MARQUETTE, MICH., DECEMBER 15.

Entered as mail matter of the second class in the postoffice at Marquette, Mich.

A COUPLE of letters written by Blaine to Minister Stevens before the provisional government took charge of affairs at Hawaii are said to be missing from the files of the state department. They are believed to have contained instructions to Stevens to promote annexation sentiment in the islands, and the department officials are very anxious to recover them. Maybe somebody has burned them.

BLAND has concluded not to introduce a free coinage bill at this session of congress. "For which relief much thanks." It would be just awful to have such a measure introduced with the certainty that those long-winded silver senators would again be afforded an opportunity to make ten-day speeches on a question that they are able to discuss interminably because they know very little about it. It is a lamentable fact that the less a man really understands of a question the longer he can talk upon it, but that it is a fact was fully established by the debates in the senate on the silver purchase repeal bill during the extra session.

ROBBERY is getting to be an everyday occurrence at Chicago. Three men undertook to rob a proprietor of a provision store there one day this week just after he had opened his place for business in the morning, but he opened fire on them with a revolver that he happened to have handy, killing one of them and wounding another. They returned the fire but without effect. Our news report gave an account of the robbery of the cashier of the wholesale stamp department of the postoffice in that city Tuesday night, who was slugged in his office by a man who succeeded in getting away with $5,000 in cash. The closing of the World's Fair left a swarm of desperate crooks in Chicago as well as an army of laborers who cannot find work, and the authorities have their hands full watching the former and caring for the latter.

The supreme court of Michigan has rendered a decision in a test case from Dickinson county which establishes that county boards have no authority to issue bonds for the purpose of relieving the distress of destitute people. The Dickinson county board of supervisors voted to issue bonds to the amount of $30,000 for the purpose of caring for the needy in that county during the winter, but the chairman of the board refused to sign the bonds. The board then asked the court to issue a writ of mandamus compelling the chairman to sign the bonds. The writ was denied, the court holding that the county has no authority under the law to issue bonds for such a purpose. Unless the legislature is convened in special session to give the counties the necessary authority, therefore, they are powerless to bond themselves to raise funds to care for their unemployed men and their families during the winter, and as they have exhausted the funds available for that purpose they can do nothing as the case now stands. The special session appears to be almost an imperative necessity, and will become so if private donations for the relief of the suffering do not reach a much larger volume than now seems probable.

REGAINING SANITY.
The merciless roasting that the State Republican has received from Republican papers of the upper peninsula which it foolishly sought to enlist in a crusade against THE MINING JOURNAL over the upper peninsula insane asylum location matter has evidently brought that dictatorial little sheet to its senses. In its issue for Wednesday of this week it submits this explanatory statement:

Some of The State Republican's upper peninsula readers seem to misapprehend its position upon the asylum question, or perhaps it has never been fully stated. The Republican has never favored, and does not now favor, any particular location for the new asylum over any other and it would have been pleased if those specially interested could have agreed upon some site which they deemed best fitted for the convenience of all concerned. Desiring this, The Republican was entirely silent, even after the site was established. But when it was assumed that a non-partisan state board, composed of upright and honorable gentlemen, had been guilty of collusion and fraud in selecting the asylum site, and the largest and most widely circulated newspaper in the upper peninsula started in upon a tirade of threats and abuse of this board and the governor, The Republican took a hand in the matter, as it had a perfect right to do. That the discussion became personal was in no sense due to The Republican, since its mild remonstrance was met with a shower of billingsgate from the start. But let that pass.

The Republican is frank to say, however, that it regards with strong disfavor the entire system of locating state buildings as managed in Michigan, both in the past and present. It believes that the plan of putting these matters up for bids does not subservise the best interests of the state and should be abolished. There should be established in the state some competent body (if it does not already exist) to whom should be referred all matters pertaining to the locating and constructing of state institutions, and to report their findings to the governor, together with the proper bills for introduction in the legislature. For instance: If the reported necessity for an asylum in the upper peninsula had been referred to such a board, it would have been competent for that body to first report upon its necessity; second, to lay out and establish a proposed district, taking into consideration the institutions which were most in need of relief, and the localities containing the largest percentage of patients; third, the selection of a site as nearly central with relation to the district under consideration as might be, always bearing in mind helpfulness of location and accessibility; fourth, a close estimate of the cost of such a site and buildings; and, fifth, the presentation of a bill to the legislature based upon this information, which should be compiled in comprehensive form and accompany the bill.

With such data before it a legislature would know precisely what it was doing, and why, and the bill once a law, all of the main questions of difference would have been disposed of. The state is wealthy enough to pay for what it demands, and should not peddle its institutions out to communities, nor offer them to the highest bidder. Experience has shown that neither the state nor the citizens receive the highest benefits from such a course, and it engenders bickerings and prejudices which are both unfortunate and undignified.

In the present instance the bill for the upper peninsula insane asylum was presented by legislators from that section, and was, presumably, satisfactory to them. Every step in the matter was under their direction, and the locating board, which was chosen by their recommendation, if the results were unsatisfactory no one is blameable but themselves, and as there seems to be no way of undoing them they should be borne patiently. The Republican is pleased to learn that this idea is becoming prevalent with the citizens there.

This The State Republican gives as its "final word" on the insane asylum controversy. THE MINING JOURNAL notes with gratification that its Lansing contemporary's "final word" is vastly more sensible and pertinent than those which it had been previously shooting off on the question under discussion with such reckless disregard for the truth and manifest ignorance of the situation up here. It is, however, quite at fault in assuming that the people of this peninsula are becoming reconciled to the selection of a location for the asylum made by the state board of corrections and charities. They are as much opposed as ever to having the asylum built at Newberry, and will endeavor to have the mistake of the board corrected by fair and legitimate means. It is nonsensical to assume that because the board has decided in favor of Newberry the great state of Michigan is powerless to prevent its blunder—for a blunder it is, and a most egregious one—from being consummated to the lasting detriment of the people of the district which the asylum is intended to serve, as well as of the state at large.

With reference to the charge that "the largest and most widely circulated paper in the upper peninsula" (that being THE MINING JOURNAL, of course) threatened and abused the board and governor because of the choice of a location for the asylum made by the former, and that it charged the board with "collusion and fraud" in the transaction, we beg to deny having either threatened or made charges as stated by the State Republican. This paper severely criticized the action of the board, but never charged it with dishonesty, and it made no threats against the governor. It stated what the people here expected of him in the emergency created by the unwise action of the board, and what he might expect if he did not use his power and authority as chief executive of the state if he disappointed them, and it has nothing to take back on that score. But that was not "threatening" him. It was rather giving him needed information concerning the sentiment of our people, and was a service to the governor instead of anything to his injury.

The action of the board was so indefensible that severity of language in discussing it was justifiable, and the assumption that it was improperly influenced in taking it so natural an explanation of what it did in the case that many jumped at the conclusion which THE MINING JOURNAL is unjustly accused of having given countenance to in the manner charged by The State Republican.

The Book of the Fair, which cost the Bancroft company such a heavy outlay, is an assured success, subscriptions having already exceeded 100,000, and still keep coming in as fast as ever. What has given this work such great popularity has been not only the plan but the execution. Nothing could have better fitted popular requirements than a work which covered the whole ground, historical and descriptive, and executed in the highest style of art. We understand that there is an opportunity for a few more competent persons to canvass for the superb book and we know of no more praiseworthy or profitable occupation. GIVEN A STRAIGHT TIP.

An "Indignant Citizen" of Trout Creek Called Down Handsomely.

SIDNAY, Dec. 13.—James Hayes, a vag from up the line of the South Shore road, struck town Saturday morning, walked into the office of the Franklin Hotel, helped himself to a bundle of clothing belonging to Hiram Gagnou and decamped with the plunder. Officer Geo. W. Ferguson soon had him in custody and took him before Justice Hauser, to answer to the charge of petty larceny. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to ninety days in jail. Hayes indignantly enquired if "that was all?" The justice informed him that he was very sorry to say that the law did not allow him to inflict a severer punishment, and that a sentence of six months would be imposed if the law permitted it. Hayes did not give his place of residence, but it is supposed that he came from Trout Creek, that place having been for some time past a resort for toughs of the Enos class, where they have herded under the very eyes of the "Indignant Citizen" who assumes guardianship of the morals and good name of his community.

Malloy and Joyce claimed to be residents of Trout Creek, but this "Indignant Citizen" denied them the honor of being enrolled among the people of that place. He has become suddenly very solicitous regarding the good name of his home town. Why has he held his peace so long, while Enos and the vile crew that consorted with him had things all their own way there? Why did he not use his influence and authority to rid the place of the houses of prostitution with which it was infested before the murder of Deputy Sheriff Davidson aroused popular sentiment and started a movement to wipe them out? There is but one answer to this. "Indignant Citizen" has had his indignation aroused too late, and the zeal that he now displays is simply simulated to cover previous remissness as a justice.

Had he done his duty under the law Davidson would now be living, and the people would have no cause to censure him. But they are not to be deceived by his suddenly awakened zeal on behalf of the fair fame of his community, for they know what inspires it and how little sincerity there is behind it. It is no justification for official misconduct and neglect of duty in one place that in others the same disregard for official obligations can be found and it does not justify any community in allowing thieves and dice keepers and thugs to run riot in that respect.

It is high time that "Indignant Citizen" (who is also a justice of the peace) did something to rid this part of the peninsula of the vicious element that has infested it for so long.

A county official informed the writer a few days ago that some time since he was at Ewen and saw gambling houses running openly there day and night for seven days of the week. There were also two houses of prostitution running there at the time. Why did not the officials put a stop to this? It is easy to talk in lawlessness when the people insist that it shall not be permitted to run riot among them. But the sworn officers of the law (such as "Indignant Citizen") should not leave it to private citizens to take the initiative when the law is violated before their eyes.

Let the people of Houghton county take the sheriffs and justices of the peace shall do their duty and we shall soon see the end of the reign of lawlessness that has been too long permitted in this section. If "Indignant Citizen" wishes to redeem himself there is a way open to him, but he can't do it by writing hypocritical letters for the public press.

