"Of course, the expenses of maintaining the schools must be provided for in some way. A curious tale is to be gathered from two letters published in the Forest and Stream. On one occasion P. Byron Wood, M. D., wrote that James Frick, of Baltimore, captured a wild swan, which was prepared for the table. An iron arrow head, whose shank had been notched deeply so that it would hold, was found in the breast beneath the pectoral muscle, lying against and buried in the breast bone to the depth head was covered with a membranous tissue, as are all old missiles found inches long. Another letter was from E. W. Nelson, of Tucson, Ariz., which said, in part: "During my explorations in Alaska procured several quivers of irontipped arrows, notched as the original in your cut of the arrow head found in the Chesapeake Bay swan, and the form being unusual. The region where I setured my arrows was probably the same where the swan was shot, the above Fort Yukon. They were made by the Tutchone-Kutchin tribe of the Chippeway Indians. The student recommenced his demonstration, and under this temperate admonition he discovered his mistakes and acknowledged that he was wrong.

LAST IMPERIAL VICTORY.

Napoleon's Battle Against the Allies at

Dresden. On the 25th, as he passed Bautzen, he learned that Oudinot had been defeated at Luckau; but he gave no heed to the report, and next day he reached Dresden at nine in the morning. An hour later the guard came up, having per-formed the almost incredible feat of marching 76 miles in three days. Vandamme, with 40,000 men, had reached Pirna, a few miles above the city, and St. Cyr was drawing in behind the temporary fortifications of Dresden. The head of Napoleon's defensive line was to be kept at any cost. The enemy, too, was at hand, but they had no plan. In a council of war held by them the same morning there was a protracted debate, and finally Moreau's advice to advance in seven columns was taken. He refused "to fight against his country," but explained that the French could never be conquered in mass, and that if one assailing column were crushed the rest could still push on.

This long deliberation cost the allies their opportunity, for at four in the afternoon, when they attacked, the mass of the French army had crossed the Elbe and completed the garrison of the city. For two hours the fighting was flerce and stubborn; from three different sides, Russians, Austrians and Prussians, each made substantial gains; at six Napoleon determined to throw in his guard. With fine promptness Mortier, with two divisions of the young guard, sallied forth against the Russlans, and, fighting until midnight, drove them beyond the hamlet of Striefen. St. Cyr dislodged the Prussians and pushed them to Strehla, while Ney, with two divisions of the young guard, threw a portion of the Austrians into Plauen, and Murat, with two divisions of infantry and Latour-Maubourg's cavalry, cleared the suburb Friedrichstadt of the rest. Napoleon, alert and ubiquitous, then made his usual round, and knew when he retired to rest that with 70,000 men or boys he had repulsed 150,000 of his foe. His inspiriting personal work might be calculated as worth 80,000 of his opponents' best men. That night both Marmont and Victor, with their corps, entered the city; and Vandamme in the early dawn began to bombard Pirna, thus drawing away forces from the allies to hold that outpost.

The morning of the 27th opened in a tempest of wind and rain, a fact which is considered as having been most advantageous to the French, since it enabled them to hide their movements, and interfered with their enemy's guns and ammunition. In any case, the second day's fighting was more disastrous to the allies than the first. At six both sides were arrayed. On the French right Victor and Latour-Maubourg; then Marmont; then the old guard, and goose. Buried in its breast was an guard; next St. Cyr, with Mortler on under Klenau, who were coming up from Tharandt in the blinding storm, borhood of Point Barrow make a and were overdue. All the games scheduled for Saturday had to be postponed on account of rain, and Sunday morning the grounds were still too wet for playing. In the afternoon there were two games Ishpeming and Houghton crossed bats, and Escanaba and Baraga were pitted against each other. The contest be-ween Ishpeming and Houghton resulted in a victory for the former by a score of 11 to 14. Escanaba was in

The committee having in charge the establishment of the Finnish theological seminary at Hancock has made arrangements to open a temporary school in Stringer & Hall's stone building in West Hancock, probably tomorrow morning. The building is being refitted and the school furniture has arrived. Several students are already at Hancock and a number of applications have been received from a distance, so the outlook for a successful start is very flattering. Rev. J. K. A New Lutheran Church.

