffelman vs Otsego Water Power company.

Named a Full State Ticket.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 20.—The prohibitionists held their state convention to-day and nominated a full state ticket.

What is a Model Wife?

A model wife is the woman in whom the heart of her husband doth safely trust. She is the woman who looks after his household, and makes her hospitality a delight to him and not a burden. She who has learned that a soft answer will turn away wrath.

Who keeps her sweetest smiles and most loving words for her husband. Who is his confidant in sorrow or in joy, and who does not feel the necessity of explaining her private affairs to the neighborhood.

Who respects the rights of husband and children, and in turn has due regard paid to her womanliness and so she cultivates it. Who is sympathetic in joy or in grief, and who finds work for her hands to do. Who makes friends and keeps them.

Who is not made bitter by trouble, but who strengthens and sweetens under it. Who tries to conceal the faults of her husband rather than blazon them forth to an uninterested public.

The woman whose life book has love written on every page. Who makes a home for a man—a home in a house and in a heart. A home that he is sure of, a home that is full of love presided over by one whose price is above rubies.

She is the model wife.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Her "Bad Break."

A pretty little German lady who is not yet thoroughly conversant with the English language and his peculiar idioms goes out in west side society a good deal, and her only source of uneasiness is that in conversation she has a habit of repeatedly turning "a bad break." Her mother accompanies her wherever she goes, and when they return from a party or tea they sit up together for an hour or more, while the little lady questions her mother as to whether she has made any ludicrous slip of the tongue during the evening. She usually gets along pretty well, but on one occasion she attended a private party with her mother. During a chat the proposed marriage of a young American girl to a German baron was discussed. The little German lady did not believe in marriages except between social equals, but she expressed herself naively in this way: "I should make a very nice wife for a baron, but I don't know why the young man with the blonde pompadour fell off of the piano stool at this juncture until she reached home and her mother told her that she had used the word "sex" instead of "station."—Chicago Herald.

As to Cold Toes.

Many people, especially women and children, suffer the whole winter through with cold feet. This is mainly due to the fact that they wear their shoes too tight. Unless they have perfect freedom the blood cannot circulate properly, hence follow stiffened and benumbed toes, cold feet and often a numbness up the limbs. People who wear rubbers the whole winter through generally suffer with their feet. Rubbers make them very tender by overheating and causing them to perspire. They should only be worn during stormy or very slushy weather, and even then should be removed as soon as one enters the house. They draw the feet, keep them hot and wet with perspiration—then as soon as one goes again into the air the feet are chilled. In the country I have noticed that the farmers put some dry straw or pieces of newspapers in the bottom of their boots. I myself have ten times the latter, and can assure you that it is a good preventive against cold feet. This is doubtless because the paper or straw absorbs the perspiration and keeps the feet dry.—Philadelphia Review.

Putting it to the Test.

Faith in the friendship of others is a very good thing to have, but it is not quite strengthened by the unexpected guise that friendship occasionally assumes. A young versifier, upon submitting one of his productions to his older and less drowsy room mate, was asked, "the verses having been read with great care: "Did you write this stuff?" "Yes." "Where will you send it?" "To Mr. Blank. He's the editor of The W— Daily Journal. I send it to him because he is an old friend of my father's."

"All right; but glad you're going to send it to Blank. Perhaps, for your father's sake, he will decline to print it."—Harper's Magazine.

A Surprised Blacksmith

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Three thousand people crowded Kernan's theatre to-night and cheered Peter Jackson, the colored champion pugilist, when he appeared on the stage to meet a blacksmith and heavy weight named James Walker. The latter is very powerful, and accepted the challenge issued by Jackson offering $100 to anyone whom he failed to knock out in four rounds with eight ounce gloves. Walker appeared cautious but fairly confident when he came forward in the first round. His confidence disappeared with amazing rapidity, however, for time was no sooner called than Jackson hit him a hard left hand punch in the stomach and followed with a right hand blow which brought Walker to his knees. As he arose another hard stomach blow dazed him, and he almost mechanically announced that he had enough. The fight occupied just forty seconds. To-morrow night a herculean Gypsy will endeavor to stay through the four rounds necessary to earn the $100 offered.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

A Chicago Officer Saves a Family of Four From a Horrible Fate.

CHICAGO, Feb. 20.—Four people narrowly escaped death in a burning house on South Halstead street early this morning. The fire originated in the two story frame building occupied by Anton Stephens as a cigar store and dwelling and spread so rapidly that the escape of Mrs. Stephens, two children and a servant were cut off. Officer Minnehan rushed through the flames, picked up the two children and carried them out. He then went back and rescued Mrs. Stephens and the hired girl. Both women had their clothes burned as they were carried down the stairway and were almost suffocated by the smoke.

From a Defective Flue.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 20.—St. John's Roman Catholic church, at Greenbush, was burned to-day from a defective flue. All the vestments were destroyed. An addition, costing $35,000, was completed last night. The damage is $75,000; insurance $45,000.

EDISON AS A NEWSBOY.

How He First Appreciated Electricity and Inadvertently Made a Sale.
The following is one of the "Tales with Edison" which George Parsons Lathrop reports in Harper's Magazine. "At the beginning of the civil war," said Mr. Edison, "I was slaving late and early at selling papers; but, to tell the truth, I was not making a fortune. I worked on so small a margin that I had to be mighty careful not to over-look myself with papers that I couldn't sell. On the other hand, I could not afford to carry so few that I should find myself sold out long before the end of the trip. I formed a plan which turned out admirably. I made a friend of one of the composers in The Free Press office, and persuaded him to show me every day a 'galley proof' of the most important news article. From a study of its headlines I soon learned to gauge the value of the day's news and its selling capacity, so that I could form a tolerably correct estimate of the number of papers I should need. As a rule, I could dispose of about 300; but if there was any special news from the east of war, the sale ran up to 300 or over. Well, one day my compositor brought me a proof slip of which nearly the whole was taken up with a gigantic display head. It was the first report of the battle of Pittsburg Landing—afterward called Shiloh, you know—and it gave the number of killed and wounded as 60,000 men!

I grasped the situation at once. Here was a chance for enormous sales, if only the people along the line could know what had happened; if only they could see the proof slip I was then reading! Suddenly an idea occurred to me. I rushed off to the telegraph operator and gravely made a proposition to him, which he received just as gravely. He, on his part, was to write to each of the principal stations on our route, asking the station master to chalk upon the black bulletin board—used for announcing the times of arrival and departure of trains—the news of the great battle with its accompanying slaughter. This he was to do at once; while I agreed, in return, to supply him 'free, gratis, for nothing,' a Harper's Weekly, a Harper's Monthly, and a daily evening paper during the next six months from that date.

"This bargain struck, I began to bethink me how I was to get enough papers to make the grand coup I intended. I had very little cash, and I feared, still less credit. I went to the superintendent of the delivery department and offered a modest request for 1,000 copies of The Free Press on trust. But I was not much surprised when my request was curtly and gruffly refused. In those days, though, I was a pretty cheeky boy, and I felt desperate, for I saw a small fortune in prospect if my telegraph operator had kept his word—a point on which I was still a trifle doubtful. Nervous myself for a great stroke, I marched upstairs into the office of Wilbur F. Storey himself, and asked to see him. A few minutes later I was shown in to him. I told him who I was, and that I wanted 1,500 copies of the paper on credit. The tall, thin, dark eyed, ascetic looking man stared at me for a moment, and then scratched a few words on a slip of paper. "Take that down stairs," said he, "and you will get what you want." And so I did. Then I felt happier than I have ever felt since.

