Immediately on the announcement of the vote Mr. Tracey was on his feet with a motion to adjourn. The motion to adjourn was defeated and the question recurred on the motion to table the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Russian relief resolution was indefintely postponed. It was tabled without division, thus finally defeating the measure. The house then adjourned.

There was passed by the last congress an act for the protection of the lives of the miners in the territories which was approved by me on the 3rd day of March, 1891.

That no appropriation was made to enable me to carry the act into effect resulted, I suppose, from the fact that it was passed so late in the session. This law recognizes the necessity of a re-ponsible public inspection and supervision of the business of mining in the interest of the miner and is in line with the legislation of most of the states. The work of the miner has its unavoidable incidents of discomfort and danger and these hands not be increased by the neglect of the miners in the territories which was approved by me on the 3rd day of March, 1891.

Entertainment.

AN AWFUL FALL. A miner's carelessness led to his intant death at the Blue mine yesterday fternoon at 2 o'clock. The unfortunate man was John Medlin and the manner of his death was as follows: He had been at work in the shaft and rode to the surface in the bucket. In stepping from the bucket he failed to get secure footing on the solid ground and slipped, falling headlong into the shaft. He fell a distance of 175 feet and struck with terrific force at the bottom, death peing, of course, instantaneous. Medlin was 29 years of age and leaves as soon as they were recovered from the shaft where he met death so sudwill probably take place tomorrow.

THE OLD STAGE DOOR.

Tis up a little alleyway,
Where dust and darkness reign,
With all the kindred mysteries
That follow in their train.
The tragic and the comic blend,
Just as they did of yore;
Look out, or else you'll tumble
At the old stage door.

The paint that once bedecked it Has vanished long ago, Like that on many a footlight queen Whose smile we used to know. Whose voice has long been silent, Whose face is seen no more, When play and song are ended At the old stage door.

The chosen few who enter now Are faces new and strange;
For those we knew have passed away
With Time's relentless change,
Ah, well, we'll veil with laughter

The tears that vex us sore,
As we turn away heart heavy
From the old stage door,

FEAR TO BE "AMERICANIZED."

ROME, Feb. 16.-At the Catholic congress at Baltimore in 1889 a committee of prelates and laymen was appointed their possession, discovered on their to make arrangements for the Catholic property. The deposit is said to be excongress to be held at Chicago in connection with the Columbian Exposition. The committee was also charged with preparing a program of matters to be cret until they secure possession of the discussed at this congress. Among the members of the committee was Judge F. F. Dunne of Ohio. Under date of December 10, 1891, Mr. Dunne wrote a personal letter to Mr. Conde B. Palen, editor of the Church Progress and Catholic World of St. Louis, giving his views in regard to certain decisions of this committee.

This letter in some way came into the hands of the Rev. C. M. Kuhlman, who sympathized with views expressed therein. He had the letter put into print and sent copies to all the cardinals. The letter was received here in Rome a few days ago and has created little sensation in ecclesiastical

Mr. Kuhlman prefaces Mr. Dunne's letter with a statement over his own name to the effect that the decisions reached by the American prelates with reference to the Catholic congress to be held at Chicago were displeasing to himself, to Messrs. Palen and Dunne and to many other Catholics. The authrities at Rome are therefore invoked to overrule these decisions.

Mr. Dunne's letter gives a review of the history of the committee and its meetings. He said that at the Baltimore congress a committee was ap pointed to organize a congress at Chi cago. This committee held meetings at Boston and New York for the purpose of settling preliminaries, arranging a program, etc. It was harmonious progress in these directions to until at an inauspicious moment it offered to submit its decision to the archbishops of the church who should be assembled at St. Louis on December 1, 1891. the proposed program of subjects for discussion Mr. Dunne has asserted, as questions of vital importance, the temporal power and the question of Catholic education. The prelate of Boston, the letter goes on to the laymen on the committee obtained the assent of the New York prelates to them. The work of the committee, the letter says, was submitted to the arch-bishops at St. Louis as proposed. The archbishops, who were presided over Cardinal Gibbons, changed the whole plan and took the congress into their own hands, recognizing the laymen of the committee only as auxiliaries. Mr. Dunne criticizes this act of house. Whenever you want me, just anthority.

