THE DEATH OF DOGMA.

The world is growing more tolerant of individual differences of opinion every day. Some Catholics have been and are just as senseless in their hatred of the non-religious public schools as are the Protestants who join the detestable A. P. A. and concert measures of attack on the Catholic church. Two wrongs never made a right and both intolerant Catholics and bigoted Protestants must be left to work their way mentally out of the dungeons of the Sixteenth century into the free air of the Nineteenth. Meanwhile the public has a right to insist that these two classes refrain from disturbing the public peace by abusing each other or by open or secret attack upon each other.

Public education is a sanitary measure quite indispensable to the safety of any self-governing people. The state, representing the collective interests of all the people, the commonwealth in the full meaning of that good old word, must insist that the business of education be not complicated nor the educational forces scattered by the teaching of religious dogmas in the schools sustained by public taxation. The state has a positive right, for the preservation of its own safety, to insist that all children be reasonably educated, if not in its own schools then in others equally efficient.

There are large numbers of very worthy people who are still oppressed with the antique idea that the unknown hereafter is of much more importance than the known present. They honestly believe that it is of more importance than anything else whatsoever for a man to be assured of the destiny of his soul hereafter, and to take measures that that destiny shall be such as he desires. They admit that right conduct in this world is the only way to secure a favorable destiny hereafter but they have their own particular plans for maintaining right conduct and they believe that their ways are the only ways. Some of them even go so far as to affirm that people who do not believe and do not practice their particular methods will hereafter be eternally and irretrievably damned. Hence these persons try to insist on such education for their children as shall lead the latter to pursue the paths of salvation chosen for them by their parents. Hence comes all the pother about "religious education" and "Godless public schools," an agitation for which Protestants are quite as responsible as Catholics.

These very worthy people are fighting a losing battle. They are agreed upon all the essentials of morals and conduct but differ with greater or less fervor on mere points of doctrine. The number of people who regard these doctrinal differences as of no more moment than the fashion of brushing the hair is steadily growing. In fact the morals of a man as shown in his conduct toward his neighbors and himself are everything and his dogmatic opinions are nothing. The squabbling and fighting over doctrinal beliefs must cease. It is growing less every day. Public opinion, while growing more tolerant of individual opinion and more willing to permit the propagation of any sort of opinions not found dangerous to society at large, is paying less and less attention to dogmatic squabbles and is becoming more and more resolute in making the dogmatists confine themselves within the bounds of peaceable discussion. Religious differences cannot be allowed to break the public peace nor to undermine public institutions.

The present generation is not likely to see the end of doctrinal discussions and dogmatic contentions but still that end is approaching as more and more people get into the frame of mind so well expressed by Præd's melodious lines:

I think, while zealots fast and frown,
And fight for two or seven,
That there are fifty roads to town,
And rather more to Heaven.

The ghost-dancing gorilla of the Lansing State Public-Garbage-Can has completely abandoned argument over the upper peninsula insane asylum question and confines himself to emitting another torrent of personal abuse. The editor of this paper has been absent from the city some days and left the task of unmasking the pretensions of the Lansing Pap-Sucker to an assistant. That assistant happens to be a Republican in politics and as such has taken such small part in Republican campaign work here as fell to him and he was competent to perform. But he is quit aware that neither his personal politics nor the personal politics of any man on THE MINING JOURNAL staff cut any figure whatever in what appears in these columns.

THE MINING JOURNAL supports Republican policies because it believes in them and also believes that the interests of its readers are best subserved by them. Men come and go and the place that knew them once knows them no more. But a newspaper continues from generation to generation and its policy is formed upon quite other considerations than the personal beliefs of the men who may for the time chance to write upon it. The six-dollar-a-week editor of the Lansing Ogeonette of course cannot rise to this conception of journalism. He would instantly dismiss his galley-boy if the boy's father dared to vote any save the Republican ticket. He cannot conceive of a Republican paper whose editor does not, like himself, wear a brass collar stamped with the name of the Republican boss.

THE MINING JOURNAL has never worn anyone's brass collar and declines to do one now, even to oblige the yelping journalistic curs who are constantly barking at it. Tray, Blanche, Sweet-heart and the whole kennel may go hang themselves in their own halts. THE MINING JOURNAL will continue in its own way, expounding sound Republican doctrine but reserving the right to criticise its own party leaders when they deserve it, and doing its level best to advance the real interests and defend the rights of its friends and supporters, the people of this peninsula.

