THIRD ATTEMPT DEFEATED.

The House Refuses the Last Effort at Currency Legislation a Third Reading.

LAST ATTEMPT TO ASSIST TREASURY A FAILURE.

Western Republicans Are Anxious to Defeat the Measure and They Receive Able Assistance.

ARGUMENTS WERE OF NO AVAIL.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The third attempt of the administration at this session to secure legislation looking to the relief of the treasury failed in the house today. First, the Carlisle bill for the reform of the currency system went down. Next the bill for the issue of $500,000,000 gold bonds and the retirement of legal tenders recommended in the president's special message was defeated last Thursday and today the house by a majority of forty-seven refused to order to its third reading the resolution by which it was proposed to authorize the issue of $65,000,000 3 per cent gold bonds to substitute for 4 per cent thirty-year coin bonds, sold by Secretary Carlisle under contract with the Belmont-Morgan syndicate.

The debate upon the resolution, which lasted over five hours, was of an interesting and at times inflammable character. The galleries were packed and there was much confusion on the floor, but the interest was centered in the attitude of the Republicans. The Republicans west of the Alleghenies, led by Hopkins and Cannon of Illinois, started off with impetuous speeches against the gold bonds already issued. Reed and his eastern friends sought in private conference to rally all to united action, but after a stirring speech by Hepburn of Iowa the middle and western Republicans broke away, determined to defeat the third reading of the resolution lest it might carry if it passed this parliamentary state. The eastern Republicans then decided to support it. The speeches of Wilson, Reed, Hopkins and Bryan were the features of the debate. An analysis of the vote shows that 98 Democrats and 31 Republicans, 129 in all, voted in favor of the resolution and 98 Democrats, 62 Republicans and 7 Populists, 167 in all, against it.

There was much excitement on the floor at the opening as it was known an attempt would be made today to pass the resolution authorizing the issue of 3 per cent gold bonds. Catchings from the committee on rules reported the special order that the house proceed at once in committee of the whole to the consideration of the bond resolution. That at 5 p.m. the previous question shall be considered ordered, and votes shall be taken till disposed of. Catchings demanded the previous question on the order and it was carried by a vote 111 to 56. After some delay in securing a quorum the special order was adopted—132 to 28. Wilson and Reed, in favor of the proposition and Hopkins, (Ills.), Bryan (Nebr.), against, were allowed an hour each in debate, the remaining hour to be under the five minute rule.

Wilson, chairman of the ways and means committee, in opening the debate carefully stated the case, covering the ground traversed by the committee report, elaborating the events leading up to the conditions which compelled the purchase of gold. There was no dearth of revenues in the treasury. The available cash balance is $165,000,000, or $30,000,000 greater than in 1893. The gold reserve was not threatened until the panic of 1890 when, during November, $24,000,000 in gold was withdrawn. Twice since then bonds have been issued, resulting in the United States exchanging its own bonds for its own gold and now Secretary Sherman has done what Secretary Wilson did time and time again when he was refunding the public debt—he had purchased gold in other markets than our own. During the panic of 1890 the $53,000,000 bank trust fund had been passed to the available assets of the treasury.

Dingley (Rep. Me.) asked how the treasury obtained money to meet the deficiency in revenues of $109,000,000. Wilson admitted that the large amount of gold received from the sale of bonds had been used to meet the deficiency in revenues. Then Dingley, replying to Wilson's former statement about the transfer of the bank trust fund to the available assets of the treasury, declared that not one dollar of that fund had been used to defray current expenses.

"The difference between your methods and ours," replied Wilson amid a burst of Democratic applause, "is that when we needed money we borrowed it. When you needed it you borrowed it from the trust fund." Dingley insisted that the fund was not used until 1893, whereupon Wilson cited Secretary Windom's report stating on Sept. 10, 1890, the only available cash in the treasury was the amount the trust fund turned over to that account in the preceding July. Continuing the argument Wilson said:

"If the government continued to maintain its traditional policy the 4 per cent bonds would be virtually payable in gold because the government is bound to maintain all currency on a parity. As the bonds are to be paid in gold it was the sense of the ways and means committee that there should be no hesitation in making these bonds payable in gold and saving government charges, amounting to over $16,000,000. The question presented is whether we will substitute for the 4 per cent coin thirty-year bond a 3 per cent gold bond."

Hopkins (Rep. Ills.) said the resolution was whether the government should by the extraordinary methods of President Cleveland and secretary of the treasury change the established policy under the thirty-five years of Republican rule and make the bonds payable in gold. "I oppose the resolution," he continued, "because it will in my judgment destroy the credit of the United States. In the future it would be necessary to put the word gold to every bond. A contract has been made with a foreign syndicate by which the government receives $9,500,000 less than similar bonds are selling for in the open market on the very day the present contract is presented. To congress with the bribe of $18,000,000 to get its consent. 'I say for one,' he asserted, "and I speak for the entire Republican party and the great mass of the Democratic party, that I cannot be made party to this attempt of the president to prostitute the financial standing of this great country." Cannon (Rep. Ill.) sketched with biting sarcasm the abortive attempt made by the present administration for the relief of the treasury. He denounced the contract made by the secretary of the treasury and when he expressed the opinion that had a Republican secretary made the contract the Democratic house would have impeached him the Republicans gave him round after round of applause. Grosvenor (Rep. O.), a member of the ways and means committee, opposed the resolution. Daniels (Rep. N. Y.) and Coombs (Dem. N. Y.), favored the resolution. After some further remarks by Hulick (Rep. O.), Simpson (Kas.), Wheeler (Dem. Ala.), McMillan (Dem. Tenn.) and Northway (Rep. O.) against the bill, Bland the silver advocate took the floor and in ringing sentences appealed to the house not to surrender to the gold kings. If the resolution passed the government would forfeit the right to coin silver. Springer insisted that the only question at issue was whether congress would save to the taxpayers $16,000,000. Turner (Dem. Ga.), a member of the ways and means committee, made a strong speech in favor of the resolution Hatch (Dem. Mo.) aroused the enthusiasm of the opponents of the bill in a five minute speech. Cooper (Dem. Fla.) denounced those who were "trying to scuttle the ship of state." Payne (Rep. N. Y.) said it seemed there was nothing left out of the bond contract that was possible to put in to oppose the people. Stone (Rep. Pa.) could not see why the Republicans should not vote for the resolution although they were not to blame for the bad management that brought about the difficulty.

Bryan (Dem. Neb.) said the passage of the resolution would withdraw $165,000,000 from circulation. "The president of the United States," he continued, "is a human being. The president is therefore liable to err. He has erred. The Democratic party owes him nothing (Democratic applause). It owes him only the gratitude it would owe a guardian who squandered a rich estate. He seeks to inoculate the party with Republican virus that his party may die of blood poisoning (Democratic applause). But he has yet one attribute of sovereignty," continued Mr. Bryan. "He chasteneth whom he loveth" (laughter). Turning to the question at issue Bryan asserted it was a question in which was bound up the welfare of mankind. To pass the resolution he said and $16,000,000 would be saved to the people in fifty years but they would be robbed of sixteen billion in a third of that time by men in whose interest it was passed.

Reed, after some introductory remarks, took up the question at issue, saying: "The trouble of our situation is that our body politic, our government, has been so reduced by two years of party rule of such a character that the expenses have not been paid by the income, that the government of the United States is for the time being run behind. Whatever severity of criticism is disposed to be made upon the present situation greater severity of criticism is to be bestowed upon the past and this agreement, presented here for the inspection of the house, is in accord, it seems to me, with the government of this country for the last two years. It may be I judge harshly. It may be this agreement is the result of the unfortunate conditions in which the government is found. It may be no fault is attached to this except so far as it is the result of causes which never ought to have been set in motion. However it is, that contract is not presented to us for approval or disapproval.

"It is now proposed," continued Reed, "to reduce the rate of interest provided in this contract, provided we make the bonds sold payable in gold. That word is practically there now as every one agrees. This resolution does not involve the establishment of a policy; it simply sanctions one single transaction of the government. Some tell us it would govern all future transactions of the government. Another such contract after his experience with this. When Secretary Sherman issued bonds for gold he announced that being issued for gold they would be redeemed in gold. The trouble seems to be that many did not understand this. They did not treat the matter fairly when they spoke of it as affecting non-metallicism or bi-metallicism." Reed called attention to the fact that June 25, 1890, Wilson, Bynum, Turner, Montgomery and Tarsney, all of whom would be found voting for the bill, had voted for the free coinage of silver. "I simply mention this," he said, "to show the constraining influence of those in power" (laughter).

Wilson closed the debate in brief remarks laudatory of Secretary Carlisle, which were heartily applauded. The hour of 5 o'clock arrived and under the special order the roll call began. The third reading of the resolution was refused by a vote of 129 to 167. A cheer went up from the opponents of the resolution as the result was announced. Bland moved to reconsider and lay that motion on the table, which was carried without division and the house adjourned.

MINISTER TO MEXICO DEAD.

United States Minister Gray Dies in the City of Mexico of Pneumonia.

HE WAS TAKEN SICK ON HIS WAY DOWN.

Guatemala and Mexico Patch Up Their Differences and Figuratively Fall on Each Others Necks.

BOTH SIDES MADE CONCESSIONS.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 14.—United States Minister Gray died at 7:05 to-night without regaining consciousness.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 14.—United States Minister Gray arrived by train this morning on a stretcher. He is unconscious with pneumonia and cannot live. Minister Gray was taken to the American hospital and Consul General Crittenden has been with him. He has been unconscious ever since his arrival and recognizes no one. He was sick all the way down from St. Louis.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 14.—Isaac Pusey Gray was born in Chester county, Penn., Oct. 18, 1835. His ancestors all belonged to the Society of Friends, his great grandfather having emigrated from England with William Penn. Isaac received a common school education and removed to Union City, Ind., in 1855, where he practiced law. He was colonel of the Fourth Indiana cavalry in the civil war, serving with great credit. He was elected to congress in 1866 and since 1871 has been an active member of the Democratic party. He was elected lieutenant governor in 1876 and renominated for the same place in 1880. In 1894 he was elected governor of Indiana and was called to the Mexican mission by President Cleveland about two years ago.

