ANOTHER TICKET PUT UP.

The Disgruntled Democrats of New York Put Another Ticket in the Field.

IT IS STRICTLY AN ANTI-HILL DEMONSTRATION.

Everett P. Wheeler Nominated for Governor by Shepherds and Remainder of the Ticket Endorsed.

THIRD STATE TICKET CHOSEN

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—A third state ticket has been put in the field by the Democracy of Kings county and it is expected it will be endorsed by the Democrats throughout the state. The ticket presents as candidates of the anti-Hill Democracy for governor Everett P. Wheeler of New York city, and endorses the candidacy of the regular Democratic nominees for lieutenant governor and judge of court of appeals—Daniel L. Lockwood and Chas. F. Brown. After having decided upon its candidates Sheppard's committee nominated Hon. Chas. Fairchild for chairman of the campaign committee. The ticket was nominated shortly after 6 o'clock this evening by a committee composed of Chas. L. Patterson, Thos. G. Shearman, George R. Peabody, Michael E. O'Connor, R. R. Baker, Richard S. Ramsay, J. W. Green, S. Perry Sturgis and Chas. L. Ricard.

The committee was appointed by Edward M. Sheppard as a result of a meeting of Sheppard delegates to the Saratoga convention. As the Shepherds are said to have secured assurances that their nominee for governor will accept all that remains to be done to make the ticket the regular choice of a third party is to secure the signatures of three thousand persons as indorsers of the candidates and file these with the secretary of state before Oct. 16. On this showing the secretary of state will issue an order for the printing of third party ballots. Everett P. Wheeler is about sixty years of age and a lawyer of this city.

Wheeler was one of the original founders of the old county Democracy organization, one of the members of the committee of one hundred which was organized by the New York state Democracy and he is a member of the present committee of seventy.

The platform adopted advocates personal and religious liberty, declares for tariff reform, free coal and free ores and favors home rule in cities, suppression of bosses and rings and the business administration of municipalities.

CITY TICKET NOMINATED.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The New York state Democracy this evening nominated the choice of the committee of seventy, Colonel William L. Strong, for mayor, John W. Goff recorder and Henry R. Beckman justice of the superior court.

DAVID B. HILL CONDEMNED.

Brooklyn Democratic Club Down on New York Senator.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 9.—At a meeting of the Brooklyn Democratic club tonight resolutions were adopted condemning David B. Hill and the Democratic organization as it at present exists. The meeting was well attended and presided over by A. J. Wolfe, one of the vice presidents of the club. One of the resolutions adopted is as follows: "The Democratic party has seen fit to abuse the old party that was and has introduced a system of blackmail. These methods are not Democratic methods. As Democrats we introduce this resolution to repudiate David B. Hill and the Saratoga platform and we trust all good Democrats will not vote for him. Brooklyn Democrats will hail with delight the nomination of an independent ticket."

Professor Rasmus Anderson Is No Longer a Democrat.

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 9.—Professor Rasmus B. Anderson, United States minister to Denmark during Cleveland's first term, has repudiated the Democratic party. The announcement of his change of politics has caused a tremendous sensation in political circles. His action was caused chiefly because of what he terms "the tortuous methods of the Democratic senators who violated party principles and party pledges."

VILAS LISTENS TO MCKINLEY.

He Attends the Governor's Reception in Madison, Wis.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 9.—After making short speeches at Reedsburg, Baraboo and Lodi Governor McKinley arrived at Madison at 2:30 o'clock and spoke to an audience of several thousand people in the gymnasium building of the state university. President Sheldon, of the University League club, presented McKinley who was received with boisterous demonstrations. He said that in a speech delivered at Madison two years ago he had predicted the results that would follow the election of a Democratic free trade party and every prediction then made has been justified. An incident occurred when McKinley began to reply to a speech made in Madison by United States Senator Vilas. "I was handed," he began, "as I came into this hall a copy of the speech made by Vilas in this city on the sixth day of last September." A scene of confusion ensued; some one spied Vilas seated in an obscure place on the stairway near the stage and several of the audience yelled derisively at him. McKinley after some effort quieted the disturbance and proceeded with his speech.

Darkness fell soon after the train left Madison and ran to Milwaukee practically uninterrupted, although there were crowds at several stations to whom McKinley showed himself. The speaking here tonight was in Schlitz park, which held an audience of several thousand and was fully up to the highest mark of enthusiasm set by any of the western audiences. A special train takes the governor to Chicago, from which place he goes at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning to Springfield, by way of Joliet and Peoria.

A FATAL MINE FIRE.

Anthracite Coal Mine Will Be Closed for Years by Fire.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Oct. 9.—One dead, four enclosed with escape cut off and certainly smothered, and the most disastrous mine fire ever known in the western anthracite coal fields is now raging in Luke Fiedler's colliery as the result of a carpenter's negligence. Fifty-five other workmen had thrilling escapes. Irvin Buffington, whom the officials hold responsible for the disaster, is dead from suffocation. George Brown, Anthony Boberty, Robert (a driver boy) and a Polish laborer (name unknown) are in the mine without hope of rescue. It has been decided to drown out the fire, but it will require six weeks to fill the inside workings with water. Operations cannot be resumed at the mine for at least two years. It employed 900 men and boys.

CONVICTED OF TRAIN WRECKING.

Discharged Railway Employee Attempted to Ditch a Train.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 9.—W. T. Law, a former employe of the Fort Wayne railroad, was convicted today of attempting to wreck a passenger train to gratify his spirit of revenge. Law was employed as a division hand and was discharged early in September. A few days later passenger train No. 44 was stopped just in time to avoid running into an immense boulder that would have derailed the train and cost perhaps many lives. At the trial Law's little son testified that his father went out on the night the boulder was found on the track saying he was going to kill one hundred people. Afterwards he said he placed the rock on the track. It was proved Law was drunk at the time the offense is said to have been committed.

RAILROADS TO BE BOYCOTTED.

Travelling Men Take Offense at Western Passenger Association.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Neill McCoull, chairman of the railroad committee of the Travelers Protective association, has issued a secret circular to members of his organization urging them to boycott all railroads in the western passenger association with the exception of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Wisconsin Central because of the refusal of the other roads in the association to issue at the request of the Travelers, association for the benefit of traveling men generally an interchangeable 5,000 mile ticket. The Travelers Protective association is a powerful organization having, it is alleged, fully thirty thousand members.

TO RELIEVE WAGE WORKERS.

Illinois Legislature Will Be Asked to Pass New Laws.

BELLEVEILLE, Ill., Oct. 9.—About one hundred and fifty delegates attended the state federation of labor of Illinois at the Twelfth annual meeting here today. The federation will be in session until Saturday. At these sessions action will be taken upon matters of vital interest to the wage workers of Illinois. Many legislative measures will be considered and laid before the next general assembly for enactment, and the abrogation of all laws entailing hardships upon the working people of Illinois will be demanded.

MURDERED OLD VETERANS.

Horrible State of Affairs at Dayton Soldiers' Home.

DAYTON, O., Oct. 9.—The police search for the perpetrators of two recent murders near the veteran soldiers home on pension day develops a situation more horrible than any crimes in the west. Forty old soldiers have been robbed and murdered at National Military home here and only passing notice taken of the crimes. The Grand jury is taking hold of the matter and a feeling exists that the government should place detectives here to collect evidence against the murderers who have grown rich by robbing the veterans.

DOING CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE.

Florida Suffering From the Effects of Another Hurricane.

PNOSACOLA, Fla., Oct. 9.—The tropical hurricane raged all day yesterday with terrible fury. Falling roofs made it dangerous to appear on the streets and business was practically suspended. Shipping suffered severely. Houses were blown down at Station, the wharf swept away and a steamer swamped and sunk. In the city much damage was done, fences, trees and small out-houses blown down in every part of the city. As far as learned no one killed.

HAS BEEN TOLD THE WORST.

Czar Knows He Has but a Short Time to Live.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 9.—It is learned that Professor Zaccarin, while in attendance upon the czar, said to him: "Your majesty's malady is incurable; with care and attention your valuable life may be prolonged for some months, but it is useless to conceal the fact that no remedies will avail beyond a certain period." The emperor after the interview entered a room in which a number of relatives were assembled and said: "Professor Zaccarin has just told me there is no hope." The emperor was visibly affected and those present were thrown into a state of consternation by the change in his face and bearing.

CHEE FOO REPORTED TAKEN.

Victorious Japanese Forces Are Fighting Their Way to the Gates of Peking.

PANIC REIGNS IN THE CHINESE CAPITAL CITY.

Another Strong Japanese Army Has Crossed the Yalu and Is Now Marching on Moukden.

THE CHINESE ARE DEMORALIZED.

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 9.—It is reported the Japanese have captured Che Foo. LONDON, Oct. 9.—A dispatch to The Times from Yokohama repeats the report of the capture of Che Foo, and adds that the Japanese have landed troops at Tarascada, near Port Arthur. The correspondent at Hong Kong telegraphs under date of today that the Chinese have closed Foo Chow in preparation for a siege. A panic prevails at Peking.

