SURPRISE IN THE SENATE.

Dingley Tariff-Silver Bill Is Taken Up on the Significant Vote of 35 to 21.

THE DEBATE AT TIMES SHARP AND PERSONAL.

A Motion to Recommit Is Pending When the Regular Order Displaces It and the Bill Goes Back to the Calendar.

THE CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The senate today by the decisive vote of 35 to 21 adopted a motion to take up the Dingley tariff-silver bill. Unexpected and surprising as this action was, it did not have the significance which the vote itself appears to convey. Immediately following it, Aldrich (R. I.), one of the Republican members of the finance committee, moved to re-commit the bill to the committee and this motion was pending when at 2 o'clock the morning hour expired, and the entire matter lapsed as though no action were taken.

Neither the bill nor the Aldrich motion to re-commit enjoys any privilege or precedence as a result of the action of today. It served, however, for some lively parliamentary fencing between Allen (Pop., Neb.), author of the motion, and Chandler, Hale and Aldrich, as well as for the exposition of uncertain and shifty elements within the senate when a vote is precipitated on important public questions.

The debate was at times sharp and personal. Allen was very blunt in his expressions, and he taunted the Republican senators for shrinking from the Dingley bill after conducting a tariff campaign. "It has gone out from the powers that be, in the Republican party," said Allen at one point, "that with the incoming administration we are to have an extraordinary session of congress for the purpose of revising the tariff laws." Thus Allen ran along, touching on many points that hitherto have been reserved for caucus consideration.

Chandler reminded Allen that not only had tariff won, but free silver by the United States alone had lost in the recent election, and he urged Allen to aid in a genuine effort to execute the will of the people.

Hale took occasion to state with frankness that the Republican senators expected an actual majority in the next senate which would make tariff legislation more of an easy accomplishment than it is now.

Aldrich's first move was to ask to have the bill referred back to the finance committee with instructions to strike off the silver amendment, but later he accepted the suggestion of Harris to omit the instructions. It was in this form that the question of recommitment was pending when 2 o'clock arrived and cut off debate. This leaves pending the motion to refer the Dingley bill to the finance committee, but the motion has no privilege giving it preference tomorrow.

CUBAN RESOLUTIONS BOB UP.

Early in the day three sets of vigorous resolutions for Cuban independence furnished an interesting feature. They were presented by Cameron (Pa.), Call (Fla.) and Mills (Dem. Tex.). Cameron's went to the committee on foreign relations, Call's was laid over, and Mills's, a joint resolution, was referred to the foreign relations committee. It reads as follows:

Resolved, That the president of the United States is hereby directed to take possession of the island of Cuba with the military and naval forces of the United States and hold the same until the people of Cuba can organize a government deriving its powers from the consent of the governed and arm and equip such military and naval forces as may be necessary to secure them against foreign invasion.

Then came a flood of bills covering every phase of legislation, including an anti-trust bill and a measure to withdraw small notes from circulation by Snoup, and for the temporary reduction of the salaries of United States officers by Chandler. Then on motion of Allen (Pop., Neb.) the Dingley bill was taken up by a vote of 35 to 21, several Democrats and Populists voting for it.

At 2 o'clock the Dingley bill was displaced by the immigration bill. Efforts were then made to secure an adjournment or go into executive session, but the motions were successively resisted by Lodge, who finally succeeded in having the immigration bill taken up. He yielded, however, to a personal request from Gibson (Dem., Md.) for time to look into the bill, and then, at 2:20, the senate went into executive session and soon after adjourned.

A bill providing free homesteads on public lands in Oklahoma territory for actual and bona fide settlers and reserving public lands for that purpose was made the special order to follow the immigration bill.

The bill Senator Chandler introduced today for a 10 per cent. reduction of the salaries of all federal employes provides the reduction shall begin June 30, 1897, and continue three years and shall include all officers and employes of the United States whose salaries are paid from the treasury either annually, quarterly, monthly or semi-monthly, except those whose compensation cannot be diminished during their continuance in office.

LIGHT DAY IN THE HOUSE.

The house held a three hour session today and passed a dozen bills of minor importance, among them the following: To provide for the location and purchase of public lands for reservoir sites in Montana, South Dakota and Wyoming; to adjust the accounts of John Y. Williams, formerly agent at the Fort Hall Indian reservation; to grant the widow of the late Brigadier General Jos. B. Carr a pension of $75 a month.

and to increase the pension of the widow of General John Hough to $50 per month. The Shaforth bill for the protection of the forest reservation from fire was defeated. A resolution was adopted for the distribution of the president's message among the various committees entitled to jurisdiction of the several topics, and the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP.

Current News of the Day at Uncle Sam's Headquarters.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Mr. Hanna called on Reed in the speaker's room in the Capitol this afternoon. They talked about five minutes and Senator Morrill, who happened to be in the speaker's room, talked with them. It was said afterwards that Mr. Hanna called merely to pay his respects to the speaker, and public matters were not mentioned.

Hanna and Representative Harmer (Pa.), who is a member of the committee on library, had a talk today concerning the use of the new congressional library building for the inaugural reception. Mr. Hanna said he was surprised at the opposition manifested against the project. Mr. Harmer assured him the entire committee was not opposed to it, and Mr. Hanna suggested that a minority report be made, so congress might vote upon the question in case the majority of the committee reported against it. The library building is the property of congress and a special act would have to be passed to permit its use for the reception. Quigg, New York member of the committee, says it would cost $2,000 to remove the furniture and lay a floor suitable for dancing in the rotunda, and he is opposed to the use of the building.

