HILL OPENS THE CAMPAIGN.

Delivers Rousing Speech to a Large Gathering of Constituents in Syracuse.

CAMPAIGN THAT MAY BECOME INTERESTING HISTORY.

Expressed Regret That Certain Democrats Are Jeopardizing by Their Actions the Party's Welfare.

PAID HIS REGARDS TO MORTON

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 11.—Senator David Bennett Hill sounded the keynote of his campaign for governor tonight in this city and with his address opened a partisan battle that promises to be historical in the annals of state politics. Hamba rink where Democrats and Republicans alike have sounded the tocsin of political battle was the scene of the opening note of the warfare. Some three thousand people heard Hill speak tonight and half as many more were unable to gain admission. The band amused the crowd until a few minutes before 8 o'clock and then there was an uproar, the people rising in their seats amid great enthusiasm as Hill, dressed in plain frock coat and black tie, stepped upon the platform. When the cheers and applause had subsided Chairman Hon. Frederick J. Mowery introduced Senator Hill. When his name was mentioned the senator stepped to the front. For some minutes he waited while the audience cheered and cheered again and then he began his remarks. He was frequently interrupted with most vociferous applause. He spoke in a clear and convincing way and held the audience until his last word. His allusions to Seymour, Cleveland, Flower and the A. P. A. issue caused tumultuous applause. Hill said in part:

"It is with pleasure I recall that my first nomination for a state office occurred in Syracuse and during all my political career the Democracy of this city has been among my most earnest supporters. I am also reminded that this city is the birthplace of that distinguished and sterling Democrat and statesman, Horatio Seymour, from whose lips I first learned the lessons of Democracy and it was also the boyhood home for many years of the present Democratic president of the United States, Grover Cleveland [loud applause], where, struggling with honest poverty, he acquired those habits and principles of economy which have always been distinguishing features of his official administrations in the state and nation. It is my intention to conduct upon my part an honorable campaign free from unnecessary personalities so that at its conclusion, whatever the result may be, I shall be able to retain at least my own self-respect and I hope as well the personal respect of my adversaries.

"For the distinguished and venerable gentleman whom the Republican party has selected as my opponent in this campaign I have nothing but the kindest feelings and most profound personal respect. I acknowledge his many excellent qualities and am indebted to him for many courtesies while he was the presiding officer of the senate. Of a genial disposition, conceded business ability and large means he naturally attracts friends and any for any position which he may covet becomes most formidable and dangerous. Everybody knows that the real Republican candidate for governor is not Morton but Platt himself. It is the voice of Levi but the hand of Thomas. The people of the state, especially thoughtful Republicans have not forgotten the fact that for every office to which Morton has aspired he has been pushed forward by Platt. He has a perfect right to be ambitious and to aspire to the governorship of this state but I do insist he should be a candidate in person and not by proxy."

Hill then took up state issues, including the Lexow commission and the recent constitutional convention, of which the Republicans were in the majority. He dwelt at length upon the latter, criticizing severely the proposed reappointment, claiming that if enacted into a law it would give the Republicans control of the state legislature for all time to come.

A. P. A. WELL ROASTED.
"I condemned," said Hill, "in my speech at Saratoga and I condemn here also the un-American spirit which is insidiously fastening itself upon portions of the community, which seeks to set up a religious test as one of the qualifications for public office in this country. Any organization, secret or otherwise, which has this object in view, deserves the execration of every good citizen. It is useless to deny the fact that sympathy for this intolerant spirit has found much support in Republican circles, much encouragement in the Republican press and much aid at the polls in strong Republican localities. It is also a significant fact which cannot well be explained away that the recent Republican state convention, although urgently requested to do so, deliberately refused to incorporate any provisions in its platform condemning such an un-American policy. Such a provision would have been very appropriate at this time, in fact absolutely demanded by every consideration of patriotism. In the national constitution which our fathers framed, it was wisely provided that no religion shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States. This sacred constitutional provision prevents the enactment of any federal statute creating a religious test for public positions but of course it does not and cannot prevent the proscription by individuals, associations or political parties. That must be regulated by an intelligent public sentiment which I invoke this time in opposition to the rising spirit of intolerance which we observe cropping out on every hand."

Hill then read what that great western statesman, Stephen A. Douglass, said in a speech at Philadelphia July 4, 1854, when Know-Nothingism was rampant, condemning severely the proscription of any man of this country on account of his religious faith. Continuing, Hill said:

MCKINLEY LAW A FAILURE.
"I deny the oft repeated statement that the Democratic party is justly responsible for the hard times through which the country has just passed. The financial panic of the last year and the succeeding hard times were the results of Republican legislation enacted during Harrison's administration. The McKinley bill was a complete failure. It virtually broke down during the last year of the Harrison administration. Receipts were so meagre that the expenditures of the government nearly exceeded its revenues. Drafts were made upon the treasury department, not promptly met among others, for the payment of monies due for pensions, as accounting officers well recollect, and a system of transfers of balances from different sub-treasuries became necessary and entered upon which gave an excuse for delay in the settlement of government claims, when in truth and in fact, the nation for the time being was virtually bankrupt, because the McKinley law had been used to carry out the provisions of the Sherman silver law and the McKinley law failed to produce the required revenues. These conditions kept getting worse, until the Sherman law was repealed and then not fully relieved until the repeal of the McKinley law. What has been the result since then with these two statutes repealed? The country is now entering upon better times and everywhere there is a feeling of security, confidence and prosperity.

