WANT OUR ORES IN CANADA. We take this from the American Manufacturer of the 5th inst.:

Something of a change has been made in Canadian tariff regulations on pig iron An act passed by the Dominion parliament in 1894 authorizes the governor-in-council to pay a bounty of $2 per ton on all pig iron made in Canada from Canadian or any foreign ores that may be used as admixtures not to be included in the com putation when claims for the bounty are being made. A few days since an order was issued amending the regulations and allowing bounty to be paid on pig iron which has been made partly from Canadian and partly from foreign ore.

To some this may seem like extending tariff protection to the purchasers of foreign products, but an examination of the which, if carried out, will further develop not be kept a secret—would render the Canadian resources. Those who favor the election of the candidate nominated alidea argue that Canada has an abundance of ores within her own limits, but if by importing foreign ores to mix with the domestic the furnace people can manufac ture a better brand of pig iron they should be permitted to do so without incurring any penalties. The furnace at Hamilton has found it necessary to go to Lake Su-perior for its ore, and the Ferrona people are getting Newfoundland ore which enables them to turn out a good soft iron, an have not found at home heretofore. It is plain that the measure which will improve the quality of pig iron turned out by Canadian furnaces will better enable them to compete with foreign iron. Moreover. the interests of Canadian iron makers as the boat thet was doo about thet time of year. They left Ollie at home to fight it out with Bill. The trouble wasn't long in comin'. Ollie Pearsoll knowed thet Bill would be over to demand his rights, and so he fixed fer him. He loaded the old family gun an put it in a handy place. It wasn't much after sunrise when Bill hallooed out in front of the Pearsoll place. mother went out and spoke to Bill in a pleasant way, but he told her to get in the house, of she didn't want to get hurt. He was there to see Pete and Ollie, and he'd see them if he hed to wait till doomsday. While the old woman was parleyin' Ol came out. "'Git in,' he said, 'I'll do the talkin'.' "The old mother went to the house, ookin' with fear an' tremblin' at the guns the boys carried.

Thet evenin' Pete Pearsoll went over to the river to ketch

'Air ye goin' to keep them di'mon's?' Bill asked, without takin' his eyes off'n Ollie

"'I'm goin' to keep my share,' he said, doggedly. "'You've got no share!' Bill ex-claimed. 'They're all mine; an' you, like the sneak thet ye air, hev come along an' stole them from me.' "You'll eat them words,' Ollie said. and without another word, he turned back into the shanty. Bill raised his gun to fire; but old Mrs. Pearsoll put up her hand.

"'Don't, Bill!' she exclaimed. 'Ef ye must fight, do it fair. My boy ain't afeard of ye; he'll meet ye when and where ye say.' "'On the old camp meetin' ground, then, at daylight to-morror. We'll settle it all there, onct an' fer all.' "He 'clucked' to his critter an' rode off in a canter.

"Some one told me that there was a scientific feller from London prospectin' around the country, and I looked him up, and late thet night we slipped over to the new timber back of the Sims place and took a look at the dimond fields. It didn't take thet man long to bust out in a laff.

"'Thet's a form of quartz,' he said, 'an' ain't worth nothin'. Them fellers down at Noo Orleans will have a good last on Pearsoll when he brings in that bag an' calls 'em di'monds. Why, ef he had a bag of di'monds he'd be the richest man ever dreamt of.'

"When I heard the feller say thet I told him of the dooel thet was about to happen on account of the trouble between the boys. We agreed thet it would hev to be stopped. There had been some dooelin' in them parts before and there was no make-believe in it. As there was no reason fer no fightin' thoughtfully smacked his lips and in this case, we felt it our dooty to in-passed the cup to the next one. "Thet terfere.

"Long before daylight we went to ee Bill Sims. When we got to the see Bill about the country. Our folks had come house Bill was settin' in the back room by a knot fixin' his gun.

"'Put it up, Bill,' says I. "There ain't goin' to be no fight.'

'Has he backed out?' Bill asked "'Haven't seen him,' I said,'but this tire Mr. Towne on account of his attion trees.'

"'Guessyou folks is in with the Pearsolls,' Bill said, careless like, blowing down his gun an' lookin' along the barrel.

"Well, we talked an' pled and argied until it began to be daylight, and then Bill, he got up an' said he'd hev We saw it was no use to say nothin' there, and we follered. wasn't long 'till we got to where Pearwas look'in at his gun when we rode up. "The two men glared at each other

"'Air ye ready?"