Mr. Hanna has leased rooms at 1419 F street as the permanent headquarters of the Republican national committee.

The sub-committee of the senate committee on finance which was appointed prior to the adjournment of the last session of congress to investigate the bond issues made by the present administration held a session today, but adjourned without taking any action because of the absence of some of the members. When the committee adjourned after its last meeting in New York last summer the question pending before it was what should be done in view of the refusal of J. Pierpont Morgan, and Perry Belmont to answer questions as to how much they realized upon the bond transactions, and that question is still pending. It is presumed this state of affairs will be reported to the full committee, and it is possible the report will be accompanied by a recommendation for prosecution.

A notable social event today was the tea given by Mrs. U. S. Grant at her granddaughters' residence to present her granddaughters, Miss Vivian Sartoris, to Washington society. Mrs. Grant was assisted in entertaining her several hundred guests by Mrs. Sartoris, mother of the debutante, and by Mrs. Anna D. Dent and Miss Letitia Stevenson. The distinguished guests included Vice President and Mrs. Stevenson, the British ambassador and family, Secretary and Miss Olney, the French ambassador and wife, many members of the diplomatic corps and a large representation of congressional and resident society.

When asked to explain the motive of his motion in the senate today to take up the Dingley bill, Mr. Allen replied: "I had no motive except to feel the enemy. I wanted to satisfy myself and country as to the attitude of the Republicans towards this measure, which they professed to be so anxious to have become a law, and I think I have at least succeeded in demonstrating they have no intention of trying to do anything." The senator declined to say whether he would in any way revive the question, but he intimated he probably would.

The president today nominated Frank Dyer Chester of Massachusetts to be consul of the United States at Budapest, Hungary. The president also sent to the senate a number of nominations which heretofore have been announced and were made prior to the assembling of congress. The nomination of David R. Francis to be secretary of the interior was among them.

At the instance of Mr. Chandler the senate today resolved upon an investigation of the Joint Traffic Railroad association. The inquiry is to be conducted by the committee on interstate commerce. The inquiry is also to be extended to the agreements between the flour millers and window glass manufacturers of the country.

The senate committee on foreign relations met today and discussed the Cuban situation but took no action on the bills or resolutions before it.

Boy Is Killed in Play.

OMAHA, Dec. 9.—Vernon White, aged thirteen, was accidentally hanged today as a result of a boyish prank. With playmates he was playing police. When they captured criminals they were condemned to be hanged. He was condemned and a pillowslip was tied around his neck and he suspended himself by the neck to a bedroom door. Before assistance arrived he was dead.

Steel Makers in Conference.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 9.—An important secret meeting of the steel producers of the country is being held in this city. It is stated nothing was decided on during the day, but that the outcome of the meeting tomorrow will not be the dissolution of the pool but the strengthening of the organization.

Forecast of the Weather.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—10 P. M.—The weather bureau reports the following as its forecast for the next twenty-four hours: For upper Michigan: Partly cloudy weather and local showers; brisk to high westerly winds.

BOLD BANDITS IN ST. LOUIS

Hold Up the Iron Mountain Fast Express Within a Mile of the Union Depot.

TIME-LOCK ON SAFE PREVENTS THEIR GETTING BOOTY.

Reign of Terror Exists in the City and There Is Talk of Organizing a Vigilance Committee to Put Down the Lawlessness.

BLEW UP THE EXPRESS CAR.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 9.—The Iron Mountain fast express train, out-going, was held up a mile from the Union station within the city limits tonight at 9:30 by six masked men. The express car could not be opened and the bandits fled without booty. One of the men stood in the center of the track and waved a red lantern, signifying danger ahead. As soon as the engineer stopped the train two masked men jumped on the engine cab and, presenting revolvers, told him to hold the engine still on pain of death. Two other robbers made for the express car, while the remaining two stood guard outside. In less than fifteen minutes the whole thing was over, and the conductor hastened to the nearest telephone and notified the police.

As soon as the matter was reported to the police every detective was called into service and, under instructions from Chief of Detectives Desmond, sent out on the case. The conductor telephoned in a description of the men as near as he could, but owing to the fact they all wore masks it was but meagre. Word was sent every police officer on duty in the city to be on the lookout for suspicious characters.

The robbers had planned well their job, for within two minutes after they disappeared from view they were lost in the crowds of the city. For boldness the robbery has no equal in the annals of train hold-ups in Missouri. It is believed by the police that the three men who recently entered the office of the Home Brewing company in broad daylight, bound and gagged the office employes and got away with $1,000 were the leaders of this job.

BLEW UP THE EXPRESS CAR.

Two robbers went to the express car and demanded admittance. Express Messenger Egan refused to let them in. They threatened to kill him if he did not, and this failing they placed a stick of dynamite at the car door and blew it to pieces and badly shattered one side of the car. Fortunately, it was a through car and the money was in a time-locked safe. Finding it useless to try to blow this open, the robbers jumped off and notified their companions on the engine they had failed to get anything.

Conductor Hall came forward to find out what was the matter. He was met by one of the thieves, who, pointing a revolver at his head, ordered him back on the train. The robbers then left and the engineer started on. The place where the robbery occurred was the Bates street crossing. There was a deep cut there and the noise of the exploding dynamite was smothered by the cliffs. The passengers were in no way disturbed. As the train pulled away Express Messenger Egan appeared at the shattered door of the car, intending to shoot at the marauders. No sooner did they see him, however, than they opened fire and fled behind a pile of boxes.