"What the country needs now is industrial peace. Any attempt to repeal the existing law and substitute the McKinley law will disturb the business interests of the country and restore the recent hard times and should be thrown down by every business man in the country. Besides it would be an ill-advised and idle effort because it cannot succeed. Even if a Republican house should be chosen, supplemented by a Republican senate, not a law could be passed without the approval of a Democratic president. It is better for the country, better for the direct interest, better for everybody that no such effort be made, but a Democratic house and senate should be chosen to co-operate with the president in giving the country industrial peace for the next two years.

LABORED UNDER DIFFICULTIES.
"The Democratic party in 1893 took charge of the government under unfavorable and adverse circumstances. With a slender majority in the senate, with an unwieldy majority in the house, with timidity and radicalism to contend with, it is not to be wondered at the measure of revision which was finally passed by the Democratic majority and which is now submitted for judgment to the country does not in all respects meet public expectations. It, however, is a vast improvement over the McKinley law and will clearly demonstrate its superiority as time rolls on and the business interests of the country shall adjust themselves to its provisions. It recognizes in part, at least, the Democratic doctrine of free raw materials. If it is said the new law in a single respect is unduly favorable to one particular trust, my answer is the old law favored a dozen trusts.

"Every man, despite the Republican statements to the contrary, should understand that another general or extensive tariff revision is not contemplated by the Democrats now or in the future. This determination does not preclude the desirability of redeeming the pledges we make in our platform or to otherwise force raw materials into the readjustment of any objectionable sugar schedule. Beyond this it is not wise to go much farther at this time unless an unforeseen necessity of the treasury warrants or imperatively demands it."

INDEPENDENT OF ALL RINGS.
After saying he believed in honest government in nation, state and city and that he had no sympathy with fraud or corruption, Hill in conclusion said:

"I pledge my best efforts to uproot rascality wherever it may exist in our state and punish the offenders wherever found. If my nomination, which I have reluctantly accepted under circumstances with which you are familiar, shall be ratified by the people, I shall assume the office under no obligations to any ring, machine or political clique, and free from any entangling alliances whatever and with the sole desire to discharge my duty to the whole people according to the best of my ability. To the party and friends I have only to say that past differences shall be forgotten and all interests, all sections and all factions shall be treated fairly and alike.

"I regret that certain very estimable gentlemen in New York and Brooklyn have announced their unwillingness to give me their support at the election and express a desire to advocate a third ticket. I deplore such action, not on account of the result to myself personally, but for the Democratic cause which their unwise action tends to imperil. They know as well as I do this nomination is not of my own seeking and for a week I sought in every honorable way to be relieved from the burdens and responsibilities which its acceptance imposed, but I found it impossible. The United Democratic party of this state will give us victory. A majority of the people believe in Democratic principles and desire their triumph. I repeat what I said in opening the campaign in Brooklyn in September, 1892, in behalf of our national standard bearers, Cleveland and Stevenson, to secure the victory which awaits us we must organize, organize, organize."

At the conclusion of the speech there was tumultuous applause and after adjournment many people remained to shake the senator's hand.

MCKINLEY IN MICHIGAN.

Delivers an Address to an Enthusiastic Audience at Detroit.

ADRIAN, Mich., Oct. 11.—Governor McKinley arrived here this morning and delivered a speech to several thousands at the fair grounds.

DETROIT, Oct. 11.—At Adrian Governor McKinley was met by General Alger, Governor Rich and others, who escorted him to Detroit. A stop of three hours was made at Jackson in order to enable the governor to address an immense crowd gathered at the fair grounds. A brief stop was made at Ann Arbor where the students at the University and others gave McKinley a rather boisterous greeting but entirely respectful hearing. It was dark when Detroit was reached. There was a big crowd at the depot to cheer him. The Auditorium tonight was literally packed and McKinley found his audience to be one of the most responsive he ever addressed.

A GOOD SIZED TICKET.

Ten Political Parties Are in the Field in Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 11.—The official ballot to be voted in November will be the bulkiest ever known in Illinois. It will contain ten tickets—Vice Democratic, Republican, Populist, Prohibition, Independent Democratic, Independent Republican, Independent Peoples, People Silver party, Independent party and Peoples party.

