Was she not the idol of them all? But the moment that she looked into his eyes, her heart awoke and so she learned what love was. Night after night she danced, each time more wonderfully than the last, Ah! how they loved her, adored her. But she heard no longer their shouts of praise, she cared not for the lights, the music. She danced but for his eyes, his love. Alas, Chonita! The days passed quickly-ah, so Disguised as his servant, her lovely face darkened with dyes, her beautiful hair cut short, through all the hard times that came she followed him. Her little feet that had danced so merrily rested in the stirrups night and day. Many a time her life stood between him. Many a time her hand, once covered with jewels, showered upon her by the passionate sons of her native land, turned aside their flashing swords lest they should harm him.

she would tell him. Then he would know how she loved him. Then she would be happy. Wait, wait! Alas! alas! Chonita!

Already, though she knew it not, he had forgotten her and the days gone by. Already there had crept into his heart a love more pure, more holy. A maiden of his own land had won him with her gentle ways. A maiden whom. when Texas should be free, he would call his wife. A maiden with eyes as blue as his own, whose feet had always trodden sedately. He had never really loved before; ah, no! Chonita watched him jealously. In the brief times of peace, when the war for a little space lulled its fury, she would hold his horse for hours before the little house covered with vines. patient, though her eyes burned. All for love's sweet sake. Ah, Chonita, love is cruel! Many have died of it for thee! At last she saw the maid. Saw him linger and kiss her at the door, while the silver moonlight flooded the garden. The days were never the same after that. The noisy camp wearied her. Ah, she longed for the old city! She longed for the lights, the music, the applause, the roses showered at her feet. She longed to dance fiercely, madly; to dance till her brain should reel, and she should fall exhausted, unconscious. Patience, Chonita; soon comes the end.

There came a night of horror. At last the walls were down, and over the fallen stones poured the invaders. Into the thickest of the fight she followed him. Many times she threw herself between him and the flashing death. Many a time her hand was stained with the blood of those who had kissed it. Many a time she forced back the hungry steel that threatened him. Weary and wounded, all, all for him, hoping that shot or shell would still her aching heart. Chonita, Chonita! who would know thee now? Suddenly she saw in the hands of her countrymen the maid he had kissed. He could not reach her, and they were dragging her away. Chonita's eyes glowed. If she were gone the old love would return. She would kneel at his feet, show him her wounds; ah, surely then he would remember. The devil whispered in her heart, and for a moment she listened willingly. Then she saw the anguish on the face she loved, and with one last despairing look, she sprang forward. Fiercely she fought them back, freeing their captive. She dragged her to a place of shelter, and standing before her defended her with the fury of a lioness antil help could Dueling in Hungary.

The criminal court at Buda-Pesth had to deal with a case of offense against the dueling laws on the part of two young engineers, Ignaz Reiner and Leo Lichtblau, who were each senteneed to three days' imprisonment, allowance being made for "extenuating circumstances." The couple had come to blows, and, following the fashion of the times, they determined to wipe out the insult in blood. Reiner sent Lichtblau a challenge and the seconds arranged for a duel with pistols on the most stringent terms. The affair did broke the dark storm of war. Awakened not come off, however, for Lichtblau waited a couple of hours before the appointed time on the police superintendent of eighth division and gave him notice of the impending duel. The superintendent calmly listened to the 'brave champion's" detailed report, and then quietly observed that he already knew all about the matter. "How is that?" "Why, simply because your opponent was here only an hour ago with a similar statement."-Pesti Naplo.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.-Wheat was wild and exciting today within a range of 21/c., closing %c. from the top and 1%c. higher than yesterday. The strength all came from foreign advices. Early cables quoted no change at Liverpool, notwithstanding the decline here yesterday, and was taken as indicating strength. New York reported foreigners good buyers, and there was considerable buying here for the other side. San Francisco reported prices up 2 cents and an active demand for cash. These reports, with a scramble by shorts and good buying by New York and St. Louis, were responsible for the bulge. The market receded toward the close on realizing sales. Corn was quiet, within a 4c. range closing at the top and %c. higher than