At midnight the police had made no arrests. The only clew they could get was from a citizen residing near Bates street, where the hold-up occurred. He heard shots and a few minutes later two buggies with three men in each tore down Bates street at full gallop.

A PRACTICAL BEGINNING OF TERROR.

The news of the hold-up spread throughout the city. Business men gathered together in lobbies of the hotels to discuss the affair. Some were in favor of organizing a vigilance committee for the purpose of putting down the epidemic of crime that has flourished the last three weeks. Scarcely a night has passed in that time but that half a dozen citizens have been sand-bagged and robbed, and numerous houses have been burglarized. A reign of terror practically exists, and the police seem powerless to stop it.

TO ENFORCE TURKISH REFORMS

Report Confirmed the Great Powers Have Reached an Agreement.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—[Copyrighted by the Associated Press.]—The Birmingham Post confirms the repeated statements on the same subject cabled by the Associated Press the past two months, in saying it learns from a high quarter an understanding has been reached between Great Britain, Russia and France for the settlement of the eastern question. The P. states the Russian Black sea fleet and the British and French Mediterranean fleets will shortly be mobilized in contiguity to the Bosphorus and Dardanelles to enforce, if necessary, the reforms which the embassies of the three powers are about to present to the sultan and to which the other signers of the Berlin treaty, Germany, Austria and Italy, have consented. To this end, it is asserted, the allied fleets may force a passage of the Dardanelles.

WANTS TO KEEP HIS TOGA.

Senator Peffer Comes Out in Favor of a Tariff Reform Policy.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 9.—United States Senator Peffer, who until recently has been a moderate protectionist, today published in his paper, the Topeka Advocate, a tariff platform that practically commits him to the tariff reform policy laid down by President Cleveland. He was driven to this expression by the hard fight which his opponents are making against his re-election.

A GIGANTIC COMBINATION.

The report originating in Chicago to the effect that John D. Rockefeller had purchased a site there and was about to engage in the manufacture of iron and steel on a grand scale has been shown up as a fake of the rankest kind but the stir created by it has been called attention to his plans for the employment of his big fleet of vessels next season and it is declared in Cleveland that instead of fighting Carnegie, as the Chicago story had it, the two are to combine to control the ore carrying business.

Mr. Rockefeller's local representative yesterday said that there is absolutely no truth in the story. Nothing is farther from his intentions," he said, "and, in fact, the very opposite of the report is true.

"It is known on all sides that Carnegie is the largest consumer of ore in the country, and that means, of course, he is one of the best customers that Rockefeller has for the product of his Lake Superior mines, and instead of being foes, the two kings will be found working into each other's hands, and a deal that will be far reaching has already been arranged between them.

"The Bessemer, or the Rockefeller boats, as they are more commonly called, that will be in commission next season, will be able to carry upwards of 1,600,000 tons of ore from the upper lake ports to the receiving ports on Lake Erie. That is considerably more than the output of the Rockefeller mines, and that shrewd gentleman is not going ahead turning out boats without first securing work for them. The deal which it is said has been entered into between Messrs. Rockefeller and Carnegie, will prove advantageous to both of them. Heretofore all the product of the mines in which Carnegie is interested has been moved by outside tonnage, either on contracts made by local sales agents or by wild boats at the going rate. This will no longer be the case, as it is stated on good authority that Rockefeller will, in addition to carrying his own ore, also move the product of the mines in which Carnegie is interested, and it is for that reason that new tonnage has recently been ordered by Rockefeller, as before the last contract was let for a boat he had more than enough tonnage to care for his own ore for ten years, but the rate is not known. The statement of Rockefeller's local representative yesterday that the very opposite of the Chicago story was the truth, shows that they are working into each other's hands. That part of the deal would be a very good thing for both of the kings but it goes further. While Rockefeller has a fine fleet of vessels, the finest freighters on the lakes, he is in bad shape for dock capacity, and has only one dock at Ashtabula that he controls, and his big boats would lose much time and money if they had to take their turn at outside docks like the regular freighters. But dock facilities is Mr. Carnegie's end of the deal to look after, and he is in shape to do it. Carnegie has no vessel property, but he has dock room for thousands of tons of ore and facilities for the rapid handling of cargoes at several of the Lake Erie ports, and he has, or is interested in railroads to carry the ore from the receiving ports to his furnaces at Pittsburgh, so that from the time the ore leaves the mines until it reaches the furnaces, it will be handled only by Rockefeller and Carnegie.

The Pittsburgh man controls two docks, the Carnegie & Erie, and Pittsburgh at Erie, and the Pittsburgh & Shenango dock at Conneaut, with which he has rail connections to Pittsburgh.

He is interested in the Minnesota dock at Ashtabula and the Nypano dock at this port, and has close business relations with parties operating the dock at Fairport. The amount of ore consumed by furnaces operated by Carnegie each year will keep the boats of the Rockefeller fleet busy all season, and they will have more than they can do to move the product of the mines owned by Carnegie.

Mr. Gates of New York, who has represented Mr. Rockefeller in the development of Lake Superior mines, the building of ships and other big enterprises, was in Cleveland last week and the big deal, it is said, was practically closed then, and it was decided to order more tonnage in order to be able to take care of the business.

