cupation of demagogues. Properly permit the frame to be folded in book speaking this is disturbance, not agitation. Agitation and disturbance are not synonymous terms, though commonly so employed by those who are not careful in the use of words. Disturbance cannot be permitted. Agitation cannot be forbidden.

Agitation, as relating to a question or project, is defined as the state of being kept before the public mind by be- hinges. The tops and bottoms of these ing discussed at meetings, in the public strips will be, of course, turned under press or any other way. As relating so as to avoid raw edges. To finish the schoolhouse, so the children carried to one's own mind it is defined as the backs glue over the cards pieces of their luncheons and ate them, picnic state of being revolved in the mind so as to be thoroughly comprehended. Surely there can come no harm from he thorough comprehension of any public question.

Agitation is the preserver of the mental and moral as well as the physical health. It throws light into dark places. It brings the corruption of altogether beneficent in its results.

Hence all that is evil or at least doubtful in character shuns agitation. Consequently it is just to conclude that he who deprecates agitation has a motive or purpose that thrives best in concealment. It is safe, under such circumstances, to agitate the more. Undisturbed darkness breeds miasm. Bacon said: "Putrefaction asketh rest, for the subtle motion that putrefaction requireth is disturbed by agitation."

Applying these principles in a practical manner to the issues of a national campaign there can te no other conclusion than this: A thorough discussion, a persistent agitation, must ultimately result in the best possible settlement and therefore the greatest possible profit. The temporary inconveniences, bardships and losses are simply small items in the necessary expense account of the cause.

A NATURAL RESULT.

One of the natural but very unfortupate results of the entry of the clergy into politics is already coming conspicuously into evidence. It is the exposure of dissension in their own ranks. They are divided among themselves on the all-important subject of their duty to their fellowmen, to preach the gospel and point the world to its Savior. One, like Archbishop Ireland, deems it his duty to direct the sheep of his fold how they shall vote in the coming election and unhesitatingly condemns all who don't vote that way to consort with all kinds of disreputables. Another almost equally eminent in the same church, like Bishop Wiggar, of New Jersey, gets after His Reverence of St. Paul with a sharp stick and prods him unsparingly for meddlesom-

GRANDMA'S CUSTARD CUPS.

BY ELIZABETH WESTYN TIMLOW.

Patty regarded a visit to grandmamma as a little glimpse into Paradise. At home there was such a flock of children, of whom she was "middle man," that it was delightful to be the only tered upon her.

Grandmamma had a fascinating home, with its wide, central hall and great rooms. Her father had been a sea captain, and the whole place was full of curious furniture, piles of wonderful seashells and great branches of coral. Queer stuffed birds peered down from tall cabinets; feathery dried grasses from South America nodded in stately blue jars; quaint Japanese curiosities and odd Chinese toys, wonderful music boxes, and tables that took all apart, carvings and screws and dark, rich hangings, all these made the great dim parlor, especially, a dream of strange delights to six-year-old

"How nice it would be to take to school to drink out of, instead of that old tin dipper," she thought, suddenly. "I don't b'lieve grandma would mind. I'll just ask her when she comes home." Patty put the other things back in their places, and carried the little cup

"I'll bring another one to school tomorrow," she volunteered. "Will your grandma let you?"

"She doesn't care," replied Patty, confidently. Oh, naughty little Patty!

After school one of the older children joined the little maid.

"Say, Patty," she began, as they trudged homeward, "do you like maple sugar?"

"No, stop," said Patty, deciding in a hurry. "You bring it, and I'll bring the cup;" and she skipped off, hastily, up the lane.

So the next morning naughty little Patty hid another cup in her pocket; her conscience protested loudly, but the thought of the maple sugar proved stronger still.

When luncheon time came Jenny produced from her pocket a knobby little brown paper package and received in exchange the pretty brown cup with its wreath of pink roses.

"It's mine," Jenny announced, with nuch importance; "I bought it." There was an immediate chorus of ex-

"Buy them back?" gasped Patty. "Certainly. The cups are old and valuable; but I prize them more because my father bought them for me when I was only 12 years old, Patty, because I had learned to make custard, of which he was very fond. I have never broken one of them in all these 60 years."