The plans and specifications for the new Finnish Apostolic Lutheran church will soon be completed, when the contract will be let and the work of building the church rushed to a rapid com-pletion. The cost of the new edifice is placed at about $4,000, of which amount $1,200 has already been collected. The committee in charge will soon ask their brethren throughout the county, as well as those of other religious beliefs, to aid them in their worthy effort.

Pleased With the School.

Stanley W. Turner, auditor general of this state, accompanied by his wife, arrived in Houghton Friday. Mr. Turner is on an inspection tour of the various state institutions. SUMMER COSMETICS.

Suggestions Regarding the Treatment of the Skin.

The word "cosmetic" originally was applied to a healing lotion that restored the skin to a wholesome condition, and did not refer to a preparation that covered up natural deficiencies of the complexion. It is in the old sense that the term is used in this article. Nothing that improves the skin by covering up defects can long be used without detriment to the skin. The pores, which exercise a most important function in The barge Samuel Marshall is unload- throwing off impurities of the body, ing a cargo of coal at Hennes' dock, must not be clogged, but rather stimulated, so that they may be kept in Mr. H. The Guinea That Was Worn on a Duchess

A long time ago, when Bristol was growing rich with the profits of the West India trade, of which it had almost a monopoly, a stranger took lodging there, toward the close of the year, and used to visit the coffee-room of that famous old inn, "The Bush." He would arrive about noon every day and calling for a six-penny glass of brandy-andwater, sit over it until he had carefully gone through the London paper of the preceding evening. The landlord of "The Bush," seeing how anxious he was to read the London paper, made it understood that while he had it "in hand" no one else was to expect it. Rather "seedy" garments, a lean body, a confirmed stoop and a limited expenditure of a daily six-pence, with nothing for the waiter, clearly showed the newspaper reader to be a "poor gentleman" and by that title he was soon distinguished. On Christmas eve honest John Weeks, the landlord, anxious that the decayed gentleman should have one good meal at least in "The Bush," delicately intimated to him that on the following day he kept open table, to which he would be welcome, free of cost.

Punctually at one o'clock the next day the stranger appeared at "The Bush" in his usual seedy attire. He partook of the good dinner with the apparent relish of a man to whom such a feast is a novelty and did due justice to the "stunning ale" for which, far and near, "The Bush" was famous. The dinner was concluded. The decayed gentleman remained the last and read the London paper in the kitchen. When he prepared to leave, the landlord respectfully helped him to put on his overcoat and at the same time slipped a guinea into his hand. The poor gentleman pocketed the coin with a smile and a sigh.

He came no more to "The Bush." But shortly after "The Bush" itself was advertised for sale, with all its valuable good will and appurtehances, and poor Weeks was trembling at the thought of being turned out by a new owner, when he received a new owner, when he received a missive from Coutts & Co. the London bankers, to the effect that if he wished to acquire the house he occupied he might draw upon them for the purchase money. Hastening to London to thank his benefactors and convince himself of the genuineness of the offer, he was introduced to Mr. Thomas Coutts, the head of the great banking firm, who proved to be no other than the "poor gentleman." "The Bush guinea," it is said, was afterward worn, mounted in a bracelet, by the duchess of St. Albans, the widow of Mr. Coutts.—Household Words.

NOT A SICK DAY For Over Thirty Years! RESULT OF USING AYER'S PILLS

"Ayer's Cathartic Pills for over thirty years have kept me in good health, never having had a sick day in all that time. Before I was twenty I suffered almost continually-as a result of constipation-from dyspepsia, headaches, neuralgia, or boils and other eruptive diseases. When I became convinced that nine-tenths of my troubles were caused by constipation, I began the use of Ayer's Pills, with the most satisfactory results, never having a single attack that did not readily yield to this remedy. My wife, who had been an invalid for years, also began to use Ayer's Pills, and her health was quickly restored. With my children I had noticed that nearly all their ailments were preceded by constipation, and I soon had the pleasure of knowing that with children as with parents, Ayer's Pills, if taken in season, avert all danger of sickness."-H. They issued $50,000,000 of bonds; then $50,000,000 more; then the administration entered into what is known as the Rothschild contract. I call attention to the fact that while that contract was made by a Democratic administration, it was supported by all the leading members of the Republican party More than that the Republican party. in convention assembled, did not denounce or criticise the Rothschild contract. Why? Because the men who wrought the Republican platform have always justified the president's contract. The Republican party does not protest against this kind of an administration of the treasury department.

