MARQUETTE, MICH., APRIL 24.

Entered as mail matter of the second class in the postoffice at Marquette, Mich.

An obscure newspaper that is as wanting in enterprise as in influence boasts that "none of the filthy proceedings" of the Breckinridge trial appeared in its columns.

There is a strike on the Great Northern, which has tied up four thousand miles of road, the coal strike, which calls out anywhere from one hundred thousand to three hundred thousand men.

And accumulated capital never so timid. Isn't this a rather remarkable result of our long continued run of "hard times"?

No matter what his position, the man who insinuates what he dare not squarely and openly charge is a sneaking poltroon and undeserving of the countenance of decent members of society.

FRIENDS of a newly elected mayor in a city down in Kansas have presented him with a shotgun.

A SINGULAR feature of the Coxe movement and others of its ilk is the apparent sympathy of organized labor with the "armies" of tramps which are moving on the national capital.

ONE CAUSE OF LABOR TROUBLES. THE MINING JOURNAL notes that the press of the country is beginning to consider the effect of labor-saving machinery in displacing manual labor in relation to the labor troubles.

SEE THE WORLD'S FAIR FOR FIFTEEN CENTS. Upon receipt of your address and fifteen cents in postage stamps, we will mail you prepaid our Souvenir Portfolio of the World's Columbian Exposition.

As it is, this displacement of manual labor inures almost wholly to the benefit of the employer. The productive capacity of his plant, no matter what line of business he may be in, is increased while the number of men to whom his enterprise furnishes the means of getting a living is diminished.

labor inures almost wholly to the benefit of the employer. The productive capacity of his plant, no matter what line of business he may be in, is increased while the number of men to whom his enterprise furnishes the means of getting a living is diminished.

The mischief seems to arise from the failure to give labor any material share in the advantage accruing from the use of the machinery, by which the opportunities of employment for labor are so greatly curtailed.

The steam shovel and the steam drill have done wonders in cheapening the price of ore, for instance, but has it not been a curse to the ore-producers themselves to have the facilities for getting out ore cheaply brought to a perfection that has lowered the price until there is now neither fair wages for the men employed or a fair profit for the mine owner in the business?

How can this mischief be counteracted? By destroying labor-saving devices and returning to primitive methods? Certainly not. But it might be cured by giving labor its full share of the advantage that accrues to the world at large from the invention and use of machinery to take the place of hand labor.

THERE is no more rabid or dangerous silver lunatic in congress than Senator Cameron of Pennsylvania, and no more dangerous enemy of protection, for while professing to be devoted to the protection policy he aims to do it by deadly injury by allying it with the cause of the free coinage of silver.

WOMAN MAYOR IN NEW ZEALAND

Now Filling the Chair Occupied Some Years Ago by Her Husband.

The colonies have once more stolen a march on the mother country, says the London Daily News. While the house of commons has been debating timidly whether or not to allow women to sit in various local bodies, the people in a township in New Zealand have actually elected a woman mayor of the borough.

PLUCKY PRAIRIE GIRLS. Two Notable Examples of Genuine Feminine Heroism.

While women of the east are distinguishing themselves by entering professions and trades alongside their husbands and brothers, and winning both fame and financial reward, those of the prairie are not behind in the race for prominence.

When the Duval family first entered the territory, her father invested in twenty-five head of cattle, which have since increased to five hundred, and make a large herd to care for.

With the assistance of two well-trained cattle dogs she does it perfectly. While on the range she dresses in cowboy fashion--wide-brimmed white felt hat, long gauntlet gloves, a lariat coiled about her saddle horn and a revolver in her belt--and rides the wildest bronches with thorough ease.

At the annual round-up she has during the past two seasons taken her place with the other cowboys and made a good record. In a fasso-throwing contest when the wildest of the cattle were turned loose and goaded into fury by matador methods, she held her own and was given a handsome saddle by the cattleman, who saw her skillful work.

Another kind of heroism, not less striking, was that shown by Miss Zella Mason, a teacher in a district school of a western Kansas county, during the prevalence of the great blizzard that swept over the plains of the west early this year.

The twenty pupils of the school are all young, the oldest being fifteen, and the twenty-year-old teacher had her hands full leading them along the way of education.

When the storm came up there was no preparation for it. The first indication was a blinding cloud of snow that hid the prairie landscape from view and sent the flurried frozen moisture through every crack and cranny, filling the room with intense cold.

School was dismissed and the little party huddled around the stove, endeavoring to keep warm. The larger boys were divided into details and set to bringing in coal from the shed a few feet outside the door.

The satisfaction that every one must feel at the triumph of the boy, about whom the Massachusetts Ploughman tells this anecdote, is due to the same feeling which prompts a big-hearted man to take the part of the "undermost dog."

Walter was the important witness, and one of the lawyers, after cross-questioning him severely, said: "Your father has been talking to you, and telling you how to testify, hasn't he?"

"Yes," said the boy. "Now," said the lawyer, "just tell us how your father told you to testify."