Italian Etiquette.
If the woman who visits Rome wishes to follow tradition and "do as the Romans do," she will be careful never to take an escort's arm in a Catholic church. Indeed, the guides instruct those who stroll innocently in arm about St. Peter's, looking at the pictures, frescoes and altars of that wonderful cathedral, that they are committing an impropriety. Italians are very particular about the etiquette of kissing the hand. A man kisses the right hand of his mother, aunt or elderly friend, and the left hand of his sweetheart. It is not permitted him to kiss the palm of the hand except in great and affectionate intimacy; it is regarded as a token that he is very much in love. Upon arriving at a formal dinner a gentleman takes the hand of his attendant and bends low over it as if about to kiss it, but does not do so. After-dinner etiquette demands that he take her hand again and kiss it.

Home Rule.—Mr. Penne-Hecker.—"What! going to leave, John? Why, man, what is your grievance?" John—"I can't stand the missus' ways any longer, sir." Mr. Penne-Hecker (sadly).—"But just consider, John, how long I've put up with them." John—"Yes, sir, quite true, sir. But, harskin' you takes the hand of his attendant and bends low over it as if about to kiss it, but does not do so. After-dinner etiquette demands that he take her hand again and kiss it."

GRANDMA'S GARDEN.

You're peeping through the garden-gate,
Oh, precious little curly pate!
And I shall see you by and by,
With cunning air and fingers sly,
Under the latch and slip inside,
Then toward the sweetest blossoms glide:
"To smell the posies," so you'll say,
Ah, rogue, you'll take a rose away!
Full five and twenty years ago by,
Another urchin, just as sly
And just as sweet and brown and bold,
With just such locks and curling gold,
Would watch to find my curtain down,
As if he feared my slightest frown,
Then pluck the prettiest flower and run—
That was your father, naughty one.

As time passed on, the lad grew meek,
And then my full consent would seek:
Thus, by his malice and truth,
He gained my trust, the cunning youth!
He had a queenly Rose in view,
That in my household garden grew,
And soon the blooming flower he won—
That was your mother, little son.

THE OLD SETTLER.

His Story of the Vongofu! Bear and Unfortunate Paterbo-z.

"It takes a pooty darn cute feller to do w'at Joe Ball done t'other day, over back o' Pison Brook Holler," said the Squire.

"An' w'at's Joe been a-doin' of that's so awful cute?" asked the Old Settler.

"Ketched a yearlin' b'ar asleep, an' got a rope around its gullet 'fore the b'ar could wake up an' clutch him," replied the Squire.

"Joe done that?" the Old Settler queried.

"That's w'at he done," said the Squire.

"An' more'n that, he drew the critter, spite of itself, all the way to his clearin'; an' he's got it tied to a post, safe an' sound, so they tell me."

"Well, all I got to say, then, is, that Joe Ball better keep his eye peeled!" exclaimed the Old Settler, with an ominous shake of his head. "If thar's anything that b'ars won't never forget nor forgive it's been ketched an' done fer w'ile they'm asleep. If they'm took in arter a squar' stan-up-an'-take-dry-knocks rumpus an' rassel, they'm willin' to go along an' say no more about it, 'cause they've had a fair chance an' it were their own fault if they w'ant up to the mark. But if ye sneak on 'em an' git the best on 'em, w'en they'm asleep, look out, b'gosh! Then they've got it in fer ye, an' they'll git even, an' make it a sorry day fer ye w'en ye took 'in that way! Joe Ball wants to keep his eye peeled, Squire!"

"Poo!" ejaculated the Squire, scornfully.

"It may be poot, an' it may be puff, an' it may be puff!" the Old Settler exclaimed, "but I know w'at I know, b'gosh! Poo! That's w'at I know, Paterbo-z! Poo! That's w'at I know, wunst, an' mebbe he didn't live to see the day he were sorry fer it! Simeon had snuck up on a sleepin' yearlin' b'ar jist the same ez this here Joe Ball's ben an' did, an' he got a rope on it an' drew it into his clearin' an' tied it to a pole."

"Simeon," says my anciester, "yuv run head fast ag'in the natur' o' b'ars by dom' o' this here," says he, "an' if ye don't put a ball inter that b'ar an' end its future right here," says he, "thar's danger ahead o' ye, b'gosh, bigger'n a stack o' bog hay!" says he.

"An' Simeon turned up his nose an' says: "Poo!" says he.

"An' my anciester shook his head and went away, sorrerin', az well he mout, fer he know'd b'ars from A to Izzard, an' he know'd thar were a day o' reck-onin' comin' fer Simeon if he didn't ketch that b'ar he had snuck up an' ketched w'ile it were sleepin'. An' b'ars'll be b'ars to-day, jist the same ez they was then. I feel sorry fer Joe Ball, b'gosh I do!"

"Well, major," said the squire, aggravatingly, "Pison Brook Holler an' Sugar Swamp is differ'nt."

venge out of it with a dose o' lead," says he.

"But Simeon only sniffed an' says: "Poo!" an' my anciester went off sorrerin'."

"Simeon Paterbo-z w'at's p'tic'lar poplar round the deestric, but he hadn't never did nothin' that w'at's honest. Still, he had ways, an' folks didn't keer much fer him. Jist about the time he ketched this b'ar asleep he were gittin' ready to marry the Widder Sluppy. The widder had considerable land, an' w'ere a big ketch, an' folks didn't think much of her choosin' Simeon, but she were doin' of it only outen spite, 'cause Sol Beasley an' her had a little kiff, an' Sol throwed up the engagement betwixt 'em, thinkin' mebbe that the widder would coax him back. But the widder didn't, an' took Simeon Paterbo-z inste'd. An' she'd a married him, too, an' Simeon'd a be'n right in clover, if he hadn't a pooted at my anciester, and had plugged his b'ar full o' lead."

"Simeon kep' the b'ar tied to a pole, an' one mornin' he got up an' found that the b'ar had slipped the rope off his neck, an' were ramin' round the premises. But he didn't seem to want to go w'ay, an' didn't make no objection to bein' tied up ag'in. This nice an' peaceful way 'o the b'ar made Simeon larf more an' more at w'at my anciester said."

"Why," says he, "that b'ar wouldn't ez much ez scratch a dog, let alone clutch me."

"I didn't say he'd clutch ye," says my anciester. "But bevar, Simeon!" says he. "Thar b'ar mebbe won't eat ye, but wuss!" says he.

"Long about then some one took to stealin' sheep from the clearin' an' gettin' away with 'em. Two or three chaps ez lived in the deestric was suspicious, but thar couldn't nothin' be found ag'in 'em. Nothin' were talked about but the sheep stealin', an' one day my anciester were to Simeon's an' he says to Simeon:

"I'll go hard with that sheep-stealin' cuss w'en we ketch him!" says he. "It'll be state's prison fer him from the word go," says he, "if it's fer twenty year!" says he.

"My anciester remembered arter w'at's that the b'ar wer' lyin' down ez if he were snoozin'; but when my anciester said them words the b'ar opened his eyes an' looked up sudden and queer. Then he riz up pooty soon, an' took to thinkin' like, now an' then turnin' his eyes to ards Simeon."

"Simeon," says my pop, "bevar' o' thar b'ar!" says he.

"Poo!" says Simeon, an' my anciester went away. The nex' day he started fer a trip down the river with a raft, an' he were gone three weeks. The day arter that Job Sawyer, ez lived nex' to Simeon, got up at daylight and went out to his sheep pastur', an' b'gosh, three o' his sheep was gone. He foun' the trail o' the thief an' follered it till it stopped.

"Great spooks!" says he, "who'd a think it?"

"So Job goes right back an' wakes up Squire Colduff an' says he wanted a war'n't, ez he had discovered the sheep thief. The squire ast him who, an' w'en Job told him the squire most fell offen his cheer. But he give Job the war'n't, an' Job went an' woke up Si Salter, the constable, an' they started to git the sheep thief. They went straight to Simeon Paterbo-z's. 'Fore they woke Simeon up they stopped at his milk house. There hung Job's three sheep! An' they was skinned. Then they went to the barn. There was the three pelts offen them sheep layin' on the barn floor! Thar's all they wanted. They got Simeon up, sarved the war'n't, an' marched him off, spite of all he could say. Job said arter w'at that ez he were gettin' in the wagon he looked back an' see Simeon's b'ar dancin' round his pole an' a huggin' of hisself ez if he was bustin' with joy over sumpin'; but Job said he didn't think nuthin' of it, 'b'ars bein' queer."

"Well, they made short work o' Simeon. Thar couldn't be no goin' back on the sheep bein' found in Simeon's milk house an' the pelts in his barn. Court sat in three weeks, an' they give Simeon four years. The nex' got back to Sugar Swamp jist ez my anciester got there from his trip down the river. He hadn't heard a word about Simeon bein' arrested nor nothin', an' w'en he heard the news he were jist goin' to Barn how he were gittin' along with the b'ar. The b'ar were layin' down by its pole an' my anciester stood lookin' at it, ponderin' like, w'en Job Sawyer kim along an' hollers out to him:

"Hooray! Simeon goes to jail for four years! Hooray!"

MINING NEWS. Good authority says that the Quincy Mining company has purchased about three quarter sections of land north of the Franklin and North Quincy properties from the St. Mary's Mineral Land company for $500,000. This shuts the Franklin out from acquiring new territory adjoining and is a deal of great importance to the longevity of the Quincy mine.

HANCOCK.

The new boiler for the Hancock water works, for which James Burt had the contract, was yesterday taken to the water works station by S. M. Bates. The boiler weighs four tons, is built of Juniata flange steel, has patented Eclipse manholes, McGregor's patent steel braces, and patent Castle steel lugs, the latter being a patent of this year. The boiler is one of the best ever turned out of Mr. Burt's shops and will do the city great service. Mr. Burt is also drawing plans for two twelve ton steel boilers which he is going to make for the Atlantic Mining company. Mr. Burt intends putting in shortly some large rolls and other machinery which it will take steam power to run.

At the meeting of the Upper Peninsula Ice & Cold Storage company Tuesday the following officers were elected: President, Edward Ryan; vice-president, Thomas Smart; secretary and treasurer, Chas. J. The ice taken from this latter place will be shipped to Calumet. The Hancock & Calumet railroad is putting in a sidetrack at the smelter now.