The Democratic party does protest against it, and what is the result? Every man who has been profiting out of the extremities of the government and using the necessities of the government for public plunder, has left our party to find a congenial party elsewhere."

A few weeks ago it looked as though a part of the ore that was covered by lake freight contracts would go over to ernment in the world. Let us keep next season and in some cases arrangements had been made to carry out that plan, but leading shippers are now quite confident that they will be able to give the vessels all the ore for which contracts were made. This will, to some extent, have a good effect on the freight market, as there will not be as many boats seeking wild cargoes. It is the opinion of most leading vessel men and shippers on the lakes that we have passed over the center as regards the depression in business generally throughout the country. Giving Gracefully.

There is on human law which compels a man to grant a favor to another, or to make a gift of either money or work, unless he wishes to do so. But if he does give to charity or to an individual.

let it be gracefully. How many members of church and charitable committees will attest mournfully to the fact that there are some people whom they dread to ask for money! They will give it, of course, but "grudgingly and of necessity." There are others who, when asked to donate something to help on a worthy enterprise, respond: "Certainly!" in a way that makes the gift precious. It is the spirit in which it is granted that makes it acceptable to God and man. The poor widow must have given her mite willingly, or the Lord, who knows the heart, would not have commended her.—Harper's Bazar.

"I hardly think," said the lawyer, "that you can get a separation from your wife on account of her making a practice of throwing at the dog."

Between Edgeware road and Praed street the light got obviously worse. The eyes of the three occupants of the carriage were by a common instinct raised toward it. "I think it is going out," whispered Jack.

He was right. As they left Praed street the gas suddenly went out entirely. "Shall we get into another carriage?" said Jack, who had put his head out of the window and ascertained that the defect in the gas supply, whatever for staying here all the time, as he it was, was confined solely to their

When the train emerged into the light May's cheeks were more flushed than ever, her hair seemed to have lost something of its usual careful arrangement.

"I believe," whispered Jack, "the distance between this and the next station is further than that between any two on the line. Let us jump into the next carriage before it is too late. It is all very well for you to protest that the dark doesn't frighten you, but I am sure it does."

"Nonsense!" was the answering whisper, and again the train plunged into the tunnel, which this time seemed almost interminable.

When at last they did come out into the comparative brilliancy of the station lights May's cheeks were glowing a rosy red; her hat had tilted slightly, to one side, her whole appearance showed the excitement under which she had obviously been laboring.

"I told you so," said Jack, as they got out at Gloucester road and looked about for an Earl's court train; "your nerves were not equal to it. However, there is no more underground now; it is an open-air run to Earl's court." Arrived there, May and Jack got out and walked slowly up the steps. En route he remarked on the state of her hair and hat. "But it was not my fault, Jack," protested the girl; "why couldn't you wait? I'll never let you do such a thing again." "Do what?" said Jack, astonished. "Why, kiss me, of course, and with another man in the carriage, too. I was in terror all the time."

"But I never kissed you at all," protested her lover. "Good gracious! Then it was that wretch opposite. I knew he was a horrid-" She broke off abruptly. "After all, Jack," she said, with an air of resignation, "it doesn't matter, for I thought of you, and you only, all the time!"-Pick-Me-Up.

The Lovable Woman.

