HAPPY NEW YEAR

When barefoot man the earth first trod. He signed and sought a softer sod. For rock and stub to hobble o'er Disturbed his sole and vexed him sore. "But yet," said he "tis all in vain, I cannot carpet hill and plain!" Then to his side his genius flew And softly whispered him the clew The shadows lift and all is clear. The globe he'll carpet, never fear. And Myriad feet shall nail it down In every street of every town. For to the shod, whate're the weather. The world is carpeted with leather. Sabot and sandal, slipper, shee. And boots of many a style and hue. The long procession, see it wend Along the centuries without end. From clattering clogs for uses base To forms of beauty, forms of grace. Where strength and art the prize shall win Would you learn where? Enquire within

NEW YORK, Dec. 27 .- News from Boston is that travel is much impeded And all the Novelties in delayed and railroad trains all behind time. In South Boston the wind carried away the roof of the First Baptist church and blew down the big chimney of the Boston Safe and Iron works. Only slight damage by the gale is reported in other sections of eastern Massachusetts. New Haven reports the harbor full of storm-bound crafts. Hartford reports traffic badly delayed. From points throughout New England come points throughout New England come reports of delayed travel and impeded traffic but no serious casualties. In New York state the snow fall is heavy and trains blocked, country roads im-passable and street car lines stopped in cities but no accidents are reported.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Dec. 27.—The coast storm now raging here gives no signs of abating. A forty-mile gale is blowing from the southwest, piling up the surf along ocean front. Railroad tracks are submerged, houses on the meadow side of the city are affoat and yachts are broken from their moorings. yachts are broken from their moorings. Along Baltic avenue the water is on a level with the first floors.

Colored Plaster for Walls.

Colored plaster is now so frequently used for finishing the walls of new houses that workmen do not object to its use as strongly as they did a few years ago, and it is now a common thing to see the walls of one room colored a pretty buff or yellow, and of others soft reds, old rose and other colors. It is asserted, however, that too much of the colored powder added to the plaster injures its quality. Builders are, however, experimenting with a mortar putty that comes in all colors, and which it is claimed improves the mortar. In one of its green shades it is cool, delightful and fascinating, and the following directions are given for its use: "To prepare mortar in this manner a small quantity should first be mixed with coloring matter and a portion dried before the fire. If the shade is too light or too dark, more color or more mortar is added until it suits. Be sure to mix all that is needed for one room at a time, as it is difficult to match. The ceiling should be several shades lighter than the walls.—Art Interchange.

AN ODD LETTER.

It Was Written on a Bank Note and Ac-

A writer in Cornhill tells a good story illustrating the important part played sometimes by bank notes in the ordinary affairs of life. About sixty years ago, the cashier of a Liverpool merchant had received, in ter business payment, a Bank of England note, which he held up to the scrutiny of the light, in order to make sure of its genuineness

He observed some partially indistinct words traced in red on the front of the note beside the lettering, and on the margin. Curiosity tempted him to try deciphering them. They were so faintly written and so nearly obliterated that he found great difficulty in doing so, but finally he was able to combine them into this sentence:

PRIZES ON PATENTS.

How to Get $100 and Perhaps Make a Fortune.

We secure patents and to induce people to keep track of their bright ideas we offer a prize of one hundred dollars to be paid on the first of every menth to the person who submits to us the most meritorious invention during the preceeding month. We will also advertise the invention free of charge into National Recorder a weekly newspaper, published in Washington, D. C., which has an extensive circuitation throughout the United States and is devoted to the interests of inventors.

Not so Hard as it Seems.

Interests of Inventors.

Not so Hard as it Seems.

The idea of being able to invent something strikes most people as being difficult; this delusion the Company wishes to dispel. It is the simple things and small inventions that make the greatest amount of money, and the complex ones are seldom profitable. Almost everybody, at son etime or another, conceives an idea, which, if patented, would probably be worth to him a fortune. Unfortunately such ideas are usually dismissed without thought. The simple inventions like the car window which could be easily slid up and down without breasing the passenger's back, the sance pan, the coller button, the nut lock, the bottle stopper, the snow shovel, tre things that almost everyone sees some way of improving upon, and it is these kind of inventions that bring the greatest returns to the author.

The prize we ofter will be paid at the end of each month, whether the application has been acted upon by the Patent office or not. Every competitor must apply for a patent on his invention through us, and whether he secures the prize or not, the inventor will have a valuable patent.

WHERE WAS EDEN LOCATED?

