THE HEARTY LAUGH. Long time ago, far, far away, A jovial man did dwell (The mother of my grandmother Was young, and knew him well). A man who roared so rare a laugh, Of rich and jocund tone. That others laughed, to hear him laugh, Who had not laughed alone.

The mother of my grandmother (My grandam used to say). Would laugh, remembering his laugh, Until her dying day. The mother of my mother, too, Till her last year was spent Would shake her ample sides at thought Of so much merriment.

'Twas thus my mother caught the mood Of bygone days, and she With blithesome pleasure spoke of it And passed it on to me And I, when life was rather rough Have thought of him and smiled The story of whose accient mirth Shall hearten up my child.

They were the offscouring of New York and other large cities in the east-bounty jumpers and cutthroats driven west by the "draft," fellows who would not hesitate to use the slungshot or knife upon the least provocation.

It was upon one of our periodical visits to the favorite haunts of these men that I received the impression that it does not always do to lock just like some other fellow.

Upon the night in question we had been informed by our commander that we should sail next day. We of the steerage, accompanied by some of the wardroom officers, had concluded to visit the city once more before taking our departure. All agreed to go in uniform, and as brass buttons and shoulder straps were the predominating feature in our uniform in those days, it was difficult for the landsmen to distinguish between the dress of the steerage and that of the wardroom officers. Some time during our perambulations on shore I found myself separated from my companions, and after walking about for some time chanced Jacob W. Alt vs Frederick Vors, assump-sit. A. R. Reach-ing out his hand he received the dagger from his companion and deliberately proceeded to measure off about five inches of its blade. With a devilish gleam in his eye he slowly approached me and I felt that the critical moment had arrived.

I fixed my eyes upon those of the assassin as he slowly approached me, and upon meeting my gaze he seemed baffled for the moment and he paused as his eyes rested upon the knife which EWEN - - (2-12-tf) - MICH. The man's companion, seeing him hesitate, made an effort to urge him bas but to no purpose, and finally they both withdrew to the further side of the room and again held a hurried conversation. Turning towards me again HO[2] the one with the dagger lay down on the floor, in order to be below the range of my weapon, and working himself towards me prepared to strike; poising himself upon his right arm and foot, with the dagger in his left hand, he made a fearful lunge toward me; the blow fell short of its mark. The demon in my nature became arcused and I assumed the offensive. Throwing the whole weight of my body forward upon my left foot I body forward upon my for any op-lunged forward, but missed my op-ponent owing to his low position on the floor. Seeing that I was about to the floor. Seeing that I was about to the floor. Seeing that I was about to force the fight my opponent lost cour-age and began to sob and cry like a child and refused to renew the attack, although urged on repeatedly by his companion. While this was going on the suspense to me was terrible; I dared not force the fight, as it was two to one, and I knew that if I left my corner it was sure death.

Losing patience the larger one of the assassins seized the dagger from the hand of his companion and prepared to renew the attack. At this moment the door was unlocked and opened, a stranger rushed into the room and seizing the hand that held the dagger exclaimed

"You fools, this is not our man." The would-be assassins immediately fled, and turning to me the stranger cautioned me to leave the place as quickly as possible. I did not stand upon the order of going, but found my way out upon the street in quick time.

Passing down the street I ran upon an old friend, Detective Allen. Upon seeing me he exclaimed: "My God, M----, what is the matter--you look as if you had seen a ghost!" I related to him as briefly as possible my adventure, and he assured me that I was lucky to escape with my life, as I had been in the most dangerous place in 'Frisco.

I spent the rest of the night with my friend Allen and early the next orning went on board. That same day we left for the Okbotsk sea, and on returning some two months later we were surprised to hear that Lieut. Marshall, United States navy, had been foully murdered and found lying on the street near the "Palace Saloon." Great excitement prevailed in naval circles because of his death, and the most streauous efforts were made to discover his murderers; but they were of no avail.

The excitement soon died out, and shortly after our ship was put out of commission and her officers and crew ordered cast. Upon arriving at New York I was ordered to the naval academy at Annapolis. I was o day strolling about the ancient city when I observed an elderly gentleman approaching me. Extending his hand ted me cordially, exclaiming: "Well, Lieut. Marshall, how are you; when did you arrive?" Before I could offer any explanation his arm was drawn within mine, and before I knew it I was at his doorstep.

