$60 WHEEL, The "VESPER" FOR $49.

The cheaper wheels for common, everyday use are just as good as the $100 ones. They are built on the same models—the Tubing is the best that can be bought, the Chains are the same, the Bearings are just as good as those in the High Grade Wheels. The only difference is that the High Grade Wheels have a few special features which do not add to the merits of the wheel as far as the service is concerned and are more finely finished—that is, more time and money is spent in putting the finishing touches on them. My price for a strictly High-Grade Wheel, as good as the best—the "Ohio"—$100 grade for $75.

Mills Would Have Uncle Sam Take Possession of Cuba and Hold It Until

THE PEOPLE CAN ESTABLISH LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT.

His Resolution Provides President Shall Take This Step if Spain Refuses to Grant Autonomy—Resolutions Are Recommended.

YESTERDAY'S SENATE DOINGS

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The expected climax to the Cuban debate was reached in the senate today, when on motion of Sherman, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, the Cuban resolutions were recommitted to the conference committee. The vote to recommit was unanimous and without the formality of roll call, representing a general consensus of opinion that the committee should so change the resolutions as to overcome the opposition that has developed. Sherman, Morgan and Lodge were appointed to represent the senate in a further conference.

Simultaneous with this action, Mills presented joint Cuban resolutions which propose to go further than has been suggested at any previous time. They direct the president to request Spain to grant local self-government to Cuba, and in case Spain refuses the president is authorized to use the military and naval forces in taking possession of Cuba and holding it until local self-government is established by the Cuban people. Platt also introduced resolutions limiting the action of congress to an expression of sympathy for Cuba's struggle and authorizing the president to extend the friendly offices of the United States towards securing a free and independent republican form of government.

Palmer and Allen made addresses on the Cuban resolutions. Palmer in a speech against the resolutions urged the necessary offensive and contradictory terms of the house resolutions. They embraced a needless threat of intervention which, if executed, meant intervention by war. The senator spoke of the unorganized condition of the insurgents. This brought out protests from Morgan and Call. The former read the proclamation of Cisneros, president of the insurgents, together with a letter from Crosby S. Noyes of the Washington Star, giving assurances of the authenticity of the document. Morgan said he approved of every word of that splendid appeal of Senor Cisneros.

Allen said if the United States stood by while Spain applied the knife to the throats of the Cubans we would be justly charged by the world with impotency and cowardice. He ridiculed the wavering patriotism of senators. At first the senators had fallen over each other to support the resolutions. Then the senator from Maine (Hale) had sounded the signal for retreat, "and now," concluded Allen, "the senator from Ohio moves to recommit. It looks as though he had joined in the retreat and that this will be the last of this resolution." When the Cuban resolution had been recommitted to conference the senate turned its attention to the legislative appropriation bill, which was not disposed of when the senate adjourned.

SENATORS BY DIRECT VOTE

Corliss' Bill Favorably Reported in the House—Proceedings. WASHINGTON, March 23.—The house committee on elections today reported favorably on the bill of Representative Corliss of Michigan providing for the elections of senators by the direct vote of the people. The house spent most of the day considering the Curtis bill to abolish the death penalty in all cases where it is prescribed in the federal statutes, sixty in number, save in cases of murder and rape under Sections 5339 and 5345 of the Revised Statutes where, however, the jury might qualify the verdict without capital punishment. The bill makes no changes in the penalties that can be inflicted by military and naval court martial. Among the crimes now punishable by death abolished by the bill are murder and robbery on the high seas, accessory before fact to murder, piracy, etc., on the high seas, destruction of vessels at sea, arson of a vessel of war, etc. Groveson, Gillett and Hepburn (Ia.) opposed the bill, while Culberson and Ray endorsed it. All amendments offered to the bill were defeated, except that making treason punishable by death. When the bill was placed on its final passage it failed to pass for want of a quorum. The senate bill authorizing the leasing of educational lands in Arizona, which was a modification of the bill passed by the house over the president's veto some time ago, was passed, as were several other bills, including one to amend the act of March 2, 1863, relating to the promotion of the safety of employes and travelers on railroads.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

Current News of the Day at the Nation's Headquarters.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Mr. Blackburn's return to the senate today after the exciting and fruitless senatorial contest before the Kentucky legislature was signalized by an unusual demonstration by his colleagues. On the senator's desk was the most mammoth and elaborate floral design ever brought into the senate, rising twelve feet from the floor and overhanging the desks of Senators Walthall and Vest on either side. The main design represented the coat of arms of Kentucky. The tribute came from Blackburn's senatorial associates. Several other large designs were from personal friends. Blackburn was warmly greeted by his associates.

The house naval affairs committee today decided to have one of the four new battleships built on the Pacific coast and one of the torpedo boats; another of the torpedo boats will be constructed on the gulf of Mexico and another on the Mississippi river. The usual provision will be made, however, that the cost shall not be excessive, and in case it is the president may have the vessels constructed elsewhere. The committee accepted the invitation to witness the launching of the Iowa at Philadelphia next Saturday.

The secretary of the treasury, after consulting the president and law officers of the government, has decided hereafter to allow the usual annual leaves of absence to employes of the department outside of Washington.

THIRTEEN LIVES SNUFFED OUT.

Explosion of Gas in a Pennsylvania Mine Yesterday Morning.

DUBOIS, March 23.—There was a terrific explosion of gas at the Berwind-White shaft in the eastern limits of this city this morning which killed thirteen miners. The mine is a new one. Eighteen men entered the shaft at 7 o'clock this morning. About 10 o'clock the men in the south end felt a shock. A few minutes later the mine boss came and told them that something had happened in the north end and warning them to get out as soon as they could. When the party reached the foot of the shaft they were nearly overcome by gas and were hurriedly taken up in the stage. A searching party, immediately organized of expert miners, descended into the mine to investigate. Soon thirteen bodies were brought to the surface. All the men were married, with the exception of one. As the mining industry has been in a depressed condition for some time past all the families were left in very poor circumstances.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa., March 23.—Gas in Mine No. 1—the Adrain—exploded last night and the mine is on fire. This morning the men going in were overcome. Some escaped and the alarm was given. Eleven men have been brought out, with two dead. How many more there may be in the mine cannot be stated. It is supposed some miners went in last night to work and ignited the gas.

WORKMEN NARROWLY ESCAPE.

A Six-Story Philadelphia Building Burns—Loss, $400,000.

PHILADELPHIA, March 23.—The six-story building of the Thackera Manufacturing company, manufacturers and dealers in gas fixtures, burned tonight. About a dozen or more workmen were hemmed in by the flames and had to be taken from windows by firemen. The Thackera building was owned by William Weightman and valued at $300,000, fully covered by insurance. The loss on the building amounts to $150,000. The Thackera company's stock, machinery and patterns were valued at $250,000. These were total loss, but are protected by an insurance of $150,000. In this same building were a number of tenants who occupied the Haseltine building at the time of that fire a short time ago. They, along with a number of others, met with small losses, which in aggregate amount to $30,000.

OTHER DISASTROUS BLAZES.

NEW YORK, March 23.—A special to The World from Colon says: A terrific fire raged here five hours and burned itself out at 9 o'clock tonight. It destroyed the better half of the commercial part of Colon, including a large number of tenement houses, every important Chinese store, and hotels and government buildings. There was much looting of property during the excitement. One life was lost and hundreds were left homeless. The damage is estimated at $500,000.

JOLIET, Ill., March 23.—The Consolidated Steel Wire company suffered a loss by fire of $150,000 this morning. Five hundred men will be thrown out of work as a result.

Ex-Consul Waller Will Not Waive Claims for Indemnity.

LONDON, March 23.—Ex-Consul Waller's solicitor writes to The Times that he has declined to accept the conditions upon which the French government offered to release Waller, namely, that he should waive all claims for compensation. "He was offered his release in November," says the solicitor, "on the condition of waiving his claim for compensation, but he preferred to remain in prison. United States Ambassador Enstis informed him the United States had authorized the embassy to give security for costs in any action against the French government. We are seeking an amicable settlement with France in his behalf."

AMERICAN IRON IN ENGLAND.

A Leading London Firm Makes Extensive Purchases in Alabama.

LONDON, March 23.—Much interest is manifested in commercial circles over the announcement that a leading London iron firm had made extensive purchases in Alabama of pig iron and is arranging for further purchases. Commenting upon this The Iron & Coal Trade Review says: "England is threatened with an invasion of American pig iron. This is one of the most serious blows to the supremacy of Great Britain as a manufacturing nation."

CHEERED FOR OHIO MAN.

His Presidential Boom in New York City Is Launched at Cooper Union.

A MCKINLEY LEAGUE OF THE STATE IS ORGANIZED.

Ohio's ex-Governor Captures More Delegates in Minnesota—Davis' Name May Not Be Mentioned at Today's Convention.

MORTON'S NAME IS HISSIED.

NEW YORK, March 23.—The presidential boom in New York city of William McKinley was launched in Cooper Union tonight. The big hall was well filled, notwithstanding the snow storm prevailing. Major Lovell Jerome called the meeting to order. He said it was useless for the machine politicians to disregard the returns that were coming in from all parts of the country favoring the nomination of Major McKinley.

Major Jerome introduced as chairman of the meeting General Wager Swayne. The meeting, he said, had been called to make plain to the people of this state and throughout the country, and to the delegates of the convention about to be held, that its second choice for the president was William McKinley [cheers]. Governor Morton, he said, had rendered valuable service to the state. Some in the audience hissed at the mention of Morton's name, but General Swayne stopped this in a hurry. He said the governor deserved to be cheered, and the machine in the Republican party was none of his making. It had been hoped the name of Governor Morton would go before the convention without opposition, but it appeared the sentiment of the country was for McKinley.

After an address by Senator Pavey resolutions were adopted that the Republicans of the city and state of New York in mass meeting assembled organize into a political body to be known as the "McKinley League of the State of New York," and that the league's activity be to procure by all honorable means the nomination of McKinley at St. Louis and his election at the polls in November.

AFRAID OF THE OHIO MAN.

At the Republican state convention to be held here tomorrow Cornelius R. Pearson will be temporary and Congressman Southwick permanent chairman. Great circumspection was exercised tonight in giving out tickets of admission to the hall, as the committee desires no McKinley men to disturb the harmony of the meeting or interrupt when resolutions endorsing Morton are put to the convention.

TOUGH ON SENATOR DAVIS.