Alfred Nyland, a young man in the employ of Nelson & Strandell, the bakers, was arrested Wednesday evening by Marshal Malherbe, who turned him over to Marshal Peterson of Ishpeming upon the latter's arrival in the evening. Young Nyland before leaving Ishpeming last July got rather too intimate with a young woman there and she has caused his arrest. He was taken to Ishpeming yesterday morning.

W. H. Roberts Wednesday received a telegram from his son Thomas, who has lately located at Wharton, Ok., stating that his wife had died. Word reached here yesterday morning that he would bring the body here for burial and would probably reach here Friday.

John Schulte has resigned his position in the Mineral Range freight office to accept a position with Ham & Schulte at Dollar Bay. Bradford Light takes his place at the depot.

The grand opening of the new ice rink has been decided on for a certain Saturday evening. The Houghton Silver Cornet band will furnish music.

An effort is being made to organize a snow shoe club in this city. Many of those who enjoy that sport, went out yesterday.

NELSON'S SHIP.

Deadly Broadides Poured from the Victory at the Battle of the Trafalgar.

The Victory was designed to carry 104 guns, consisting of thirty-two, twenty-four and twelve pounders, ranged on her upper, main, middle and lower decks; she was also armed with a few sixty-eight-pounder carronades. The weight of her one broadside of single-shotted guns 1,104 pounds, which was considered prodigious in those days. In the account of the battle of Trafalgar, in which action this ship played so prominent a part, the broadside which poured into the French Escentaure is described as terrific, dismounting twenty of her adversary's guns and killing and wounding no less than 400 of her officers and men.

Compare this with our guns of the present day, when a single gun of the Nile or Trafalgar throws a projectile 100 pounds heavier than the whole broadside of the Victory, while one of our 110-ton guns discharges a projectile weighing no less than 1,800 pounds. It may be of interest to know that while only 325 pounds of powder were expended in the discharge of a broadside of the Victory, as much as 3,000 pounds weight of powder is consumed in firing the broadside of the Victoria or the Sans Pareil, two of our modern iron-clads.

From the time she was first commissioned the Victory was constantly engaged, under various flag officers, in active warfare against the enemies of England, gallantly maintaining the honor and glory of the flag which proudly flew from her mizzen peak. These services culminated in that great and glorious sea fight off Cape Trafalgar, fought on October 21, 1805.—Good Words.

THE ENGLISH CHAPLAIN.

Duties of the Soldier-Prescher in Her Majesty's Army.

These commissioned chaplains are divided into four classes, according to their seniority, ranking respectively as colonels, lieutenant-colonels, majors and captains, and headed by a chaplain-general—at present Dr. Edgill—who is at the war office.

The pay of a military chaplain is not great, ranging from sixteen shillings to one pound, two shilling and six pence a day, and he retires on pension when he has completed twenty years' service, except under special circumstances, when the term of service may be prolonged. He is not entitled to special fees for the performance of any duty whatever for officers and men, such as furnishing copies of certificates of baptism, marriage or burial.

His duties embrace the conduct of the parade and voluntary services in the garrison church on Sunday morning and evening respectively, the regular visiting of the sick in hospital and of the soldiers' families in the married quarters, and the weekly religious instruction of the children and drummer boys. These, however, are the barest lines of his duty. There are a thousand other ways by which, if a chaplain would do his work effectively, he must come into sympathetic touch with the men.

No rules or regulations can make a chaplain really efficient if he be not born in him from the first. There are special instincts, intuitions and natural powers which are essential, and which, if he have them not, he had better relinquish the work at once and forever.—Chambers' Journal.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—Some of the flower badges of nations are as follows: Athens, violet; Canada, sugar maple; Egypt, lotus; England, rose; France, fleur-de-lis (lily); Florence, giglio (lily); Germany, Cornflower; Ireland, shamrock leaf; Italy, lily; Prussia, linden; Saxony, mignonette; Scotland, thistle; Spain, pomegranate; Wales, leek leaf.

—In the hope of being able to dispense with waiters a woman has invented a table which will wait on itself. The table is round, with a space ten inches wide for the plates, cups, etc. Inside this circle there is a revolving disk, raised about two inches, upon which the food is placed. By turning it in any direction, you may have bread, butter, olives or cream without asking or waiting for them.

—A man who travels frequently by the coastwise steamers to southern ports, and who is liable to be seasick when the water is rough, says he would be sick much oftener, and often much sicker, if he did not, instead of the reclining steamer chair, use an ordinary rocking chair during his voyages. When the motion of the ship makes the chair rock it seems perfectly natural and just what might happen on a hotel porch.

—Rather a striking illustration of how trade and money getting make strange bed fellows is furnished by the Jaffa-Jerusalem railway. The concession for the railway was obtained by a native of Jerusalem, it was built by a French company, while the engines and carriages, manufactured in the United States, run over rails made in Belgium, and the most remunerative part of the traffic is drawn from British tourists.

—Three miles per hour is about the average of the gulf stream, though at certain places it attains a speed of not less than fifty-four miles an hour. In the Yucatan channel, for instance, where it is ninety miles wide and 1,000 fathoms deep, the current is not over one-fourth of a mile an hour. In the straits of Bimini the current is so rapid that the phosphorescent glow gives the whole the appearance of being a sheet of flames.

—The latest invention of a labor-saving machine is that of an apparatus for picking cranberries. A harvester of cranberries who uses his hands to pick the cranberries can make only from $2.50 to $3 per day; but by employing the cranberry picking machine he can make from $5 to $6 a day. Unluckily, however, the owners of the cranberry marshes suspect the machine harms the cranberry bushes, and many of them will not permit it to be used.

—Three years ago the wood buffalo was supposed to have become extinct. Now it seems that last winter the Indians brought in from the Slave lake and Peace river districts 200 skins of the wood buffalo, some of them of unusual size and fine quality. The theory is that the remnant of the great herds that formerly roamed in the northwest found a feeding ground out of the route of Indians and hunters, multiplied greatly, and were driven south by the extreme cold of last winter.

—The latest proceedings in the negotiation of a preliminary treaty of peace, in 1783, was in relation to the refugee American loyalists. The American commissioners consented to a compromise. They agreed that there should be no future confiscations or prosecutions of loyalists, that all pending prosecutions should be discontinued, and that congress should recommend to the several states and their legislatures, on behalf of the refugees, amnesty and the restitution of their confiscated property.

—The origin of the terms "six-penny," "ten-penny," as applied to nails, though not commonly known, is involved in no mystery whatever. Nails have made a certain number of pounds to the thousand for many years, and are still reckoned in that way in England. Ten-penny being a thousand nails to ten pounds, a six-penny a thousand to six pounds, a twenty-penny weighing twenty pounds to the thousand, and in ordering buyers call for the three-pound, six-pound or ten-pound variety, etc., until, by the Englishmen's abbreviation of "pun" for "pound," the abbreviation has been made to stand for penny instead of pound, as originally intended.

—When Howe sailed southward (June, 1777) he left about three thousand men, one-third of them loyalists, on Staten Island. Washington, who was watching Howe's movements, had placed Sullivan, with his division, near the coast in New Jersey. The British on the island continually plundered the Jerseymen on the main. Some of these plunderers, stationed nearly opposite Amboy, were attacked by Sullivan (August 29) with about one thousand men. He took several prisoners, and among the spoils were the records and papers of the Yearly Meeting of Friends, which revealed such defection to the cause of the patriots that the congress advised the council of Pennsylvania to arrest eleven of the leading and wealthy members of that society.

How to Make a Pretty Tidy.

A pretty tidy may be made of Holland linen. Cut the desired size, trace some pretty design, such as a spray of apple blossoms or wild roses diagonally across it, and outline with wash cotton. Fasten to the chair back with bows of ribbon to match the cotton with which it is worked. This is certainly a sensible tidy, as it can be washed as often as is necessary. Turkish towels come in very pretty colors, such as pale pink, blue, lemon, etc. Let me tell you, fair reader, that these make lovely tidies for sitting rooms, or bed rooms. Catch the towel in the center and tie it with a bow of ribbon to correspond with the predominating shade in the towel. Then fasten on the back of sofa or chair as one does a scarf. These, of course, should be washed as often as one chooses. Should they fade they can be used for the bath room and new ones put in their places. Ribbons that have become a little crumpled and look scarcely fresh enough for your personal adornment, may be made to do service as ornamentation for the above Philadelphia Press.

CRONIN CASE DRAGS ITS SLOW LENGTH ALONG.

Floyd Boys and Their Mother Are Charged with Blackmailing Cashier Scheig of His Stealing.

MOTHER'S LOVE REMAINS.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—The court room was crowded today during the Prendergast trial many ladies being among the spectators. Prendergast was nervous and ill at ease when Carter Harrison Jr. came into court with his wife and his sister, Miss Sophia Harrison. The latter was called to the witness stand and her testimony was given with great effort as she told of the murder of her father. A number of other witnesses were examined but their testimony developed nothing new.

The prosecution rested its case with the evidence of the physician who produced in court the bullets which were fired into the body of Mayor Harrison.

The first witness for the defense was Mrs. Helen Prendergast, mother of the assassin. Her evidence was entirely in support of the insanity theory. She said that about the time when her son was merging from boyhood into manhood she saw with some consternation that there was a marked change in his disposition and that he became a recluse, devoting himself to books and avoiding all forms of outdoor diversion common to boys. She said he often talked foolishly about being made corporation counsel and grew furious when she suggested that he was not fit to hold the position.

Brother Baldwin, the director of a Catholic school which Prendergast attended, testified that he had considered the prisoner demented—not crazy enough to necessitate confinement but too crazy to be an agreeable companion. His opinion was formed more from the prisoner's actions and manner than from anything he said.

During the cross examination of Mrs. Prendergast by Attorney Trade, the prisoner lost his temper and exclaimed: "Trade, you a scoundrel to talk to my mother that way."

WILL M'LAUGHLIN TESTIFY?