A gentleman who is on the ground floor in the shipping business, when asked yesterday what he thought of the story, said: "There is no doubt in my mind but that it is correct, and it will certainly be a powerful combination."

LANSING has been experimenting with the new acetylene gas and The State Republican says that the old style gas and the electric lights are hopelessly distanced by the new illuminating agent. Comparisons were made with a single burner, consuming one-half foot of acetylene gas per hour, and five 16-candle power incandescent lights and it was the unanimous verdict that the gas was the purer, stronger and more brilliant light of the two while the same held true when the new light was tested against the famous Welsbach burner using ordinary illuminating gas, although the latter was consuming twelve times as much gas per hour as the acetylene burner. The acetylene was furnished by the Chicago Acetylene Gas and Carbide company and an effort will be made to inaugurate the commercial use of the new illuminant in this state at once. Notwithstanding the superiority of this light over all others, its chief desirability is its extreme cheapness, its cost being about one-third that of city gas, and one-tenth that of electricity burner for burner, while as compared, candle power for candle power, it is about one-twentieth the cost of city gas or one-fifteenth that of electricity. The new light is generated in machines that can be put into any man's house whether he live on the farm or in the city. He will be absolutely independent of gas mains and gas meters or of electric wires. The gas is also adapted to cooking, heating and power, while the care and operation of a generator is so simple that it can be performed by a child.

If it is TRUE, as announced, that concerted action on the Turkish question has been reached by the governments of Europe it is the most important foreign news for years. Russia is credited with leading in the matter with England backing her up and this agrees with the verdict recently given to the world by a prominent diplomat to the effect that Russia is now the dominant power in Europe, having supplanted England in the supremacy of the old world. It has been a bloodless revolution—within a year, two years or three years, a great empire has been supplanted in its proud, almost world-wide pre-eminence and the change has been wrought so quietly that no man can point to the exact time when it took place. That it is true all close students of recent events in Europe will agree and the settlement of the Turkish question by reducing the Ottoman power to vassalage will only serve to emphasize it.

The London Times arises to remark that "if the Venezuelan question had been handled as Mr. Cleveland now handles the Cuban question, he might have averted the disruption of the Democracy and kept Bryan and Bryanism in their previous obscurity." Exactly so. It may strike the American reader that it's a far cry from Venezuela to Bryan, but the "Thunderer," better posted, makes the leap with remarkable agility.

With all powers of the old world doctoring him, "the sick man of Europe" will have a pretty tough time of it, surely.

WOMAN'S IMPULSIVENESS.

It Often Proves to Be Her Worst Enemy. If a thoughtful woman were asked: "What is the greatest curse of your sex?" she might well answer: "Impulsiveness." It is responsible for almost all the mistakes made by the good-hearted among us. May it not be safely said that a few minutes' thought before speech or action would prevent most fatal blunders? Many of us are in positive bondage to our bird-like quickness to feel, to show our feeling, to retort or to respond. If we are hurt we must immediately "give ourselves away," as the phrase runs, if not by bitter speech at least by look and manner; yet reflection frequently brings the keenest regret for the lost dignity, the betrayed secret. Many a one has wrecked her own happiness for the want of the patient stoicism which would have led her to stand aside for awhile watching events until they brought with them her opportunities. Even when we are happy it is not always well to let the bright stream bear us away rudderless. The impulsive manifestation of affection, the hasty proposal of marriage, the hastier acceptance—have they never proved the beginnings of misery? Or has a rash word never sundered true lovers, true friends? If these things are true it is likewise true that the fault in the commencement has been that of feminine impulsiveness. The defect is a generous one, and, therefore, commoner with us than it is with men, so that it handicaps us unfairly in the struggle of life. And truly it is a weary task to be always "with a host of petty maxims preaching down" one's heart. But we must do it; either we must rule feeling or feeling will rule us. It is a good servant, but a bad master. Our loving women's hearts are like the fire of the domestic hearth—the light of the home when duly controlled warming the whole house, but if the fire be not kept in its subordinate place what a conflagration ensues!—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Diamondville, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at River Junction she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible coughs of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Trial bottles free at E. Farnham's Drug Store. Regular size 50c. and $1.00.

THE CUB CREEK BULL-FIGHT.

BY EDSON KEMP.

The great potato picnic will never be forgotten by the people of the Cub Creek valley. This district was at first the scene of a brief mining excitement. After that there was a blaze of disorderly glory. This subsided into a tame career of cattle ranching, which finally developed an unexpected resource. It was found that the light and powdery soil of the valley, when properly irrigated, produced potatoes in great quantity and of excellent quality.

From this moment the prosperity of the Cub Creek valley was assured. Potato ranches were opened in every direction. Irrigating enterprises were undertaken on a large scale, and land rose rapidly in value. Cub Creek City soon had a population of 3,000 souls, with an opera house, a daily paper and a mayor and city council.

My father was the first mayor of the city. He is a very enterprising man, and had contributed many schemes to "boom" Cub Creek. One of his schemes was the great potato picnic—a kind of grand potato "barbecue," which was advertised far and wide, which attracted many thousands of people, and which served to increase the fame and announce the resources of the district.

Committees were appointed to devise attractive features for the occasion. I was put on the committee on sports, of which my friend, Tom Narcross, was chairman. We were told by my father that no ordinary programme of sports would do, and that we must get up something picturesque, novel and "startling."