NO DANGER OF WAR.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 14.—The Guatemalan question is at last amicably settled upon an equitable basis between the two Republics. The boundary between the two countries will be definitely determined upon and a war indemnity accepted by Guatemala who will also pay damages for Mexican property destroyed. Guatemala's official acceptance of Mexico's conditions will arrive next week and will be immediately published in The Diaro, the official paper of the Mexican government. Both sides made concessions.

HAD NOT REACHED WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—No news of the reported agreement between Mexico and Guatemala has been received at the Mexican legation in this city. Minister Romero said tonight he had received a dispatch from the Mexican minister of foreign affairs this afternoon, but no mention of an agreement was made. He did not doubt, however, that the dispatch was correct, as he had believed such a result imminent. He expressed great pleasure at the receipt of the news.

WERE WARMLY RECEIVED.

Female Temperance Revivalists Call at the Wronn Saloon.

SIoux CITY, Ia., Feb. 14.—The temperance crusade of the W. C. T. U. created a sensation today. Not since the days when Rev. Haddock was assassinated while waging war on the saloons has there been such a temperance revival. About two hundred women marched from saloon to saloon singing hymns and reading to the bar-keepers a section of the Martin liquor law which they have been violating. At John Manderscheid's place the ladies received a "hot" reception. Manderscheid called them all sorts of names and commenced pushing them toward the door and in the rush to escape a number of women were hurt.

SIoux CITY, Ia., Feb. 14.—Jda Grove, Iowa, is a dry town. The saloon which was run there on the Goshenburg plan attracted considerable attention and was closed today on an injunction by Judge Church pending an appeal.

DEFENSE IS OUTLINED.

Murderer Harry Hayward Will Testify in His Own Defense.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 14.—The defense in the Harry Hayward murder trial opened this morning with an address to the jury in behalf of the defendant. The defense as outlined was that Flint's story was incredible and that it would be shown that Miss Gings' head was pounded to a jelly before she was shot. That Harry Hayward was more insane than his brother. That there were suspicious characters in the city about that time and that Harry Hayward would go on the stand in his own defense.

CAUSED THREE MEN'S DEATHS.

Squatters Fight for Made Land in the Missouri River.

TEKAMAH, Neb., Feb. 14.—Three men have met death in the past few days on a strip of land added to this county by the accretion of the Missouri river. The murderers cannot be punished since neither Nebraska nor Iowa claim jurisdiction over the disputed territory. Robert Phillips, Will Wilson and an unknown man are the victims, being killed in a fight between squatters over the possession of the land, which is very valuable.

School Building Burns.

OLEWEIN, Ia., Feb. 14.—The public school building at Lamont was burned this morning. In a panic among the pupils Alfred Brown was fatally injured and Clarence Lake had a leg broken. The loss is $6,000.

FATHERSON, N. J., Feb. 14.—The Dorby & Wadsworth silk plant, one of the largest in the city, was destroyed by fire tonight. The loss is $300,000; insurance, $210,000. About one thousand hands were employed.

MARQUETTE, MICH., FEBRUARY 15.

Entered as mailmatter of the second class in the postoffice at Marquette, Mich.

MICHIGAN'S legislature is mainly occupied at present in considering matters relating to the local government of Detroit. Legislation affecting the state at large has to stand aside while the bill introduced by Senator Thompson to deprive Detroit's mayor of the power the people of that city have three elected him to exercise is receiving attention. It is pretty expensive running a state legislature just to serve the purposes of political jugglers like Thompson. Wonder how the people who foot the bills like it?

ALLUDING to the resolution of Senator Clapp, which was designed to commit the Republican party to the free coinage of silver at the ratio of sixteen to one, the State Republican observes that the introduction of the resolution may have been good politics for a congressional candidate in the Third district, but it begs to inquire "what in Hades the Michigan legislature has to do with the national currency, anyway?" Nothing, of course, but what does a politician who wants to make a play for popular favor care for a consideration of that kind? It isn't the first time that a prospective candidate sought to catch the voters with "Clapp-trap."

THE WAR on the income tax has broken out in a new spot, that being at Wilkesbarre, Pa. It appears that a large number of wealthy people living there and in adjacent townships in Luzerne county are owners of valuable beds of anthracite coal. The coal lands are leased to mining companies, which pay the owners a stipulated royalty each year. In a test case brought before the supreme court of the state recently that tribunal decided that the royalties paid the individual owners of coal land cannot be counted as interest, but is a part of the principal. The commissioner of internal revenue, however, on behalf of the federal government, notified the collector of the district that the royalties are incomes and come under the income tax provisions.

THAT silver conference at Battle Creek finally decided to take definite action looking to the nomination of a candidate for congress in the Third district, to succeed Burrows, on a straight silver platform. The Populists present at the conference protested vigorously against this, taking the ground that as the Populist party stands committed to everything the silver men demand the friends of silver should unite with that party for the election of the representative, instead of putting up a candidate of their own. The conference chose to favor "the middle of the road" plan, however, and the Populists in the district will have to choose between adopting the candidate who will be named by the silver convention or go it alone with a candidate of their own selection. The silver men in the district have acted wisely, for while they may agree with the Populists on the silver question they could not afford to endorse all the fads advocated by the Populist party. The district is strongly Republican and there is hardly a doubt of the election of a straight Republican to fill out the unexpired term of Mr. Burrows.

"It would be difficult to imagine a more demoralized condition of affairs than exists at Washington," observes a financial exchange. It would, indeed. There is the Democratic majority watching the administration with unfriendly eyes, and actuated mainly by the purpose of tripping it up on every occasion that offers. Then there is the Republican minority, apparently only anxious to have the blundering Democratic majority perpetrate all the mistakes possible and nagging it into making a further show of itself whenever a chance to do this comes. Meanwhile the administration has to deal with the most perplexing condition of things that has arisen for many years in governmental affairs, and has to do this without a party behind it. The situation is, truly, as bad as could be imagined, and the only hopeful thing about it is that it cannot last much longer, for the imbecile congress now in session will have lived its useless life out in a few weeks more. The wonder is that the country stands the strain of congressional incapacity to deal with pressing questions affecting its business interests as well as it does. Its vitality is shown to good advantage by the circumstance that it is not driven into a state of industrial collapse by the stupidity and incompetency of congress.

HOUGHTON COUNTY'S board of supervisors, at a meeting held Tuesday, decided by a vote of 6 to 4 in favor of dividing the liquor tax equally between the towns in that county where licensed saloons are conducted and the county at large. The board directed the county's legal officer to prepare for submission to the legislature a bill to give effect to its wishes regarding the tax, and such a measure will be drafted and sent to the legislature for the consideration of that body at an early date. It seems to THE MINING JOURNAL that the board acted with little regard for justice in the matter. The population of Houghton county is very largely in the towns where the tax is obtained and where the expense of making costly public improvements are, and will continue to be for some considerable time, very great. The county has, on the other hand, no expensive improvements to make. To divide the tax will seriously cripple the towns by depriving them of a large part of the revenue on which they have been confidently relying for the purpose of making needed new improvements or completing those already begun. This would be both an injustice and a hardship to the towns and villages of that county. Because the lower peninsula counties take half the tax from the cities and towns it does not follow that the same rule should obtain in this part of the state. The conditions in the two peninsulas are widely dissimilar and what is good policy in one may be quite the reverse in the other.

THE MINING JOURNAL heartily endorses what THE Bay City Tribune says in this article relative to the Detroit row in which the legislature is asked to interfere. It is to be hoped that the bill before the legislature, which has already passed the senate, abolishing the municipal health board in Detroit and empowering the governor to appoint its successor, will not become a law. Regardless of the claim that the exigencies are such as to require an unusual class of legislation, still the fact remains that such an encroachment upon the right of a locality to regulate its own affairs is a dangerous precedent to establish. It is also clear to those acquainted with the facts in the case that the situation in Detroit has been grossly exaggerated by the newspapers of that city. If the people of Michigan had believed all the scare rumors concerning small pox that have circulated through the medium of the Detroit press, the other cities of the state would, ere now, have quarantined themselves against the metropolis.

It is indeed fortunate for Detroit that its daily papers are so well understood by the people who read them. In spite of the fact that they have heralded an epidemic nobody has shunned the city, nor upon going there has anyone seen or heard of cause for alarm. We are in no sense interested in Detroit's health board, nor do we care by what method it is created and sustained. We believe, however, that it would be bad policy for the legislature to interfere in a matter which should not come before it for determination. As a matter of fact the whole thing is nothing more nor less than a row between local factions, and the small pox scare has been used in the legislature and throughout the state by the party which had the newspapers under its control.

LOCKED OUT OF JAIL. A Prisoner's Queer Charge Against His Jailor. There was a certain old man who kept the county jail in a country village, says Kate Field's Washington, and he fed and housed the convicts so well that they became greatly attached to him. He could actually allow them to go about at will. He used to hire them out to the farmers in the neighborhood during the harvest season, and in that way turn an honest penny for the taxpayers. Early one morning one of the prisoners appeared at the office of a lawyer in the place. "Young man," said he, "are you the lawyer?" "I am," was the answer. "I want you to get me out of jail on a writ of habeas corpus, and I want it right away."

"Well, hold on, my friend," said the lawyer. "We must have a reason to show the court, before we can ask for a writ." "I've reason enough," exclaimed the man. "The cruelty of the keeper makes life here unbearable." "Oh, pshaw! don't tell me such nonsense. There never was a kinder keeper in charge of a jail." "Judge for yourself," the prisoner insisted. "Yesterday I was working out at Mr. Walkinshaw's, and we had a big lot of hay to get in, for the sky was full of rainclouds. So when the jail horn blew for bedtime, I stayed and helped get the hay under cover. "It was after dark when I got back, and would you believe it? that hard-hearted keeper had locked me out! I had to sleep in the street, and caught rheumatism in my bones. It settled things in my mind. I'll not stay another night under the roof of a man who'll treat me like that," says I to myself. So, Mr. Lawyer, I want you to get me out before sundown, do you hear?"

CATARH CANNOT BE CURED WITH LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 7c.

BERLIN A SLUMLESS CITY.

Its Streets Asphalted and Kept Clean Even in the Poorest Quarters.

