INSURGENTS ARE GAINING.

London Times Correspondent's Review of Course of Events in Brazil.

THINKS THAT THE MONARCHY MAY BE RESTORED.

Admiral da Gama's Manifesto Has Strengthened the Revolution and Monarchist Sentiment is Growing.

TIRED OF A BOGUS REPUBLIC.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—[Copyrighted by the Associated Press.]—The Times tomorrow will publish a dispatch from Rio de Janeiro dated Dec. 9, via Montevideo Dec. 15, saying:

The manifesto of Admiral da Gama (the insurgent admiral in command at Rio de Janeiro during the absence of Admiral de Mello) has produced excitement and greatly increases the popularity of the revolution. The messenger who has returned from Sao Paulo and Santos states that the Monarchist element predominates everywhere and the people are prepared to follow the lead of Admiral da Gama.

Fernando Lobo, minister of justice and of the interior, resigned yesterday in consequence of a divergence of opinion with President Peixoto concerning present events. This shows that the position of President Peixoto is weakening.

I have seen a copy of two official dispatches sent by the war minister to Rio Grande do Sul to use every effort to protect the retreat of General Oscaal and to retrieve the great disaster resulting from the defeat of General Isidoro on Nov. 23.

Several officers during the past week have been arrested on suspicion of complicity in the revolution.

The government has suspended the Rio News, an English newspaper whose editor is an American.

During the past week there has been some slight skirmishing in the vicinity of Nietheroy and Armacao with small casualties and no result.

The artillery fire of the forts upon Fort Villegaignon continues daily without apparent alteration of the situation.

On Wednesday night I visited Fort Villegaignon in an insurgent launch. When we passed between Cobras Island and Fort Villegaignon the troops lining the shore front opened a heavy rifle fire and Fort Villegaignon replied briskly, killing and wounding a hundred soldiers. I found the fortress to be much damaged. All the buildings are in ruins and the masonry of the center towards the mouth of the harbor is much cut away in consequence of the shelling it has received from the government forts. The guns were working well but were greatly exposed and three of them were dismounted. Two hundred officers and men form the garrison. All were cheery and contented and confident of ultimate success. I examined the fortress thoroughly and consider that it can resist for two months longer.

On Saturday night 1,500 government troops lining the shore near the war and marine arsenals opened a heavy fire from machine guns and rifles upon Cobras Island for the purpose of covering the advance of storming parties. Cobras Island replied strongly, causing the troops to abandon the attempt after two hours' heavy firing, the government losing over a hundred men and the insurgents having only two men wounded. The firing on both sides was very wild.

The government proposes landing troops upon the island of Governador, now held by the insurgents, for the purpose of preventing supplies reaching the insurgents. The latter are prepared to resist. Tomorrow the insurgents intend keeping up a continuous fire upon the custom house and thus preventing all future business.

Yesterday the insurgents seized the steamer Parahyba, flying the Argentine flag, carrying war material and provisions and proceeding to Santos and Rio Grande do Sul. The vessel refusing to leave to the insurgents fired, killing one and wounding four men. The insurgents then boarded her.

Admiral de Mello wired on Saturday asking Admiral da Gama to send him another transport to carry troops.

Many important business houses propose closing their doors tomorrow until the end of the revolution as they consider that the present situation is too dangerous.

The British minister has notified the community that much danger exists at the present time and advising residents to leave the city. Many people consider that the time has arrived for recognition of the belligerent status of the insurgents.

TIED HIM TO HIS BED.

Robbers Ransack Stage Line Manager's Room for Bullion.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Dec. 17.—Five masked men knocked at the door of a room occupied by Frank Atherton over the Exchange National bank early this morning. In answer to a query one of the men said: "A telegram for you." Atherton opened the door and a gun was thrust in his face. The men tied him to the bed and ransacked his room, obtaining money and jewelry worth about $500. Atherton, manager of the Cripple Creek Stage line. It is thought the men believed he had considerable bullion.

HEDGEPEETH IS DESPERATE.

Train Robber Attempts to Escape from County Jail.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 17.—A desperate attempt to escape from jail was made this morning by Marion Hedgepeeth, the train robber recently sentenced to twenty-five years' imprisonment for robbing a Frisco train at Glendale, Mo. He had fled the bars of his cell door and entering the corridor he attempted to escape from a window but was captured by guards. The jail officials think Hedgepeeth's wife conveyed the tools to him.

HIS GRANDFATHER INSANE.

Important Testimony at the Trial of Murderer Prendergast.

CHICAGO, Dec. 17.—Mrs. Prendergast, mother of the prisoner, was recalled in the trial of the assassin yesterday and testified that there had been insanity in the family and that Prendergast's grandfather had been confined in a lunatic asylum.

It is announced that Henry George will testify either in person or by deposition as to the correspondence he had received from Prendergast regarding single-tax theories. This correspondence, the defense claims, gives evidence of the prisoner's insanity.

After testimony by Prendergast's brother, who considers the assassin insane, court adjourned until Monday.

TWO THUGS FELL OUT.

Dave Bohannon Has Another Killing to His Credit.

DURANT, I. T., Dec. 17.—Dave Bohannon, over whose head hangs a reward for two cold-blooded murders, has added another to his list. Yesterday afternoon four miles from the city he murdered a pal named Tom McCoy. Bohannon had been to McCoy's place to dinner, after which the men left in a wagon for town. On the way they quarreled and McCoy getting out of the wagon began shooting at his comrade. Three shots were fired before Bohannon could draw his revolver. When he did so his first shot was fatal, McCoy dying almost instantly. Bohannon went to town and after telling a friend what he had done made his escape.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Frank Baldwin Arrested for the Killing of Lorenzo Finch.

JANESVILLE, Wis., Dec. 17.—Frank Baldwin was arrested last night on a grand jury indictment charged with the murder of Lorenzo Finch of White-water. Finch was stabbed to death at a party up the river last summer. Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin were with him and said that the cutting was done by three strangers. No one else knew about the strangers and the story was always regarded with suspicion. Baldwin's arrest followed the investigation of the case by the grand jurors last week. He pleaded not guilty today and was locked up in default of $10,000 bail.

SUICIDE IN A CONVENT.

Mercedes Plows of Chicago Ends Her Life With Morphine.

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—Mercedes Plows, daughter of Mrs. Olivia Plows of this city, committed suicide at Loretto convent, Hamilton, Ont., by taking morphine. This was the fourth or fifth attempt the girl has made to end her life but on the former occasions she either took too small a dose or medical aid was secured before the drug could act.

On the night of May 4 last, together with her sister Ota, she attempted suicide at the Leland hotel. Ota died but Mercedes recovered. Mercedes was eighteen years old and was a beautiful girl.

REMEMBERED VALLEY FORGE.

Sons of Revolution Commemorate Beginning of Campaign There.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 17.—The 116th anniversary of the commencement of the encampment of the American army at Valley Forge was celebrated tonight at the fifth annual service of the Pennsylvania Sons of the Revolution in Christ church. The old church, in whose pews sat Washington, Franklin, Jefferson and their contemporaries, was crowded to the doors. The services were conducted by Rev. G. Woolsey Hodge and the sermon was delivered by Right Rev. Leighton Coleman, bishop of Delaware.

GUESTS FLED IN HASTE.

One Man Bandy Hurt in a St Joseph Hotel Fire.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Dec. 17.—The Lakeview Hotel was burned early this morning, entailing a loss of nearly $30,000. The fire started in the furnace room and gained such headway that a number of the seventy-five guests barely escaped alive and only a few of them saved their belongings. A Mr. Davis of St. Paul, electrician at the power house, fell from the third story balcony to the ground and sustained internal injuries from which he may die.

PLOT TO BREAK JAIL.

Illinois Central Train Robbers Plan a Way to Escape.