Under date of Oct. 10 the correspondent at Tien Tsin cables that a thousand Russian troops are posted on the Korean frontier facing the Japanese forces at Hung Chnn.

Assaults on foreigners at Peking and its environs are increasing in frequency and gravity.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 9.—The second Japanese army is reported to have crossed the Yalu river, advancing on Moukden, which is believed will soon fall as the Chinese are demoralized.

A Chemulpo dispatch of Oct. 3 says fourteen Japanese transports have been in that harbor since Sept. 27. The Japanese have landed 7,800 troops and 750 coolies and the defenses of Seoul have been strengthened and the garrison reinforced by 4,000 Japanese troops in anticipation of a demonstration by Korean insurgents.

It is reported the Chinese recently crucified two Japanese prisoners and beheaded two Japanese soldiers, who were wounded and left behind.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The Associated Press learns on the best of authority that the European powers are acting in harmony. They do not intend to permit the integrity of Korea to be disturbed and will actively enforce this decision should Japan attempt the permanent occupation of the peninsula.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—A dispatch from Rome says an Italian minister at Peking at the request of his government has offered his services to bring about an end to the war between China and Japan.

THE BLOCKADE LIFTED.

Grain Shipments to Chicago Obstructed General Freight.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—The grain blockade which threatened Chicago some weeks ago is now entirely lifted and western roads are once more taking all the freight they can procure. The matter at one time threatened to become so serious that a few of the lines were compelled to command their western agents to take no more grain for shipment. The trouble lay not so much in the lack of ability of the roads to haul freight as in the fact that shippers had no place to put their grain and the roads were compelled to act both as carriers and as warehousemen.

WANTED IN LOUISIANA.

Southern Democrats Want McKinley to Deliver Campaign Speeches.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 9.—A letter received at Governor McKinley's office asks him to speak in Louisiana. It is signed by forty-eight Democrats of that state who propose to vote the Republican ticket in national affairs. The governor was not able to see the letter it having been received since his departure on his western tour. He, however, left instructions with his secretary to decline all invitations in his absence and the secretary has done so, giving as his reasons that the dates of the governor are full to the close of the campaign.

WRECKERS GIVEN SENTENCE.

Had Placed Obstructions on Railway During Recent Strike.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 9.—William Buck was tried in the criminal court today on the charge of obstructing railroad tracks. He was found guilty and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. Buck is one of the wreckers who placed obstructions on the Missouri Pacific track during the recent strike, causing the wreck of an engine. Richard Brown, another wrecker, was also found guilty and given a similar sentence.

SPRINGER ON THE TARIFF.

Free Coal Would Be a Good Thing for Illinois Mines.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 9.—Congressman Springer spoke tonight to a large Democratic meeting at Riverton, a coal mining settlement near this city. He devoted a large portion of his speech to the subject of tariff on coal and the benefits that would result to the miners of Illinois and the west generally if the Democratic policy of free coal and reciprocity with Canada should prevail.

IS SEEKING RELIEF.

Inhabitants of Massachusetts Manufacturing Towns Nearing Starvation.

FALL RIVER, Oct. 9.—Mayor Coughlin sent a letter to the prints manufacturers of his city saying there was great suffering throughout the city and asking that the mills be reopened. The manufacturers will hold a meeting to consider the question of compromise.

MARQUETTE, MICH., OCTOBER 10. Entered as second-class matter of the second class in the postoffice at Marquette, Mich.

Hill is going to make the run for governor of New York. That is rather more than Morton bargained for. But he ought to be able to win even against the doughty David this year, it is so awfully Republican.

Wouldn't it be a great card if the Republicans in this state should bring Maurice J. Finn here to go on the stump for Sam Stephenson? Almost as strange things have happened in politics this year, but that would be the biggest corker yet.

"CONGRESSMAN WILSON can explain his speech at the London dinner to his constituents," remarks the Milwaukee Sentinel, "but he will never be able to explain the dinner." No, but if it had happened to be Chauncey Depew who was dined he would not have to explain the dinner or the subsequent speech. It is only Republicans who can do some things with safety, donchuknow!

DEMOCRATS who expect to be candidates for office should bear in mind that they must not loan horses to persons who are liable to ride them in Orange processions, or they cannot have Tim Tarsney's support at the polls. Are there any other kinds of processions included in Mr. Tarsney's boycott? He should publish his list so that those who are politically ambitious may be on their guard.

IT NEEDS not surprise anybody if the Populists of this district poll several times the vote this year that they did two years ago. There is a feeling of dissatisfaction among the masses that will tend to swell the vote of that party, and the bad faith kept with the people by the leaders of both the old parties is to blame for it. The Populist movement is a protest against the crooked work of the politicians who manage the affairs of both the Democratic and Republican parties to a great extent, and while that domination of these continues the protest will grow in strength and with it the party through which it finds expression.

ONE result of the recent naval contest between Chinese and Japanese armored vessels is likely to be a modification of the opinions hitherto held as to the class of war vessels which are most effective in action. That contest appears to have established that lighter vessels with greater speed are capable of better service in action than the unwieldy monsters which are covered so heavily with armor that they cannot be maneuvered quickly. In the sea fight between the Chinese and Japanese cruisers the former had the heavier vessels but they were whipped completely by their more nimble adversaries. The great nations of Europe, as well as our own, have learned a lesson from this test of the comparative value of the two kinds of war ships, and their conclusion seems to be that except for the purpose of defending coast lines the lighter and speedier cruisers are the most effective battle ships.

THE Detroit Journal, likewise the Menominee Herald, wants to know if THE MINING JOURNAL is a Democratic paper. Well, it isn't. Neither is it a Republican paper, in the sense of being under an obligation to support "barrel" candidates for legislative offices, or to be atrociously about the questions entering to election contests to promote party interests. Nor yet is it a Populist paper. It is the people's paper, supported by them and relying on their intelligence for its support, instead of on the bank account of any man who expects to buy his way in politics or the campaign fund or the patronage of any political party. It holds a position in politics that suits it perfectly, and which the people approve of thoroughly, and while that is the case it does not care a tinker's impregnation for what the politicians and hireling organs think or say concerning it. So there you have it, and how do you like it?

TIM TARSNEY'S charge against Hon. S. O. Fisher, to the effect that the latter held a conference with leaders of the A. P. A. order at the Hotel Normandie some time ago, at which an agreement was effected under which he is to receive the support of that order for governor, rests on the flimsiest of testimony. It is denied without qualification or reservation by Mr. Fisher. When Mr. Weadock, who undertook to ascertain what evidence of its truth Mr. Tarsney possessed, (he being a brother-in-law of Mr. Tarsney), saw Tarsney about it he learned that a man named Clifford claimed to have seen Fisher and the A. P. A. leaders alluded to at the hotel on the same day, and that an employe of the hotel told him they had been in conference in a room of the house for several hours. Clifford was run down, and was brought face to face with Fisher. He admits that he might have been mistaken in the man, but thought the person he saw at the hotel was Fisher. He admits, also, that he did not see Fisher and the A. P. A.

bosses in company, but stated that a person connected with the hotel, whose name he refused to disclose, had told him that they had been in secret conference there for hours. Tarsney's case, so far as the Normandie Hotel conference goes, is an extremely weak one on his own showing. He has long cherished a grudge against Fisher, and the general opinion is that he has taken a despicable method of gratifying it, for to do that he has not hesitated to do the very thing he charges the A. P. A. with doing—drag religion into politics.

THE Republicans of New York city have put up an excellent candidate for mayor, Colonel William L. Strong, and now if the people of that city who complain so loudly and incessantly of the abuses of their municipal government want to correct them and get rid of Tammany rule let them rally to his support and elect him, or else forever after hold their peace. It is not to be believed that the thugs and thieves are in a majority in New York, and if they are not the decent, law-abiding people have it in their own hands to put them down and place honest men in charge of their municipal affairs. It is simply pusillanimity for the good people in that city to keep on complaining of the condition of things said to exist there year after year and yet do nothing to remedy the evils when the means of doing this are within easy reach through the ballot box. The people of New York must do the reforming themselves if they would be free from the rule of bribe-takers and rogues. The rest of the country can do nothing for their relief.

JUDGE TRUMBULL of Chicago addressed a meeting under the auspices of the managing committee of the People's party campaign committee at Central Music hall in that city Saturday evening, his subject being the cause of our labor troubles, and suggestions for their cure. The significant part of the matter is that Judge Trumbull is not an avowed member of the People's party, but accepted the invitation to address the meeting for the reason that, as he explained it, he wished to discuss the question he proposed to speak on in a manner that would make it rather difficult for him to do so at a meeting held by either of the old parties. In his discourse he dwelt particularly on the encroachment of organized capital on the rights and privileges of the people, and indicated what, in his belief, should be done to limit the growing power of wealth in order that the liberties of the masses may not be trampled on by it. He urges the radical revision of the laws relating to property, for "it is chiefly the laws of property that have enabled the few to accumulate vast wealth while the masses live in poverty." One of the laws fixing the rights of property that he would have materially changed is that which enables the possessors of vast estates to dispose of these as they please by will. "Why should the power to dispose of property after death, given by the laws, be extended beyond the authority to dispose of a fixed amount to any one individual, say property to the amount of $500,000 to the wife and $100,000 to each child, and not more than $50,000 to other relatives," he asked. His idea is that laws which permit of the accumulation of vast fortunes and their retention in single families from generation to generation is inimical to the public welfare, and in this he is undoubtedly right. His address touched on a number of other topics of great interest and was full of suggestion and thought.