Constipation makes trouble all along the line—puts the liver out of order, is bad for the kidneys—bad for the stomach. It holds in the body poisonous matter, and because it cannot go any place else, it gets into the blood. The blood carries it all over the system. That makes sluggishness, lassitude, bad breath and foul taste in the mouth, fills the stomach with gas and causes windy belching, stops digestion in the stomach, causes sour stomach, heartburn and flatulence. It makes pimples and blotches and causes sick and bilious headaches. Nine-tenths of all human ailments are due to this one seemingly trivial cause. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They really cure it. No-body becomes a slave to the use of the "Pellets." They cause no griping and are as mild as they are efficient. At any drug store. Those interested in athletics in New Orleans will recognize the One of the best paying significance of the remarks when they bring to mind the great hammer thrower and weight tosser of the Southern Athletic club, who for the past few years has held the record for the south. John P. Sullivan, who is a cadet at West Point, is no little boy ,although and weighs a little over 200 pounds. Every muscle in his brawny body is trained to great development, and his feat of hurling a 16-pound hammer 110 feet stamps him as one of the strong men of the country. Cadet Sullivan has also had several years' training in the all situations. Moreover, he is a very good boxer. Take it all in all, Cadet Sullivan bids fair to make a most efficient army officer; one who can fight when necessity comes. Meanwhile his club mates in New Orleans are waiting to hear of the casualties when some of the swell-headed upper class men attempt to haze "little Johnnie."

It is, perhaps, needless to add that in the list of this year's plebes who have name of Cadet Sullivan will not appear. There are reasons,-New Orleans Dem-

JAFAN'S MONOPOLY. All the World Must Now Go to Her for Camphor,

One of the unconsidered trifles that the mikado has picked up as the result of the Chinese war is the monopoly of camphor, says the Indian Agriculturist. That drug is produced only in Japan and Formosa, and, though a variety known as Borneo camphor is obtained from Borneo and Sumatra, it cannot compete with the product of the evergreen laurel of the eastern Asiatic islands. Inasmuch as camphor, apart from its many and varied therapeutic uses, is an essential ingredient in the composition of nearly all the new explosives, the demand for it is very large.

The Japanese are well aware of the valuable monopoly they have blundered upon rather than sought and have already begun to limit the export by imposing duties. As a natural consequence, the price of the drug has risen rapidly since the war came to an end and bids fair to rise higher. Happily, the commercial instinct of the Japanese statesmen is as sound as their political instinct, and they are not likely to abuse the monopoly they have acquired by forcing the price up to prohibitive rates.

The chief concern of the Japanese government will, for some time to come, be the finding of money to pay for the ships and munitions of war which will secure the mikado in the possession of the spoils he has already won. Properly handled and wisely administered, camphor should prove a valuable source of revenue and contribute a handsome quota toward the cost of the military preparations which pertain to the peace of the dragon kingdom.

I lived in the country and when one has started from the ground he never quite forgets his starting point. I might say he never ceases to love it. Now, here," and the large portly person picked up a bottle of some fashionable scent, "this is an odor that SORSEN BROS, reminds me always of crowded ballrooms, of women in satin and laces, of men in full dress, of music and dancing and wine and long hours into the night and heaviness and sorrow in the morning. Do you think I want to get a whiff of that sort of thing every time I take out my handkerchief? Here's another. This reminds me of theaters, on the stage and off; the glare of lights, the temptations, the joys, the triumphs, the defeats, the late suppers, the bitterness, a man would rather forget and a woman can never forget. Not any perfumed reminders of that kind, if you please.

"There are others that are equally undesirable, and there are others that are so artificial that they remind me of nothing, and they are, if anything, worse than the others.

"Now, this," and the large and portly person picked up a bottle, "is what I use, because it is redolent of the farm. Of late years Dr. Toner's subject has been the life of Washington, and aided by a salpocket, he has gathered a mass of material in the shape of original letters and documents, books, newspapers and periodicals, besides copies where the originals themselves could not be obtained, which are certain to be of students of the future. All that he has gathered together thus, Dr. Toner has steadily poured into the Congresssional library, forming what is known as "The Toner Collection." Whenever it was suggested to him that he should write a life of Washington or even compile his market price. letters, Dr. Toner would shake his head emphatically, saying: "Oh, no. Birds seem singin' all the way Goin' home to Mary; Roses on a winter's day, Goin' home to Mary. I can hear my heart keep time With the bells that sweetly chime; Happiest man that lives when I'm Goin' home to Mary!

Far away her smile I see, Goin' home to Mary; How it lights the way fer me, Goin' home to Mary! There, in groves where nests the dove, In a cot with blooms above, Still she lights the lamps o' love— Goin' home to Mary!