"I took my 1,500 papers, got three boys to help me fold them, and mounted the train, all agog to find out whether the telegraph operator had kept his word. At the town place where our first stop was made I usually sold two papers. As the train swung into that station I looked ahead, and thought there must be a riot going on. A big crowd filled the platform, and as the train drew up I began to realize that they wanted my papers. Before we left I had sold a hundred or two at five cents apiece. At the next station the place was fairly black with people. I raised the ante, and sold 300 papers at ten cents each. So it went on until Port Huron was reached. Then I transferred my remaining stock to the wagon which always waited for me there, hired a small boy to sit on the pile of papers in the back of the wagon, so as to discount any pilfering, and sold out every paper for a quarter of a dollar or more per copy. I remember I passed a church full of worshippers, and stopped to yell out my news. In ten seconds there was not a soul left in meeting. All of them, including the parson, were clustered around me, bidding against each other for copies of the precious paper.

"I can understand why it struck me then that the telegraph must be about the best thing going, for it was the telegraphic notices on the bulletin boards that had done the trick. I determined at once to become a telegraph operator. But if it hadn't been for Wilbur F. Storey I should never have fully appreciated the wonders of electrical science."

Letter from a Lepers.

The Detroit Free Press gives these extracts from a farewell letter of a leper in Malokola to a relative in that city: "This is one of the liveliest places I have ever seen. Lepers are full of hilarity. Girls, boys, children—some very bad—all playing together as if there were no leprosy. They play the guitar and flute constantly. When I first came here and had to go through a row of lepers with their hideous faces and hands I wanted to die, but now I am used to them I mind them so much.

"When I first came up here I wanted to commit suicide, but I am calmed down now. I have built a neat little cottage some distance away from everybody, all inclosed with a stone wall. I have a horse and sulky, plenty of newspapers and magazines. My great trouble now is my eyesight. When I can't read any more then I want to die. I would sooner be here with this disease than in any other part of the world, where I would be despised by everybody.

"My right hand is giving out. I have two fingers that do not have much feeling in them. My left foot is also affected. I am breaking here in a horse. He stepped on my foot. I let him stand there some time and had no pain. You see, it is a curious disease that appears to destroy without pain. There is no cure for it. It is sure to kill, and is only a question of time."

In a postscript sheet he says: "I have now a good nurse who will see me properly buried, which I hope will be soon."

The Boy Was Sure.

Larned started off of Beaubien on the run and came to a sudden halt, "have you seen a man turn in here within five minutes?" "Yes, sir." "Have on a fur cap?" "He did." "Sneff colored overcoat?" "Yes, sir." "Wears a bundle with him?" "Yes, sir. I took notice that he had a bundle under his arm."

"That's the fellow I want. Which way did he go?" "Right down the street." "Sure?" "I ought to be sure. He was my own father, and he told me to be certain to tell any policeman who came along inquiring for him that he had gone down the street."

The officer started off up the street, but he could get no trace of his man.—Detroit Free Press.

CHEAP Excursions SOUTH

TO THE MOBILE & OHIO

TO Mobile, Ala., and New Orleans, La.

TICKETS CAN BE PURCHASED

At any railroad coupon ticket office any day from December 1 to March 1, 1890, good until June 1, 1890.

Why? Because the price for good pine is lower to-day than it ever will be again. These Long Leaf Pine lands are accessible to water and are advancing with the increasing southern immigration faster than pine land ever did in Michigan. This is not wind, but a plain statement of facts susceptible of proof. More than four million acres of Long Leaf Pine was purchased by Northern Capitalists from 1880 to 1888 principally by Michigan men—which has nearly doubled its value last time.

Thousands of acres of cheap Grazing, Farming and Fruit Lands, values increasing more rapidly than any portion of the United States.

Situated in a fine, healthy climate—less than six weeks moderately cold weather and free from excessive heat, within easy access to all the large cities of the country, good water and plenty of timber. Why settle away out west on the treeless prairie, among the cyclones and blizzards, where the railroads dictate the price you pay for fuel, and where you are obliged to you take starvation prices for your farm produce?

But where the rivers will always rival the railroads and thus prevent excessive rates of freight on all products.

Freight rates an item of importance to every farmer and mill man.

Many navigable streams traverse the land grant, and afford a ready means of access to the prairie lands of Eastern Mississippi—no finer agricultural lands in the world.

These lands, before the war, found a ready sale at from $50 to $80 per acre. They can now be purchased at $25 to $10 per acre.

The great decline was caused by the freedom of the market for land, and the consequent attention of northern capital, and will soon be brought back to their former price.

Clover and other timothy do well here. Good corn country, and all small grain does as well here as in more northern latitudes.

A man with a few hundred dollars will be given an equal chance with the largest capitalist. Our main object is to settle the country.

Correspondence in regard to any of the persons wanting any kind of land, whether it is one wanting forty acres for a homestead, or a large tract for a plantation, or a small tract for a farm; we will furnish both without delay, and with the utmost satisfaction to all parties.

MOBILE AS A HEALTH RESORT.

Mobile is on a plain shut in by slight hills at her back, washed by Mobile river and bay at her front, and famed by the temperate breezes of the Gulf Stream. The diadem of this City of the Gulf is her pretty bay, looking out to the limitless sea.

The city itself, from its abundance of various trees; its beautiful gardens at all seasons in bloom and abounding in flowers; its quiet and noiseless streets, and its broad avenues, is always captivating to the stranger. Then, to these, if we add the quiet hospitality, courtesy, and refinement of its people, it becomes a truly lovely city to the visitors.

Dr. William H. Underhill, one of the oldest and most esteemed physicians, of very extensive practice, has written in "Physiology in the Medical College of Alabama," a pamphlet in relation to the health of the location, says:

"There are many chronic diseases that are positively benefited by the briny air that blows from this tropical sea. It has long been known that the iodine and bromine vapors, which float into the atmosphere of the Gulf of Mexico, are powerful tonics to the system. Although they exist there in almost infinitesimal quantities, still they are invigorating and healthful effect on the system. The fact, too, that this atmosphere is directly free from malaria in any of its forms, gives salt air in winter the tonic properties which we find in the mountain atmosphere in summer. Florida every winter. But these resorts, although furnishing the requisite temperature, cannot boast of that freedom from malaria for which the coast of the Mexican Gulf is justly noted. What is wanted by such invalids is a dry, sandy soil and a mild, southern sea breeze. These requisites are found in the city of Mobile and its vicinity to a greater extent than they can be found anywhere else, either in this country, or on the shores of the Mediterranean.

"For consumptive patients, however, exercise in the open air is a local freedom from malaria is all-important. The atmosphere of a city mansion with closed windows and doors is a positive poison that aggravates any disease. It is far better to live in a canvas tent, if the outer air is mild enough to allow it, than to remain shut up in a house. The blood wants free oxygen, and it cannot get it in a closed apartment. Now, I claim for Mobile and its vicinity this advantage, that the patient can be out in the open air nearly every day during the winter and spring season. If this open air, therefore, is mild and not poisoned with malaria, it fulfills all the indications necessary for consumptives. The very nature of the soil and around Mobile is opposed to the generation of malaria.

Mobile is a delightful city of some forty thousand inhabitants, peaceful and contented people. It has good schools, fine churches, a public library, good theatre and the law faithfully administered. The principal points of interest in the city are the Barton Academy, the Medical College, the Spring Hill College, and Spring Hill, which can be reached by the Mobile and Florida steamboat, the new Court House, the market, the gardens, the famous Bay-Shell-road, Fort Morgan, the scene of "Parricide's" great naval battle, Spanish Fort and Blakey, the scene of the last battle of the civil war, etc.