CENTRALIA, Ill., Dec. 17.—Desperate attempts have been made to break jail by Hardin, O'Dwyre and Jones, who attempted to rob the Illinois Central limited near this city Sep. 20. A letter of Hardin's appealing to a friend to aid him in escaping is in the sheriff's hands. That officer has also discovered that a cell window has been nearly filed through. A St. Louis woman is suspected of having furnished the tools with which the work was done.

CAPTAIN AT EIGHTEEN.

Merle Boy Navigates the Trafalgar Safely Into Port.

MELBOURNE, Dec. 17.—The bark Trafalgar arrived here today from Batavia after a fearful voyage lasting forty-three days. During the passage the captain, two officers and three seamen died of fever. Several other seamen were prostrated by the same disease. A youth only eighteen years of age navigated the vessel after the death of the captain and officers.

Advise Chinese to Register.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 17.—The Chinese Six Companies will issue a circular instructing all Chinese laborers to comply with the law.

TARIFF BILL GOES OVER.

It Will Not Be Discussed in the House Until Next Year.

NEW MEXICO STATEHOOD BILL MAY PASS THIS WEEK.

President Expected to Send in the Correspondence and Special Message on Hawaii This Morning.

FORECAST OF CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—It is the present intention that congress adjourn next Thursday until Jan. 4 of the new year. The tariff debate, which the Democratic leaders had hoped to enter upon before the adjournment, cannot now begin until after the recess, although the bill will be reported to the house either on Tuesday or Wednesday.

The four days before the adjournment promise to be busy ones. Tomorrow the debate over the appropriation of $200,000 for special pension examiners in the urgent deficiency bill will be continued, limited by an agreement made yesterday to one hour and a half on a side. None of the other items in the bill are subject to opposition.

After the urgent deficiency bill is disposed of the New Mexico statehood bill, which is the special order after the morning hour, will again come forward and it is expected that it will go through tomorrow afternoon or Tuesday, provided the Democratic quorum remains intact. If the Republicans filibuster and the quorum breaks the house may be dead-locked for the rest of the week as far as business after the morning hour is concerned.

The transmission of the Hawaiian correspondence bill by the president may lead to some discussion in the open house. Much, however, will depend on the nature of the correspondence and instructions given to Minister Willis and the tenor of the president's message.

On the highest authority can be stated that the president's message transmitting the correspondence will show that the administration has done all in its power by the aid of diplomacy to right the wrong done the Hawaiian people and that the situation is now one for the congress of the United States to deal with.

In other words diplomacy has failed to restore the conditions existing prior to the revolution and congress must now decide whether other means are to be employed.

The message will also remove the last doubt about a disagreement between the president and his secretary of state. It will show that Mr. Cleveland and Secretary Freshman have been in thorough accord from the first.

On Wednesday it is possible that Mr. Bailey's voluntary bankruptcy bill may come up. The abandoned and captured property bill may also figure in the week's proceedings. The morning hour each day will be consumed with matters of minor moment.

SENATE WILL TALK HAWAII.

For the third week in succession Hawaii promises to be the important subject before the senate. The president will tomorrow comply with the request of both houses of congress for copies of all the recent correspondence on the Hawaiian question and it is considered almost certain that whatsoever condition of affairs the correspondence and the message accompanying it may reveal the senate will find in it texts for numerous speeches.

The program for tomorrow in the senate includes the reception of the president's Hawaiian message and speeches by Senators Hansbrough and Dolph, the former in explanation of the bill for the extermination of the Russian thistle and the latter on the subject of tariff.

The remainder of the week will in all probability be devoted to the consideration of comparatively unimportant bills on the calendar, of which there are a large number. Many of the senate committees have been turning out work at a rapid rate during the two weeks of the session and as a consequence the calendar is much longer now than it was at the beginning of the session, notwithstanding the senate has passed a large number of bills for the time it has been in session.

The only measure of national importance upon the calendar in position to be taken up for final disposition is the federal elections bill and its consideration at this time is barred by a stipulation between the Republican and Democratic members that it shall rest where it is over the Christmas holidays.

There is a desire on the part of senators generally that the Christmas recess shall begin on Thursday of this week but the house will probably be allowed to name the day. It will not be later than Friday.

JOBS FOR MANY DEMOCRATS.

Over 1,000 Offices to Be Filled During Next Two Months.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17.—There are 442 vacancies existing among President Cleveland's postmasters caused by expirations and resignations. Four hundred and sixty-five commissions will expire during three days next week, Dec. 19, 20 and 21. For the month of December the expirations of commissions will aggregate 465. During January 350 commissions will expire. It is probable that forty new presidential offices will be created next month. There are 215 postmasters whose commissions will expire in February.

Two Hundred Men Idle.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 17.—The plant of the National Card company was destroyed by fire this morning. The loss is between $150,000 and $170,000 with insurance between $50,000 and $60,000. Two hundred men are thrown out of employment.

A "SILVER PARTY"

One does not need to be gifted with unusual prescience to be able to see that we are going to have a "silver party" as one of the results of the refusal of congress to concede anything to the demands of the advocates of free and unlimited coinage of the white metal, and its action in repealing the silver purchase act.

It bids fair, too, to become a tolerably strong organization, and if it should absorb the Populist party and draw largely from the labor organizations, as now appears likely, it will be able to show up substantial results in the congressional and state elections of next year, provided it has reasonably skillful management.

There is more silver sentiment throughout the country than most people are aware of, and as party ties do not bind the voters as firmly now as they did some years ago that sentiment, adroitly worked on, can be made to detach a very considerable element from the old parties, both of which are committed to a single-standard financial policy, and attach it to the new party which proposes to champion the cause of silver "first, last and all the time."

If such a party is organized, as proposed, it will be likely to carry several of the western states, and possibly some of those of the hitherto "solid south," in the next national election. In the silver states west the predominant desire of the people is to have silver placed on an equality with gold as a coinage metal, and with both the Democratic and Republican parties on record as opposed to this it is not difficult to see that it will be easy for the new party to gain ascendancy in these states. Several of the southern states are about as rabid on this question as are the states in which silver mining is a leading industry, and the Democrats are as likely to lose in these states as are the Republicans in those west in which fealty to Republicanism is liable to be absorbed and lost in the greater devotion of their people to the cause of silver. Which of the old parties is apt to lose most by the organization of the proposed new one is an interesting problem for the politicians to puzzle over, but that it will make inroads on both is not to be doubted.

There is no need for such a party, nor is there a permanent place for it, but that will not prevent it from making its advent in our politics if the signs now observable on the political firmament are to be relied on. There was no need for the old greenback party, nevertheless it gained considerable strength and numbered quite a number of adherents in its day. We shall continue to have such movements as the silver party proposes to promote while we have a vast number of illy informed and emotional voters, who are intellectually incapable of understanding the questions with which the government has to deal as they come up, and who are susceptible of being swayed and led astray by artful schemers for personal aggrandizement or advancement who know how to appeal to their passions and their selfishness.

NO ORE CHARTERS THIS WINTER.

The Marine Review of Cleveland finds the prospects for vessels engaged in the ore carrying trade anything but encouraging. It has this concerning the outlook for them in its last number:

There is absolutely nothing in the iron mining business to cause vessel owners to look for anything in the way of freight contracts during the winter, and leading brokers and owners in Cleveland have about made up their minds that, after a winter of idleness, another season will open with no contracts and with all vessels dependent upon the condition of stocks of ore in the spring, and whatever improvement time may bring forth in the general iron market. General Alger of Michigan, who has been interesting for the impoverished miners of his state among capitalists of New York and Cleveland in control of mines, has caused some talk of a resumption of operations through the considerations which his arguments have received from the mining companies, but there can be no general renewal of operations, as the question is purely a business one. With as much ore on Lake Erie docks as there was a year ago and no increase in the movement to furnaces, there is even less in the situation now to warrant active mining than there was a few months ago. As regards the probability of the Mesaba product shutting out more of the older mines than are already placed beyond the limit of competition, on account of heavy mining costs, there is but one question to be settled—that of the maximum proportion of this ore to be used in future operations. If it is found during the winter that the Mesaba ore can be used in the proportion that the standard Bessemer are now used, the very largest of the older mines will have to be worked on very small margins, as against the steam shovel operations on the new range.

