MARQUETTE, MICH., MAY 15.

Entered as mailmatter of the second class in the postoffice at Marquette, Mich.

"It would seem," remarks The Age of Steel, "that in some instances the severe and almost desperate cutting in prices has been attended by deterioration in the quality of product. There are temptations in this matter more readily understood than justified. The Iron Trade Review quotes an instance of a buyer who went into the old car wheel market rather extensively some time ago, thinking his investment wise at prices then going. When an expert was called in and tests made, the size and sweetness of the supposed plum underwent a radical change." It is more than likely to be so in other instances when abnormal cheapness is simply a leg for very sour cider. Those furnace owners who have attempted to run on the "cheap" Mesabores and have had their stacks blown up in consequence will be able to appreciate the point of The Iron Age's observation.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS.

The national department of labor has just sent out a brief abstract of its fifth annual report, which it recently presented to congress, on building and loan associations. The full report will be in particular demand on account of the general interest that is taken in its subject. The associations are known by different names, but the principle governing them is the same. In some states they are called "building and loan associations," in others "co-operative banks," "building and saving associations," etc. There are one or more of these associations in every state in the union, and they have done great good in aiding persons to obtain homes of their own. They have met a condition in society that is vital to its growth and amelioration. It is estimated that these associations have been instrumental in establishing 400,000 homes for those who would not without such assistance have been thus blessed. While they have been helpful to thousands in this particular, they have been a source of profit to their shareholders. It would appear that over 26 per cent. of the shareholders have taken advantage of the accommodations afforded by the associations.

There are in the United States 5,338 associations, of which about 95 per cent., or 5,598, are local, the remainder being national. Pennsylvania has the greatest number, or over 18 per cent. of the whole, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, New York and Missouri coming next in their order. The total number of shareholders is given at about 1,750,000, or about one person in every thirty-seven of the population of the country. The total net assets are stated at $490,667,594, or nearly 14 per cent. of the amount of capital invested in the land, buildings and machinery of the mechanical and manufacturing industries of the United States, and more than the amount of capital thus invested in the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The monetary standing and importance of these institutions is thus seen, and the influence they are capable of wielding is thus, in a measure, appreciated. The more remarkable do these statements appear when it is realized that the average age of all these associations is but little over six years. Only 433 of them are over fifteen years of age. They belong purely to modern ideas of financial investments.

PROGRESSIVE TAXATION.

THE MINING JOURNAL has before alluded to the ingenious scheme of taxation devised by Chas. M. Howell of Bessemer, the aim of which is to prevent the accumulation of abnormally large fortunes. We find this concerning it in The Iron Post of Escanaba, called out by a letter on the subject recently addressed by Mr. Howell to Senator Hoar of Massachusetts: Charles M. Howell of Bessemer some years ago came to the conclusion that great fortunes, such as those of Rockefeller, Vanderbilt, Gould and Ocker, were a menace to the prosperity of the country. In his own words "one individual possessed of one hundred millions of wealth, or fifty millions, or twenty-five millions, cannot be a safe citizen of this republic, no matter how talented, worthy or exalted in character he may be. He is a constant menace to organized society—to 95 per cent. of the total population. Abnormal accumulation is the product of abnormal greed—of the wrecking, grinding and engineering process. No matter to what extent the methods of such accumulation may be disguised or legalized by legislative enactment, the fact alone is conclusive proof of wide-spread imposition."

To break up such immense fortunes and to prevent their accumulation in the future he proposes a plan of taxation by the federal government under which properties of a less value than $100,000 shall be entirely exempt, the unit of taxation being fixed at $100,000, with a rate of taxation beginning at one half of a mill on the first unit and increasing in arithmetical progression on each consecutive unit of $100,000 until the 100 per centum limit is reached. It will be noted that the tax on moderate fortunes is only nominal and reaches but 1 per cent. on $3,000,000, and only one-fourth of a mill over two and one-half per cent. on $10,000,000, but it begins to lop off the tops of colossal fortunes pretty rapidly at $20,000,000 and upward. The scheme is not new. Mr. Howell elaborated it some years ago and published it in book form last year, but it is now brought again to the notice of the public by a letter to Senator Hoar giving the substance of it and of which this is the closing paragraph:

"The tariff question once settled, the party which survives must stand right in relation to the most powerful political sentiment that is influencing the people today, for they are learning that, while free trade they do not want, and judicious tariff schedules will help them, there is still some controlling economic force operating against their social well-being and industrial advancement which is not involved in, regulated or affected by, tariff controversies and legislation. And the American statesman who is not alive to this fact does not see or read aright the signs in the political heavens."