BIMETALLISM ON A STABLE BASIS. The members of the German silver commission drew up, after their conference, a report of the conclusions they had reached on the subject of bimetalism, which has been translated into English and is printed in The Review of Reviews. The Germans are close and patient students and their views on any question which they have cause to investigate deeply are, for that reason, of great value, hence the conclusions arrived at on this subject will have interest for Americans, the silver question being one of the important ones now before our people.

The German bimetalist committee consider it proved by science, experience, and even partly by the admissions of the gold adherents themselves, that the power of gold to purchase articles has steadily risen since the extension of the gold standard in 1873, and that it must continue to rise. As far back as 1868 German economists predicted this rise in gold in case it should be adopted as the sole standard. A little later the same prediction was repeated by the Frenchman De Laveleye and the American H. C. Carey. The attempt to attribute the general lowering of prices to other causes than the coinage system is a failure for the reason that the same cause existed during a period of 20 years before 1873, and there was no such decline. As if to put the matter beyond doubt, the report calls attention to the fact that industrial development is now especially strong in countries having the silver standard, but in these there is not the fall in prices that affects the gold countries.

Some of the results of the single gold standard are a heavier and heavier burden falling on the debtor in favor of the creditor and a social bitterness between employer and employed. The report lays it down as a basic principle that the creditor has as good a right to bear part of the loss arising from the enhancing value of gold as the debtor has. A final result of the increasing disability of the debtor class will be that they will be unable to meet their obligations, and creditor as well as debtor will be ruined. For their own sakes, therefore, the German commission recommends the creditor class to aid in the agitation for international bimetalism. The demoralization of silver first affects the agricultural class so that they are unable to purchase supplies. This in turn works injury to the manufacturing element. It finally involves the capitalist and pulls the whole financial fabric down upon his head. "Any further extension of the gold system must, as Goschen predicted so early as 1878, lead to a business crisis such as the world has never yet passed through," the report declares.

Nothing but a restoration by all the nations—not by one or two alone, but all—will restore prosperity. If that were done, "the persistent fall of general prices would cease, the prices of all products would again be determined in a normal way, and agriculture and other industries would flourish anew." Finally, that a fixity in the relative values of gold and silver can be brought about and maintained by international agreement and legislation is proved by the fact that for seventy years, from 1803 to 1873, such a fixity did prevail. Bimetallism in France at the rate of 15 1/2 to 1 existed in France during all that period. What has been done can be done again.

CHINESE JEWELRY.

A Bewildering Variety—Tongue Scrapers and Thumb Rings. The first thing to attract attention in Shanghai and Hong-Kong is the quaintness and quality of jewelry worn by Chinese women in their hair. A careful observer can, simply by looking at these ornaments, tell not only the rank of the wearer, but the district from which she comes. There are three classes of these head-pins: First, the purely decorative pins, made of gold, silver, brass, ivory, ebony, horn, tortoise-shell, bamboo and celluloid, the pin terminating in a head which discloses the rank of the wearer; second, those which terminate in a cluster of some sort, seven jades for instance, or a group of blue cats' eyes representing a bunch of grapes; third, those in which the shank and head are separate, the latter keeping thereby in constant motion. The hairpins used are made of thin bars of gold or silver, which are made to bend to different shapes, according to the style of hair-dressing. Several other articles of ornament are described as follows.

"A curious instrument possessed by everyone in China above the extremely poor is the tongue-scraper. They may or may not have brushes, but they are sure to have a tongue-scraper. This scraper is a ribbon of silver or gold with a ring in at one end, by which it is suspended when desired. The cheapest are of plain metal; more expensive ones are engraved, while a few are jeweled at either end. Like hairpins, they are sold by weight, plus a small charge for workmanship. Thumb-rings are very common in the east. These are often made of precious metal, ivory, jet and precious stones, but generally they are of fine jade. The cavity is not cylindrical, but swells out at the base and middle. This enables the owner to wear it lower down, and also prevents its slipping. The jade is usually polished, but may be engraved or carved in intaglio or relief. The refined classes use jade exclusively, and as precious a variety as their purses will permit, but some of the lower classes wear imitations, which are made of glass or porcelain, colored with lead or iron oxide. One variety, which is made by enamelling 'iron,' is remarkably strong and durable, and corresponds to the 'knuckleduster.' The thumb ring came into vogue in the time of the Three Kingdoms, during the reign of the famous Gen. Kwang-Ti. He used a bow, and, to increase the accuracy of his aim, substituted a heavy bamboo thumb ring for the glove usually worn by archers. His example was followed by his bowmen, until the practice became general. On his rise to power his admirers presented him with a jade ring of great value, which he substituted for the bamboo one. His brother, the reigning monarch, adopted the custom out of compliment to the great warrior, and thus introduced the fashion into civilized society."—London Journal of the Society of Arts.

A DAY'S LESSON.

Bend to the breeze, 'tis the lesson the grasses Teach us each day in their lowly estate; Better to bend 'neath the storm as it passes Than to be broken by pitiless fate.

Bend but a little, the cloud will pass over. Then in the full you can lift up your head. Straighten yourselves like the grass and the clover; Better be bruised and be living, than dead.

"Stand like a rock!" That may do for a hero, Covered with mail, and well used to his lance; But there are mortals, too many, as we know, Weakened by failure, coerced by a glance.

"Never give up!" It is easy to say it When all your weapons in order are found; Courage grows fast when we need not display it; All can be brave when the lions are bound.

"Nothing succeeds like success," that is certain. True as the gospel in these latter days; Put out the footlights, and ring down the curtain. If you have nothing that people must praise.

Bend to the breeze, 'tis the lesson the grasses Teach us to-day; 'Tis a lesson of love; Bend till the storm of adversity passes, And the glad sunshine is once more above. —Clara B. Heath, in Good Housekeeping.

BEAVER.

The Story of Capt. Lawson's Intelligent Canine Messenger.

"I don't at all like the idea of moving away off up here to Westford," said Mother Lawson, as she stepped briskly about, putting the long kitchen, that was also parlor, bedroom and hall, in order, so that the new home might have a cozy look when the tired family drew up about the bountifully spread supper table.

"Why mother," laughed her daughter Ruby, turning about from her work in front of the glowing fire, "our neighbors up here in Westford all will say: 'I want to know if you used to live away off down in Willington?' and I have no doubt you will soon grow into the same manner of speech."

"Perhaps I shall," replied Mother Lawson, cheerfully: "I have learned in my many years of life that home is home, whether it is in one Connecticut hill town or another. If daughter Lucy lived near by, as she did when we were on the old farm, I shouldn't mind so much; or if we were on the same turnpike, where people are all the time driving and teeming, so that we could send word back and forth. But there she is, down there on the Hartford and Providence, and here we are on the Hartford and Boston, and on the cross roads between us there is no mail route, no stage route, no regular teams. We must drive the dozen miles on purpose every time we hear from poor daughter Lucy, all alone, without a relative near her, away off down there in Willington."

"Ha, ha!" laughed Ruby; "who would ever have expected the dear woman to soon fall into Westford ways? Do you hear her, James? Bless me, what is the boy thinking of? This is no time to go off into a brown study or to write a Latin exercise for Parson Loomis to correct."

"This is no Latin exercise," replied James, who in later years became an eminent scholar. "This is a little enterprise upon which Beaver and I are about entering. I do the writing and Beaver does the carrying. Here, Beaver, good dog, Beaver! Do you understand, old fellow? Do you see this?" and he showed the large, handsome shepherd dog that stood by, wagging his bushy tail, a small, leather money bag. "Do you see this paper, Beaver? I have written a message upon it to Lucy. I have told her that we have arrived away up here in Westford safe and sound, and that Ruby is trying flap-jacks for supper, and that mother is worrying about her, as a matter of course, and I finished up by begging her to write and tell us how she is, and send the letter back by you."

The bright-faced lad put the carefully folded paper in the little bag, and tied it by a strong hempen cord about the intelligent creature's neck. "Now, Beaver, you must go as quickly as you can and carry this to Lucy." Opening the door, Beaver trotted out in very important fashion, and James repeated: "Go, Beaver! Go!"

"He will go a good deal!" laughed Ruby, who was always laughing. "He would be as likely to obey if you told him to chop an armful of wood and bring it in."

"You will see," replied the lad, closing the door. "Beaver is no common dog; he understands a great deal of my talk to him. He will pass the night in Willington with sister Lucy, and will return to us to-morrow with a letter."

