THE SILENT MR. WATKINS.

They tell me I'm a silent man—some says I'm old and sour—Because I haven't got a tongue that's workin' every hour.

UNDER A CLOUD.

But Behind Its Black Pall the Sun Was Still Shining.

"Dear me!" said Mrs. Pell, "what is the matter with Carry? Ain't sick, is she?"

"I knowed they was genteel," said Mrs. Pell, "the minute I set eyes on 'em. Mrs. Belton's dress is shabby; and Mrs. Hourie, the grocer's wife on the first floor, wears hers somehow different; and Carry's bonnet is plain black 'stew, with loops of green ribbon, but it's a great deal more ladylike than Susan Jane Hawley's pink crape, with the red feathers and the Rhinestone daggers stuck in it."

"And I may consider myself lucky, so they tell me," cried out indignant Carry, "that I am not arrested and put in prison! Only 'previous good conduct' has saved me! But I don't consider myself lucky. I consider that I have been insulted and aggrieved."

"Carry, Carry!" gently soothed the mother. And Carry's passionate words died away in a flood of tears.

"La, me!" said Mrs. Pell, starting up. "I clean forgot all about it. Name of Jessup? But her olecst, she's dreadful sorry, but her olecst ain't willin', on sober second thoughts, to let her go out of the city. They've gone to Coney Island to-day, and—" it, but it seems to me a pretty fair offer.

"Mother," said Carry, breathlessly, "I have a great mind to go, if—if Mr. Jessup will take me."

"And glad of the chance," said the old farmer, cheerfully.

"I don't know much about house-work," went on Carry.

"My woman'll teach you," said the farmer. "She'd be doing it herself if it wasn't for the rheumatism in her back. And you look like one who would be quick and handy to learn."

"I could jedge as much as that by her looks," said Mr. Jessup, already. So Carry Belton steeled her little life-bark into this new current.

She had not been a week at Jessup farm before she wrote home to her mother:

"DEAR MOTHER: I am the happiest girl in the world. This is a lovely place—all apple orchards and meadows, knee-deep in red clover and timothy grass. I help to milk the cows every night, and the lambs and chickens grow me already. Mrs. Jessup is the kindest old lady you ever knew; she's afraid of it that I shall do too much. Frank—that is her nephew who lives here, and helps Mr. Jessup with the farm—brings in all the wood and water, and is always asking what he can do to help me. I suppose I ought not to call him 'Frank' but everyone else does, and so it seems natural. All that troubles me, mother, is being separated from you, and I have such a delightful plan. It was Frank that first thought of it, and Mr. and Mrs. Jessup do not object. There is one wing of the old farmhouse that is only used for a store-place—two delightful rooms, with a great fireplace big enough for a whole colony, and windows looking out on the river. They are a little out of repair, to be sure, but I can easily whitewash and repair them, with Frank's help, and you are to come and live there. And all the rest Mrs. Jessup will accept is a little dressmaking now and then, such as you are handy with, for her poor old finger-joints are all stiffened with rheumatism, and she cannot hold a needle. And you can go into the city with your embroidery every week or two—the fare is so very much, and you can breathe in the smell of the new-mown hay, and gather wild flowers and sweetbrier, and oh, mother, darling, we shall be so happy!"

Mrs. Belton read the letter through tears of delight.

PEERLESS WILL STAY HERE.

Other Ports Closed Against Her Till Full Quarantine Expires.

CASE AT THONEY'S IN A VERY CRITICAL CONDITION.

Cases Against Striking Ore Trimmers and William O'Meara Dropped. Two Trimmers Pay Fines.

NEARLY TWO WEEKS MORE.

Those who look toward the harbor once at least every day and wish the quarantined steamer Peerless would cease to ride so lazily at anchor out near the breakwater and proceed on her accustomed course, are likely to keep on looking and longing about fourteen days longer. No matter how willing the Marquette health officer might be to allow the boat to clear with a good bill of health, she would find every other port on the lakes closed against her landing freight—fortunately she has no passengers.