In what it observes regarding the overstock of ore, the statements and conclusions of The Marine Review coincide with opinions heretofore expressed by THE MINING JOURNAL. In this connection it is proper to bear in mind that the question to be determined as to the output of the mines of the Mesaba range has little bearing on the situation discussed. The overstocking of the market was done without any assistance from the mines of that range, and if there should not be a pound of Mesaba ore placed on the market next season it would still be necessary for the mines of the older ranges to very considerably curtail production until the accumulated stocks are worked off. If the mines of the Mesaba range should be large producers next season, that will simply aggravate an already existing trouble, but the trouble was there before any Mesaba ore was put on the market and there is but one cure for it, namely, production regulated in some manner with reference to demand.

CONGRESSMAN BURROWS professes to feel entirely indifferent to the opinion expressed by ex-Governor Luce regarding his chances of being returned from his district next year. Burrows says Luce wrote him a letter instructing him how to vote on the bill repealing the silver purchase act, but it was so impudent that he did not choose to answer it. Luce has got the congressional bee in his battered old hat, doubtless, just as he had the senatorial bee last year, but its buzzing will not be apt to disturb anybody except the venerable granger himself very much.

THE CHAPINS, father and son, who own the fee of the mine at Iron Mountain which bears their name, have sent a check for $500 to be used in providing for the necessities of the destitute in Dickinson county, and will send $500 more later. This is so much to their credit, but inasmuch as they have drawn a revenue aggregating at least $2,000,000 from the royalty paid them by the mine within the past ten years it is to be hoped that they will see their way to doing even better when the extent of the destitution in that county is fully made known to them.

The Marquette Prairie dog still sits at the mouth of its hole and hysterically barks and chatters at the State Republican. It will feel better after recovering from its fright, unless Doc. Bell drives it into its hole again, as Mr. Fores did. It's "a amoo-in' little cuss," like Ward's kangaroo.

THE MINING JOURNAL has had no controversy with Mr. Forrest, who, by the way, will hardly thank the Lansing "organ" for mis-spelling his name, and if Dr. Bell doesn't relish its allusions to him he has its permission to resent them in any way that pleases him. This paper is prepared to back up everything it has alleged, or intimated, concerning the medicine man of the state board of corrections and charities with frigid facts.

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as ever I did, my sense of smell is partly restored, and it seems to be improving all the time. I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. Mrs. E. E. Grimes, Redrill, Perry Co., O.

16 WORLD'S FAIR PHOTOS FOR ONE DIME.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway has made an arrangement with a first-class publishing house to furnish a series of beautiful World's Fair pictures of a large size at the nominal cost to the purchaser of only ten cents for a portfolio of sixteen illustrations. Nothing so handsome in reference to the World's Fair has before been published. The series would be worth at least $12 if the pictures were not published in such large quantities and we are therefore able to furnish these works of art for only ten cents. They will make a handsome holiday gift.

Hand in your money to the nearest station ticket agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway and he will furnish the pictures and tell you more about the scheme. Geo. H. HEAFFORD, Gen'l Pass'r Agent, Chicago, Ill. (12-10-law.)

It is Strange

That people suffering from Piles will endure them for years or submit to dangerous, painful, cruel and expensive surgical operations, when all the time there is a painless, certain, lasting cure, which gives instant relief and costs but a trifle. "Enclosed please find check for your bills of May 2nd and 12th. I repeat the gratification I express before as to the convenience, economy, and the real artistic beauty the National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors have proved to me in using them. It would seem as if the old way of trying to produce the desired shade of color by mixing many colors together with much labor and guess-work must be abandoned in favor of your economical, sure and easy method. My painters wish to introduce their use in an adjoining town, and want a couple of your books as guides."

MAKING MORE IMPROVEMENTS AT THE ARMORY.

Railroad Employes Raise $200 for the Gogebic Range Sufferers—Death of Mrs. John Rasleigh.

HOUGHTON.
The Houghton Light Infantry now has forty-five members and is desirous of making the number sixty, to which end the members are hard at work. Any young man of good moral character wishing to get the best of military training now has the chance of his life to join a first-class company. It not only gives one a good military training but teaches one how to be active in case he should ever be called on to serve his country. It is an honor for any young man to belong to the National Guard. Each year he has a chance to see different parts of our great and glorious state of Michigan, besides enjoying a good outing at the state encampment without little, if any, cost to himself.

The company has recently purchased from G. N. Conklin of Marquette, through George Quirk of this city, a fine piano and will shortly begin fixing up that part of the basement now occupied by E. M. Hoar for storage purposes, as a reading, lounging and billiard room.

Everything that is in the power of the efficient officers of the company is being done to make things pleasant and profitable for the members of this company and it should be no trouble for them to find the right kind of young men to fill the required number wanted. Send or hand your name in to Captain E. F. Douglass, President Charles A. Mayworm or Secretary A. L. Hadley.

Mrs. John Rasleigh died Friday evening at the family residence in East Houghton at the age of fifty-nine years. Mrs. Rasleigh has been in poor health for some time, having had a severe attack of brain fever, but was thought to be getting over the effects. She was again taken worse and peacefully passed away. She was an old and respected resident of this city and a true Christian lady, having been a member of Grace Methodist church for many years. She leaves three sons, Edgar, Joseph and William, and a daughter, Miss Susie, to mourn her loss. The funeral services were held yesterday afternoon with interment at Forest Hill cemetery.

Invitations have been issued for the Maennerchor's Christmas tree festival to be held at Miller's Hall Monday evening, Dec. 25, at 7:30 sharp. The committee in charge are: Christof Fox, Joseph Schnitzer, Emil G. Rieve, John Seifert, Gust Liebetraun. These affairs in the past have always been most enjoyable and this will be no exception.

Captain and Mrs. Daniell of Opechee passed through Saturday on their way east.

HANCOCK.
The employes of the Mineral Range and Hancock Collieries, miners, believe, "It is better to give than to receive," started a subscription list among themselves headed by Superintendent Shields, and have collected over $200 for the destitute of the Gogebic range. The good work is still going on and they expect to raise enough cash to buy a carload of provisions to ship to the range.

The opening of the new ice rink Saturday evening was a big success. Nearly two hundred and fifty people were present. The new rink is large and well constructed and has many improvements over the old one. The dressing rooms are nearly on a level with the ice. The band stand is over the dressing rooms, out of the way of everybody and everything. The rink is well lighted throughout and the dressing rooms are neat and warm. During part of the evening a space was set apart for those wishing to dance and many grasped the opportunity. Each night the band is present dancing will be a special feature. The rink will be open every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings and every afternoon during the holidays. Private parties can rent it for any except the regular nights.

Tickets for the charity concert to be given at Germania Hall on the evening of Dec. 30 by the Maennerchor Lyra are now on sale and should be purchased by everybody whether they can attend or not. The society will present a comic opera that evening after which there will be dancing for all. Now is the time to help a good cause along and while the price of a ticket means very little to the individual it means a great deal to the many suffering ones on Gogebic county.

The remains of Mrs. Thomas Roberts arrived here Saturday noon from Wharton, O. T., and were taken to the residence of Mr. Roberts' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Roberts. The dead was but twenty-eight years of age and was well and favorably known in this city and Groverton, having resided in the latter place for a number of years. She leaves a husband to mourn her early demise, their children having passed to the great beyond during their residence in this part of the country.

A regular meeting of Quincy Lodge, 135, F. & A. M., will be held tomorrow evening for annual election of officers. A full attendance of members is desired.

SAILED INTO NO PORT.