CITY OF THE HUNDRED GATES.

The Great Temple of Thebes Would Hold Four Notre Dames.

In any case the ordinary tourist is likely enough to emerge from the temple of Karnak stupefied by that more vastness of scale, those Titanic proportions of architecture which ranked it ages ago, when it was intact or nearly so, and which rank it to-day, when it is a ruin, among the wonders of the world. It is not the mere area of the mighty building which impresses one, though four cathedrals of Notre Dame would go, it is said, into the Hypostyle hall. Nor is it merely the altitude to which the towering columns mount, or their enormous girth, or their forest-like array. You think of those huge pillars that lose themselves in the upper gloom at Seville, and of the endlessly interlocking arches of the Mosque of Cordova, and you feel that in these two points, at any rate, Karnak, if it be not exactly rivaled, is not so very far ahead. It is the astonishing successful combination of all the widely differing architectural effects which are severally produced by number, by size, by proportion, by disposition, by the imperious influence of mass, and the winning appeal of perspective—it is the combination of these into a phalanx of forces to be launched irresistibly against the senses and the soul of the beholder that makes the great temple what it is. Those Atlantean columns, which were built, surely, to uphold the heavens themselves, and which seem to bear up their enormous surmounting monoliths as a giant would lift a child, have no suggestion of unwieldiness in their colossal size, leave no sense of excess in their multitudinous number. The early capital into which each column blossoms would take ten men to span its monstrous girth; yet it opens out against the blue Egyptian sky above its roofless head as lightly as if it were the finest Gothic tracery above an English cathedral nave.

Everywhere the feeling of absolute fitness, of perfect proportion redeems this majestic hall of the offense of mere Brobdingnagian; and whether the eye dwells upon the parts or sweeps the whole—whether it travels through the endless alleys of this forest of stone, and rests by turns upon base and shaft and flower-like capital of its component columns, or pauses to pursue walls deep-graven with colossal gods and kings, and still glowing here and there with the undying colors of four thousand years, the artistic taste is alike satisfied. So admirable, indeed, are the proportions of the whole that the stupendous bulk of its constituent parts is hardly realized. Derangement of their symmetry seems necessary to enable one to measure it in all its full awfulness, as we do there, where one of these gigantic pillars has fallen and bows its hundreds of tons of weight and the superincumbent burden of its huge plinth, dislocated and askew, toward one of its fellows. The cause of this portentous displacement no man knows; but the vague tradition that ascribes it to the conqueror Cambyses may be safely dismissed. No mortal hands, relying solely on the strength of human muscles and the only known forces of an age that knew not of gunpowder could ever have done the work of inchoate destruction which is above our heads. Nothing short of an earthquake could have thrust one of those tremendous plinths into the position of that overhanging horror.—London Telegraph.

—Doctor—"You gave me a bad five dollar bill yesterday." Patient—"It was only a mistake. Sorry, but it's too late to rectify it now." Doctor—"Too late? What do you mean? Must I suffer from your mistake?" Patient—"Why not? I have to suffer from yours. And I never knew you to take anything off from your regular fee in consequence."—Buffalo Courier.

—A remarkable accident occurred on a piece of land at Poynton, England, rented by the Manchester and Salford Co-operative society from Lord Vernon. Under the superintendency of Mr. Bellies the land was being plowed by the aid of a couple of valuable horses, owned by Mr. Cottam, of Norbury Hall. In crossing the field the horses suddenly disappeared, snapping the chain traces and almost dragging down the plow. The driver was fortunately on foot and escaped with his life, probably owing to that fact. The pit was found to be sixty-four feet deep. It had been covered over for some years and its existence forgotten.