"'Allus ready,' Ollie replied back. "Then the man from London stepped up and began to talk. I've heered preachers thet could talk ye black in the face, but I never heerd none the could sling language by the side of that feller from England. He used words that nobody understood, talked about the field of honor an' the abusin' of it, an' the Lord knows what else, but

"'Course we feels glad thet yer so interested, but no game like thet kin stop business of this sort. I've bin robbed, an' I'm going after the robber.' "'At least,' said the man from London, 'ye'll let us act fer yer?' "'Say the word, ye mean?' Ollie asked. 'I don't see why not.'

"Out there under the trees of thet pretty place on one of the finest mornin's I ever see, them two men stood 20 paces apart. The man from London measured off the ground and asked the men to toss up a penny for position. They didn't know what it meant, but they done as he said. Then he held a handkerchief above his head.

"'When I drop this," he said, 'begin.' "He dropped the rag a minute later and one shot came. I thought thet one of the guns had missed, but when Bill and Ollie tumbled for'e on their faces, I know'd that the both had fired together.'

"'This is one time,' said the man

Strengthening the Memory. To remember well, the thing must first be well "membered." Distinct-

ART OF REMEMBERING WELL Which, If Followed, Will Aid in

ness of impressions and ideas is of prime importance for certainty in remember-When we look at a distinct and well-defined photograph of a friend, we are able to promptly associate with it the person whose likeness it is. should the photograph be poor and con-fused in its outlines, there will exist an uncertainty as to whether it is the likeness of a given person. Hence the necessity for the first impression to be clear and well defined; for, so far as the act of memory is concerned, a confused idea may be as accurately reproduced as a clear one, but the mind, in endeavoring to grasp it, will be thrown into a state of uncertainty as to the image reproduced. This induces hesitation, which may often be as unfortunate as the entire loss of the power of recalling the image. This is clearly shown in the case of a person of limited mental training, when the attempt is made to quote something either heard or read, and somewhat outside of their usual line of thought. Having at first failed to master thoroughly the connected ideas, when the attempt is made to recall them, memory faithfully reproduces the ideas confused and indistinct, because the images impressed on the centers were so; hesitancy results, since they do not know whether to interpret their recollection as meaning one thing for something different.

Another cause of failure of memory is due to lack of observing connections between related ideas. If the con nections impressed be confused the mind in recalling them will be in the same conditions of uncertainty, as when dealing with ill-defined ideas. Connections themselves; for when the first center is caused to act it will start all related centers into activity. Energy is then saved by having to start but one rather than all the centers in a series. Take the learning of a theorem in geometry as an instance of this. First, master the theorem in detail, understanding clearly what are the given conditions and what their combinations is to prove. Then master, with equal clearness, each successive step and the logical connection binding them into a connected demonstration. The result is, a succession of connected ideas has been impressed, the first being the theorem, and the last the statement of the thing to be proved. The theorem being given, the demonstration will readily follow, just as the wheels in a watch are set in motion when the balance wheel begins to oscillate.

Many persons can scarcely understand how it is possible to learn many languages and keep them distinct. This is rendered possible through the association of ideas; when one thoroughly commits all he learns about one language he may study as many as he pleases without danger of confusion. These same considerations apply to reading to advantage. There is certainly no advantage in reading a great deal and not being able to remember it. There is opportunity here to solve the problem of maxim acquisition, with due economy of time and mental exertion. The question is solved when one can distinctly recollect what is read without getting different subjects mixed up in a jumble. The method is plain; understand what the author states, select the leading ideas and note carefully their connections, and the book or article is the reader's.

Obviously the same principles apply to all the affairs of everyday life. By being a close observer, and noting the details and their relation accurately, to stop at. the confusion and labor of trying to remember will vanish.

Accepting, then, the definition that memory is a repetition of a former men tal act due to a recurrence of the excitation which first gave rise to it, this brief survey may serve to point out the general lines of its cultivation.—Popular Science News.

The fact that the Republican house assisted upon taking up a contested election case in the closing hours of con-gress has irritated the Democrats and they may force the majority to furnish their own quorum to unseat another Democrat. As the Republicans have not a quorum of their own in the city this furnishes the main cause for alarm so far as the house is concerned.

Hartman moved the passage of a bill to facilitate the reorganization of the Northern Pacific railroad. The pur-pose of the bill was to enable the road to reorganize under a federal charter. Quigz opposed the passage under sus-pension of the rules of a bill which affected 4,700 miles of railroad, 43,000,000 acres of land and $400,000,000 worth of property. He characterized the bill as a "freeze-out game." The bill was supported by Tarsney, Johnson and Doolittle and opposed by Wilson. The bill was passed—150 to 50.