A foreigner coming to Berlin will be impressed almost at once by the excellent streets, and further by the exceptional manner in which they are taken care of. Almost everywhere they are asphalted, even where they are narrowest, and not only in the middle of the city, but far out into the suburbs. This work has been done in the most substantial manner. This department of city affairs is entrusted to skillful officers, who perform their duty according to the latest scientific principles. In the center of the city a large tract of street is now being torn up for new horse car tracks, and it is an instructive sight to see the fine scale upon which the work is done. The foundation is at least a foot in depth of the hardest possible mixture of small stones and cement. Upon this, by means of monstrous rollers and other machinery, is placed the asphalt, which is not more than half an inch in thickness, but which, on account of the strong sub-work wears like the everlasting rock. It seldom needs repair, says the Philadelphia Telegraph; it does not run away in hot weather, and does not rut under the heaviest kind of traffic. This adds materially, of course, to the beauty of Berlin, and facilitates the work of cleansing the streets, another department of municipal administration which is attended to in the most effective manner. Cleansers in uniform are constantly at work in all parts of the city, who with broom and brush heap up the refuse before the curbs, to be hauled off to the city farms during the night. At intervals each day water carts are driven over the streets, and boys follow after with squeegees, which they propel by long handles washing every particle of filth away.

The excellent condition of the streets of Berlin is one of the reasons why the city has none of those districts which have come to be called "slums." While London and Paris, not to mention the Italian and Spanish cities and some cases nearer home, suffer in a notable manner from the condition of the poor at certain points, where they live crowded together under the most unhealthy surroundings, this is not to any extent true of Berlin. There are districts in the east and north where the poor live together, but in nothing like the misery and squalor which one will find elsewhere. The streets, as already remarked, are asphalted, and they are clean. They are nearly everywhere wide. There are none of those little dark alleys which exist in other cities. The houses are well built and sound. One could pass through these districts time and again, and did he not see the children on the sidewalk and the women with their heads out of the windows it might scarcely occur to him that he was among the poor people. The fronts of the houses are of very handsome masonry, harmonious in architecture and in no important respect different from the houses in many wealthier sections of the city.

MET A BAD MAN.

An Army Officer's Experience in the State of Texas.

"Only on one occasion in my life have I felt the need of a weapon," said an officer of the United States army, to a Washington Star writer. "I have never carried a gun, but it has sometimes occurred to me that no man ought ever to be without one. One cannot be sure but that some time the weapon would save one's life. For instance, I will recite to you a little experience of my own. It was in a wild mountain region of Texas. I was riding along a lonely path, mounted on a government mule. Not a thing did I have on my person which could be seen regarded by the most impoverished citizen as of value. Whistling as I went, I approached a large rock about which the path ran to avoid a sharp ascent. Just as I reached it a fierce-looking man rose out of the bushes and cried: "Halt!"

"What could I do? Perhaps you will say that I ought to have charged upon him with my government mule, overpowered him, taken away his arms, and demanded why he should thus obstruct what was the best substitute available for a public highway. I did nothing of the kind. The only reason I can allege is that I was afraid. Such a method of dealing with highwaymen does well enough in story books, but in real life it is dangerous. Accordingly, I obeyed the suggestion of the bold bandit and halted. For a moment my heart jumped into my throat as I saw him thrust a hand into his hip pocket. He drew from it something and pointed it at me point blank. I perceived that the something was not a pistol; it was a bottle—a large, black bottle. Said the highwayman: "Drink!"

"I held out my hand and grasped the bottle with more than ordinary eagerness. I drank. It was the worst whisky I have ever tasted; and that is saying a good deal, for I have lived in the wilds of the west for a number of years. But to me at that moment it was a grateful draught. I handed the bottle back to the highwayman, and as he went his way with a benevolent smile upon his countenance, I resumed with a thankful heart my journey upon my government mule. I had meant to offer him that mule, but would hardly have had the nerve, perhaps, for he might have regarded the proffer of such an obviously valueless gift as an insult."

A Hungry People. The Australians pass the greater part of their time at the table. At 7 they take tea and bread and butter. At 8:30 they breakfast on cold meats, chops or steaks, eggs and bacon and tea. At 11 most of them take a light lunch of beer and biscuit, or tea and bread and butter, according to their sex. At 1, or 1:30, they dine, and again the teapot comes into requisition. At 3 afternoon tea is served and swallowed. From 6 to 7 all Australia, broadly speaking, is taking its third meal, and again drinking tea. Those who stay up at all late sometimes supplement this with a light collation at 10.

SECRETS OF HER SUCCESS.

A Boarding House Keeper Lets Light on an Interesting Subject.

A very successful boarding house keeper was telling a writer for the New York Recorder some secrets of her good fortune. "Above all," said she, "I try to keep every part of my two houses just as clean as I possibly can, but I am not the only one in this business who does that, though it's a great point. Then I have always hired large houses. You cannot possibly make money in a small one. I have clung to a neighborhood and made my house distinctive by having at some expense vines trained from basement to roof. Those vines are my trademark. When folks forget the number they say 'the house with the vines.' Moreover, they give the place such a shady, cool look in summer that people are not so anxious to get off to the country. The green effect takes away the hot, stuffy look, and something of the feeling. Then I make a point of being very liberal with towels and napkins. This item costs me perhaps twenty-five dollars more in a year than it would the usual boarding house keeper in my place but it brings me in the outfit multiplied many times. Of course I set as good a table as I can, and my rooms are well furnished, but as good as can be had elsewhere. My luck in letting rooms I have always believed to be due to the fact that I have a piano in nearly every large apartment. It is really odd to see how a piano will attract a person. Why, I can get five or six dollars more a week for a suite with a piano, which doesn't cost that much a month. If people don't want the instrument, it can be moved out. One other point: I use the same kind of carpet in every room in the house as far as I can, so when it wears shabby, all the good may be brought together and made use of. I find there's great economy in this. Lastly, I have no helpless, lazy relatives such as usually cripple a woman in my line, eating her out of house and home and disgrunting the boarders. If I had, I think I should provide for them elsewhere, for in a boarding house their room is generally worth more than their company, or their half-hearted attempts at helping."

AN ARAPAHOE'S MEAL.

The Indian's Appetite Held Out as Long as the Meat Lasted.

For feats of downright big eating I'll back the North American Indian against the world, said a Colorado man. I recall in particular an Arapaho Indian who visited our camp by the Fontaine qui Bouille river one night. We had killed a buffalo calf that day—a good-sized, fat calf, four or five months old—and having skinned and dressed the carcass, had hung it up on a wagon pole. We had carved enough off one shoulder to go along with mountain trout, bacon, bread and coffee for our party of four at supper; the rest of the meat was all there. The Indian came riding up after we had eaten and he looked pretty tired and empty. He had evidently traveled a long way with little to eat, for he was dusty, haggard and thin as a shoestring, and there was no doubt when he asked by signs for food that he wanted it badly. We pointed to the buffalo calf, and with his knife he cut off some slices of meat, laid them on the embers, and as soon as they were a little scorched ate them ravenously and began again with the calf.

He was still cutting and cooking meat and eating when we went off to sleep, and so far as we could tell he spent the entire night in that occupation, for whenever one or another of us woke up enough to look around the Indian was either cutting at the calf or eating by the fire. When we turned out in the morning we found that all that was left of that buffalo calf was its skeleton hanging from the pole. The Indian had not carved away its joints and ribs as a white man would have done, but had hacked the meat off in small pieces till all was gone.

The Indian looked like another person. His all-night feed had fattened him up so that he looked well filled out, and he moved about with a different air. He greeted our rising with a "Hoo," and sat stolidly by the fire until one of us gave him a tin cup of coffee, which he took with another "Hoo." While we were at breakfast he mounted his horse and slipped away so silently that we scarcely noticed his going.

And the Light Went Out.

"John," said Mrs. Bossman, "it is time you were in bed. If you don't turn the light down, the first thing you know the baby will be awake." "Pshaw," said Mr. Bossman, "the light won't wake him." "No, but I'll wake him myself." The prospect was too appalling. He meekly did as he was bid.

Office of THE PIONEER PRESS COMPANY, C. W. HORNICK, Supt. St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 7, 1894. Eureka Chemical and Mfg Co., La Crosse, Wis. Dear Sirs—I have been a tobacco fiend for many years, and during the past two years have smoked fifteen to twenty cigars regularly every day. My whole nervous system became affected, until my physician told me I must give up the use of tobacco for the time being, at least. I tried the so-called 'Keeley Cure,' 'No-To-Bac,' and 'Baco-Curo.' Three weeks ago today I commenced using your preparation, and today I consider myself completely cured. I am in perfect health, and the horrible craving for tobacco, which every inveterate smoker fully appreciates, has completely left me. I consider your 'Baco-Curo' simply wonderful, and can recommend it. Yours truly, C. W. HORNICK. (1-15-95)

