SEMILLANTE'S WRECK.

A Thrilling Story of the Sardinian Sea.

As the violent storm of the other night has thrown us on the Corsican coast, let me tell you a terrible story of the sea, of which the fishermen of the place often speak at eventide, and about which chance has enabled me to learn strange particulars.

It was three years ago. I was sail-ing the Sardinian sea with seven or eight sailors of the coast survey. It was a rough voyage for a novice; we did not have one good day through March. The wind was furious and the waves never calmed. One evening, as we were flying before the tempest, our vessel came for refuge to the mouth of the Straits of Bonifacio, among some little islands.

Their aspect was not alluring. They were great, bald rocks, covered with birds, some bushes of lentisk, a few tufts of absinthe, and here and there, in the slime, decaying pieces of wood. But, my soul! it was better to pass the where the blast came in as though it were quite at home; so we contented

No sooner had we disembarked than The Great Lawyer's Income Was Un- the sailors lighted a fire for the fish soup, and the captain called me, point-ing to a little inclosure surrounded by a white wall almost lost in the mist at leather-covered book, like those of the end of the island. "Will you come

As they don't receive many the second of $20 for retainers on the visits, the least we can do is to go and New Hampshire circuit. The first fee say: Bonjour to them so long as we

"With all my heart, captain." How sad it was, the cemetery of the Semillante! I see it still, with its littember 22, 1834, thus done and con-cluded." A similar summing up ap-dreds of black crosses hidden by the The second total is $15,183.74; the third is $21,793. The first entry of $2,000 was weeds. Not one wreath of immorthe poor, abandoned dead! How cold

We stayed a moment kneeling. The captain prayed aloud. Enormous gulls, the only guardians of the cemetery, circled over our heads, mingling their hoarse cries with the wailing of the sea. The prayer finished, we came sadly back to the corner of the island time had been lost during our absence We found a great fire flaming in the shelter of a rock, and the soup sm ing. Sitting down in a circle, with our feet to the flames, soon each had on his knees a bowl of red pottery, in which were two slices of black bread, covered plentifully with the broth. The repast was a silent one. We were wet, we were hungry, and then, the nearness of the graveyard!

However, when the bowls were emptied we lighted our pipes and talked a little—naturally of the Semillante.

"Tell me, how did it happen?" I asked the captain, who, with his head on his hands, stared at the flames with a thoughtful air.

"How did it happen?" said the good Lionetti with a heavy sigh. "Alas, no human being can tell. All we know is that the Semillante, laden with troops, left Toulon the evening before in bad weather. During the night it grew worse-wind, rain and a terrible sea, the like of which was never seen before. In the morning the wind fell a little, but the sea was worse, if posso that one could not have distinguished a beacon light four feet away. must have lost her helm in the morning, for the captain, even in a heavy could hardly have made such a mistake. He was a well-tried mariner We all knew him. He had commanded the Corsican station for three years, and knew the coast as well as I, who know nothing else."

"At what time do they think that the Semillante perished? "It must have been at noon-yes, monsieur, fully noon, but, forsooth, with that fog, that noon was worth no more than a night as black as the jaws of a wolf. A life-saver of the coast told me that the same day toward halfpast eleven, having gone out of his cabin to fasten his shutters, the wind whirled away his cap, and at the risk of being carried off himself by the blast he commenced to crawl along the beach on all fours after it. You see the douaniers aren't rich, and a cap costs. Well, it seems that our man, lifting his head, saw right near him, through the fog a great ship scudding along under bare poles to ward the Lavezzi islands.

"This ship went very fast, so fast that he had hardly time for a good look. Everything points to the belief that it was the Semillante, because a half hour later the shepherds of the islands heard-why, here comes the shepherd himself, he will tell you. Bonjour, Palombo. Come, warm thyself. Have no fear."

A muffled man, whom I had seen for some minutes prowling around our fire, and whom I had taken for one of the crew, because I did not know that there was a shepherd on the island, approached us timidly. He was an old leper, three-quarters of an idiot and a prey to I know not what other scorbutic evil, which made his lips there by the waves. Insane with fear he had fled to his boat to go to Bonifacio for help.