Of the hotels, the oldest and most renowned is the Battle House. Its reputation is so extensive as the limits of this great country. Guests can expect the best service and a bill of fare unequalled anywhere in the United States.

BONNIE LOUISE.

Winsome, yet willful and hard to please,

Naive or petulant, each caprice.

Puzzles my brain in bewilderment sore;

Vagaries new and unmeasured of before;

Less understanding, still loving you more,

Dear as the sunshine, the summer green trees,

And as the blossoms and lily brown bees;

Songs of the waters and sighs of the breeze,

My Bonnie Louise!

Fickle as moonbeams that kiss the seas,

Coy as a shadow that beckons and flees,

Bright as the beam that a clear throw

Caught in a dew drop that trembles and glows

On the pink cheek of a wild mountain rose,

Tantalized, tortured, and never at ease,

Robel moment, the next on my knees,

Locked in my heart and you play with the keys,

My Bonnie Louise!

Lost among pleasures and pains like these,

Wafts of the May wind and blasts that freeze,

Blazes the noontide one minute, then fall

Shadows from night shrouded heavens, and all

Life is involved in uncertainty's thrall,

Sipping, the nectar then drenched with the lees;

Why will you tempt me and torment and tease?

Take me and make me whatever you please.

My Bonnie Louise!

—Atlanta Constitution.

Twenty-three years ago I was at the village of Bozage, in central France.

In one of the little cottages of that village, into which hunger had accidentally driven me—this story is not an invention, it actually occurred as I relate it—a little girl of perhaps three years of age.

She was it seems the child of a Parisian, and a Parisian who was born and grew to young womanhood at Bozage.

One morning in May a carriage stopped before the door of Mother Gerard, who now took care of a vineyard, but in her younger days had been a seamstress for little children.

A young woman alighted from the carriage, followed by a maid and a little girl, delicate and feeble, but very pretty, nevertheless.

"Mother Gerard," said the young woman to the peasant, "I have brought my little girl to you; she needs the country air and goat's milk. Will you keep her for a few months?"

The husband of Mother Gerard made an impetuous movement, but before he could open his mouth she said: "I will pay you a thousand francs."

"A thousand francs," said the man; "she is very sick, and the doctor will have to be called."

"Doctor or no doctor," said Mother Gerard briskly, "I will take care of your child.

Nini; I will care for her as tenderly as I did for you, my nursing."

"I am sure of it."

"Kiss me, little one," continued the good woman, taking the child in her arms.

The little girl did not wait to be urged, but kissed her affectionately.

"You will pay in advance?" said the man.

"Here are the thousand francs; give me a receipt."

The young mother then brought from the carriage the child's clothing daintily arranged in a small trunk.

The maid brought a large paper box in

ISHPEMING DOINGS.

The U. P. League.

A call has been made by President Dr. J. P. Mason of the upper peninsula amateur base ball league for an annual meeting to be held in this city Thursday, March 20th. The session will be held at the Nelson House, and will convene at 2 o'clock P. M. Ishpeming will, of course, have representatives—each club being allowed three—at the meeting, for it is the intention of the local base ball enthusiasts to make the coming season a lively one in base ball circles, and a place will be secured for the city in the U. P. league. Negaunee will be in the league, as the Union park, owned jointly by Ishpeming and Negaunee men, will afford excellent facilities for both clubs. Games between the clubs of the sister cities will be had every few weeks at the park, and will afford much amusement to all lovers of base ball.

It is time the managers of the local clubs got together and agreed on a plan of organization. If they are going to make the club a strong one—one that will make a good race for the pennant it is time they got about it.

Their Remin.

The Union Canadienne Francaise of this city has already begun to prepare for the reunion of the French societies that is to be held here on Tuesday, June 24th. A couple of days ago the representatives of the local society sent out invitations to all the other societies on the peninsula. The matter having been given publicity to the papers, several societies have already signified the intention of being present, and no doubt a general acceptance will follow the receipt of the invitations. All the local unions of Marquette county will be here on that date, as well as a couple from Menominee county, three from Houghton county and one from Escanaba. Possibly some others may attend, but these alone would make a great turnout.

It is the intention of the Ishpeming union to make the celebration the best that has ever been held here. A program will be arranged that will afford pleasure every minute of the day, and with such a general attendance as there promises to be the celebration of the anniversary of St. Jean de Baptiste can not be other than a success.

Not Abandoned.

News being woefully scarce yesterday, the reporter had to resurrect some "dead" subjects, and he asked one of the men interested in the electric railway project whether they had buried, or had just embalmed, it? He declared that the project had by no means been abandoned. Owing to circumstances over which they had no control, they were forced to drop the subject for a time, but that it would be certainly brought up again this spring and a strong effort made to push the scheme through.

The Michigan's Run.

No report of the second clean-up at the Michigan mine can be obtained, for the reason that the company has decided not to "report" until near the close of the month. However, it is learned that the mill work thus far has been excellent, and the result highly satisfactory to the management. The little mill works splendidly and the mine will make a good showing for the month.

THE PULPIT AND THE STAGE.

Rev. F. M. Shrovet, Pastor United Brethren Church, Blue Mound, Kan., says: "I feel it my duty to tell what wonders Dr. King's New Discovery has done for me. My lungs were badly diseased, and my parishioners thought I could live only a few weeks. I took five bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery and am sound and well, gaining 35 lbs. in weight."

Arthur Love, Manager Love's Funny Folks Combination, writes: "After a thorough trial and convincing evidence, I am confident Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, beats 'em all and cures when everything else fails. The greatest kindness I can do my many thousand friends is to urge them to try it." Free trial bottles at H. H. Stafford & Son's Drug Store. Regular sizes 50c. and $1.00.

ISHPEMING IN BRIEF.

Sam. Blumenthal is in the east buying a carload of goods for "The Star."

There was no comfort in being out yesterday. The mercury was almost out of sight.

The Ishpeming National bank will not be open to-morrow—Washington's birthday is a legal holiday.

The South Shore trains have all been late for a few days owing to connections. The South Shore trains make up an hour on the runs but it's the connections that knock them out.

Conductor Dan Loftus of the South Shore left yesterday for Chicago where he will attend a meeting of the Order of Railway Conductors. From there he will go to Buffalo for about a week.

Voelker Bros' place was filled with dust yesterday, carpenters being at work tearing down a partition on the north side. This will give much additional room, which the firm can use to advantage.

Hose Company No. 2, at the Cleveland location now gets the DAILY MIXING JOURNAL every morning. The room has been well furnished, is warm, and makes a nice place for the boys to spend their evenings. Plenty of good reading matter will be supplied, and the firemen will make the evenings spent at the hose house pleasant and profitable.

Coming up on the train yesterday afternoon was a man who stood at the front door, having carefully scraped the crust of frost from the glass, and was looking out to note the speed being made. Soon the engine struck drifted snow in a cut, and the plow threw the snow back against the door with terrific force, large chunks coming in through the cracks and making the man in the fur coat look like Santa Claus.

TO-NIGHT AND TO-MORROW NIGHT

Each day and night during this week you can get at all druggists Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, acknowledged to be the most successful remedy ever sold for the cure of Coughs, Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, Asthma and Consumption. Get a bottle to-day and keep it always in the house, so you can check your cold at once. Price 50c. and $1.00. Sample bottles free.