It Looked That Way.

Whoever has seen the Washington monument in Baltimore, with the crouching bronze lion at its base, will appreciate the story they tell about the rustic hunter on his first visit to town. He scanned the shaft for some time, running his eye from the base to the point on which the statue stood and back again, and then fastened his gaze on the crouching lion, as if fascinated. His lips parted, and his city friends drew near to hear his criticism. At last out came the words: "By Jinks, he's got the old man treed, ain't he?"

Approved His Course.

"I don't never read them 'lym' newspapers," said Farmer Baidley to the gentleman in the next seat. "That's right," replied his fellow passenger; "you can't believe a word they say." And on the strength of the slight acquaintance thus formed the polished stranger sold the self-sufficient countryman two brass bracks for fifteen hundred dollars each.—Detroit Tribune.

And Perfect in Their Action, AYER'S PILLS

Never fail to relieve Dyspepsia, Constipation, and Headache.

"I have proved the value of Ayer's Pills in relieving dyspepsia and headache, with which complaints I was so long troubled that neither the doctor nor myself supposed I should ever be well again. Through the use of the above medicine I am better than I have been for years."

"I have used Ayer's Pills for 15 years as a cathartic in liver complaint, and always with extremely beneficial effect, never having had need of other medicine. I also give Ayer's Pills to my children, when they require an aperient, and the result is always most satisfactory."

"Having been severely afflicted with costiveness, I was induced to try Ayer's Pills. Their use has effected a complete cure, and I can confidently recommend them to all similarly afflicted."

They Played Real Ball.

The Setters of Ishpeming and Rivals of Marquette met yesterday afternoon on the fair grounds and presented one of the best and cleanest games of ball ever seen in Marquette, not even excepting the days of the league.

The Rivals have always shown themselves good players but yesterday they simply outshone themselves. Every man seemed occupying his strongest position and played his very best.

Holmes struck out over twelve men during the game. Curley, Covean and Webb garisoned the Setters' battery and did excellent work but could not offset Holmes' deadly twisters, backed as they were by thorough good work by his colleagues.

A more satisfactory base ball team than the Setters has not often visited this city. Its members are well conducted, know how to play clean ball and take both defeat and victory with equanimity.

The fact that the pupils of the Hughes-Youman's dancing school held the undivided attention of a good-sized audience at Fraternity Hall from 7 o'clock until 10 o'clock Saturday evening is proof of the meritorious work they have been doing.

An alarm of fire sounded last evening from box 14, corner Hampton and Division streets, and the fire department made a brilliant dash up Washington street. As there was no blaze in South Marquette it is presumed that the boys chose Washington as a better street to sprint in.

The boys of Morse Hose company are not only ever ready for duty when called but equally ready for fun at all other times and as they had their tasty uniforms on yesterday they could not resist the temptation to have a good time last night at their club rooms in the fire hall. They danced and laughed and sang to their hearts' content, which means a great deal.

A LONELY ALPINE VILLAGE. It is Without Inhabitants Except During Six Weeks of Each Year.

St. Moritz-Bad, which is situated about a mile from St. Moritz-Dorf, the well known winter Alpine resort, is a town composed almost exclusively of gigantic hotels, mammoth boarding houses, or to give them their more polite appellation, pensions—and gargantuan villas.

The effect upon mind and imagination, as you force your way through the huge masses of snow that encumber the streets of St. Moritz-Bad in winter time, must be somewhat similar to that which explorers narrate they experience on first setting foot within the mysterious circles of the Arctic regions.

Another rather unusual way of applying caviare, though there is one French restaurant in this city where the dish can be obtained in all its delicate perfection, is to take a plump young chicken, stuff it with caviare, and roast it rapidly, basting freely.

The commonest way of eating caviare is in the form of a sandwich, and the amount of these consumed in fashionable barrooms in New York city is largely on the increase, but this, as a rule, except in the very swellest places, is not the true Russian caviare.

There are few New Yorkers who can always tell the foreign from the native product, and one of these men patriotically prefers American caviare because it is not quite so provocative of a gigantic and costly thirst.