Tired with having said so much, the shepherd sat down and the captain went on with his story:

"Yes, monsieur, it was this poor old fellow who came to warn us. He was crazy with fright, and ever since his brain has been off the track. To tell the truth, there was cause enough for Imagine six hundred corpses in heaps on the sand, mixed with great timbers and strips of sail. Poor Semillante! The sea had crushed her into erumbs with one blow. Palombo with difficulty got enough wood to build a fence around his hut. As for the men, nearly all of them were horribly disfigured and mutilated. It was pitifu to see them clinging together in bunches. We found the captain in gala uniform; the chaplain with his stole. In a corner, between two rocks there was a little cabin boy, with his eyes open. One might have thought him alive; but, no, it had been decreed that not one should escape." Here he "Careful Nardi," said he, "the fire is part of the story is yet to come. Three weeks before the disaster a little cutwhich was going to the Crimea like the Semillante, was wrecked in the same way, nearly in the same place, only this time we managed to save the crew and twenty soldiers who were on board. We took them to Bonifacio, and kept them there at the station with us for two days. Once thoroughly dry and on foot again, it was good-by, good luck. They re-turned to Toulon, from which port they embarked again several days later for the Crimea. And imagine on what ship! On the Semillante. We found them all—twenty, lying among the dead just where we are now. I picked up myself a handsome brigadier, with long mustache, a strapling from Paris, whom I had taken to my own house, and who made us laugh all the time with his stories. To see him there crushed me. Oh, Holy Mother!"

Thereupon the good Lionetti, much moved, shook the cinders from his pipe, and rolling himself in his cape, wish all me good-night.
Still under the influence of the lugubrious tale which I had heard, I tried to rebuild in my fancy the poor, departed ship, and the story of this agony of which the seagulls were the witnesses. Several details which had struck me, the captain in gala dress. the chaplain's stole, the twenty soldiers, helped me to imagine all the scenes of the drama. I saw the frigate leaving Toulon in the night. loses sight of the port. The sea is bad, the wind high. The captain is a valiant of icer, and everyone on board is undisturbed. In the morning a mist rises from the sea. They commence to be uneasy. All the crew are on deck. The captain does not leave the bridge. Between decks, where the soldiers are shut up, it is dark, the air is close. Some are ill, tying on their knapsacks. The ship pitches horribly. It is imposble to stand up. Sitting on the floor talking in groups, they cling to the benches. It is necessary to shout to be heard. Some begin to be frightned. Listen then: wrecks are fre quent in these waters; the sailors are there to say so, and what they say is not reassuring. Their brigadier, too, a Parisian who always talks wildly, makes their flesh creep with his jokes. "A wreck! Oh, a wreck is amusing very. We will be well out of it after

It was thus that I passed the night dreaming, bringing back through tend years the souls who had perished in the poor ship whose debris surrounded me. Far away in the strait the tempest raged. The flame of the fire bent under the blast, and I heard our bark thrashing and straining at her moorings at the foot of the rocks. - Alphonse Daudet, in Romance.

His mother had been very patient with him and the kind neighbor who came to see him off told him that angels went everywhere; they were not subject to rules like other people, and did not need to be conveyed by steam cars or boats from one point to another. But Davy was not comforted.

It was strange then and it seemed stranger afterward, when they thought about it, although none of them suspected the truth. Davy's father took it for granted that the boy was playing that he had an angel visitor, just as children play 'house' or 'company' to amuse themselves. Once he had stolen on Davy unawares, not to surprise any celestial visitorthe big, healthy man would have laughed at such a delusion—but to make the boy scream with the happy surprised him greatly, When he pounced on Davy from the door of the arbor the boy was alone, but there was a stranger ruetling of the control of the control

Then Mr. Pond did what he was sorry for long after. He shook the child angrily, and insisted upon a description of the angel who was supplanting father and mother in the heart of the boy. But Davy would only sob and say, as he had often done before, that his angel was "boof", an'

The crowd lost sight of the ribbon-decorated pet in the excitement of seeing the new excitement, and so did madame herself, and it was not until she had finished her performance for that time and reached out for the pythoness and the anaconda, that she missed it.