Very lovely and lovable is the woman who has cultivated a disposition angelic enough to see the good and not the evil side of human nature, who can be severe with her own failings, and excuse the faults of others. We are told that she is a dull, uninteresting creature, and if wo take the trouble to look into the matter we find that she does not laugh at her neighbor's pet weakness; she does not enjoy hitting out right and left at the world at large, and is always ready with a plea for unseen and unsuspected reasons, which, if they could be revealed, would go a long way towards modifying harsh judgment. Our lovable woman may not be witty, she may be a little prosy; but she it is to whom we go when in trouble for sympathy, and confide with a feeling that our secret will not be torn to shreds as soon as our back is turned .- Detroit Free

Immediately after the fire Mr. Leopold retired from active business pursuits and lived a life full of satisfaction to his friends and to himself until death called him to perfect rest. Mr. Leopold, as was said before, was one of the pioneers in the Lake Su-perior trade and had a home in that country when few white men in-habited that region, and as a result that region, and as a result passed through many hardships, which supplied him with a fund of recollections with which he was fond of entertaining his friends. He was of a noble and genial disposition, a liberal minded and broad gauged man, and his friends were legion. He was always a public spirited citizen, but resolutely refused to accept public positions although Michigan Land and Iron

A SEA TRAGEDY.

The Startling Story of the American Barkentine Herbert Fuller.

The sea has ever been a favorable scene with romancers for desperate conspiracies and tragic crimes. This has been due to the seclusion which it offers and also, perhaps, to the traditions of piracy which hang about it. There was time when the line of demarcation between the pirate and the peaceful He Proved Too Strong a Wrestler for mariner was not very sharply drawn, and the late Prentice Mulford, who grew up in a seafaring town and had even served on shipboard before the mast, once wrote an article maintain-ing that the relations which still pre-vall between the master and the crew f a ship are a relic of the days when all seafaring men were practically pirates. Possibly a juster explanation of the harsh treatment to which sailors are subjected would be found in the arbitrary authority which law and custom necessarily bestow upon a shipmaster, for it is almost an axiom that unrestricted power always leads to tyranny—that nothing but lack of authority prevents every man from misusing
it. At all events, the reader of a sea novel expects to meet with various sorts of mysteriously dark deeds, while the reader of the marine columns of a newspaper is regaled with plenty of actual crime, albeit of a generally com-monplace and uninteresting character. The story of the American barkentine Herbert Fuller, which the newspa-pers have been recently telling, however, s as tragically startling as any ever related by Stevenson or Russell. The officers of a vessel have often enough officers of a vessel have often enough been murdered by the crew, who then seized the vessel, and it has sometimes happened that some officer has joined the crew in mutinying against the captain as in the case of the Bounty. What adds especially to the sensational features of the crime on board the Herbert Fuller is that it does not seem to be known positively who killed the captain, his wife and the second mate. The evidence against the first mate appears to rest on his supposed unwillingness to make port after the discovery of the murders. He is even suspected of having intended to turn the vessel over to the Cuban insurgents. What must have been the astonishment of the pilot on going on board to find the vessel in charge of the colored steward and a Harvard sophomore passenger, the mate in irons, and the bodies of the three murdered persons towing astern in the small boat! That last touch is characteristic. The survivors did not dare throw the bodies overboard because they were needed as evidence Leave Marquette at 8 a. m. for Munising. > Undoubtedly the Herbert Full tragedy will form the plot of many future sea novel. But no romand could have afforded to invent so extraordinary a tale. He would have been laughed at on account of the inherent improbability of his incidents. The murders might have passed muster, by the Harvard student and the colored steward in their extraordinary role would have been pronounced simply impossible.—Buffalo Courier.

A MOSQUITO INVADES ENGLAND. New Jersey's Insect's Revenge for Viels tion of Monroe Dettring

The harrowing news comes from London that a mosquito has been taken alive in Hertfordshire. A gentleman living at Barley, Royston, writes to a London paper that on a recent London paper that on a recent evening he encountered the ferocious beast in his bedchamber.

An Englishman is always brave, and it seems almost superfluous to add that the man of Barley grappled with the creature single-handed, nor stayed his hand until it was under subjection. We sometimes read of such feats of derring doe even in these degenerated days.