Scholars of Distinction Do Not Agree and the Mystery Remains Unsolved The location of the earthly paradise or Garden of Eden, is still a matter of dispute among orientalists and Scriptural scholars of highest reputation, says the St Louis Republic have endeavored to locate it by the fruits and mineral productions named in the Biblical descriptions as they appear in the second chapter of Genesis; others by the rivers mentioned in verses eleven to fourteen of the above mentioned chapter. The weight of investigation and tradition incline to an agreement that the Tigris and the Euphrates of modern geography are the third and fourth rivers mentioned in the Biblical description of the gar-den. Those who agree so far differ widely as to what rivers should now be regarded as the ancient Pison and Gihon. The Buddhistic scholars, al-though they reject our Bible in the greater part, incline to the opinion that the Pison is the sacred Ganges and that the Gihon is none other than the Nile. As to the last it is altogther probable that they are correct on that point because the Biblical account plainly says that Gihon "compasseth the whole land of Ethiopia." #### THE ENGLISH CRIMINAL RAP A Profession That Is Becoming Over-stocked With Students.

The English criminal bar is apt to tempt the impecunious and indolent. It is getting rather overstocked. Most students are one or the other, and many both. Weird stories come from the Old Bailey of crowds of "jejuniors" who settle on the soup list like the locusts of the east. Success, undoubtedly, comes quicker, if at all. If only people who committed crimes had money, the criminal bar would seem the forensic land of promise. Unfor-tunately for its practitioners, virtue is still found easy on an adequate in-come. This, however, is not without and number, and the arteries enlarge and furnish to all parts of the body an live as a successful man should, must needs take more work than he can do, disclared was a supposed mortal discase was wherein lies the juniors chance. The cured under this treatment between Old Bailey is the last resting place of the professional devil. On the other the professional devil. On the other hand, there is a quaint notion abroad that criminal practice requires no knowledge of law. Oddly enough, this theory is shared by some who sit in judgment. It appeals with fatal directness to the many who hanker after the milk and honey of the law, but shun the preliminary wanderings in the arid desert of its technicalities.

In cheosing a profession long views are excusable, and it is as well, without, as the Americans say, "borrowing trouble," to look facts in the face. Unless an appointment, the bar has little to offer old age. A successful advocate is like a new comedian; so long as his tricks are fresh he is in universal de mand. In time, unless a very exceptional man, he must make way for men with newer methods. The best of us are like a barrel organ-we can only grind out a certain number of tunes. When the public get to know them, it is time for a change of street. Happy is the man who can find a way out-for too many it is cul de sac. - National Re-

The entrance hall is a platform raised a couple of feet above the ground. Here the foreigner removes his boots and the Japanese his sandals. The division of the rooms are sliding panels, ingeniously arranged in their grooves to inclose a space at the pleasure of the householder. A large room can therefore be converted into a number of smaller rooms, and as almost by magic touch the room in which you have been sitting becomes divided into a number of sleeping chambers. Chairs and tables are almost unknown. The posture of repose is a "squat." At mealtimes you squat anywhere and your food is placed before you. When you are tired you throw yourself anywhere on the floor, There is little change other than ength, which, as I said before, is insisted on more strongly this season issted on more strongly this season with no fear of spoiling your white clothes. When evening comes you do not seek your chamber, but simply made the make it by sliding the wall round the spot you have chosen for your slumbers. In the morning you take a bath, and when you return bed and bedroom have alike disappeared. The panels have been removed. The bath is a great institution in Japan. They did not suc-ceed in overtaking them, however, as the dagos showed themselves lively sprinters. When the officers reached the house the door was locked, so they forced their way in. As soon as Calo and his friend got inside they locked the door and jumped into bed. Calo pretended to be asleep and had the spread drawn over his face. As soon as Lucarelle identified his man the officers took him in hand and escorted him to the city bastile.

Came Down the Chimney. The children of the Baptist church Sunday school were given a very happy entertainment Christmas night. Santa Claus and his wife were called for by telephone and while the children were waiting their arrival the superintendent told them a very funny story. Finally the jolly old couple appeared through a hole in the chimney and the fun that followed can be more easily imagined than described. The little ones all received presents. They Appreciated It. Many of the parents of the city have asked THE MINING JOURNAL to extend their sincere thanks to Professor O. R. freely. Finally their potations began to take effect, and Calo (who was master of ceremonies) undertook to run the house according to his own ideas. He and Guiseppe Lucarelle, who hailed from Division street, got into a warm discussion. After wrangling for a short tainly appreciated the kindness of the superintendent and teachers.