"If it is to be picturesque," I said in one of the committee meetings, "it must be borrowed from one of the bygone times in this valley."

We all remained silent and reflected a moment, and then Tom Narcross jumped up in some excitement. "I have it!" he exclaimed. "We'll give them a bull-fight!" We were struck almost dumb by the brilliancy of the suggestion, and adopted it by a unanimous vote.

But it was one thing to decide to have a bull-fight and another to get one up. My father told us that we must "put it through ourselves;" he had no time to superintend it. But we must guarantee that no one should be hurt in it, and that the animals should neither be killed nor cruelly treated.

We gave the guarantee, and set about organizing the "fight." Of course we knew absolutely nothing about bull-fights. We had come to the valley during the potato period, and knew nothing, except from books and hearsay, of the wild life in the mountains and the plains.

Nor could we find anyone who had had experience in bull-fights. So much time passed while we were vainly corresponding with various people in the territory, hoping to find some one who could direct a bull-fight, that when we last gave up searching and resolved to trust to our own resources, we had but three weeks left in which to prepare for the event.

We read all we could find in the books in the Cub Creek public library about bull-fighting, and then I went down to Cheyenne and studied up the subject in the public library there.

My first proceeding on reaching home was to organize all the boys I knew into a corps of torreadores, picadores, chulos, banderillos and matadores. Most of the boys wanted to be torreadores or matadores, but Tom and I exercised our authority, seconded by that of my father, to such an extent that we finally filled up the ranks.

Then we appointed a sub-committee on costumes, and called in the assistance of my sister Blanche and of Tom's mother, who had a gift for getting up all sorts of fancy dresses. I gave them my notes on the subject of bull-fighters' costumes, and they set at work.

Everything seemed to be going on swimmingly now. One further important requirement in a bull-fight had yet, however, to be met. We must have some bulls! This was the most difficult task of the whole enterprise. But at last we borrowed five handsome Texas steers belonging to a ranchman at the head of the creek.

For our arena, we proposed to have an inclosure of barbed wire at one side of the grounds where the potato picnic was to be held, in such a situation that the grandstand, put up for other spectacles, would command an excellent view of it. An entrance way from outside the grounds, through a gate at one side of the grandstand, and flanked on one side by that structure and on the other by an ordinary board fence, was to be constructed.

It seemed to us that a barbed wire inclosure was much better than the ordinary arena of the Spanish and Mexican bull-fights, because it would enable every one to see plainly what was going on, at the same time it provided security for the audience. We brought the Texas steers to the town, and put them on short rations to make them ferocious. We did not intend to hurt them. Neither did we mean they should hurt us.

The costumes were to be the principal part of our Corrida de Toros; we were to have a sort of dress parade around the corral of handsome boys on handsome horses and on foot. The steers were to be driven about actively for some time, and a good deal of dust kicked up; and finally the attention of the people was to be diverted by a balloon ascension. We relied upon the novelty of the spectacle to please the people, and we knew that they would not be pleased by any exhibition of cruelty to animals.

The potato picnic was certainly an immense success. On one day at least 10,000 people were present on the grounds. Eloquent and stirring speeches had been made; tons of roasted potatoes had been eaten; the bands were playing, and the enthusiasm ran high when the time appointed for the bull fight arrived.

We had been all excitement for hours. Our half-starved steers were in a barnyard near the grounds. Five minutes before the time the gate of this inclosure was opened, and the five cattle were started by the torreadores and picadores for the picnic grounds.

By reason of my intimate study of the subject, I had been made chief torreador and master of ceremonies. I was mounted on my father's black mare. We had one other torreador—Tom Narcross—and three picadores; and our costumes, though made chiefly of cheap flannel and cambric, were in gaudiness of color at least a close imitation of those worn by Spanish bull-fighters.

The cattle proved to be unexpectedly wild. One or two of them, touched up by one of the picadores, plunged about, fiery-eyed and snorting.

After a good deal of trouble, they were driven into the arena, where they leaped and bellowed, and five boys went careening madly in after them, amid intense excitement. The chulos, banderillos and matadores, on foot of course, stood on a large dry goods box just outside the barb wire fence, exactly opposite the entrance. From this point they could leap over the fence into the arena.

As we rushed in I saw my father in the grand stand, looking decidedly nervous. I doffed my sombrero in a grand manner to the people in the stand as we rode by, and then, coming to a halt, saluted the crowd with a harangue in Spanish, not a word of which a Spaniard could have understood, announcing the beginning of the sport.

Then we began to chase the steers madly around the ring, with wild shouts, all in carefully selected Spanish. The steers, with eyes on fire and tails aloft, ran magnificently.

After some ten or a dozen of these circuits I gave a signal to the chulos and banderillos, who, the moment we had passed them, leaped over into the ring and ran for the inside dry goods boxes, where they began to wave in the air large sheets of red cambric.

Now came the thrilling moment. When the steers came around so that the red sheets confronted them, we expected them to be furious and to rush madly at them, whereupon the boys were to leap on the boxes and over the fence to a place of safety. This was to be continued until the steers or the patience of the audience gave out, or the balloon went up.

But unfortunately the steers, instead of being filled with fury at the sight of the sheets, were scared almost to death. They turned about so swiftly that we who were on horseback almost rode upon them; but they dodged us, raced across the inclosure, huddled together with their tails to the fence and confronted us with their long horns. Though I rode my mare toward them as near as she would go—and she was disposed to give them a wide berth—they refused to budge. This was unexpected and mortifying.