Another way of eating caviare among the Russians is to sandwich it between two thin slices of hard, salty cheese. One of these sandwiches with two drinks of vodka will sustain a Russian half a day.

An energetic and rational lady has lately been vigorously advocating the adoption of knickerbockers as by far the most suitable attire for lady cyclists.

The exact origin of caviare, like many other good things, appears to be lost in the mists of fable. It is a Tartar word, and the food probably came into general use after the first Tartar invasion of Russia.

The Chinese, Japanese and Siamese are people skillful at botanical feats. One of their wonderful achievements is known as the "changeable rose."

—Piron, the French poet and satirist, wrote a whole book of epigrams against Des Fontaines, because the latter mutilated a complimentary mention of him made by Rousseau.

America, till quite recently have never cared for it, especially as a dish or an appetizer. Yet to give a man a fine "drunkie," as well as appetite, to insure him the possession of what might be termed a one thousand dollar thirst at the beginning of a banquet, there is nothing quite equal to caviare.

There are various ways, however, in which epicures enjoy it besides that of a mere fillup to the palate and an excitement of the mucous membrane of the stomach.

Caviare salad, made with hard-boiled eggs, chopped in small pieces, a couple of fresh tomatoes, any bit of green and a little olive oil and vinegar, is a picnic perfection hard to beat, and only carries with it a reasonable amount of thirst.

The silverskin onion stuffed with a mixture of caviare, a thimbleful of olive oil, and fine bread crumbs, then baked for about twenty minutes, offers another toothsome way of learning to love caviare.

A TEMPLE TO PROGRESS.

Corner Stone of Marquette's New Civic Building Successfully Laid.

MASONIC GRAND LODGE OF MICHIGAN OFFICIATES.

Occasion Brim Full of Significant Features and Pleasant Prophecies for a Bright Future.

MARKS A SUCCESSFUL ERA.

Yesterday was a significant day for the Queen City and one which will not soon be forgotten by those who were fortunate enough to take part in the ceremonies and festivities permitted by the gala occasion. The corner stone of the new city hall was laid with imposing details and every Marquetteite, assisted by hundreds from the sister cities of Negaunee and Ishpeming, turned out and aided in giving to the occasion a proper dignity and genuine enthusiasm. No Fourth of July has seen Marquette in more pronounced holiday attire and certainly on no former occasion has there been so pronounced a unanimity. It seemed as though each citizen fully realized the importance of the event and put everything of minor consideration aside for the moment.

Every business place of any consequence was closed at noon, and remained so until nearly 5 o'clock when the ceremony was over, and most of them were decorated with national colors. The South Shore road ran specials from up the road towns and in consequence many strange faces were seen, aside from honored guests of the common council. During the parade the sides of the streets were lined and the corners crowded with men, women and children eager to see the uniformed men, mounted and on foot, the gaily caparisoned band boys and the many colored badges and flags of fraternal societies, while every window and balcony was held at a premium as a place of unusual vantage.

At 3:00 o'clock the parade began, under direction of Colonel B. S. Kaufman, acting grand marshal of the day, moving west along Fisher street toward Front. Twelve minutes elapsed from the time the head of the column swung north into Front street until the last carriage came into view from behind the hotel Marquette. The spectacle was a grand one, viewed from the New Clifton where THE MEXICO JOURNAL had taken its position. A more orderly, better arranged or more systematically managed procession could not well be desired. The line swung east into Ridge street in the following order:

- Chief of Police, City Police Force,
- Negaunee City Band,
- Ishpeming City Council,
- Negaunee City Council,
- Marquette City Council,
- Marquette City Supervisors,
- Ex-Mayors and City Officers of Marquette, Marquette County Officers,
- Morse Hose Company,
- Maccabees—U. K. Mounted,
- Maccabees, three Tents on foot,
- Skandia Society,
- Swedish Crown Society,
- Ancient Order of United Workmen,
- St. George's Society,
- St. Jean Baptiste Society,
- Marquette City Band,
- Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias,
- Subordinate Knights of Pythias, two lodges,
- Sons of Herman,
- German Aid Society,
- St. Joseph Polish Society,
- Odd Fellows, three lodges,
- Queen City Lyceum League,
- Ancient Order of Hibernians,
- Ishpeming City Band,
- Company G, National Guards,
- Masonic Fraternity,
- Masonic Grand Lodge,
- Citizens in Carriages.