"Strange Beaver don't come back," said unbelieving Ruby over and over, during the evening, and she even sat up until far into the night momentarily expecting to hear the familiar bark of the favorite dog at the door. He did not come, however, and she arose in the morning convinced that he considered himself sent away for some reason, and that they should never see the fine old fellow again.

farmhouses all along the pleasant country way that stretched between the two great turnpikes. The old residents say that in the fore part of the present century there were ten taverns between Daleville, in Willington, and Westford hill. At all of these houses of entertainment New England rum was sold, and refreshment for man and beast could be provided on short notice.

Beaver had no occasion to call at any of these places, neither did he hunt for squirrels and woodchucks along the way. He attended strictly to his business of mail carrier, and exchanged very few compliments with his canine acquaintances who saluted him with a cordial bow-wow as he trotted past their abiding places.

This went on for several months, and then one winter day Mother Lawson was taken suddenly and violently ill. Capt. Lawson and James were away, and merry Ruby knew not what to do.

"If I only could send to Willington for Dr. Skinner I should be thankful indeed," Beaver!" she said to the old dog, who from one corner of the hearth was very gravely taking note of his mistress' distress. "I might send old Jerry, who is cutting wood at the door, to be sure, but he would call so long at every tavern in turn that he would never get to the end of the journey! Do you hear, Beaver! I want to have Dr. Skinner come to see poor mother. Of course, you don't know Dr. Skinner from any of the other friends who call here. Poor old dog, you know enough to go for Lucy, and that is what you shall do!" Taking a slip of paper she wrote upon it:

"DEAR LUCY—Mother is very sick. Get Dr. Skinner here just as quickly as you can. "BEAVER."

"There, Beaver! Go, Beaver!" she said, and closing the door, she returned to her herb teas and hot water applications. "The old doctor can't get here until sundown, at the quickest," she said, "and it is not high noon."

What was her surprise, therefore, when, in little more than an hour after Beaver started out, the skillful physician cantered up on his feet gray horse, with Beaver following close at his heels.

"Now, this beats all," said the old man, entering the house, saddle bags in hand. "It certainly beats all that I ever heard of. I was just turning up to Col. Britt's tavern to get me a little drop of something hot—for it is an amazing chilly air—and the old dog came along, running like a streak, and headed me off. 'Go long about your business, Beve,' I said; 'Lucy is waiting for her letter.' But he answered, in as plain dog talk as ever I heard, that he was after Dr. Skinner. So I made bold to tell Col. Britt when he came out to see what all this bow-wow was about to open the little leather bag and see what message was inside. But the old dog showed the whole length and width of his teeth in such a way that the colonel retreated forthwith, and upon that Beaver opened his conversation again at me. So I got off my horse, as much out of curiosity as anything else, and if you will believe me, he raised no objection to my finding and reading the letter, and, sure enough, there I found in black and white that Dr. Skinner was wanted."

"However, before I started up here I put the bag on Beaver's neck again and told him to go to Lucy with it, but he would not budge an inch in any direction excepting this."

"I told him he couldn't be expected to know Dr. Skinner," said Ruby, laughing and crying in the same breath, and sitting down on the white floor to tug the intelligent dog, while the doctor took charge of her patient. Mother Lawson recovered and Beaver's praises rang far and wide all about the country side. The fine old dog lived several years after that episode and died of old age, lamented by many friends and admirers. I had this story from one of the family, who was my neighbor, and it is all true but the names—Mrs. Annie A. Preston, in Springfield Republican.

ANNUAL REPORT PRINTED.

Mine Inspector Hall Presents His Report to the Board of County Supervisors.

AN INTERESTING RECORD KEPT OF MINE ACCIDENTS. Candidates Will Be Requested to Promise They Will Oppose Any Division of Hancock Township.

IMPORTANT NOTICE. The only authorized collector of THE MINING JOURNAL in Houghton county is Mr. Horace J. Skinner. Receipts signed by other than him will not be recognized as valid from this date.

The annual report of the county mine inspector, Captain Josiah Hall, was presented at the supervisors' meeting Monday and accepted. The report covers the year ending Sept. 30, 1894, and contains some interesting facts and figures. The fatal accidents were 23 in number, occurring in every month except February and August. There were 4 fatal accidents at the Quincy mine, 1 at the Keamsburg, 3 at the Tamarack, 9 at the Calumet & Hecla, 2 at the Atlantic and 3 at the Osceola. Of the men killed, 10 were miners, 7 were trammers, 3 laborers, 1 timber boss and 1 watchman.

In 1890 there were employed in the mines of Houghton county 7,310 men and 36 lives were lost; in 1891 7,702 men were employed and there were 28 fatal accidents; in 1892 7,640 men were employed with 21 deaths from accident, while in 1893 7,591 men were employed and 23 lives were lost. From these figures it will be seen that the mortality due to accident is growing smaller. The number of men employed is also several hundred less than during the past three years, but as many mines, working a few years ago are now idle the active mines are necessarily employing larger forces than ever before.

The number of men employed during the year just ended was 7,348, or just thirty-eight more men than in the year ending Sept. 30, 1890, yet the population of Houghton county increased 10,000 between the first of January, 1890, and the state census taken last June. The lumbering, milling, manufacturing and agricultural interests must have been largely responsible for the increase.

Captain Hall in his report calls attention to the deep shaft of the Tamarack, now over 4,300 feet in depth; also to No. 4 shaft of the Calumet & Hecla, which is now 5,300 feet—over a mile—on the dip of the conglomerate lode, which is 37 1/2 degrees. Rock is now being hoisted at the rate of almost a mile a minute, a rate of speed far in excess of that of the average express train. The shaft is in a neat pamphlet form and will be supplied to mining men and interested persons on request.

Iron shaft houses are advocated by Captain Johnson Vivian, one of the oldest and best mining men of this district. The ever-increasing use of electricity with the consequent danger of combustion started from exposed wires renders the old-style construction more dangerous every year. The Calumet & Hecla is building an absolutely fire-proof electric lighting station at Lake Linden all of steel, iron and glass, and an iron and steel shaft house on Captain Vivian's plan will probably be seen in the near future. The idea is certainly a promising one.

HANCOCK. Mr. O. W. Robinson, the Republican nominee for representative from the Second district of Houghton county, now of Chassell but formerly a resident of Hancock, has expressed himself as opposed to any division of Hancock township. It is probable that the nominee of the Democratic convention to be held here today will also go on record as opposed to any carving of township lines. The reason for the proposed change is found in the erection of the new stamp mill of the Atlantic mine at the mouth of the Salmon Trout river in Hancock township. The Atlantic mine and the old mill soon to be abandoned are in Adams township and the Atlantic company naturally desires that the very considerable sum in taxes which the new mill will have to pay shall go to the coffers of the township in which it is now the principal taxpayer. Just as naturally the people of Hancock do not like to see any of their territorial appurtenances sliced off, especially just as the slice to be removed becomes of value after remaining practically worthless and productive of very little revenue for many years.

The addition to the smelter dock progresses rapidly and will be completed before the end of the month. The Democratic county convention will meet here today. Wheel horses of the party are wondering whether it is to be a Democratic convention or something else. CALUMET. The Populists swarmed into the Democratic primaries Monday evening apparently by preconcerted arrangement, and swamped the regulars.

The fight between Champ Kehoe and Ed Shepard for the middle weight championship was given to Kehoe on a foul in the fourth round last night.

A DESPERATE WOMAN.

Her Way of Winning Back a Recreant Spouse.

Mrs. Warburton started a little at sight of me, but it is only justice to her to say that she was not at all flurried. Not so much as a flush of her smooth cheek betrayed that it was any surprise or annoyance to find me there. I had considerable curiosity to see whether Rex would evince the same impassiveness, and quietly resumed my book after the first greeting.

Rex did not come to his appointment punctually, or perhaps he had scented my espionage. The widow, after one or two turns across the terrace, approached me and seated herself on one of the steps at my feet. "Is that something very interesting you are reading, Mr. Nye?" she asked presently.

"Not absorbingly so," I responded, partially closing the volume and smiling down at her; I felt no malice toward the handsome widow. "Yet you keep a finger on the place as much as to say you did not like being interrupted. I wish I could find anything worth reading these stupid days."

"You are welcome to this," I said, extending it toward her. It was a copy of the revised statutes. She glanced at the title and back at me.

The next instant she snatched the book from my knees and threw it as far as she could into the bushes. I gazed stupidly after the vanished volume. Mrs. Warburton laughed almost naturally as she rose from her seat on the step.

"There is Rex, now," she said, sweetly, and floated away to meet him, superb in sang froid and effrontery. She whispered him something as she took his arm, and he looked over his shoulder at me and laughed immoderately. He had not felt in the least like laughing when he first saw me. His face flushed uncomfortably and he frowned, but he was merry enough under Mrs. Warburton's beguiling smile.

"Rex," said I, entering his room an hour after, unannounced, "what is the meaning of this? Did you not promise me—"

"Both the promise, Uncle Nye," blurted Rex, "a fellow isn't responsible for promises or actions when a pretty woman is in the question."