Attorney General Maloney today gave an opinion regarding women voting for trustees of the university of Illinois at the coming election. He says: "County clerks have nothing to do with ballots for women to vote for school officers. They vote in a different ballot box with the fashioned ballots and furnish their own ballots." In printing the ballots under the Australian law, county clerks will proceed as far as the distribution of ballots is concerned as if the act entitling women to vote had never passed."

MARQUETTE, MICH., OCTOBER 12

Entered as Second-Class Matter of the Second Class in the Postoffice at Marquette, Mich.

SENATOR VILAS had the temerity to attend a Republican meeting that was addressed by Governor McKinley during the latter's tour through Wisconsin this week. In the course of his remarks McKinley referred to the speech endorsing President Cleveland delivered in the senate by Vilas last summer. This was the signal for a number of people in the audience to begin jeering the senator. Presently the cry "put him out!" went round, but McKinley interceded for him and the Wisconsin senator was spared the indignity. They have very enthusiastic Republicans down in Wisconsin this year, but it would be just as well if they held their enthusiasm a little more rigidly within the line of decency than was the case at the meeting mentioned.

LEPHARIT, one of the A. P. A. members of the Detroit school board tried for soliciting and taking a bribe from a concern that had a bid in for furnishing the schools there with a lot of school furniture, has been convicted and will spend some time in the penitentiary in expiation of his offense. There were four of the members of the board implicated in the disgraceful transaction, but one of them, Davis, has skipped. The other two are yet to be tried but there can be no doubt of a conviction in their cases also, as the testimony against them is the same as it was in the Liphardt case. As guardians of the interests of the public schools these Apalists appear to have their price, but they don't come very high. The bribe-takers on the Detroit board sold out for $100 each.

WE HEAR that Phil J. McKenna is making a vigorous canvass in his senate district, and that he thinks he has a good show of winning. McKenna squared himself handsomely with whatever enemies he had in his party by bringing a solid delegation from Delta to the congressional convention for Colver, and will get the full party vote in the district. While he has not manifested a very friendly feeling for THE MINING JOURNAL or its editor in the past, this paper is not disposed to do him harm in the fight he now has on his hands, and freely admits that he would make a stirring member of the state senate if elected. There is more good in Phil than his sometimes bitter utterances in his paper would lead the public to believe, and on one very essential point he is unassailable—his personal integrity.

SOMEHOW we do not hear as much denunciation of the income tax from the rostrum in this campaign as the opposition to it in congress gave promise of. The Boston Herald gives this explanation of the eloquent silence of the party speakers regarding the income tax law:

Opposition to the income tax is in a bad way, indeed. Here is the Republican convention of Massachusetts without a word to say against it, and the Democratic convention of the same state declaring in its favor. Those who think a wrong step was taken when it was passed must oppose it individually if they oppose it all. There is no organization in the whole broad land that will aid them to such an end. We have been asked why it is that the Republicans, who, most of them, voted against it in congress, and who denounced it severely in their speeches, are now so mute upon the subject. Our reply is that it is currently reported that word has been sent to the Republicans of the east that their party at the west is in favor of the measure, and that it will seriously embarrass the latter if anything is said against it in this quarter. Hence this silence.

Thus, from the Chicago Record, fairly illustrates the tortuous logic of the campaign orator, but the cartoon showing a grocer's advertisement of "Another cut in sugar: sugar drops one-half cent," to which each speaker points in turn, must be imagined by the reader, as we have not the means of reproducing it.

Democratic orator—"My friends, the Republican calamity howlers told you that under the new tariff law the price of sugar would advance and that you would suffer in consequence. Yet today, under a Democratic tariff, sugar is as cheap as ever, and the price is still falling. Remember this when you come to vote," etc., etc.

Republican orator—"Fellow citizens, you have been told by the Democrats that whenever a tariff is put on an article the price of the article is increased by the amount of the tariff. If this is true, why has not the price of sugar advanced under the new tariff? The present fall in the price of sugar shows conclusively that the tariff does not increase the price paid by the consumer and proves how beneficial is a tariff. Remember on election day that," etc., etc.

The silvery eloquence of Marcus Peterson is missed in this campaign. Two years ago Marcus was stumping the district for the party that he then loved but has since learned to look on with less affection, and he was a great card, too. In that campaign Claude Atkinson was writing vigorous articles urging everybody to vote for Sam Stephenson, as editor of The Diamond Drill, the sheet which he then had charge of at Crystal Falls, but Claude has also dropped out of the fight and is a fugitive from justice, he having skipped to avoid trial on a criminal charge. And A. S. Parks, who was postmaster at Crystal Falls two years ago and a hard worker for "Our Sam," is now serving a sentence for embezzlement of government moneys in the house of correction at Detroit. Another missing light is E. P. Lott, who has disappeared from the sight of his trusting friends since that express package affair. Sam has had rather had luck with his workers and associates to federal offices but the old man himself survives and is going to be sent back for another term in congress—if enough of people vote for him.

PROSPERITY IN MEXICO.