It would be difficult to attempt a description of a parade when seen in its entirety. It was all of a mile in length and moved with the precision of a military column. This was all the more noted from the fact that many in line had not been trained in marching and the most logical conclusion is that they owed their excellent appearance in line in no small degree to Colonel Kaufman who, with his well mounted aides, handled the long column in a manner that won the applause of all. He was well assisted by Lieutenant Jacobs, as adjutant, Captain Frank Bay, Corporal Joseph Neidhart, Land Register Priemeau, Collector of Customs Scully, L. C. Kaufman and Charles McCabe. These were all well mounted and held positions along the line, acting like clock work under the clear directions of Colonel Kaufman, who appeared here, there and everywhere, in the full uniform of the governor's staff, mounted on a mettlesome black horse.

After traversing several streets on the hill the procession turned down Seventh street and into Washington swinging east and halting in front of the new city hall. The ranks then opened, and stood at the salute while the grand lodge and local lodge of Masons passed through and took positions on a platform prepared for them. Seats had been placed on the floor of the building sufficient to accommodate all who took part in the parade and when all were in place the sight was as charming a picture of color, animation and deep interest as one could well wish to see.

The decoration of the hose carts and wagons of Morse Hose company with flags and bunting was one of the most noticeable features of the parade.

AT THE BUILDING.
The program incident to laying the corner stone was opened with a well-rendered selection by the Marquette City Band. Rt. Rev. Bishop Vertin, who was accompanied by Rev. Fr. Langan and other priests, invoked the divine blessing on the ceremony. His words were full of a broad Christian charity, a deep patriotism and a stirring impulse toward pure Americanism; praying for the prosperity of all the elements that make a city truly prosperous and denouncing in measured terms anarchy and all its attendant evils. He prayed for harmony and set an excellent example of the best manner of speaking it.

Following came the introductory address by President Pearl, acting mayor,

In the absence of Mayor Kaufman, the president bid all a hearty welcome on behalf of the city. "We have met," continued the speaker, "to celebrate with fitting ceremonies what is, to my mind, one of the most important events in Marquette's history. The public spirit, the public pride, the public taste, even the commercial enterprise of every metropolis, is measured in a great degree by the character of its public buildings. In my comparatively brief career in Marquette I have ever found her aggressive with this one exception, in all things that pertain to a city's welfare and progress. Our public school system is among the best. Our public library is probably not excelled by that of any other city of equal size in the state. Our electric lighting system has become famous throughout the country. Our public water system, with grand Old Superior for our reservoir, cannot be surpassed. Our volunteer fire department, Morse Hose company, furnishes ample fire protection, considering the appliances they have to work with. Our public park is one of the grandest which Dame Nature in her loveliest mood can furnish. Our electric street cars furnish adequate means of public transportation by the most modern methods. Thus in every public capacity, with the exception of her public buildings, Marquette has stood and now stands in the front rank with other enterprising cities, fully abreast of the times.

"Today we burst in sunder the chains of doubt which have for the last half century fettered us, and, with confidence as to the future, step forth a free and fledged city. May the building of the city hall usher in a new era of commercial and industrial prosperity and may it ever stand a fitting monument to the progressive spirit of our citizens."

F. O. Clark was next presented and gave an excellent address. He began in a reminiscent strain showing how in 1848 a few adventurous spirits, led by the fame of the iron hills, on the shores of Lake Superior, landed in this bay—which for its beauty has been likened by eastern travelers to that of Naples—and here pitched their tents and began laying the foundations of the city which is now a gem of beauty as it spreads out on the shores of this mighty water. Since that time nearly half a century has passed and a large portion of those early builders now sleep in the tomb, but their work stands on solid foundations of stone chiseled from the quarries that underlie this imperishable city.