The correspondence has been trans lated into Italian and has been received not only by the cardinals but by many lesser ecclesiasti at Rome. Special interest attaches to it at this time because Archbishop Ireland is here.

Rome is regarded as a continuation of the Cahensley movement. Since last settled the discussion right there.—New year hundreds of documents have been York Tribune. circulated in Rome from America de claring that the Catholic church would die if the process of Americanizing the church which Arcl bishops Gibbons, Ireland and Williams are said to be leaders in bringing about should be allowed to proceed.

Meanwhile the ecclesiastical authorities at the Vatican deny that the questhe program of the Catholic congress.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 17 .- The conductors of the Santa Fe train on which John L. Sullivan and his company made the trip last week from Wichita say the slugger beat his way and his company's from Newton to Topeka. At Newton a new conductor took charge of the train. When he demanded Sullivan's fare the slugger told him the other conductor had taken up the tickets, which were good all the way from Wichita to Topeka. The conductor wired back to and received a reply that it was not, that the tickets were good only to

Newton. The conductor again demanded fares from Suliivan who in his characteric forceful and striking language declined to pay. The conductor wired headquarters for instructions and in reply received orders to eject the whole party from the train. The crew, however, declined to assist and the conductor did not care to undertake the task alone

MANY FOOLS IN NEW YORK.

Sparring Bout.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16,- Cen thousand people saw the boxing-if such it may be called-at Madison Square Garden tonight and were trampled on, bruised and clubbed in trying to give up their $3 tickets. The crush at the door was something unprecedented and the inadequate police force, even aided by clubs freely used, was unable to cope with it. The people were attracted by the announcement that James Corbett of California would meet three men of his own class with five-ounce gloves. Joe Lannan was one of the three n.med. William Muldoon, the Creek to find employment. He was wrestler, was master of ceremonies and, caught in a snow storm and had both incidentally, the man who put the feet frozen. He was found in this con- money in his pocket. Captain Reilly paced about the big square ring in the joy himself.

> and be knocked down again. Captain business Reilly sprang to the ring but did not though. Reilly sprang to the ring but did not interfere for Spilling was clean knocked out.

Tom Chaffee of Philadelphia next stood up but went down in just thirty seconds. When he fell to avoid punishment and was clearly at the mercy of the Californian Captain Reilly ordered him off.

Then came Joe Lannon of Providence. the conqueror of Godfrey. Before they shook hands, however, the police or hers, her whole aspect suggested—espedered them to put on six ounce gloves and they had to do so.

The first round showed Lannon to be good man. Corbett came up smiling crawling gait upon all four of its feet), and Lannon watched him closely. Lannon did most of the leading but the first good blow was struck by Corbett with his right on Lannon's ear. Several clinches followed and then Lannon received a left-hander full in the face. Lannon guarded well and frequently received applause for his work. Another clinch followed and Corbett struck short. Again they clinched and failed to put in a telling blow. At the end of the round Corbett was fresh while Lannon was winded.

Second round-Both came up sprighty and Lannan led, falling short. He led again and a clinch followed. Cor-bett then landed a hot one with his left on Lannon's face which drew blood.
Another clinch followed and, Lannon anded on Corbett's wind and succeeded in getting well away. After another clinch Corbett got in again on Lannon's face and swung with his right for Lannon's ear but missed. Lannon then did a little leading and landed once more on Corbett's face, after which they clinched. Give and take blows then followed, Lannon landing lightly on Corbett's face. Corbett tried several times to land his right on Lannon's ear but the latter's guard was too position to put a knee upon the beach.

Third round-After considerable feinting Corbett led and the two clinched. Breaking away near the ropes Corbett struck Lannon against the ropes with a blow in the face. Be landed a second blow which Lannon returned. Then twice in quick succession Corbett got in on Lannon's face and the latter landed on Corbett's wind. Just a this time Lannon looked rather groggy but he guarded well and kept Corbett's right hand idle. He received another in the jaw and then a clinch followed. Breaking away Corbett struck Lannon twice in the face and in return the latter landed one on Corbett's wind. I'me was called as Corbett was forcing the fight.