"There is but one pretty woman in the world for you!" "Amy?—Oh, Amy is an angel; I love her to distraction."

"The deuce you do?" said I. "I wish the widow was a man. I'd shoot her, by George!"

"There wouldn't be any need in that case." "I'll disinheritor you and marry Amy myself!" he said angrily. "Oh, you will, will you?" said my nephew, grinning. "It is very fortunate that the widow has a handsome income, as in that case I should marry her."

"You—why, she is old enough to be your mother." "Six months younger than your unworthy nephew, uncle. We made the calculation not half an hour ago."

"She's a false, maneuvering flirt as ever lived, and I believe on my soul there's a pair of you!" screamed I, as I banged out of the room, leaving Rex in convulsions of the most unaccountable laughter, and running against Beatrix—that is, the widow—in the passage.

If she had not been one of those gliding creatures who seem to move on air; if she had not gracefully receded before my onset, there is no conjecturing what the consequence would have been. As it was, she recovered herself at once, or rather did not seem to have lost herself at all, and stood smiling sweetly at me.

"I was just coming to ask you to lend me the charming volume you were perusing this morning," she said, in the most matter-of-fact manner possible.

"Ah, doubtless you wish to examine that portion which treats of the legality of marriages contracted under false—"

"Precisely," she interrupted me; "that was just what I wanted to do. Women are so lamentably ignorant on all legal matters. Poor me, I have no idea whether bigamy is considered a crime or not."

She smiled again with an air of being the simplest of creatures instead of the most artful, tripped me the most charming of courtesies and glided away.

Could it be she was in earnest about Rex? I had my fears about him. I had not been free from anxiety lest she should so far entangle him in her meshes as to induce total forgetfulness of the claims of the lovely girl to whom my nephew was already betrothed; but that she could herself mean anything beyond defying and provoking me to the utmost I had not dreamed.

If she persisted in her course what should I do? What could I do at the last but the very thing I had so often and solemnly vowed to myself I would not do—acknowledge the truth concerning the so-called Mrs. Warburton. I fancied the flash of Beatrix's magnificent eyes when she saw me forced to this extremity, the triumphant curve of her scarlet lips at my discomfiture.

A bright thought struck me. I would have Amy up here. It was all nonsense her staying at a stupid farm when we were at a gay watering place.

Beatrix to confound me he would betray himself by the joy he would testify at meeting Amy. But nothing of the sort. He was manifestly disconcerted and annoyed at her coming. Shook hands stiffly, asked how she did in the coldest manner and expressed such surprise at her coming at all as covered the poor child with blushes and confusion. I was in a furious passion at receiving such evidence of his entanglement with Beatrix. How could any man in his sober senses prefer a woman old enough to be his mother to this lovely creature? What could Beatrix see to like in this almost heartless jackanapes of a Rex? Why, if she must torment me with her flirtation, could she not have chosen a man of at least her own years?

"I wish you hadn't sent for me, Uncle Nye," began Amy in a disconsolate tone. "Rex is angry with me for coming. Why is he displeased at my coming?" "He is flirting with somebody else, Amy; that's what's the matter. He's carrying on an abominable flirtation with—well, a woman that don't care a snap of her finger for him. She's somebody's else's wife, too, for aught he knows," I burst out.

"Oh, no, uncle; not a married woman. Rex wouldn't be cross at me for a married woman," cried poor Amy. "He don't know she is married. She passes for a widow." "Then you ought to tell him. Ah, why haven't you told him, Uncle Nye?"

"How Beatrix would have laughed to have heard her. I could have bitten off my tongue for saying it. Beatrix wife indeed!"

I hushed Amy up quite sternly and sent her away to her chamber to dress for dinner. I took her down myself. Rex never came near. He was with Beatrix Warburton.

I admired Amy's spirit. She took matters so coolly, and ate her dinner with what seemed a really fine appetite. I was too angry to eat, and with my usual stupidity I let everybody see that I was annoyed and what annoyed me.

That evening the glittering circlet which Beatrix had worn on her marriage finger, and which she had so often and ostentatiously flashed in my eyes, had disappeared, and in its place was a large diamond.

Beatrix showed it to me herself. Her face was hard and cold, her eyes defiant. "You can not marry Rex," I said in a low voice.

"Not?" she said without lowering her eyes, and setting her teeth; "you will see."

"He is engaged to that girl you saw with me at dinner." "He is not—now," glancing at her solitary.

"You are not so reckless as you would have me think," I said, coldly. "Reckless of what—you? What are you to me?"

"You will marry Rex?" She nodded, smiling and blushing. "You dare not."

"You know I dare." "You shall not."

"Who will hinder me?" "I will tell him the whole shameful story."

Her cheek whitened, whether with fear or anger I could not tell. "He will not believe you," she said, quietly.

And, sure enough, he would not. He regarded me even pityingly and shook his head over the story, as though he doubted my sanity. "It is altogether too improbable, Uncle Nye," he said, sagely; "just look at the acts of the case yourself. Here is a beautiful and accomplished woman, toward whom you have evinced from the first a most singular hostility. Having tried every other means to prejudice my mind against her matchlessness, you come finally and tell me that somewhere about two years ago you met Mrs. Warburton and were married to her yourself. Don't interrupt me. You say, furthermore, that you have the best of proof that she did not care a straw for you, that she maneuvered for you solely because of your money; that your marriage having been strictly private, the clergyman who officiated having lost his life the next day by a singular fatality, the certificate not having been recorded, and other circumstances being favorable, you having accused and quarreled with your wife, to punish her deserted her, refusing to acknowledge any marital relation as existing between you and her. You represent yourself as having met her now during these few weeks for the first time since this apocryphal marriage, you denounce her at this late hour, and you ask me to believe that you are in your senses. I beg your pardon, uncle, but you must think me a remarkably bright young man to swallow such a comically ridiculous yarn as that."

That was all the reason I could argue into Rex Dusseldorf. He even stared at the marriage certificate when I produced it, with "pooh!"—and "pahaw." Anybody could get up such a thing as that, he said. I must say that I was confounded. What to do next? There was but one thing that could be done. That was to gulp down my pride the best way I could; seek Beatrix and confess what an ill-tempered, blundering, besotted old fool I had been and ask her to forgive me and wear my marriage ring again. I did it.

She was incredulous at first, and cool as an iceberg. But she melted at last. "You don't deserve to be forgiven, George," she said, gravely. "but I'll tell you the truth now, just as I would long ago if you had not angered me so. I did not need to marry you for your money." "Then you loved me once, Beatrix?" "Always," she said. "And Rex—"

"That was part of the programme necessary to bring you to your senses." I found Amy and Rex were both in the conspiracy. They were generous enough not to laugh at me.—N. Y. News.

WAS DEALING IN PENSIONS.

Secrets of George Van Leuven's Little Tin Box Revealed to the World.

MEDICAL EXAMINERS BRIBED BY THE AGENT.

Pensioners Often Innocent but the Pension Agent and Examiners Boards Were Crooked.

THE MEMBERS WERE "GREASED."

DURHAM, Ia., Oct. 9.—Special Examiner Waite of the pension bureau, in obedience to an order from Judge Shiras in the federal court, filed the documents captured in the famous tin box in Pension Agent George Van Leuven's private office at Lime Springs, Iowa.

Some of the letters are to pension claimants whom Van Leuven sent to "greased" members of the board in order to have their examinations go through smoothly. Others were letters between the agent and surgeons in which terms were agreed upon for raising ratings and fixing up papers in the case.

One letter makes an offer to a physician at Lincoln, Neb., to pay $5 for an affidavit covering disease of the stomach, deafness and heart disease. This physician, whose name is not revealed, has since testified that he made a large number of affidavits and that his price ranged from $5 to $10.

It is native American, and grows wild south of the Savannah and Tennessee rivers, where it often reaches fifty feet in height.

A World's Tribute.

America Leads the Nations in the March of Progress. Among the wonders of the World's Columbian Fair the grandest was the exhibit of American products. The Exhibition was, in this respect, an object lesson of the grandeur and glory of the Republic. Among the exhibits from the United States no article of its class stood so high as Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder. The Chief Chemist of the Agricultural Department at Washington, backed by an intelligent jury at the Exposition, found it strongest in leavening power, peerless in its purity and beyond comparison in uniform excellence.

Mining Fatalities.

Among the annual reports submitted at the annual meeting of the board of supervisors on Monday that of Mine Inspector James H. Rough of Negaunee contained many points of interest to the general public. The report covers the year ending September 30th and gives the particulars of each fatal mining accident in the county during the year. There were fourteen fatal accidents but in only one was more than one life lost, the total number of fatalities for the year being fifteen out of an average of 3,506 men employed. As the number employed during the two years preceding and covered by Mine Inspector Rough's first and second annual reports was 8,000 no further commentary is needed as to the effect of the great financial depression upon the mining industry of Marquette county.