Mileage Books

On the Milwaukee & Northern railroad are good on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Wisconsin Central, Green Bay, Wiltona & St. Paul, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie and Atlantic, St. Paul & Duluth railroads, and their 1,000-mile books are good between Negaunee and Michigan. These can be secured of any agent on the line of the road or of E. F. Wilbur, T. P. A., Marquette, Mich. 12-34f

INTERESTED PEOPLE.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for Coughs and Colds does is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free that they may try it before purchasing. The Large Bottles are 50c. and $1.00. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.

FACTS FOR CANDY EATERS.

RESULTS OF A PHYSICIAN'S CAREFUL INVESTIGATION.

He Says Pure Candies Are Healthful When Consumed at the Proper Time and in Moderation—How Sweetmeats Are Adulterated—Eat it Just After Meals.

Owing to limited resources, savage man was content to assuage the cravings of his sweet tooth with licorice root and myrrh. But things have changed since then, and man, somewhat less savage, sucks the minted candy stick or melts in his mouth the creamy French confections.

The candies of today are made of five main ingredients—sugar, glucose, gum and coloring and flavoring matters. Other substances are often added, as starch, which, though often considered as an adulteration, should be looked upon as a legitimate ingredient. If all these substances are pure and good, the confection manufactured therefrom cannot be otherwise than wholesome and nutritious.

The sugar, glucose and starch are fat forming, and heat producing principles are present in many of our dietary staples. This fact should not be lost sight of by consumers of candy. Being foods, the various candies should never be eaten between meals, as they are equivalent to a lunch, and everyone is aware of the deleterious effect of constant lunching. The proper time for all kinds of confectionery is as a dessert to the regular meals. Used in this way they are often decidedly beneficial in inducing one to stop partaking of the more bulky elements of the meals before the stomach becomes overloaded.

BETTER THAN MINCE PIE.

They offer this a nutritious, digestible dessert of little bulk, a dessert which, by the laws of nature and humanity, ought to substitute for all time that indigestible American confectionery—mince pie. Good, pure candy eaten in moderate quantity as a dessert to a meal, even to even meal, is nutritious any one; and such certainly is the logical, rational way to eat it. But children must have something to keep them quiet, and ladies with nothing to do must have something to amuse themselves; and further blunted tastes must have something exceedingly sweet to tickle jaded palates—for these reasons it is likely that candy consumers will go on eating their dozen and one lumps a day, in spite of all their physician may say to the contrary. Yet it is an indisputable fact that no ordinary stomach can do its work quietly and well if it is required to digest more than three meals per day, or if it receives within it anything other than water between those three meals. True, there are people who are always eating and lunching, consuming candies and cakes by the handful, who yet seem healthy and well; but it is doubtful if these people ever eat a meal with relish; and it is certain that sooner or later dyspepsia will overtake them and induce a dire repentance.

Practically, the best way to give confectionery to children is to allow them, after each meal, such a quantity of candy as they will likely eat within a half hour or less. Then they should have no more until after the next meal; and they will not usually want it if they get it thus regularly.

TAFFY IS BETTER THAN CARAMELS.

As to the kind, it should be such as will not readily dissolve or "melt down." Soft or creamy candies are apt to be consumed before the palate is satisfied; whereas the harder, less soluble kinds remain longer in the mouth, yielding their sweetness for a more protracted period, thus inducing satiety, with a far less consumption of candy.

For the same reason, teach your children to dissolve the candy slowly in their mouths—not to chew it. Partaken of in this way, and at these times, the harder candies, if pure, are not only not injurious, but are indeed often decidedly beneficial, and for these reasons. They are easily digested, foods, rich in nutriment; they are an inducement to leave the meal short of satiety, and they assist digestion. The latter assertion may be questioned by some, but it is a demonstrable fact that anything which promotes the flow of saliva, at the same time, through the sympathetic nervous system, promotes the flow of the gastric digestive juices. The saliva, too, that is swallowed with the dissolving candy may aid digestion somewhat after it has reached the stomach, though in the light of late investigations this is somewhat doubtful—long held opinion to the contrary notwithstanding.

Persons inclined to adipose and who are opposed to it had better let candy alone, as for them nothing is so fattening. Evidently slender people, however, need not scorn themselves with candy in the hope of getting stout; for in them something more than fat forming food is necessary for an increase in weight.

Children under 2 years of age are better off without any candy whatever, because their nutrition apparatus is not yet equal to the task of properly assimilating cane sugar and glucose. If not digested both these substances are exceedingly apt to ferment, and it is the fermentation of ingesta that is the Nemesis of baby's second summer.

In order to ascertain the purity of the candy now manufactured, the writer examined fifty-one samples of the product, taken from the general market. In general, it may be stated that these examinations showed as clearly as anything could that it is folly to expect to get something for nothing. When the price of the candy was so low as to preclude the possibility of paying for the making and the sugar with a profit beside, there was added some cheap foreign substance, usually pipe clay, to bring the thing up to a paying price. Especially was this the case with the very cheap imitations of fine goods. It was in this class of products, too, that the most injurious coloring matters were detected.

Here is the list of impurities and adulterations found in nineteen of the fifty-one samples of candy examined:

Chalk in five samples.
Pipe clay (terra alba) in ten samples.
Bronze (copper and zinc alloy) in one sample.

Prussian blue in one sample.
Verdigris in one sample.
Fuchs (magenta red) in three samples.
Chromic yellow (chromate of lead) in one sample.

It is proper to state here that these fifty-one specimens of candy were not fair average samples, but were such as seemed by their appearance and price to merit suspicion.—C. Q. Jackson, M. D., in Pittsburg Dispatch.

How He Told.

Many things which at first sight seem perfectly simple are found on more careful reflection to be full of mystery, and, on the other hand, things which at first sight seem quite inexplicable sometimes turn out to be simple as a pie.

When a certain lawyer first opened an office in Portland, says an exchange, he astonished his friends by telling them that, ninety-nine times out of a hundred, when he heard footsteps on the stairs, he could tell whether or not the person was coming to his office.

On being questioned as to how he did it, he said that he always made up his mind that they were not coming to his office, and ninety-nine times in a hundred he was right—

MORTIS DIGNITAS.

Here lies a common man. His holy hands, crossed meekly, as a maid's upon his breast, show marks of toil, and by his general dress you judge him to have been an artisan. Doubtless, could all his life be written out, the story would not thrill nor start a tear. He worked, laughed, loved and suffered in his time. And now rests peacefully, with upturned face whose look beholds all struggle in the past. A homely tale, yet, trust me, I have seen the greatest of the earth go stately by, while shining multitudes beset the way, and with less of awe. The gap between a king and me, a nameless gazer in the crowd, seemed not so wide as that which stretches now between us two, this dead one and myself. Untroubled and deathless, yet he is transfigured by a touch from out the skies. Until he wears with all-embracing grace, the strange and sudden Dignity of Death.

JACOBS FAULTS.

It was early June in one of those charming places on the Hudson river that lie between New York and Albany.

Jacob Raus was an inattentive observer of the lovely phases of nature. He was preoccupied with his own troubled soul, and here was but a wintry prospect. The world points out to a man the necessity of doing something; there was no corresponding need in his soul. He had lately come into an excellent property, and had invested a good portion of it in a ranch in the west. The west was no place of his choice, but what else was he to do? He was 32, and was without even a commercial training. He had been bred to no profession, and he was not rich enough to live with rich men as a pleasure seeker, even had such a life attracted him. He had perfect health, was a good shot, a good reader, a good walker, a good companion. He wore a blonde beard upon his sunburned face, with its handsome, clean-cut profile and hazel eyes.