"Oh dear! oh dear!" sobbed Patty. 'I've eaten up the slippery el-lum, and the maple sugar, and I've lost the blueglass beads, an' I left the folding-slate outdoors and it's all snowed up, an' I can't find it, and Mac chewed up the doll's hat that Julia gave me for hers, and I've forgotten what the other things are. Oh, grandma, I've been the baddest girl I ever have been!"

Then grandma gathered the forlorn little bundle in her arms, and I cannot begin to tell you all the wise, kind words she said to her penitent little granddaughter. Patty was horrified beyond words when grandma told her that what she

A GREAT LIBRARY.

The Imposing Building Which Holds the Government's Books.

Built for the Express Purpose of Holding Uncle Sam's Congressional Literature-Grandest Library Building in the World.

The library is a noble, imposing, monumental structure, by far the finest building in the national capital, in many respects the finest public building on the continent, and, in the opinion of those well qualified to judge, the finest library building in the world. That a building of its size, solidity, thorough construction and elaborate and artistic embellishment should be completed ready for occupancy for less than $7,000,000 is a matter for national congratulation. Not only will it be timate, but within the time limit set him. nearly nine years ago. The squire was routed out, but stood protestingly on his dignity. He had but a few head of poor cattle left, too poor even for army beef.

"Durn yer stock, old man!" said the leader. "We want yer money, so rush aroun' and git it up.'

Gumbo stood quaking behind his master. Though not above pilfering the squire's tobacco, or rifling some henroost when fare was hard, he was faithful to that one great trust concerning what lay under the hearth-stone. "Is dey unyunners er is dey rebs,

A pistol shot bellowed through the room. Gumbo screamed, and the guerrillas rushed out pell-mell, mounted and were gone in a trice. Other troops surrounded the house. A mulatto woman ran in and fell on Gumbo's neel as he sat disconsolate.

"I hearn 'em!" she cried. "We hearn 'em et mother's. I knowed de sojers wuz in town a-furragin', so I up an' run an' let 'em know. One on 'em took me up behin' him, an' year I is-bless Gord! What's de matter wid yer, Gum-

"Why, howdy, Em'line," he responded. "Yer all come jes' in de nick ob time-sho'."

Gray-coated cavalrymen swarmed in, and shots were fired about the place. Several bushwhackers were captured, and a guard was left, at the squire's request, lest the scoundrels were to suddenly return. Meanwhile Emeline made Gumbo some corn coffee, a soldier gave him a drink of sorghum rum, and he began to feel quite chipper again. His master watched him with kindly eyes.

"I didn't tell, marse," said Gumbo presently.

"No, you did not, but you have placed your old master under a deeper debt than mere money can repay, Gumbo. The New Year is pretty near here, and I am going to set you free-you rascal. You might have run away to the Yankees, but instead you have stood your master's best friend through thick and thin. If that doesn't deserve freedom, I hardly know what does."

White Metal Rallies Come Close Together-Seymour at the Opera House.

SPEAKS ON MONEY AND RE-VIEWS PUBLIC RECORD.

McGinnis and Gladden Make Addresses -Matt Clune's Adventure With the Cook-McKinley and Hobart Wheel Club Formed.

TWO RALLIES HAND RUNNING. Following only the night behind the great Bryan rally it is surprising that so many turned out as did to hear the silver orators who spoke at the opera house last night. The complimentary crowd which greeted them is another evidence of the interest taken by the people in the campaign this year, and of their desire to be informed upon the to decide on the 3rd of November next hands of the poor man's candidate.

Shook Bryan's Hand-Nit! There was a good story going the rounds of the town yesterday on Matt Clune. Matt won't admit it. He says it's on Joe Mack. At any rate without attempting to furnish him with an alibi the story runs:

Matt is an enthusiastic believer in free silver (nit) and a great admirer of its able exponent and champion, Mr. Bryan. Of course when Bryan came to town and spoke Matt was one of the 7,000 enthusiastic listeners. During the hour's oration he stood with attentive ears and open mouth, occasionally voicing his approval with vociferous cheers.

Matt crowded forward to shake the speaker's hand as he left the stand. But alas! In the classic language of the street "there were others." Even great issue they must cast their ballots Matt's long arms could not reach the