Of the fifteen deaths two were caused by falling down a shaft, three were caused on surface, six by falls of ground and four from other causes. The verdict of the coroner's jury was "accidental death" save in the inquest upon the body of the last victim of the year, Timothy Sheehan, killed at the Lillie mine Aug. 29 when the verdict was "Death caused by a co-laborer from a blast fired in an adjacent room against the orders of the captain and shift bosses."

Five nationalities were represented in the death list, four English, four Finns, two Irish, four Scandinavians, one Italian. The following is the list with the name of the mine and date of accident:

J. Koddan Anderson, Salisbury, Oct. 1, 1893. Jno. H. Rowe, Lake Angeline, Oct. 21, 1893. Eric Westenberg, Bine, Dec. 11, 1893. Ole Hammer, Volunteer, Feb. 16, 1894. Alex. Youare, Platt, March 6, 1894. Richard Jeffery, Negaunee, April 5, 1894. William Exstrom, Lake Angeline, May 11, 1894. James Paulette, Lillie, May 24, 1894. Jacob Leskala, Jackson, June 7, 1894. RIDING FOR THE CHINESE.

Two American Bicyclers in Asia Give Exhibitions.

They Were Compelled to Dash Into the Cities and Lock Up Their Wheels to Escape the Crowds of Curious Natives Swarming After Them.

On entering a Chinese city we always made it a rule to run rapidly through until we came to an inn, and then lock up our wheels before the crowd could collect, write Thomas G. Allen, jr., and William L. Sachtleben in the Century, continuing their narrative of "Across Asia on a Bicycle." Urumsit, however, was too large and intricate for such a maneuver. We were obliged to dismount in the principal thoroughfare. The excited throng pressed in upon us. Among them was a Chinaman who could talk a little Russian, and who undertook to direct us to a comfortable inn at the far end of the city. This street parade gathered to the inn yard an overwhelming mob, and announced to the whole community that "foreign horses" had come. It had been posted, we were told, a month before, that "the new people of the world" were coming through on "strange iron horses," and every one was requested not to molest them. By this, public curiosity was raised to the highest pitch. When we returned from supper at a neighboring restaurant, we were treated to a novel scene. The doors and windows of our apartments had been blocked with boxes, bales of cotton, and huge cartwheels to keep out the irrepressible throng. Our host was agitated to tears; he came out ringing his hands, and urging upon us that any attempt on our part to enter would cause a rush that would break his house down. We listened to his entreaties on the condition that we should be allowed to mount to the roof with a ladder, to get away from the annoying curiosity of the crowd. There we sat through the evening twilight, while the crowd below, somewhat balked, but not discouraged, stood taking in every move. Nightfall and a dazzling rain came at last to our relief.

The next morning a squad of soldiers was dispatched to raise the siege, and at the same time presents began to arrive from the various officials, from the Tsongtu, or viceroys, down to the superintendent of the local prisons. The matter of how much to accept of a Chinese present and how much to pay for it in the way of a tip to the bearer is one of the finest points of that finest of fine arts, Chinese etiquette; and yet in the midst of such an abundance and variety we were happily, together with meats and chickens, and even a live sheep. Our Chinese visiting-cards—with the Chinese the great insignia of rank—were now returned to those sent with the presents, and the hour appointed for the exhibition of our bicycles as requested.

Long before the time, the streets and housetops leading from the inn to the viceroys' palace at the far end of the city began to fill with people, and soldiers were detailed at our request to make an opening for us to ride through abreast. This, however, did not prevent the crowd from pushing us against each other, or sticking sticks in the wheels, or throwing their hats and shoes in front of us, as we rode by.

In their sight of the viceroys' palace, they closed in on us entirely. It was the worst jam we had ever been in. By no possibility could we mount our machines, although the mob was growing more and more impatient. They kept shouting for us to ride, but would give us no room. Those on the outside pushed the inner ones against us. With the greatest difficulty could we preserve our equilibrium and prevent the wheels from being crushed as we surged along toward the palace gate; while all the time our Russian interpreter, Mafoo, on horseback in front, continued to shout and gesticulate in the wildest manner above their heads. Twenty soldiers had been placed at the palace gate to keep back the mob with cudgels. When we reached them they pulled us and our wheels quickly through into the inclosure, and then tried to stem the tide by belaboring the heads and shoulders in reach, including those of our unfortunate interpreter, Mafoo. But it was no use. Everything was swept away before this surging wave of humanity.

The viceroys' himself, who now came out to receive us, was powerless. All he could do was to request them to make room around the palace courtyard for the coming exhibition. Thousands of thumbs were uplifted that afternoon in praise of the wonderful two-tah-cheh, or two-wheeled carts, as they witnessed our modest attempt at trick riding and special maneuvering. After refreshments in the palace, to which we were invited by the viceroys, we were counseled to leave by a rear door and return by a round-about way to the inn, leaving the mob to wait till dark for our exit from the front.

EDUCATIONAL MATTERS.

They Are the Main Thing Under Consideration This Week at Ishpeming.

CLUB COMPOSED OF UNIVERSITY STUDENTS FORMED.

Accident to the New Ore Crusher at the Cliffs Shaft-Struck by a Switch Engine-More Men Leaving.

A UNIVERSITY CLUB.

A meeting of the graduates of the University of Michigan at Ishpeming and Negaunee was held in this city Monday evening at the rooms of the Messrs. Craemer, Southmayd and Gale, when a club, to be known as the Ishpeming-Negaunee University of Michigan club, was organized. Every graduate of the university residing in both cities has joined. Its membership is as follows: Dr. T. A. Felch, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Bradt, Dr. J. H. Andrews, Dr. N. Kean, S. A. Parnell, F. Baker, O. R. Hardy, W. T. Potters, T. J. Dandon, Misses Alice Craemer, L. B. Southmayd and M. C. Gale and Mrs. J. Vandevanter, of Ishpeming; H. B. Krogman, Walter L. Maas, Dr. Drake, F. A. Bell, L. L. McClair, Dr. Cochran and Miss Dawson, of Negaunee. The officers are: Dr. T. A. Felch, president; Miss Dawson, vice-president; Miss Craemer, secretary and H. B. Krogman, treasurer.

The object of the club is to stimulate interest in the University and to build up sentiment friendly to it in the schools of both cities. Frequent meetings of the club will be held, at which educational topics will be discussed. The University of Michigan is without doubt one of the grandest educational institutions in the land. This the members of the club realize and it is their desire to try and impress that fact on the minds of parents here, as well as their children who are graduating yearly from our schools.

The club has already sent for copies of the University song books and other printed matter relating to the work of the institution which will be entertaining and instructive to the members as well as others interested. When the meeting came to a close Monday evening these present gave the University yell. This recalled to the memory of those present many of the happy incidents of their college days. The yell will be practiced at each meeting of the club and a similar yell will be introduced in the schools of the Twin Cities at a near date.

At the conclusion of the Friday evening program of the inspiration institute the club will give a grand banquet at the Nelson House to the members and invited guests, including all University of Michigan graduates in Marquette county and the educators who will be here conducting the institute. A committee consisting of the Messrs. O. R. Hardy and W. L. Maas and the Misses Craemer, Southmayd has been appointed to complete arrangements for the banquet, which will take place about 10 o'clock. President Felch will act as toastmaster and the toasts will be responded to by H. B. Krogman, superintendent of public instruction of Lansing; H. B. Krogman, principal of the Negaunee High school; Mr. V. B. Cochran and Miss Emma M. Chandler, superintendent of the Marquette public schools. Invitations to all university graduates of the county were sent out yesterday and it is expected that fully fifty will be present.

Tomorrow afternoon between 4 and 6 o'clock, immediately after the afternoon exercises of the institute, the instructors and all visiting teachers will be given a reception at the Nelson House parlors. Landlord Outwater has kindly thrown open his parlors to the educators and all citizens as well as teachers, who are invited to turn out. Those most directly interested in the institute and educational matters generally here extend a hearty invitation to the citizens to attend the reception, as well as the different sessions of the institute, as they will be pleased to have all who can possibly be present meet the visiting teachers and lecturers.

The evening program at the Swedish Lutheran church will begin at 7:30 o'clock. Some four hundred extra seats have been provided and about fifteen hundred people can be accommodated.

Broke the Toggie.

The toggie on the ore crusher at the Cliffs shaft recently received from the Lake Shore Iron works at Marquette gave way Saturday. A new one was at once sent for and it arrived here yesterday and was put in place without delay. The crusher will be working again today. The new crusher was in operation several days last week and seemed to work quite satisfactorily. The breaking of the toggie is an accident liable to happen any time. In this case it was caused by the admission of too large a chunk of ore into the feeder.

Off for the West.

William R. Gray and James W. Alexander, two of Ishpeming's oldest residents, have left here for Kallispell, Mont., where they expect to find work and remain permanently. Mr. Gray is a carpenter by trade and for twenty-three years or more he had charge of the carpenter work at the Barium mine. Mr. Alexander is a stone mason and for several years did contract work here.

Richard Moyle, the baritone singer, left here Monday night for California. Mrs. W. Harnell of Angeline street, was also a passenger for the west on the same train. She will join her husband in Montana. Three or four other Ishpeming men also left for western points on Monday night's train. There are men leaving here for the west almost daily.