The health officer has received telegrams from Duluth and the other up the lake ports informing him that he need not hasten to cut short the necessary season of quarantine for they will not permit the boat to touch without a clear and satisfactory bill of health. This, of course, Dr. Harkin would not give until he was satisfied all danger of contagion had disappeared, and to reach such a determination will require two weeks of the present favorable conditions.

Yesterday morning when the physicians visited the Peerless they found everything in perfect condition. There was not a sign of any other member of the crew having taken the disease and it begins to look as though the advance of the scourge had been nipped in the bud. Dr. Harkin is devoting his entire time to looking after those on the vessel and the patient at Thoney's quarry. It was reported yesterday that the patient was not making very satisfactory progress, in fact it was admitted he was in a critical condition and the chances appeared to be against him. This, however, may prove incorrect and every effort will be made to pull him through safely.

Meanwhile a strict guard is kept up along the docks and other probable landing places, so that no communication may be had between the boat and the shore.

Ore Trimmers Cases Dropped.

Saturday morning the cases against Murphy, Joyce, McGann and Van Remoortel, charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm; and that against O'Meara, charged with assault and battery, came up for trial before Justice Crary. After having talked with the witnesses Prosecuting Attorney Young announced that the facts did not warrant proceedings against the trimmers on the charge in the complaint against them, and they were accordingly discharged. A new complaint was made out charging them with assault and battery. Mr. O'Meara then expressed the desire to have both sides drop all further proceedings, and after a consultation between the prosecuting attorney and C. R. Brown & Son, attorneys for the ore trimmers, the cases against Murphy, Van Remoortel and O'Meara were dropped and McGann and Joyce, under advice of counsel, pleaded guilty to simple assault and were fined $5 each.

Mr. O'Meara was considerably influenced in his decision to drop the matter if the other side was willing on account of the prospect of a further adjournment. Judge Brown was still absent from the city and a second continuance would have been asked by the men's counsel for this reason. Under the circumstances, therefore, Mr. O'Meara thought it better to drop the cases against the two defendants when Murphy also showed a disposition to drop proceedings against himself. As McGann and Joyce were advised by their counsel to enter a plea of guilty it looks as though there was a pretty good case in sight, had the matter been permitted to come to trial.

Now that the case is settled it is hoped that many years may pass before a similar case brings trimmers and bosses to such an unpleasant pass again.

Booth's Opinion of Keene.

Edwin Booth, the greatest tragedian America ever saw and one of the world's greatest, said of Thomas W. Keene that his "Richard III" was the best he had ever seen and he believed no better portrayal of that strong, though unlovely character had ever been produced on any stage. This was strong commendation, particularly so as coming from the great Booth who was chary of speech off the stage and a pronounced enemy to flattery. Next Wednesday evening the people of Marquette will have an excellent opportunity of seeing this masterpiece of Keene's and of judging as to Booth's estimate of the portrayal.

The following night Keene will appear as Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice," a character which has received a great deal of study at his hands and which offers abundant opportunity for a display of that masterly genius which has placed the name of Keene at the head of the list of modern tragedians. It is the purpose of High School pupils to make the presentation of "The Merchant of Venice" an opportunity for study. One of the classes has just finished reading this Shakespearean classic and will attend the play in a body. The occasion should be one of special interest to these students as they practically know the play by heart and may give their entire attention to the finished phrasing of the players.

Several theater parties have been hinted at and it looks as though all Marquette society were going to take Keene's visit as to its own particular liking and give him the welcome his reputation and the dignity of his entertainment deserves. If the people of our city would make such theatrical offerings popular by giving them generous attendance the management would take still greater pains to raise and keep raising the standard of plays booked. The public demand must be satisfied and if that demand proves to be for Shakespeare, Bulwer etc., rather than for Hoyt and his class of farce writers, why theatrical managers will give it classic drama with the greatest pleasure in the world.

The box office will open at 10 o'clock this morning in the opera house, for the sale of seats. After noon the charts may be found at Bigelow's news stand.