SECTARIAN QUESTION STILL OPEN The conference report on the Indian came from the house. This leaves but four great supply bills still in issue—District of Columbia, Indian, naval and sundry civil bills.

Although neither house has as yet acted on the report, the conferees on the naval bill have agreed on a report which it is thought will prove acceptable to both houses. It compromises the question of the number of battleships by authorizing three instead of four as the bill passed the house and two as it passed the senate. Amination, Walling said he had never known Pearl Bryan until she came here. He said in both direct and cross-examination that Scott Jackson mentionedPearl to him early inJanuary just after he had returned from his holiday vacation at Green Castle. "Then," saidWalling, "Jackson told me about his trouble with Pearl Bryan and asked me to help him. I agreed to help him by getting a suitable room and a competent physician to do the work. Jackson a little later said he would bring the girl here, give her some quick poison and kill her in some hotel, with the impression she had committed suicide. Still later he proposed to kill her with poison in a private room, cut her up and scatter the pieces in the city catch basins."

THIRSTED JUSTICE.

Otis Nickleson Wanted the Porter of the Big Liner India Arrested.

CLAIMS HE WAS BUNCOED OUT OF NINE DOLLARS.

No News from the "City of Marquette" -Left Here for Munising Monday Morning-Marine Matters Well Worth Mention.

ALLEGED SHORT CHANGE GAME When the steamer India came into port last night she brought with her one Otis Nickleson. Mr. Nickleson brought with him, among his other personal effects, an overpowering desire for what he deems justice. This desire was so violent that he engaged the services of half the police force, and had the United States deputy marshal routed out of bed in the middle of the night to make an arrest of one of the club run till Wednesday night.

Nickleson claims that the porter, Edward Julien, worked a new variety days ago to attend the funeral of his of the short change racket on him. He father. and his partner, N. Summers, are bridge builders, and have come here to work on the new Dead river bridge for work on the new Dead river bridge for the L. S. & I. Both were deck passengers. Not being a disagreeable chap, Nickleson was allowed to be about the engine room, instead of being made to other four were from the "Soo." stay forward with the rest of the sections he thought a berth would be a desirable thing, and accepted with alac-

settlement came. He says he gave the porter a $10 bill to get changed and take his pay out of. The porter stuck it down his pocket. Just as he turned to go away Julien is alleged to have pulled out a one dollar bill.

gave, but that was all the good his insistance did him as the porter refused Mattie Vick to cough up.

the porter arrested, and the United States deputy marshal out of bed for purpose. As he had no evidence that would hold in a court the arrest was not made.

Captain P. O'Neil says that the porter has always been an honest boy as long as he has been on the boat, and bicycle ri that he don't believe that the man gave him the ten. The porter's only fault, as the captain sees it, was in renting his berth, which is in violation of the rules of the company.

There is no joy in this world equal to the happiness of motherhood. A woman finds ample compensation for her trials and worries and bothers in the soft, clinging little body nestling close to her own—in the trustful clinging of the little hands, and the love light in the little eyes.

A woman's health is her dearest possession. Good looks, good times, happiness, love and its continuance, depend on her health. Almost all of the sickness of women is traceable directly or indirectly to some derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. Troubles of this kind are often neglected bearns a very natural and proper modesty keeps women away from physicians, whose insistence upon examination and local treatment is generally as useless as it is common. TOWN HISTORIES IN DEMAND Genealogies.

To know what kind of books ar most called for at the Congressional library would probably surprise 90 per cent. of the novel-reading public throughout the United States. demand is not for general historical or scientific works, nor for romances and dramatic literature, but just for simple "town histories." Under this rubric Under this rubric is comprehended those works which describe the historical events of the foundation and development of general municipalities. And the most remarkable thing in connection with the constantly growing popularity of town histories is the fact that the demand comes chiefly from women

One of the attaches of the Congres sional library recently asserted within the hearing of a reporter that the demand for these municipal records by women was assuming enormous pro-

"JOHNNY ON THE SPOT." New Phrase Which Has Suddenly Be come Popular.