Ships the Fates of Which Are Mysteries of the Atlantic.

Many Have Doubtless Foundered in Fields of Ice While Others Have "Limped In" After All Hope Had Been Abandoned.

Crossing the broad Atlantic, now buried under blinding mists, now tossed by driving tempests, where float vessels derelict more dangerous than the mountainous icebergs, where fire is more pitiless than on land—who shall say what tragedies are not there enacted? And when mystery shrouds the fate of those who have trusted themselves upon the treacherous waters never to return, how much more terrible the tragedy!

A stately ship steams from the harbor for a voyage across the sea. No alarm is felt when it does not reach its destination on the day it is expected. Two days or three days pass, and it has been detained by head winds and storms, the agents say. A week goes by and still no news. Then the story is that the machinery has broken down. Other vessels arrive over the same path, but bring no word of the missing ship, and anxious friends and relatives are comforted by the assurance that the vessel has drifted out of the usual course of travel while making repairs.

They are told the ship could not sink. Its strong steel sides could defy the waves. Its water-tight compartments would keep it afloat after any collision, and it could not have burned, else its iron hull would have been sighted by other vessels attracted by the glow of the flames. Another week and a month and hearts grow sick with hope deferred.

Perhaps then a bit of wreckage is found bearing the name of the doomed ship. More delay without news, and finally even the agents and owners give up hope. Then the insurance companies pay, the vessel is officially lost, and another is added to the mysteries of the deep.

There follows invariably the cruel hoax of some idiot or worse. A sealed bottle is picked up giving alleged news of the ship. Usually discrepancies in the letters themselves pronounce them bogus, but before this is discovered the feelings of those who have waited so long in vain are harrowed by a tale of storm and fire and a despairing farewell.

Fortunately, however, the mystery does not always end in a tragedy. Sometimes even after hope is abandoned the ship comes limping in with machinery disabled or perhaps under sail alone, with all on board safe. Sometimes after having drifted far out of the course it is towed in by another ship. Or, even if it is lost, the passengers are frequently rescued by some passing vessel.

From the stout steamer President, which was lost more than half a century ago, to the Naronic, the list is indeed long. The names of some of these unfortunate vessels have become historic.

The President left New York just thirty-two years ago for Liverpool, with thirty-one passengers aboard. It steamed out of sight forever. Hope, however, was not abandoned until the Britannic arrived at Boston without bringing any news of the missing vessel. There were no transatlantic cables in those days, and the news could only be brought by water.

Shortly before the Britannic sailed there was great excitement at Liverpool over the arrival of the Oriental, which resembled the President, from Egypt. The Oriental was at first supposed to be the long missing President.

In the New York Herald of Friday, May 7, 1841, appeared the following account of the fate of the President: "Its probable fate was met in the immense fields and islands of ice which we recently described as intercepting its course to the east. She could not swamp in a mere storm. It has run against an iceberg at night and gone down head foremost."

"God have mercy upon the soul of poor Capt. Roberts and all his passengers. Roberts was the first man to cross the Atlantic in a steamer, and the first to fall a victim to his honorable enterprise."

Then followed the names of the thirty-one persons comprising the passenger list.

No marine disaster before or since, probably, has been the cause of so much excitement and speculation as the mysterious fate which befell the City of Boston of the Inman line.

The City of Boston was in its day regarded as a remarkably fine specimen of naval architecture, carrying freight, mail and passengers. The vessel had been built under special survey and had received the highest classification at Lloyd's and the Liverpool Association of Underwriters. Its length of keel was 305 feet and length over all 323 feet. It was 39 feet wide and 37 feet 6 inches deep. Under the old measurements its tonnage was 2,278. It had two engines of 300 horse-power each.

The City of Boston was of iron, and its ribs and beams, and, indeed, its whole framing, were securely bound together by heavy springing plates and ties. It was divided into eight compartments by seven strong and well-secured water bulkheads, reaching from keelson to upper deck. Besides steam power the City of Boston could spread a great deal of canvas, being ship rigged.

The City of Boston left New York January 25, 1870, and cleared from Halifax three days later for Southampton and Liverpool. It had aboard, besides the crew, 112 cabin and steerage passengers. It carried a cargo of cotton, flour, beef, wheat and copper ore, weighing 800 tons and 937 tons of coal. The machinery weighed 300 tons.

Nothing was ever heard of the ship after it left Halifax. February 23 an English government steamer was dispatched from Halifax to search for the missing steamer, but without result. It was hoped up to that time that the machinery had broken down and the ship was proceeding under sail alone.

The excitement throughout this country and England over the fate of the City of Boston was intense. When in March a dispatch was received from Liverpool stating that the ship was safe the joy was boundless. The news was announced in the house of representatives, where business was immediately suspended, while the members congratulated one another on the good tidings. In this city preparations were made to fire cannon in the City Hall park and otherwise to celebrate the safe arrival of the missing vessel.

A second dispatch arrived a few hours later which put an end to the preparations for the celebration. It announced that there was no foundation for the news that the City of Boston was safe. The disappointment redoubled the anxiety felt before.

Mr. Inman three months after the ship sailed, in a letter to the board of trade of London, gave as his opinion that the City of Boston had got into a big field of floating ice, where it had probably foundered in a storm.

Bottles containing alleged news from passengers aboard the City of Boston were found yearly for half a dozen years after the disappearance of the ship. As late as 1870 it was surmised that the vessel had been blown up by dynamite, exploded by an infernal machine.

The winter and spring of 1870 was a season of terrific gales that swept the Atlantic from north to south. At the same time that the Boston was missing the Samaria, of the Cunard line, and the Ironclad Atlanta, which had been sold after the war to the president of Hayti, were also supposed to be lost.

Another steamship which, like the City of Boston, was never heard of after leaving port was the Pacific, of the Collins line. The Pacific sailed from Liverpool for this port in February, 1856. The ocean was scoured for some trace of it by steamers sent out for that purpose, among them being the Arctic, the vessel which went to the Polar seas in search of Dr. Kane.

Whether the Pacific foundered in a storm, was sunk by a collision with another vessel or by running into an iceberg or was burned was never learned.

The fate of the Erin of the National line is still fresh in the memory of all. The Erin was one of the staunchest vessels afloat at the time it started on its last voyage. It was built at Newcastles in 1864, and was of 4,500 tons. It was 415 feet long, 41 feet wide, and 35 deep. It left New York December 28, 1880, for Liverpool with a crew of 53 men under charge of Capt. Tyson. The deck cargo consisted of 528 cattle. The Erin was sighted December 31 off Cape Sable, proceeding east under a full head of steam, and that was the last seen of it. The British steamship Creole, Capt. Darling, picked up a lifeboat January 9 containing ten ash oars and bearing the name "Erin." Near the boat floated a life buoy, a steamer's bridge and an awning. The Gallia, which arrived a few days later, reported that it had passed through a great number of floating carcasses of cattle.

In spite of this hope was not abandoned. Capt. Darling of the Creole had reported that the boat which he picked up bore the name "Erin of London," when as a matter of fact the vessel was not a London ship. The fact that the Florida had lost 40 cattle was given as an explanation of the Gallia's find. News was expected for a long while from the Azores, but none came.

It was not until the Timos from Rotterdam arrived at New York, the former passing over the track of the Erin without reporting any news of the missing ship, that hope was abandoned. Three months after the Erin sailed a bottle was found containing a letter purporting to have been written by one of the dozen cattle men aboard, stating that the ship was burning and death by fire or water in the great storm which was raging at the time was a matter of a few minutes only.

The London board of trade, in its report on the loss of the Erin, stated that the vessel had probably been overloaded, but the board did not venture the opinion that it was this that led to the loss of the ship. The Erin, the board declared, had probably foundered in the heavy January gales.

Of the fortunate cases in which the human freight at least of ships long missing has been saved the most remarkable probably is that of the Danmark of the Thingvalla line. The Danmark, Capt. Knudsen, with 720 Norwegian and Swedish emigrants, left Copenhagen March 20.