That Is Now Most Interesting Point in Cronin Case.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—The prosecution in the Cronin case devoted its energies largely today to unraveling the mystery surrounding the wagon in which Dr. Cronin's corpse is said to have been carried from the Carlson cottage to the catch-basin.

The rumor was current today that McLaughlin, the brother of Mrs. Andrew Foy, now in Scotland, will be used by the prosecution to compel Andrew Foy to tell all he may know of the case. At the former trial Foy claimed that he could remember nothing regarding the secret meeting at his house. If his brother-in-law testifies Foy will be compelled to talk, it is said, or be attached for contempt of court.

Policeman Steib testified that he was on duty on the night of May 4, 1889. He was called to testify to having seen the mysterious wagon and his evidence was strongly objected to by Judge Wing. The objection was overruled and the witness stated that at 11:30 o'clock on the night in question he had seen three men in a carpenter's wagon drawn by a bay horse. In this wagon was a large trunk but he was unable to describe the occupants of the wagon. The vehicle at that time was going in the direction of the catch-basin in which the body was subsequently found.

On cross-examination Steib contradicted his statement made at the former trial regarding the color of the horse that drew the wagon. Then he said it was a dark grey, he thought, while today he was positive it was a dark bay. Officer Reilly was with Steib at the time the wagon passed and corroborated the latter's testimony.

MOTHER AND SONS INDICTED.

Mrs. Floyd Also Accused of Complicity in Scheig's Stealings.

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 14.—Mrs. Eleanor B. Floyd and her two sons Louis and Frank have all been jointly indicted on a charge of complicity with Philip Scheig in robbing the bank of Minneapolis this morning on a bench warrant while on a visit to her son at the county jail. Scheig was to have been sentenced this morning but owing to a press of other business no sentence has yet been pronounced. It is now believed that in some way the Floyds, mother and sons, become possessed of the knowledge of Scheig's pecuniary about three years ago and that since that time they have used that knowledge to extort money from him. Scheig himself stated today to an Associated Press reporter that shortly before his flight he called on Mrs. Floyd and gave her $350 for a trip to Paris. He had given her other money he said but could not now give the exact amount. Scheig still refuses to tell how much money he took from the bank and officers of that institution maintain studious silence in regard to the matter.

Mrs. Floyd and her two sons Frank and Louis were arraigned this afternoon in the district court on the indictments found against them in the morning by the grand jury. The prisoners, supporting their mother arm-in-arm, listened to the reading of the indictment with apparent composure. They pleaded not guilty but on advice of their attorneys withdrew the plea and were given until Monday morning in which to plead.

They were afterwards remanded to the county jail to await trial. Bail was fixed at $5,000 in each case and was not furnished. The imposing of sentence upon Philip Scheig was postponed to allow time for the trial of the Floyds, at which Scheig will be the all-important witness.

WAITING FOR THE LIST.

Settlers and Stockmen Will Deal With Disorderly Indians.

BILLINGS, Mont., Dec. 14.—The Crows are out again. Nearly all the young men of the tribe belonging to the Prior Mountain branch—the ones who made the trouble last spring on the newly-cleared strip—are massed on the head of Stillwater creek, off their reservation and killing cattle wantonly. Agent Wyman has refused to make an effort to drive them in and refers the sheriff to the governor for aid. Sheriff Ramsey has telegraphed Governor Rickards the state of affairs but has reason to believe that the settlers will take the matter into their own hands if they have not already done so.

The locality where the Crows are doing their chief work of destruction is about forty miles from the railroad and settlement is sparse but the stockmen have a detachment in the field and have declared their intention to take the law into their own hands and protect their stock, even if they are obliged to kill off half the Crow tribe. The mood of the stockmen and settlers is a dangerous one. The sheriff has done all he can and now awaits the list of "good Indians."

FOREIGNERS GET TWO-THIRDS.

Sixty-Three Per Cent. of World's Fair Prizes Go Abroad.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—The World's Fair board of awards has struck a balance on the awards they have made, disclosing for the first time that the foreign exhibitors will secure 63 per cent. of the prizes, while the American exhibitors will receive only 37 per cent. Chairman Thatcher says this showing will put an end to the criticisms made by the foreigners and taken up in this country that the foreign exhibitors were not receiving full consideration. He anticipates that the American exhibitors will now be heard from and that they will feel that the board has not been sufficiently patriotic toward home exhibitors. But Mr. Thatcher says he and his associates have been governed by the finding of the judges and that the latter are responsible for giving the foreigners the bulk of the prizes.

QUITE A CONTRAST TO OUR DILATORY CONGRESS.

Mr. Gladstone Says Parish Councils Bill Must Be Dropped Unless Short Recess Is Taken.

AND THEY GET NO PAY.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—There was quite an exciting sitting of the house of commons today, arising out of the announcement made by Mr. Gladstone that owing to the present state of business the government proposed to adjourn Friday Dec. 22, and to meet again on the following Wednesday. Sir John Dorrington (Con.) moved to adjourn the house in order to call attention to the backward state of public business. The opposition intended this motion as an indication of the alleged general incapacity of the government in conducting business and expressed the intention of pressing the motion to a division. Sir Richard Paget (Con.) in seconding Sir John Dorrington's motion was loudly cheered, especially when he declared that the present condition of things in public affairs was becoming positively intolerable.

These attacks finally brought Mr. Gladstone to his feet and he replied warmly to the onslaught of the opposition and amid frequent interruptions declared that the house must meet again as he had indicated or the parish council bill must be abandoned. After a heated debate, during which Mr. Gladstone was greeted with groans from the opposition and cheers from his supporters, the closure was moved and the motion to adjourn was rejected by a vote of 165 to 115. The announcement of the result of the vote called forth loud cheers from the government supporters.

COUNTESS OF ESSEX NOW.

Adele Grant of New York Weds the Earl of Essex.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—The marriage of Miss Adele Grant of New York to George Devereaux de Vere Capell, Earl of Essex, took place this afternoon at St. Margaret's church, Westminster. The church was crowded and included among the congregation nearly all the best known Americans in London as well as representatives of the aristocracy of the United Kingdom. Among those present were Ambassador Bayard and all the members of the United States embassy. The marriage took place at 2:30 p. m. and was followed by a reception at Mrs. Grant's house in Cumberland Place. The best man was Baron Detmold, and the bridesmaids were Miss Elyin Grant, Miss Alberta Paget, daughter of Lady Alford Paget; Miss Diana Stuart, daughter of Lady Florence Stuart; Miss Mary Colebrook, daughter of Lady Colebrook; Miss Gwenfa Williams, daughter of Mrs. P. WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.—Late this afternoon Secretary Carlisle signed a letter calling for the resignation of Charles F. Kimball, appraiser at Detroit, Mich.

At the exhibition at Antwerp next year for an original feature, after the manner of the Eiffel tower at the Ferris wheel, two captive balloons will be put together and form a stationary aerial castle big enough to hold 150 guests about 1,000 feet above the earth. It will be held to the ground by four stout cables. It will be reached by two smaller captive balloons, which will go up and down every quarter of an hour.

The Pyramid Pile Cure

Is a new discovery for the prompt, permanent cure of Piles in every form. Every druggist has it.

Mr. S. H. CONKLIN writes from Mt. Carmel, Conn. "Enclosed please find check for your bills of May 2nd and 13th. I repeat the gratification I express before as to the convenience, economy, and the real artistic beauty of the National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors have proved to me in using them. It would seem as if the old way of trying to produce the desired shade of color by mixing many colors together with much labor and guess-work must be abandoned in favor of your economical, sure and easy method. My partners wish to introduce their use in an adjoining town, and want a couple of your books as guides."

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

The practice in early English history was to bury the heart and bowels of a prominent man in one church and his body in another. In 1838 the body of Richard Coeur de Lion was found buried in Rouen cathedral, confirming the historic statement. His body was laid to rest at Fontevand, his bowels at Chaluz.

France is soon to adopt an interesting innovation in the postal-card system. The cards will be issued in the form of check books, with stubs. The sender of the postal card can make memoranda of its contents on the stub, and can have this stamped at the post office before the card is detached, so that a verified record of the correspondence can be kept.

No one who has ever stayed at a Chinese hotel is likely to forget his experience. They are all built on the same plan—a large courtyard, around the four sides of which are built rows of small rooms, the restaurant and office being in front. The buildings are built of sun-dried bricks, and are usually in the last stages of dilapidation. Each small room contains a brick bed, in which a fire can be lighted for warmth in winter. There is no furniture but a rough chair, and perhaps a table, while the windows are nothing but frames covered with paper.

Sappho's Leap was the name given to a white cliff or promontory anciently called Leucadia, now Cape Ducato, at the southern extremity of Santa Maura, one of the Ionian islands. The poetess, is reported to have thrown herself from this height into the sea. A criminal, with birds attached to him to break his fall, was thrown from the cliff at the annual festival of Apollo; and, if he reached the water unhurt, he was picked up by boats placed there for that purpose. This is the rock from which, according to the story, lovers throw themselves in order to be free from the pangs of love.

A fragment of bas-relief discovered in Egypt has shown that the obelisks and other large monoliths were transported from the quarry to their site. The stone is depicted upright on a great galley or vessel, which is being towed by a number of small boats alongside. This method of detaching a monolith from the mother rock is also explained by a semi-detached block in one of the quarries of Syene. After having been hewn clear on three sides a deep groove was cut into the side still attached to the rock, and the holes were pierced, into which wooden pegs were driven. The pegs were then wetted and the wood in swelling broke off the monolith from the quarry.

The new British battle-ships, Majestic and Magnificent, will head the list in point of size. They will be 390 feet long, 75 feet broad, 37 1/2 feet deep, of 14,900 tons displacement, and 17 1/2 knots maximum speed. Instead of 76-ton guns, the biggest used in the later ironclads, they will carry four 50-tonners, 12-inch caliber, and capable of being loaded by hand as well as by machinery. There will be twelve 6-inch quick-firing guns, sixteen 12-pound quick-firing guns and five torpedo tubes, three submerged, for 18-inch torpedoes. The big guns will be mounted on barbettes. These vessels are to have about four feet more freeboard than the Royal Sovereign and her sisters.