There was an instant clearing of the place, people tumbled over each other in their haste to get away, but never again did the eyes of Mme. Houssan rest upon her "so unique pet." He had vanished from her horizon forever.

The doctor, who-had given Davy up, his father and mother and a few sorrowing friends, sat by his pillow and fanned him incessantly to keep the breath of life in his frail little body. There was no sound of talking or weeping, but an utter silence which was suddenly broken by the sweet song of a bird. They all heard it and on each it had a peculiar influence, something un-canny, like the speech of inanimate But Davy was transfigured. He lifted himself on his pillow and, with incredible strength, screamed at the top of his voice:

"Angel—my boof'l Angel!"
The astonished parents looked at each other. Then, before they could speak or move, a strange thing hap pened, so strange that I, its historian, will not ask you to believe it without the evidence of stranger things that dow and sought Davy's bed. Those present fell back in a fright. The next moment it was clasped in the child's arms, was caressing every line of his wasted face, singing that weird song that sounded like a harp's vibration and twining itself about the frail body with a loving clasp. And Davey was restored before their very eyes, saying over and over again in his blessed baby patois: "Me love Angel— me so glad!"

How the snake came into the possession of the circus can only be guessed. In its long search for its little human playmate it had probably been cap-tured, when its beauty and tameness made it an attraction. Naturalists familiar with the species assured the childs parents that the snake was as harmless as a kitten, and as it caused the little fellow's speedy restoration to health, it was endured by them, if Mr. G. At Muncie a committee of citizens met General Harrison and escorted him to a stand erected in the court house square. At least 5,000 enthusiastic people assembled and saluted the ex-president with a great cheer. He spoke about twenty minutes. After a few remarks with reference especially to the veterans of the late war he confined himself to a discussion of the issues of the campaign. He alluded to his prediction made at Evansville that Germany would find something the matter with our pork and cattle, which he said had proven true so far as the cattle were concerned. From Muncie the party was taken by special train to Newcastle.

Anderson, Ind., Nov. 4.—The recep-

HOWARD WILL REMAIN.

Secretary Carlisle Decides the Case of Morton's Coachman.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4 .- Secretary Carlisle has rendered a decision directing that the case against Howard, Mr. Morton's coachman, be dismissed.

Secretary Carlisle yesterday wrote the following letter to Henry Stump, superintendent of immigration, in relation to the case of John James Howard, who was arrested here charged with landing here in violation of the alien contract labor laws. Mr. Howard was employed as under coachalleged, had brought Howard to this country under contract in violation of the acts of 1885 and 1887. Howard is ordered released:

Treasury Department, Office of the Secretary, Washington, D. C. Nov. 3.—
Hon, Henry Stump, Superintendent of Immigration, Treasury Department—Sir: I have carefully examined the evidence taken before the beard of special inquiry in the case of John J. Howard and the reports of the board and the commissioners of immigration at Ellis Island, N. Y., and have reached the conclusion that the said Howard comes within the first provision of section 5 of the act approved February 25, 1885, and therefore ought not to be deported. The decisions of Secretary Windom, March 12, 1890 (S. 1919) and Assistant Secretary Spaulding, April 30, 1891 (S. 11,015), that immigrants who came here under employment "strictly as domestic or personal servants" cannot be ordered released:

lawfully admitted into the country, or permitted to remain here, unless they actually come with their employers, are not approved and will not be hereafter regarded as precedents by the immigration officials attached to this department.

You are directed to make the proper order for the release of Howard and for his return to the place from which he was taken, if he desires to go there. Very respectfully, J. G. Carlisle, Secretary.

Upon receipt of this letter Mr. Stump

BABY WAS WELL BAPTIZED.

Stolen for the Purpose by Plous But Pilfering Guatemala Domestics.