ORGANIZED AT LAKE LINDEN. Law & Order League Is Planning a Campaign Against the Liquor Dealers. ALL OTHER PLACES MAY REMAIN OPEN ON SUNDAY. The Austrian Maennerchor Will Give Concert and Ball on Saturday Evening, Feb. 23. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Horace J. Stevens Houghton, Mich. Telephone connection. LAKE LINDEN. A local branch of the Houghton county Law & Order League has been organized in South Lake Linden with Wm. Dunstone president and Rev. H. C. Scottford secretary. An effort will be made to secure the rigid enforcement of all laws relating to the saloon business but the candy stores will not be touched. No exception can be taken to the position of the league relative to enforcing the liquor laws. They have every right to ask the enforcement of any law on the statute book but cannot some of the members of the league explain why it is that only one class of offenders are being chased? The opening of a candy store, barber shop, livery stable or other place of business on the first day of the week is as much a violation of the law as the opening of a saloon for business. Will some of the gentlemen of the league kindly explain why it is that only certain offenses against the laws are punished by the league, while other sections of the same law are allowed to remain dead letters? The masquerade carnival last night at Penor's rink at Gray was attended by a large crowd, many of whom were masked. Mr. Penor is trying hard to infuse a little life into the town in a social and amusement way and is meeting with fair success. The B. B. club will give a concert at the opera house next Tuesday evening. Admission, thirty-five cents, reserved seats fifty cents. The proceeds will go to St. Joseph's church. The ladies of St. Cecilia's church, South Lake Linden, will give a bazaar on Monday next, and perhaps, if the stock holds out, will continue a day or so longer. The O. M. B. club will give a dance at the opera house this evening. CALUMET. The Austrian Maennerchor will give a concert followed by a ball at the Italian Hall on the night of Saturday, Feb. 23. The program will be a double one, both the concert and ball being full grown affairs, although both are to be given in one evening and so much of the following interminable period of time as may be required to exhaust the orchestra and dancers. One thing is certain and that is that those attending will get their money's worth. The lecture by the Rev. J. M. Barkley at the opera house Thursday evening was well attended and very interesting. The W. M. C. A. course this winter has brought some very good entertainments here. Good judgment was evidently exercised by whoever was responsible for selecting the numbers that have been presented so far before copper country audiences. The Light Guard social will be given at the Armory this evening. This event has been discussed with great interest long in advance, and now that the auspicious occasion is at last here, a large gathering of the youth and beauty of the city and county may be looked for. The German American Bowling club is making extensive preparations for the annual masquerade of that social organization, which is to be given at the Armory on Friday evening of next week. The Silver Star Social club will give a dance at the Armory on the night of Monday, Feb. 25. Kate's orchestra will furnish music. Tickets one dollar per couple. HANCOCK. The class in mechanical drawing recently organized which has been meeting Monday evenings in the Y. M. C. A. rooms will hold weekly sessions on Fridays beginning this evening at the same place. A good class of bright and ambitious young men has been found. A thorough knowledge of mechanics and draughting is a possession that, coupled with integrity and energy will bring a young man to the front in this mining district. The mine superintendents, mill owners and other employers of labor are always on the lookout for bright young men equipped with the proper kind of education and experience. The supply of such never has and probably never will equal the demand. Mr. A. J. Scott left Wednesday noon for New Orleans making the start a trifle earlier than was anticipated. The Houghton & Keweenaw Teacher's association will hold a regular session tomorrow in this place. The first ball masque of the season will be that of the Twin City orchestra, which is billed for this evening at St. Patrick's hall. The members of the orchestra and friends have been busy for several weeks in spreading the praises of the entertainment and arranging the details to make good their promises. It is probable that there will be both a large attendance and a very enjoyable time for those who appreciate that sort of thing. The big sixty-five ton casting for the Quincy caused much trouble in getting into place on the hill. The shaft was probably one of the largest single pieces ever turned out in the country and is equal in weight to the heavy equipment of the Calumet & Hecla and Tamarack properties. When the improvements begun two years ago at the Quincy have been completed, which will be two years later, the surface improvements of the property will be practically renewed throughout and at a scale in keeping with that of the two other big mines of the county. Houghton. Mr. Frank C. Mayworm and Miss Tillie Mackay were married by the Rev. J. Edward Reilly of the Hancock Congregational church at the residence of

the bride's mother, West Houghton, at 11 o'clock Thursday morning. Only immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present. Mr. and Mrs. Mayworm took the 2 o'clock train for Chicago, where they will reside for the next few months while he is completing a course of optical study. Jas. R. Dee and Will D. Calverly got home Tuesday evening after a ten day's visit to Chicago, Detroit and other towns. W. E. Tyler, northern passenger agent of the St. Paul system, is in the copper district. H. G. De Vere of Iron Mountain spent Wednesday and Thursday in copperdom, this having been his first visit to Houghton county for nearly ten years. Marshal Martin M. Foley left Wednesday morning for Detroit. He will be absent about a week. The snow plow, followed closely by the big snow roller, has been used to good advantage during the week. It is not found an altogether easy matter to keep a good road at all times to the Atlantic mill, but a good road must be had for the hauling of copper from the mill to the smelters at Hancock, and the plow and roller save a great deal of labor with shovels during a season. The county Republican convention to select delegates to the state judicial convention, will be held at Peffer's Hall at 2 o'clock this afternoon. LANSE PICKINGS. The Keweenaw club met Wednesday evening at the town hall and played progressive pedro. A very nice lunch was served. Owing to some misunderstanding the music failed to show up and dancing was not indulged in. The club will be entertained by Mrs. Meta Wiley next Tuesday evening. At the Republican convention held in the town hall Wednesday afternoon Harvey Selden and M. Manger were chosen delegates to attend the state convention at Detroit on the 21st. Professor C. E. Tuck was nominated for county commissioner of schools for Baraga county. The Whist club met at Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Tuck's residence Tuesday evening. Steve Harris and Mrs. J. G. Turner made the largest number of points, 65. The club will be entertained by Mrs. Mary Young and Otto Beehler Tuesday evening next. The Snow Shoe club was entertained last evening at the Rowland residence by Mrs. Meta Wiley after its tramp. A very enjoyable time was had by the members. A Law and Order league is being talked of here. There is lots of opportunity for such an order to distinguish itself here and also at Baraga. Mrs. J. B. Smith gave a Valentine progressive party yesterday afternoon to quite a number of her lady friends. Dr. Walker of Champion stayed over Tuesday night, Wednesday and renewed his acquaintance with L'Anse friends. Professor Eugene Langier of Sault Ste. Marie has been in town the past week tuning and repairing pianos. Dave Rowland of Oshkosh, the well-known clothing man, took orders here for spring suits this week. Mrs. J. Q. McKernan went to Houghton Wednesday for a two weeks' visit with friends and relatives. Win Williams, E. H. Towar and V. B. Cochran of Marquette were in town Wednesday. Result of a Meat Diet. Mrs. Hart, who has covered the globe with her notebook, declares the English people to be the most garrulous and quarrelsome of any she has encountered. She says there is more bickering and distemper in the Englishman's family and more homes are made unhappy by domestic squabbles than in any of the other nations she has visited. This condition she attributes chiefly to the Anglo-Saxon's fondness for a meat diet. She says the great flesh-eating people are notably ill-tempered. We are only animals, and the sequence of meat and fits, as demonstrated in the animal kingdom, has a significance in relation to the human animal. Mrs. Hart has gone further than this, and has studied the gentle Japanese, the mild Mongolian and other light-living races, which research confirms her ideas touching flesh-eating and family jars. PECULIAR In combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses great curative value. You should TRY IT. THE YELLOW WAR. Facts About the Struggle Waging Between China and Japan. Enthusiasm of the Japanese for Battle and Ignorance of the Chinese Concerning Its Progress—Probable After Effects. The American board of foreign missions representing the Congregational church, has secured the opinion of Rev. Henry Blodgett, D. D., of Pekin, who has spent forty years in the service of the board and thirty years in Pekin, and who is now in this country. Dr. Blodgett has responded to the request of the board as follows: "Among the common people of China little is known regarding the causes of the war or the facts occurring in its progress, and the wildest and most absurd rumors are afloat. In Japan everything is illuminated and their cities and towns are illuminated at every victory over the Chinese. In consequence, partly, of this, the most intense enthusiasm for the war prevails, even the boys and girls in their schools practicing military drill. 'On to Pekin' was the cry everywhere as we passed through the country. The treaty powers desire peace and will use their influence to secure it. China is ready for peace, even on humiliating terms. Japan may consent to give up the march on Pekin and grant terms of peace such as can be accepted. Yet these terms may be somewhat difficult to find. They involve the interests of European powers, as well as those of China and Japan. The great Siberian railway will be finished in a few years. Will Russia be satisfied to have Vladivostok, a port which is closed by ice four months each year, as the terminus of this railway on the seaboard? Will she not wish for her transcontinental railway a port farther south which is open all the year; that is to say, a port of Korea. But such a port would make Russia a leading power on the eastern borders of China and in the Pacific ocean. Will England consent to such an arrangement? Will France and Germany consent? Will China and Japan consent? The only solution seems to be to give autonomy to the nation guaranteed by all the powers. As for Formosa, Great Britain and France would both oppose the cession of that island to Japan, and to this claim China will be compelled to agree. It is not improbable that close commercial and political relations will spring up between China and Japan. For the most part missionaries have remained in their places. In Pekin and elsewhere work is carried forward without obstruction. Thus far the missionaries of the seven stations of the American board in North China have continued in their posts and engaged in their usual labors. Without doubt rulers and people will be greatly incited. With the common people the matter will end here. They leave national interests to the government. The government, the literary classes, and the business men of China have been taught a grand object lesson on the facility of their old methods and the necessity of adopting the new. In November the writer in passing through the city of Osaka was permitted to visit forty-nine wounded Chinese prisoners. They were quartered in the largest temple in Osaka. They were furnished with a sufficient bedding and abundant food. The best medical and surgical aid was afforded them, the surgeon in charge having received his medical education in Berlin. They seemed cheerful and thoughtful. When we returned to the United States the Chinese governor offered one hundred and fourteen dollars for the head of a Japanese private and double that amount for the head of an officer, such treatment of Chinese prisoners by the Japanese is the more remarkable. Nor is it greatly to be wondered at if in a single instance at Port Arthur the cruelties of the Chinese provoked retaliation."

BRONZES OF BABYLON. Casts of Figures Made Four Thousand Years Ago. There have been placed on exhibition in the Babylonian room of the British museum some very fine specimens of Babylonian bronze castings, says the London Graphic. These interesting specimens of the early metal work come from a place known to the ancients as Sir-pur-ra, or Lagash, the modern name of which is Tello, a large mound or site in southern Chaldea. One of the bronzes shows the king of Babylonia, who appears clean-shaven, in the dress of the high priest. The garment reaches down to the feet, and is crossed over the left shoulder, leaving the right arm, which is raised, bare. The statuette is a full length one, standing on its own double plinth, and is some twelve inches high. This bronze comes from Abu Hablah, and dates about B. C. 2200. A second statuette represents a king in the attitude of adoration or contemplation, having his hands raised and clasped together in a similar manner as the god Nebo is represented. The king wears a long, flowing beard, but no costume can be traced. This figure is not full length, being cut off about the calves, and represents probably the Chaldean king, Gudea, B. C. 2500. The third figure, which stands seven inches high, represents Camil-Sin, king of Babylonia, in the character of a basket bearer, both arms being uplifted and supporting a basket borne on the head. The date of the figure is about B. C. 2200. It is supposed that these statuette may have been dedications to Ningirsu, the fire god, whose worship was a particular cult at Tello. The art of making bronze casts was known to the Babylonians from very early times, and many examples are to be seen in the British museum, as well as in the Louvre. A plaster cast of a Babylonian queen, taken from the original in the Louvre, stands by the side of the new additions, casts of which have been sent to the French museum.

