THE ROENTGEN RAY.

Of Great Use to Physicians in Medical Research.

A New Epoch in the Diagnosis of Disease—Has Been Reached—Some of the Wonders of the Great Discovery.

An important improvement has been effected by the General Electric company, of Berlin, in the Roentgen apparatus, and especially in the vacuum tube, so that it is possible to observe peculiarities in the interior of the head and throat, and especially the action of the lungs and heart, by direct inspection with the fluorescent screen.

The following were among the results shown: When the head was placed between the tube and the screen the thickness of the scalp was easily visible, the hair not appearing. The light penetrates the cartilages of the nose, which are only visible in slight shadows.

These results demonstrate pretty conclusively, we think, the possibility in the near future of the X rays becoming a powerful aid in diagnosis coupled with the employment of a fluorescent screen. Already it has been fruitful in not only confirming previous methods of diagnosis, but in affording means of ascertaining with some precision certain symptoms which by methods now employed would not be indicated.

A RUN OF MUD. It Enters the Cleveland Lake Mine Workings from the Bottom of the Drained Lake Overhead.

A large quantity of mud broke through the jasper hanging of the tenth room in the sub-level, about ten feet above the first level, at the Cleveland Lake mine Sunday night. The opening in the bottom of the drained lake is about ten feet in diameter.

The water pipe leading from the shaft to the score on the lake bottom was directly above the opening, so that a part of it broke away when the cave-in occurred. The pipe was repaired within a few hours, so that none of the men in the mine lost any time.

Engineer Jopling went underground yesterday and examined the drift where the mud came in. He says the cave-in will not affect any other portion of the mine in the least and that within a week or so the mud can be removed without any trouble.

A LONG SWIM.

Incident in the Life of the Late Gov. Russell, of Massachusetts.

Wrecked Five Miles from Shore and Some College Companions Have a Very Narrow Escape from Drowning.

Chief among the characteristics distinguishing William E. Russell in his early days was indomitable pluck that stamped him very early as a man likely to succeed in anything which he undertook.

In the summer of 1876 he went down to Nantucket to pass a few weeks on the water. He had three friends with him, and the four young men were to sail a sloop that had been floated for the first time that year.

The sea was high and the wind blew sharply, and about five miles from the shore the little sloop was capsized. The wind struck her so that she filled very rapidly and immediately sank.

On shore the fishermen and their families were sitting down to dinner when the accident occurred—all but one. This man's wife had been delayed in the preparation of the noonday meal.

He got into a dory and made for the spot where he had seen the sail, leaving word that others should follow him.

The two young men that held the oar kept aloft but for a few minutes, while the others were battling for the shore. It was evident that the oar would longer support only one, and the elder of the two sang out: "Well, good-by, old man; this oar won't hold us both, and you can have my chance."

When the fishermen reached the vicinity of the accident he found the surviving young man in the water unconscious, with his arm wound tightly around the wooden sweep.

Russell had been swimming exactly an hour and twenty minutes.—Boston Globe.

AN APPALLING PLAGUE. The ravages of the rinderpest in South Africa are said to be more appalling than any cattle plague which has affected the region within living memory.

CHONNY MEETS HIS SPIRIT.

An Episode of Social Intercourse at a Staten Island Picnic Party.

She was from the East side, fair of figure and countenance, with hazel-brown eyes and light-brown hair, shaded with just a tinge of auburn, which was carefully combed up behind, making the contour of her head attractive.

"Mikey, I've found me spirit. Watch me while I git together." He started up the mound at a slow pace. She saw him coming toward her and nodded her head slightly in response to a nod from him.

"Scuse me," said he, with uplifted hat and a short, jerky bow, "but didn't I collide wid you at Newport last summer?" "Dat's how I come ter meet yer," said Chonny, grinning broadly.

"You don't sagoshiate so?" she retorted. "This was a new one on Chonny, and he was slumped for a moment; but his ready wit helped him the next, as he blurted: "Say, Mamie, what is your first name, anyhow?"

"Well, what about Harold?" "—has been coming to see me for quite a long time," she continued, paying no attention to the interruption, "and last night—" "Well?"

"Last night he proposed that we two should run away together, and— and be married." The old gentleman frowned.

"I refused," she replied, promptly and proudly. "I refused absolutely and told him that he must go and ask you for my hand properly if he wished me to be his wife."

The old gentleman still frowned. "I recalled all that you said about our aristocratic ancestry," she went on, "and insisted—" "Um—yes," interrupted the old gentleman, musingly, "that's all very pretty and very creditable, but far from businesslike. It seems to me you might have given your poor old father the best of it once, and saved him the cost of a wedding when times are so hard.

Most Nutritious Food. Taking all the ordinary food stuffs, the one which would best fulfill the requirements of life and strength would be substantial slices of whole meal wheat bread, eaten with the crust and spread with good butter.

To one quart of Graham flour use a teaspoonful of salt and half a cup of molasses. Stir in one pint of sweet milk and finally a scant teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in a tablespoonful of boiling water. Put the bread in a covered brown bread tin, and steam it for four hours. This is a delicious bread to serve with milk and berries for a simple copious tea. The water must not stop boiling around it while it is cooking.—N. Y. Tribune.