Air is supplied to the firerooms of ocean steamships through a ventilator on deck, which is supposed to be turned to face the direction of the wind. Sometimes this turning is neglected. Then ensues a terrible state of things down below in the already overheated fire-room. The air becomes stifling, the unfortunate stokers gasping in vain for a breath of fresh air. The smell of the oil and the abominable odor of the bilge water are enough to knock out the strongest man. No pen can describe the horrors of life in the fire-room during these times, and the wonder is that scores of the stokers do not drop off instead of the few that are reported. The coal trimmers and coal passers are just as badly off as the stokers, having to breathe the same poisonous atmosphere. Another thing which makes the life of a stoker a very unhappy one is the fact that the floor of the fireroom on which he stands is always hot. The floor, which is composed of steel plates, retains the heat, and, as a consequence, blisters the feet of the stokers, who can scarcely stand up at times, they are so much tortured in this respect.—N. Y. Journal.

How Sea Birds Quench Their Thirst.

The question if often asked: "Where do sea birds obtain fresh water to slake their thirst?" But we have never seen it satisfactorily answered until a few days ago. An old skipper, with whom we were conversing on the subject, said that he had seen these birds at sea, far from any land that could furnish them water, hovering around and under a storm cloud, clattering like bullets on a hot day at a pond, and blinking to himself "what white folks always wanted to be peasting with flowers fur, anyhow." When the time came for unearthing our treasure we found it ready to aid in our flight.—Dallas News.

Get Something Useful. A. R. Morgan says Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus advise everybody during the hard times to buy useful presents and that a shoe store is the place to get some of them. He has a fine stock of boots, shoes, slippers, overshoes, German sox, rubbers and moccasins. His assortment of gentlemen's embroidered and goat slippers is the finest he has ever had. Prices are down to meet the hard times. They range from $1 upwards. He also has felt shoes and slippers for those who wish solid comfort. For ladies Mr. Morgan can show a number of fancy styles in black, russet and white, besides felt and leather sox shoes and slippers. His stock looks as though everybody might be made happy and the feet of the entire city be comfortably encased. First Official Visit. Rev. J. C. Whalen, presiding elder of this district, paid his first official visit to the Methodist church here yesterday. In the evening at 7:30 o'clock he preached an excellent sermon to a good sized congregation and afterward presided at the regular quarterly conference of the officers and trustees of the church. Reports were presented by the various committees and the business standing was found in good condition.

CITY NEWS IN BRIEF. There was no sitting of the circuit court yesterday. Alfred C. Lane of Houghton, was a Queen City guest yesterday. Mr. J. P. Trempe, of Sault Ste. Marie, is visiting his mother in this city. Bart McNamara, formerly foreman on the ore docks here, but now with Manager Phibbin at West Duluth, is visiting friends in the city. The Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's church will begin a bazaar of fancy articles lasting all tomorrow in the store lately occupied as Brown's pharmacy, in the Harlow block. Died, Wednesday morning Dec. 13, Mrs. Martina Specker, wife of Bauhard Specker of Chocoyah township, aged fifty-two years. Services will be held at the Catholic church at 10 o'clock this morning followed by burial. The harbor is now covered with a thin coating of ice and a few long streaks extend out into the bay. It will take Jack Frost some time, however, to seal the mercury at the present mark, to seal Iron bay effectually. Yesterday was the anniversary of Charles Limbat's birth and last evening a large number of his friends surprised him at his home, corner Bluff and Fifth streets, and spent an evening of mirth and feasting. The Gillett fleet, which left here some weeks ago, is reported as having reached in safety its destination, Port Huron. The dispatch gave no particulars of the trip but it is presumed that nothing of an unusual nature occurred to hinder its passage. The Girl's Guild of St. Paul's church gave a very pleasant entertainment at St. Margaret's chapel, South Marquette last evening. The cozy chapel was comfortably filled by an audience that listened with pleasure to a well arranged program of literary and musical selections and afterward partook of dainty refreshments. Have you seen those windows of S. Kaufman & Son's. They were the brightest and most attractive of all the displays in Front street last night. A great deal of care and time was spent in their dressing and if they do not serve to materially increase the sale of ties, collars, cuffs, handkerchiefs, etc. It will simply be because the gazer is "busted."

KEEP STILL. If any man should come to me, An' ask me for advice To keep 'im out o' trouble, jest A few words would suffice; I'd tell 'im: "Get mad, if you like, As often as you will; But when ye're mad just close yer mouth An' keep 'im shut; Keep still." Good many times or man gits sour An' comes around your way, An' says some aggravatin' things He hadn't oughter say, An' riles ye up tremendously, An' keeps on talking till Ye'd like ter give 'im good's he sends, But don't ye-jest Keep still. Don't talk much 'bout theology; If er man explains tew you, You'll never git ter Heaven unless, Like him, you believe 'at do; Don't tell 'im what ye think until You've climbed the Heavenly hill; Then tell 'im-if ye find 'im there-- An' ye don't Keep still. Or then, again, perhaps yer wife Takes 'im in her head, Ter say some things about ye That you wish she'd leave unsaid; An' mentions some two hundred ways Ye don't just fill the bill; Keep cool; perhaps th' woman's right; At any rate Keep still. There may be times-of course there are, Jest use yer common sense-- When man should use his vocal powers Regards of expense; But after all, it's safe ter say, Less strife this world would fill If folks would at the proper time Jest think more and Keep still. -Boston Globe.

THE FATE OF A FLIRT. Her Unprincipled Actions Brought a Deserved Reward. The delicious fragrance of hot-house flowers floated through the half-lighted parlors like reminiscences of the "sweet south," although the matter-of-fact manner stolidly persisted in pointing out December as the month, and the thermometer without stood uncomfortably near zero. But the marble vases on either side of the fireplace were filled with roses and heliotrope, from the tropic warmth of conservatories, and a single dazzling japonica gleamed, like a carved pearl, among the jetty folds of Ella Wardlaw's hair, as she stood smiling, listening to the regretful adieu of him whom the world called her lover. "Good-by, Ella; I shall come again very soon." Miss Wardlaw's heart throbbed high. Charles Forrest had never before called her "Ella," and she felt triumphantly conscious that her proud beauty and her seductive notes had very nearly brought him to the "proposing point." One or two more such vigorous sieges, and the fortress would be her own. She sank, yawning, on a sofa, as the door closed upon her lover, and clasped her white hands carelessly over her head. "Mrs. Charles Forrest," she repeated to herself--"that doesn't sound so very badly, does it? particularly as the afore-said Mrs. Charles Forrest will step into a brown-stone palace, a carriage and a perfect caracant of family diamonds! Yes, I believe he is safely entrapped, and if I play my cards as well as I can, the matter will be settled within three days! Weigh! this husband-hunting is a wearisome business, after all; and rather hazardous, unless one is very skillful. That reminds me," she added, starting suddenly up, and throwing off her soft languor as one might lay aside a useless garment; "I must write to Ralph Thornby to-night; if the loving-strictian wretch should fulfill his hinted intimation of coming to see me, it might possibly be awkward." It was nearly one, and the fire had burned very low before Ella finished the carefully-worded note and sealed it with a fairy-like device of entangled initials in pink wax. The beautiful velvet-cheeked coquette, with her drooping eyelids and voice attuned to the sweetest and softest key--one would not have thought, as she placed that letter on the marble mantel, that she knew its contents were meant to break the heart of a noble and true souled man. When Charles Forrest descended the broad stone steps of the Wardlaw mansion and walked along the lamp-lighted street he felt dizzy and happy. The siren's spell was on him--and yet some warning, watchful pulse down deep in his heart, kept beating the old, incomprehensible tune: "Beware! beware!" He passed through the noisy tumult of Broadway. A great hotel office threw a blaze of light into the street. A crowd had assembled there--the midnight mails had just arrived--and Forrest mingled with the throng to hear the fleeting rumors of war which then vexed the public mind. "Forrest! old fellow! can it be possible that this is you?" "Myself, and no other, Thornby; but I thought you were safely settled in Chicago, practicing law, instead of--" "Instead of running wild about the country, you were going to say. But I granted myself a temporary holiday to--Pshaw, I can't tell you about it here; come up to my room, and we'll have a cozy, old-fashioned chat." The delightful little impromptu supper of well-seasoned dainties, washed down by champagne, was over, and the two gentlemen were smoking, when Thornby abruptly plunged into the subject which was uppermost in his mind. "Charley, I'm in love!" "You are? My dear fellow, so am I!" "I am glad of that, because you can sympathize with me. I have come here expressly to see her, and have the day fixed for the wedding." "I haven't got quite so far as that!" said Forrest, smiling. "But, Charley, she is the loveliest creature that the sun ever shone on--an angel, a divinity!" "Hold on, Ralph--not quite the loveliest, I trust; for the lady whom I worship is alone entitled to that superlative degree of praise!" "You're in love, too, my dear boy, so I'll excuse any little symptoms of insanity," rejoined Thornby, laughing; "but really, if you could see Ella--hold on, I believe I've got her picture somewhere about me!" He searched eagerly in his pockets, while Forrest repeated the soft name over. "Ella? Why that is the name of the young lady whom I admire so much, and by Jove," he added, as Thornby unclasped a little velvet miniature case, and held it toward him, "that is the very face! You don't mean to say you are engaged to that girl?" "To be sure I am--what do you mean? Surely there is some mistake. I can show you her last letter!" He drew out a very sentimental epistle. Forrest glanced over it with bewildered eyes, and then, biting his white lip until the blood started, took from his own pocketbook a prettily worded note from Ella, which he had received that morning. "The handwriting is precisely similar. Ralph, we are the dupes of an artful, unprincipled woman. This same Ella Wardlaw, while she is corresponding with you in this impassioned strain, is doing her best to lure me on to a proposal!" "It cannot be," gasped Ralph, feeling as if he were in a dream. "But I know it to be so! Heavens! what a narrow escape I have had! And you, also, Thornby, should rejoice at your escape from the wiles of a false-hearted coquette!" Still Ralph Thornby repeated, between his clenched teeth: "I will not believe it--Ella is truth itself." "Shall we put it to the test?" asked Forrest, rather indignantly. "Do what you please, I will stake my life on her single-mindedness!" Thornby took out pencil and dashed off a hurried proposal in form. "There--I will send this to-morrow morning, with a request for an immediate answer. When that answer comes, will you believe its testimony?" Thornby nodded; but the hand which lay upon Charles Forrest's was cold as marble. "Good night, then, my poor fellow," said Forrest, as he rose to take leave. "I am sorry for you from the very bottom of my heart, for you feel this more deeply than I can do!" But Thornby did not answer--he was gazing absently into the fire. Head and heart both ached sadly that night; but the weariness of travel was nothing to the sick sensation of distrust and apprehension that had taken possession of his mind. Therefore, it happened that he was still lounging over his almost unstarted breakfast when Charles Forrest was announced by a waiter. "Well," was his greeting. Forrest replied: "I have dispatched my missive and here is the answer. See, the seal is yet unbroken--we will peruse it together." It was a skillfully written note of glad acceptance. Ella wrote that "she had long loved Mr. Forrest--that her greatest happiness through life would be to secure his contentment," with a variety of charming little additions, such as, yesterday, would have filled Charles Forrest's heart with rapture. Now, they were false, idle rhapsodies. "Are you convinced?" was Forrest's simple question, as the letter dropped from his companion's trembling hand. "I am. It has been a pleasant dream; but I am effectually aroused at last. Charley, I have been a fool--a dupe!" "And so have I, Ralph; just give me that enthusiastic love letter you showed me last night." "What for?" Charles made no reply; but he took the letter from Thornby's unresisting hand, and folding it with the note of acceptance he had just received, wrote one pencil line on the margin: "The compliments of Messrs. Thornby and Forrest," and inclosed both in one envelope, directed to Miss Wardlaw. Ella Wardlaw was practicing a difficult Italian sonata as the evening notes was handed her. She tore it hurriedly open, and gazed with wide-open, bewildering eyes upon the inclosures. The next instant they fell from her nerveless fingers. Years have passed since then. Ralph Thornby is married; Charles Forrest has a blooming wife, and two rosy little girls; but Ella Wardlaw is a hopeless old maid, with not the faintest chance of a husband.--N. Y. News.