A dispatch from the capital of Mexico gives this information regarding the condition of things in that country:

The present plethora of silver in the banks of this city is without precedent. There is at least $26,000,000 in the vaults of the leading banking houses, and the deposits are being constantly added to, notwithstanding that many new companies are being formed to build railroads, open up new mining properties and exploit other industries needing a large amount of ready capital. Not only have the banks plenty of money to put up on low interest, but the same may be said of Mexican houses in general. The apparent reason for the abundance of money at the present time in Mexico is that the high rates of exchange on gold has driven Mexico back upon its own resources.

New enterprises being launched, plenty of money to carry them on a profitable, and no complaint of hard times! That's what adhesion to the doctrine that silver is a good coinage metal is giving Mexico. Why wouldn't a similar financial policy give a similar result in this country? If it would that is just what we want. Suppose we try the experiment that seems to have been attended with such success in Mexico?

THE COUNTY NEXT.

All that remains to be done to complete the tickets with which the different parties in this county will go before the people in the pending election is to put up the candidates for county officers and members of the assembly. The conventions to choose these have already been called, and soon the voters will know who they are to support and who to oppose for the offices that are nearest to them and with which they have most to do in the transaction of public affairs.

THE MINING JOURNAL has no advice to offer either of the parties, save in a general way, as to the selection of candidates. It would advise the "state-makers" on both sides to act with unusual caution this year, for the people are doing some tall thinking. Public positions are not in the nature of "private snaps," to be enjoyed indefinitely by any set of favored persons, and the conventions will consult the interests of the parties which they represent if they keep that fact well in mind and pay some regard to the wishes of the voters when they name the men who will stand as the party candidates in the campaign.

It has been charged against the Republican party in this county and district that a select few have always been the recipients of its best gifts, and that there is no show in it for anybody not a member of or favored by a cabal that has managed to secure and retain control of its affairs. THE MINING JOURNAL mentions this charge, but does not care to discuss it at present.

If there is any foundation for it the convention which will name the county ticket next Tuesday should take care not to strengthen the hurtful suspicion by its action, for if it does it will not improve the prospect for the party in the county. Marquette is a strong Republican county, and things may be done by the party leaders in this county that it would not be safe to attempt if the parties were more equally matched, but no party was ever strong enough to fly in the face of popular sentiment and the action that would not be taken in a close county should not be taken in one that gives a heavy party majority.

"These be perilous times" in politics, and the party that would win must not run counter to the opinions and wishes of the voters, for the secret ballot enables every man to vote as he pleases and the power of the party boss has departed forever.

Blair and Lincow.

Austin Blair, the "war governor" of Michigan, who died recently, once told a correspondent how his feelings toward Lincoln underwent a change. Said he: "I was greatly opposed to his nomination, and it was a long time before he won my entire confidence. He was not only a strong, wise man, but he had the great faculty of knowing how to hide his time. I as well as others, believed a proclamation emancipating the slaves should have been issued months before it was done. Finally, weary of urging and waiting, we called a convention to meet at Altoona, Pa. The very day we met the president issued his emancipation proclamation, leaving us little else to do but send him a delegation thanking him for what he had done. It was hard to get the start of him, and he seemed to know just when the opportune period had arrived to perform a public act."

Business men and traveling men will find it to their interest to get their meals at the Marquette Coffee House, 103 Superior street.

THE LITTLE BROWN DOG.

Early and late you watch and wait. Little brown dog at the door. For a quick football and a boyish call. For your master to come once more. Eager to follow, through field and hollow. Wherever his feet may roam. Content to stray, if he leads the way. Wherever he is, is home.

But you never hear the whistle clear. Nor the sound of the boyish call. Nor the scamper of feet all bare and fleet. Down through the shadowy hall: Though long you wait at door and gate For your play-fellow of old. With his eyes so blue and his heart so true. And his hair like the sunshine's gold.

'Tis a year and a day since he went away To a country beyond our ken. And those who go that way, we know. Never come back again. Still early and late you watch and wait. Little brown dog at the door. But the voice is still, and watch as you wish. Your master comes no more. —Dorothy Deane, in Youth's Companion.

A PROSELYTE.

A Well-Taught Lesson He Never Expected to Learn.

Mr. Aubrey Everdene looked out upon Sackville street and yawned. Only an instant before he had written "Edits" to an article with a dash of the pen across the last sheet, and now the MS. lay ready for the post among the debris of printer's proofs, key novels awaiting review, etc., with which the writing table was strewn.

One of the best-known literatures in London, and a brilliant conversationalist, his tongue could be as scathing as his pen, and it was said of him, with regard to the latter weapon of warfare, that in half a dozen polished sentences he could do more towards damaging a book than any two of his competitors. A big, loosely-made man, Mr. Everdene, with shrewd gray eyes and the pessimism of a modern. Studying his face as he lounged by the window, his hands in the pockets of his smoking jacket, one could see that he had a lively sense of humor combined with his other characteristics, and understood the interest his personality aroused.