Next to vindicating his personal bravery, an Englishman's first duty is to write to his newspaper and tell about it. To this admirable national trait the readers of the Sunday Herald are indebted for the particulars herein set forth. The man of Barley had traveled in far countries. Among other places he had visited the famous city of New Jersey, and in the transmississippian capital had met and coped with the mosquito in its lair. mosquito in its lair.

Thus he is able to identify his quarry and lay before the British public a harrowing picture of the animal's dis-harrowing picture of the animal's distinguishing traits.

"The specimen caught," he writes, "has every characteristic of the foreign mosquito, especially the New Jersey variety. I believe they have been brought to England with timber, for in New Jersey the logs of timber, which are usually carried down the rivers, have on them mosquito eggs pathered from the surface of the way ter, where they breed, and so in this manner are transported to Europe, where the sunshine hatches them, and they fly away."

hey fly away." It now remains only to unite the English people as one man against the invader. Hence this suggestion:

"Let every person carefully examine his bedroom window in the morning and kill them, as by so doing they would be prevented laying their eggs and preeding. Now is the time to act to revent them spreading. They may tasily be known by their resemblance to gnate, but having a long trunk of probosels, and by making a humming noise when approaching the face of hands of a person."

Harris in the Match Saturday.

The rain Saturday afternoon prevented the wrestling match for $100 a wrestler of the upper peninsula, and Tony Harris of Lake Linden, from takponed until 8:30 in the evening, when afternoon. the contestants met at the Ishpeming Opera House.

The sport began with a few bouts be-Rowett and Harris were called to the manner. The money he wins wrestling he devotes to the support of his family.

Before starting the match the rules by which it was to be governed were read and agreed to by the contestants. The rules are the same as those used by the Cornish wrestlers of England. The selection of sticklers and a timekeeper was next in order. Harris named Miley Doyle of Negaunee as his choice and Rowett selected John Berryman of Ishpeming as his stickler. The spectators were then called on to select the third stickler. The names of several of those present were suggested, but none of them could be induced to serve. Finally the two sticklers chosen tossed for choice of the third man. Doyle won the toss and selected Ted Gaffney of Negaunee, The latter did not want to act but after considerable urging he consented. D. D. Randall of Ishpeming was selected as timekeeepr. Time was called at 9:15, and both of the wrestlers promptly stepped to the center of the ring. Rowett immediately reached for the collar of Harris' jacket and the men clinched. Rowett got his favorite crook, with which he threw Dwyer and Stevens here during the Sons of St. George tournament, and gave Harris a fairly good fall. Harris barely touched the carpet with three points down, but in the opinion of the sticklers the fall was in accordance with the rules and Rowett was credited with the fall.

In the second bout Harris came up more cautionsly. Rowett again attempted the hitch he had so easly obtained in the first bout, but Harris settled down to the walking match, so common in this style of wrestling. Each held the other off at arms length for fully five minutes. Both were attempt to get the crook on Rowett and was enthusiastically cheered. The first attempt was not a success but within a few seconds both clinched and went to the carpet, Harris underneath, but landing on his side.

In the third bout Rowett rushed at Harris, again attempting to get his favorite crook. Both clinched and fell, with Harris on top. Rowett made a pretty turn and landed face downward. The fourth bout was a repetition of the third. Both clinched and Rowett again went first to the floor.

In the fifth bout both reached for the jacket at the shoulder. A quick clinch followed. Rowett again getting his favorite hold. Harris was first to the floor but avoided a fall by a quick turn as he came down. The sixth and last hitch was the prettiest of the contest. Both took the collar grip, each holding the other off for some time. Rowett made a strong attempt to clinch but by John C. Rule and his son a pretty play of Harris' he was again thrown off. The spectators applauded the wrestlers and shouts of "pretty play," and other favorite expressions of the wrestling cranks could be heard from all parts of the house. Rowett soon made another attempt to close in on Harriss but was kept back by the latter's strong arms and they both settled down to another walk-around with collar holds. Finally they both clinched and Harris went down for the last time. It took the sticklers several minutes to decide whether or not Rowett was entitled to the fall. The stickler who stood nearest the wrestlers and on the side where Harris fell maintained that he turned on his right side when within five or six inches of the carpet The other two sticklers did not see it that way. They felt sure that the fall was a good one and they ren-dered their decision accordingly, declaring Rowett the winner of the

There appeared to be some dissatis-faction over the result of this fall, but Harris and his backers expressed their approval of the decision. "Sonny" Dwyer stepped to the front and addressed the gathering. He said that Rowett was entitled to the match, as he believed he had won it fairly. "The best man must win in all cases," said he, "provided the judges are fair, and I believe they have done honest work n this match.