As the Yankee Pronounced It. Canning in the use of language to give false impression is a Yankee trick celebrated in song and story. Many instances of its use come to light in the testimony given in court. An illustration of such dishonest craftiness is related by a Maine gentleman. A man came to him wanting him to buy a share in a country lottery in which the principal prize was a horse. "I'll take one," he said, "if you'll warrant me I shall draw the horse." "Oh, yes," said the seller, glibly pocketing the cash. "I'll warrant you to get the horse." The horse went in another direction, and the ticket holder, meeting the seller said, jokingly: "I thought you warranted me to draw that horse." "Oh, no," said the other, shrewdly, "I did not say warrant, but want. I said I wanted you to get the horse, and I did."--Bangor Commercial.

Held a Good Hand. I was traveling not long ago in America when I met a man who used to be corner in a town out west, who told me the following card story. Said he: "I was once sitting down to a game of cards with a Texas man, a half-breed Indian, and a fellow named Dick Jimson. The ante was five dollars, and there was no limit. There was five hundred dollars on the cloth, and when we 'showed down' the half-breed held a 'straight,' Dick Jimson held an ace and three kings, the Texas man held four aces, and--" "Good heavens!" I interrupted, "and what did you hold?" "Well," he said slowly, "being as I was the corner at the time, I held an inquest on the Texas man."--London Figaro.

"This servant you have now seems very nice and quiet." "Oh, yes; she doesn't even disturb the dust when cleaning up a room."--Inter Ocean.

THEY DON'T WANT TO SWING AN AXE FOR A LIVING.

Generous Donations for the Needy-Going to Retire from Business-Preparing a Sewer Record Book.

NOT WILLING TO CHOP PULP WOOD

It is estimated by those who are in a fair position to know that there are something like 350 idle men in Ishpeming. Mr. J. C. Fowle of Marquette, who has a large pulp wood contract, with camps at Clowery, about seven miles west of here on the line of the Chicago & Northwestern road, has been endeavoring for several days past to get a number of men to do chopping. Thus far he has been unsuccessful in finding many who care to hire as choppers. In referring to the matter last week Mr. Fowle addressed the editor of The Iron Ore as follows:

I notice a great deal said in the papers about being out of work, etc. I have plenty of work all the time for men and at the present time can furnish forty choppers places at Clowery, on the C. & N. W. R.R., and will pay them cash for what they earn every month. I will very soon have places for 100 more. I also have large contracts to let to jobbers with teams and can furnish work for any number of men.

Realizing that this was an opportunity to assist the idle men of the town a gentleman who has the welfare of the city and its people at heart engaged a man to call upon the unemployed men living in a certain part of the city and inform them of this opportunity to secure employment. Meanwhile arrangements had been made with Mr. Fowle to hold places for all desiring work. The man in question traveled two days calling on every idle man in the neighborhood, in which he succeeded in finding only twelve who would accept the work.

These agreed to go to Clowery yesterday morning and they all went down to the depot, but just before the train pulled out they changed their minds and went home again. They gave as an excuse for so doing that they would send two of their number to examine the work before they would engage in it.

This was a great surprise to the man who went to so much trouble to find work for these men. He realized that many of them are in need of employment, as they have been known to receive aid from the county. The wages offered by Mr. Fowle are fair, in fact they might be considered large, being eighty-five and ninety cents per cord for spruce, cut in four foot lengths. These prices are the same as were paid last winter.

There appears to be no reasonable excuse for the men not accepting this work. They are promised their pay every thirty days and with the prices offered they can earn good wages. It is presumed that their disinclination to hire out as choppers is because they are not accustomed to handling the axe, but they could easily learn.

Clothing Coming In.

Within the past few days Hon. John Jones, receiver for the city's relief committee, has been handed quite a number of articles for distribution among the needy people of the city. Articles of wearing apparel of all descriptions and sizes have been received. Shoes, hats, caps, suits, underwear, overcoats, dresses and various other articles are coming in. The ladies who have been out soliciting articles of this kind have aroused an unusual interest among those who are in a position to aid the cause. One lady yesterday sent in two large baskets of clothing, shoes, etc., that were almost as good as new, while other ladies have also sent in packages containing many useful articles.

Some of the clothing merchants are also coming to the front and have selected goods from their stocks and sent them to the committee. New suits for men and boys, new caps, etc., can be found among the merchants' donations. Mr. Jones says he can find places for all that can be collected. The members of the committee, he says, are finding many children in need of clothing. They have found a few who are unable to attend school on account of not having proper clothing.

Wants to Retire.

Nels Nelson, who conducts a meat market at 207 East Division street, is desirous of retiring from that line of trade and offers his building, shop fixtures, etc., for rent in this number of THE MINING JOURNAL. Mr. Nelson has a good stand and has been doing a fair business, but he wishes to retire for reasons best known to himself.

Completing the Records.

M. S. Hawkins is engaged these days in preparing a record book that will contain a heap of valuable information with reference to the sewer system. Junctions, man-holes, catch-basins, etc., in connection with the entire system will be plainly specified. Mr. Hawkins expects to finish this work about the first of the year, when he will begin making new district maps, profiles, etc.

THE LAST STRAW.

There Was Nothing Slow About This Young Woman.

Two Detroit women met the other morning on the street and with a common impulse they began to talk about hired help.

"Have you got a girl yet?" asked one.

"No, have you?" followed the other.

"I've had about a dozen in the last month, and they are no good. The capsheaf was laid on, though, yesterday."

"How was that?" came the eagerly curious interruption.

"Well, a very stylish girl of about thirty called at noon to see about a place. I liked her looks, though she was dressed better than I was, but I thought, as she was so particular about her clothes, she'd be nice every other way. Of course, she was haughty and proud, but lots of untidy ones were that way, so I overlooked that too, and I had practically engaged her when, what do you think she wanted?"

"Six nights off and two afternoons for matines?" suggested the other one.

"No, not that. Would you believe it? She wanted an extra room—for her maid to occupy. Now, what do you think of that?" and the other one dropped her power of thinking.—Detroit Free Press.

A CONSIGNMENT OF FISH.
Negaunee's Needy Are Generously Remembered by a Charitable Chicago House,
WHOSE LIBERAL DONATION WILL REACH HERE TODAY.

Verdict of Coroner's Jury in the Westenberg Case—Effective Work of Benevolent Ladies.

A GENEROUS DONATION.
Mayor Anot ny yesterday received a letter from Benjamin T. Hosking & Bros., who are fish dealers in Chicago, stating that they had shipped him 5,000 pounds of fish, put up in eight and sixteen pound packages, for distribution among the poor of Negaunee.
At the time the above firm wrote Mayor Anthony (when the lying report regarding the destitution in this city and Ishpeming was sent from here to the Chicago papers by some unknown correspondent) he replied that neither the city of Negaunee nor the county of Marquette were asking outside aid for the maintenance of their poor, but that the donation would be thankfully received, nevertheless.
The fish has been shipped via the Chicago & Northwestern road and is expected here today. As soon as it arrives Mayor Anthony, City Attorney Adams and Recorder McDonald will take steps to have it properly distributed. The firm did not state the quality of the fish, but that makes no difference, as any variety, either salt or fresh, will be acceptable. That amount of food properly distributed will relieve considerable distress in families where it is known to exist. THE MIN-ING JOURNAL expresses the thanks of Mayor Anthony and the citizens generally for the generous donation of the Messrs. Hosking Bros.

It Was Accidental.
The coroner's jury in the case of Eric Westenberg, who came to his death by being caught under falling ground at the Blue mine Monday, met at Justice Verran's office yesterday morning. Mike Cox, shift boss at the mine, was the first witness sworn. He testified that Westenberg had been notified to come to surface at noon and that he, as well as three or four others, had told him it was time to go up.
Westenberg answered the signal but did not obey it. The ground and timbers in the stope where the victim of the accident was working were safe and could have been taken down without injury to anyone had someone been there to assist in the work.
Fred Leach and Frank Lenchak, partners of the deceased, testified that they had also notified Westenberg when quitting time arrived but that he kept on working. They warned him to not attempt taking down the lagging until they returned from surface, as they wanted to blast before the work was done. The remaining testimony was in accordance with what has already appeared in THE MINING JOURNAL.
At the conclusion of the testimony the jury found as its verdict "that Eric Westenberg was accidentally killed at the Blue mine on the 11th day of December, 1893, and that according to the testimony given by the company, its officers, and all others concerned, are exonerated from all blame."
Mine Inspector James H. Rough, who made an examination of the stope after the accident occurred, was unable to be present at the hearing on account of being called up the road on business, but fully explained the condition of affairs to the coroner and the jury before leaving yesterday morning.

