He will have plenty of kind words for the gold Democrats who supported him for the presidency, but their wishes will not count when the question of attempts made to reach them were untariff legislation is to be considered. We predict that there will be no tariff legislation at the coming session, that the new congress will be assembled in extra session soon after McKinley becomes president, and that, unless the silver senators resort to obstructive tactics to prevent it, a tariff law closely following the lines of the McKinley law will be passed. This is a result sincerely to be desired, for it will enable the country to judge understandingly regarding the extent to which our prosperity can be promote : by tariff inch pipe, as is done in certain salt egislation.

oh, very rich. But then he was away

Suddenly a bright idea came to her. There was the pot of gold at the end of was not even a cloud in sight. "Well, "and thunderstorms always come when it's hot, so maybe one will come sometime soon," and, now that this difficult question was settled, she ran off and had soon forgotten all about her troubles in romping with Puff.

After awhile the sky; which had looked so hopelessly clear, did begin to cloud over, and toward evening, for the first time in her life, Nelly heard with pleasure, mingled with her childish dread, the distant roll of thunder. It came nearer and nearer, and before long the storm, which had been gathering had been so anxious for the storm to come, and was very glad it was not a very dreadful one, such as they had had sometimes. Presently the storm passed over, and away low down in the west the sun came out. To Nelly's delight a bright rain. bow appeared in the east and dropped down just by the woods. Now was the little girl's chance. She did not tell her mother of her intentions, because she wanted to surprise her and her father, so she slipped off through the garden, never heeding the rain which was still softly falling. She climbed over the fence at the end of the garden and ran down the little hill outside, and through the fields that lay between her home and the woods where the rainbow seemed to touch the earth. The grass was very wet and poor Nelly's dainty blue dress was getting sadly draggled and spotted. She tried to run between the drops as Janet had said was the way to do; but somehow she couldn't manage it just right, and they came tumbling down on her bare golden head and eager baby face, as she hurried on, intent on her loving errand. Once she tumbled over a tree stump and scratched her hand, but she only said: "Oh, dear," and ran on toward the beautiful bow, which somehow did not seem to get any nearer, no matter how far she went. But the woods were mear, and Nelly could not see the end of the bow beyond, so it must be in the woods, and of course the pot of gold that was to secure her pretty home must be there, too. This thought made her hurry on again eagerly, as if the treasure was already hers.

"Oh, that's me, and somebody's lookin' for me! Oh, I'se so glad! Yes, I'se comin'," and Nelly darted away from the deceitful stewing pot and its owner, and at the edge of the woods was caught in the arms of no other than dear, longlost Uncle Ben.

Just then they heard a sound outside the woods of some one calling: "Nelly, 253 Dearborn street.

Then once more safe and happy, kindhearted little Nelly remembered the lone man in the woods who had frightened her so, and who was so dreadfully ignorant about rainbows, and nothing would do but Uncle Ben should go back and see him, with the result that a generous piece of money found its way into the pocket of the forlorn stranger!

"Now. Nell, you rogue, tell me why you ran off like this and scared your mother so," said Uncle Ben, as he pulled one of the wet golden curls that lay on his shoulder. "Here I come to see you and find the house in confusion and everybody running around calling for Nelly. And nobody knows anything about the naughty girl, only Bridget thought she saw her run down the hill, and then poor old Uncle Ben, with his rheumatism and neuralgia, has to go out after his bad child, and finds her talking to a tramp in the woods. Now tell me what it all means, miss."

"Ob, Uncle Ben," said Nelly, "I didn't tell mamma 'cause I wanted to s'prise her and papa. I ran off to find the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, that Janet told me about, 'cause papa's got to sell the house and move away if he don't get some money. And, oh -- I didn't find it, after all." Uncle Ben laughed.

"Poor Nell, and she didn't find it. Well, don't try again, or you may meet a tramp not quite so harmless as your friend of the stewing pot. But what's locked the heavy iron doors leading to all this about moving, Nelly? You know I'm a stranger and haven't heard all the news.

So Nelly gave her version of the troubles that had overtaken the family, and how she was going to set everything right by bringing home the treasure from the end of the rainbow, and then how it all ended.

"But now you're here, Uncle Ben, and you'll do just as well," Nelly concluded, with perfect confidence in his ability and willingness to furnish untold quantities of riches.

"Well, well," was all Uncle Ben said, I came just in time. We'll have to see about things, you and I, Nell," and Nelly knew that Uncle Ben's methods of "seeing about things" were always satisfactory.

Uncle Ben was as good as his word, and, though Nelty never knew how it was managed, she knew it was through him that their pretty home was not sold. But the mystery of the rainbow and its wonderful treasures has not yet been quite solved to her satisfaction .--Good Housekeeping.

