the recent municipal war is imminent. The old council that was voted out at the last election refused to retire and, sitting as an election board in the recent election, threw out several dis puted and mutilated ballots. This, it is asserted, changed the verdict of the people. Several candidates who claimed they had been fairly elected thereupon went before Federal Judge Buford and asked for a mandamus compelling the council and mayor to canvass ballots as returned to them. Buford issued the mandamus but the old councilmen declare he has no jurisdiction and refuse to comply with the writ. If they do not the whole city board will be sent to jail for contempt. Feeling is running high and many threats are made.

MORE POWERFUL THAN STEAM Marvelous Force Obtained from Musical

I, for one, believe, says a Boston Transcript correspondent, that we are on the eve of a great era of applicable force, and that the wasteful methods of steam and electricity will be relegated to a desuctude such as has overtaken the stage coach. The grounds of my belief are based not wholly on hearsay, but chiefly on a curious experience. A few days ago a young man living in the vicinity of Boston took me to his room and showed me an apparatus which he had himself constructed with amazing ingenuity and skill. The fundamental primum mobile of this simple machine vas musical vibration. I have no right to describe the apparatus, but the force produced in an incredibly brief interval Up in Alaska the method of taking a bath is somewhat heroic, says the St. of time by means of a fiddle bow was so enormous that there seemed to be no way of measuring it, and the chief difficulty in the way of practical applica tion lay in the regulation of this force, which, if directed full upon a ned to living in a milder climate human being, the inventor believed, would have a good deal of hesitancy about undressing in one of these would instantly vaporize his body. single drop of water confined in a holplaces, as the temperature is always low stoll tube was resolved by a small below zero.