Mr. J. J. VAN ALLEN has saved President Cleveland from a very awkward position by declining the appointment of ambassador to Italy. It was certainly proper for Mr. Van Allen, who is a several times millionaire, to contribute $50,000 or any other sum to the Democratic campaign fund if he so pleased. If a man believes that the people need education in Democratic doctrines it is his privilege to foot the bills, just as he may give money to send flannel waistcoats and moral pocket-handkerchiefs to the little negroes of Booriboola Gha. One sort of missionary work is about as useful as the other. But that a man without experience or without distinction of any sort should be appointed to a great office merely because of a fat contribution to a campaign fund shocked the public conscience. The Harrison administration had its Wanamaker and the Cleveland administration had its Van Allen. The appointment of Mr. Wanamaker was, however, much more excusable because he was a man of large experience in business affairs and he had in his office plenty of expert assistance where expert knowledge was required. THE MINING JOURNAL'S opinion of Mr. Van Allen has been raised considerably but it regrets that Mr. Cleveland seems still unconscious of the grave impropriety of the appointment. Such scandals are likely to recur until we make our diplomatic and consular service what every other nation has made it, a profession to which a man devotes his life and in which he expects and receives promotion according to merit and service.

The Detroit Free Press (Dem.) has the following rather curious paragraph in an article defending the Wilson bill: The duty of seventy-five cents a ton on iron ore is not needed to keep the Lake Superior mines going, but to perpetuate it is to keep out the ores from Cuba and the Mediterranean districts, and that is where the greed of the protectionist displays itself. The McKinley tariff enables the western steel manufacturers to get their Bessemer ores so much more cheaply that they could sell at less than their eastern competitors and were rapidly driving them out of the field. The latter could not compete because of the great expense of transportation from the Lake districts on the one hand and the heavy duty imposed on the imported ores on the other hand. Under such conditions it was impossible for those great industries to live east of the Alleghenies. One section of the country was being discriminated against to the detriment of another. The Wilson bill proposes to remove this embargo and to give a fair field to all who are engaged in this giant industry.

That is to say, The Free Press admits that a certain amount of Lake Superior iron ore will, under the Wilson bill, be displaced by an equal amount of Cuban and Spanish iron ore. That is the very point at issue. The old French epigram, "He who excuses himself accuses himself," is applicable to The Free Press and the measure it attacks while defending.

BEWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAIN MERCURY, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. SHOOTING ELEPHANTS.

An Exciting Adventure in the Wilds of an Indian Forest.

A traveler in India says that tame elephants, many of which he used in working, have a great dread of wild ones.

On Monday morning, says the traveler, a messenger came to me to say that the tame elephants were surrounded by a herd of wild ones, and that the keepers dared not go in to rescue them.

I took aim at one of two very dirty elephants, and was pressing the trigger when I heard the clank of a chain, just in time to save the animal's life.

"There were about sixteen of the wild ones, and I had to run some distance to intercept them, as they were now thoroughly alarmed, and were rushing through grass so high that I could only see the tops of their backs."

As I leaped I looked over my shoulder to see if the beast was upon me, and I found that she had fallen dead.

Is It Possible to Leave One's Possessions in the Way He Desires? Once upon a time women had little occasion for making wills.

But all this is changed, and women can buy, sell, devise and manage property with as much freedom as can their fathers, brothers or husbands.

It is quite likely that the simplest imaginable form of will would stand the best chance of holding.

There is a great pity that our laws cannot be simplified and that certain provisions cannot be made by means of which one may give one's possessions as they see fit and without feeling that one's wishes will be entirely set at naught.

A VISIT TO THE GOGEBIC.

Detroit Sends a Committee to Study Condition of Workless Miners.

FOOD AND CLOTHING NEEDED TILL WORK RESUMES.

Hymen Captures and Carries Off one of Marquette's Most Popular and Charming Young Women.

HARD TO EXAGGERATE.

Not content with the reports of distress sent out from the Gogebic districts, particularly Ironwood and Bessemer, Detroit wished to assure herself of the actual facts so that with greater wisdom she might do her share toward lessening the pangs of hunger and the bite of winter's cold among the miners. With this object in view a committee of relief was appointed and of this E. W. Cottrill, R. H. Fyfe and W. C. Maybury, chairman of the committee, accompanied by John Fitzgibbons of the Evening News, Fred Isham of The Free Press and O. Carmichael of The Journal, left Detroit last week to personally inspect the condition of things in the distressed regions. Yesterday these gentlemen arrived in Marquette and spoke freely to a MINING JOURNAL reporter of what they saw and found up there.