Current additions to contemporary slang find their way into popularity by odd means. An expression once made and often repeated gets finally a sort of vogue, especially if it seems peculiar. The grammatical genesis of "Johnny on the spot" cannot be traced very clearly, but the phrase certainly origin ated from the longer and less expressive one, "Johnny is always on the spot when wanted." A "Johnny on the spot" is a man or youth who may be relied upon to be at a certain stated place when wanted, and on whose as sured appearance confident expectation may be based. It is not sufficient that an alert and trustworthy individual, to be thought deserving of the name "Johnny on the spot," should restrict his beneficent activity to the matter of being at a certain place when needed. He must, in addition, render such service and attend to such business when there as the occasion may require, and such a "Johnny" must be be on the spot not merely to attend to the business of others, but also to look after his own. Hence an individual who is prompt and farseeing, alive to his own interests, and keenly sensible of means for promoting his own advantage, is a "Johnny on the spot." In the beginning of the council's session there was an interesting wrangle over the approval of the minutes. After this was settled Alderman Desjarding the rules suspended by unanimous consent and offered a resolution that all employes of the city should be citizens of the United States, and as far as possible residents and taxpayers of the possible residents and taxpayers of the out the slate. municipality. All city officials employ-ing labor were instructed to observe the provisions of the resolution. It was adopted.

Alderman Sherman, as chairman of the financial committee, offered the fol-lowing estimate of the year's expenses: Schools, in addition to the one mill fund in hard times to be used in erecting a building in good ones, or giving money for the library board to look at and say they have got it. Marquette is noted all over the state for her handsome public buildings, schools and churches, and in good times she can readily vote in a single year the money to great lake with Presque lise rising into view. There has been some talk that the location is not all that could be desired, and if this is true I do not consider it policy to erect a new building there or to add to the present one.

The park and cemetery appropriation was not recommended by the com-mittee, but left to the discretion of the

This seemed to settle the question of donating any of the money to the library board, and cleared the deck for the attack on the park fund.

OPPOSED THE OUTLAY.

Alderman Desjardins.the first speaker Alderman Desjardins, the first speaker in the opposition, made a labor day oration telling how hard it was for the poor laboring man to buy bread and pay taxes. He thought $4,509$ was too much to spend on parks in hard times, and favored an outlay that was just large enough to protect the park from fire and other injury.

This was not the way it struck Alderman Clark. He looked upon it as a business proposition. Money spent on the parks, he said, would draw resorters to the city, fill the Hotel Superior and society will be well attended to.

The names of the officers are: J. M. Longyear, president; E. W. Towar, vice president; E. W. Allan, treasurer, A. F. Miller, secretary and attorney; supto the city, fill the Hotel Superior and

When the matter of street work was brought up, Alderman Tobin, chairman of the street committee, was asked to give the council an idea of the work contemplated the coming year. In answer he said:

"We intend to finish Ridge between Front and Third streets; improve Lake from Washington south; commence to repair Front street and put it in good condition, but we won't dig it up as Third street was. Then we will do some of the same sort of repairing on Washington."

"Washington."
"What are you going to do about the street car tracks?" from Desjardins.
"I think the committee intends to wait on the president of the street car company in a body, and ask him what he is going to do about them, and while we are there impressing him with our strength and nower we will ask him to walk when we take our families out."

This shot caught the gallery, and the laughter and applause was uproarious.

At this point the appropriations were voted on, in their amended form, and passed. The appropriation for parks and cemeteries is really $3,500, as the commission has already had $1,000 of the new year's appropriation. In addition to what they have already had $2,500 was voted them.

make business for the street railway. The councilmen laughed. He looked upon it as a means of distributing money among the citizens in the near future.

"We're not trying to fill the Hotel Superior at the city's expense," was Desjardins' opening shot as he secured the floor. "God Almighty made Presque Isle as it is and Oimsted, Olmsted & Eliot can't improve upon his Gladstone; John D. Mersereau, Manistrees are: John The names of the trustees are: John Guincy Adams, Negaunee; Prof. R. C. Quincy Adams, Negaunee; Prof. R. C. Bird, Menominee; H. A. Barr, Escanaba; Dr. J. D. Cameron, Iron Mountain; Judge John A. Colwess, Sault St. Marie; J. S. Curry, Ironwood; John Fisher, Crystal Falls; Henry Hoffman, St. Ignace; William Kelly, Norway; J. Q. Look, Sault Ste. Marie; Dr. G. S. Loope, Bessemer; Hon. Richard Mason, Sted & Eliot can't improve upon his Presque Isle as it is and Olmsted, Olmsted & Eliot can't improve upon his work!"

Alderman Blanchard wasn't as caustic as the doctor, but he thought taxes ought to be kept down, and that the parks were a good thing to economize on. Good streets, he thought would draw more tourists.

Sherman thought that the expenditure of a considerable sum of money was absolutely necessary to save the park from the danger of fire, and favored giving the board all it asked for. Twice as much, he said, might be well used.