The crowd began to laugh and jeer. "Send the other boys around in back of 'em and let 'em punch 'em out!" some one shouted.

This was evidently the thing to do. I ordered—in plain English, this time—two of the banderillos to go around and punch the steers from behind, through the barbed wire. Two of the picadores handed the banderillos their lances.

As soon as the steers were assaulted in the rear they sprang forward with so wild a leap and such frightful bellowing that our five horses turned tail and ran frantically around the ring. They were simply uncontrollable. The steers were bellowing and running in every direction. The remaining boys in the ring, pale with fright, plunged almost headlong over the fence to a place of safety.

Our horses ran, and the cattle ran, each trying madly to get away from the other. The audience shouted with laughter. I screamed to my men, and they screamed back again, but the mad panic continued. There was really danger that a tragedy might follow.

In the midst of it, I saw one of the boys rushing on his horse out through the lane which led to the gate and thus out of the inclosure. Some one had prudently opened the gate, and the brave picador was taking to flight. Afterward I learned that my father had ordered the gate opened.

In less time than it takes to tell it every torreador and picador had charged down that lane and out of the inclosure; and, as we went out, the whole herd of steers came bellowing after us.

Out into the open space surrounding the grounds we rushed, with the now maddened toros at our heels. We could hear great shouts of laughter from within. Rows of faces appeared at the top of the grand stand, grinning at us.

I overhauled Tom Narcross. "Tom!" said I, gasping, as my horse plunged—I was entirely out of breath and so frightfully jolted by the riding that I could hardly speak—"Tom, where are you—going?"

"I'm—going—out—of—town," said he, huskily, "and I ain't—coming—back—till—this Great Potato Picnic is over!" "So'm I!" I gasped.

We rode on, all five of us, torreadores and picadores, and did not slacken our speed until we were well out on the road toward the neighboring town of Slatersville, where we put up for the night, after sending a telephone message to my father. The last we saw of the steers they were going down the road toward the ranch where they belonged at the clumsy trot that frightened cattle sometimes take.

The great Corrida de Toros was over. It ended very ingloriously for us. For weeks we were the laughing stock of the town. But the Potato Picnic was an immense success. I have been told a thousand times since that the bull fight was the best thing that day on the programme, but this was always emphasized with a grin.—Youth's Companion.

DEAD AT HIS DESK.

This is the story the morning newspapers tell of the modern business man. Too much money-getting. Too little care for health. Too much rush, and strain, and wear and tear. Too little time to eat, to sleep, to digest the food, to rest tired body and tortured brain. Not enough time to think once in a while of health and strength and happiness and a long and useful life. A widow and orphans left to mourn. A big estate that under the dissecting knife of the executor falls all to pieces. 'Tis the story of thousands of business men in life reputed wealthy and successful. It is a story that is unnecessary—need not be.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery if resorted to occasionally will keep a man or woman in good health. It goes to the roots of things. It tunes up the strings of life and makes them vibrate to the music of good health. It makes the appetite keen, the digestion good, the blood pure, and the nerves strong. Then ill-health is an impossibility, and work is a pleasure. Thousands say so.

Your "Golden Medical Discovery" has been a great physician to our family," writes Mr. Ira S. Frost, of Naylor, Ripley Co., Mo. "My wife's mother had Bright's Disease. His water was almost pure blood. We got a bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and it did him so much good that he tried another and then a third, and the fourth entirely cured him."

Nothing in the world so many times pays for itself to its owner as a good medical book. The very best one is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. Now for a limited time, an edition, paper-covered, will be distributed FREE. Send 21 one-cent stamps (to pay the cost of mailing only), to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. For 31 stamps you may obtain the book in cloth, beautifully stamped.

TWO PRETTY WEDDINGS.

Holman-Duncan and Close-Hodgson Nuptials Yesterday. A very pretty wedding was that which occurred at half past ten o'clock yesterday morning at the residence of Hon. and Mrs. John Duncan, Calumet, when their youngest daughter, Fannie, became the bride of William J. Holman. The ceremony was performed in the parlor, which was most tastefully decorated with smilax and white roses, by Rev. Dr. Hunter, assisted by Rev. Daniel Stalker. Relatives and a few immediate friends of the contracting parties were present. The bride was given away by her father, and was attended by Miss Maggie Grierson as maid of honor, and W. H. Thielman supported the groom as best man. The bride's gown was of white tulle silk, veiled with white mousseline de soie, and she carried bride roses. Miss Grierson wore white crepe, veiled with mousseline de soie, and carried red roses. Mrs. Duncan was attired in old blue, trimmed with black beaded lace. The bride's gift to the groom was a pearl pin and that to the maid of honor a pin set with pearls and diamonds. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Holman left on the afternoon train for Chicago, and will be at home in their handsome new residence on Willow avenue in about ten days.

which there is an indebtedness of $4,500. Mr. Culver has prepared forty-five $100 bonds, payable in five years, with 6 per cent. interest, which he is disposing with but little trouble. The investment is a straight business proposition and is perfectly safe.

An Enjoyable Cantata.

The presentation of the cantata "Ruth" at the Lake Linden Opera House, by the young people of the Congregational and M. E. churches, drew out a good sized audience Tuesday evening that was well repaid by a rich musical treat. The several vocal solos were beautifully rendered, and the choruses were excellent, showing the result of careful training.