So long was the vessel missing that its loss seemed assured.

The City of Chester, of the Inman line, Capt. Bond, which arrived at Queenstown April 12, reported that in latitude 46 degrees north, longitude 37 degrees west, it had passed the abandoned Danmark. The fact, however, that the boats of the Danmark were reported missing seemed to indicate that the passengers might be safe, and the chains fastened to the bow of the abandoned steamer led shipping men to believe that it had been in tow of some other vessel.

It was not until April 23 that news was received of the Danmark's passengers, all of whom were safe. The vessel had broken its shaft in a storm April 4, and lay helpless in heavy seas. Fortunately the Missouri, from London, bound for Philadelphia and Baltimore, fell in with the almost sinking ship. The Missouri took the Danmark in tow, but on the following day, as the disabled ship seemed likely to sink at any moment, it was cast adrift. The Missouri, previous to this, had taken aboard but twenty of the Danmark's passengers, but now it jetted its cargo and took aboard all. Most of them were left on the Azores, but the Missouri brought 370 to Philadelphia. Engineer Knas, of the Danmark, was killed when the shaft broke.

The list of marine accidents and mysteries might be multiplied indefinitely. It is to be noted, however, that the adoption of international codes of signals and regulations and the advances in the art of shipbuilding are rendering the percentage of accidents smaller each year.—Chicago Tribune.

FATAL FREIGHT WRECK.

Three Men Killed, One Fatally Hurt and Three Slightly Injured.

THREE TAILORS STOLE A RIDE ON THE TRAIN.

One Was Killed and the Other Two Were Hurt—Much Livestock Also Slaughtered.

TRACK WAS DEFECTIVE.

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 17.—Section 2 of No. 14 freight train of the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern railroad northbound was wrecked at 10 o'clock this morning and fourteen cars, ten stock cars and four loaded coal flats with the engine were precipitated down a steep embankment between West Point and Muldraugh, Ky., twenty-four miles south of Louisville. Three lives were lost, one man probably fatally injured, three others slightly hurt, and about one hundred cattle and as many hogs were slaughtered. The dead and injured are:

THOMAS KEEGAN, engineer, Louisville. JACK DOWNS, fireman, Louisville. STEPHEN JOYCE, a tailor whose home is in Newark, O. ALBERT CHURCH, rear brakeman; skull fractured, will probably die. JACK HODGES, head brakeman; head injured.

WILLIAM KELLY, Boston, Mass., and CHRIS JACOBSON, Joliet, Ill., both tailors; injured about the head and bruised badly. None of the three last named were seriously hurt. The three tailors were stealing a ride. They were not tramps and had been working at Owensboro, Ky., but were out of work and money and were trying to reach this city. They were put off the train at Red Hill by brakeman Hodges but got on again as it pulled out. Joyce leaves a widow and child at Owensboro.

Engineer Keegan was conscious when taken from the wreck and lived for three hours, remaining conscious to the last. He leaves a widow and two children. Joyce and Downs were instantly killed.

The cause of the accident was the jumping off the track of the trucks of a stock car in the middle of the train. They bumped along the ties for a distance of 200 yards until a narrow part of the roadbed was reached with precipitous slopes on both sides. The derailed car at this point struck some rotten ties on the west side. The ties gave way and the whole weight of the car being thus placed on the edge of the slope, the roadbed gave way and slipped down the hill. Cars and trucks went together and the couplings holding the engine was bodily dragged after them.

The engine went high in the air and turned completely over, entirely wrecking it. The cars in the middle of the train went to the bottom of the hill and smashed into kindling wood. In one hog car every animal was killed but one and the cries, squeals and moans of the wounded and imprisoned cattle, hogs and sheep were most distressing. A relief train with surgeons was sent out from Louisville and a work train with a large force of men were soon at work clearing the track, which was clear at 7 o'clock this evening.

Five box cars and the caboose remained on the track. In the caboose were Conductor Wheeler and six stockmen, all of whom escaped injury. The coroner's jury censured the railroad company for the condition of the track, to which the accident was attributed.

TOUGH NEGROES KILLED.

Were Drunk, Resisted Arrest and Drew Their Revolvers. LIVE OAK, Fla., Dec. 17.—James Mathies and Henry Scott, two negroes, were shot and killed by City Marshal Peary last night. Richard Robinson, another negro, was also shot by the marshal but not fatally. The negroes were drunk and disorderly and when Peary attempted to arrest them resisted and drew revolvers. Peary began firing, shot through Mathies through the chest and Scott through the heart, killing them instantly. Robinson was shot in the shoulder.

When placed under arrest by Officer Casey he made a dash at him, causing a slight wound in Casey's arm, and while being conveyed to the station in the patrol wagon he drew a second knife and slightly wounded Officer Delaney.

KANKAKEE, Ills., Dec. 17.—The sheriff raided the Larkin-Hurley prize fight at North Kankakee early this morning just after the first round had been finished. The principals and sixty-five sports from St. Louis were arrested and will have a hearing tomorrow. Some of those in attendance are engaged in business in this city. GREAT DAMAGE IS DONE.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 17.—One of the most disastrous floods which the Buffalo Creek territory has ever suffered came with the thaw and ran yesterday. The Buffalo creek rose twenty feet, overflowed its banks and left four feet of water over the whole territory known as "South Buffalo." People living in that district were obliged to escape from their homes in skiffs and row boats. The flood is very extensive and great damage has been done. It is a part of the city that is not thickly settled, but it is estimated that at least 500 houses are surrounded with water of a depth ranging from three to five feet and that fully twenty-five hundred people have been driven from their homes.

Later the police captured two men supposed to be the robbers.

Myers and Joe Bloom, two crooks and confidence men, were found this morning back of a saloon on Nebraska street. Both had been shot through the abdomen. TYPE-WRITTEN LETTERS.

They Have Been Ruled Out in Legal Evidence. In the good old times of proverbial honesty, which was as much account in the transactions of business as was the merchant's word was as good as his bond. In this progressive age it is different. A type-written letter is of no more value in a business transaction than would be the testimony of an idiot in court of law, or the meandering utterances of a trance medium before the faculty of Harvard college. Shielded behind the progressive carrier of civilization, check takes the place of capital, and the integrity of old-time merchant princes, as Lawrence, Appleton, Sears and other honored names are not essential or apparent in modern business methods.

Transactions of any magnitude, in any line, can be carried on by the aid of a typewriter, as in most cases the operator can furnish brains enough for the principal, with or without capital. If all goes well and the prospects are serene typewriting counts; if otherwise, this merchant can disclaim the entire transaction and ignore any responsibility for the machine. This decadence of simple honesty is greatly to be lamented. We have in mind at the moment of writing a case in point of peculiar hardship. An honored gentleman, a helpless cripple, conceived a business plan which promised successful results. The plan was submitted to a firm rated high in the mercantile agencies and a still higher position in public favor. It was eagerly accepted and cordially indorsed at every point, and all assistance promised to make it a permanent success to the mutual advantage of all parties concerned. All correspondence was favorable, and the projector launched his enterprise, at a heavy outlay of time and capital, only to be abandoned at this moment by them as assuming their sanction and support, which they deny in toto. This support and indorsement being entirely by typewriter, the projector finds himself in greater "distress in mind, body and estate" than before this venture, but without any legal redress.—Melrose (Mass.) Reporter.

AS A FRENCHMAN SEES IT.