The Ladies Are Busy
The ladies of the different aid societies of the city are doing considerable in the way of helping the poor. Yesterday afternoon the members of the Ladies' Aid society of St. Paul's church met at the residence of Mrs. Mary Maas, where they engaged in sewing and mending garments of various kinds that have been donated. These will be placed in the hands of a committee and distributed among poor families needing them.
The ladies of the Negaunee Chapter of the Eastern Star, who recently raised something like $100 at their charity party, assemble quite frequently at the home of Mrs. Alex Maitland, where they spend many hours preparing wearing apparel for destitute families. They have a committee which makes frequent calls among the poor to ascertain what garments are needed. This committee also distributes garments as fast as they are procured and got in readiness for use. The ladies are doing much good and are taking special care to help only those who cannot help themselves.

Injured Her Hand.
Mrs. William McVicar received a very painful injury Wednesday. While carrying a pair of scissors in her hand she accidentally fell, and one of the blades ran into the center of her hand and broke off, tearing the flesh badly.

LOCAL LAOAGICS.
Sheriff Broad was up from Marquette yesterday.
F. E. Ebeling of Green Bay was in the city yesterday.
Mrs. A. Broad is recovering from a severe attack of the grip.
A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs.
Andrew Halsted yesterday.
Mrs. J. H. Cox will have a doll exhibit at her store today and tomorrow.
There are quite a number of Negaunee people sick with pneumonia at present.

The Scandinavian Aid society will elect officers for the ensuing term at its regular meeting next Tuesday evening.
The pumps at the Prince of Wales shaft of the Buffalo mines will be started in a day or two for the purpose of removing the surplus water.
The funeral of the late Eric Westenberg was held Wednesday afternoon and was largely attended by members of the Red Men and Scandinavian societies. Religious services were conducted at the Scandinavian church by Rev.

J. F. Borg of Ishpeming.
The Scandinavian Aid society will give a social at the A. O. U. W. Hall on New Year's night. A musical program is now in course of preparation and will be the principal feature of the event. Refreshments will be served.
None but members and invited friends will be admitted.

One of the most difficult, and at the same time interesting, questions that astronomers have to solve is that of the direction and velocity of the flight of the solar system through space. We ordinarily speak of the earth going round the sun as if that revolution were performed year after year in the same path, the sun standing still while the earth moves. But, as a matter of fact, the sun moves as well as the earth.
Our planet goes round the sun from east to west, but at the same time, the sun moves from south to north.
The earth, therefore, is really traveling, not in a beaten circle, but in a spiral line which is gradually carrying it toward certain stars in the northern sky. And of course, all the other planets also travel in spirals, going at the same time round and round the sun, and with the sun toward the north.

The simplest proof that this motion of the solar system really exists is the fact that in that part of the sky toward which we are going the stars are observed to be slowly moving apart while in the opposite part of the heavens they are drawing together. A little reflection shows that this is a necessary result of such a motion of the solar system as we have described.
But now comes the difficulty. On account of the immense distance of the stars, the apparent motions exhibited by them as a result of our varying distance from them are exceedingly slight; far too slight to be detected without the aid of the most exquisite instruments, applied with an accuracy and precision that only great skill and long practice can give.

Then, too, each star has an actual motion of its own—one in one direction and another in another—for, like ourselves, they are all journeying through space, without by any means keeping step to the music. The observer must consequently, in the first place measure motions that are almost beyond the reach of measurement, and in the second place distinguish the real movements of the individual stars from their apparent movements due to the actual motion of the earth.

Yet difficult as this task is, it has been attempted over and over again, and astronomers are still working at
it. There are two things that they wish particularly to learn: First, in exactly what direction we are thus journeying through space, and second, just how fast we are going. The latest results obtained indicate that the point in the sky toward which we are moving lies in the eastern part of the constellation Hercules, not far from the very brilliant star Vega, which in the United States is seen almost directly overhead on summer evenings.

The velocity of our flight has recently been deduced anew from Prof. Vogel's spectroscopic observations at Potsdam, and appears to be between two and three hundred million miles a year, or six to ten miles a second. Some previous estimates have made it considerably greater, but Prof. Vogel thinks that this is the most satisfactory determination that has yet been made.
Two hundred million miles in a year;
fourteen thousand million miles in a good!—Youth's Companion.

A Touching Ceremony.
A very touching ceremony recently took place at Battilly, on the Franco-German frontier. A German contin-gent came to reclaim a handful of the dead of the Prussian guard, who fell in the war of 1870. Their dead were delivered up to them, and were carried with every mark of respect from the representatives of both armies to a monument on the German side, within which they are to find their final rest.
The French troops formed in hollow square, while German and French chaplains delivered orations on the heroism of victors and of vanquished. The troops presented arms, and there came a moment of the deepest significance when the German soldiers stood facing the French soldiers in the salute, and the German and the French generals in advance stood looking right into each other's eyes. They had not seen each other so close with weapons in their hands since they parted from the death-grip which cost France her provinces. This time, of course, they met and they parted as friends, yet not without a grim suggestion of the possibility of their future meeting in the old character.—

ERUPTIONS OF THE SKIN CURED.
Ed Venney, Brockville, Ontario, Canada,
says:
"I have used Brandreth's pills for the past fifteen years and think them the best cathartic and an-bilious remedy known.
For some five years I suffered with an eruption of the skin that gave me great pain and annoyance. I tried different blood remedies but, although gaining strength, the itching was unrelieved. I finally concluded to take a thorough course of Brandreth's pills. I took six each night for four nights, then five, four, three, two, lessening each time by one, and then for one month took one every night, with the happy result that now my skin is perfectly clear and has been so ever since."

TRAINED FLEAS.
Chariot racing, Ballet Dancing and Tightrope Walking Among the Fleas.
A correspondent sends the following from Dantzic:
There was a fair going on outside the gates of this most picturesque city.
Wandering among the booths, our curiosity was aroused by one which bore the following inscription: "Pariser Floh Theater." The theater was about the size of an ordinary tambourine, which instrument it greatly resembled. We looked with interest at certain cardboard boxes which stood beside the theater. One of these was open and showed a number of tiny vehicles, carriages, bicycles, engines, Roman chariots, all as minute as possible. The other boxes, with folds, contained the actors themselves. The entertaining manager, a stout lady in a cotton dress, ing-room, placed herself opposite at the table and prefaced the entertainment with a short but interesting address. "The ordinary domestic flea," she began, "is a creature of considerable intelligence and capable of a high degree of intellectual cultivation. We have no less than three hundred in this establishment. They are not hungry," she added hastily, in answer to some slight expression of anxiety that doubtless portrayed itself on our countenances. "I engaged a man to come every day and feed them."
He bares his arm, the three hundred are placed thereon and they suck until they are satisfied. Our immediate apprehension thus allayed, the lady proceeded to explain that the first process in the great work of taming and educating a flea was to fasten an invisible gold thread around its neck, by means of which it could be lifted up at pleasure or harnessed to any of the vehicles displayed in the box before us. A well-nurtured specimen will often live to the age of eight years, and with evident pride she remarked: "We have several among our troop who are already six years old," and so saying she handed us a powerful microscope and gratified us by the sight of one of these venerable fleas (magnified to the size of a weep) kicking and plunging violently, in novice impeded by the weight of its golden collar. The entertainment began with a chariot race by fleas of various nations. The Russian was attached to its native drosky, the Siberian to a sledge, England, France and Germany had each their representatives, the former harnessed, I think, to a common London omnibus.
Each competitor was supposed to be able to draw a body of six times its own weight. The stage was slightly tilted, however, in order to assist the runners.
Next we were treated to a ballet as danced by some really superior artists.
The lady opened one of the cardboard boxes and extracted thence with a delicate pair of pincers a dozen of dancing fleas, each elegantly attired in—or rather, I should perhaps say, covered by—a petticoat of tissue paper, red, blue, green, yellow, all the colors of the rainbow. Each dancer was announced by name as she entered upon the scene. Meess Elizabeth, Fraulein Anna, Mamzelle Harbe and others, and each and all, encouraged by the voice of their directress, performed the most astounding evolutions, whirling and hopping, skipping, leaping wildly into the air in a way that was comical to behold. It was as if the minutest of ballet girls had been cut in two at the waist, the lower half performing minus the head and shoulders, or like a Sabbatical dance of fairy lamp shades bewitched.
Now and again, after some unusually prodigious leap, an artist would be upset. Then, beneath the gay, voluminous skirt, the struggling insect was for a moment visible, quickly replaced on its legs, however, by the watchful care of its mistress.
Now came act the third, when the interest was supposed to culminate, and with much verbal flourish of trumpets a female rope-dancer was produced, second only in renown to the famous Blondin himself. The young lady's name was Eliza. She lived in a nest of cotton-wool with one other companion, who was probably in delicate health,
as she was not called upon to perform.
Eliza not only danced on a rope, but twice traversed an imaginary unfathomable abyss on a nearly invisible wire suspended between two pins.—Pall

How Dime Novels are Made.
One of the most interesting things about dime novels and summer literature is the way they are made. There is an establishment in New York which prints 5,000 novels an hour. They have a machine consisting of two cylinders, on each of which 144 pages may be screwed, and as the long strip of paper goes through first one side is printed and then the other, making it possible to print 288 pages at every revolution. The strip of paper, after being carried over rollers which dry the ink, is cut, folded and brought together in the shape of a small volume, with the edges all trimmed. Every time the great cylinder goes around a novel is printed, folded and trimmed, and 5,000 of these are turned out every hour, while, if it were necessary, 7,000 or 8,000 might be the quota. The covering does not take long, fifty being the average for a minute. The paper costs nearly five times as much as the printing and mounts as high as two cents a novel. The whole cost for the mechanical construction of these books is not more than three cents a piece.
The most laborious part is in the writing and reading of them.