Loud applause followed the con-clusion of the bout. The crowd surged forward and gathered around the ring Though Lannon did not even pretend to be knocked out Muldoon declared that Corbett had succeeded in doing what he had set out to do. The promoters of the affair will probably clear on their venture something like $10,000.

AN ABALONE'S SECRET.

IN AUGUST, 1890. Under the afternoon sun the restless waters of San Francisco bay flung diamonds and opals at such human eyes as chanced to look on them Two young people who strolled down to the Presidio beach, however, had no and in spite of all Corporal Pedro's seaglances to spare for anything so commonplace as diamonds and opals. For Lieutenant Anderson was gazing into the depths of the great, soft black eyes of Miss Pachita de Sola, and Miss Pachita de Sola was looking up into the ardent blue ones of Lieutenant Anderson. She seemed to like it.

The tall young soldier with the fair hair, broad shoulders and square, manly Saxon face, had not been long released When Corbett appeared he was from the hard work and harder restraint greeted with great applause. He of West Point, and in his new freedom weighed 195 pounds. He first met of army life went at things with an William Spilling of Rochester. Four-ounce gloves were used. The men had ible. Miss Pachita de Sola found it so, only been fighting two minutes when as had half a dozen other girls within as Spilling was knocked down only to rise | many months. It was a wholly serious Captain business with the lieutenant this time,

> He had been in California but a few weeks, and this daughter of an ancient though decayed Spanish family, as American in education and thought as himself, was ravishing in her novelty.
> Altogether feminine Pachita; at one moment childlike and clinging; the next worldly, witty and mocking; then, with cially to a lieutenant with ample means to marry-possibilities of tenderness unspeakable

No wonder that when Miss Pachita permitted Lieutenant Anderson to gaze down into her eyes and returned an answering look, giving a little sigh, too, his head went after his heart, which had been lost for an eternity—that is to say, for two terrific, sleepless weeks. But the young lady was discreet, and, gently clasping his fingers, removed them from her waist, saying demurely: "Don't be foolish, John. Somebody may be looking.' This, in a city of 300,000 inhabitants and in full sight of the ever vigilant garrison, struck John as being not improbable.

Instant in action, as became a soldier. Lieutenant Anderson executed a flank movement on a sand bank and seated Miss de Sola in its lee, on a large, water whitened, sun dried log of driftwood. Then this consummate tactician repeated the original attack with entire suc-

"Name the day, oh, Pachita; I cannot live till vou do!' Pachita pursed her full, red lips, puckered the midnight eyebrows, and considered profoundly, digging deep into the sand with his cane the while. "The day, my own love-the day," gasped John.

"Dear me," Miss de Sola exclaimed suddenly, "what a beautiful shell!" "Damn the shell!" cried Lieutenant Anderson, reaching for what she had unearthed, to cast it wrathfully out among the unnoticed diamonds and

But he was restrained in wonder.

IN AUGUST, 1825. The same sun was enriching the dancing waters of the same bay with diamonds and opals. A young couple who strolled down to the Presidio beach admired the view very much, and Senorita Pachita de Sola had no occasion to remind the lieutenant by her side that somebody might be looking. Lieutenant Juan de Echeandia would have liked greatly to coil his arm about that slim waist, but did not dare, though there was only a small and sleepy garrison, and no city at all behind them-only the padres and Indians at the mission Dolores, far over the sand hills, and a cabin or two down at the embarcadero, entirely out of sight. Pachita de Sola was niece of Commandante Don Luis Antonio Arguello, and though he, Lieutenant Juan de Echeandia, was a nephew of Don Jose Maria, of the same name, one, even though an aristocrat, has under all circumstances to show proper respect for his commanding officer. Besides, the Senorita Pachita had twice refused his friendly offered hand. It was at Monterey, though this was not known | Ewen in San Francisco Argonaut. to a certainty at the Presidio.