Had a Close Call.

A farmer from Greenwood came to town Monday and as he was driving along West Division street he attempted to cross the railroad ahead of a switch engine on the Chicago & Northwestern road as it was only a few feet behind him and coming at the rate of about six miles an hour. The top of the buggy was up and it is possible that the man did not see the engine. The front of the engine struck the buggy and almost completely demolished it. Three of the wheels were torn from the axles, but, fortunately, the farmer escaped without a scratch.

When the man was thrown out of his buggy the horse became frightened and would have run away had not a man who stood near by caught him.

The farmer was real angry when he recovered from the fright. He was so badly rattled that he tried to lay the blame on the man who had caught his horse. About the first thing he asked the latter was if he didn't intend to pay for the damage to his buggy. The man calmly replied that he didn't know, but would ask his wife about it!

Millinery Opening.

On account of the disagreeable weather of last week we have decided to continue our opening for this week in order to give those who have not attended a chance to see the latest novelties in headwear. The ladies are cordially invited to call and inspect the goods and prices at Grabowsky's. (10-9-5d.)

ISHPEMING IN BRIEF.

Mrs. E. J. Canfield's millinery opening is being held this week. Mrs. William Johnson and daughter of Ewen were here visiting friends yesterday.

G. A. Newett sent a deer down from the woods, where he is camping, Monday evening.

T. H. Bargh expects to begin the foundation for his new dwelling on Strawberry hill in about two weeks.

The Jewish business houses of this city will be closed today until 6 o'clock this evening, this being a Jewish holiday.

Mrs. E. C. Cooley and her three children returned yesterday from Holly Beach, N. J., where they have been spending the past three months.

The Excelsior furnace has been closed down the past couple of days to admit of some repairs being made to the engine. Fire will be started under the stack again today.

A carload of Fred Hammill's horses will be here today. Mr. Hammill will get here tomorrow, when he will be pleased to show his stock to his friends and patrons. Headquarters at Lossely's.

The machinery has all been removed from the Saginaw mine. The mine will hardly ever be wrought again. There are several families still residing at the location. They all have land under cultivation there and manage to make a living by farming.

Philip Buntman, of the Celebrated Portrait Studio, will begin work at his office in the Jenks block today or tomorrow. Samples of the work turned out by Mr. Buntman can be seen at the studio. His prices are reasonable and those who desire work in his line should call.

Finch & Erickson have been awarded the contract for the carpenter work on the Milidon block, corner of Main and Bank streets. New floors and a new plate glass front will be put in and several other improvements will be made. The contractors began work on the job yesterday.

Stringing Narwhals.

With narwhals "stringing" is a most favorite trick, and tried by the harpooners when at all possible. It is intended that the harpoon should pass clean through the first, skip over the surface of the water, and so into the second. It is necessary that the boat should be much nearer than in the case of harpooning one, and a considerable distance between the animals may be allowed, provided always that the line is a direct one. This, then, is what we are about to attempt. We have been paddling with breathless care, and scarce twenty yards now separates us, Davidson sights steadily, and suddenly there is a loud report, causing a piece of loose snow to break off from the floe and tumble into the sea. At the same moment two unicorns spring into the air, and fall back with a single splash. The stringing is a success. Up goes a ringing cheer that skips over the sea and flings itself from point to point of the ice floe in waves of sound. Away flies the line over the bow; but the next minute the strain ceases, and they come to the surface dead.—All the Year Round.

THE AMERICAN HOME.

Family Obligations Which Conduce to Household Happiness.

Probably nowhere in the world is the genuine harmonious home, the real family circle, so perfect in all respects as in this "land of the free and home of the brave."

All over the country are dwellings more or less spacious and commodious, where live families larger or smaller, the case may be, but each a little independent principality, with its own laws, interests, amusements and labors. It is the miniature type of the great land we live in. Here there is no arbitrary rule, no absolute monarchy, no slavery, no control by fear, no inflexible system by which the weak and the innocent are sacrificed to the will of the strong, and timidity is crushed and destroyed because it has not the power successfully to cope with brute force.

The American family circle at its best is an interesting example of intelligent equality. Because the father is older and more experienced and has the physical strength to do so, he does not imagine it to be his right to abuse and ill-treat his wife and children. On the contrary, his superior muscle and brain and brain are ever enlisted in the endeavor to shield his loved ones from the storms and rough phases of life and to help their inexperienced footsteps over life's pathway that they stumble not therein. The mother has her deepest interest in the happiness, health and general welfare of her household and is never weary in her labors for their highest good. No task is too difficult for the parents to undertake, no obstacles are too great and no pain or suffering or sorrow counts for anything by the side of the present and future prosperity of the family. To train the children up to healthful, intelligent and useful maturity is their high ambition; and surely no aim could be more praiseworthy and no occupation more honorable. To this end they often deprive themselves of present luxuries, and grow weary and prematurely old with anxiety and overwork. But the future of their little ones is so much to them. How they build "castles in the air" about the time when the youngsters will be grown up and able to take upon themselves the duties and responsibilities of life! And then they try to get a little of the rest which for long years they had denied themselves. When the boys are in business and the girls are snugly settled in homes of their own, how delightful it all will be! They will live over again their early trials and triumphs, and rejoice that their children are spared the privations and hardships which they endured. For parental love is unselfish and seeks the welfare of the child first. Whether this unselfishness is not carried to excess at times, let the records of ingratitude and ill-treatment of those who have devoted their lives to their children answer.

But in this wisely-managed, well-ordered home this does not happen. Each and every child has its duties and responsibilities, and is taught from its earliest infancy that it owes some obligations to the family, the world and to humanity. The family does not exist for it alone, but every member of the little community is responsible for some part of its well being.

In country homes this is even more important than in towns and cities, for there the youngsters have a wider field. Everything in nature appeals for care and protection, and an intimate acquaintance with the works of the Creator always broadens the mind and makes the thoughts and ideas more comprehensive.

Selfishness robs the soul, and its free and long-continued indulgence degrades its victims, and destroys all noble and generous sentiments.

Kindness and consideration for others should be among the earliest lessons, and a thorough education in this portion of the training of the young will save much regret in after life, and will do much toward elevating the sentiments and raising the standard of the American home.—N. Y. Ledger.

FOREIGN GOSSIP. Recent explorations at the ancient temple of Anxur, near Terracina, on the Italian coast, have brought to light a natural conduit stretching through the rock, through which a current of air passes.

A cartoon which the Paris Figaro had ready to publish at the time of President Carnot's death was one of the usual illustrations for Forain. The artist, thinking of the possible retirement of Carnot from the presidency, had figured two waiters at the banquet of Lyons exchanging opinions.

The camel in a wild state is supposed to be still in existence in central Asia, but is extremely rare. It was thought to be extinct, but some fifteen years ago the Russian explorer, Privaloff, discovered them; and last year Mr. Little, in the course of a journey across Asia from Batum to Peking, shot four in the desert of Gobi, a little eastward of Lob Nor.

Few streets in Paris have puzzled strangers more than the Boulevard Raspail, the old Boulevard d'Enfer, the broadest of all the Parisian avenues, which, on paper, run from the "Lion of Belpoit" to the Boulevard St. Germain, but has never been completely cut through.

According to statistics recently collected in France from 1865 to 1870, under the second empire, there were 195 condemnations to death and 85 commutations of sentence, or 44 per cent; under MacMahon, from 1873 to 1878, 179 sentences and 112 commutations, 62 per cent; under Grevy, from 1878 to 1888, of 311 condemnations 162 were commuted, or 52 per cent, and under Carnot the figures were 157 and 68, 45 per cent.

A PRIMITIVE LAND. An Outing Among the Queer People of the Appalachian Range.

At any point on the frontier or in the heart of West Virginia you step from your train to the wagon that awaits you, and the length of a morning's "constitutional" finds you in the dominion of a belated century. The time is right by your watch, but your pocket calendar is a hundred years too far ahead.

I went into West Virginia over the Pennsylvania border last summer, and put up at a mountain-spring resort. There was a clashing of two centuries there. The arch city maiden in white flannel was there trimming her hat with butterflies, sticking a hat-pin into them at twenty places, "so as to find their hearts and kill them without hurting them too much," and at night she banged out Sousa's last two-step in a way that filled the old woods with the breath of a Michigan avenue boarding-house.

Observing that the strangers at the springs came from unthought-of distances to drink the sulphur water that bubbled up in the meadow by the hotel, they too paid the tardy century the compliment of drinking its catholicon. But with never-failing shyness they always came at sunup, without noise or bustle, though in strong force, to fill their pails and cans and blickeys and carry the liquid away.