This bald statement of his case presented itself over and over to his mind, quite as if he were weighing an abstract question that bored him excessively. Then he grew irritated that his father should have given him such an old-fashioned, half-humorous name that exerted always an unspoken and only half-recognized negative tyranny on his whole life; that his father should have had that responsibility in the paternal relation that is so rarely to be found outside of the Anglo-Saxon race—as if the Anglo-Saxon was born armed at all points and with an intuitive knowledge of fighting his way through the world.

Now he was free at 32—a freedom that meant bondage to his own limitations; and while he regretted that he had no profession, he bitterly recognized the fact that the desire for a larger life in no sense proved a talent. His desire was, as he has said, not one for action. It was a vague desire for a larger happiness, such as women have often than men.

All these reasons for gloom were ever present to Jacob, but he had lately waked to a more definite purpose and a more definite grief. His decision to go on a ranch had made him realize that he could not leave Millicent Fuller, whom he had known from her childhood, and who had been for some years past, half unconscious to himself, his chief temptation. He offered himself to her. She refused him. She was the youngest and only unmarried one of five sisters. She was 22 years old, handsome, traveled and accomplished.

Jacob, as he walked through a shady road, cast a fine bouquet of sweetbrier roses, and trimmed their thorny, straggling stems with an ill-humored energy. He had not pride enough to go away without asking to see her once more, just to say good by, and she had accorded him an interview that evening at 7:30 o'clock.

He walked around the Fuller's large house, past the broad piazzas, and found her alone in a little side porch that was overgrown with honeysuckle vine, and amid their pinkish-yellow blossoms Millicent, in a pink muslin, looked like rose June personified. Her father and mother had just gone to drive, she explained precisely as she took Jacob's silently proffered flowers with a fine blush for thanks.

"I am afraid," she said, not so as she carefully plucked a few thorns from the stem of her bouquet before she grasped it, "that I didn't succeed the other night—in that is—I mean that I am afraid that I didn't say what I meant."

"I should be glad," said Jacob, "to hear that you did not mean what you said."

"Oh, no; I didn't mean that."

"Well, it doesn't matter a great deal what you mean if you didn't mean that."

"I do wish that you would be reasonable, Jacob."

"I wish you wouldn't call me Jacob, when you have told me that you didn't like that name."

"Oh! Did I say that? I do think that I like it, since you have no other. Indeed, Jacob, if it were not for some faults that you have, I think I should like you better than any one."

The young man sat down on a step lower than the one that the girl occupied.

"Perhaps," he said, gloomily, "you will discuss these faults of mine; I may suggest some to add to the list. My name is one, but that is hardly my fault, and I believe that I could change it by an act of the legislature or something of the kind."

"But I should always know that your real name was Jacob," said Millicent, laughing; "I shouldn't mind your name, but there are some things that would grow worse and were."

"My age, I suppose."

"Yes, for one thing. Ten years is too much difference."

"But you will grow older."

"There will still be ten years between us."

"The general opinion is that a woman grows old faster than a man. You would stretch up to me."

"Alas! that is like most general opinions, wrong. I have made my own observations on that subject. To the close observer, middle-aged women are younger, even in appearance, than men of their own age."

"Where did you learn so much about men?"

"I have not been in all our large cities and in most of those of Europe? Can you not resolve impressions of strangers as they pass, and accumulated impressions form opinions. Men's eyes grow dull and the lines of the mouth hard, and the faces heavy and meager; while women's faces are still full of benevolence, though their figures have lost their grace and complexions their delicacy. Still those women are young."

"You're then a condition of the mind, we Sibyls?"

"Certainly, it is the capacity of receiving new impressions, meeting one's fellow beings with sympathy, and undertaking new enterprises."

"Some people must then be born with more capacity for youth than others."

"To be sure."

"And I, who have by sex and nature less youth than you, and yet have wasted ten years more of it, must sooner become like those horrid middle-aged people."

"I am not speaking of you."

"You are not speaking of me? How inconsequent! I sat down here to listen to talk about me. Let us begin over again. You had said that you do not like my name and that I am too old."

"Oh, Jacob?"

"Yes, I am too old, and am to grow older. You have defined youth—what is age?"

"Oh! it is the enemy of the human race. Let us never grow old, Jacob."

"Ah, no, Millicent, let us never grow old, so only that we may stay young together," he said, flushing, and edging a little nearer to her, while he looked up in her face with a half-humorous smile. But she drew away farther from him.

"Well," he continued despondently, "and what is my next fault? Come, say it!"

"You do not believe in friendships between men and women. My own belief is that no woman can expect to be really happy unless her husband can have a friendship for her."

"You seem to have thought a good deal about marriage—even if you are averse to it."

Millicent, with heightened color, made a movement to rise. Jacob stretched up both hands and, taking hers, pulled her back gently to her seat.

"You are so rude," she continued, "that is another fault. I should want my husband to be so polite to me. It would make me happier than almost anything."

"And I should want to have the liberty of quarreling with my wife whenever I chose and making it up again; but I suppose you would like a slave girl, like that Hastings."

"There again," said Millicent, in an injured tone, "how ridiculous you are! You are so jealous, and about nothing. What could be more innocent, when a party of people are out on a blossom-gathering, than that two of them should run down a hill together, and yet from the time you made about it—it's too absurd!"

"But you took his hand and ran laughing."

"As children might. You and he had raced together, and you had beaten him easily. You had picked my blossoms for me, and I had walked with you. He was my guest, and surely I owed him some politeness."

"To give him your hand, I suppose, and to kiss and laugh with him."

The recollection quite overcame Jacob with anger. He rose and walked a few paces across the lawn and then returned.

"Well, I am named Jacob. I am old. I am rude, and I am jealous. Oh, yes; and I forgot, I don't believe in Platonic friendship. Five faults: I think that there are seven deadly sins. Not that I have the least idea what they are. I know that seven always seemed a small allowance to me. I surely have more than five. More than five would do to the make-up of any respectable man. What! you can name no more? I could accuse myself of more than that. Don't you know another?"

"Yes," said Millicent gravely, while she put some of the sweetbrier roses in her breast.

"I am impatient to hear. I sit here only for that. The sixth fault, come!"

"That you don't care for women's society."

Jacob rose and folded his arms, facing the girl, and looked long at her. Then he threw back his head and laughed heartily: "Upon my soul, that is a fault! Have I not liked your society?"

"Yes, but that of no other woman."

"Well! Upon my soul! Talk of jealousy. I never saw its opposite so set forth. Do you wish me—should you wish, I ought to say, your husband—to be fond of other women's society?"

"I don't like a man's man," said Millicent, evasively.

"I am more edified," said Jacob, seating himself again, "this evening than I ever was in my life. Why do you not like a man's man?"

"Because," said the girl, searching a little in her companion's searching look, "I know well enough how that works."

"I am waiting for information," said Jacob.

A man's man soon wearies of the woman he loves and he seeks men's society constantly. Men influence men more than women do. I should never be jealous of other women, for I could always be a woman, but men would be a contrary influence. I have seen the lonely lives of the wives of men's men."

"I am still listening," he said.

"At the best, men understand women very little, and men's men grow at last to understand them not at all. Men's men become at last to be a world wide apart. Their wives have no excuse for being, except inasmuch as they contribute to their comfort."