GAUMOND WAS THE WINNER.

The local officials of the United States land office rendered a decision yesterday against the contestant in the case of Gaumond against Williamson. The homestead in controversy is in the Huron bay district. P. R. McKernan of L'Anse and S. E. Byrne of this city appeared for Gaumond and Clark & Pearl for Williamson. The decision holds that the evidence shows that Williamson's residence on the land was insufficient under the law and awards the property to Gaumond. The local officials announce that contents of this character will not be suffered to drag along hereafter but that decisions will be rendered promptly upon completion of evidence and argument by counsel.

DEATH OF MRS. ROBERT BEACON.

Tickets will be on sale at all the more important points along the South Shore from Feb. 18 to 24 inclusive and will be good returning until March 20.

THE DUBLIN BROGUE.

Frances Power Cobbe, in her "Life," gives amusing illustrations of the Dublin brogue in which Irish Protestant clergymen, educated at Trinity college, used to preach fifty years ago. One, concluding a sermon on the "Fear of Death," exclaimed: "Ye brethren, the dying Christian lepps into the arms of death, and makes his hollow jaws ring with eternal hallelujahs!" There was a chapter in the Acts which Miss Cobbe dreaded to hear read by a certain clergyman, so difficult was it to help laughing when told of "Pertheans and Mades, and the dwellers in Mesopotamia and the part of Libya about Cyrene, strengtheners of Roum, Jews, Proselytes, Crates and Arabians."

A PAIR OF BLOOMERS.

Why Mrs. Cranston's Husband Allowed Her to Wear Them.

Before bicycling became a craze with women there had never been so much as a shadow of quarrel between Mr. and Mrs. Cranston. But after Mrs. Cranston bought a bicycle and learned to ride well, there was a disagreement which came very nearly breaking up a happy home. They had been married three years, and they had often said that their married life had been one long honeymoon.

"Tom had yielded so readily to all of his wife's whims that she had unconsciously gained an opinion that her word was to him like the laws of the Medes and the Persians. But this idea was all knocked to pieces when one morning as they sat at breakfast Mrs. Cranston said: "Tom, I'm going to order my dressmaker to make a suit of bloomers for me to-day. I do so much bicycling now that the skirts are too heavy for me."

"What?" shouted Tom, dropping his spoon in the oatmeal and splattering milk all over his necktie, looking at her as though she had announced that she was going to commit suicide.

Mrs. Cranston also dropped her spoon and looked in surprise at her husband. "I said," she repeated, "that I was going to get a bloomer suit. What strikes you as particularly strange about that?"

"What strikes me as particularly strange?" he repeated, with a wild look in his eyes. "Do you think for one moment that I will allow my wife to race around town looking like a lithograph of a variety entertainment? Not much."

"But Tom," said Louise, in a tone that had never failed to persuade her husband that she was right and that he was wrong, "I don't see why I can't have bloomers. Mrs. Kynaston and Mrs. Bentley and Mrs. Jennings all wear them and their husbands don't object, so why should you?"

"It makes no difference why I should," said Tom, doggedly. "I don't intend to have my friends on the exchange coming to me and saying: 'Tom, I see your wife wearing bloomers.' Not if I know it."

"But, Tom," she began, "I—"

"Oh, don't talk any more nonsense, Louise," he broke in. "I am sick of it. You shan't wear bloomers, so that settles it." And Mrs. Cranston, whose appetite had been taken entirely away by his wife's announcement, got up from the table and started for the door.

"Good-by," he called from the hall, and then the door slammed and Louise sat at the breakfast table wondering how it was that she had never before known that her husband had a will of his own.

She had told all of her friends only the day before that she would be wearing bloomers within a week, and when they had suggested that her husband might object she said:

"What? Tom object? Why, he never objects to anything."

And now Tom had absolutely refused to allow her to wear them, with a facial expression which showed that he would not stop short of the divorce courts to prevent it.

Finally she arose from the table and went to her room.

She had an idea which she thought, if properly carried out, would gain Tom's consent to the wearing of bloomers. She wrote a hurried note to her dressmaker ordering a bloomer suit of a pattern which she had already selected, and then donned her old bicycle suit to pay a call on Mrs. Kynaston, who had a husband who did not object to bloomers.

She told her troubles to the vivacious Mrs. Kynaston, who was not sparing in her sympathy for the poor friend who had a narrow-minded husband who objected to a convenient bicycle dress.

"Why, how foolish of him," she said. "I don't believe the poor man has ever seen a proper bicycling costume. I'll tell you what we'll do. We'll all go bicycling this afternoon, and come back by your house at just the time your husband gets home, and he will see what a bloomer suit looks like."

And so the bicycle party was arranged, and when Thomas Cranston arrived at his house that evening he saw five women riding in front of the house and four of them were in full bloomer costume. The fifth, who wore skirts, was his wife.

He was not so badly shocked as he thought he would be and he wished that he had not been so decided in his refusal of his wife's request, but he made up his mind that it would be unmanly to yield after his remarks of the morning, and so, with a bow to his wife and her companions, he went indoors and began to dress for dinner.

That night Louise again broached the subject of bloomers, but her husband silenced her by saying:

"Now, see here, Louise, don't speak to me about bloomers again. If you go in for women's rights if you like, and you may wear standing collars and men's waistcoats, but you shall not wear trousers even if bicycling does justify it in your eyes."

"Trousers!" cried Louise, indignantly; "who said anything about trousers? I was talking about bloomers."

"I know you were," said Mr. Cranston, "and please don't talk about them any more. I'm tired of it, and I won't hear it mentioned again."

The next morning when Mr. Cranston put on his coat to start for his office his wife called him back and said:

"Tom, I'll promise you never to mention bloomers again, but if you ever change your mind about them please tell me, for I'm really very anxious to wear them."

The smile which for twenty-four hours had been absent from Tom Cranston's face came again, and he kissed his wife.

"That's a dear, good girl, Louise," he said. "I hated to refuse your request, but really I don't like the idea of your wearing those things. And now, if there is anything else you want me to do for you, just name it, and I'll do it."

He went away, but returned in a moment and called out:

"Oh, Louise, I'm going to a dinner at the club to-night, and I want you to have my dress suit handy when I come home. Good-by."

THOUGH THE SHADOWS LIE DARK.

Though the shadows lie dark on our path, love, Yet, the hill-tops are gleaming with light. Though the winds sweep around us in wrath, love, There is quiet and peace on the height.

Then sing, though the pathway be lone, love: Aye, sing, though the bleak winds are cold; Beyond is a mansion—our own, love— All gleaming with jasper and gold.

Though the flowers have dropped at our feet, love, In silent and hopeless decay, Yet, there they are fadeless and sweet, love, In the glow of eternity's day.

Then sing, though the clear sunny light, love, Of the flowery spring time be o'er; For there cometh no cankering blight, love, To the bloom of that beautiful shore.

Though, as exiles afar from our home, love, We wander mid' doubts and fears, Yet, beyond, where there gathers no gloom, love, The house of our Father appears.

Loved ones are waiting on high, love— Already the home-lights appear; And music of sweetness untold, love, Or steals on our listening ear.

Then sing, we're ascending each day, love, More near to the heights of rest. Soft breezes are stealing this way, love, With perfumes of paradise blest.

A day or two more and the gloom, love— The toll and the strife will be o'er; And forever, mid beauty and bloom, love, At home we'll repose evermore.

CHASED BY FIRE.

How Two Dakota Young People Became Engaged.

It was a gloomy day in November. The wind rushed over a Dakota prairie, causing the tangled masses of long grass with which it was carpeted to wave to and fro like the coming in or going out of the tide. Everything was brown and withered, and the sod houses scattered at wide intervals fitted well in the somber picture. There were patches of bare ground here and there, with piles of dead "tumbling weeds," broken from their main stems and clinging together, rolling over miles of space, the playthings of the wind, and increasing in size as they rolled.

A young girl stood in the doorway of a small dug out, and looked at these with a troubled countenance.

"It would be a terrible day for a fire," she said to the lad who was twisting the hay for their night fuel a few yards away. "Everything is so dry, and those weeds are collecting in such quantities that they would be a moving wall of flame if lighted."

"Well," said the boy hopefully, "it's getting late in the season for fires, and Jack Williams plowed a half dozen extra furrows around our house for a safety line. If the wind keeps on tearing like this, we'll get rain or snow soon, and that will put an end to all anxiety. Ugh! what's that?"

There was an echo of horse's hoofs from the rear of the house, and an Indian came round the corner, mounted on a white-faced pony, with a blanket dragging loosely from his shoulders. The girl stepped back, and the boy dropped his hay and came near her, as if to offer her some protection.

"White Bear comes!" said the red man, with a pompous air, laying his hand upon his chest as he spoke. "Big Sioux—much big—wants flour, meal, salt pork!"

For a moment Alice Maxon was frightened, but a glance at her brother Elmer seemed to give her strength, and she answered, firmly: "We have no food for you, White Bear. The year has been a hard one for us. See our little farm, our one cow and horse, and our poor clothes. We are only children. I am eighteen, and my brother is twelve. Our father and mother are dead, a long, cold winter lies before us, and we have not a mouthful to spare."

The Indian frowned.

"White Bear must have flour and meat from all the settlers of Ridge prairie! Does the one cow give milk? White Bear must have butter. Has the maiden chickens? White Bear must have eggs. I have said it!"

"You will get nothing here," said Elmer Maxon, angrily. "If you want these things, do as we have done; work for them, like a good citizen of the United States!"

"Does the maiden say this, too?" "I do not like to turn you away empty-handed," Alice returned in a gentle voice, "but I cannot give you from our store of provisions. A great warrior will not be cruel, and if I offer to break bread with you, will not White Bear eat one slice and go in peace?"

"No!" growled the savage. "White Bear will have what he asks for or nothing! And if I get nothing, the bad children will be sorry; they will know what it is to be hungry and cold before spring!"