Down the walk come patterin' feet, Goin' home to Mary; Children's arms an' kisses sweet, Goin' home to Mary. Rob comes climbin' to my knee, Katie wants a kiss from me; "Loves me all the world," says she,

Home with love an' Mary! Shine the lights for evermore, Goin' home to Mary! Love still leads me to the door, Goin' home to Mary. For her sake my toll is sweet, For her sake my heart'll beat

THE TRAIN CANNOT WAIT

She is just 18, with golden hair and gray eyes-large gray eyes that laugh just as well as her red lips; her figure, though a little frail, makes one think what a pretty woman she will be soon. Her hands and arms are those of a child-is she not still a child? Clara left school but a fortnight ago. She is the beloved and only daughter of a rich miller in the neighborhood of Avesnes. Nothing is more poetical than a mill in the country. It does not disturb the silence of the air with its monotonous tic-tae; on the contrary, its noise, strong and regular, is like an accompaniment to the many other noises of the wind, and of the trees, and of the birds. Clara was charmed with it all.

During a few days after her arrival the whole house was npset, making and receiving calls, dinner parties, dancing parties, lawn tennis; the days were not long enough to hold their pleasures. Then all was quiet at the mill.

In the orchard, which was large, the walks were spread over with sand, and the trees, loaded with fruit, afforded a beautiful shady grove. This was Clara's favorite nook; here she would go and read poetry. She had been given the works of Lamartine, beautifully bound. Now, Lamartine, is a very tender poet, and Clara was still in her teens, and this was summer, and the fragrance of the flowers and the murdream of things she had never dreamed dusty papers. "What! Love at first sight! I do think Clara is pretty, but-plenty of time-plenty of time!"

Everybody seemed happy at the mill; even Clara, who listened with pleasure to the compliments of her cousin whenever he chanced to be with her, and she thought him so witty that she quite forgot to show her own wit before him.

In the meantime she was hoping that he would propose before going back to Paris, but the last day dawned, and he had not said the least word about mar- vass, in which case their dates will be riage. She hoped till the last hour; promptly made. then, till the last minute.

Our Kitchen ..

No kitchen is kept cleaner than the premises devoted to the manufacture of NONE SUCH Mince Meat. No housewife can be more fastidious in the matter of preparing food than we are in the selection and preparation of the materials of which it is made. The cleaning of the currants (for one thing) is more thoroughly done by means of perfected appliances, than it would be possible to do it by hand.

Its cleanliness, purity, wholesomeness and deliciousness are good reasons for using NONE SUCH Mince Meat. The best reason is its saving of time, of hard work, of money. A ten cent package affords you two large pies, without trouble to you beyond the making of the crust. Makes just as good fruit cake and fruit pudding as it does mince pie. Sold everywhere. Be sure and get the genuine.

Mr. Kaufman and his bride were, of composedly, but with evident pleasure, received and graciously responded to the warm congratulations of their friends. The guests were received as they arrived by Mrs. Samuel Kaufman and Mrs. Breitung, and the arrangements were so admirably made by these ladies that an infection of happiness prevaded the hall from the start, all enjoying themselves with a freedom from stiffness and formality that added much to the pleasure of the evening. Held His Liberty Dear.

Cornelius Sullivan, on trial for highway robbery, made an almost successful bolt for liberty yesterday noon. Sullivan was aware that his guilt was pinned too closely on him to hope for an acquittal, and the sheriffs and other attaches of the court have been suspicious of the man and kept an eye on him pretty close.

He had planned to make a dash for freedom while the court room was in some confusion at the time the jury was being sent out. His scheme was to make a bolt and jump through a they actquickly and most thoroughly. Such are the famous little pills known as De-Witt's Little Early Risers. Small in size, great in results. The jury went out just at noon, and the court adjourned for dinner. Depnty Sheriff Sam Bennett took Sullivan and started for the jail with him. The prisoner came along quietly and Bennett was walking by his side. When they started up the steps at the jail the turnkey was on the inside. They had almost reached the top when Sullivan leaped backward to the ground, turned and ran right for the fence. He jumped it without even touching a hand. Bennett was only a few feet behind. He got over the fence in pretty nearly as good style as the escaped prisoner and

RAN THROUGH THE STREETS.

It was a lively race. The prisoner started up Fourth street with Bennett in hot pursuit. At Fisher he turned and ran east to Third. He ran south on Third and turned off at Superior. There were knots of men standing on several corners as they passed by and the sheriff yelled for them to join in pursuit. They responded freely, but the pace was too hot for them and they all dropped out.

After a run of six blocks the prisoner fell exhausted in front of Babcock's grocery store, and the sheriff caught up with him, and hauled him back to