The property, which is very valuable, is not for sale but may again be leased for an extended number of years on the condition, however, that nothing less than a fire-proof building be erected.

FINANCIAL REVERSES.

Disappointment of an Investor Who Overworked the Market.

They had been talking about trusts and the immense profit realized by capital, says the Washington Star.

"A man is never satisfied, however big the returns may be," remarked the man with the patient expression.

"Yes," said the plump-looking citizen with a meerschaum cigar holder; "no matter what a person achieves, he is always haunted by the thought that he might have done better. The trouble about making money rapidly is that a man fails to be content with a fair percentage of gain on his investment."

"I have a friend who is exactly that way. He turns up his nose at a mere hundred per cent. or so."

"He must be a plunger."

"No; he's a conservative investor."

"What does he handle?"

"Well, you might call them government obligations."

"He must have a new kind of a good thing."

"He used to have. But he's lost me. And it's positively depressing to read what he says because the two-cent stamp he recently bought to put on a letter to me didn't realize the usual dividend of five dollars."

TO BE PUBLISHED.

Vas' Amount of Evidence Secured by the Venezuelan Commission.

Further Deliberation by Them Made Unnecessary by the Proposition to Arbitrate—Little Doubt That Venezuela Will Ratify the Plan.

The Venezuelan commission is in a state of suspended animation only as far as the deliberations of the commissioners toward deciding on a true divisional line of the disputed territory are concerned. The executive of the commission is, however, carrying on its labors with undiminished energy in the effort to arrange for publication the vast amount of evidence on the controversy which it has collated in the past ten months and which is expected to prove invaluable to the subsequent arbitral tribunal. The impression created by recent publications that the commission will make a report to the president involving opinions as to the merits of any portion of the controversy, is characterized as distinctly erroneous by President Brewer and Secretary Mallet-Prevost, who are at present the only active officials of the body, the other members having left the city not to return or again take up their studies of the evidence unless the agreement entered into by Lord Salisbury and the state department proves abortive in the Venezuelan cabinet and congress. It is stated authoritatively that no intimation has been received from President Cleveland or an official source that anything is expected of the commission for the present, but its existence is still continued for fear of a necessary resumption of its work through failure of the proposed settlement. There is, however, so little doubt in official circles that Venezuela will ratify the convention with Great Britain that the commissioners have practically taken the termination of their work for granted and have directed the publication of all reports which will be essential to a future decision with the stipulation, however, that all opinions as to the merits of the dispute be expurgated and that the colorless facts alone be presented.

Beyond these publications the commission has no idea of making any report, but expects to be discharged of its functions by the president as soon as the good offices of the United States have been formally accepted by both parties of the controversy.

WEDDED AMONG COFFINS.

Amusing Circumstances Resulting from a Preacher Being an Undertaker.

Scores of empty caskets and coffins stood grimly against the walls of Rev. Stephen Merritt's undertaking establishment at 210 Eighth avenue, New York, the other night when Michael Taylor, wearing an old suit of clothes, under the coat of which was a hickory jumper, entered with Delia Kerrigan. The couple were approached by William H. Griffin, the undertaker's assistant.

"Where's the minister?" asked Taylor.

"He'll be here in a little while," said Griffin, supposing that he was wanted to conduct religious services.

"Maybe it is something I can do," suggested Griffin. "You know I am the assistant and understand the prices of everything."

"But you can't marry anyone, can you?" asked Taylor.

Griffin looked from Taylor to the girl, and a light dawned upon him. The assistant went out and returned in a few moments with Rev. Stephen Merritt, preacher and undertaker. There, in the midst of the coffins, with the assistant as "best man," the couple were married with a brief service.

"Well, it's all over, is it?" asked Taylor.

"All over," said Griffin.

Then, as a sort of finishing remark, he added: "Call again."

Taylor smiled and he and the bride left.

LOCATED AT LAST.

Professor at Lick Observatory Picks Out Mythical Companion of Procyon.

In a letter to the San Francisco Examiner Prof. J. M. Schaeberle, of the Lick observatory, announced that he had at last located the mythical companion of Procyon, which has been years the object of eager search by astronomers the world over. Prof. Schaeberle says: "On the morning of November 14, 1896, while examining the immediate vicinity of Procyon with the great telescope, in a clear and perfectly tranquil atmosphere, I unmistakably found the long-sought-for body shining like a well-defined yellowish star of about the thirteenth magnitude. My measures of that same morning, so made and arranged as to remove all doubt as to the reality of the object, give the following place referred to Procyon:

"Position angle, 318.8 degrees; distance, 4.6 minutes."

Crematories for the German Army.

A portable crematory for military purposes has been invented by a Polish engineer. It has the appearance of the army baking oven, but is much higher and heavier, and is drawn by eight horses. It is intended for the disposal of the bodies of soldiers killed in battle, so as to avoid the danger of epidemics from the burial of great numbers of men. Each German army corps, it is said, will be equipped with one.

LADIES TO ACT AS EDITORS.

New Year's Mining Journal Will be Gotten Up by Ladies of St. Paul's.

ENTIRE PAPER UNDER THEIR CONTROL THAT DAY.

Will Begin to Solicit Advertisements at Once-Pages Will Teem With Local and Literary Features -Ladies Issue.

LADIES WILL TAKE CHARGE.