The women came sidewise, bobbing lightly up and down on the horses, with both feet side by side on the animal's ribs. The caps of their calico hoods wavered prettily in the breeze. The teamsters knew better than to sit on the jolting wagons that pounded over the rocks in the roads, so each saddled the left-hand horse of his team and rode at ease, while the horses tugged up the hills with a force that had to be met and eased by means of the harness of broad straps which is the horsegear of the entire Appalachian world.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY. It has been computed that since the practice of embalming began in 4000 B. C., down to 700 A. D., when it practically ceased probably as many as 750,000,000 bodies were embalmed in Egypt, of which the greater part are yet concealed.

Experiments have been made by Dr. Buchner in submitting working bees to a regimen of deoholized honey. The effect is astonishing. They revolt against their queen and give themselves over to idleness, brigandage and pillage until they are cast out by their fellows.

Fifty-two trades unions, with a membership of over 350,000, have made returns for July to the labor department of the English board of trade, which show that 7.4 per cent of their members were unemployed, as compared with 6.3 in June and 6.2 in July, 1893.

Mr. Janssen recently exhibited to the French Academy of Sciences the clockwork that will register the observations of the instruments placed in the observatory on top of Mount Blanc. It requires winding up only once in eight months, and is lubricated with a material that has been exposed to a cold of 80 degrees below zero without freezing.

A new anthropometric test of sensitiveness has been designed by Dr. Galton. A band of color, showing all the sixty-five shades of blue, is slowly passed before the eyes, and the subject makes a dot for every shade detected. As far as the experiments have proceeded only about twenty shades are generally discovered. In one case, however, a dyer detected about forty.

Soap is found to be one of the best known sterilizers of water suspected of infection. It seems that for a long time after the cholera epidemic of last summer, the people of Hamburg were afraid even to bathe themselves with Elbe water, but MM. Forster and Nijland, of that city, claim to have shown by experiment that ordinary toilet soap, added at the rate of an ounce to about twelve quarts of water, will kill the cholera bacilli in about ten minutes.

BREWERY IMPROVEMENTS.

Completing the Transformation of the Marquette Brewery Into a Solid Stone Structure.

MINING ACCIDENTS IN MARQUETTE COUNTY LAST YEAR.

Charles F. Riggs Stock Company Commencing City Conventions Called for Monday Evening.

INCREASING THEIR INVESTMENT.

No one who keeps posted upon the affairs of the Upper Peninsula Brewing company can doubt that it is the settled policy of its officers to year by year increase their permanent investment here and annually to devote a large share of the earnings of the business to costly improvements which shall add to the efficiency and capacity of the Marquette brewery. In keeping with this settled policy work is now in progress which will completely transform the appearance of the brewery and make it by far the handsomest and most complete establishment of the kind in northern Michigan, the change being the last step necessary to make the entire structure of solid stone, four stories high, slate roofed and practically fire proof.

The portion of the plant which is undergoing the transformation is that occupied by the wash house and the task of replacing the frame structure with one of heavy brownstone to conform to the rest of the buildings is already far advanced. Caspar & Schwartz having the contract for the stone work, while William Gorman is in charge of the carpenter work as superintendent for the brewing company. The handsome stone arch over the main entrance bears the letters "U. P. B. Co." and the increase of a story in the height of this part of the plant will give a very imposing appearance to the whole. Finishing the work of reconstruction commenced a few years ago.

The first floor of the rebuilt portion will have a Portland cement floor and will be used as a wash floor while the second story will be the grinding floor, the third the malt floor and the fourth the tank floor. The stone comes from the Marquette quarry, about 120 cords being used, and the lumber from Fraser, so that the company is entirely faithful to its avowed principle of standing by home industry. The mansard roof will be covered with slate in white and black patterns and the size and evident solidity of the establishment will challenge attention from the passengers on every incoming and outgoing train.

In addition to this work, which will cost between $5,000 and $6,000, the company has completely overhauled its ice pond this season, having drawn off the water and deepened the pond by removing over 2,000 loads of muck from its bottom while a new flume has been built for the outlet and very handsome rustic bridges placed over the spring brook which is the source of supply for the pond.

The change now in progress removes the last trace of the brewing plant as it existed when Meeske & Hoch first took hold of it sixteen years ago, with the single exception of the large brick chimney and it is probable that that will not long survive. Meeske & Hoch, already partners for five years in Milwaukee, first had their attention called to Marquette by a notice of a brewery for sale or lease in the Michigan Volksblatt, published in Detroit. The brewery referred to stood at the corner of Spring and Third streets but on arriving here Mr. Meeske ran against the larger brewery west of the city which was also idle then. He leased it for three years from the owner, Hon. Peter White, and it was nearly a year before he discovered the location of the brewery plant he really started up here to look at. A year later the firm purchased the Negannee brewery and Mr. Hoch took charge of the business there, leaving Mr. Meeske in Marquette, an arrangement which has since continued. At the expiration of their lease the firm purchased the Marquette brewery also and since that time they have increased their business with every passing year and remodeled and increased the capacity of both plants until they now supply a large share of the trade for the entire length of the D. S. & A. road, having a well established business even in the large cities at the head of the lake in competition with several home breweries. The purity and excellence of the product of the Upper Peninsula Brewing company's breweries is acknowledged by everyone and hence it is that the company in the face of hard times and of increased competition throughout its entire territory is more than holding its own, a testimonial of appreciation which is proof of the true merit of its product and which is naturally very gratifying to the men who have built up here and at Negannee such a flourishing industry from so small beginnings.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

A Republican convention for the county of Marquette will be held at the Nelson House in the city of Ishpeming on Tuesday, the 15th day of October, 1894, at 1 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of nominating candidates for the following county officers, viz: Sheriff, treasurer, county clerk and register of deeds, prosecuting attorney, two circuit court commissioners, two coroners and one county surveyor. After which the delegates from the First and Second representative districts will organize and nominate candidates for the state legislature for their respective districts.

Also for the purpose of transacting such other business as may properly come before the convention.

The several wards of the cities and townships will be entitled to one delegate for every 100 votes, or an excess of a moiety thereof, cast at the last general election for governor, as follows:

City and township committees will call caucuses, giving at least five days' notice of the same. In their absence or failure to act members of the county committee for the locality should perform that duty.

her only child to "Franklin Fitts," a young American, and who misconstrues his meaning and accepts him before he can find time to explain matters in the right way. J. S. McGrath will be the "Franklin Fitts." Henry Gilbert will impersonate the scoundrel, "Baron Le Bois." John H. Fullwood will play "Wellesly Napier," and "Carol," the jailer will be in the hands of Ralph Hayden. Miss Annie Leonard in the strong emotional role of "Cicely Blaine," an American heiress, finds many opportunities for dramatic intensity, which she takes every advantage of. Miss Aurel Seeets, who is well remembered for her great work with "The Crust of Society," will electrify the audience by her powerful portrayal of the Italian model, "Francesca." Miss Dora Drosdrow will be the dashing and impetuous "Psyche Gay," and Miss Hattie Foley, the tearful but artful "Phoebe Gay," and Miss Mary Stewart "Sister Alica."

Tuesday the same cast of players will be seen in the powerful comedy drama of "La Belle Marie," which affords great opportunity for the display of some handsome and costly stage wardrobes. In fact it is claimed that the dresses worn by the ladies in this well known play are among the handsomest stage gowns ever seen in this city. New and novel specialties will be introduced also, and taken in its entirety we can safely say that it will be the social and society event of the season. The prices have been placed in reach of all—twenty-five, thirty-five and fifty cents. Tickets will be on sale at Bigelow's this morning.

Republican City Convention.

V. B. Cochran, chairman of the Republican city committee, has issued a call for the Republican city convention to select eighteen delegates to the Republican county convention to be held at Ishpeming, Tuesday, Oct. 16, to place in nomination a Republican county ticket. The city convention will be held Monday evening, Oct. 15, at 8 o'clock in L. P. She Will Make a Success.

Miss Alys Cramer, daughter of D. Cramer, of this city, now assistant principal of the Ishpeming schools, is about to branch out as an instructor of voice culture in Marquette. Her fine amiability, rare conscientiousness of duty, extraordinarily rich voice and with all her valuable qualifications as a teacher should make her entrance into her new work easy and these elements are sure to be appreciated by the citizens of Marquette. The Times wishes her, as always with Ann Arbor favorites, all the success imaginable.—Washtenaw Evening Times.

An Error Promptly Accepted.

In setting the type for Jacob Rose's advertisement in yesterday's MINING JOURNAL the compositor interpreted "Come at once if you want your share" to read "Come at once if you want your shoes." Mr. Rose declared yesterday that he had no objection to the ad standing as it read for he had shoes enough to fit all comers, be they large or small, and at prices to suit all sizes of pocket books.

Is a large one, and large prospects are always agreeable. Just now one of the most pleasing of prospects is the possible settling of one's house with new furniture. When it comes to buy furniture, low prices are what you want. A house is an institution that requires money to put in shape. You will need less money if you buy here than you will anywhere else in Marquette. Bedroom suits, parlor suits, dining tables, dining chairs, kitchen furniture and miscellaneous pieces are all here for the inspection of buyers. Our stock touches the two extreme points of high quality and low prices. We have bedroom suits at $15.00; regular price $30.00 and all goods in proportion. Give us a call.