Presently a servant brought him a visiting card on a salver.

"The lady would be obliged if you would grant her an interview, sir."

"Lady Hilyard," muttered Everdene, reading the inscription. "I can't recall the name. Both the woman, what does she want? However—ask her to come up, Blake."

When she entered, a fair, elegant woman of perhaps five-and-twenty, in an irreproachable Parisian toilet, he was still more convinced that he had not the privilege of her acquaintance.

"Mr. Aubrey Everdene?" she queried.

Mr. Everdene bowed.

"No," she said, "I have come to quarrel with you, and I don't sit down in the houses of my enemies!"

"To quarrel with me?" His eye brows went up. The thought came to him that his visitor was not in her right mind.

"Yes. Perhaps I had better explain myself at once. I am the author of 'Fashion and Footlights'."

Mr. Everdene, standing perforce because she pulled his mustache, while the fair stranger tapped her No. 3 shoe on the carpet with impatience, and looked pitchforks and daggers.

"Fashion and Footlights," he reflected aloud. "Fashion and Footlights!"

Comprehension stole over his face, and with it a slight amusement. He fished among a pile of volumes and brought out three bound with an elegance destined to win the hearts of suburban circulating libraries.

"Here it is. I reviewed it in the Centurion, didn't I?"

"No," she said, "you hanged and quartered it!"

"I am sorry! May I ask how you found out that I was the culprit?"

"Oh, by accident. It's a long story, and unimportant, since you don't deny the imputation. Now, Mr. Everdene, I know it is very impertinent of me, a stranger, to come to your private address and worry you. I am doing a very unusual thing, I am afraid, and Mrs. Grundy would be horrified. But 'fools rush in,' you know, and widows are privileged! You must have a little patience with me, because—"

"for the first time her lips relaxed, and she smiled a smile that was sweetness itself—'well, just because I'm a woman and you're a gentleman. Acknowledge the truth, now, on your honor. Don't you think you were unnecessarily harsh to my poor little literary effort?'"

"No," he said, bluntly. "I always give my true opinion of things, and I consider your book had many faults."

"If she had been a man he would have said: 'I thought it was excessively bad,' with the brusqueness of conviction, and probably declined to discuss the matter. But to a lady it was impossible to be rude. He regarded her absurdly unconventional presence with a tolerant kindness.

"Of course, I admit that there are faults, but upon one or two points in your criticism, I cannot agree with you. I should very much like to discuss them with you. May I?"

"Certainly." His mouth was twitching under his heavy mustache. "But don't you think, pending the verdict, that you had better sit down? You will be fatigued. If you'll permit me to wheel this armchair nearer the fire for you—"

Having carefully arranged it so that she should face the light, he seated himself opposite to her—the A. B. C. of diplomacy, but she did not appear to notice it. She was drawing arabesques on the carpet with the point of her ivory-handled umbrella.

"I should very much like to know," she said, "what you think of me for coming here!"

"I think you are plucky—yes, and recklessly unconventional."

"Candid, at any rate! And I like that." She looked up. "Now for the first indictment on the list, Mr. Ever-dene! You accuse me of improbability. I deny it."

His manner bordered upon pre-occupation. In truth he was thinking what wonderful lashes she had, and how becoming a flush of excitement could be to a clear, pale skin.

"You assert," she continued warmly, "that it is ridiculous to suppose that a man and woman of the world could fall in love at first sight, as I make my hero and heroine do, and that such proceedings are limited to boys and girls in their teens, and the pages of penny fiction. I should have thought that Mr. Aubrey Everdene would have shown wider sympathies."

"Then you really believe, Lady Hilyard, that adult, sensible people do conceive such abrupt attachments?"

"I am convinced that it happens frequently."

"Oh, come, not frequently!" "Well—sometimes," she amended. "I could give you a dozen instances."

He lacked the heart to argue with her. It would have been like breaking a butterfly on a wheel. And after all there might be more sentiment in fin-de-siècle humanity than he thought; women have wonderful intuition in these matters.

"Well, suppose we let that slide for the moment and proceed to indictment number two. What other phrase of mine do you take exception to?"

"You said that I had not the remotest idea of construction, and that 'Fashion and Footlights' was evidently a specimen of that objectionable class of fiction which you regretted to see growing so prevalent—the amateur novel, born of vanity and a lack of wholesome occupation."

Her voice died away with a tremor. He had only stated the truth, but the fact did not prevent the speechless Mr. Everdene from feeling as if he had committed a particularly brutal murder and the ghost of the victim had come to arraign him before all the people whose opinions he valued most.

"I—I cried," she murmured, pathetically.

Her lips quivered. Beads of perspiration rose to the man's forehead.

"Good heavens, if I had only guessed how much I should hurt you! It was harsh, monstrous. No doubt I was in a bad temper, and your unfortunate book was the first thing that afforded me an opportunity to vent my spleen."