McKinley Will Capture Minnesota Convention Hands Down Today.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 23.—The Republicans of Minnesota will meet in state convention here tomorrow to elect delegates-at-large to the St. Louis convention. The majority of delegates are already here. The delegates from the Duluth district are instructed for Davis, but they are not taking anti-McKinley and it is not believed that C. K. Davis' name will be mentioned tomorrow. Four delegates-at-large will certainly be instructed for McKinley. The contest over who shall go to St. Louis is sharp from the fact those most prominently mentioned are men who stood for Davis and who only joined the McKinley column when they saw the trend of the movement. There is little talk about platform. One of the main contests that is occupying the attention of the delegates is between T. B. Walker and R. G. Evans, both of Minneapolis, for delegate-at-large. Evans is exceedingly popular, but the fact he is not a pronounced McKinley man is telling against him.

MORE MCKINLEY DELEGATES.

ST. PAUL, March 23.—The Fourth district Republican convention today elected delegates to St. Louis. The resolution of instructions requests the delegates to vote for C. K. Davis "when in their judgment such vote will not in any wise tend to defeat the nomination of McKinley or lessen his chances for the nomination."

AITKIN, Minn., March 23.—The Sixth Minnesota district Republican convention today elected delegates to St. Louis. The resolutions declare for "honest money" and Senator Davis as first choice for president, with McKinley as second.

CROOKSTON, Minn., March 23.—The Seventh district Republicans today re-nominated Frank M. Eddy for congress and elected delegates to St. Louis. They are for McKinley.

MANKATO, Minn., March 23.—The second Minnesota district Republicans today elected delegates to St. Louis. They were instructed for McKinley.

HASTINGS, Minn., March 23.—The Third district Republicans today elected delegates to St. Louis pledged for McKinley.

A HOT CONTEST BOOKED.

Republicans of Texas Will Hold Their Convention Today.

AUSTIN, Tex., March 23.—The fight in tomorrow's Republican convention will be McKinley against the field. The McKinley men were very sanguine of success without opposition until noon today, and then it was precipitated upon them in a heap by the Allison and Reed men, who this afternoon combined forces to oppose McKinley. Coney, the Allison leader, is a power among the

ONE PRICE FOR 1896.

The Cleveland Plaindealer of Sunday gives this additional information concerning the action of the mine owners and agents at their meeting Saturday in arranging a schedule of prices for Lake Superior Bessemer for the season of 1896:

After considerable work the mine owners and the sales agents representing the Lake Superior iron ore interest yesterday fixed a price for Bessemer ores, including the Mesaba range, for 1896 delivery. The work was not hurried and the gentlemen having charge of it took considerable time in going over the ground, and definite action was not taken until every phase of the situation was thoroughly discussed.

A number of meetings were held during the past two weeks and nearly every producer, as well as some of the leading furnace men, were represented. When prices for Bessemer ores were announced last spring the Mesaba ores were not included, but this year they are and that more or less delayed the work.

The prices decided upon are not as high as was expected in some quarters, but the general belief is that they will prove satisfactory to all concerned. The advance over last year's opening prices is $1.10 a ton, or something over 35 per cent. Last year's opening price this year will be $2.90, while the price for other grades of ore will be proportionately on that basis, some higher and some lower. Nothing was done in regard to non-Bessemer ores, although that matter will probably be taken up later.

There has as yet been very little demand for ore, but now that prices have been fixed it is expected that consumers will come into the market and arrange for their requirements for the coming year. A member of the committee, who had much to do with the fixing of prices, yesterday said that the question of lake freights was not taken up at any of the meetings.

The question of output for the coming year was also discussed at the meetings, and after an exchange of views as to the probable demand and the ability of the mines to produce and various questions relating to the problem, it was concluded that probably the output of the Lake Superior district for this year, instead of being 9,500,000 tons, as was originally expected, would not exceed from 7,500,000 to 8,000,000 tons. The first named figures were fixed early in the winter, when the outlook was much brighter than it is at present and when ore was going forward from Lake Erie docks at a rapid rate. There was a lull in the market about the latter part of January and since then the movement of ore from the Lake Erie receiving ports has been light. It is expected, however, that now, that prices have been fixed, the demand will increase and some good sized sales will be made during the next few weeks. The change in the allotments of the different mines does not mean that shipments will be restricted to the figures named at yesterday's meeting. If there is an improvement in business and the trade warrants it all the ore necessary to supply the trade will be brought down if the mines can produce it.

Shipments from dock are picking up a little and the docks will be in better shape than they were a year ago. On March 1 there was something like 3,000,000 tons of ore on dock of all kinds, but only about 700,000 tons were unsold, and conditions in that respect are much better than they were a year ago.

An advance of over 35 per cent. in the price of a ton of ore looks pretty big on the surface, but when it is understood that 25 per cent. or more of it will have to be given up for lake carrying charges and another piece of it will have to be given to labor there will be a very small margin left for the ore men, who have for several years been doing business at a very small profit or a loss.

Nothing has been done in regard to freight contracts on ore and the views of the ore and vesselmen are unchanged as to what rates should be. Ore to be moved from the head of Lake Superior can be had in most any quantity and vesselmen are holding for $1.10. A leading shipper yesterday said that he felt confident that he could get tonnage at $1.05. Something will probably be done before the close of another week.

"WESTWARD HO!"

The land agents of railways owning land grants in North Dakota and Northern Minnesota report an extraordinarily large movement of immigrants into that region already this year, and predict that the settlement of unoccupied lands along the lines of their roads in the northwest during the year will beat all previous records. One of the causes of this increase in the tide of settlers flowing in that direction is the reports that went abroad regarding the wonderful crop raised in the wheat belt which embraces the northern part of Minnesota and North Dakota last year. It was the greatest crop ever harvested in that region, and the fame of the yield of "No. 1 hard" obtained is attracting settlers in great numbers. A very large proportion of these are practical farmers from this state, Indiana, Ohio, Iowa and Nebraska, as they take with them means and, what is better, experience. Some are fresh from across the sea, but the bulk of the immigration seems to be from older states of the union, where land is high-priced and the soil not as fertile as in the rich agricultural region tapped by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads and their numerous feeders. It will not be many years until the northwest will be filled with an active and thrifty population engaged mainly in agriculture. That is the natural market for much that can be produced in this part of Michigan, for it can be more cheaply supplied from here with manufactured articles of all kinds into making which iron and wood enters than from any other portion of the country. Everything that we can furnish in the form of iron and wooden wares will be needed in vast quantities in the region now being so rapidly settled up west of us, while we, in turn, can have our wants supplied more cheaply from there than even from southern Michigan, so far as we may need what that region produces. The settlement of the territory west of us along the two great railway lines mentioned means a great deal for the points along the south shore of Lake Superior which possess advantages for working up our raw materials of wood and iron, therefore. When that part of the country is fairly well taken up and brought under cultivation it will give us a market for all that we can manufacture and will build up a number of brisk manufacturing towns along the south shore of the great lake. The influx of immigrants to that section means a great deal for the upper peninsula, consequently, for it will send us a reflex wave of great and permanent prosperity in time.

A QUEER SITUATION.

One of the brightest and most influential of the Republican politicians in the lower part of the state, in giving his views on the gubernatorial situation to a Detroit newspaper the other day, said that he believed Pingree would not receive the nomination, although the preponderance of sentiment among the voters was in his favor, for the reason that the organization of the party is against him. If there were any danger of losing the state, he added, there would be no doubt of Pingree's nomination, for then the party would put up its strongest man, but with a majority of 100,000 behind it the party could afford to place a weaker man in the field for governor, as it is confident of its ability to elect him. If this be true the Republican party in Michigan will use its great power with the people of the state to deprive them of their choice for governor. It is hard to believe such a thing, and THE MINING JOURNAL does not believe it. But it is undeniably true that if the party were in peril in the state it would turn to Pingree gladly, to get the benefit of his strength with the voters to help it out in the election, just as it did in Detroit when it needed a strong candidate for mayor. The analysis of the situation in the state made by the gentleman alluded to is really the strongest kind of an argument for Pingree. If he is the man the party would nominate were it in peril he is the man it should nominate in the day of its strength, for it is only by satisfying the people in their just demands that a party can retain their confidence and continue itself in power.

The bond sale has not brought the improvement in business that was expected from it, in spite of its great success in the matter of establishing the confidence of the people of the country in the credit of the government, and their ability to help it out when called on. The trouble lies in the fact that replenishing the treasury's supply of gold did not touch the real cause of the national ailment, which is an insufficient volume of money for the uses of the people. Money has been scarce, as a matter of course, since so large an amount of it went into bringing up the gold reserve, and business has begun to feel the effects of the contraction. But the gold standard people will not see this—they never learn anything or forget anything.

A NEW YORK report has it that a condition of extreme dullness appears to pervade the copper market, that buyers hesitate to accumulate stocks at present quotations, and that it is difficult to make sales at 11 cents. The apathy in business generally, which is quite unexpected at this time, affects the demand for copper, but we believe it will disappear with the opening of spring, and that copper will then begin to climb up toward 12 cents. If copper isn't quoted at 12 cents before the year is half gone we shall be at fault in our guess.

Status of Silver.

CHASSELL, Mich., March 23, 1896. EDITOR MINING JOURNAL.—Pardon me for asking space in your paper for a brief reply to Mr. Hubbell's "Rejoinder."

He says: "Now, Mr. Robinson must be a very uncommon commoner if he does not know that this government remonetized silver years and years ago." Mr. Horace White in his recent book, "Money and Banking," published in 1895, says: "The various kinds of money in circulation, exclusive of subsidiary coins, fall into two classes: namely 1—Greenbacks, 2—Treasury notes, 3—Silver dollars, 4—Silver certificates, 5—National bank notes.

Gold, Fiat money." It seems very strange to me that a man of Mr. White's ability, who has made this question almost a life study, should be ignorant of the fact that silver was money.

If Mr. Hubbell's statement, "that this government re-monetized silver years and years ago" is correct he surely can cite the law under which the government made it redemption money at a fixed value and ratio with gold. If silver is not redemption money at some fixed ratio with gold, I submit it is only representative money, redeemable in gold, and therefore not re-monetized, or monetized at all. O. W. ROBINSON.

A COLD WAVE.

BY MARTHA S. PILLSBURY.

At two o'clock in the afternoon, the thermometer registered 81 degrees of heat in the shadow of our little veranda, where "Gene" sat fanning herself after putting away lunch.