Every alternate Monday the Chinese News will go to press with all the news of Chinese social and business circles locked in the "forms." When one issue is circulated Editor Wong Chin Foo will start on the next one. He writes his "copy" in strange, Chinese characters, and when a page is finished the sample of art is lithographed and then printed. The News has been entered at the post office in Chicago as second-class matter. The only English in it is the heading and the names of advertisers at the head of their display "ads." Within a short time it is expected this paper will have a large publisher, and the headquarters are at circulation and will be a power among the people who can read it. Wong Chin Foo is a well-educated and thoroughly Americanized Chinaman. He is minus his pigtail and wears United States clothing. In his paper he urges Chinamen who come to this country tobecome American in their habits. His editorial policy in politics is in sympathy with the republican party. Wong Chin Foo is 48 years old and came to the United States while young. He was educated at Columbus university, Washington, and at the Lewisburg (Pa.) Paptist seminary. Among local Shinamen he is a prominent figure.

WALKS OUT OF JAIL AT WILL. Traveling Showman Mystifies the Author-Ities at Brazil, Ind.

A sensation was created at the new county jail at Brazil, Ind., the other afternoon by a stranger named William Tyler, who was locked up for running an unlawful show there, escaping from the county jail. With apparent case he unfastened the combination lock from the interior of his cell and also unthe hallway.

He made no effort to leave the jail premises, saying he had no desire to escape, but assured Sheriff Payne that he could gain freedom from any cell in the jail. He was again locked in a cell and the county commissioners were called in to witness the man's feat. After a thorough investigation to ascertain that the doors were securely locked the commissioners retired to the rear of the jail and they were greatly sur-prised upon hearing the iron doors swing open and seeing the prisoner walk

No keys can be found on Tyler, and how he gets out is a mystery which he positively refuses to divulge.

POTTAWATOMIES TO BE PAID Indians Receive Money for Land Taken This Year's Supply of Raw Sugar by the United States.

Surpasses That of 1895.

Total Amount on Hand, 8,765,000 Tons-Enormous Cuban Deficit More Than Offset by Increased Production in Europe of Beet Sugar.

This year's raw sugar supply of the world surpassed that of 1895, notwithstanding the enormous Cuban deficit according to official statistics received at the department of state from Consul-General Karel at St. Petersburg.

From his report it appears that the shortage which Russia suffered this year in the wheat and rye crop will be more than made up by the increased beet sugar production, and this increase is common to other European countries. The committe of Russian ministers officially determines for each period of production the quantity of sugar to be turned out by the sugar factories for the home market, which this year was fixed at over 500,000 tons, an excess over last year of 50,000 tons, and the ministry of finance has concluded to lower the prices on account of the cheapening manufacture, the improvement of beet cultivation and this year's excellent harvest-the new price being $2.39 per. pood of 36,112 pounds, against $2.44 last year. The official estimate of the world's decrease of numbers is consumption. raw sugar product for this year is as fol-

Last year the corresponding total was 8,290,609 tons. The estimated consumption for the ensuing year is placed at 7,350,000 tons. The export from Cuba, the principal producer of cane sugar, is estimated at 400,000 tons, and probably will not reach that amount. In the season 1895-6, Cuba furnished the world's market with 392,-796 tons; in 1894-5 with 754,402 tons, and in 1893-4 with 1,160,172 tons. The arrangement of the affair was quite unique, inasmuch as the ladies from each city were pitted against the gentlemen fron the other.

The contest was not one in which social enjoyment was forgotten in the eagerness for victory. While all did their best to win, the interesting and pleasing features were not lost sight of. The Isbpeming ladies and gentlemen carried off the honors of the evening, so far as winning the greatest number of points went. Honors were even, however, in one respect. At one of the tables the visiting ladies defeated their opponents and at another the local ladies were victorious over the visiting gentlemen. tend to it. Shoes of Negroes' Skin.

A Philadelphia physician has his shoes made from the skin of negroes. Ghastly, but true! He obtains the epidermis from bodies that have been used for dissecting purposes in a famous medical college in this city. The thighs are flayed and the skin thus procured is sent to Womelsdorf, near Reading, and there tanned by a stolid Berks county yeoman. The result is a beautiful leather, extremely soft and pliable, very lustrous and suggestive of a fine but very thick piece of kid. The shoes are beautiful to look upon and grasp the feet kindly. This story is told from actual personal knowledge.

Consumption Among Negroes.

A medical paper prints statistics showing that in eight of our largest southern cities the proportion of deaths from consumption among the colored race, as compared with the total mortality, is more than 50 per cent. greater han that of the white population.

Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic On and on they trudged, maddened by their terrible hunger and thirst, when suddenly they perceived a mass of rock which rose directly in their path. There was a natural opening. Through it they rushed. "Water!"

A horrible cry of loathing and disappointment-a cry with no trace of hope or care for the future-rang through the rocky garden. Then the two tramps fied.

Thanked by the Queen.

One of the many congratulatory letters sent to her majesty apropos of the length of her reign was from a little invalid girl of nine, Catherine, daughter of Dr. Smith, of Dumfries. The child was so interested to hear of the queen's long reign that nothing would satify her but she must send a message to the liege lady, and so her parents allowed her to forward a simple little note. Three days later Catherine was delighted to receive a note from Miss Phipps thanking her for her "nice little letter." Her majesty also sent her photo-