Lady Hilyard applied six square inches of cambric and lace to the corner of an eyelid.

"If you'll only believe me, my dear Lady Hilyard, when I tell you that I'm sorrier than I can say."

"Then you acknowledge that you were needlessly cruel?"

"I was brutal." He would have committed blacker perjury as she wiped that tear away.

"And that I had just cause for indignation?"

"You were perfectly right."

A smile broke like April sunshine over her face.

"In that case I suppose I must forgive you."

He was ridiculously grateful. He heaved a sigh of relief and hesitated with his hand on the button of the electric bell.

"Lady Hilyard, you know the Arab custom of talking salt with one's friends? As a token of good-will, permit me to give you the prosaic English equivalent of a cup of tea."

The offer was tempting, the weather was hot and she had talked a great deal. She yielded. When the refreshment came, accompanied by wonderful sweetmeats from Bond street round the corner, she asked permission to pour it out for him, with a winning grace which charmed him. It afforded him an odd sense of pleasure, too, to see her white fingers moving about the china. He was unaccustomed to the presence of women in his home.

With the Japanese table between them they chatted for awhile, and then the clock on the mantelpiece struck six. She rose with a pretty gesture of dismay, like a second Cinderella.

"Do you know, Mr. Everdene, that I have been here a whole hour wasting your valuable time?"

"I thought it had been ten minutes," he answered, "and the pleasantest of my life."

"Very pretty!" she said, blushing faintly. "And, in return for it, let me tell you that my address is on my card and that my 'day' is Thursday. Also, I must thank you very heartily for your kindness and courtesy to an impertinent intruder. Very few men would have been so considerate."

"Please don't thank me; it is I who owe you a debt of gratitude. You have taught me something I never expected to learn."

"What?"

"That the conduct of your hero and heroine was not improbable at all."

Their eyes met—the woman's drooped, self-conscious, pleased. "You really mean that?"

"On my soul I do."

The most delicious softness was in her voice. "It makes me so proud and happy to think I have convinced you."

There was a silence. She smoothed a wrinkle in her suede glove. He twisted a button on his coat. Then she aroused herself with a little laugh and extended her hand.

"Well, good-by, Mr. Everdene, and, once more, thank you."

He pressed her fingers ever so lightly—her proselyte.

"Not 'good-by,'" he murmured. "An revoir."—Black and White.

Statistics show that all occupations that expose the person to dust predispose to tuberculosis, and that persons who follow sedentary occupations are likewise predisposed to the disease. Those who live out doors are almost entirely free from it. Contagion, especially due to floating germs, seems to explain these facts sufficiently.

CITY FULL OF TEACHERS.

The Inspiration Institute Brought Flocks of Them to Ishpeming.

PROCEEDINGS ON THE OPENING DAY

Stupa Oratory Will Soon Be Turned Loose on Us—Firemen Preparing for Their Ball.

THE INSTITUTE.

There is a large gathering here attending the inspiration institute being held under the direction of Superintendent Patten. All the schools in the county have been closed to enable the teachers to be present at the institute. Every train yesterday brought teachers to town, while those from Negaunee came here and returned via the street car line. The Ishpeming teachers who were appointed to escort the visitors to Superintendent Hardy's office, where places at the homes of private citizens were assigned them, were at the depot on the arrival of every train during the day.

The instructors were all on hand yesterday and the program at the High school during the morning and afternoon was carried out as previously announced. Although all of the visiting teachers did not arrive until afternoon the morning session was well attended. In fact every seat in the room was occupied, the majority of those present being teachers. At the afternoon session many of the citizens turned out, consequently all the available space in the room and adjoining halls was taken up. Today's sessions will quite likely be held in the Swedish Lutheran church, so that all who wish to attend may be accommodated. The High school has been handsomely decorated with flowers, etc., for the occasion and presents a very attractive appearance.

The reception at the Nelson House, from 4 to 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon, was a very pleasant affair. The teachers were all on hand and many citizens turned out to meet the visitors. Superintendents Davis of Negaunee, Northmore of Republic, Montgomery of Champlain, Chandler of Marquette, Cooley of Calumet and White of Jacobsville and Dr. Wadsworth of the Houghton Mining school were among the visitors. While en route to this city yesterday Mr. Cooley received a telegram from his teachers, wanting to know if they could not close the schools there and attend the institute also.