"Mat, I am glad mother didn't come down to Florida this winter," she said to me through the open window. "I don't believe such hot weather as this, in February, would agree with her, after spending 51 winters in Vermont."

"But it will be necessary for her to come some time if we stay," I replied; and since father left his property invested here, we are obliged to stay, even if we do not like it.

"Oh, well, I do like it, I suppose," said "Gene" reflectively. "But I should like to see just one good old snow-drift and hear sleigh-bells jingle once in this winter."

"Oh, you are a born northerner, 'Gene.' But for one, I am glad poor father had the resolution to leave that rocky old Vermont farm," said I.

"Ah, but think of the maple sirup we would make up there this spring!" cried "Gene."

"But think of the 'cukes,' tomatoes, oranges and pineapples we shall have here," I exclaimed, "not to mention strawberries, eggplants, stringbeans, green peas, mangoes, new potatoes, beets and corn! Thirty acres of them, worth $4,000! More than we could grub from that old Vermont farm with ten years of hard work!"

"What's that about 'ten years of hard work?'" said Ruel, coming around the corner with a phosphate bucket on his arm, bringing a ghastly odor of it with him. "Yes, it is hard work seeding and weeding such weather as this. My, but 'sn't it hot, though?" he growled, throwing himself on the floor of the veranda.

"I cannot work half an hour without feeling wearied," he went on. "I suppose it's those Vermont winters thawing out of my blood. But it is great weather to make things grow! I can see those long rows of string-beans breaking ground! Fact, girl! The ground over those bean-heads is hopping all along the rows, like little toads!"

"But 'Gene' wants maple-sirup," said I, mischievously. "Oh, well," exclaimed Ruel, "we can send up to Vermont for a couple of gallons—if she must have some."

Florida was a new country to all three of us, for although my father had bought a hundred acres here, and had the cottage built and orange-groves planted seven or eight years before, we young people had not gone south with him, and had never been there but ten weeks. Busy weeks they had been, seeding, "fertilizing" and preparing our first crop of garden vegetables for shipment north.

Our orange and grapefruit trees were not yet bearing, and, in fact, had been nipped hard by the December frost the week before we came; but the weather had been so warm after our arrival that we found it difficult to believe that a really cold night was possible in Florida.

Yet even as we sat there fanning ourselves a negro, known as "Dandy" Green, who works a little "patch" of his own in the pine woods, half a mile beyond our place, came clattering, muleback, along the road that leads to Citrus park. Seeing my brother on the veranda, Dandy pulled up and shouted: "De's a cole wabe comin'! Look out fer yer cukes!"

Ruel laughed outright. It sounded like a joke. "Oh, I se a-tellin' you de troof, Cap'n Ruel!" Dandy cried. "She's comin' fer sho'!"

"Bring on your cold wave," Ruel remarked, laughing. "Just come out into the field, girls, and see those bean-heads poke up the dirt!" he continued, swinging to his feet. We all followed him, but had scarcely turned the corner when I felt a cool puff of wind from the northwest.

"Ah, doesn't that feel refreshing?" "Gene" exclaimed. "Yes; fetch on the 'cole wabe,'" said Ruel, and he stopped to take a good long breath. We then noticed that the sky in the northwest had turned a dull, dark color.

"Well, that's queer!" Ruel said, looking along the bean-rows. "They've stopped hopping. But don't the rows of whitish-green bean-heads look odd, just coming out of the ground? What would they think of this in old Vermont for the 7th day of February? You must write mother about it, Mat."

While we stood there for less than ten minutes, looking at the beans, the sky darkened so rapidly that the sunshine faded out, and scattered drops of rain fell. Such cool puffs of wind came that quite suddenly "Gene" turned up the collar of her thin shirt-waist. "You're not cold!" Ruel said. "No; but it is really a great deal cooler," she replied.

"Gene" and I went back to the house, and in ten minutes more we were closing the windows. "The wind blew in gusts, and the whole sky had turned dark. Ruel came in and put on his 'sweater,' then wheeled out his bicycle. "I'm going up to the Park Station," he said to us. "The distance is three miles, and he was gone about 40 minutes, I should think; but before he came back, 'Gene' and I had kindled a fire and put on our wool dresses. "Did you ever see such a wind?" Ruel exclaimed, as he opened the door on the west veranda. "Here, 'Gene,' come shut this door when I take in my wheel, or you will be blown out of the room. A cutting cold wind, too. I could hardly keep warm riding. "And do you know what the operator at the station says, girls?" he added. "He says there's a norther coming, and I begin to believe it. Have you looked at the thermometer?" "We had not, but we found on inspection that the temperature had dropped to 54 degrees, a full 27 degrees in two hours.

"Well, thank fortune, it is still 22 degrees above the freezing point!" Ruel replied, coming to the fire. "I don't believe it will drop low enough to freeze the crops. It's because we wear thin clothes and the early part of the day was so hot, that we shiver so."

The wind increased toward night, and so did the cold. "Gene" and I bestirred ourselves to prepare a warm supper. Ruel was out of doors stopping the windmill, which had pumped the tank full of water and was flooding the back yard. He looked blue and cold when at last he came in.

"No oranges or grape fruits for me to-night! Fry some bacon, girls, and let's have some nice hot, baked potatoes," said he.

While we were cooking he went out into the field to secure three or four fertilizer barrels that the wind was rolling about. It grew dark by six o'clock—an inky kind of darkness. One could not see objects two yards distant from the veranda steps, and the searching wind blew out the two hanging lanterns which we usually kept burning near the door.

"Forty-six degrees!" Ruel announced when he came in. "Girls, I'm frightened! You don't suppose everything is going to freeze, do you? Think what that'll be to us! Why, our all is in it!"

For the first time real anxiety was felt by us, and the hot supper failed to cheer us, for frost would destroy nearly everything we possessed. In Vermont we had sometimes lost a few green plants in the spring or in the fall, but had never known any real anxiety from the cold weather. Here we had 32 acres of tender, green vegetables which had just broken the ground under a temperature of 80 degrees; and now the mercury was sinking deep into the forties, and what felt like a wintry hurricane was raging.

Ruel pushed back his plate, and went to the blackening window. "This will be a tough night for cucumbers!" he muttered. "Who would have believed it?"

Few Florida houses are built to withstand wild weather. Draughts wandered in and played crisscross about our sitting-room. Cold puffs of piercing air drove us close to the little fireplace, the heat from which appeared wholly lost. The house creaked; the lamp flared and smoked at each rush of the storm. Ruel was obliged to fetch the thermometer close up outside the window to read it. Once an hour he dashed out to see how it stood. At eight o'clock it indicated 41 degrees, and at nine 38.

"Thirty-six degrees!" Ruel announced to us grimly at ten o'clock, and at eleven 34 degrees; and at midnight when he came in and pushed the door to, he said: "A low 32 degrees, girls; the cucumbers are catching it now! You may as well go to bed. The mischief is probably done."

The wind drove the cold into the room. There was an icy chill in the air such as we had never felt in the north. "The water-pipes, Ruel!" said "Gene." "Will they not all freeze up and burst?" "So they will!" he cried. "I never thought of them. Open all the faucets. We will let the tank run dry. The low bends of the pipes that the water will not run out of must be wrapped with towels."

From twelve to one o'clock we were busy looking to the pipes. A whole basketful of wraps was got ready. At two o'clock the mercury had fallen to 28 degrees.

We were too greatly disturbed and excited to feel sleepy, but to humor Ruel, who, boy-like, wished always to take command, "Gene" and I consented to go to bed.

The windows of our sleeping-room rattled and shook, and the wind ruffled one's hair about on the pillows. We put all our blankets on the bed, and then threw on our wraps and even our dresses!

At last we fell asleep, and when I awoke it was broad daylight. The wind still rattled the windows, but the sun shone dimly. It lacked 20 minutes of seven.

There was ice in the wash-bowl. "Gene" crept out shivering and tried to break it. Ruel, like a good fellow, came to the door and set a pitcher of hot water where we could get it. "Guess how cold it is," he called. "Forty degrees below zero," cried "Gene."

"Twenty-five degrees," said I. "Twenty," said "Gene." "Seventeen," replied Ruel. "But the poor cucumbers and beans!" I cried. "All frozen solid," said Ruel. "I suppose we are ruined, Mat," "Gene" said, dolefully, as she poured hot water into the bowl.

As Ruel had sat up all night nursing the water pipes, he had a good fire in the kitchen stove. "Gene" and I got breakfast. We were very glad and scarcely spoke. Out in the field the bean-heads had fairly gone from sight; but while we were at table our next neighbor came to the door. He was Dr. Isaac Felt, a Pennsylvanian, who had been in Florida five years.

He cheered us up and advised us to plan again and gave us what seed we needed. So the next morning we began our second planting. It will be difficult for some readers to believe that at one o'clock that day the thermometer stood at 80 degrees in the sun. For a week we worked 15 hours a day, and seeded our entire 32 acres again; and as I write this, February 22, 1895, I cannot see but that our crops look as well as before the frost. Nevertheless, our young orange trees are probably dead. In place of them we now intend to put out the hardier Satsuma orange and a grove of pecan-net trees.—Youth's Companion.

AN INTERESTING DOCUMENT.

The Will of Peter Boggio Just Filed in the Probate Court.

In probate court before Judge Dooling yesterday morning a will was entered which is the most interesting document, perhaps, that has passed through "hizzoner's" hands for some time past.

After the will had been made it was registered at Milan. This necessitated an amount of red tape and the first evidence of this is seen in the signature of the Italian vice consul at Chicago, Signor Marazzi, who certified to Constal Lisa's signature.

Now the will has come clear across the water once more to be filed in probate court here for the benefit of the heirs—George, a son in this country; and a wife, daughter and son back in Italy.

The chief item of property, it seems, is a "field" in sunny Italy known as the "Ronco." It is the revenue from this field that is to be divided among the heirs.

And by that last clause hangs a tale of broken family ties and voluntary exile in a strange land which clothes that commonplace testament of Peter Boggio, miner, with an interest as sad, as romantic, as tragic, as any found within the pages of fictitious romance.

TO THROW OFF "RING" RULE.

A Caucus is Called at Hancock "by Order of Many Citizens."

On the front of Henry Baer's meat market at Hancock are posted calls for three township caucuses. The two first are staid and conservative in tone, simply announcing the Republican voters are requested to meet in caucus at the fire hall on Monday evening, March 23, while the Democratic voters will assemble in similar manner at the same place on Wednesday evening, March 25.