"We are here," said Mr. Clark, "to lay the corner stone, to dedicate this municipal temple here to rise upon this foundation to the Goddess of Progress and of Enterprise; and that we may rejoice over the prosperity of the past and hope and believe that the present financial shadow that hovers over the country, may soon pass away like a cloud with a silver lining beyond. In this belief there is but one lamp by which our feet may be guided, and that is the lamp of experience and of history. There is a time to build and a time to clear the rubbish from building."

The speaker then briefly touched on some of the former trade depressions which have afflicted the peninsula and learned that in every instance we had gained from their valuable lessons and had climbed after to a higher pinnacle of prosperity than ever before. "This growth and progress has not ceased and we are here today laying the foundation stone of this municipal temple as an evidence of the confidence of the people in the future progress, not only of our city, but of the iron industry on which it mainly rests."

"It is an illustration of our faith in the iron hills and in the imperishable foundation upon which our twin sister cities to the west now stand, and we believe today that this iron country has begun its development and that the near future much of the great wealth that is being mined in this country will here be transformed into structural shape and from this point transported to the great west in manufactured form; and that the time has come when instead of sending our ores from our country to more eastern cities to cause them to grow with phenomenal rapidity, the twin cities of our county will unite in one harmonious effort with our city in the building of furnaces, rolling mills, nail factories, stove works, everything in which iron and steel may be employed, and here the raw material may be converted into structural form and transported to the great undeveloped empire to the west of us as manufactured appliances by which the prairies shall be developed. Then shall the city of Marquette, in unison with our sister cities take on their commanding position as a portion of the great state of Michigan and of this nation. Let us then with renewed energy, frugality and economy rise above the depression of the times, and behold the star of hope on the horizon."

The ceremony of laying the corner stone now began conducted by the grand lodge of Masons as follows: W. H. Phillips, G. M.; William Somerville, deputy G. M.; D. W. Powell, senior W. S. M.; Billing, junior W. S. M.; C. D. Blanchard, grand treasurer; L. W. Midlam, grand secretary; Thomas D. Meads, grand chaplain; S. G. Brown, senior grand deacon; Gad Smith, junior grand deacon; John Mitchell, grand marshal; Grant DeHaas, grand tyler; A. W. Lovejoy, grand architect; George E. Cummings, H. B. S.; Ed Mitchell and W. H. Vanderstine, grand stewards.

LAYING THE STONE.
The Masonic ceremony was both impressive and imposing. The stone was properly tried by the square, level and plumb and found exact. Over it were poured the corn of plenty, wine of refreshment and oil of gladness and comfort, and in it placed a number of articles, sealed in by the grand master, as follows:

Marquette city charter; Marquette city directory; illustrated history of Marquette; copy of first issue and of last issue of MICHIGAN DAILY MINING JOURNAL; copy of first and last issue of the Lake Superior Pioneer, a German paper published in Marquette; impression of Marquette seal; copy of ordinance providing for special election to vote upon the question of bonding the city to erect city hall; copy of ordinance relative to the issuing of bonds for new city hall; copy of notice to contractors and bidders to submit bids for building the city hall; copy of contract for building new city hall; collection of copper coins of various dates; copy of invitation issued by council committee to participate in the ceremonies at the laying of corner stone of new city hall; copy of ceremonies of the Masonic Fraternity at the laying of the corner stone of the new city hall; copy of constitution and by-laws of Marquette lodge F. & A. M., 101; copy of constitution and by-laws of Stone Cutters' union, Marquette, Mich.; copy of constitution and by-laws of Brick Layers and Masons union; copy of constitution and by-laws of Journeymen Stone Cutters' association; copy of constitution and by-laws of the Uniform Rank, K. O. T. M.; photograph of Mayor Kaufman; photograph of new city hall; list of men, contractor, subcontractor, architect and workmen on city hall; program of ceremonies at the laying of corner stone; list of the Marquette city council city officials for 1894; and the supervisors of the city; duplicate list of articles placed in the corner stone; collection of Swedish coins.