At the entertainment last evening in the Swedish Lutheran church the spacious room was none too large to accommodate the throng that attended. Quite a number of Negaunee people were present and visitors from all parts of the country who happened to be in the city were noticed in the assemblage. The program was well rendered throughout and all present were greatly entertained by the exercises. The program for the different sessions today is as follows:

MORNING. 9:30. Opening. 9:40. Reading, Miss Harris. 9:50. Music. 10:00. United States History, H. R. Patten. 10:05. Recess. 10:15. Applied Psychology, Habit Forming in Teaching, President L. D. Harvey, Milwaukee Normal School. 11:20. Singing. 11:35. Nature Study, Miss Harris. 11:50. Adjournment. AFTERNOON. 1:30. Opening. 1:45. Relation of Superintendent to Teacher, Superintendent R. E. Denfeld of the Duluth schools. 2:00. Singing. 2:25. Nature Study, Miss Harris. 2:30. Recess. 2:40. Applied Psychology. 3:45. Inspire or Expire, H. R. Patten. 4:15. Review. 4:30. Closing. EVENING. (At the Swedish Lutheran church at 7:30.) Music, "On the Laughing Wave" Chorus Eighth Grade Pupils. Prayer. Rev. Mr. Green. Music, "Massa Is in the Cold, Cold Ground" Address, "The Triple Relation" (state, school and family). Supt. R. E. Denfeld, Duluth. Music (Solo). "The Starvation Song" Miss Eva Davis. Address, "The Teacher's Responsibility and Opportunities for the Training of Character in His Pupils." President L. D. Harvey. Music, "The Foot Traveler" Eighth Grade Pupils. Music, "Battle Hymn of the Republic" Eighth Grade Pupils. Benediction. Rev. Mr. Creliand.

Political Speakers Coming. Republican speakers will address meetings here on early dates. Hon. Sam M. Stephenson was in the city Wednesday evening and announced that he had secured the services of several prominent speakers to make a tour of this district during the next few weeks. Among those mentioned were Governor Rich, ex-Governor Luce, Judge McPeck of Eaton county and J. C. Burrows. Judge McPeck will most likely be the first speaker to address a meeting here. He will be here some day next week, perhaps Monday or Tuesday. He will spend a week or ten days in this section and the copper country, taking in all the principal cities and towns, after which he will visit other sections of the district.

The Firemen's Ball. The arrangement committee for the annual ball of the Ishpeming fire department, to take place on Thanksgiving eve, Nov. 28, held a meeting Wednesday evening and appointed sub-committees to prepare for the event.

The Twin City orchestra was engaged to furnish the music. It is not yet fully determined where the supper will be given, but it will probably be served at one of the hotels instead of in the dining room adjoining the hall in which the dance will take place.

Milinery Opening.

On account of the disagreeable weather of last week we have decided to continue our opening for this week in order to give those who have not attended a chance to see the latest novelties in headwear. The ladies are cordially invited to call and inspect the goods and prices at Grabowsky's. (10-9-5d.)

Chinese and the Camera. Messrs. Allen and Schellen, the young American students who made a bicycle tour across Asia, dispelled an illusion concerning the ignorant Chinese. Writing in the Century of their arrival at the city of Lan-chou-foo, they say: "On the commanding heights across the river we stopped to photograph the picturesque scene. As usual the crowd swarmed in front of the camera to gaze into the mysterious lens. All the missionaries we had met cautioned us against taking photographs in China lest we should do violence to the many popular superstitions, but the only trouble we ever experienced in this respect was in arousing popular curiosity. We soon learned that in order to get something besides Chinese heads in our pictures it was necessary first to point the camera in the opposite direction, and then wheel suddenly round to the scene we wished to take."

A GREAT INDIAN CHIEF.

Death of the Famous Napoleon of New Zealand.

His Life a Career of Savage Warfare and Bloodshed—He Once Held a British Army at Bay.

Revi Maniapoto, whose death was recently reported, was almost the last of the great chiefs of the Maoris. He was born in 1807, and was a warrior and leader in council among the Ngati-manipotos from his youth. His earliest years, says the Washington Gazette, were passed amid savage scenes of inter-tribal strife, ambushes, fierce hand-to-hand battles, massacres and cannibal orgies. Hongi, chief of the Great Northern tribe of Ngaphi, visited London, was greeted by Exeter Hall, patronized by George IV., presented with a suit of armor and a gilt crown, and loaded with gifts. At Botany Bay, on his way back, he converted these into guns and powder, and on landing at the Bay of Islands proclaimed himself the Napoleon of New Zealand, entered on a career of slaughter and rapine, and swept the country south of Auckland with fire and sword.

His victorious march was stayed by the Waikatos in 1818, Revi became one of the leading Maori generals. For two years the struggle raged with varying success against ten thousand British troops, supported by a powerful squadron, but step by step, and contesting every inch of ground, the Maoris were pressed back to Orkney, where Revi made a last heroic stand with three or four hundred followers, the remnant of his tribe.

He was besieged by fifteen hundred British troops for three days, during which the garrison went without water, and subsisted on raw potatoes and maize. At length, after repeated assaults had been repulsed, the flying sap broke into the trenches, and a storm of canister and musketry swept the works. General Cameron, with a soldier's chivalrous admiration of the spirit and bravery of the enemy, offered terms of capitulation. Then a slight, wiry figure, with a closely tattooed face and fiery gleaming eyes, leapt on the breastworks, and flung back this stern defiance: "Ka whai matau, toma, ake, ake!" "We will fight on for ever and ever and ever!"