The Lack of Artistic Effect in Calcutta Architecture. The English of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries do not know much for art; they do not care much for it at home, and still less do they trouble their heads on the subject in a country where their stay is only temporary, and where they remain but long enough to make their fortunes. So they did not draw much on their imaginations in the designs for their public buildings—pseudo-Greek for ecclesiastical ones. Anglo-Gothic and Indo-Gothic styles have a quaint effect beneath a tropical sky; but the architect has at least any amount of space at his command, and though vastness of proportion is not necessarily an element of beauty, there is something striking about it. On the Chowringhee road, opposite the wide Maidan esplanade, sixty palaces alone occupy a frontage a mile long. Commonplace, cold-looking and monotonous, these cold buildings have nothing attractive about them but their size; they are the one tropical emanation of an art which may be characterized as doubly spurious, in that it was alien to the soil from which it was borrowed. Travelers who have seen St. Petersburg are reminded of it in the new Vienna which has sprung up in the last ten years, or perhaps Buda-Pesth, but without its glorious background of mountains. Nowhere is the passionless strength of the British genius better illustrated than at Calcutta. "Let there be palaces," said the Wellesleys, and there were palaces. They forgot to add, "Let there be artists," and had they said it, the powers even of a governor-general are limited in all that relates to the spirit.—Harper's Weekly.

Going to Buy a Watch?

If so, buy one that cannot be stolen. The only thief-proof watches are those with Non-pull-out. Here's the idea: The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the pendulum (stem) and fits into the groove, firmly locking the bow to the pendulum, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

To be sure of getting a Non-pull-out, see that the watch is stamped with this trade mark. It is not to be had with any other kind. Ask your jeweler for pamphlet, or send for one to the famous Boss Filled Case makers, Keystone Watch Case Co., PHILADELPHIA.

CITY NEWS IN BRIEF.

Special meeting of the city council tonight. The G. A. E. will give an annual ball Thursday night in Armory Hall. The funeral of the late Mrs. Rebecca McGregor took place Saturday afternoon. Captain Duncan, of the Calumet & Hecla mine spent a few hours in the city yesterday. Dr. and Mrs. Dawson returned last night from their honeymoon trip after an absence of several weeks.

"Have you seen anything of a stray street railway?" asked Superintendent Retalic of a citizen yesterday morning. Attorney Rash Culver of L'Anse is in the city looking after a homestead case which comes up in the land office today. The wife of William Dorias, South Marquette, had the pleasure of presenting her spouse with a daughter yesterday.

F. W. Halsey, Lake Linden, wood superintendent for Hubbard & Son, Pequaing, was in the city yesterday calling on old friends.

Stanton Rowell changes his card today announcing sheet music at eight cents a copy. He will be found at the corner of Front and Bluff streets. There was not a large attendance at the Casino Saturday night to see the football match on wheels. The teams got to work at 9:30 o'clock and after kicking and tumbling and getting tangled for an hour the game was declared a tie, each side having won a goal.

The Salvation Army is making preparations to receive Major and Mrs. Stillwell, who now have charge of the Army work in Minnesota and northern Michigan, Wednesday and Thursday nights, Dec. 20 and 21. A banquet will be given Wednesday night and a grand swearing in of recruits Thursday night.

The Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's church conducted a bazaar of fancy goods and needle work in the Harrow block Saturday. There was an excellent display and considerable buying but the same thing that keeps ordinary trade duller than usual prevented the bazaar being the success anticipated.

Marshal Maloney and his force did some most effective work last night in persuading gangs of rowdies that they should not loaf at the street corners. The way the marshal scattered one gang strongly suggested a big snow plow at full speed. The air was full of hoodlums one second after his arrival but the corner was perfectly clear. More strength to his elbow.

A. E. Brown, agent of the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York, handed, Friday, to Mrs. W. D. Williams a draft for $4,125, the avails of a policy held by the late Judge Williams. The face of this policy was $3,500 and the premiums paid over $1,650, so that the investment returned to Judge Williams' heirs all the premiums paid and a net surplus of $2,475 over and above the $1,650 paid in. The draft was handed to Mrs. Williams within seven days after the proofs left Marquette.

"We'll have the cattle out to grass Come Pass-day, I'll be bound; Hear how the creakers stamp and low Soon as they smell the ground? It's time to rake the garden off And set a bonfire good! Plan out the beds to suit ye, wife!" As Darby says to Joan.

"It seems with while, a day like this, Jes' to ha' wintered thru; I feel the sun clear to my soul. Oh, as I be, I do, . . . hard-like Mebbe it would look aw'ard-like To get to Heaven alone; I'd full as lives stay o'er a spell!" As Darby says to Joan.

"You ain't forgot the old side porch, Back whar the grapevine hung? They think folks didn't court and kiss When me and you was young! Jes' such another likely day! The parson made us one!" As, hitching up his chair a bit, Darby says to Joan.

THE LITTLE VIOLINIST.

How He Secured Assistance for His Dying Mother.

On the outskirts of a great city in Germany there lived a poor widow and her little son. Mrs. Aurlich earned a scant livelihood with her needle, and little Berthold made himself useful by gathering wood, running errands and working in their small garden during the summer. The warm weather was a pleasant season, but in the winter when work was scarce they were often hungry.

But Berthold was not unhappy; he lived in an ideal world, a heaven of harmony. For him all nature was an orchestra; he heard music in the whisperings of the great pines in the forest behind his cottage home, in the evening zephyrs, in the tinkling streams, in the chiming of the church bells in the village near by. At night a mighty chorus of unseen minstrels lulled him to sleep.

Mrs. Aurlich's health began to fail and she was finally obliged to give up the little work she already had. One day when Berthold was absent in the forest gathering wood he was detained until quite late. He hurried home, and as he approached the cottage he saw that there was no light shining from the window.

With an anxious heart he hurried into the house and called his mother, but received no reply. He groped his way across the room through the darkness and stumbled over her, where she lay unconscious on the cold floor.

Very much alarmed, the lad knelt down and chafed her hands and sprinkled some water on her face. After awhile Mrs. Aurlich opened her eyes and, assisted by Berthold, managed to reach the bed, and for several days the lad was her only nurse.

The poor woman did not seem to improve. She needed some nourishing food and medicine, but these cannot be obtained without money. Berthold begged her to allow him to go into the village and borrow some money from a relative residing there, but this she would not consent to; she was very proud, and the relations between herself and her relatives had not been very cordial since she had become poor.

It was a very cold day; the sky was dark and threatening, and Berthold heaped the little fireplace with wood, but the heat all went up the chimney and the house was very cold.

He had only a crust of black bread for his breakfast; the last of the loaf was nearly gone and he had put the last grain of chicory coffee into the pot to make a cup for his mother. There was no milk or sugar for it and when the mixture was hot he went over to the bed.

"Dear mother!" he whispered, softly. She lay very still, her eyes closed, her hands crossed over her breast. She looked like the picture of a dead saint he had seen in the art gallery of the city which he had once visited with his father. The sick woman opened her eyes, and, smiling, began to caress his hand.

"Will you have some coffee, mother?" To please him she assented, but when he brought it to her she could not drink it; her stomach was too weak to retain it.

"Let it rest on the table," she whispered; "it is too hot. I will drink it by and by."

The tears came to the boy's eyes, for he knew that the mixture was too strong for her and that she needed some light and nourishing food. He tucked the clothes about her and smoothed the pillow. His mother thanked him with a smile and kissed him tenderly.

"You are a good boy," she whispered. The lad went to replenish the fire, and when this was done he saw that his mother was asleep. There was a deep flush on her face and her fingers were working nervously.

Berthold sat on a low stool before the fire in deep thought for some time; suddenly he arose and went over to a little cupboard. He took from it something covered with an old coat; this he unrolled and disclosed a violin, small and yellow with age.

He examined the strings carefully, and then placed it at his shoulder and drew the back of the bow noiselessly across the strings. Suddenly he heard a low tap at the door, and without waiting to lay aside the instrument he went and opened the door.

"Good morning, Gretchen!" he exclaimed; "come in and shut the door softly. My mother is asleep." Gretchen, the daughter of their nearest neighbor, entered the cottage. She was about the same age as Berthold; her eyes were blue as the skies and her hair yellow as gold. In her hands she carried something wrapped up in a towel.