Close beside these, however, is another document not so conservative and stereotyped in form which promises trouble ahead at the polls for its old party neighbors. It is headed "Citizens Caucus" and after the formal call goes out of the beaten track in a paragraph which urges that "all citizens desirous of nominating candidates who will be free from the 'ring' rule of both the old parties are earnestly requested to be present."

AMATEUR SINGERS.

They Should Attempt Ambitious Feats in Public with Caution.

The average American to-day knows more of music than he did 20 years ago and only those who have worked for years under the guidance of the best masters feel like playing for others not within the innermost circle of admiring friends. But, alas! the case seems to be quite reversed in singing.

How often have we made one of a band of unhappy but smiling victims, forced to listen to some otherwise charming girl, who, after perhaps not more than one quarter's lessons, tries to entertain a room full of company, totally unconscious of herucruety! A partially trained voice is at times most beautiful, but is lamentably at the mercy of circumstances. A slight cold; a close room; a little nervousness—what horrible visions of failure they conjure up!

But look at the experienced artist. He is also mortal, but he has learned to cover up little defects; knows just what his voice will and will not do, and so makes himself master of the situation.

Singing should be perfectly natural, but we are constantly straining after effect, and trying to make our untutored voices perform feats which only years can accomplish. Some little unpretentious ballad in our mother tongue sung to friends who enjoy it for the singer's sake as well as the song's, may give ever so much pleasure; but a German, French or Italian mate skill that the music alone brings unless rendered with such consummate skill that the music alone brings out the composer's thought, might much better be played on a violin. By all means study the works of the masters, but do not try to interpret them for others until you can handle your voice at will. Another thing is to keep in mind that a good voice and a correct ear are not the only necessary attributes of the successful singer. Schumann says: "The most important thing for a musician is to cultivate his inner sense"—that indescribable something which compels others to feel what you feel. The artist must have it, or who will buy his bits of canvas and patches of color? The writer must have it or who will wade through his effusions? The speaker must have it, or his audience will be gathering the fleecy coats from the occupants of far distant pastures, instead of his gems of thought. The pianist must have it, or his music will simply act as a stimulus to conversation. Alas, then, for the singer who has it not! He may as well use a speaking trumpet to address his hearers or turn the crank of a phonograph. When you tingle all over with the feeling of the song, are swayed by it, lifted out of yourself—then, and not until then, are you singing. If you are only making certain sounds according to the directions of your singing master, you are wasting your breath.

Many people have this real musical gift, but it is latent and waits to be developed; therefore, my plea is for more cultivation among amateur singers. Why should you not work as industriously as those who play the piano? If people will listen to your voice uncultivated, why should you stop there and never develop the grander possibilities within reach?—The Outlook.

MINING UNDER A CITY.

Rich Gold Bearing Rock Underlies the Entire Town of Butte.

One of the biggest mining enterprises ever inaugurated in Montana has for its object the exploration of the earth directly under the city of Butte. A company has just been formed with A. J. Coram and C. H. Palmer, of the Butte & Boston company, at the head.

It has for several years been known that the richest copper and silver ores in the Rocky mountain country were under the city. During the past few years the fact has been frequently demonstrated through excavations for cellars and buildings. The principal vein found is known as the Smoke-house lode and runs through the city from the southeast to northeast, and the big Butte hotel, the city hall, the Silver Bow county courthouse, the First national bank and the Anaconda Standard buildings and other large structures in the heart of the city are on the vein.

In Butte the purchasers of surveyed ground do not get title to the mineral underneath and the surface title extends only to a depth of 30 feet. When the richness of the mineral was first discovered under the city James A. Murray, a banker and mining man, located almost the whole city as mining claims and fought the case through the courts and won. The new company has secured a lease on several claims, one of them being the old Destroying Angel, which has a shaft near Main street, the principal business street of the city, and they have begun work, but are very secretive about it.

The men have unlimited capital behind them and the plan is to sink the old shaft a thousand or more feet and then run tunnels in every direction under the city and north to the city of Walkerville, a distance of two miles. The existence of the company and its scheme has been known to a very few persons, but when the company began to take out rich ore after a few days' work the facts became public and the people are much excited. It is claimed that the ore body is larger and richer than that of the famous Anaconda copper mines. The probable effect of the mining on the surface property gives much concern to some people.—Chicago Chronicle.

From Birth

In Scott's Emulsion, the bad taste of the Cod-liver Oil is completely overcome, making it the perfect food and remedy in consumption, anemia, and all forms of wasting complaints. It digests and agrees where other foods repel. No other emulsion is "the same," none "just as good."

FONDLING A TARANTULA.

It is Best to Be Sure That the Tarantula Knows You.

"The tarantulas pine in confinement," remarked an amateur spider collector, "refuse to spin or eat and seldom live long. A centipede or scorpion, on the other hand, commits suicide when it sees no chance of getting free."

"Commit suicide?" I asked. "Why, how?" "By inoculating its body with its own poison. I have seen it do it time and time again. The centipede carries poison in two little teeth, besides the sack in each of his many feet. He bites his body savagely when he wants to kill himself, just as a man would plunge a dagger in his heart."

"And how does the scorpion kill himself?"

"His poison lies in the end of his tail. He turns his tail up over his back and jabs it in sharply; in a few seconds he is dead."

"Which do you think the most interesting, tarantulas or centipedes?" I inquired of this practical student of natural history.

"Tarantulas," he replied. "They have better dispositions and are much more intelligent than their cousins, the centipedes."

"Do you think they learn to know people?"

"Do I? Well, I'll show you. Look here, Browney."

The little slide down to Browney's hatch was pulled back and the fuzzy, round-bodied king of spiders crawled out into the promenade grounds of hard board in front of his dwelling.

"Here's a piece of pear for you, Browney," said the master.

"Does he like pears?"

"Only the juice. He sucks the juice of raw beef occasionally, too, but he vastly prefers a good, fat grasshopper if he can get him."

Browney examined the piece of pear critically with his feeler, and pressed it as if to extract the juice, but he did not seem hungry. The master then took up the star-shaped creature in his fingers and felt separately every one of the fatal little legs.

"You see, he is not hostile to me. Now let my brother attempt to play with him."

A curly-headed young man of 20 of thereabouts drew near and called to the tarantula coaxingly.

Browney instantly hunched himself up and retreated in a pet, showing plainly his dislike.

"When he was free and very busy one day I watched him unwind yards and yards of spun thread and float down on a veritable ladder of it to a cranny half way down the rocky surface of a steep bluff. There he captured a juicy beetle. He drags his prey after him by folding it in his threads and hitching it to those pegs on his back. His eyes are in the top of his head."

"But tarantulas are deadly poison?"

"Yes; but they use their poison as a defense. They have enemies to guard against, just as other creatures. Their poison is carried in a little sack in the last section of each foot and in the little sharp claws at the extremity, that is also hollow. They also have two teeth that are venomous."

"I have observed that they tend their young until they are four weeks old. After that they deliberately run away from them and leave them to look after themselves. This plan teaches them self-reliance."—St. Louis Star.

ONCE ENOUGH FOR THEM.

Ballington and Mrs. Booth Will Not Again Take Command of the Army Here.

RECONCILIATION PLAN IS CERTAIN OF FAILURE.

The Deposed Leaders Positively Decline to Consider Any Proposition Made to Them from the International Headquarters.

ISSUE ANOTHER STATEMENT.

New York, March 23.—Ballington and Mrs. Booth have issued a statement to the effect that they will under no circumstances again take command of the Salvation Army in the United States.

Commander and Mrs. Booth will not for one moment consider any proposition whatsoever made to them from the international headquarters of the army. While Commander Booth will not refuse to see his sister as a sister, both he and Mrs. Booth are positively and finally determined to enter into no discussion and listen to no proposition concerning the reconsideration of their position.

The leaders of the new movement claim the London officers are playing a trick—that they talk of reconciliation in order to prevent many of the American officers from leaving the Salvation Army to join in the new movement.

The grand reception by the Salvation Army here at Carnegie Hall to the Booth-Tuckers has been postponed until April 7. A cablegram was received today which stated Commissioner Booth-Tucker disembarked from the steamer to a tender and had returned to Southampton with his youngest son, who was taken ill on board the steamer.

LOYAL TO GENERAL BOOTH.

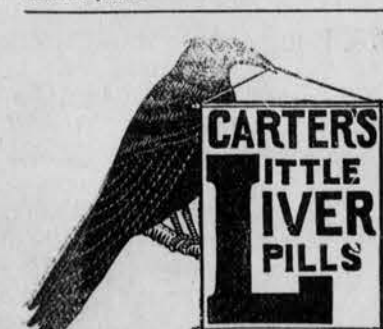

Officers of the Northwestern Branch Solid Against Secession.

Chicago, March 23.—About one hundred and fifty officers of the Northwestern branch of the Salvation Army were present at a meeting held here today. Commissioner Eva Booth addressed the meeting, which was held behind closed doors, on the question of loyalty to General Booth.

Later—Three of the most efficient officers at the divisional headquarters have declared to the commissioner their intention of leaving the army. They are Washington Blackhurst, adjutant; Christopher C. Herron, divisional secretary, with the rank of adjutant; Mrs. Bertha Herron, with the rank of adjutant.

In Hands of Civil Authorities.

Chicago, March 23.—Private James M. Allen, who shot and killed Private Daniel M. Call, Company A, Fifteenth United States infantry, on Friday last, is now in the hands of the United States civil authorities. United States Commissioner Foote issued the warrant. The remains of Private Call were taken from the fort today under full military escort, brought to Chicago and sent to Mulberry Grove, Ill., for interment.

negroes and says he is still in the field with a following that will make itself felt. The most conservative politicians credit a split for tomorrow unless some truce can be patched up by which Cuney can be satisfied.

Austin, Tex., March 23.—After an all day wrangle the combination between the Allison and Reed men was knocked into a cocked hat late tonight by the Allison men, with Cuney at their head, forswearing all combinations and announcing they would make the fight singly and alone for Allison for president and Cuney for temporary chairman.

Instructed for McKinley.

Richmond, Va., March 23.—The Republicans in the counties of Henrico, Orange and Staunton held conventions this afternoon to elect delegates to the state convention. All were instructed for McKinley.

KEPT THE POLICE BUSY.

Trouble Galore at a Democratic Aldermanic Chicago Convention.