"Millicent, do you say that women are younger than men? I don't believe that men of 60, or men that have been widowers two or three times, have thought this question of marriage out like you. Six faults—my name, my age, my native rudeness, my jealousy, my incredulity of Platonic friendships, and my being a man's man. You must name at least seven deadly sins to convict me. Isn't there another?"

"Yes."

"Millicent, you are absorbingly interesting. I never knew that you thought so much about me."

"I ought to have thought about you before," she paused.

"I understand, before you refused to marry me. You ought to make some excuse for that. With what seventh fault did you strengthen your case?"

"That you are so dreadfully masculine."

"I plead guilty. The roses are rosy, the briars are thorny, the grass is green, and I, Jacob Raus, the man who loves you, am masculine. Alas! alas! Is that more my fault than my name? You, besides, are immensely feminine, and I find no fault with that. Is it fair?"

Jacob's spirits were rising; Millicent's perceptibly falling.

"Yes, it is fair that I, being feminine, should object to your being masculine. The two are opposites. They are at variance. If nature has made a mistake there, I am not responsible. Men and women never understand each other, because, what nature has blindly blundered into beginning, education accomplishes instead of trying to set it right."

"But I have had no education," said Jacob.

Millicent went on without answering him, falling now into an injured tone:

"Even you are constantly misunderstanding me. You sometimes trample my tenderest feelings unconsciously, just as you trampled my best white petunias the other day, walking over my flower bed as if it were a path."

"Yes," he said, "I saw you. I ran to you. I did not notice the way. Well! In the west they will be all wild flowers, and if I trample them they will come up again. I shall think of the petunias, and wish that I had a chance to trample them, and you will forget what I did when you have found that paragon who loves you without jealousy, likes all other women and no men, who is polite, and credulous, and effeminate. I am none of these—but I love you passionately."

He tried to grasp her hands, but she drew them away, saying excitedly:

"And this is your greatest fault. If you loved me tenderly I might trust you; but you love me, as you say, passionately, and I, who have looked on all life and reflected, have seen that of all traps and pitfalls this is the greatest. Talk of the beauty of diabolical girls, that flits about with the fading of the bridal flowers; that is no delusion compared with the passions of men, and yet in choosing freedom rather than binding one's self to a delusion you need not tell me that I choose what is only negative. It is so discouraging. You have such hopeless faults, and I shall never like any other man better than you, Jacob, I know, and so I shall never marry."

"Yes, but I am not like that; I know that I shall marry," he said, watching the girl's face closely. "It seems to me now as if I should not, but I am only a man, unscientific, as you say. As long as I am very busy I may keep up, but sometimes they say it is not quite wholesome in those ranches, and one is exposed to wind and weather. I might be ill, and then when I am homesick and lonely some good western girl will take care of me, perhaps like me, even love me. For I might not have so many faults. She would not be so clever as you, or have got things down so fine, and she wouldn't know, poor thing, what a tissue of faults is covered by my unfortunate name, that sounds so homely, and simple, and good. So, being sick, and lonely, and wretched, and grateful to her, I know that I should be weak enough to marry her. I know that I should."

"Yes," said Millicent, throwing down beside her the bouquet of sweetbrier with a passionate gesture, "that's just what a man's love means. I shall be so glad that I didn't marry you when I hear of you throwing yourself on some wild western girl that any man of refinement would shudder to think of as his wife. I didn't believe it of you!" and she ran down the steps of the porch into the garden.

Jacob was up in an instant and followed her, but she ran from him swiftly, leaping over the flower-beds and speeding across the grass, slim and active as a nymph, her pink dress falling white in the soft light of the summer night. He had almost caught up with her when he stumbled and fell over the protruding roots of an old tree. She, fleeing breathless, came suddenly upon her father and mother, who, having returned from their drive, had alighted from the carriage at the gate and walked across the lawn. They now stood hand in hand looking up at the sky and at the new crescent moon—a charming picture of the sweet companionship of loving souls who find their own youth in all the promises of nature.

Millicent stood and looked at them, with sudden tears welling up into her eyes. They turned and saw her just as Jacob came up, somewhat confused in the new situation, and Mrs. Fuller spoke first. "Why, Millicent, is Mr. Raus here? I thought he had gone."

"Why, yes, Jacob, we thought you had gone," said Mr. Fuller, with an unexpected sympathy in his heart for his old friend's son, awakened by Mrs. Fuller's treating him as a stranger in calling him Mr. Raus. The good gentleman had felt no sympathy for him whatever on account of Millicent's refusal. It had appeared to him a great impertinence that he should propose to take his daughter so far away.

Jacob stood silent. Millicent took her father's hand, and, throwing one arm round his neck, kissed him. This action, which conveyed nothing but his daughter's affection for almost a century, was the only thing that the whole situation to Mrs. Fuller, who was not unprepared when her daughter, turning her head, clasped her in her arms and said:

"Yes, dear mamma, Jacob is here, and when he goes I will with him. I have promised to be his wife, and you know what it is, will be the last to deny me that companionship which makes you forget even the parting from your children."

Jacob was more surprised than any one. He never knew exactly how it had come about; he only knew that he must have been very much improved by marriage, or his wife grown very lenient, for no man ever suffered less from fault-finding than he, and the west was to him a wilderness that blossomed like a rose long; 11 minutes are taken every year to make the year 365 1/4 days long, and every fourth year we have an extra day. This was Julius Caesar's arrangement. You may ask: "Where do these eleven minutes come from?" They come from the future, and are paid by omitting leap year every 100 years. But if leap year is omitted regularly every 100 years, in the course of 400 years it is found that the eleven minutes taken each year will not only have been paid back, but that a whole day will have been given up. So Pope Gregory XIII, who improved on Caesar's calendar in 1582, decreed that every centennial year divisible by four should be a leap year after all. So we borrow 11 minutes each year more than paying our borrowings back by omitting three years in three centennial years, and square matters by having a leap year in the fourth centennial year. Pope Gregory's arrangement is so exact and the borrowing and paying back balanced so nicely, that we borrow more than we pay back to the extent of only one day in 3,866 years.—St. Louis Republic.

Why 1900 Is Not a Leap Year.
The following explanation will show you why the year 1900 will not be counted among leap years: The year is 365 days 5 hours and 48 minutes long; 11 minutes are taken every year to make the year 365 1/4 days long, and every fourth year we have an extra day. This was Julius Caesar's arrangement. You may ask: "Where do these eleven minutes come from?" They come from the future, and are paid by omitting leap year every 100 years. But if leap year is omitted regularly every 100 years, in the course of 400 years it is found that the eleven minutes taken each year will not only have been paid back, but that a whole day will have been given up. So Pope Gregory XIII, who improved on Caesar's calendar in 1582, decreed that every centennial year divisible by four should be a leap year after all. So we borrow 11 minutes each year more than paying our borrowings back by omitting three years in three centennial years, and square matters by having a leap year in the fourth centennial year. Pope Gregory's arrangement is so exact and the borrowing and paying back balanced so nicely, that we borrow more than we pay back to the extent of only one day in 3,866 years.—St. Louis Republic.

Musical Gun Gas.
Jacob waited a moment. "I understand, before you refused to marry me. You ought to make some excuse for that. With what seventh fault did you strengthen your case?"

"That you are so dreadfully masculine."

"I plead guilty. The roses are rosy, the briars are thorny, the grass is green, and I, Jacob Raus, the man who loves you, am masculine. Alas! alas! Is that more my fault than my name? You, besides, are immensely feminine, and I find no fault with that. Is it fair?"

Jacob's spirits were rising; Millicent's perceptibly falling.