"What have you there?" "Mother sent over a bowl of rabbit soup," replied the girl, "and she said I might stay over here all day and clean up the house."

"She is very good," said Berthold; "I am afraid my mother is going to die!" Now, the lad was a manly little fellow, but he loved his mother very much, and he felt so miserable that he sat down on the stool and began to sob.

"Dear Berthold," cried Gretchen, "do not cry. The good God will spare your mother, I am sure. Do not let her see you grieving, for that will only distress her."

"You are right," said the lad, rising from the stool and brushing away the tears from his face. "Now, Gretchen, I am going to ask a favor of you." "Of me?" "Yes," said the lad, "it is this: I am going away for a few hours, and I want you to stay with my mother until I return."

"But where are you going?" "Do not ask me, please. Will you stay here until I return?" "Why, of course; but—" "Thank you, dear Gretchen," and Berthold wrapped the violin up in the old cloth and then put on his thick jacket and fur cap.

"When my mother wakes up tell her that I am out in the forest and that you expect me home very soon. It may be late before I get home, and I will stop at your house now and tell them that you will remain with us until tomorrow."

The lad went over to his mother, but he was afraid to kiss her, as it might awaken her. He barely touched his lips to her hair, and then, after giving Gretchen a few directions about the fire, he hurried out, softly closing the door after him.

He looked back once or twice and he could see the girl's fair face in the window watching him. He waved his hand to her hurriedly. He stopped at the farmhouse where Gretchen lived and begged her parents to permit her to stay with his mother until morning. They were kind-hearted people and consented; they insisted on his drinking a bowl of milk, which was very acceptable. After thanking them he set out on his journey.

A windstorm raged violently, so that the lad could scarcely see his way, and the drifts of snow were often far above his waist. On either hand the fields stretched white with snow; the pine and fir trees which skirted the road presented curious and fantastic forms, and the bushes were like goblins with white sheets around them.

It was already quite dark when he reached the great city, although the hour was early. At first the lad was fairly bewildered with the unaccustomed noise and bustle, the crowds of people and the thousands of brilliant lights which he had never seen before.

But in order to carry out his plans successfully and reach home that night Berthold knew that he had no time to spare.

He selected a place near a public square and took the cloth from the violin. With trembling fingers he tightened and tuned the strings and then began to play.

In a very short time a crowd gathered around him, but he did not mind them in the least and played on. Two men, tall and distinguished, attracted by the sight, stopped to listen.

"What have we here, Hans?" said one. "A wandering minstrel, Ole. Let us go nearer and have a peep."

They crossed over the street and pushed their way through the crowd. The stranger called Ole went over to the lad, and smiling down upon him asked him where he lived and why he was out so late.

In a few words the lad told the gentlemen his simple but touching story. The tall stranger stooped and took the lad up in his arms and kissed him.

"You must come with me," he said, and his face and voice were so kind that Berthold was not at all alarmed.

The two men spoke rapidly in a strange language and halted before a magnificent palace brilliant with many lights. They entered, the tallest still bearing Berthold in his arms.

They passed through an elegant corridor with wonderful pictures and thousands of lights until they came to the door of a chamber at the end. The stranger put the lad down and brushed his hair a little.

"Fear nothing," he whispered; "remember we are your friends." They entered a magnificent apartment which was crowded with elegantly dressed ladies and gentlemen. One of the company, an old, white-haired man, came forward to welcome them; the tall stranger whispered something, and Berthold could see by their looks and gestures that he was the subject of their conversation, and that the old gentleman seemed to be very much amused.

He came over to the lad and pinched his cheek. The lad noticed that his breast was covered with ribbons and stars, and he knew he must be some great prince. After a few minutes' conversation he turned to the assembled company, and in a strange language began to address them.

At this everyone became silent and the lad saw that all eyes were upon him. When the prince had ceased the tall stranger, Berthold's friend, stooped and whispered to him.

"Now, my lad, do not be afraid," he said, kindly, "play your best." Berthold raised his violin to his neck and began to play a little song that he had composed himself. It was very simple, but sweet and touching, and thrilled every heart. When he had finished the whole company applauded, and the prince bade him play again.

After the applause had subsided the tall stranger stooped and kissed the lad, and then took the violin into his own hands, and, wonderful to relate, played Berthold's composition with variations; never was heard such ravishing sounds, and the delighted company applauded loudly.

But suddenly the lad thought of his sick mother at home and the tears came to his eyes. His tall friend noticed this, and when he questioned him the lad told him his thoughts and begged to be allowed to return home, as his mother might be anxious.

The two strangers bade the company farewell, and Berthold bowed very low. At the door of the palace a splendid sleigh was waiting and the lad explained to the driver where to go, and the city was soon left far behind.

When they arrived at the cottage the lad descended first and opened the door very softly. His mother was awake and Gretchen was sitting beside her; she sprang up with a glad cry when she saw Berthold.

"My dear boy, where have you been?" said his mother, kissing him; "and who are these gentlemen?" "We are his friends, madam," said the one who had played the violin. "We have come to help you."

They had a long and earnest conversation with the sick woman and promised to return again on the morrow; on the table they left a letter, and when they had taken their departure the sick woman opened it and found two large banknotes. The letter begged her to accept the money and promised to give Berthold opportunities to educate his musical talents in the future, and the signatures at the bottom were those of "Ole Bull" and "Hans Christian Andersen."—Henry Coyle, in the Dells' Dressmaker.

He Was Proud of His Medal and His Son.

How fate drifted the old veteran into our little Canadian Lake Erie village I never asked. Drifted him? No, he ever marched as if under the orders of his commander.

I believe I noticed on the first day I saw him how he tapped his left breast with a proud gesture when he had done with a lot of customers and was about to march again at the head of his horse.

There, beneath his threadbare old blue coat, it lay, always felt by the heart of the hero.

It must have been late in 1854 or early in 1855 that I first saw the medal. Going home from school on a bright winter afternoon I met old John walking very erect, without his usual fish supply.

"War's declared against Russia," went on the old man, "and now's right to show it. The old regiment's sailed, and my only son is with the colors."

"You're a good little lad!" He stooped to let me see the noble pewter.

"The Russians were coming on again as if there was no end to them, when strange drums came sounding in the mist behind us.

"Then all of a sudden a French column came up the rise out of the mist, roaring 'Vive l'Empereur!' their drums beating the charge.

"Show me the man that would," growled old John. "It was never in them French to act cowardly. Didn't they beat all the world, except us and the duke?"

With the ending of the Crimean war our village was illuminated. Rows of tall candles in every window, fireworks in a vacant field and a torchlight procession! Old John marched at its head in full regiments, straight as a ramrod, the hero of the night.

Week after week, month after month, as hideous tidings poured rapidly in, his face became more haggard, gray and dreadful.

Months went by before we learned that the troops for Persia had been stopped on their way and thrown into India against the mutineers.

"The blowing open of the eastern gate was the grandest personal exploit of the attack. It was performed by native sappers covered by the fire of the Sixtieth regiment and headed by Lieuts. Howe and Salkeld, Sergeants Smith, Carmichael, Burgess and Locke."

"Sergeant Carmichael, while laying the powder, was killed, and the native havildar wounded. The powder having been laid, the advance party slipped down into the ditch to allow the firing party, under Lieut. Salkeld, to do its duty."

"While trying to fire the charge he was shot through one leg and arm. He sank, but handed the match to Sergeant Burgess, who was at once shot dead. Sergeant Locke, already wounded severely in the shoulder, then seized the match and succeeded in firing the train. He fell at that moment, literally riddled with bullets."

"Others of the party were falling when the mighty gate was blown to fragments, and the Oxford light infantry, under Col. Campbell, rushed into the breach."

"The Lord God be thanked for all His dealings with us. My son, Sergeant Locke, died well for England."