A San Franciscan, traveling through Central America with his wife and young babe, rented furnished apartments in Guatemala and engaged a servant to act as nurse and general house maid, says the San Francisco Argonaut. She had been in their service less than a week when she inquired of the father if the babe was baptized. He replied in the negative, whereupon she insisted that the child, a girl, would be forever lost. Within six weeks he had tried four consecutive servants, but found that each one would pilfer small articles, and finally determined to get along without any help. One afternoon, while sauntering lazily through swered, "it is all right, as I stole her away one Sunday, and the good padre baptized her, calling her Maria, so her under consideration for some time and soul will be saved." "As it cannot before his return from his vacation hurt her, and may help her, I am satishurt her, and may help her, I am satismissed the subject from his mind. The next day servant No. 2, with a new charge bundled in the linen swath on her back, approached him at the market place with the oft-repeated query: "Did you have the baby baptized? and to his reply of "No" she consoled him by explaining that she had taken the little one to the cathedral and had it named Catárina, so her soul was saved a second time. Somewhat amused, the father hunted up and interviewed the succeeding servants, and discovered that the babe had been stolen to the church by each of them and quietly baptized. Consequently the name ran Maria Catarina Margarita Cruz Eloisa Refugio, besides that of Emily given by the parents.

A ROYAL DEADBEAT.

How King Milan Filled His Depleted Purse by Shady Methods.

One hundred and sixty thousand dollars per annum is the income conceded to ex-King Milan of Servia, by his son and by the national treasury in consideration of his quitting the country and betaking himself once more Paris or some other distant capital. is now some months since he left the French metropolis to all intents and ly were the scene of wholesale deprepurposes penniless, numerous judg-ments out against him and a quantity of so-called debts of honor unpaid. His credit was exhausted and he was financially speaking, on his beam ends. It may be remembered, says a writer in the Philadelphia Press, that when he first abdicated he stipulated for a large annuity, which was granted to On two occasions subsequently he obtained large lump sums from the Servian army to defray pressing debts. Then he commuted his annuity for a third lump sum of large dimensions sold his office and dignities in Servia for a fourth sum, his Servian citizenfrom the czar a gift of two million rubles in return for a solemn understanding never under any circumstances to return to Servia. It was not very and in the demi-monde.

Finding himself without resources he effected a reconciliation with his wife in the hope of inducing her to come to his assistance, she being very rich, Queen Natalie, however, knows her husband too well and declined to do any thing whatever for him until he had eaten humble pie by himself demanding the annulment of that divorce which he had taken so much trouble to obtain, and even then she refused to give him any of her own money, but merely offered to use her influence with her son to grant him a new allowance. Seeing that young Alexander was somewhat slow about comply ing with the request, and his position at Paris without either money or credit being absolutely untenable, he, in defiance of all the promises which he had made alike to the ezar, to the Austrian government and that of Servia, re turned to Belgrade, where his ence brought about a couple of minis terial crises and led to no end of difficulty. And he has refused to budge from there until his financial exigencies are complied with.

I suppose that unless the tired Servians depute some one to put him out of the way by means of knife, pistol or poison, we shall in course of time see him once more going through the same process. That is to say, he will commute his present income for a lump sum, squander it and then return to Belgrade and upset one or two more ministries, disturbing things generally until again bought off.

RUSSIAN ROYALTY.

An Empress Who Took Part in Som Singular Performances.