Alice turned away, unable to meet the stare of his revengeful eyes; but Elmer answered, dauntlessly: "We are not afraid of you, and I don't believe you are even a big Sioux. Brave chiefs do not beg, or try to scare boys and girls, either!"

"We shall see!" said White Bear, in a guttural voice.

He struck his pony with a piece of shingle that he held in his left hand, and rode away without looking back; but Alice and Elmer watched him out of sight with some uneasiness.

"I am sorry," said the girl, "but indeed I cannot help it. To give to one Indian is to open the door through which twenty more will file into your castle. And we cannot spare anything from our winter's allowance without putting ourselves in danger of starvation."

"Are you afraid of White Bear?" the boy asked.

"I am a little troubled by his threats," said his sister.

"Well, I believe I had better go up to Jack Williams' cabin and tell him about it, and see what he thinks we should do to protect ourselves."

Alice blushed prettily.

"We are always appealing to Jack Williams for help," she said deprecatingly. "I am afraid he thinks we are very troublesome."

"No, he doesn't, Alice! Only yesterday he told me if anything happened

TO YOU TO LET HIM KNOW, AND HE IS ALWAYS OFFERING TO HELP US, AS IF IT WERE THE PLEASANTEST AND MOST NATURAL THING IN THE WORLD."

"He is very kind," and Alice Maxon's face grew still more rosy. "Perhaps it would be well to consult him, and you should lose no time in going, Elmer, for you must be back before dark."

Elmer did not wait for a second bidding, but mounted the only horse they possessed and rode away towards the Williams homestead.

The two buildings were, in pioneer phrase, "handy to each other," being only a mile apart; and when the boy reached Jack's home, he found that sturdy fellow on his knees in front of the cabin, oiling and polishing a bicycle with industrious care.

"Hilloa, Elmer!" he called out, cheerfully. "I was just getting ready for a flying trip to your house. I have been to Sherwood, and as to-morrow happens to be your sister's birthday, I bought her a little present, and I was going to bring it over on my wheel."

"Elmer was Alice with interest now, and White Bear was forgotten till after Jack had brought from the kitchen table a handsome plush toilet case, carefully wrapped in several papers.

"Isn't that a daisy!" the young man cried, warmly. "I can imagine how Alice's blue eyes will shine when she sees it."

CRUSHED IN HIS SKULL.

Singular Accident in an Ishpeming Mine Wednesday Night.

RESULTS IN DEATH OF SAMUEL LEESSE, A MINER.

Got More Ride Than He Bargained For. Miss Traver Resigns Her Position in the Public Schools.

FATALITY AT THE SALISBURY.

Samuel Leesse, one of the timbermen at the Salisbury mine, met with an accident between 11:30 and 12 o'clock Wednesday night which resulted in his death about four hours later. Leesse and Mike Rand, the latter also a timberman, were descending the shaft in the skip and were about opposite the eleventh level when some heavy object (a stone it is thought) fell from above and struck Leesse on the head, fracturing his skull. The blow rendered him unconscious and he fell against the side of the skip. His partner took the unfortunate man in his arms and held him until the skip stopped.

While it is not positively known what struck Leesse it is generally believed that it was a stone, which probably fell from some of the wall plates in the shaft. It is possible, however, that it fell from the top of the shaft. As soon as possible after the accident occurred Leesse was got to surface and sent to the Ishpeming hospital. A couple of surgeons took charge of the case and did everything possible to save his life. An examination showed that his skull was too badly crushed to leave any hope for him, and he died within a few hours.

The deceased was a native of Foxdale, Isle of Man, and came from his native country direct to Ishpeming five years ago the coming spring. He had worked at the Salisbury ever since his arrival here. He was about twenty-five years of age and was considered one of the best and steadiest men at the mine. He was a great favorite among his fellow workmen and his death is deeply regretted by all who knew him. A brother of the deceased, Benjamin Leesse, resides here. He also works at the Salisbury. Another brother, Joseph Leesse, spent several years in Ishpeming, but left for his native country last summer.

All work at the mine has been suspended until after the funeral, which will be held tomorrow or Sunday.

A Ride He Didn't Enjoy.

One of Ishpeming's business men had a ride Wednesday noon that he didn't enjoy even a little bit. Every day when going to his dinner he leaves his store in time to catch the 12:35 train on the South Shore road to ride from the depot to the Third street crossing, thus saving a walk of about three blocks. He had ridden to the crossing so often that the conductors and brakemen finally "tumbled" to his scheme. When the train was about to pull out Wednesday the man took his usual place on the steps of one of the coaches. The conductor saw him. In giving the engineer a signal to go ahead he gave his arm an extra twist which the man at the throttle evidently understood. The train took on unusual speed from the start and passed over the Third street crossing at such a rapid rate that the man was afraid to jump, so he wisely stayed on and took a ride to Negaunee. He had the pleasure of walking home and had a late dinner besides.

Miss Traver Resigns.

Miss Annie Traver, instructor of music in the Ishpeming public schools, tendered her resignation to the board, the same to take effect at the end of the present school month, which will be some time next week. The board has not yet had an opportunity to get together for the consideration of her resignation, but a meeting for that purpose will be held in a few days. There is little doubt but that the resignation will be accepted. One of the members of the board stated yesterday that another teacher will be engaged to take her place without delay.

Died Yesterday.

Ole Wiggen, who was a candidate for the office of city treasurer last spring, died yesterday afternoon of consumption, from which he had been a sufferer for a year and a half. A widow and six children survive him. He carried an insurance of $2,000 on his life, which will be of considerable assistance to the family. The date for the funeral has not yet been announced.

Reduced Fare.

The fare for those wishing to attend the Christian Endeavor meeting at Marquette tonight has been placed at fifty cents for the round trip. Tickets will be good to return on any train tomorrow. Several members of the society here intend going down but a majority of those who do will return on the late train tonight.

Lee Tonight.

Frederic C. Lee will deliver his popular lecture, "The Lady, or the Tiger," at the Division street Methodist church under auspices of the Teachers' association tonight. It is said to be a fine effort, and Mr. Lee is certain to be greeted by a full house. Quite a number are expected over from Negaunee.

ISHPEMING IN BRIEF.

C. L. Holloper of Ontonagon was in the city yesterday.

E. R. Penberthy was down from Houghton yesterday.

M. D. Crawford of Marquette did business in town yesterday.

A daughter was born Tuesday to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Billing.

J. P. Outhwaite of the Nelson House is filling his ice houses with Teal Lake ice.

Herman Jaedecke has been at Ontonagon and other places up the line during the week.

Martin Ford came down from Minneapolis yesterday morning and will remain here a month or six weeks visiting his mother.

Miss C. Girdwood of Wausau, Wis., who has been here visiting friends for the past few weeks, left for Marshfield, Wis., yesterday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Williams mourn the loss of their baby boy, aged nine months, who died Wednesday. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon, with services at the house.

Mrs. Otto Eger entertained a number of her lady friends Wednesday afternoon. In the evening the ladies were joined by their husbands, when progressive pedro was played.

The remains of the late Hugh Ferguson, who died about four weeks ago, were shipped from Ishpeming to Toronto on Wednesday. They were accompanied by Mrs. Ferguson.

A toboggan party, followed by a social party, was given last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Tilson as a farewell to Hugh Tilson, who will leave next week for Dixon, Ill.

Ontonagon is beginning to get its baseball team together for the coming season. Tom Cooney of this city, who played shortstop for the team last summer, expects to leave for there soon.

Charles Simons and Miss Florence K. Skews were married Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, 314 East Division street. Rev. J. T. Joslin, pastor of the Methodist church, officiated. The groom was supported by his brother, Stephen Simons, and Miss Jessie Bickle was the bridesmaid. A reception was tendered the young couple after the ceremony.

TAURUS IN AN UNWANTED ROLE.

Untoward Results of Substituting a Bull for a Horse in "Mazeppa."

Jim Larkin was a noted character of Cheyenne in the '70s, says the Anacosta Standard. Larkin was one of those harmless, officious fellows and had his nose into everything. There was never a dog fight but in some way he got bitten; never a fire but he got burned, and never an accident but he was there in time to get hurt. Larkin was something of a showman. During his residence in Cheyenne a colored tragedian filled an engagement in that city, playing "Hamlet" and "Othello." Larkin saw in the colored man a great opportunity to make money and induced him to play "Mazeppa," using a wild bull instead of a wild horse. The tragedian fell into the idea and rehearsals for the great event were had. The performance was given in a large hall, which was crowded to the doors. The play went off lovely until it was time for the wild bull of Tartary to be brought on and then there was a slight hitch. The bull had suddenly become reluctant about going on the stage. Manager Larkin got behind him and gave the animal's tail a twist. It had the desired effect. The bull rushed upon the stage and tore out every foot of scenery and then jumped off into the orchestra, landing on top of the slide trombone player. The audience stampeded and jumped through the windows and doors, and in a very few minutes the bull had everything to himself. The "Mazeppa" engagement closed that night.

GHOSTS HAVE BAD HABITS.

Those of Chinamen Buried in a Foreign Land Will Not Rest.

The movement recently put on foot in this city to have the bones of Chinamen buried in the New York Bay cemetery and Evergreens cemetery exhumed and sent to China will bring relief to hundreds of families in the Celestial kingdom.

The average Chinaman is nothing if not superstitious, says the New York Herald. When one dies down in Chinatown all the other Celestials hurriedly move out of the house. The deceased may have been companionable enough when living, but, being dead, his ghost becomes a thing of terror.

The ghost of a Chinaman buried in a foreign land never rests. Listless, opium-fuddled Wong Bong may never have stepped beyond the precincts of Mott or Pell streets, but his ghost is always possessed with Bohemian instincts, and is possessed with an insane desire to travel.

Every little while it takes a flying trip to China, and the first thing they know, the relatives of that Chinaman begin to run against it in the dark and have their wits frightened out of them. The poor ghost isn't to blame, either. Old Charon positively refuses to recognize him; he gets low spirited, down on his luck, and finally, in sheer despair, becomes a chronic hunter of former relatives, and is, in short, an out and out nuisance.

Elephant Nurses.