While to some extent they learned that in certain directions features of the existing conditions had been magnified and incorrect yet they did not see how it would be possible to exaggerate the extent and seriousness of the distress. This is particularly true of Ironwood and will soon be true of Bessemer. The committee found the best and most trustworthy citizens of the places visited giving their whole time to intelligent methods for relieving distress and for handling and distributing outside donations. From house to house canvass has been made and is still going on. The condition of each family is known and the amount of help each may need to tide through the winter.

Following so closely on Thanksgiving the visitors found a more general supply of food than usual but this would only last a few days and then the old, stern dealing out of rations would again be general. Food and personal clothing were found to be the things most needed. As a general thing the miners were well housed and had sufficient fuel but sadly lacked food and clothing.

As an instance of some of the hardships endured Mr. Fyfe told of one miner who got some chopping to do in the woods. After six weeks' hard work he had earned enough—aside from getting his board—to pay for his axe and buy a pair of shoes for his wife. This was only a sample of what those out of work, and most of them are, have to endure and illustrates how earnest and willing the men are to work, if any can be had.

Helping the Gogebic miners, the Detroit visitors concluded, is not charity. The sufferers are doing all in their own power to help themselves and outsiders are only making up a deficiency not caused by idleness or improvidence but by forces over which the thousands now out of work had no control.

Chairman Maybury had a chat with Captain Blanchard regarding the state of affairs among the poor of this county and was assured that, while we hoped to pull through the winter without requiring outside aid, the task would tax the poor fund severely. Marquette might not be able to send much to Gogebic sufferers but such as could be spared would be sent cheerfully.

The committee will continue its journey homeward today having learned some valuable facts, and the fame of Detroit as a generous helper is so well known that it is not difficult to foresee the outpouring of donations that will follow the publication of the committee's experiences. The newspaper representatives will also doubtless do their share toward placing unfavorable facts before the public and it is safe to say that what they print and paint will be from life and not fancy.

Hill-Ball.

Miss Mabel Eugenia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan H. Ball, was married last night in St. Paul's church to Walter B. Hill of East Liverpool, O.

While soft strains of music from the great organ filled the church the guests and onlookers kept arriving until every seat was occupied. In that hush which preceded the arrival of the bride, the scene was one of impressiveness and beauty. Under the skillful direction of Ernest Wetmore the church, particularly about the altar, had been artistically embellished with evergreens daintily relieved with white. The altar consisted of a series of green arches converging at a point in the center from which depended a large wedding bell also of green and white. In the audience might be seen the beauty, wealth and chivalry of the Queen City all waiting expectantly for the ceremony which was to transfer one of our most estimable and popular young women from the tender care of the parental roof to the protection and love of a husband.

Promptly at 7:30 the familiar notes of the Lohengrin wedding chorus burst from the organ and the bridal procession began a slow and stately march up the middle aisle toward the altar, where Archdeacon Williams stood ready to perform the delightful and impressive ceremony. First came the ushers, Messrs. Wilkinson, J. E. Ball, Miller, Wetmore, George Ball and Murray, walking in pairs. Following these were the bridesmaids, Miss Millie Ball, Miss Orr of Duluth, Miss Merritt, Miss Grace Ball and Miss McConnell of Madison, Wis. The bridesmaids were chained together by long festoons of smilax, Miss Merritt walking alone in the center. Following came the maid of honor, Miss Prime of Ironwood, and last of all, the bride leaning on the arm of her father.

Arrived at the altar steps the bride was met by the groom, accompanied by his brother, William M. Hill of East Liverpool, O., and while the bridesmaids and ushers grouped themselves on either side the marriage ceremony began. As the bride and groom reached the altar rail where the words of the minister were to join them as one, the large green bell burst into a blaze of light, the effect being not only startling but exceedingly beautiful. An electric lamp had been suspended inside the bell and the current turned on just when the effect would be the most telling. Here the ceremony was soon finished and the newly wed turned and faced that sea of faces, each one beaming with good wishes and smiles.

After the marriage a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents to which repaired hundreds of invited guests eager to pay their respects to Mr. and Mrs. Hill. In the house the same taste in decorating was observed as had excited admiration in the church. Dainty refreshments were served while the guests rambled about the spacious parlors admiring the many handsome presents. In these the prevailing taste ran to silverware and cut glass with many specimens of choice pottery and bric-a-brac.