In the "Memoirs of Jacob Ivanovitch De Sanglen," there are some interesting particulars about Russian royalties. Jacob De Sanglen was employed tendance on Narbonne were all officers invited to the royal box in a theater, it in the presence of the emperor. instructions from Napoleon found among them were copied. Napoleon had requested to be informed of all things concerning the Russian generals, the friends (male and female) of the emperor of Russia, of the latter's would be possible to enter into secret with him (the emperor). Stringent State Laws for the Preservation of Forests from Extinction. Timber depredations, according to the New York Evening Post, have been stopped practically in Mississippi by a law which punishes offenders severely There are large areas of forest land there belonging either to the United States government or to the state, and the temptation to settlers in remote regions to enter upon them help themselves to wood was often too strong to be resisted. When driven from federal land by deputy United States marshals, the timber thieves found refuge in the state forests, which were not so well policed, and by moving from the one territory to the other they contrived to escape arrest. The federal officers finally became so vigilant that timber stealing proved a dangerous business, and the thieves transferred all their operations to the state lands. The legislature thereupon passed the law referred to, and it has improved the morals of the people so much that some districts which formerdations are now almost free from the raids of poaching woodmen. The statute imposes a fine of two dollars per aere for each acre in every forty-acre trespass is committed. For the protection of private owners it also provides that for every tree cut down without their consent a fine of five dollars shall be paid.

Chinese Soldiers Are Fearless and Infinite in Numbers. Our knowledge of the modern Chinaman in battle has been derived from the wars of 1883 and 1884 with the French.

According to the French narratives of the war in Tonquin, the Chinese generals were deficient in strategy; but the rank and file fought so desperately, with such utter disregard for life, that they generally won the battles, and the campaigns ended in French re-treats. Admiral Courbet covered himself with glory by his operations on the River Min, which ended in the destruction of the Chinese arsenals and ship-yards, but the admiral had to make all haste to withdraw his force; if he had delayed, not a ship nor a man would have escaped, says the San Francisco

Total Registration Saturday About Five Hundred and Most of These Are New Voters.

THE REGISTRATION.

The registration of voters in the different wards of the city on Saturday was much larger than was expected. In some of the wards the non-registered residents were bustled out by those who were auxious to see a large vote polled. In the First ward sixty-five new names were registered, in the Second there were seventy-four, in the Third fiftyseven, the Fourth gave seventy-one, the Fifth, thirty-five, the Sixth twentysix, the Eighth sixty-two and the ninth thirty-six. The boards in the Seventh and Tenth wards did not report the number registered Saturday evening. It is thought, however, that at least twenty new names were placed on the books in the Seventh and forty in the Tenth. Assuming that there were sixty registered in these two wards the total number rigistered in the entire city would be four hundred and eighty-six. In the First and Second wards the majority of those registered were Finlanders. In the Second ward one of the Finnish residents worked all day hustsixty. In the First ward the Finlanders were also stirred up a little and quite a number who would not have registered had they not been called on to do so came out. The names of about twenty-five Finlanders were recorded at the entire city were Finlanders, there being some new ones in almost every ward.

A majority of the names registered were either new voters or late-comers here, there being a small proportion of the total old voters who had removed from one ward to another. Although the registration is considered with from one ward to another. Although the registration is considered quite large it is not possible that the vote will be increased to any great extent as a great many voters have left here during the past six months. However, it is expected that Ishpeming will at least hold her own with reference to

In the "bloody" Ninth ward, the Democratic stronghold, the names of several young men were registered. It is said that a majority of them are Republicans. A member of the board of that ward said Saturday evening that he believed the "faithful" would have a hard time carrying the ward this time, as a majority of the new names registered were Republicans. THEY ARE MEN AT TEN.

The Boys Have But a Short Childhood in Corea. In Corea the boys are called men as soon as they reach the age of ten. They receive their final names at that age, and assume the garments of full-grown men, all except the horsehair hat, which they cannot put on until they have passed through a period of probation. Permission to wear the horsehair hat is the final act of transforming the small boy into a real, sure-enough man-though he doesn't look it.

Such a short childhood may, at first thought, posseses a charm for boys in our colder climate. But it will be quickly understood that making boys into men as soon as they are old enough to feel that they would like to be men s not a wise idea. The Coreans, although possessing a certain degree of a queer kind of civilization, are not a people to be patterned after. In Corea, if a young man's parents are not rich, he can never hope to become so by his own efforts. And, if he is not a member of a noble family he can never hope to reach an exalted position. As for courage the Coreans have never shown much of that. The Corean men are not in themselves a good argument for brief childhood.