Lieutenant Juan de Echeandia and Senorita Pachita de Sola walked leisurely to the little wharf where that wonderful vessel, constructed but recently by a wandering British sailor, lay preparing for a voyage to Sausalito, four leagues distant. It was a marvelous boat, with oars and a sail, and capable of accommodating no less than six persons. Don Luis Antonio Arguello himself had commanded her in person on the dozen passages which she had made to the opposite shore for timber. Previous to the creation of this extraordinary ship, which annihilated distance and obliterated time, timber was hard to get from Corte de Madera. Soldiers were sent around by way of San Jose, armed with axes, who crossed the Straits of Carquinez on rafts, and in the circuit of seventy leagues encountered hardships and consumed weeks. And the timber was brought over by Chief Marin, an aborigine given to cruising on a float of logs and tules, who alone knew the winds and currents of the bay. It was but a matter of a day now to sail over for the timber and return with it. Corporal Pedro Sanchez had made all the voyages with the commandante and rated now as a superior navigator, his marine fame being dear to him. Don Luis had swollen him with pride by placing him in command for this one trip. His enlargement became perilous when Lieutenant Echeandia suddenly proposed to Senorita Pachita that they make the voyage, and she, being young and thoughtless, consented.

Brave Corporal Sanchez sailed the Mejico superbly as far as Angel island, descanting eloquently on the art and mystery of seamanship. Issuing to his crew of three soldiers sundry orders in a commanding voice of thunder, he prepared to pass the point. Alas, an eastern wind came whistling manship the Mejico was caught and whirled round and round and borne with the racing tide toward the Golden Gate. Senorita Pachita de Sola screamed, but there was no help sent down from heaven, even on the appeal of those pretty lips, grown quite white, or of that pale face, with its big black eyes wild with terror.

Lieutenant Juan de Echeandia swore -swore at Corporal Pedro Sanchez; but profanity, though frequently an adjunct to navigation, is not of use in imparting knowledge thereof.

So out to sea they drifted, far out, almost to the Farallones.

For eight days and nights they were s a chip on the waves, the Raccoon guests having snapped the mast and carried away the sail. Corporal Pedro, famous as a mariner, had forgotten to Senorita de Sola gave herself up to

On the second day he drew his sword, and at its point the men yielded such food and water as the boat contained. These he bestowed where his body was between them and recapture.

The corporal Pedro, though a fool and unfortunate, was loyal. With him the lieutenant kept watch and watch, and through all those awful eight days and nights (by my pen, it is true that the boat was gone that long, as you may read in Hittell's "History of California") the Senorita de Sola wanted for neither food nor drink, and the delicacy of Lieutenant Juan would have brought tears of gratefulness to any woman's eyes. He did wonders-as tradition has handed down-with cloaks and coats and stray bits of rope to cabin the lady.

THE ROOMS OF A QUEEN.

GRAND AND GORGEOUS, BUT EX-CEEDINGLY UNHOMELIKE.

Victoria's Huge Palace in Windsor and How the Dreary Waste of Stately Room After Room Impressed an American Woman Who Visited It.

The Scotch moors, as I saw them in July, are already fading in my memory into a soft harmonious mingling of russet and green, for the heather was not yet purple; but the sun caught the spray of a mountain rivulet tumbling on its rocky way, or turned more vivid the intense green of those patches of verdure in the midst of the brown of the heather, which we think seem so unnatural when artists who paint in the highlands transfer them to canvas. These high lights stay by one when the hills and all the ordinary features of that charming Scotland melt into the dimmest of memories.

One of these summer's high lights was visit to the queen's private apartments at Windsor. I don't know what red tape and long waiting and diplomatic reference it took to get the permit. I only know that the thoughtful American girl who remembered me and made me one of the four who were to invade the sacred precincts conferred much pleasure on me, and even though we were all so disappointed in what we saw, it was human, was it not, to be delighted to go where few enter?

We looked upon the herd of commoners who filed by us in the wake of the cicerone, who every hour takes throngs of sightseers through the main part of Windsor castle. Their hands were red with Baedekers, but we loftily ignored guidebooks for one day.

There were but three high lights there to remember. One was General Gordon's Bible, before which I could have knelt, for it was the well worn book of a soldier who took it into the tented field as his companion.