Chicago, March 23.—Two riot calls sent in to the police station, a number of rough and tumble fights on the street, a stampede of a crowd of 500 people by a score of policemen and two riotous conventions—one of which was held in open air—were some features of the Democratic aldermanic convention in the Eighth ward tonight.

FOR AN EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

General Strike of Carpenters May Be Ordered to Make Test.

Indianapolis, March 23.—The executive committee of the National Federation of Labor began its regular conference here today. The conference lasted until a late hour this evening and was devoted chiefly to a discussion of the best means to bring about an eight-hour day.

Wrecked by Broken Rail.

Boise, Ida., March 23.—The west-bound Oregon Short Line train was wrecked near Shoshone this morning by a broken rail. Two sleepers and Superintendent Van Housen's private car left the track, the latter being smashed. Van Housen escaped with a number of bruises. A number of passengers were slightly injured.

Gen. Garcia's Bail Forfeited.

New York, March 23.—When the cases of the alleged filibusters were called today in the United States circuit court General Garcia did not respond and his bail of $3,000 was declared forfeited. General Garcia is reported to have been on board the Bermuda when she left port on the night of March 15.

MUST ANSWER QUESTIONS.

The Supreme Court Renders a Decision in the Test Case of Theo. F. Brown.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT IS CONSTITUTIONAL.

He Had Pleaded Right of Silence While a Witness in a Case Brought by the Commission—Four Dissenting Opinions.

THE LOWER COURT SUSTAINED.

Washington, March 23.—A decision was rendered by the United States supreme court today in the case of Theo. F. Brown, involving the right of court to compel answers by a witness to questions in interstate commerce questions notwithstanding he may plead self incrimination as a result of the answer. The decision was opposed to Brown's contention that he was protected by the Constitution from this requirement and the decision of the court below is affirmed.

The case came to the supreme court on an appeal taken by Brown from a decision in the circuit court for the Western district of Pennsylvania refusing to grant a writ of habeas corpus and arose out of proceedings by the interstate commerce commission against the Allegheny Valley Railroad company, of which Brown is an officer. He was a witness before the grand jury for the commission on this case and refused to answer certain questions propounded to him on the ground that by so doing he might incriminate himself.

In announcing the opinion Justice Brown said the question involved was whether the law of 1893 specifically relieving witnesses in interstate commerce cases from the refusal to answer questions which might incriminate themselves operates to take from the witness in such cases the privilege of silence as guaranteed by the Constitution, and the conclusion was that it did.

Justice Shiras read a dissenting opinion, in which Justices Gray and White concurred, in which he took the position that the federal law would not shield a witness from prosecution in a state court and expressed the opinion that the failure to enforce the law of 1893 would not weaken the interstate commerce law.

Justice Field also read a dissenting opinion, in which Justices Gray and White concurred, in which he took the position that the federal law would not shield a witness from prosecution in a state court and expressed the opinion that the failure to enforce the law of 1893 would not weaken the interstate commerce law.

Holmes Doing Much Writing.

Philadelphia, March 23.—H. H. Holmes, sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Pitzel, has been doing a good deal of writing lately, the character of which he carefully conceals. It is known a New York publisher offered him $7,500 if he would write a truthful and detailed story of his criminal career.

THE FAMILY BATHROOM.

An Indispensable Adjunct to a Well-Ordered Household.

It is one of the most surprising things in the world why people who have the ordinary comforts of life should build houses without bathrooms.

The farmer needs the bath more than his city neighbor, and could have it at a small cost. A bathtub is not expensive, and with a good force-pump and a barrel or two as head water, can be arranged without the aid of skilled labor.

There are many houses where there is a range, with hot and cold water, but no bathtub. This is an omission that should not be tolerated.

A well-equipped bath-room, with closet, can be arranged in any dwelling where there is even a tolerable supply of water.

Of course, the more water the better, but as every house is, or should be, supplied with a never-failing well, the muscle expended in pumping is very well used in this direction.

STRANGELY SURPRISED.

It Was the Unexpected That Happened This Time.

A man who had been a "toucher" died at a South side hospital a few days ago. His acquaintances were shocked and pained to hear of his death, although more than one remarked that he would like to have what was due him from the deceased borrower.

The man had been well liked, and his failure to pay what he owed was charitably ascribed to his carelessness in business matters rather than any intent to defraud.

When he earned money it seemed to get away from him immediately, so that he was compelled to borrow right and left, usually in small sums, but with alarming frequency. His borrowing had extended over a period of years, and none of those whom he owed had kept any account of the sums.

Therefore, when he died in the hospital it was considered that the books were balanced.

Imagine their surprise to learn that their impetuous friend had kept the most minute account of all his borrowings had managed to keep up the payments on his life insurance policy, and while on his death bed had given to his sister the most explicit directions for the paying of all his debts from his life insurance money, the balance to go to her.

She carried out the directions. One man who needed money received the welcome lump sum of $100. The others received more than they believed was due them. Then all the harsh things that ever were said of him were retracted.

It appears that very often, especially after his health became broken, he had borrowed in order to keep his life insurance paid up.—Chicago Record.

Apple Meringue. Peel, wash and stew juicy apples, sweeten, and season with nutmeg, or stew some lemon peel with them. Line your pie pan, fill with the apples, and bake.

When done, spread over the top a thick meringue made of the whites of three eggs whipped to a stiff froth, three tablespoonsful of powdered sugar, and rose or vanilla flavoring. Beat until it will stand alone. Cover the pie three-quarters of an inch thick and put back into the oven until the meringue is well set. Sift powdered sugar over it if it should get too dark colored. Serve cold. Peaches are even more delicious when used in this way.—Prairie Farmer.

A Water Bulwark.

The new ram Katakadin, of the United States navy, is so shaped that her deck in front curves down to the water-line, and as she rushes ahead a huge wave is raised over her bow. It has been suggested that this wave would be a means of protection to the ship from an enemy firing at her as she approached. She lies very low in the water, and with the liquid wall at her bow is practically behind a kind of fortification.—Youth's Companion.

The mole's sense of smell is very keen. As he has no eyes worth mentioning, he must depend on his nose to inform him of the whereabouts of his prey.

THE EARACHE SEASON.

It Means Much Suffering for Little Ones If Mothers Are Careless.

Half the time it's the mother's fault when the little ones toss and moan and suffer all night with the earache. What if "the little darling" does look just too sweet for anything" in stylish broad-brimmed hat, think of the danger to those little red, cruelly exposed ears. The ears of all babies, and even older children, should be well protected from the cold at this season.

Yet earache frequently attacks infants as well as older children—even the little ones, who are never taken out except when securely wrapped, and they often suffer unrelieved because they cannot make the mother understand where the pain lies.

Heat is the best remedy, and a warm poultice should be applied behind the ear, after which it will be well to dry the skin and rub in a little camphorated oil or warm laudanum.—St. Paul Globe.

CITIZENSHIP IN ABSTRACT.

Senator John J. Ingalls Refrains from Mentioning Specific Cases Which Need Reform.

HIS TALK ENTERTAINING, NOT-WITHSTANDING HIS COYNESS.

People Criticized for Condemning the President and the Senate, Instead of Revering and Loving Them-Good Men Needed in Politics.

LECTURE AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

At the opera house last evening the Young Men's Sunday Evening club gave the final entertainment in its course, the once-postponed lecture by Hon. John J. Ingalls, "who has sometimes been accused of being a member of the Republican party." Mr. Ingalls has a most pleasing platform manner, a voice which without seeming to be loud yet penetrates every part of the building, and a distinct and enjoyable enunciation. He opened with the usual flattering remarks, calculated to put the audience in good humor, then asked its indulgence, as he was suffering from the unaccustomed rigors of an upper peninsula winter.

Then followed a discourse which was quite entertaining, as the frequent applause testified, but which did not seem to contain much matter pertaining to the subject announced. In fact, those who attended, expecting to hear a discussion of the actual problems which this nation will be called upon to face during the next 100 years, must have been greatly disappointed at the way in which the speaker cleverly avoided touching upon those very things. He is evidently proficient in the art of "How not to say it."

Only some brief extracts from the lecture can be given. Without virtue and intelligence a republic is impossible. The danger to American institutions comes from its ignorant and vicious element. The problems of our second century proceed from the struggle now going on to secure equal opportunities for all men.

A great source of danger are those men who believe they are deprived of that equal opportunity which should be theirs. A contest is now being waged between the conservative and the destructive elements of society. In this connection Mr. Ingalls alluded to Macaulay's prophecy that when the virgin opportunities of our country had been appropriated, and a constantly increasing population made the maintenance of human existence more difficult, that liberty must be sacrificed that civilization may be preserved.

He protested against being charged with a partisan bias—the great questions of the coming century are far above party, they affect the people far beyond party, and they must be met in a spirit of patriotism. The science of American citizenship is the science of politics. Then followed the familiar declaration that good men don't do their duty in politics. The indifference of Christians, business men, good men to political affairs was responsible for the evils they deplore. They must blame themselves if ignorant and designing men come into power. In every locality in this country the government is what the best people see fit to make it. He referred to the rejoicing on the New York board of trade when the last congress adjourned, and other demonstrations of like nature against our national legislative body, as being most amazing, and spoke of "men who had the temerity to assail the senate of the United States." But since Mr. Ingalls himself, in a speech action times since, referred to purity in politics as an "iridescent dream," there seems hardly to be room for his amazement at the outsiders' temerity. He alluded to the various appellations bestowed upon the senate—"sugar senate," "bankers' club," "syndicate of millionaires," etc. Then "Our want" got a bit, if there was a man in the senate so ignorant as not to know what was in a bill he signed, the people who put him there are to blame.

If the fair fame of the senate has been tarnished, one of the problems of the century is how to right that matter. Abolish the present method of choosing senators and president, and elect them by ballot of the people. The present method of choosing these public servants came from those who distrusted the ability of the people to make a proper choice. A telling allusion was made to the recent disgraceful situation in Kentucky. The citizens, both men and women, have no greater objection, no higher duty, than to advise themselves about the problems of the second century and to right them at the ballot box. (Here again the speaker had an excellent opportunity to speak of some of these problems, but again the audience was disappointed.) It is indispensable that every man and woman should be a politician, every question of society is a political question. Women have been infected by the contagion of equality, they have entered into a direct competition with man, the last barrier will be removed. She will get the ballot as soon as she demands it—if not, it will be the first thing man has refused her since the apple scene in the garden of Eden. In the great soul of humanity the distinction of sex does not exist. He believes that the majority of the members of all political parties are honest and devoted to what they deem the best interests of the people, if it were not so the republic could not exist. What we need is the revival of a virile, robust Americanism, that apex no foreign ways or principles, but believes most thoroughly in American institutions, and he thought there should be no boundaries to our country but the four great oceans. No political body has a monopoly of the good or the bad in politics. There are a few bad Republicans—not many, and there are a few good Democrats—not many, but some.