"Yes, it is fair that I, being feminine, should object to your being masculine. The two are opposites. They are at variance. If nature has made a mistake there, I am not responsible. Men and women never understand each other, because, what nature has blindly blundered into beginning, education accomplishes instead of trying to set it right."

"But I have had no education," said Jacob.

Millicent went on without answering him, falling now into an injured tone:

"Even you are constantly misunderstanding me. You sometimes trample my tenderest feelings unconsciously, just as you trampled my best white petunias the other day, walking over my flower bed as if it were a path."

"Yes," he said, "I saw you. I ran to you. I did not notice the way. Well! In the west they will be all wild flowers, and if I trample them they will come up again. I shall think of the petunias, and wish that I had a chance to trample them, and you will forget what I did when you have found that paragon who loves you without jealousy, likes all other women and no men, who is polite, and credulous, and effeminate. I am none of these—but I love you passionately."

He tried to grasp her hands, but she drew them away, saying excitedly:

"And this is your greatest fault. If you loved me tenderly I might trust you; but you love me, as you say, passionately, and I, who have looked on all life and reflected, have seen that of all traps and pitfalls this is the greatest. Talk of the beauty of diabolical girls, that flits about with the fading of

"Yes, but I am not like that; I know that I shall marry," he said, watching the girl's face closely. "It seems to me now as if I should not, but I am only a man, unscientific, as you say. As long as I am very busy I may keep up, but sometimes they say it is not quite wholesome in those ranches, and one is exposed to wind and weather. I might be ill, and then when I am homesick and lonely some good western girl will take care of me, perhaps like me, even love me. For I might not have so many faults. She would not be so clever as you, or have got things down so fine, and she wouldn't know, poor thing, what a tissue of faults is covered by my unfortunate name, that sounds so homely, and simple, and good. So, being sick, and lonely, and wretched, and grateful to her, I know that I should be weak enough to marry her. I know that I should."

"Yes," said Millicent, throwing down beside her the bouquet of sweetbrier with a passionate gesture, "that's just what a man's love means. I shall be so glad that I didn't marry you when I hear of you throwing yourself on some wild western girl that any man of refinement would shudder to think of as his wife. I didn't believe it of you!" and she ran down the steps of the porch into the garden.

Jacob was up in an instant and followed her, but she ran from him swiftly, leaping over the flower-beds and speeding across the grass, slim and active as a nymph, her pink dress falling white in the soft light of the summer night. He had almost caught up with her when he stumbled and fell over the protruding roots of an old tree. She, fleeing breathless, came suddenly upon her father and mother, who, having returned from their drive, had alighted from the carriage at the gate and walked across the lawn. They now stood hand in hand looking up at the sky and at the new crescent moon—a charming picture of the sweet companionship of loving souls who find their own youth in all the promises of nature.

Millicent stood and looked at them, with sudden tears welling up into her eyes. They turned and saw her just as Jacob came up, somewhat confused in the new situation, and Mrs. Fuller spoke first. "Why, Millicent, is Mr. Raus here? I thought he had gone."

"Why, yes, Jacob, we thought you had gone," said Mr. Fuller, with an unexpected sympathy in his heart for his old friend's son, awakened by Mrs. Fuller's treating him as a stranger in calling him Mr. Raus. The good gentleman had felt no sympathy for him whatever on account of Millicent's refusal. It had appeared to him a great impertinence that he should propose to take his daughter so far away.

Jacob stood silent. Millicent took her father's hand, and, throwing one arm round his neck, kissed him. This action, which conveyed nothing but his daughter's affection for almost a century, was the only thing that the whole situation to Mrs. Fuller, who was not unprepared when her daughter, turning her head, clasped her in her arms and said:

"Yes, dear mamma, Jacob is here, and when he goes I will with him. I have promised to be his wife, and you know what it is, will be the last to deny me that companionship which makes you forget even the parting from your children."

Jacob was more surprised than any one. He never knew exactly how it had come about; he only knew that he must have been very much improved by marriage, or his wife grown very lenient, for no man ever suffered less from fault-finding than he, and the west was to him a wilderness that blossomed like a rose long; 11 minutes are taken every year to make the year 365 1/4 days long, and every fourth year we have an extra day. This was Julius Caesar's arrangement. You may ask: "Where do these eleven minutes come from?" They come from the future, and are paid by omitting leap year every 100 years. But if leap year is omitted regularly every 100 years, in the course of 400 years it is found that the eleven minutes taken each year will not only have been paid back, but that a whole day will have been given up. So Pope Gregory XIII, who improved on Caesar's calendar in 1582, decreed that every centennial year divisible by four should be a leap year after all. So we borrow 11 minutes each year more than paying our borrowings back by omitting three years in three centennial years, and square matters by having a leap year in the fourth centennial year. Pope Gregory's arrangement is so exact and the borrowing and paying back balanced so nicely, that we borrow more than we pay back to the extent of only one day in 3,866 years.—St. Louis Republic.

Pictureque Women.
There are women who look picturesque in almost any kind of dress. They have invariably well shaped heads and a graceful outline, flat shoulders and a pretty line of arm and shoulder. They seldom have very small waists, but often possess very beautiful hair in great quantities. Their eyes need not be very large, but they must be well set, "put in with dirty fingers," as such setting has been described; and though the complexion need not be perfect, it must be natural, and the nose unaccustomed to the powder puff. Such women look poetic, and inspire the poet, the painter and the sculptor.—Philadelphia Press.

THE COPPER COUNTRY.

Old Settlers Arrange for a Grand Reunion at Houghton on April 10-11-12. Officers of Stiles Post—Other Notes.

The second meeting of the Old Settlers, held at the Douglass House Wednesday afternoon to approve of the committee's report, was even more largely attended than that of a week ago. Quite a number were present who were not before. Among these was the venerable D. D. Brockway, of the Cliff mine, who, although being the oldest settler in the room, having been in the country since 1836, looked younger by a quarter century than many who came here in the sixties.

Capt. William Harris, chairman, called the meeting to order and at once made a motion that "Dad" Brockway take the chair, which motion was supported and unanimously affirmed by the vote of all present. After the minutes of the previous meeting were read the report of the committee was called for.

The report recommended the roller rink, Houghton, as the place for holding the banquet and ball and on a basis of fixing the year 1870 for entertaining persons to an invitation. About 400 invitations will be issued. The date for the reunion was fixed for Thursday, April 10th. The invitations will be sent to the residents of Houghton, Ontonagon, Baraga and Keweenaw counties also residents of Marquette county who formerly resided in the copper country. There will be two suppers served, one at 12 o'clock for the old settlers, the other at 12 o'clock for the dancers. The price of admission was fixed at three dollars for gentlemen and lady and one dollar extra for each additional lady. Widows of old settlers will receive complimentary tickets.

On motion the report of the committee was accepted and an another motion made by Captain John Duncan the present committee was made the executive committee with power to appoint as many sub-committees as may be necessary.

For some days past rumors have been current on the street that a new banking association was organized in this city. The new enterprise is now made public. The banking house is to be a savings and commercial bank organized under the laws of the state of Michigan. The capital stock is to be $100,000, which has, through the energy of Mr. C. A. Wright, been nearly all subscribed. The subscribers to the stock are the leading business men of the copper country. Among the names given are Capt. Johnson Vivian, Messrs. E. L. Wright, Jacob Kaer, Joseph W. E. L. Wright, Capt. John Cliff, M. B. Patch, George J. W. Stone, C. A. Wright, George C. Sheldon and many others. The bank for the present will have its quarters in Hamilton Street, a furniture store. It is the intention of the organization to be ready for business about the fifteenth of next month. The numerous new enterprises that are scattered all through the copper country and the large amount of business transacted have made banking institutions so successful that the stock of any bank now doing business can not be obtained.