The women of Siam intrust their children to the care of elephant nurses, and it is said the trust is never betrayed. The elephant, not being susceptible to the charms of the sunstruck policeman nor the social claims of his friends and relations, is consequently able to devote its entire attention to its charge. The babies play about the huge feet of the elephants, who are very careful never to hurt the little creatures. And if danger threatens the sagacious animal curls the child gently up in its trunk and swings it up out of harm's way upon its own back.

TOWELS UNTOLD.

The Funny Fancy of a New York Man Who Has a Collection.

Wipes of Every Description from All Lands - Some That Are Clean and Some That Break When They Are Bended.

A New Yorker with a strange fancy for towels has made their collection a fad, and he has gathered from all parts of the world an unparalleled assortment of them. Benjamin R. Davenport, a lawyer, better known as a publisher of several books, is the possessor of this unique collection, and he proudly displays his store of towels of all nations, numbering thirteen hundred and twelve.

Mr. Davenport, says the Philadelphia Record, has been engaged for twenty years in the amassing of this bizarre exhibit, which includes towels of cotton, wool, linen and silk. He has been ably assisted by many of his friends. To the acquaintance departing for distant lands Davenport has been wont to say: "Send me a towel from Madagascar," or, "While you are in Patagonia, pick me up one of the native towels."

By far the greater part of the collection was picked up in the hotels of the United States by Mr. Davenport personally. They vary in size and texture. A thin, sleeky cotton rag, through which one might read a newspaper, bears the startling legend, indelibly stamped across its limp surface: "Stolen from the Occidental hotel, Leadville, Col." It is evident that the miners had formed the habit of carrying off the towels to use as shirt fronts.

In contrast to this economical rag there is a roller towel, thirty feet in length, secured in an Illinois wash room. It was what the porter who sold it to him called "the house towel."

One set of seven towels, of varying thickness and texture, including a genuine Turkish article that looks like forty cents worth of tripe, recalls the luxury of a local bathhouse. A square section of jute bagging, such as is used to cover cotton bales, was considered quite the thing in a hostelry on the banks of the Yazoo river. A real curiosity is a stiff and inflexible affair found in the composing room of a Pennsylvania weekly newspaper. It was "the office towel."

There are towels of softest damask, with daintily embroidered initials that call up romantic visions, and there is a section of mummy cloth, brought home from Cairo, which once might have been used to dry the moisture from the fair skin of Pharaoh's daughter, or possibly have been tucked under the chin of the infant Moses.

There are towels that are as small as napkins and towels that would answer for bed spreads. Some are as soft to the touch as the fluffly bosom of eider swan, and others could be used to grate horseradish upon. There are dainty French towels and heavy, square German towels; soft Italian towels that give forth a faint odor of garlic; cold, heavily-starched towels that come from England; a Scotch towel that is made of tweed; an Irish towel of unbleached linen that will take off the cuticle as if it was made of emery paper; towels from the South Sea islands that are not towels, but are coconut mats; a carefully-dressed chamois skin which came from the Alps; a jean towel from Indiana; a Japanese towel of fibrous paper, and a heavy silk towel once owned by Adeline Patti.

Then there are common towels of no particular individuality that are in the collection, because they were known to have been used by some celebrity or because there is a tale of adventure, romance or sentiment connected with their acquisition. Mr. Davenport's conscience is never troubled when he contemplates his treasures. Very few of them were accidentally packed into his baggage. As to the consciences of the porters and chambermaids who assisted in their compilation—that is another story. Each of the towels is duly tagged and numbered, and a catalogue gives the history of each article.

GLASS DECORATION.

New Process Discovered in Switzerland Which Produces Beautiful Results.

Some beautiful effects in the ornamentation of glass are now produced by Gorlitz of Zurich, his method in this kind of work being, it is claimed, a decided improvement in the art. The design is first engraved on a printing plate of rubber, positively—that is, in the same way as that in which it will be coated then with varnish color and pressed upon a glass plate; the latter is strewn with bronze powder, sheet aluminum, or other suitable material, the portions forming the design remaining empty, and being, therefore, transparent. At this stage the glass plate is placed in a frame having a backing of strong paper board, on the front face of which is mounted a brilliant sheet of tinfoil or tin plate, provided with prominent squares in suitable positions. The design is thus shown by a brilliant reflected light through the transparent part of the glass, its other portion forming a backing stamped in relief.

Heretofore, raised enameled writing and designs in relief on glass have been produced by means of a brush and thin enamel paint, but Gorlitz uses stencil plates of tin foil or other flexible material and a glass powder composition made up to the consistency of molasses, with turpentine and "glaze."

He Died Honorably.

The recent degradation of Capt. Dreyfus, of the French army, as a traitor, contrasts very significantly with the way the French soldiers went to honor the memory of Chevalier Latour d'Auvergne, who fought in the battle of Verdun, and died on the battlefield, saying that this was the death he had always wished for. And ever afterwards, at the muster roll of his regiment the sergeant would call his name in the proper place on the roll and the oldest man in the ranks always replied: "Dead on the field of honor."

LEVIED ON THE STOCKPILES

The stockpiles of the Negaunee, Blue and Jackson mining companies were yesterday levied on by the city of Negaunee for the amount of taxes due on the three properties named.

The taxes of the three companies for 1894 will aggregate about $10,000. This is about $3,000 less than the taxes assessed against them for 1893.

A decision in the cases brought by the city against these three companies for the taxes of 1893, which are now pending in the supreme court, will be rendered in March, or perhaps not until May.

It is altogether probable that Mr. Mitchell will pay the taxes for 1894 under protest, as he did those of 1893 a year ago.

AMAZING SKILL.

A Clever French Juggler's Wonderful Feat with Coins.

A writer on the streets of old Paris gives in Blackwood's Magazine the description of a wonderful juggler, who, must, however, have performed the following trick by skill rather than by deception.

He asked the crowd for pennies, that is, pieces worth two sous; he put five of them into his right hand, played with them, tossed them a few times in the air, and then suddenly flung them straight up to a height which seemed above the housetops.

He watched them intently, as they rose, and as they turned and began to fall, he opened, with his left hand, the left pocket of his waistcoat, and held it open, perhaps two inches.

Down came the pennies, not loosely or separated from each other, but in what looked like a compact mass. He gazed at them fixedly, shifting his body slightly, so as to keep under them—he scarcely had to move his feet at all—and crash! came the pile into his waistcoat pocket.

He repeated the operation with ten pennies, and finally he did it with twenty. Yes, positively with twenty! It almost took one's breath away to hear the thud. Never did he miss, and never did the pennies break apart or scatter. They stuck to each other by some strange attraction, as if they had become soldered in air.

THEY NEVER DRINK.

Animals of the Desert That Have No Use for Water.

Persons who have given natural history and the allied sciences but little study have expressed much surprise upon reading of the number of animals, serpents and insects found by the Dr. Merriam expedition, in the Death valley, the rainless and waterless district in southern California.

Blanchard, in his book on Abyssinia, says that neither the Doreas nor the Bennett gazelles were ever known to resort to the springs, creeks or rivers for the purpose of drinking.

Through-out Africa the expression: "As dry as Sahara or an old gazelle" is very common. Darwin, in his "Voyage of a Naturalist," says that unless the wild llamas of Patagonia drink salt water "they must not drink at all."

All writers on natural history subjects are agreed on the point that the largest and most interesting branch of the sloth family never drink. Haynie says: "They are one branch of the peculiar animals which never drink water."

"American Notes and Queries," mentions a parrot which lived in the London zoological gardens fifty-two years without drinking so much as a drop of water. Somers, Williams, Christian and others doubt whether wild rabbits ever drink, but Rev. J. G. Wood questions the correctness of their suppositions.

LITERARY FINDS.

Sometimes Even Now an Apparently Worthless Book Proves to Be Rare.

Probably the days are gone by when a man could even hope to discover in a six-penny box an early quarto of a Shakespeare's play or a rare tract on America, but for all that literary "finds" of more or less interest continue to be made by keen book hunters.

As a rule, offers of rare books come from booksellers, who do not always say how they became possessed of them. Among the private people who offer books to the museum for sale are a large proportion who think that a book must necessarily be rare because it is one hundred years old or more.

Before the great catalogue was made finds were occasionally made in the museum itself, and even now a volume will occasionally be found which has special interest and value on account of its binding.

The Sentient Typewriter.

Typewriter girls are said to grow attached to their machines, and to regard them almost as much in the light of living creatures to be petted and managed and judiciously disciplined as the traditional railroad engineers of fiction do their locomotives to which they invariably refer with the personal feminine pronoun.

RABBITS CAN FEED THE WORLD.

They Would Soon Populate Large Islands for a Meat Supply.

With the constant increase of the population of the world the disciples of Malthus have predicted an inadequate food supply for the future. The chemists, says the Philadelphia Record, have sought to reassure mankind with the prophecy of food manufacture in the laboratory from the basic elements of the earth, air and water around us.

"The rabbit," this new philosopher of diet declares, "supplies in many ways the requirements of the poor man's food." The poor can easily raise them, for they are cheap to keep, and their propagating power is most extraordinary.

Pennant has calculated that one pair will in four years' time, if all the young ones be kept alive, have multiplied into 1,274,840. A female rabbit casts young ones eight times a year; if she casts seven at the average, she bears fifty-six, all told, in a year.

Let us say she bears fifty per cent., and estimate each at ten pounds; she produces 500 pounds of meat in a year. As many poor people could get the rabbit's food free of cost, they would practically get a few hundred pounds of meat for nothing.

Under various names 20,000,000 rabbit skins are exported yearly from Australia to London. London alone uses every week 500,000 rabbits, most of which come from Belgium. Belgium earns yearly $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 on rabbits, and France $80,000,000.

The best breed for the purposes of food, in the opinion of this writer, is the Norman rabbit, bred in the neighborhood of Cherbourg and Rouen. If the domestic raising of rabbits should be begun on a wholesale scale in the United States the government would eventually be obliged to regulate the prolific rate of productivity or the woes of the farmers and of the south California fruit-raisers would overthrow the country.

PROWS ON LOCOMOTIVES.

May Be Useful in Diminishing the Resistance of the Air.