We find ourselves engaged in a bloody and incessant battle for life; the history of the human race for countless ages has been a story of carnage and bloody struggle. This unconquered and unconquerable race to which we belong, has been engaged in this ceaseless struggle for liberty, for education, for freedom in the pursuit of happiness. Our government was the first that ever made the golden rule and the sermon on the mount the basis of its superstructure. We believed in the greatest good to the greatest number—but often the greatest number was N. O. I.

The Pilgrim fathers came to this country in order that every man might worship according to the dictates of his conscience—if his conscience was the same as theirs; this land belonged to the elect—and they were the elect. The speaker here paid his respects to the bigots who would displace the statute of Father Marquette from the halls of congress. The first thing the Pilgrim fathers did when they landed was to fall upon their knees, then upon the aborigines, and later upon the Chinese. A more beautiful than the people of the country, in six months we would be in the same condition as now—some having the millions and others tramping the railroad ties carrying a bandana trunk with a pin lock. He protested against the frequent abuse of the president—more beautiful than that of Napoleon. There was no man of fortune in this city who had not worked his way up from the pick and axe. Want of power to discern opportunities was the trouble with the unsuccessful ones. Here the speaker worked in the "oil" and "gas" fields, and he said he felt as if he were getting decrepit as filling for a lecture.

The parting thought was—the streets of Jerusalem were kept clean by every man sweeping before his own door. The solution of second century problems were only distantly hinted at, the question of the relation between capital and labor receiving a little more attention than any other, but this was treated in a most discursive way, being dismissed with a few glittering generalities. Corruption in politics was accounted for by the difference of good men. Let them do their duty and all will be well. Those in the audience who came expecting to hear a statesmanlike discussion of the real problems which confront us, the concentration of wealth; the increase of money power, which buys judges, bribes legislators and threatens to overwhelm our republic; socialism, which in the next century may either preserve or destroy our country; government control of railroads and other public highways for the benefit of the whole people; and other problems equally important, received no attention whatever. It was an entertaining lecture, but it could not be called a talk on the problems of our second century.

Died of Pneumonia. Theophile Ross died of pneumonia at his home 120 West Fisher street, at 6:35 Sunday morning after an illness of twelve days. The funeral will take place at 9 o'clock this morning from the French Catholic church. Mr. Ross was born in the province of Quebec in December, 1847, and for the past seventeen years had made his home in this city. He leaves a wife, five brothers and three sisters. The death of Mr. Ross removes another of the old settlers, so many of whom have joined the majority during the last few weeks.

Rhea on April 6. Mlle. Rhea, one of the best known women on the stage at the present day, will be at the opera house in this city on the evening of April 6. The management of the opera house is extremely fortunate in securing her as Rhea seldom ventures out of the large cities where her reputation being established, she is always sure of good houses. Although booked here for election night she should, and probably will, appear before a large audience.

Won't Leave Marquette. Some few days since when the ownership of the Iroquois hotel at the Soo changed hands, Mr. W. H. Volk of this city was called to the Soo with view of having him take charge of the hotel. Mr. Volk, after canvassing the matter thoroughly, concluded there was no better place than Marquette and will continue to conduct the New Clifton, which is a guaranty that the enviable reputation of the hotel in the past will be sustained in the future.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by that course they failed to cure. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. WILLIAM ANDREWS FOR MAYOR.

He Seems to Be Slated to Head the Laboring Men's Ticket.

In the discussion of political matters about the city it is generally conceded that William Andrews is the choice of the laboring men of Ishpeming for mayor. While no formal action to place him in the field has been taken by those at the head of the workingmen's party there seems no doubt about his being the choice of at least a great many of those who will stand by the ticket to be placed in nomination by that party.

In speaking of the mayoralty yesterday Mr. Andrews expressed surprise at his being favorably mentioned in connection with that office. He said that he was not aware that his friends were advocating his nomination.

The Republicans here have not yet taken any decisive steps with reference to placing a ticket in nomination for the charter election. It is not likely that the prohibition party will put a ticket in the field this spring.

LARSON AND DAVEY WILL RACE.

Iron and Copper Country Champions Will Meet at the Bancroft Rink.

"Sib" Larson of Ishpeming and Albert J. Davey of Red Jacket will meet in a one-mile race next Saturday evening at the Bancroft ice rink. Larson has rented the rink for that evening and has guaranteed Davey a stated sum to come here. These two skaters met in a similar contest at the Red Jacket rink last Thursday, when the copper country champion was victorious. It is said that the race was a good one. Larson is positive that he will give Davey a lively whirl in the race here. As Larson will be under considerable expense he has decided to charge twenty-five cents admission for gentlemen and fifteen for ladies and children. The band will be in attendance. Elmer Thompson, who is also one of the copper country's fast skaters, will meet Davey in a one-mile contest at Red Jacket next Thursday evening.

EX-SENATOR INGALLS.

His Lecture This Evening Will Be Largely Attended.

One of the largest gatherings that has ever assembled at the Swedish Lutheran church will doubtless be there this evening when ex-Senator J. J. Ingalls of Kansas will speak on "The Problems of Our Second Century." Several private and public meetings which were previously arranged to be held this evening have been postponed on account of Mr. Ingalls' lecture. Many are coming over from Negaunee, among whom will be Superintendent Davis and several teachers and many of the pupils attending the public schools. The doors of the church will be opened at 7 o'clock and Mr. Ingalls will begin his lecture at an hour later. The speaker will be introduced by Mayor Johnston. The price of admission to those not holding course tickets will be fifty cents.

Carl Erickson's Concert.

The following is the program for the concert to be given tomorrow evening at the A. O. U. W. hall under the direction of Carl Erickson:

- Tenor solo..... Dr. Carl Lonnblad..... Selected
- Duet, "O. Morning Land"..... Theops Miss Edith Ayling, Carl Erickson.....
- Baritone solo, "Skippers of St. Ives"..... Frederick Bennett.....
- Recitation, "Bender On Macbeth"..... By Request Samuel Swenson.....
- Tenor solo, "Good Night My Child"..... Carl A. Erickson.....

A Large Class.

There were forty-two pupils in the manual training department of the new high school yesterday. There will not be many more added to the class the present term, as this includes nearly all the large boys attending the schools. The class is a little larger than Superintendent Hardy expected it would be at the start, but he is pleased to see such a goodly enrollment. The work in this department is now fairly well started. The benches and tools are all here and in place and Mr. Davis, the instructor, is hard at work getting the boys started.

Were Well Pleased.

Those who witnessed the production of "Michael Strogoff" by the James H. Browne Theatre company at the opera house here last evening went home thoroughly pleased with the performance. The attendance was reasonably large. The play is one of the best Mr. Browne has ever produced here. The specialties introduced by J. T. McEmery and H. B. Sutherland were thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Browne and his company will leave this morning for Baraga, where they will play two nights. The company will play next week at Ashland.

What Will Do It?

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is positive proof that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact.

ISHPEMING IN BRIEF.

Otto Eger is sojourning in Chicago. J. H. Booth of Sidnaw was in Ishpeming yesterday.

Tim Hughes put a nobby delivery wagon on the streets yesterday.

Andy Anderson got home Saturday from a visit to Milwaukee and Chicago.

Joseph Hooper, the barber, has been ill and confined to his home since Saturday.

W. B. Hoar and Ferdinand Wieber of Houghton did business in the Hematite City yesterday.

J. J. Voelker advertises a dwelling house for rent in this issue of THE MINING JOURNAL.

John P. Outhwaite of the Neison House can give a competent girl a place in his dining room.

Mrs. C. Carey and family will soon take up their residence at Fond du Lac, Wis., where they have relatives living.

William Knowles, who resided in Ishpeming a number of years ago, but is now located on the Gogebic range, was here yesterday.

A special meeting of the local branch of the Mechanics' union has been called for tomorrow evening, when important business will be presented.

A special meeting of the city council will be held Thursday evening for the consideration of the annual reports of the city recorder and finance committee.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Spear of Houghton spent Sunday afternoon in Ishpeming, the guests of C. T. Hampton and wife. They left for the south on the evening train.

The Forty Hours devotional exercises will begin today at St. John's church. Several priests from neighboring parishes will be here to assist Rev. Father Langan in the work.

A SCHOOL FOR MONKEYS.

Calcutta's Novel Institution Where Our Speechless Relatives Are Taught.

There has just been founded at Calcutta an institution for the education of monkeys. Probably the prime movers of the affair never heard of Prof. Garner, the celebrated American simiologist, who has gone again to Africa to make an exhaustive study of the language of monkeys, or else they have deemed it easier to teach the monkeys than to learn from them in simian tongue. At any rate, one of the methods employed in this strange educational institution is the following:

A young monkey is taken and before him is placed a set of blocks on which are painted in capitals the letters of the alphabet. These blocks are, in fact, exactly similar to those which children play with in every civilized country in the world, and they are used in precisely the same way as if the monkey were a young specimen of the human race. There is one professor for each monkey, and the monkey is taught by means of the blocks to spell certain words. If the word is "fruit" for example, the monkey, after having been taught to arrange the blocks so as to spell the word quickly and without error, received a bit of fruit as his reward. The same exercise is repeated with other words, and it is hoped that in time the simians will learn how to read and spell and understand English if they cannot speak it.

Only young animals are taken, for they learn more quickly than old ones. There is no danger of this queer school lacking scholars, for there are thousands of monkeys to be found in India where Calcutta is situated. An effort will be made, it is said, to educate these beasts so that they may become fairly efficient domestic servants. The school is so young as yet, however, that what it will accomplish is entirely a matter of speculation. Its "professors" are enthusiastic about their novel work, and seem to think that a new field of usefulness will soon be opened up for these chattering little beasts.—Paris Journal des Debats.

REMARKABLE INSTINCT OF SOME QUADRUPEDS AS TO THE WAY HOME.

Horses and mules are known by all who have much experience with them as famous pathfinders.