The Russian government, in order to prevent the abuses caused by physicians' bills, has just published a regulation fixing the fees to be claimed by doctors. The cities are divided into three classes--those with more than fifty thousand inhabitants, those having from five thousand to fifty thousand and those of less than five thousand.

INSURANCE FAKERS. How They Operate to the Detriment of Honest Companies.

There has sprung up in these latter days the flim-flam worker and the soap package fakir, and by some means unknown to the uninitiated the devil and his allies have evolved a plan whereby humanity is also cursed and pestered with the life insurance fakir, says the Insurance Magazine.

ORE TRIMMINGSTORMBREAKS

Bosses and Men Come to Blows, the Bosses Being Roughly Handled.

WILLIAM O'MEARA WALKED ON BY THE ANGRY GANG.

Knocked Down in the Street and Kicked in the Face, Head and Side.

M'PARTLAND STILL SMILES.

The trouble which for the past two weeks has been growing thicker and darker between the ore trimmers' union and the boss trimmers, had its first outbreak yesterday in a free fight, during which William O'Meara, one of the bosses, was severely pounded and trapped on and his partner McPartland tossed about in a careless and uncomfortable manner by a crowd of incensed trimmers. The trouble occurred between 7 and 8 o'clock yesterday morning and THE MINING JOURNAL can best serve the interests of its readers, by repeating the story of the fight and its causes as recited to a representative by principals of both sides. One of the most active of the malcontents was taken to one side and presented the following array of alleged facts:

"Early this morning McPartland and O'Meara were coming down Front street followed by a gang of Finns. Moving in an opposite direction on the same side of the street was a crowd of our fellows. When the two parties got close together O'Meara turned and said to the Finns: 'Now men get your picks and shovels together, there will soon be work for you.' Jim Murphy, one of our fellows, spoke up and said: 'You can't get those men to work for you, they belong to our union.' O'Meara said: '—what business have you to interfere with our affairs, and made a crack at Murphy. I think he struck him; at any rate O'Meara threw off his coat and jumped at Murphy and then everyone seemed to be striking at once and I lost track of the ones who started the fight. I saw O'Meara go down and McPartland trying to go to his help, but I was too far away to see what happened further.' James Murphy told much the same story, disclaiming any attempt on his part to precipitate a fight and that O'Meara struck him first.

The reporter next saw Mr. McPartland who, notwithstanding a peeled nose and swollen neck smiled as blandly and talked as coolly as though he had been at a church social instead of an adult scrap. He said: 'Mr. O'Meara and myself were coming from the ore office about 7:30 on the south side of the railway track. A crowd of men was going up the other side and called out to know if we would give them work. We answered yes and then met the men on the bridge in Front street. We had just engaged them to trim for us and told them to get their shovels and picks when a gang of union trimmers came up and told us the men would not be allowed to work for us as they belonged to the union. We told the trimmers that it was not any affair of their's who we engaged to do our work, that we had hired the men, they were satisfied with the bargain and we would see they went to work on boats we trimmed. At that, Jim Murphy, one of the union men, made a crack at Mr. O'Meara. O'Meara jumped back, pulled off his overcoat and was in a fair way to hold his own when other trimmers rushed in to help Murphy, and O'Meara, set upon by three or four, soon came to his knees. I saw him kicked several times, once in the face, and made a move to help him when I was surrounded by a dozen of the half savage gang and held fast. I was struck a stinging blow in the face and several times about the head and shoulders. Mr. O'Meara may have done an injudicious thing in taking off his coat but, you know, not one man in a thousand could hold his temper with a gang of men howling at him as to how he should conduct his own business affairs. I must admit that I got slightly warm myself and felt almost young again while the scrap lasted."

The public has now both sides of the story substantially as recited to THE MINING JOURNAL. The only point of difference appears to be as to who struck the first blow. Both sides claim the other was the aggressor, but as far as may be learned by questioning disinterested eye witnesses the bosses were at least very hard pressed by the men before they made any move to attack the trimmers or defend themselves.

DETAILS OF THE FIGHT.

The first blow was struck about in front of Dolfs hardware store and as the blows became general the struggling, swaying throng of sturdy trimmers and the two almost defenseless bosses worked down toward the railway tracks and into the street. In front of Morgan's shoe store Mr. O'Meara was down on his knees and two or three trimmers, raining blows and kicks upon him. Someone rushed from the crowd and threw his chief assailant into the gutter, thus permitting him to regain his feet. He had only succeeded in doing so when he was again borne to the ground and this time witnesses distinctly saw the big boots of the trimmers crushing against O'Meara's face as he lay helpless in the dust. He at last got free from the gang and entered Fay's saloon, badly beaten, covered with blood but still full of fight. Mr. McPartland walked back through the crowd to Dolfs and picked up Mr. O'Meara's coat and hat and brought them to Fay's. He had life enough left to crack a joke with one of the merchants in passing.

TRIMMERS ARRESTED.