At the annual election of officers held by E. R. Stiles Post G. A. R., the following officers were elected: Commander, James Ross; vice-commander, A. O. Kruger; junior vice-commander, George Johnson; adjutant, A. J. Scott; quartermaster, W. H. Mason; chaplain, J. F. Moore; officer of day, John Hammel; surgeon, S. M. Bates; sergeant major, Charles Smith. The post decided to hold a ball at St. Patrick's Hall on Tuesday evening, April 6th.

General Manager C. A. Wright arrived home Tuesday evening. He was accompanied by a son of the president of the Mineral Range company, Mr. Bard, Jr.

Rev. Father Von Gumpenberg leaves today for Ontonagon, where he will have charge of the parish. Rev. Father Kospil arrived here this week to succeed Father Von Gumpenberg; at St. Joseph's church.

THE DAY IN MARQUETTE.

Time For Commissioner Finlayson to Prod Contractor Lajeunesse Into Clearing the Walks.

TAXPAYERS ALL KICKING AT WRETCHED SNOW PLOW SERVICE.

Rolling Mill Residents Must Suppress Hoodlums or Lose Lights—Odorous Bum Sent Up—General City News.

Where Is That Snow Plow!
There seems to be something radically wrong with the snow plow which is supposed to keep clear the sidewalks of Marquette. Right before last this city was visited with a characteristic Lake Superior snow storm, though by no means a heavy one. Yesterday morning the sidewalks were, in consequence, more or less buried. The citizens and tax-payers had a right to expect that Contractor Lajeunesse would be out bright early at the work which he is paid by the city to do, clearing the walks. The expectation was in vain. The plow was not brought out until late and failed to visit some of the most travelled streets at all.

This thing is getting monotonous. The snow plow has been a miserable failure all winter. Only the unusually light snow fall and the enterprise of private citizens in clearing their own walks has prevented the streets from becoming almost impassible. All over the city yesterday indignation was expressed at the failure of Contractor Lajeunesse to clear the walks in a reasonable time and the neglect of duty on the part of Street Commissioner Finlayson in failing to make the contractor do the work for which he is paid. Many prominent citizens and heavy tax-payers were decidedly of the opinion that Marquette needs a new street commissioner, one who will attend to business and see that the streets are kept in proper shape. If the contractor can shirk his work he is so much ahead, but it certainly is the business of the street commissioner, a city official, to see that he does not shirk it.

If Street Commissioner Finlayson has not yet learned of the failure of Contractor Lajeunesse to do the work for which the public pays it is time he came out of winter quarters and looked about him. He will not have to go far to obtain ample proof that the city is getting most wretched and inadequate service for its money. The fact that last summer Mr. Finlayson received many commendations as an efficient and capable official makes the present state of affairs the more surprising. Unless a decided change is made in this matter of removing snow very soon the council is likely to hear from the taxpayers, whose money is being spent without fair return, in a manner that will be far from pleasing to either Contractor Lajeunesse or Commissioner Finlayson. The people are getting very weary of the present shiftless manner of dealing with the snow and will kick most vigorously and effectively unless there is a radical reformation. Clear the walks of snow!

Hoodlums Must be Suppressed.
The hoodlums who inhabit the rolling mill district have been interfering with the electric lamps and attacking the trimmer several times of late. This outrageous conduct will not be tolerated by the electric board. The MINING JOURNAL is authorized by the manager of the electric plant to say that if this annoyance is continued the board will adopt the shortest way out of the difficulty. It has no power to hire special policemen to protect its trimmers or the lamps. Therefore, if there is any more trouble, the circuit will be switched off, the lamps taken down and that section of the city left in its native darkness. If the residents of the rolling mill district do not care enough for the light to suppress the worthless bummers and unruly cubs who are damaging costly apparatus and annoying those who attend it they must take the consequences.

Would Rather Beg Than Work.
James Smith is a vagabondish young man who would evidently rather beg than work. For about a week he has been roosting about sundry saloons and begging, in spite of repeated warnings from the police to get to work or get out of town. Yesterday he was run in, charged with vagrancy. Recorder Meads held his nose when James loomed up before him and gave him fifteen minutes to get out of town. Smith did not heed the warning but was caught half an hour later in his accustomed haunt, working the same old game. This time he was given thirty days in jail, that he might be disinfected and given a chance to shovel snow for the county. Marquette is no place for odoriferous bummers.

Alaska's Fur Monopoly.
Recently the Detroit Free Press published the following dispatch from Washington, apropos of the present discussion of a new lease of the Alaska seal islands:
Judge Chipman has sent Secretary Windom a memorial from C. E. Bresler, of Detroit, with references to the leasing of the Alaska fisheries accompanied by a letter of his own remonstrating against that course.

that the Alaska Seal company makes about $1,200,000 per annum. He believes that these seals could be dyed and manufactured in Alaska. By the present plan of leasing the fisheries Americans are deprived of labor, the fisheries do not bring sufficient income to the government and our people have to pay too much for furs.

This dispatch was shown to ex-Governor Swineford yesterday and his opinion of the facts asked.

"Mr. Bresler's statistics are rather under than over the truth," he said, "but all these remonstrances will do no good. The Alaska Commercial company will get the lease just the same. It is a downright shame and disgrace, too."

"How so?"
"The matter is old history. It is set forth in my reports. But briefly, the condition is this. The natives of Alaska, except the few in the small district about Sitka and Juneau, are as much the slaves of the Alaska Commercial company as were the negroes in the south before the war. The way of it is thus. The Alaska company has a monopoly of the seal catch on St. Paul and St. George islands, for which it pays the government $317,500 a year and out of which it clears over $2,000,000 a year net profit. This monopoly carries with it a monopoly of all the other fur industry of Alaska, which reaches to $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 a year. The Alaska company is making such large and certain profits on its sealing monopoly that it can afford to go in and do other business at a heavy loss for a number of years in order to drive other fur-buyers from the market. It has done this repeatedly. The result is that it has a monopoly of all the trade in all other furs, pays the native hunters barely enough to keep them alive, keeps them in debt for supplies and makes of them virtual slaves."

"What plan would you recommend in place of the present one?"
"Let the government keep the islands as they are now, a reservation. The present inspectors could see to the killing of the seals. The skins would be sold in open market then, either at the islands or in San Francisco. Such a course would tend to bring the London dyers to this country and the $700,000 paid there for dressing, tanning, plucking and dyeing would be paid to resident American workmen. Seal-skins would thus be made cheaper to users and over three-quarters of a million dollars would be paid out in wages in this country instead of the $40,000 or $50,000 now paid. But, as I said before, I doubt if remonstrances will have any effect. The Alaska company has too much influence and the natives of Alaska will no doubt be kept in slavery to the existing monopoly."

PERSONAL MOVEMENTS.

E. E. Osborn, of Ishpeming, is in the city on attendance at the circuit court.

Charles Kelsey left for Detroit yesterday to attend the banquet of the Michigan Club.

H. Muehall, rate clerk in the general passenger office of the South Shore line, returned from Chicago yesterday.

M. A. Powers, clerk of Ontonagon county, arrived in the city yesterday on his way back from a trip to Chicago and Detroit.

J. M. Wilkinson left for Detroit yesterday. He will fill a chair at the banquet of the Michigan Club.