Judge Stone gave the oration of the day concluding the Masonic rites. His address was listened to with deep interest as it dealt to a great extent with a brief but comprehensive analysis of our system of self-government leading up to city self-government. It would be a difficult matter to intelligently condense the judge's excellent remarks and space will not permit their printing in full. He considered many features that were arising and would likely continue to arise as a result, of the congregation of such vast numbers of our people into cities, that the city legislator would have to seriously consider, but the most valuable thought was contained in some of his closing remarks. Introducing our school system and its value he said: "If the citizen is not educated in the school of virtue he will be educated in the school of vice and iniquity. We are therefore afloat in the sweeping current. We must make head against it or we go down with it to the saddest of destinies. I insist, therefore, that it is the duty of the state and the local authorities to require the public schools to teach the children patriotism. This great problem of inciting patriotism is one which the educator of no other great country in the world are called upon to meet. German children drink in love of country with the air they breathe. English children never forget their English lineage. American children born into good American homes are just as anxious to grow up good patriots as either the Teuton or the Briton, but unlike Germany or Britain the United States has to deal with an alien element whose offspring, generally speaking, must be Americanized in the common schools of this country, or not at all. An educational system so framed for the children of Americans and for those of foreign born parents, who are anxious to accommodate themselves to American ways as soon as possible, needs some amendment to meet the changed conditions of later immigration. One of the most solemn questions an American can put to himself is, whether we have sufficient national pride to assimilate and to Americanize all the adventurous material that is being thrown into the national mill. It is hard to teach an old person new loves and loyalties. Our hopes must be centered in the children."

In his closing remarks Judge Stone paid our local police force a handsome compliment and one which was well deserved and roundly applauded. As the last sentences were falling from his lips a commotion was noticed in the crowded street below and Colonel Kaufman with the aides was seen escorting a carriage in which sat the aged divine, Dr. Bonar. His duty was to ask heaven's benediction on all that had been done and to slowly and reverently to the platform and spread his hands far apart over the audience, every head was bared and each heart felt that the closing scene was a most fitting one for such a dignified and solemn occasion. With music from the Ishpeming and Negaunee bands the societies reformed and marched back to their halls where they disbanded.

THE MASONRY.
At 7 o'clock in the evening seventy-five masons and well satisfied city, county and visiting officials and other honored guests sat facing an equal number of neatly printed menu cards in the spacious dining hall of the Hotel Marquette. They were the Marquette city council and guests of the day and each face bore a look of half pleased determination to get square with Mine Host Lewis' larder and thus properly round a day which had been marked with pronounced success and the greatest good will.

After a hearty discussion of the viands cigars were passed and President Pearl, who presided, called for several short impromptu addresses. At his request Mayor Anthony and John C. Adams applied for the honors for Negaunee. Mayor Johnston and George Tucker were equally happy as Ishpeming representatives and Ex-Mayor Sidney Adams said a few words on Marquette's behalf. The remarks showed throughout a significant but strong undercurrent of bitterness between the three cities which was particularly gratifying to those progressive spirits who have never yet been able to fully separate their common interests.

In this pleasant and felicitous manner the feast continued until time to leave for the South Shore 8:30 special when hearty good-bys and good wishes were exchanged between up the road city fathers and our local solons and these hand shakes closed what was and will henceforth remain Marquette's chiefest red letter day.

Good Minstrelsy Coming.
The A. G. Field Columbian minstrels will visit our city soon. The name of A. G. Field is synonymous with chaste and pure minstrelsy, the company is complete to the most minute detail. In addition to the large minstrel company are Napier and Mayzella, a duo of European acrobats, dancers and pantomimists, who will appear at every performance. The famous Mignani family of five people, classical musicians, are also with the A. G. Field minstrels, which will appear at the Marquette Opera House, Tuesday evening, May 22.

Medical Inspection of Vessels.
Dr. John B. Hamilton of the Marine Hospital service, Chicago, has received orders from Washington to establish a medical inspection of all passenger steamers leaving the port of Chicago. The inspection, which begins this week, will be made at the Rush street bridge, where the steamers are hailed by the custom officers. A medical inspector with one assistant will be on duty every night and day. The inspection will delay the steamers but a few minutes. This inspection has been ordered for the benefit of the vesselmen. In many of the ports up the lake there is such a fear of small-pox that it interferes greatly with business. The fact that the steamers and their crews are