Mr. O'Meara immediately made a complaint of serious assault against James Murphy, Patrick Joyce, Andrew McGann and Joseph VanRenoortel as his chief assailants. Warrants were issued by Justice Cray and the four men were arrested and arraigned. They pled not guilty and were held in $500 bail each to appear Monday morning next at 11 o'clock for examination. Each man furnished bonds and was set at liberty. Then the men made a counter move by having Mr. O'Meara arrested on a charge of assault preferred by James Murphy.

About 4 o'clock Mr. O'Meara walked quietly into Justice Cray's court, plead not guilty and gave a bond of $100 to appear next Monday. He had scarcely left the court room when Joseph VanRenoortel made complaint that Mr. McPartland had carried concealed weapons at the time of the scrap. The complainant alleged he had held McPartland's arm to prevent him drawing a weapon and had distinctly seen the butt of a pistol in his hip pocket. Other witnesses said they also saw McPartland attempt to get at his gun and plainly noticed the weapon in his pocket. A warrant was issued for Mr. McPartland's arrest but will not be served until this morning.

PUBLIC COMMENT.

The following remarks made by a witness of the fight seem to fully express the general public sentiment regarding the trouble: "I do not care who struck the first blow or why it was struck, but I do flatly say that the way those burly trimmers stamped on O'Meara's face when he was down in the street was the most cowardly, dastardly thing I ever witnessed in my life. Look at the two sides! McPartland, an old man, whose gray hair should keep a young man from striking him, and O'Meara arrayed against a dozen or more muscular trimmers. I could see something manly about a fight between Murphy and O'Meara as it first began but have nothing but condemnation for the cowardice which prompted that gang to jump on and kick two men."

Another witness said: "In my opinion the bosses did not exercise the best of judgment at the beginning of the trouble, but it did not take a great deal of what I saw the men do when O'Meara was down to turn my sympathies away from them. I do not think they strengthened their cause much by what they did. Public sentiment may be with laboring men in their endeavors to maintain a reasonable rate of wages and generally acknowledged rights but it soon turns the other way at the sight of cowardly personal attacks."

The foregoing are offered as a sample of the most conservative comments made regarding the fight. Many who sympathized with the men in their opposition to the proposed schedule flatly denounced their treatment of Mr. O'Meara as cowardly, and a glance at his face would certainly tend to confirm the opinion. It is checkered with cuts and bruises and in more than one place clearly shows marks of the nails in the heel of a boot. The back of his head is a mass of lumps, his side is black and blue and his knee badly torn where he crawled in the street while the crowd pummeled him.

WHAT WILL TODAY BRING?

The Wawatam reached port last night at 9:15, passing the Lockwood on the way. The first ore boat in this season tied up at the north side of No. 1 dock and was housed for the night. Hundreds of persons stood at the landward end of the dock, watching the boat come in and discussing the probabilities should loading be attempted. It soon became known no loading would be done before this morning and the crowd dispersed.

It was the opinion of those on board the boat that they would begin loading this morning early but they could not be certain until the dock men and trimming bosses could be consulted. Precautions have been taken by the local police and Sheriff Broad to preserve the peace. The sheriff returned last night from up the road with nine deputies who will reinforce the local officers should occasion require it in keeping order and protecting property. In spite of all said and done so far it is sincerely hoped there will be no more serious difficulty than that already reported.

Robert Dory at Rest.

The funeral of the late Robert Dory took place yesterday afternoon and was the largest gathering of the kind ever seen in Marquette. Rev. Joseph Frazer conducted short religious services at the house of the deceased, after which the casket was removed to the hearse by six pall-bearers chosen from the Knights of Pythias and Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen respectively, and the cortege began moving toward Fourth street, headed by the Marquette City band. Following came about one hundred representatives of the Trainmen, Engineers, Firemen's and Conductors' orders and about eighty Knights of Pythias. The cortege moved slowly down Fourth street to Washington, up which it turned to the city cemetery. It stretched along the street for several blocks, the representatives of the fraternal orders being almost equaled by friends and citizens on foot and in carriages.

Arrived at the open grave the Knights of Pythias took charge of the services, conducting them according to the grand and impressive ritual of this order. Prelate W. A. Ross read the ritual and it is safe to say a more impressive funeral service was never before listened to in this city. At a stated part of the ritual each Knight advanced and cast a sprig of evergreen into the open grave. Then the casket was covered with earth and the last sad rites had been paid to the remains of one who in life had commanded almost universal respect.

Returning from the cemetery the fraternal orders marched, led by the band, and dispersed at their respective lodge rooms.

The funeral was attended by every employe of the South Shore who could get relieved from duty. The officials of the road were well represented and friends were seen from the copper country, Ishpeming and Negaunee. Two of the Trainmen who could not get here any other way, walked from Negaunee to pay their respects to their dead brother's memory.

The floral offerings, which almost surrounded and covered the casket, were from every order of the railway employes and Knights of Pythias. They were the best the florist's art could produce and served in a marked degree to lessen the sombreness of the occasion. Friends of the deceased were here from almost every quarter of the compass and many of them will remain a few days to give as much comfort as possible to the bereaved wife.