A good story of this power in the horse tribe is told of a mule by John T. Campbell, of Rockland, Ind. In the early days of prospecting in Oregon a party was in the field, and had covered a very circuitous course, which they depended on a civil engineer to enable them to retract, should they see any objects worthy of a revisit. Having decided to return to the home camp by the most direct route, the engineer, after calculating latitudes and departures, pointed out what he believed to be the correct direction along which they must proceed to reach the desired point.

When night overtook them they found that they were not at the home camp, as they expected to be, though the engineer assured them that they were not far away from the desired point, although he was quite unable to say in which direction it was best to turn. At this stage of their wanderings the driver of the team turned one of the mules loose, and at once, much to the discomfiture of the engineer and the amusement of the rest of the party, it set off in a direction that brought them to the home camp. Now, this mule had never before been allowed to wander in this locality, for fear that it would stray and become lost, nor had it ever before been over the route by which they had reached the point where the engineer was at fault. It was after dark; there was no one at the camp to make any noise that its sharp ears might detect, and the way was entirely unknown to it. How had it at once taken the route that would lead to camp?

A case allied to this happened to me in the Blue mountains of Jamaica, where a pony that had never before been in the parish, where I was lost in a tropical storm, took me back to the point from which we had started in the morning, and that by a much nearer route, entirely new to both of us. While I was aware by the growth of the trees that we were headed in the right general direction, it was at any time impossible for me to see more than 100 yards ahead. At the time that I left the main trail and got on what afterward proved to be a much shorter cut, it was impossible for me to see anything in the blinding fury of the cloud-burst. How the pony found its way with so much satisfaction to itself—it never for an instant appeared to falter on its course—I was unable to determine. It was more than once my experience after that, when we had any difference of opinion as to the ramified ways in those Jamaica hills, that the pony's judgment was the best to depend upon, to find the place where it last had its fodder, although it was at times annoying when that place was not where I wanted to go.—Popular Science News.

DAMPNESS SHOULD BE AVOIDED.

Dampness in dairy houses should be studiously avoided. Dampness produces fungoid growth, not only developing but increasing organic germs; and there are, when the conditions are favorable, countless invisible germs floating in the air to attack the milk and spoil it and the butter. Then beware of damp floors. A little lime scattered around, or placed in a box in the dairy house, will absorb a large quantity of the moisture. But the first important step to take is to see to the drainage; see that it is as perfect as possible.—Farmers' Review.

—Ardent Lover—"If you could see my heart, Belinda, you would know how fondly—" Up-to-date Girl (producing camera)—"I intend to see it, Hiram. Sit still, please."—Chicago Tribune.

—Above the Normal.—Mrs. Boston—"Is my daughter's cold better, doctor?" "How did you find her temperature?" Doctor (absently)—"Just above the freezing point."—Detroit Free Press.

—Dear father, we are all well and happy. The baby has grown ever so much and has a great deal more sense than he used to have. Hoping the same of you, I remain your daughter, Molly."—The Bits.

—"Ah! that's a great strain!" exclaimed the tenor, who was exercising his voice in his bedroom. "A great strain it is," replied his room-mate, "on those who have to listen to it."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

—Probably Not.—Susy—"Say, auntie, dear, you're an old maid, aren't you?" Aunt Emma (hesitatingly)—"Certainly, Susy; but it is not nice of you to ask such a question." Susy—"Now, don't be vexed, auntie; I know it isn't your fault."—Herrielanders Laubrosch.

—"I see," remarked Mrs. Hasheroff, at the breakfast table, "that the coffee crop of Honduras has been seriously reduced by two unusually dry seasons." "That's odd," replied the Star Boarder; "I never noticed a scarcity of water in the coffee."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

—In Advance of the Times.—"Sir," began the high-browed man with the rolled manuscript, "in me you behold a man who is in advance of the age." "Yes," said the editor. "You are situated somewhere along about next summer, I presume." "Next summer?" "Yes. I notice that you left the door open."—Indianapolis Journal.

—Determined.—"John," said Miss Blykins, "what is that in your overcoat pocket?" "It's a tin horn, Maria." "And what have you in your hand?" "A red lantern. I have a puffing inside in my vest pocket and a red wax whistle in my vest. I'm going to see if I can get a gripman to stop the cable car for me."—Washington Star.

A mirror could not lie if it wanted to. The glass has nothing to gain by flattery. The roses of health and plumpness of beauty are leaving your face, your mirror will tell you so. You can see for yourself you are in danger of losing the admiration which is every woman's due. You may not really realize it, but health is the greatest beauty-fer in the world. Lotions, plasters, creams and cosmetics cannot make as good a complexion as health can. They cannot hide the story of ill-health. They merely camouflage it. Health shows in clearness of eyes and skin, in redness of lips and vivacity of manner and expression. Disease is proved positively by the absence of these things. When a woman sees the indications of ill-health in the face, she may with almost absolute certainty look for the cause in one or both of two causes—constipation, and derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. These things in themselves are in some degree related, and nine-tenths of all the sickness of women come from them. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure permanently and positively any so-called female complaint. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. There is no reason in the world why a woman should not be perfectly healthy. It rests with herself. If she will take these truly wonderful remedies, and follow a few hygienic measures, she may become perfectly strong and healthy in all ways. She will gain in health, strength and flesh. Hollows and angles will give place to fullness and grace. She will be that noblest and most beautiful of all creation—a perfect woman. All druggists sell Dr. Pierce's medicines, but if you care to know more about them and to know all of the grandest medical truths, send 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only, and a complete copy of Dr. Pierce's book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" will be sent post-paid. It is a veritable medical library, complete in one volume. Several finely illustrated chapters are devoted to the consideration of diseases of women and their successful home-treatment. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y.

NEARLY FINISHED.

Railway Cut Through the Hill West of Cornishtown About Completed. Woods Bros., the railroad contractors, expect to finish cutting the channel for the Lake Superior & Ishpeming railroad through the hill west of Cornishtown by the first of next month.

SALE POSTPONED.

Men Will Probably Get Their Pay During the Week. The sale of the property owned by the Davis Mining company, which was advertised to take place yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, was postponed until next Monday morning at the same hour.

FOR SALE OR LEASE--Farm near the Carp river east of the Negaunee cemetery.

Henry Anderson, Negaunee. J. H. Booth came down from Sidway yesterday for the purpose of buying some of the machinery at the Davis mine in case it was sold.

Tearing Out the Plant.

The Upper Peninsula Brewing company has begun the task of removing the plant from the local brewery. The work is not being done rapidly, as only the men who are engaged in making malt put in their spare time taking down the machinery.

Has Some Wheels.

John S. Mitchell, bookkeeper at the Negaunee mine, says he has the local agency for thirty-one different kinds of bicycles. Several of the wheels are well known to many of the riders here.

Made-Up Horses.

There are, perhaps, half a dozen horses in New York that have false tails. The horse so provided is generally a fine animal, perhaps a carriage horse. It may have been provided by nature with a poor tail, or it may have lost its own flowing tail in a fire.

OUT OF WEAKNESS comes strength when the blood has been purified, enriched and vitalized, the appetite restored and the system built up by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Ponder Over It.

A prominent building owner, with years of experience, gave the following instructions to his architect: "I have had my experience with kalsomines and other goods claimed to be just as good as Alabastine. I want you to specify Alabastine on all my walls do not put on any other manufacturers' dope, if they furnish it for nothing. Alabastine is right, and when I cease to use it I shall cease to have confidence in myself or my own judgment."

The U. S. Gov't Reports show Royal Baking Powder superior to all others.

LOCAL LACONICS.

Henry J. Atkinson spent yesterday with Negaunee friends. M. C. Quinn is back from his purchasing trip to Chicago and Milwaukee.

George Chellev left yesterday for Central City, Colo., where he expects to find work in a gold mine.

Dr. Broehm has been summoned to Ohio on account of the dangerous illness of his mother. He left for there Sunday evening.

A number of Negaunee people will go to Ishpeming tonight to hear Ex-Senator Ingalls. Several of the boys and girls attending the high school here propose attending the lecture.

Rev. J. E. Riley, who delivered a lecture at St. Paul's church here last fall, spent yesterday in Negaunee, the guest of Rev. Father Langner. He left for Chicago on the evening train.

Thomas Joyce and family will soon move in from Cascade and take up their residence in their own house, now occupied by Thomas Yates and family.

SOME SPRING FABRICS.

What Women Will Wear and How It Will Be Made. It actually gives one cold chills to go into a shop all muffled up to the eyes in furs and flannels and see the counters heaped up with sheerest organdies, mulls and cobweb laws, and yet here they are, says an exchange.

Have you seen any of these new fabrics? Positively, it is as good as any display in an art studio. No water-color ever showed daintier handling than that exhibited in the flower sprays and wreaths on the lacelike fabrics that are designated as organdies, and no Gobelin tapestries were ever more cunningly devised than the Persian effects that come in soft silks and lawns for summer wear.

Modistes do not talk much yet, but one who studies those things must conclude that long, straight breadths in skirts will prevail, for to cut those stripes in gores would present a most bizarre appearance, and a waist that was cut in side forms and seams down the back would make one look positively grotesque.

Other laws have a shimmering kind of lightning-stripe in dark color on light ground that makes you think that crepon weaves have invaded the domain of cotton. Some of the exquisite-colored organdies have great bunches of bright blossoms scattered over them, and others have the flowers printed in just as they are on the taffetas, with that shimmering, elusive effect that is perfectly bewitching.

Then there are the sheer-white organdies and lawns, that look as though they would melt away in thin air if you breathed heavily upon them. Of course, all this thin stuff presages colored linings. India silks in the thin weaves and bright colors will be used for slips to wear under these dower gardens, and you can have no idea how very pretty the effect is. If the color to go under is wisely and artistically chosen, it heightens the effect of the flower coloring, adding brilliancy and charm to the material. --Chicago News.

Delicious Potato Cakes. --Boil six medium-sized potatoes in salted water until thoroughly cooked, mash them and set aside to cool; then add three well-beaten eggs, a quart of milk and flour enough to make a pancake batter. Bake quickly on a hot-greased griddle and serve very hot. --Ladies' Home Companion.

Roast Beef. --Remove the ribs from a roast of beef, roll the meat and tie it up; place it in a baking-pan and dredge lightly with pepper. Add a teaspoonful of salt to a cupful of boiling water and pour in the pan. Set it in a very hot oven; baste every ten minutes, and let bake 15 minutes to every pound. One hour before the meat is done make the pudding. Pour the gravy from the pan, turn in the pudding, and bake one hour. --Ladies' Home Companion.