The bridal party was costumed entirely in white. The bride wore white satin trimmed with point lace. In her hair she displayed a very handsome "sunburst" cluster of diamonds the gift of the groom and at her corsage a dainty pin presented by the maid of honor. Miss Prime varied slightly from the general rule by wearing cream satin trimmed with passamenterie and point lace. The bridesmaids wore white silk mill and carried handsome bouquets of white roses. The gentlemen's favors were sprays of mistletoe and pearls and the ladies' circles of mistletoe and pearls.

From first to last and in every detail the event was one of the most charming which has excited the attention and merited the plaudits of Marquette society in many a day. Grace, beauty, refined taste, and artistic arrangement characterized all, from the charming bride to the humblest spray of smilax.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill left on the South Shore train last night for Duluth. From there they will go to Chicago, Columbus, Cleveland, and then to their home in East Liverpool. Mr. Hill is one of the promising young attorneys of that city. He is a graduate of Princeton and of the Cincinnati law school. No young couple ever started out in life with brighter prospects and it is the earnest wish of many friends that these may be fully realized.

In at Grabower's.

"Louis Grabower," was what the sign over the door said. Passing under this and entering the place so designated the visitor was greeted with a variety and abundance of attractive goods that did not tell a very loud story of hard times and light custom. From floor to ceiling the shelving fairly groaned with products of the loom in all grades, qualities and colors.

That big stock of cloaks that Grabower announced at the beginning of the season has grown somewhat smaller but he still has good bargains to offer in this line. The customer wanting a cloak may almost state her own figure and if it is at all within reason she may take a parcel away with her.

A big stock of shoes is also displayed, comprising some of the leading makes, H. H. Gray, Johnson, Herrick, and that great seller, the Little Giant school shoe.

In his millinery department special bargains are offered. His stock is being closed out at figures that invite the competition of Chicago. Grabower seems determined to do all the business he possibly can and at the same time give his customers the benefit of his business ability.

Circuit Court Proceedings.

The first matter receiving attention yesterday morning in the Circuit Court was charging the jury in the case of the People vs Jones, Godley and Renville. A verdict of guilty was rendered but sentence was not pronounced. William Whitburn, charged with larceny, plead guilty as also did Henry W. Curtis charged with the same offense. John Lavigne, on trial, charged with breaking into and entering the warehouse of the Lake Superior Iron Company for the purpose of larceny was convicted of the offense.

From present indications this sitting of the court is likely to continue until the holiday vacation.

"It's the expediency of a Doctor," it is said, when Dr. Fenner asserts his Golden Relief cures inflammation in any form and as well when given in 5 drop doses on a lump of sugar once in 5 hours in sore-throat, bronchitis and consumption, as when applied externally in fresh cuts, bruises and burns. "He is trying to get for himself the hard earned money of the people." "He promises impossibilities." "He is trying to play his wily trick upon the unfortunate poor." "He thinks the bold assertion will win." "He would profit out of the misfortunes of the weak and afflicted." "He knows the dread of the grave, and that the sizzling man will catch at straws," etc., etc.

Well, this is quite an indictment, uttered by the pessimist, the misanthropist, the evil wisher, if not the evil doer. Dr. Fenner is aware that the sentiment will be put to the front, by those who are jealous of his success. It has made him hesitate long before consenting to take the people into his confidence and "sell the truth." It has made him delay, until he could prove over and over again that he was right, before going ahead. Now that he knows he is right, shall he be manly and have the courage of his convictions or shall he fear the "breath of slander," "hide his light under a bushel" and allow the army of consumptives to continue their march to death without interposing his strong arm to obstruct the progress of "the grim visaged reaper"? Dr. Fenner chooses the manly course. No narcotics or mineral poisons. Safe and certain. Never disappoints. One tablespoonful does cures La Grippe. Money refunded if satisfaction not given. "Take home a bottle to-day."

There is no one instrument, unless, indeed, it be a large pipe organ, capable of the variety of effects that are obtainable on the Aeolian. Unlike the pipe organ, however, the Aeolian is adapted to all classes of music; overtures and symphonies can be rendered on it with all the softness and delicacy of the flute and violin and cello and all the snap and brilliancy of the piano. See and hear them at Cookin's.