The crowd then demanded an exhibition in catch-as-catch-can wrestling between Dwyer and James Smith of the copper country. The latter stated that he was no match for Dwyer but he would do the best he could against the professor. The exhibition was a pretty one. Dwyer stood on his head several times and also put himself in many other peculiar positions, giving Smith an opportunity to put him on his back, but the latter failed to do it. Smith is a fire wrestler but Dwyer was too much for him. This was considered the best part of the entertainment. Before leaving the stage Rowett challenged any Cornish wrestler in the world of his weight for $500 a side. Dwyer announced his willingness to meet any man in the world catch-ascatch-can or Græco-Roman for $500 or

$1,000 a side. In speaking of Harris' defeat Dwyer said that he did not do as good work as in excellent condition and he does not lay his defeat to lack of proper training, as he and Dwyer have wrestled every day since the tournament here last month. Harris is but twenty-two years of age. While he is two or three side and gate receipts between John pounds heavier than Rowett he is not Rowett of Ironwood, champion Cornish as strong. He promises to develop into a fine wrestler, as he is well posted on the hitches and is also one of the most active wrestlers ever seen here. LABOR DAY.

It Will Be Generally Observed by the Workingmen of Ishpeming.

Today will be quite generally observed as a holiday in Ishpeming. Very few of the men employed at the mines will go out to work. This is the first time Labor Day has been observed here, but in the future it will be formally observed every year. The banks will be closed all day and some of the other houses may close this afternoon in order that their clerks may take a half day off. The barbers of the city will close their shops at noon.

The parade by the Mine Workers' union will take place this morning at 9:30 o'clock. There will be two bands in the procession and it is expected that there will be a large turnout of the members. This afternoon, commencing at 1 o'clock, the Cornish wrestlers will compete for $65, divided in four prizes. Some good wrestling will be done today, as the contestants have all trained for the event. The admission will be ten cents.

Pulling Big Trains.

The Lake Superior & Ishpeming Rail way company is now pulling larger trains of ore over its line than have ever before been taken from the mines at Ishpeming or Negaunee. Trains of guarded against it. Both men then settled down to the walking match, so means a haulage of 1,800 tons to a train. The engines get over the entire line with this number of cars, with the cautious, each apparently waiting for the other to attempt to secure a hold.

GATES OF PARADISE.

Made by the Crowds at Wedding.

There was a crowd about the long stretch of striped awning that ran from the church door across the sidewalk to the curb. It was a good-natured crowd. Sometimes a little facetious, but, like the average crowd that attends free shows, fairly tolerant. There were more women than men and a good many little girls. While they waited they chatted glibly together, an occasional voice rising shrilly over the general NICHOLS & DUHAIME Try our "Bema-tite" and "Demurmurs. Some things they said were fairly humorous, and most of the remarks took the form of absurd suggestions and explanations. What they said would have clogged a phonograph in short order, but out of the running fire of harmless raillery these shots were

Regarding the advance in salaries he

"We did raise the salaries, but we only gave the teachers back the amount they were reduced two years ago. We are not spending as much money as we ought to on our schools. We have more scholars under every teacher than we should, and we have not enough room. We have felt obliged to economize so much that we have not done as well by the property as we should. I mean by that that we have not spent the amount on improvements that we would feel we ought to if the property was our own individually to keep it up. We have felt we couldn't do this without making taxes too heavy. "Still under these conditions, low salaries and lack of room, our schools have reached a high degree of efficiency. We have good schools, and we are not afraid to compare them with any on the upper peninsula, neither are we afraid to compare our teachers or superintendent."