Excellent Physical Training.

Some months ago the Hughes-Youmans School of Physical Culture was opened here by Professor Hughes and Mrs. Youmans an experienced physical trainer from Chicago. Classes were formed both of adults and juveniles and Saturday night a MINING JOURNAL representative had the pleasure of seeing one of the latter put through its paces.

The lesson for that evening was a two step waltz, and a redowa which served admirably to give a sprinkling of spectators a good general idea of the scope of the school and the progress making. It was really surprising to note the ease, grace and accuracy with which the score of boys and girls on the floor went through the different movements of the dance. There was that in every step and courtesy which showed a careful analysis of the principles and painstaking patient care in their teaching. The music was excellent, slow and graceful and the young folks, particularly during the salute, seemed to have borrowed somewhat from the stately minuet of our grandfather's day. In this more than anything else, was the hand of a master of physical training and possibilities apparent.

Mrs. Youmans has certainly done wonders with her juvenile pupils. She has taken them all raw and abashed with a too apparent knowledge of the possession of hands and feet and taught them to use these necessary members properly—that is gracefully. To stand without stiffness, to walk without angularity, to sit without lounging and to bow without bending, very valuable lessons no matter what station in life they wish to assume.

The music furnished by Mr. Hughes is perfection, the greatest cordiality exists between Mrs. Youmans and her pupils, the classes are growing and interest in the work marked. Under these conditions it seems as though the School of Physical Culture might in due course become a permanent and desirable feature of the city. It gives exactly the finish which young women are so often sent from home to attain and gives it with equal satisfaction and at a more reasonable figure.

Surprised the Judge.

Judge Nels Clifton like every other person has an occasional birthday anniversary, but sometimes the rush of business causes him to forget that May 5 has any significance for him until the day has passed and added another year to his usefulness and popularity.

Saturday was one of the judge's busy days and he hustled up to Republic, hustled all day and hustled home in the evening. He was just comfortably seated and was telling his good wife how tired he was when the door of his house flew open and a procession composed of our leading Swedish citizens, trooped in carrying baskets, and took possession of the house. The judge consulted his calendar, saw it was May 5, the anniversary of his birth. Then he squarred his eyes, smiled a hearty welcome and had his right hand almost wrung off receiving congratulations.

It is not necessary to go into general details of what all the well disposed happy guests did before they departed at daybreak the following morning. One feature, however, must not be overlooked. The judge was seen yesterday sporting a very handsome gold-headed walking stick. On the top were engraved the initials N. C. and the date May 5. This turned out to be one of the pleasant incidents—the chief one—of the surprise party of the previous night. No one who knows Judge Clifton will begrudge him either a birthday or handsome walking stick.

Elijah Sutton Is Dead.

Elijah Sutton died yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock at Cudahy's boarding house, corner Third and Superior streets. The body was taken to Hager's morgue an hour later and the funeral will occur from there this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Park cemetery.

During the twenty-four hours preceding his death Sutton had passed through more than one hundred convulsions and as the end of the struggle approached there did not seem to be any break in the terrible fits which kept his body in continual contortion. He appeared to suffer intensely but in all probability was unconscious of any feeling whatever. Not a gleam of intelligence showed itself from the time he was found after rashly sending a bullet into his brain and now it will never be known why he sought his own life.

"Move On."

Justice Meads had three "vags" and Justice Crary four Saturday, arrayed in all their ragged griminess before their awful tribunals. The tramps had not much to say for themselves and the justices less. They were simply given peremptory orders to "move on" and keep moving or they would have to work. The dire threat so frightened them that they left the city on a run. That's right, keep 'em moving.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.
The mixed train, which is scheduled to leave Marquette at 7:00 a. m. daily except Sunday for Munising and intermediate stations, will, commencing Wednesday, May 9th, depart from the company's freight station at South Marquette instead of the City Passenger station as heretofore. This change has been necessitated by the number of ore trains being moved through Marquette yard at the hour of departure of the train named. (5-7-94)