There is no mistaking a book that has been read, the very way it lies open, the invisible marks of reverential fingers, the color of the paper which the open air produces

It disturbed me to see it in a hideous little glass casket all ornamentation and filigree. Very fine in its way, I suppose, and taking many pounds out of hero's sister's pocket, who gave it to the queen, but so inappropriate to the simple life of that heroic soul, that martyr to the mistakes of his country.

TWO MARBLE STATUES The second high light in the queen's own domicile was the view from the state drawing room windows of the avenue stretching miles and miles away. It was sunny and bright, for some far back English sovereign or his wise gardener had, perhaps, evidently believed that with all his possessions there was nothing quite equal to the God given one of sunshine, and so there was a wide strip of the greenest turf in the world on either side of the drive. There were no ever answered-a blessed wind sprang parterres, no fountains or statues, sim up from the west and, tide assisting, ply this broad open space, where her blew the Mejico back through the Gold-majesty could walk or drive for miles, en Gate. SUNDAY BY THE SEA

Beneath the pine trees on the bluff The hammock swaying to and fro, The western wind comes whispering A seaward message soft and low

Beyond—the sea a tender blue,
Where golden sunbeams kiss and reach, While lazy wavelets softly lap
Against the thickly shell strewn beach

Afar against the shining sky, With sails uplifted clear and white, A vessel lingers like a bird, Southward to take its onward flight. God's day; and his all constant sign

And seal, of sweet abiding love, Set in unchanging tender care On earth, sunshine and sky above. Oh, thou, whose waters infinite
Of loving truth forever flow,
Give us the strength that all thy love
We come to recognize and know!

And when above our weary heads, The many waters ceaseless roll. Let us lie down in peace and sleep, Nor fears possess the weary soul.

spoke the language.

This story filled the forty who listened with amazement. They had known nothing of the life of the crazy Freckled One who accused and cursed his own race. And the teller came to almost the last, and said that Moi Hing must be sent back to the hills of Kwang-tung, for even now his spirit was seeking release from a worn out body. He told how Moi Hing had worshiped all one night before the platform, and called the blue eyed baby a white god, destined by heaven to grow up into a fine woman and deliver the Chinese from the control of the imperial dynasty, in fulfillment of the prophecy made more than a thousand years ago.

Wearied with his devotions, Moi Hing had at last fallen asleep. The little German wife had wanted to take the baby to her bed, but he had said no. The following is from January, 1892, number Western Druggist.

If long experience in the wholesale drugg business counts for anything; if a constantly increasing business bears witness to progress and enterprise; if a large and complete stock of drugs of guaranteed quality assures satisfaction in filling orders; if expeditious and courteous business methods attract and hold customers; then with the assurance that such conditions will continue for the future, and in a greater measure if possible, these are good reasons why druggists should give the well-known Chicago house, Messrs.

LETTING DOWN THE BARS.

Fair Jane stands near the woodland where The bara lane joins the field; The cows are coming at her call, Their treasure white to yield.

The sun is sinking through the trees To give place to the stars,
And to the task the maiden bends
Of letting down the bars.

Young neighbor John, of manly mold,
But timid as a quall.
Climbs o'er the fence and gains her side
And helps her move the rail.
Her warm blush tells a tale; but fear
From speech his tongue debars
Till eyes meet eyes, then of his love
Her glance lets down the bars.

O woodland's breath and meadow's breeze,
And soft eyed kine and birds!
Know ye the repture in your midst
That cannot flow in words?
Nor wish for wealth, nor thought of fame,
Nor aught the moment mars;
These guilcless souls find all their world
While letting down the bars.
—New York Advertiser.

"Indeed! Oh, here he comes; you can apply to him now."

That functionary happened to be passing, and hearing the words understood their import at once. He turned a searching look upon the poor girl, and was about to pass on. But he caught sight of her face in the gaslight, and said: "Not bad looking if she is in rags. So

"Yes, sir, if you please," replied Marie.
"To play Lady Macbeth, I suppose?"

"Oh! Ever been on the stage before?"
"Only as a child, sir." "Oh, only as a child! Do you sing?"

"Very well, so you think: I might not. Do you dance?"

"Yes, sir. Father was an actor, and he says I dance very well."

"Oh, then you can come tomorrow and try it."

"I will be here, sir."