The recent repeated visits of Queen Victoria to this little town, ho wever, and the benefit which she and her companion, the Princess Beatrice, have derived from the perscribed course of treatment, have now made its name familiar to all readers.

One of the characteristic features in connection with the baths at Aix-les-Bains is the manner in which the patients are conducted to and from the Establishment.

The newly arrived visitor has written down his or her name in the office of admission, and has received in return a ticket, on which the hour for the dally bath is written down. We will suppose the patient to be an elderly matron as full of the insular prejudices as of the rheumatic pains which have been the cause of her visit to Aix. PHYSICAL DEFECTS. How to Correct the Malformation of In fantile Members. Few intelligent people reflect how many physical defects in the form and countenance of individuals are directly traceable to negligence on the part of their mothers in childhood. The coarse, heavy nostrils, the projecting ears, the shaggy eyebrows and enlarged joints are as much traceable to neglect as bow legs and knock knees, or those unhappy cases of curvature of the spine that come direct from falls. The new-born babe is an exceedingly fragile little creature-a bundle of flesh and half-formed bone in which the vital organs are incased. As scien-tists tell us, the human baby is the most helpless of all young animals, and is in continual need of intelligent and watchful care to save its existence. Children that "grow" like Topsy usually have malformed limbs and various deformities, plainly the result of neglect. A very slight fall in childhood and render that membrane as broad and spreading as that of a Guinea negro

The habit that some children have of handling their nose makes the nostrils coarse and large and takes away all the delicacy from a feature that goes far toward making the man or woman plain or ugly. Another habit that permanently disfigures the adult is that of tying bonnet and cap strings tightly behind the ears in babyhood, as it eauses the ears to project. Ears that naturally project from the head may be flattened to a desirable degree by wearing a little skeleton cap over them in babyhood. Tying a silk handker chief about them is not so desirable. because the ear is an organ intended by nature to be open to the air, and not to be sweltered under a close covering. The coarse eyebrow is usually the result of an utter neglect of this feature of the face. They should be brushed smoothly in place in babyhood, and coarse, long hairs, that sometimes grow superfluously, should be pulled out. Where the eyebrows are wanting, a little vaseline rubbed in place will often produce the desired growth of hair. Every mother knows that the back

The Proper Waist Measure.

No doubt it will be a relief to som girls with athletic proclivities to know the extreme limit of the size of the waist. A recent article from the pen of an eminent authority on the sub-ject says it is not the proper thing to lace or even have the appearance of lacing. No waist should be smaller than twenty-four inches. The proper measurement for the chest of a girl whose waist is that size is thirty-eight inches. Thus it will be seen that the modern beauty must be solid, and nearly approach the proportions of the heroic age. The present age is an athletic one, and as long as the young women continue their healthy exer-cises-lawn tennis, croquet, rowing, riding, bicycling, fencing and vault-

WILD WEST PONY EXPRESS. Showing Adventures of Buffalo Bill as a Boy Mail Carrier. "You know what the pony express was?" began Buffalo Bill. "No? Well, then, I'll tell you. By the year 1859 the telegraph system extended from the Atlantic seaboard as far west as

St. Joseph, and from San Francisco as far east as Sacramento. But between Sacramento and St. Joseph intervene one thousand nine hundred and eighty Our new stock of Fall and two miles of desert. An orthogene in 1859 coach system was established in 1859 which accomplished the distance in about three weeks. Senator Gwinn, of California, saw what an immense advantage it would be to the entire country, and especially to his own state, if this time could be reduced. He suggested to the Overland Stage Co. that a pony express, consisting successive relays of ponies, that should be changed at stations along the route, would carry telegraphs and mails in less than half the time it took the lumbering stages. The company was quic to take the hint. Hence the pony express. The schedule time was ten days, and though the riders had to pas through a desert country infested by hostile savages and frequently swept by storms and blizzards, though they had to clamber over precipitous moun tains, wade through streams and rivers and make difficult headway throug trackless wastes of sand and sagebrush they were rarely even so much as an hour behind the schedule time.

"The pony express was established on April 9, 1860. Sixty riders and four hundred and twenty ponies were se-cured. The stations were from twelve to fifteen miles apart. Each pony made only one station, each rider was required to make three, but he had the option of doing double duty. The eepers of the stations had the ponie ready saddled and bridled, the rider merely jumping from the back of one to another, or where the rider was All other goods in proporcessor, who started at a gallop as soor
