> FUN WITH SEA TURTLES. A School of Them That Covered the Sea

> "I am reminded," said an old coasting eaptain to a Washington Star man re-cently, "of an experience I once had with sea turtles on the edge of the gulf stream, about sixty miles from Hatteras. I was part owner and captain of the Mary Lyle at that tim and was coming up from Savannah with a half cargo of rice when one morning the outlook yelled to me to come up on deek and look at the sea turtles. When I got up and looked over the rail the whole ocean as far as I could see ahead of us was covered with turtles. They were tremendous fellows and were paddling along lazily in the opposite direction to that in which we were going.

> "It didn't take us long to rig up a windlass and tackle and begin pulling some of the old fellows aboard. We picked the biggest as they came and in the course of three hours we had caught twenty-six, about all that we could handily dispose of about the ship. Only nine of them lived until we reached New York and we sold

Precedence in rank is taken by the younger of the two, Prince Momolu Massaquoi, who has already ruled for nearly two years, whereas his cousin, Prince Besolow has never mounted the throne that is rightfully his. Prince Momolu has had an adventurous his-tory. First trained in the mysteries of the Grigribush, a sort of black-art school of the Vei people, in proof of which he can show a hundred scars of the torture knives, he afterward be came Christianized and came to this country. His mother was then queen regent of the province of Jabasca, in the Vei territory, northeast of Liberia. While the young prince was pursuing a college course in an institution in Tennessee he received word of his mother's death.

The Panas, a warlike neighboring tribe, had attacked the queen's village and she had been forced to flee to the woods. The Jabascans, who are ordinarily a peaceful people, are very brave when aroused, and when they found their queen missing they beat back the invaders. For ten days they searched the woods for her, and on the eleventh she was found, speechless from hunger and privation. Two days later she died. At the Presbyteriaa church tomor-row Mr. Spencer will speak in the morning upon "Defeats Turned into Victories." The evening services will be under the appiers of the papely ornatural and universal idea of mutual dependence. To this idea as exempti-fied in the work of the order, all worthy Pythians must dedicate and de-vote themselves. The subordinate lodge and its practical duties was the bases of the order. Brotherhood, as exemplified in everyday life and con-duct, was the cornerstone of Pythian-ism. Let every knight emulate the noble examples to be found in the an-nals of the order.

The