Nervously fingering the medal on his breast, the old soldier wheeled about and marched proudly straight down the middle of the village street to his lone y cabin.

"The villagers never saw him in life again. Next day he did not appear. All refrained from intruding on his mourning. But in the evening, when the porter heard of his parishioner's loss, he walked to old John's home."

"His right hand lay on an open Bible. His face wore an expression of looking forever and ever upon Sergeant Locke and the Great Commander who takes back unto Him the heroes He fashions to sweeten the world.--Toronto Mail.

An old lady traveling on the underground and finding that the train was approaching a station addressed herself to a man sitting in the farther corner of the compartment, her only fellow passenger, and said:

"In the intercolonial war between France and England, in 1690, Massachusetts participated, and to pay the expenses of the colony first issued paper money. In 1692 a new charter was given to Massachusetts by which New Plymouth was united with it.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Timely Discourse Preached by Rev. Joseph Frazer at the Methodist Church.

PHASES OF CONVICT HOLZHAY'S LIFE THE TEXT.

Was Responsible for His Criminal Acts Because Responsible for Conditions Which Allowed Them.

IDLENESS CAUSES CRIME.

The Methodist church last night was crowded to its fullest capacity by an audience that paid the closest attention to the pointed and timely remarks of Rev. Joseph Frazer, yet THE MINING JOURNAL cannot but express the wish that the church had been many times larger and equally filled. As all Marquette did not, or could not, attend the service the chief points of the discourse will be briefly given.

As announced the sermon was based, by request, upon the varying life phases of the convict Holzhay, now in the Ionia asylum for criminal insane, and was suggested by that somewhat remarkable letter published shortly after his removal from states prison. All that Mr. Frazer said was worth hearing and remembering but some of his conclusions were deserving of the widest comment and approbation in these days of cranks and cowards who presume to throw the blame of their criminal or vicious acts upon their forefathers or some, so called, abnormality possessed and fostered by themselves.

Those who read Holzhay's letter may recall that it was evidently written, not in a moment of contrition for his wrongdoing; not as a warning to others to avoid certain causes which had made him a criminal, but as an excuse for what he had done and as a means of claiming that he had been hardly, if not unjustly dealt with by both society and its representative, the law. He claimed his responsibility was the result of a shattered nervous system and that this had been induced by malnutrition, from indigestion and insomnia. He also claimed the inheritance of a disposition toward melancholia and darkly hinted at some peculiar disease of which he did not care to make more particular mention.

This, briefly, furnished the grounds for Mr. Frazer's most telling conclusions. He admitted that perhaps Holzhay's condition was all he claimed it to be; that his nervous system was shattered and he was in consequence a prey to impulses he did not seem to possess the power of controlling or directing, but why was he in such a physical and mental condition? Was he responsible for that? If so, then he was responsible, and society must hold him so, for acts committed as a result of an abnormal state produced by his own viciousness, carelessness or ignorance.

If Holzhay were predisposed to melancholy, yet possessed intelligence enough to analyze his condition, it is a fair presumption he also possessed intelligence enough to know that this predisposition must be fought against every hour until finally conquered or it would in turn become undisputed master. Instead of repressing it he encouraged it by being much by himself and was responsible if the undesirable condition grew into the proportions of a giant with which a will, dwarfed by inaction, could not cope.

If by any practice, through ignorance, indiscretion or inclination Holzhay should have produced any or all of the physical or mental abnormalities which he blames as the cause of his actions then he is responsible for the actions because responsible for the condition producing them. If ignorant he should have endeavored to inform himself; if indiscreet he should have cultivated caution and if inclined toward wrong he should use his will—and every man not born an idiot possesses one sufficiently strong—to weaken the inclination and strengthen its opposite.

If a person is responsible for one hour he is responsible for the hour following and the next, and so on. Now, Holzhay admits to periods of normal thought of considerable duration and all newspaper reports of his life state the same fact. The speaker claimed that in this responsible condition he should have made efforts—which he does not appear to have done—to fortify himself against a recurring approach to his abnormal state. Holzhay's life plainly teaches this: If he was responsible for the condition which permitted him to commit crime, not thinking it such, then he was responsible for those crimes.

His charge that society and the law were unjust and harsh with him is absolutely without foundation. It is necessary and equitable that such persons, having developed the fact that they are dangerous, should be placed under such restraint that they cannot further inflict or menace society.

While Mr. Frazer's statements and conclusions will not likely be taken without argument, it is important that the young should grasp in no uncertain manner that they are almost entirely responsible for what they produce with their present qualifications and abilities.

The sermon concluded with a strong protest against idleness and loose ideas about religious matters as active factors in fostering crime. He advised every young person to learn a trade; to establish positive ideas about their inner selves and their future; and to always endeavor to make themselves good company to themselves and they would never injure or mislead others. It is hoped the idea of personal responsibility for the majority of abnormal conditions will receive a wide consideration from both young and old.

Hunting for a Railway.

Saturday morning the electric railway company started the big task of cleaning its tracks of snow. All day snow plows were at work looking for the track and when it was located gangs of men with shovels were started baring the rails and cleaning out curves and switches. By night they had accomplished enough to give them a good start yesterday morning.

Early the plows again got out and the shovels were plied with energy and such progress made that it is expected cars will be running today, if not regularly, as near so as possible. The task of keeping the track clear is no small one. No sooner had the company got down to hard pan and carted away the banks of snow thrown up on each side of the street than a snow fall came bigger than any yet and gives a bigger task than ever to teams and men. This, however, is one of the pleasures of running a street railway where snow remains on the ground a third of each year.

Where Books Abound.

What makes a more delightful gift than a well bound book containing good, wholesome reading matter? Such a gift is not only deeply appreciated by the recipient as a general thing, but it becomes more and more a companion, often a valued friend, as it is read and digested. Christmas offers the best opportunity of the year to remember friends with sensible and appropriate presents and H. H. Stafford & Co. certainly present the best place in Marquette, and consequently in the upper peninsula, for the selection of desirable books and many other gifts.

A ramble through the well appointed, well stocked exclusive book and stationery department of this old firm is a source of continual delight to any person fond of a book attractively bound, and fortunately such are by no means few. Books of the very best binding—crushed levant, Morocco and silk—adorn the show cases. These are by standard authors, of artistic presswork and put together in a way to stand a lifetime's perusal. Then there are hundreds of books—some in sets—substantially bound in cloth, suitable for library use and for sale at almost surprisingly low prices. So, all along the line, down to the smallest booklet, a glance at the stock produces delight and most often induces the visitor to leave cash and carry away its full equivalent.

Bibles are displayed in good variety. A full line of 1894 diaries fills the shelves side by side with a big assortment of all sorts and prices of blank books. A big shipment of juvenile books is just received which are calculated to make many a Marquette youngster smile with pleasure. Calendars, chiefly those gems of Marcus Ward and Cassell, choice art books, etchings, a complete line of fashionable stationery, gold pens, games, in short all that defines a first class establishment of this sort, here is found in variety, quality and sufficient abundance for the demands.

Over on the drug side will be found a choice selection of rare odor, fancy soaps, toilet articles and plush goods. Here also may be seen as good a variety of select candy, specially put up for holiday trade, as one might well wish.

It is not supposed as big a holiday trade will be done this year in any branch as that of other years, yet H. H. Stafford & Co. feel themselves prepared to take care of all possible demand in their lines. This is particularly true of books, stationery and fancy toilet articles and the experience of twenty-five years' business right at the present stand has peculiarly qualified them to take good care of local business in their direction.

Successfully Fought the Snow

The train from the east Saturday afternoon, due here at 2:15 was four hours late on account of poor connections and heavy snow banks. After waiting a much longer time than usual for the Michigan Central, it was longer delayed by finding the east bound train stuck in the snow. Yesterday all trains were on good time and aside from the delay of Saturday the South Shore coped successfully with the big snowfall.