An interesting attempt to get rid of a part of the resistance which a railway train encounters in rushing through the air is being made in France. It is easy to understand that the pressure on the front of a swiftly moving locomotive, which equals the force of a strong gale of wind, can only be overcome by an expenditure of energy greater than would otherwise be required to run the train.

Experiments to diminish the pressure were begun in France about eight years ago, and a practical outcome has just been reached, according to Youth's Companion. The plan adopted is very simple. Inclined planes are attached to the fore end of the locomotive in such a way that instead of a square front it presents to the air a sharp prow, like that of a ship.

It might be thought that little would be gained in this way, but repeated trials have shown that in some cases as much as ten or twelve per cent. can thus be saved in the consumption of coal, and the average saving amounts to about five per cent.

This is so important an item that a large number of locomotives on the railway system connecting Paris with points on the Mediterranean have recently been fitted with the new device. When the wind is blowing directly in the face of the locomotive the resistance to be overcome is, of course, much increased, and the value of a prow-shaped front is proportionately greater.

In some of the experiments it was shown that by the combined effects of placing the inclined planes in front and filling up the spaces between the spokes of the wheels one-half of the air resistance could be done away with.

A Coming Doctor.

A physician of Montpelier was in the habit of employing a very ingenious artifice. When he came to a town where he was not known, he pretended to have lost his dog, and ordered the public crier to offer, with beat of drum, a reward of twenty-five louis to whoever should bring it to him. The crier took care to mention all the titles and academic honors of the doctor, as well as his place of residence. He soon became the talk of the town. "Do you know," says one, "that a famous physician has come here, a very clever fellow? He must be very rich, for he offers twenty-five louis for finding his dog." The dog was not found, but patients were.

OYSTERS IN AFRICA.

Four Hundred of the Bivalves Survived the Trip to Cape Town.

"The consignment of one thousand oysters, which arrived by the Athenian recently, are destined for Salt river. They were sent out to the order of James Searle, of Port Elizabeth, who intended locating them in the Zwartkops river, but owing to the unsatisfactory results of the experiment made by the government in that stream he changed his mind, and generously offered them to the agricultural department," says the Cape News.

The survivors were planted in the Zwartkops river, and of these only four hundred are now alive. The acclimatization of oysters in South Africa evidently requires great patience, as well as the highest skill.

SOO DID NOT CELEBRATE.

Let Her First Passenger Train Come and Go All Unheeded.

SPEECH THAT WAS NEVER DELIVERED.

Good-Natured Conspiracy of Silence Has Concealed the Facts for Over Six Years.

SOME INSIDE HISTORY.

Sault Ste. Marie is a lively town now but it was very dead once upon a time. It is the oldest town in Michigan but not many years ago it was so dead that it actually failed to wake up and celebrate a great occasion in its history—no less an event than the advent of its first railway train. It is time that the conspiracy of silence which has hitherto hidden this fact in the darkness of oblivion should be broken and the inside history of that occasion revealed. The conspiracy mentioned was an entirely good-natured one, intended to save the people of Sault Ste. Marie and others interested from mortification but the facts can now be divulged without injury to the feelings of any one.

This story has been told across dinner tables by some of the actors to applauding auditors, including upon one occasion the president of the United States, but has never before appeared in print. It is the story of a celebration which failed to materialize. It is the story of an occasion when the denizens of Sault Ste. Marie failed to rise to the occasion and thereby administered an unintended but far from pleasant snub to a then prospective and now actual senator from Michigan. A version in which considerable liberty taken with the facts was published then but it is now high time that the truth of history be vindicated.

When the Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette road was built from St. Ignace to this city Sault Ste. Marie was left off at one side and her people naturally kicked over the fact, especially as a considerable body of the lands given by the state to aid in the construction of the road were in Chippewa county. But in process of time the South Shore company was formed and the branch from Sault Junction was built into the ancient village by the big locks and the track was ready for use in the autumn of 1887.

Hon. James McMillan was then president of the South Shore road, having been one of the most active promoters and heaviest investors in the D. M. & M. Mr. McMillan two years before had been a prominent candidate for United States senator but had withdrawn from the race under promises of support by the party leaders the next time. The election of 1887 was approaching and while it was generally conceded that Mr. McMillan would be the next senator, still he naturally desired to make his election sure and to bring his name prominently before the people. He had asked Mr. A. Watson, then general manager of the South Shore, to let him know when the new branch was ready and said that he would come up and ride into Sault Ste. Marie on the first train.

The new branch was ready the last week in September, 1887, and Mr. McMillan was duly notified. On the afternoon of Monday, Sept. 26, a party consisting of General Manager Watson, Chief Engineer Latcha, Hon. Peter White and two or three other Marquette men left this city and picking up Land Commissioner Strong at Newberry the next morning at Mackinac City met Mr. McMillan's party. In the latter were General Poe of canal fame, General John King and General Clitz of Detroit, President Ledyard of the Michigan Central, General Manager Muliken of the D. L. & N., Messrs. Muir and Hendrie, contractors of the road, and George Hendrie, the Detroit street car magnate.

After breakfast the whole party, except President Ledyard, who had business elsewhere, crossed the straits and started for Sault Ste. Marie, the train consisting of a day coach and President McMillan's private car. Telegrams were sent ahead carrying dinner and the froquois for the party, omnibuses were ordered to meet the train and a roster of the visitors was sent to several prominent citizens. President McMillan withdrew into a corner with a tablet and pencil and intimated that he was very busy. He was evidently preparing a speech to be delivered to the crowd which would undoubtedly gather to see the first train come in. The Marquette men also noted that the big refrigerator was overflowing with champagne and other liquors for the delectation of the prominent citizens of the historic town they were approaching.

The miles slid by and at 1 o'clock the destination was reached. The visitors looked forth to see the throngs of eager people assembled to greet the first passenger train to enter a town 270 years old but the throngs did not seem to throng worth a cent. In fact the only people in sight were two laborers surfacing the track just ahead and the drivers of six omnibuses drawn up in solemn line beside the track. This was rather startling but the most of the party scrambled into the busses and after a long drive reached the froquois. They registered and were informed that dinner waited but not a citizen came forward to greet them. Men were about the hotel office talking politics and pork and deer hunting and water power canal but no one seemed aware that the locomotive had actually reached Sault Ste. Marie at last and that the first passenger train stood within her borders. In fact, as one of the Marquette contingent expressed it in later years, "We didn't seem to attract any more attention than so many yellow dogs."

Dinner was eaten and the visitors sallied forth to join the rest of the party and inspect the great locks. Here General Poe was in his element and exhibited his pet with great comprehensiveness. Still there was no enthusiastic concourse of citizens and the municipal authorities might have all been dead for a hundred years for all the interest they displayed in the distinguished visitors or in the historic event which had taken place under their noses. It gradually became evident to the visitors that while a new epoch in the long history of Sault Ste. Marie had begun the sleepy denizens of that place actually were not aware of the fact. The bell of time had rung in a new era but the somnolent Sault Ste. Marie did not heed its clangor. Here was actually a town in the latter end of the Nineteenth century calmly ignoring the opportunity to celebrate the advent of its first railroad. This seems almost incredible but it is literally and absolutely true. The Soo was caught asleep and the budding senator's eloquence had to remain unvented.

That night the whole party held a social session in President McMillan's car and a portion of the champagne intended to moisten the throats of the unappreciative denizens of the Soo was poured out in friendly libations to the new railroad. Wednesday morning the party came on to Marquette and then it was that the festive Pierre Le Blanc got in his deadly work on the innocent reporter of THE MINING JOURNAL and a confiding public. He resolved that Sault Ste. Marie ought to have celebrated even if she did not and that he would save her people the mortification incident to a publication of their neglect and discourtesy. So he prepared a glowing account of the celebration which ought to have taken place but did not and handed it to THE MINING JOURNAL reporter. In this account, which appears in THE MINING JOURNAL of Sept. 29, 1887, the paper was made to express regret "that it cannot give the speeches of welcome in full as reported to it by one of the Marquette gentlemen present" and to say:

"It was a great day for the Sault, after two hundred years of waiting, and that the pushing, enterprising citizens of that town fully recognized the importance of the occasion was shown by the oration which they tendered the distinguished party whose coming, heralded by an electric flash hours before, marked the entrance of the first passenger train into the 'city by the rapids.' Immediately upon the arrival of the train at the terminus of the road the visitors were taken in charge by a committee of leading citizens and shown the immense improvements now under way at the Sault. * * * In the evening a committee visited the party's special car and through its spokesman presented a formal address of welcome to Presidents McMillan and Ledyard, to which an appropriate reply was made."

As will be seen above the "committee of leading citizens" consisted of two track laborers and the only "formal address of welcome" was that delivered by the six bus drivers. But the account as published was widely copied as gospel truth. Those who knew the facts at the time preserved a discreet silence. Mr. McMillan became Senator McMillan that winter. The Soo people, if they ever realized their bad break, had sense enough to keep still about it. But all this happened more than six years ago and all can afford to laugh over it now, as the victims of the snub did at the time and have ever since.

Why the expected celebration was omitted is, in the classic words of Dundee, "One of those things no fellow can find out." The gentleman who related the inside facts as they appear above to a MINING JOURNAL reporter said he was as much at a loss now as he was then to understand it.

Death of Jacob Brown.

Jacob Brown, a resident of this city since 1860, died at his house, corner Front and Ohio streets, last evening as the result of a stroke of apoplexy Monday. He would have been seventy-four years of age next June and was in the upper peninsula before coming to Marquette.

Mr. Brown was born in or near Frankfort, Germany, and came to this country as a young man. In 1855 he first came to the upper peninsula and resided at Sault Ste. Marie when the first canal was opened. He then returned to Detroit for a time and in 1860 came to this city. He was for a time engaged in the grain and feed business in general trading but nearly twenty years ago retired from active business. He is survived by one son and three daughters. The son is Charles E. Brown of the Wetmore Mercantile company and the daughters are Mrs. Will C. Brown, Mrs. G. L. Kuhlman of Negaunee and Miss Jennie E. Brown.

The precise date of the funeral will be announced later but it will probably be held Sunday or Monday.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO SWEAR OFF. says the St. Louis Journal of Agriculture in an editorial about No-To-Bac, the famous tobacco habit cure. "We know of many cases cured by No-To-Bac.