The Discovery Saved His Life. Mr. G. Caillouette, Druggist, Beaverville, Ill., says: "To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe and tried all the physicians for miles about, but of no avail and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better, and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. We won't keep store or house without it." Get a free trial at E. Farnham's Drug Store.

RED-ANT MINERS.

Operations of the Termites in Arizona Described. "It's as monotonous as herding sheep, and that's saying a good deal. However, I sold out at a profit of 100 per cent., and I'm going to devote the future to some other occupation."

That is how J. W. Blundon, formerly of Winslow, A. T., summed up his experience as the owner of a lot of red-ant colonies, and the utilization of the little fellows as jewel miners in the petrified region of Arizona.

Mr. Blundon is a carpenter and builder by occupation. Like many others, he was attracted to Arizona in the days of the Tombstone excitement. The decline of mining and milling left him dependent upon resources other than his usual calling. But, let him tell the story of the ants:

"The termite miners are vicious little red fellows, ranging from one-half to five-eighths of an inch in length, with a body of corresponding thickness. I purchased a half interest in 60 colonies shortly after I reached Winslow. A colony means an uncertain number of ants. They swarm and live in factions, and are subject to the most stringent rules. When you buy a colony you may get 1,000 or 1,000,000,000 ants; it all depends on the disposition of the termite ruler."

"I went in with a fellow, and we bought 60 colonies from a man that lived about 20 miles out of Winslow. We had to make a trip with each colony."

"You have to take a water-cart and wear high rubber boots. Then you must have good, wooden shovels. All of a sudden you go to your colony, scoop up the ants with the wooden shovel, dump them in the carts, and then you start for the jewel mines."

"When you reach the place where the ants are to work you take your shovels and dump them out without ceremony. The ants begin to burrow at once. First they strike the fine hot sand of the desert. This the ants deposit in a ring which is remarkable for its symmetry. Then comes the coarse gravel, and it is deposited in a circle outside the sand. Meanwhile the ants are going downward in search of food and water."

"When the gravel and coarse sand layers are apparently complete, we begin to look out for jewels. Suddenly a cardinal-hued termite miner will come up with something in his claws. He will pass beyond the sand and gravel layers and start a new strata on the outer edge. This fellow will be followed by his thousand or more mates, and when the sun goes down they will have made a new home, besides doing duty for their owners."

"The outer edge of the ant heap is devoted to precious stones. The hills never exceed 15 inches in height, but the depth of the burrowing is something that no man can measure."

"The ants have to be fed when they are transported. We had to feed them on young grass or anything that was not cured."

"When its all over you will have cleared up about ten dollars a day, providing you can sell your rough gems in San Francisco or St. Louis." --San Francisco Examiner.

HINTS FOR THE FAT WOMAN.

How to Dress in Order to Conceal Unflattering Lines. There are two methods of treating superfluous flesh, the most common being what one might call the squeezing plan. According to this plan one tries to make one's self small by actual force by compressing one's self into tight corsets. The other and more reasonable plan is the one of judicious concealment. This consists of doing by craft and subtlety what can never be accomplished by strength. It covers up unsightly lines and protuberances and deceives the eye as to bulk by cunningly contrived draperies.

Take a woman of 175 pounds, for instance, and begin by loosening her corset lacing at the waist. Then use lace and chiffon and ribbon as much as possible instead of severely plain cloth gowns, and silk rather than wool, which always has a tendency to increase size. Let the stout woman avoid the separate bodice, the round waist with a belt and plain skirt fitting smoothly, and displaying to the full the worst parts of her figure, and let her cling to coats with open fronts and moderately long skirts, which will hide them, to loose fronts and lace jackets and long coats of ribbon.

If she must wear a separate bodice let it have hip drapery of some sort, it only a pile of lace or some loops and ends of ribbon, and let it never be of a color contrasting strongly with that of the skirt. The fat woman must study the effect of lines, especially of those coming from the shoulders to a point at the waist, and the difference in result of a belt pinned down in front and of one which goes round the waist in an unbroken line; also the difference between a belt sewn in at the side seams and one continued at the back. Let her look, too, at the advantages of coat tails which stand out at the back so as to counterbalance her too great amplitude in front. Let her study her good points and make the most of them.

Above all, however careless may be the effect of her loose front, she must always be careful to have underneath them the foundation of a well-cut, well-fitting lining. --Chicago Tribune.

JUSTICE IS DONE AT LAST.

John McDonald Pardoned by Governor Rich After Serving Six Years in the Penitentiary.

CONVICTED OF MURDER AND SENTENCED FOR LIFE.

Confession of a Witness Leads to an Investigation Which Demonstrates That the Prisoner is Innocent of the Crime Charged.

STORY OF A REMARKABLE CASE.

John McDonald, who has served six years in the branch prison for a murder of which he was innocent, but for which he was sentenced to a life term, was pardoned by Governor Rich yesterday, the welcome news reaching Marquette late in the afternoon. He will be released today. McDonald's story is one of the most remarkable in criminal records and is a striking illustration of how, through force of circumstances, the man guilty of crime may suffer for it and the real perpetrator escape even suspicion. In 1889 five people, John McDonald, Duncan and Molly Beveridge, John and Maggie Redpath, were living on a homestead at Matchwood, in Ontonagon county. Of the five McDonald had the best reputation; he was considered honest, industrious and reliable, and in fact he had no connection with the others, simply stopping temporarily in their cabin, as he did not wish to live alone on his own claim, which was close by. The Beveridges and Redpaths were disreputable, neither couple being legally married. The arrangement of the house, or shanty, as it really was, was such that the two couples slept in rooms leading from the sitting room and McDonald's room was toward the rear, was fastened by a peg on the outside and could not be opened by anyone within.

On the night in question Molly Beveridge was shot through the head and died two days later, but she was not able to speak and consequently could give no clew of her assassin. At the same time Beveridge claims to have been wounded across the forehead, to prove it bearing an ugly scar which might have been made by a bullet or by rubbing a pistol barrel on his forehead. Maggie Redpath was shot in the right thigh and wounded so dangerously that it was thought it might prove fatal. On the accusation of the other men McDonald was arrested. He retained Kuts & Button of Ironwood to defend him and they took a change of venue from Ontonagon to Marquette county because of the illness of Judge Williams.

The case came to a trial in the fall of 1889 at which time the prisoner was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment. The principal witnesses for the prosecution were Beveridge and Redpath. They told the same story to the effect that McDonald had shot the two women and that the bullet which killed Molly Beveridge had afterward grazed the head of her so-called husband. Maggie Redpath was not sworn as she was in the hospital at the time. The defense was somnambulism. McDonald said he remembered nothing after going to bed until he found himself in the sitting room struggling in the arms of Beveridge and Redpath. He had no knowledge of the shooting, he testified, but he did not deny it, thinking it might have been committed in his sleep. Of course such a story had little weight with the jury who quickly returned a verdict of guilty, and McDonald went to prison with the prospect of remaining there until his death.

Though the mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceeding small, and after two years spent in the dreary monotony of penitentiary existence, a ray of hope came to the prisoner in a sworn statement made by Maggie Redpath. It completely exonerated McDonald and fastened the murder upon his two companions. Mrs. Redpath said that Beveridge and his wife had quarreled frequently and that it was determined to put the woman out of the way because she had knowledge of another crime in which her temporary husband had taken part. In consummation of this plan, she stated further, the shot was fired by Beveridge when the victim was dressed and in the sitting room. The deed was shot, she stated, and threatened with certain death if she mentioned the truth. Terrified, she had promised, keeping her word for a time until seized with remorse at the thought of an innocent man suffering when she had it in her power to free him.

These remarkable disclosures created a sensation here and in Ontonagon county. Friends of McDonald raised a purse to pay the expenses of an investigation which soon brought the conviction that the Redpath woman's story was true. Among other evidence a pillow case with a bullet hole in it was found, thus showing that Beveridge's forehead had been scarred in some other way than claimed by himself and his accomplice. Then the prison board took up the matter, making a searching inquiry extending over a period of three years. At length last week, coming to the conclusion that McDonald was innocent, they recommended to Governor Rich that he be pardoned and the governor promptly acted in accordance with their advice.

Beveridge and Redpath, when last heard from, were in Marinette, Wis. Maggie Redpath is now lawfully wedded and living in northwestern Wisconsin.

The shot, which wounded Maggie Redpath, is supposed to have been fired at Mrs. Beveridge who dropped to the floor just as her murderer was about to shoot the second time. However, if both women had been killed, the assassin probably would not have regretted it as with one less witness against him, he would have felt safer, but if his intention was to kill both, he afterward changed his mind to adopt the clever plan which proved so successful in convicting McDonald. The shooting had been done while his wife was standing in the sitting room, fully dressed, but she was undressed, his clothing burned, her night robe put on and she was placed in bed. Beveridge then in some way made the scars on his forehead, so that it would appear that the bullet had just touched him and then entered his wife's head, both lying in bed at the time.

When Warden Van Evert announced the good news to McDonald yesterday, the latter became pale as death and seemed about to faint, but by an effort pulled himself together and walked out of the office, staggering like a drunken man. He has been given the responsible position of foreman of Brown's knitting works, Mr. Brown having the greatest confidence in him and having interested himself in securing the pardon. Attorney Hill, who worked on the case without pay only to see justice done, Warden Van Evert, Joe Ray and Jake Dolf were also in great part instrumental in bringing about the result. Mr. Van Evert has for a long time felt no doubt of the prisoner's innocence. The prison board could not have acted more promptly as it was necessary to sift the facts to the bottom and for three years it has been at work to secure them. That McDonald was pardoned after such an exhaustive examination as was given is only a further tribute to him, and the best possible indication that he was not guilty.

Yesterday's Inquest.

The inquest over the bodies of William Hunt and David McKeiver was held in Justice Mead's office in the city hall yesterday afternoon, it being adjourned from the morning on account of the inability of some of the witnesses to attend. There was very little for the jury to do, except to return a verdict that the deceased had come to their death by asphyxiation, and a finding that that effect was made. The testimony of the two physicians, Doctors Desjardins and Patterson, showed that the two men had been dead three or four hours before being found, rigor mortis having set in in the meantime. It was also developed that Hunt had another name. He was called William Hargrave when he lived in England, but no reason why he should wish to conceal his identity was shown.