—More silver and gold are used in the industrial arts in the United States than in any other country. Our annual consumption of gold for this purpose amounts to over $16,000,000, and of silver to over $7,000,000. Germany is the next greatest consumer of the precious metals for manufacturing purposes, and each year works up about $12,000,- 000 worth of gold and about $6,000,000 worth of silver. France uses about $8,000,000 worth of gold and $4,000,000 worth of silver.

PATENTS!
NOTICE TO INVENTORS.
There was never a time in the history of our country when the demand for inventions and improvements in the arts and sciences generally was so great as now. The convenience of mankind in the factory and workshop, the household, on the farm and in official life, require continual accessions to the appliances and implements of each in order to save labor, time and expense. The political change in the administration of government does not affect the progress of the American inventor, who being on the alert, and ready to perceive existing deficiencies, does not permit the existing deficiencies to deter him from the affairs of government to deter him from quickly conceiving the remedy to overcome the existing deficiencies. Two great care can not be exercised in choosing a competent and skillful attorney to prepare and proceed with an application for patent. Valuable interest has been lost and destroyed in innumerable instances by the employment of incompetent counsel, and especially is this advice applicable to those who adopt the "No patent, no pay" system. Inventors who entrust their business to this class of attorneys do so at imminent risk, as the breadth and strength of the patent is never considered in view of a quick endeavor to obtain allowance and obtain the fee therefor. THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY,

Strictly Pure
White Lead
White Lead is best; properly applied it will not scale, chip, chalk, or rub off; it firmly adheres to the wood and forms a permanent base for repainting.
Paints which peel or scale have to be satisfactory repainting can be done.

white lead made by the "Old Dutch" process of slow corrosion possesses qualities that cannot be obtained by any other method of manufacture. This process consumes four to six months time, and produces the brands that have given White Lead its character as the standard paint.

OUR WINTER IS BEST.

Plenty of Snow, Plenty of Cold and Plenty of Wholesome Sport.

FISH TUGS ARE ALL LAID UP EXCEPT THE THEORA.

Police Objected to Their Brand of Music—Street Scrap Nipped in the Bud.

WE KNOW WHAT IS COMING.

The way snow has fallen here since it began in good earnest has somewhat got the start of those who have been trying to keep their walks passable. As fast as the beautiful came down a snow shovel caught it and shied it into the street until some of the streets, especially Front, displayed a mountainous range of snow banks down both sides. Yesterday teams and gangs of men were busy leveling and drawing away these ridges and lumps and succeeded in making a much neater appearance.

Although considerable snow has fallen here this winter that has been the worst feature. There have been very few real cold days and many pleasant ones. In fact, if the tales of travelers from lower Michigan and Chicago may be credited, those sections have been experiencing a degree of cold, or at least have been affected by it as dwellers in the upper peninsula seldom are. It would not be a difficult matter to find a greater cold and a more disagreeable climate than that with which the Queen City is blessed. One thing about winters up here is, they may be prepared for, which cannot well be said of those some distance farther south.

Up here one does not require furs one day and a linen duster the next. We do not take a cutter ride Sunday and drive with a buggy through four inches of mud Monday and over ground frozen as rough as cobble stones Tuesday. When winter comes we get ready for it and it does not disappoint us. We know it will be just so cold and last just about so long and will then be followed by the most delightful spring, summer and autumn on this continent. It would do the heart of any true lover of beauty—whether frozen or melted—good to watch the dash of sleighs, of all grades from the one horse delivery to the handsome tandem or tally ho on runners; to join the merry throng of snowshoers gay with their blankets and toques or laugh with the youngsters as they coast like the wind down the steep hills.

If those who have an idea that the people of the upper peninsula load themselves with furs to keep out the cold and hibernate to prevent dissolution from weariness would just come up here they would get their optics so widely opened that their eye brows would become bangs.

Fishing Season Over.

The fish tugs Ethel J. and Marquette are laid up for the winter having made their last trip and brought in the last gangs of nets yesterday. The Theora has one trip to make yet. She purposed doing this yesterday when her haws began leaking and she had to hold over for repairs. She has some nets yet out which makes this trip necessary. It would be some time yet before the ice in the bay and harbor gets thick enough to prevent the tugs running but the catch of fish is so light at present as to make longer fishing unprofitable.

The season has not been a very prosperous one in this line. Not only has there appeared a decided decrease in the number of fish but so many tugs have now engaged in this once profitable industry as to divide the light catch until it has hardly paid expenses. Without any good reason but exhibiting a cheering hopefulness the fishermen look for much better returns from their arduous labors next season.

Altogether Too Musical.

Roger Maher got a fair-sized load on Tuesday night and proceeded to paint a broad band of carmine along both sides of Superior street. During this process of alcoholic decoration he indulged in what he fondly thought was a very fetching brand of solo work but unfortunately the police eleven blocks away did not agree with him and placed him down below the hose house where for a time he continued to fill the air with snatches of rare operatic gems and peculiar ballads.

Maher had sorely been suppressed when John Morinville, who was also on a toot, tuned his horn and rent the calm, midnight stillness with sounds most weird. He was also gathered in, as he refused to go home, and both men were brought before Justice Meads for examination. Each offender pleaded guilty but told the court they had no money to pay a fine and if they were sent to jail their families would be in want. Under the circumstances as each promised faithfully he would fight shy of the flowing bowl in future, the justice released them under suspended sentence.

These men simply repeated a very common mistake. They got drunk first, perhaps spending all their means in the process, and only remembered their families when jail stared them in the face. If they were out of work they were not likely to find a jag the doorway to a situation and if they were not, getting drunk would prove a poor way to hold their job. In these times of scarce food and clothing a glass of whiskey as a beverage becomes a senseless luxury.

They Had a Difference.

Two young men who have been cherishing a sort of family grievance, until it has festered and required pontificating, met near the corner of Front in Washington street about 6 o'clock last night. The clock started to strike six when they spied each other and before the last stroke of the hour had sounded they had got so tangled up that by-standers had to pry them apart with an axe handle and a snow shovel. They did not finish their scrap and, of course, will watch an opportunity to do so before either of them will feel real well. Yet they would show splendid wisdom and rare judgment if they would arrange matters so that the meeting may take place out in the woods. The police have such queer, old fashioned ideas about persons fighting in the streets and if the boys got into court the whole story as to the cause of enmity might be made public and both would, doubtless, find this unpleasant.

City Band Offers Service.

The committee of arrangements from Morse Hose company is meeting with considerable success in the preliminary work for the charity ball to be given Jan. 25. Yesterday the Marquette City band donated its services and will furnish the necessary music. Several other desirable features are in prospect under equally as satisfactory conditions.

It has not yet been decided where the ball will be held. There are not many places in the city sufficiently large for such an entertainment and it is hoped the owners of these when approached by the committee will enter into the spirit of such a commendable undertaking and follow the example so generously set by the Hose company and the band. At least if they cannot afford to donate the use of their halls—that is without heating or lighting, just the bare hall—they will surely make the rental as near hard pan figures as possible. The Casino has been suggested as the most available place and undoubtedly Mr. Helmer will hasten to do all he can to help the good work along by dealing handsomely with the boys when they call. It is understood they would furnish both heat and light, really the only expense about the hall.

Holzhay's Life the Text.

About two weeks ago the Detroit Evening News published a very remarkable article entitled, "A Mad Study." Holzhay's analysis of his own mind now for the first time given to the world, not to be printed until he became insane. His whole life a struggle to get away from self, finding vent in deeds of great violence. Holzhay's charge of gross injustice at the trial, and other ideas on the subject of penology. Punishment only made him the more insane. A most remarkable treatise by a remarkable man."

Under the above heading appeared over three closely printed columns of Holzhay's story. In this story he tells how physical causes shattered his mind; how he became to be the abject slave of impulses, so that he could not get away from self; how he lived like a wild beast, and how a shattered nervous system could only be relieved and stimulated by a feeling of danger. He also discusses the combined influences of insomnia, and acute melancholia, multiplied by enforced physical and mental inactivity. He also discusses the "philosophy of starvation," and describes his feeling toward those he has wronged.

This article has excited a considerable discussion throughout the public press, particularly as it relates to the question of moral responsibility. At the request of some of our citizens, Rev. Joseph Frazer, pastor of the M. E. church of this city, has promised to deliver a sermon Sunday evening, Dec. 17, in which he will discuss some of the questions suggested by Holzhay's article, and will present for consideration the lessons drawn from Holzhay's life history.

Doing Good Work.

Because the street work of last summer is now covered with two feet of snow Commissioner French is not sitting by the fire toasting his feet but doing his best to see that sidewalks are kept clear and streets level. It is safe to say that within six hours after the heaviest snow fall of this season a person might have walked on any sidewalk in the main part of the city and not stepped in snow over his rubbers. The people of Marquette have not much reason to complain of the manner in which Mr. French contributes his share to their comfort.

G. A. R. Annual Ball.

Members of the Grand Army of the Republic will give their annual ball for the benefit of the old soldiers in Armory Hall next Thursday evening, Dec. 21. Good music will be provided and a good substantial G. A. R. spread served in the Armory dining hall for which twenty-five cents a plate will be charged. Tickets will be $1.

F. H. Vandenberg will make his usual delivery of fresh creamery butter today. In spite of hard times this noted butter cart comes in regularly every week with an increased quantity and elegant quality of goods. Why is this? Simply because he has an article the people want and they have found it will cost less to have a reliable dairyman supply them with a good article fresh every week than to buy elsewhere. (12-15-24)

There is no one instrument, unless, indeed, it be a large pipe organ, capable of the variety of effects that are obtainable on the Aeolian. Unlike the pipe organ, however, the Aeolian is adapted to all classes of music; overtures and symphonies can be rendered on it with all the softness and delicacy of the flute and violin and cello and all the snap and brilliancy of the piano. See and hear them at Conklin's.