"Bring your props with you."
Poor Marie hesitated; and the manager, observing this, said: "Oh, perhaps you don't know what I mean by props. Well, they are your feathers, jewels. ribbons, laces, tights, slippers, gloves, and so on. We only furnish the body of your dress."

The poor girl still hesitated, when the manager asked again, "Can't you furnish your own props?"

"I fear not at first, sir," was the timid

The manager turned away, and Marie staggered toward the door, half blinded with grief and disappointment. But ere she had passed it a gentle hand was laid upon her shoulder, and a sweet voice upon her shoulder, and a sweet voice exclaimed, "My dear child, come and if my triumph brings me great joy, it is see me tomorrow as early as possible. turned her eyes toward the speaker. She was a brilliant creature, and the poor girl tried to stammer forth a reply, but could not. She left the theater and took her way homeward. She could not help thinking of the beautiful lady and her magnificent dress, sparkling with jewels.

What could she want with her? Even bright pictures of the future rose before her vision, and these dulled the sharpness of her grief at the disappointment she had met with. She did not tell her father what she had done, or that she had an engagement to meet one of the great ladies of the theater.

One of the first things Marie did after returning home was to find the half fin-ished play which her father was writ-ing; and alone in her own apartment she passed much time over it. She was also from her home a great deal, during which time her father supposed her to be at labor in the tailoring establishment where she occasionally found employment.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN,

There are many of the age of 30 to 50 who are troubled with too frequent evacuation of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight smarting sensation and weakening the system in a manner which the patient cannot account for. On examination it will be found that the urine deposits a ropy sediment and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear or the color be of a thin or milkish hue, again changing to a dark and torpid appearance. There are many who die of this difficulty ignorant of the cause which is the second stage of weakness

Every friend of our school system, every loyal citizen of our state, will be unwilling that Michigan shall take second rank at the great exposition of the nations. The following plan has been successfully tried in Indiana, where, from these minute contributions, therewith.

A collection will be taken up at the close of the exercises, the proceeds to be devoted to preparing an exhibit of the work of Michigan's schools at the World's Fair, taking care to state that every school will be asked to send samples of its work to the department of public instruction at Lansing, from which samples will be sent for exhibition to the World's Fair, and that money is needed to bind examination papers and make other necessary preparations for the exhibition. Request every boy and girl to contribute one cent at least. Each teacher and officer is requested to give ten cents, principals of schools twenty-five cents, superintendents fifty cents, and patrons of the school as much as they choose to give.

The Marquette city schools are preparing exercises for Washington's birthday and to do their share in the work of placing Michigan in a position to make a fitting showing in the educational line at the Chicago World's Fair. The Mining Journal has no doubt but that the school children will well sustain the reputation of the city for liberality and expects to see Marquette well up on the list of Michigan cities in the amount given to the exhibition fund. One feature of the day here will be addresses by citizens in all of the schools.

The following extracts are from the address issued to Michigan teachers by Hon. Ferris S. Fitch, state superintendent of public instruction:

In accordance with the recommendation of the board of World's Fair managers for Michigan, I have appointed the Twenty-second of February as a day for collecting the voluntary contributions of all the pupils, teachers, superintendents and school officers in the state for meeting the expense of Michigan's educational exhibit at the World's Fair. Aside from the salary of one clerk nothing has been appropriated specially for that purpose. A large sum cert at the Marquette Opera House on has been successfully tried in Indiana, where, from these minute contributions, several thousand dollars have been realized, and you are earnestly requested to use every effort to awaken the interest and enthusiasm of your pupils and their parents in this undertaking. You will, I am sure, be repaid not only by the consciousness of doing your duty in aiding a worthy cause, but also by the awakening of interest on the part of your pupils in the World's Fair and in educational matters connected therewith.

This immense establishment, the largest of its kind in the world, had its origin in an individual enterprise. It was established in 1880 by Mr. S. M. Levy, in an unostentations way and was known as the National Knitting Works.

In 1883 it was incorporated into a stock company under its present name, with a capital of $100,000 and assumed large proportions.

The business prospered and extended enormously, and to-day its products are sold from Portland, Maine, to Portland, Oregon.