The Women to Blame

Prof. Peal, the ethnologist, recently described to the Asiatic society the condition of the head-hunting Nagas on the borders of Assam. The women are to blame for the continuance of the practice; they taunt the young men who are not tattooed, and the latter go out and cut off heads to exhibit to them, fully half of which are those of women and children. The area occu-pied by the tribe is not more than twenty miles square, but in it during the past forty years more than twelve thousand murders have been committed for the sake of these ghastly tro

Addit then after bucking Negaunee four yards more Marquette in the third down sent Wilson around the left end fighti for a nice run of forty yards and another touch-down. On the kick the ball went wide and nothing was added to the score. Negaunee kicked off twelve yards and kept the ball but was forced back eight yards in the next two downs. A kick from the pass was then tried and Sullivan caught it neatly but the kicker was slow and Sullivan was caught off-side and lost the ball. Marquette was unable to rush it and the ball went back to Negaunee. The last fitteen minutes of the game were consumed in for the players, who had enough to do to keep them warm even when wallowing in the snow, but was hard on the spectators. The snow blew squarely across the grand stand but the ladies there faced it bravely and cheered with all their voices, supplemented by numerous tin horns. About one hundred persons came up to the game from Marquette by train and bus, Miss Chandler and Mrs. J. E. Ball chaperon-ing about thirty girls. The total at-tendance, including small boys, was about two hundred and the Negaunee girls also turned out largely. The spectators and players packed two street cars to the utmost capacity going and coming. Once down town again the players nd visitors found the pleasantand visitors found the pleasantest feature of the day awaiting them. The young ladies of the Negaunee High school had secured the vacant room in the Sundberg block and there served sandwiches, cake and coffee to the whole party. The lunch was very good and when Captain Busch of the Marquettes made the suggestive inquiry, "What's the matter with the Negaunee girls," the answering chorus threatened to bring down the ceiling. Before, during and after the lunch an informal social was held and most of the players remained to participate in a dancing party in the evening. Most of the other visitors went home on the evening that it is the control of t ing train. The game was interesting and the social features very pleasing and the young ladies of Negaunee can rest assured that the Marquette High school boys and their friends will not miss an opportunity of returning the compliment. It is to be hoped that every state where fires occur will appoint men to act as marshals, and that incendiaries be ferreted out and severely punished. Thus with a more general idea of forestry principles, with associations and periodicals for the dissemination of knowledge on the subject, forest fires can be stopped. Pennsylvania, New York, and especially Maine and New Hampshire, the charm of whose forest-clad mountains means more in dollars and cents than the sum of all other revenues, by much persuasion and argument have been aroused, and the majority of their intelligent people are convinced that trees are indeed worthy of judicious utilization,—that a growth of a hundred years is too precious to burn in as many minutes by a fire from the match of a careless hunter or infernal incendiary. If each state does its share the Forestry Division of the general government will be more than willing to advise and help wherever possible. It is the duty of every citizen to learn the rudiments of forestry, and every boy and girl should be taught to giory in the privilege of an Arbor day.

Prevention of Forest Fires.

The leading article in the current number of the Engineering Magazine treats of forest fires and their causes as well as methods of prevention and in view of the immense fire loss each summer throughout the northwest no article is more timely. The concluding paragraphs are here quoted:

A law has been recently passed in New Jersey providing a fire marshal and deputy in every township of the third and fourth class counties. He has full control of the fires of his district. On a high location, with the aid of a telescope, he can see over almost any township in South Jersey. These stations can be easily connected by telephone, so that information can be sent from place to place without a particle of difficulty. Each marshal is empowered to employ able assistants when necessary. If the law is enforced and every marshal does his duty every fire can be nipped in the bud.

There has been a lack of interest and unity on the part of the owners of woodland. This has led to the formation of a woodmen's association with the following object in view:

(1) To improve and protect the forests of the southern counties of New Jersey.

(2) To prevent all wanton and needless destruction of forests.

(3) To insist upon the enforcement of the laws in relation to forests and the punishment of malicious and careless fire-setters.

(4) To adopt such methods of cutting as will increase and prolong the yield of timber and cordwood.