A CHAPTER ON SALT. Seraps of Information About a Useful Ar-

Poeple do not eat salt by the teaspoonful as they do sugar, yet not a meal is eaten during the day that does not have a seasoning of salt disseminated through it, and sugar could be much easier spared from food than the more humble saline article.

By some mysterious law of nature salt is continually evolved from living bodies, and must as constantly be re-ceived again in due proportion to the loss. It is by the law of evaporation that we enjoy our privilege of salt, as it is now believed that the chief source of it is from the ocean, although the salt of the sea is bitter and a draught of sea-water works madness in the brain of him who drinks. It is estimated that individuals average a yearly allowance of sixteen pounds of salt. This does not mean salt in the bulk, but the constituent which enters into the system by the process of assimilation. Its necessity as an article of diet is assured by its presence in the cor-puscles of the blood, where mustard and pepper are assuredly not found. The salt mines of the world are among the most important schemes of commerce, and the slightest change in the method of manufacture is hailed almost as a triumph of seience. When England began to export a pure white crystal salt to India, the Hindoos would not use it, they mistrusted its brilliant whiteness and preferred the dark native salt. which contrasted well with their white rice. Time has overcome their predjudice, and they now eat freely of the English salt, while their own has undergone a purifying process.

The salt used in England comes principally from the Cheshire mines, but the continental salt is obtained from different sources, especially from the great sait district of Austria, which overs a large area, and has been for many years a source of revenue to the people of that locality. The Durrenberg mine at Hallein has been worked steadily for six hundred years and others have been like a patrimony, handed down to its workmen. To the government the salt mines are a regular profit. To go down into these mines with leather garments provided for visitors, to gaze and taste, and wonder by the glimmer of a horn lantern, has been one of the privileges of the tourist in Austria. The great crystal crypts are most attractive, and much less dangerous than their prototypes, the coal mines.

The salt wells of Syracuse are great American industries, which are, how-ever, only two hundred and fifty years old and were discovered by the Indians who were the originators of the salt industry of this country, although they were afraid to drink of the water, believing it to have been salted by a demon to poison them Father Le Moyne, passing that way in 1653, evap-orated some of the water of which ter season plaids are to be fashionably and generally worn."

Theories concerning the origin of the diamond have been both numerous and curious. Some mineralogists have sug-gested that it is the residence of carbon vapors dissipated by heat during that indefinite epoch known as the "coal period." Newton says that in his opinion it is "a coagulated unctuous sub-stance, probably of vegetable origin." Haynes and Faure are both of the opinion that no diamond was ever formed on or within the surface of our earth, and that all such gems are actually and the coagulated functions. earth, and that all such gems are brought to this planet by meteoric stones from some far-away world. Sir David Brewster, the eminent British philosopher (born 1781; died in 1868) entertained ideas concerning the dia-mond's origin which, while similar to those of Newton, were different in some respects. In his estimation, such gems were once masses of gum, exuded from certain species of extinct trees plants, which had subsequently "petrified" and assumed the crystalline form. According to Dana, the greatest living authority, they may have been produced by slow decomposition of vegetable or even animal matter. - Detroit Free Press. Feminine Charity.

JURY COULDN'T AGREE.

Some time ago Dr. A. C. McKenzie nissed some lumber from his land east of the city. After making some inquiries he ascertained that Thomas Piggott, who lives in that vicinity, had a pile of lumber at his place that he got without buying. The doctor looked the lumber over and concluded it was his, as some of it was peculiarly marked. So he had Piggott arrested.

The case came up for a hearing in Justice Primeau's court Wednesday, and an interesting one it was, too. The defendant's attorney, J. L. Mc-Clear, called for a jury trial. The greater part of the forenoon was taken up in finding a jury and it took all of the afternoon to hear the testimony of Imported Goods the afternoon to hear the testimony of the different witnesses. A couple of the witnesses testified that Piggott had taken the lumber from the Morgan; that he had inquired of Superintendent Fitch of the South Shore road regarding its ownership, but that Mr. Pitch did not give him permission to take it. He took it just the same, thinking that the railroad, company had no further. the railroad company had no further use for it. The case was in the hands of the jury about an hour. An agreement could not be reached, so another trial will be had Wednesday next.

particularly noted for his antipathy to Indians, whom he delighted to track. On one campaign against the French, the dog insisted on accompanying his master, although his feet were in a terrible condition from having been frozen the previous winter. During the fight, which ended in the famous Braddock defeat, the dog was ever beside his master; but when it was over killed, went home without him. Some weeks later, however, the dos appeared in his old home, separated from his battle-field by many miles of thick forest. He was tired and worn,