The stronghold was carried with a rush, but Revi and a few others escaped. Realizing the hopelessness of the struggle, he successfully exerted his influence to bring about a peace, and since that time he has been a consistent and loyal ally of the Europeans, and a promoter of every movement for the welfare of his countrymen. To the last his affection for Sir George Grey was simple and touching. A few months ago, when he felt that his end was near, he expressed a desire that they should rest side by side in one grave, and only a few months before his death a handsome monument, made in Auckland to the order of Sir George Grey, was erected with much ceremony near the old chief's home at Kihikahi. It bears the following inscription: "In memory of Revi Maniapoto, the last great chief of Ngati-manipotato, Ngatirankiawa and Waikato."

ALL EUROPE READY FOR WAR.

The Great Nations Prepared for a Declaration of Hostilities.

After the dreadful Franco-German war of 1870-1871 the principle of prolonged military service and of diminished annual contingents was given up, says McClure's Magazine. The monstrous principle of universal service was adopted instead. By this principle the whole nation is under arms. A country is no longer a country, a people is no longer a people; a nation is now nothing but an army, and a country is only a barracks. Everybody wears the uniform. Everybody is sur le qui vive. If war breaks out to-day all professions become deserted, all functions abandoned; the life of the nation stops so that national activity may be said to begin again only with the blood that is shed. Moreover, before two hostile armies, that is, two nations which are enemies, join in combat, each of the two armies, that is, each of the two infinite hordes which traverse their several countries to meet eventually on the field of battle, will leave behind it a country in famine, its factories silent and its trade paralyzed. Again, enormous stocks of food supplies must be accumulated on the frontiers where the two armies are likely to meet; but before reaching these, inexhaustible magazines the armies must be fed while crossing their own territories, and that requires money. So, that, before even the first gun is fired, each army will have expended enormous sums and left in its train towns and villages stripped of men and beasts, the cities in famine, the country without a single tiller of the field.

Carnot and the Figure Seven.

The French papers have been noting the curious way in which the career of President Carnot was connected with the figure "7." He was born in 1837, was admitted to the Ecole polytechnique in 1857, was elected by virtue of article 7 of the constitution to the office of president of the republic in 1873, was assassinated at the age of 37 years, in the seventh year of his presidency, in a carriage containing seven persons (four inside and three outside, a coachman and two footmen), on the seventh day of the month, by an Italian (a word of seven letters) named Caserio (also formed of seven letters). Finally, he was borne in triumph to the Pantheon on the first day of the seventh month of the year, seven days after his death.

On the subject of the grounds of divorce very great divergences occur between the laws of different nations. In France, to call a wife "canaille" before her children justifies a decree of divorce, as also does a wife's refusal to obey her husband when it is a question of a theatrical engagement.

SLEEPING GAME OUTSIDE.

Since the deer season opened caribou after caribou of hunters has been dumped within the confines of Marquette county, principally in its south-western portion.

If true, this is a flagrant violation of the law, which forbids the shipment of game outside of the state, and is deserving of the immediate attention of the state game warden.

False economy or a failure to grasp the situation on the part of the board of supervisors has left Marquette county without a game warden to watch the movements of this mob of invaders.

Michael Fournier, the last game warden, had hard work to secure his fees from the county and in fact was molested of a part of them.

It is high time that the county rid itself of the approach which now clings to it and made arrangements with some zealous and acute man to see that the game laws were observed by all classes alike.

Refreshments will be served throughout the fair, coffee, tea, cream and cake principally, and a cordial welcome will be given to people of every denomination.

Frasque Fair Day.

Saturday, if the weather proves fine, will be "Frasque Fair Day" for Marquette. There are hundreds in the city who have probably never visited the park or at all events have never seen it in its gorgeous October coloring.

Had His Nerve With Him.

The principal character in this true tale is a young business man of Marquette, a female domestic in his family who has an abiding fear of burglars, a dog belonging to the household, and a brother-in-law of the young business man who fortunately happened to be visiting him when the events about to be narrated took place.

The young man and his brother-in-law happened to remain out rather late one night this week, beguiled by the fascination of a particularly interesting game of peder at one of the popular resorts in the city.

This aroused the domestic alluded to and she lost no time in availing of a friend who occupied the bed with her. The two listened intently for a minute.

"Burglars!" exclaimed one in a tone of horror. "And we'll be killed in our beds," said the other in a trembling whisper.

False Weather Forecasts.

It is not generally known that it is quite a serious offense to publish false or counterfeit weather forecasts or warnings, sending them to have been issued by the United States weather bureau.

Any person who shall knowingly issue or publish any counterfeit weather forecasts or warnings of weather conditions, falsely representing such forecasts or warnings to have been issued or published by the weather bureau, United States signal service, or other branch of the government service, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.