New Year's morning on extra edition of THE MINING JOURNAL will be gotten out by the ladies of St. Paul's cathedral. This edition will be in its entirety the work of the ladies. The editorial and business staffs of the paper will yield their responsibilities for one night, and the ladies will take their places, doing everything but the mechanical part of the work in connection with the publication of the paper. Among the ladies of St. Paul's church there are many who have a high order of literary and executive talent. They mean to give these talents full play and bend all energies to getting out an issue that will be a credit to the ladies of Marquette and the whole upper peninsula.

A feature of the paper will be the number of literary articles it will contain. These will cover a wide range of topics, some of them familiar to some subjects and others for which the writers will need to go far afield for their data. Local history and reminiscences will furnish some an opportunity to display their talents.

Ladies whose taste runs in more practical directions will be found on the business staff, soliciting advertisements and wrestling with the problems that beset that end of the business. The subscriptions and sales will be looked after by still others.

The project of issuing a woman's number has been in the air for a week or so, but it was not culminated till yesterday, when the ladies of St. Paul's had a meeting and decided to undertake the work. Having decided to get out the number, they deemed it best to begin labors at once, and the members of the advertising committee expect to begin the canvass of the merchants today. The other committees, too, begin work immediately, but what they do will not be so much in evidence until the issue of the paper.

CITY BREVITIES.

Weather forecast: Generally fair, except snow flurries near the lake; stationary temperature; westerly winds. Yesterday's temperature: 7 a. m., 35 degrees; 12 m., 44 degrees; 7 p. m., 41 degree; maximum, 47 degrees; minimum, 28 degrees.

R. A. Chappell was down yesterday from Trout Creek.

A. J. Ruby, agent of the South Shore at Ewen, was in the city yesterday.

R. C. Williams, L'Anse's wellknown real estate agent, was in the city yesterday.

Kassel Oshinsky is offering special bargains in winter overcoats and wraps.

St. Margaret's mission young ladies will hold their bazaar this evening in Morgan Memorial chapel.

H. B. Horton, representing the Chamberlain medicine company, of Des Moines, Ia., was in the city yesterday.

At its last meeting the Brotherhood of St. Andrew decided to rent a suite of rooms in the Savings bank building for club purposes.

The mail carriers went up in a body yesterday evening to see Professor Dwyer give an exhibition of his ability to life heavy weights.

A meeting of Wentworth lodge, Degree of Honor, will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon for the purpose of electing officers for the new year.

The lecture given by the Rev. Lewis F. Esselstyn on "Life in Persia" to-night at the Presbyterian church will be free, though an offering will be taken at the close toward defraying the expense of his tour in the upper peninsula.

The Christmas bazaar of the Methodist ladies was opened last evening in the basement of the church. It was well attended and the articles in the booths found a ready sale. The supper tables were also well patronized. The bazaar will be continued to-night also, the stock of Christmas articles that were sold out being renewed to keep a good selection. Tea will be served this evening at six.

The building at the corner of Front and Arch streets, recently burned and until then occupied by the Children's Home, has been put in first class repair and is again ready for occupancy. Since its overhauling it looks fresh and bright. In its temporary quarters right away as four of the little people are down with the measles and the attendants have their hands full caring for them.

The case against John Toutloff occupied the attention of the court all most the entire day yesterday and was not given to the jury till 3:30 in the afternoon. After being out about an hour a verdict of guilty was brought in. Young Toutloff was remanded to jail to await sentence. When the jury retired in the Toutloff case the last criminal action to be heard this term was begun. This is a case against Zoel Chandonet for robbery. The case against Dennis Green, an alleged burglar whose pal pleaded guilty, was also prossed, as the prosecuting attorney feared he would not be able to secure a conviction.

Calls It an Imposition. To THE MINING JOURNAL-There is a lady traveling through this peninsula who is passing herself as the representative of the Children's Home society of Lower Michigan. Her business is to solicit aid toward the support of the above society. Whether she is an agent of said society or not makes really no difference. It is enough to know that there is what is known as the Children's Home society of Upper Michigan which was organized last January in this city, and which has trustees and advisory boards in every town of one thousand or more inhabitants, all of whom are interested in the welfare of children, and who are acting in harmony with Rev. F. A. Holtzhausen, who is the superintendent. Any child of any age needing a home will be taken care of by this society.

Mrs. Lamping, the person in question, has thus far succeeded in gathering large sums of money from the benevolent public in this region of which thirty-five per cent. has gone to her personal credit, thus making a lucrative business out of the needy children in the lower peninsula, whose cause she has learned to plead most successfully. Not only has she succeeded in gathering large sums of money but she has secured considerable annoyance to those who are well disposed toward the unfortunate and quite a number have expressed themselves in strong terms against this unbusinesslike and unchristianlike mode of procedure.

The people of Lake Superior are noted for their generosity but they object to being bothered every few weeks by different parties representing precisely the same kind of work. Since Mr. Marlow of St. Joseph did not think worth his while for five years after he organized the lower Michigan society it is the opinion of the trustees and officers of the upper Michigan society that he should confine his gathering of funds to that part of the state in which he does benevolent work.

Trusting that the above lines will prove sufficient to prevent any further intrusion.

I am yours, etc. A Trustee of the Upper Michigan Children's Home Society.

IMPROVING IN MANNERS.

English Customs Getting a Strong Foot-hold in Eastern Cities.

The English club manner is gradually becoming adopted by the New York, Boston and Washington young clubs, along with English-built clothes. The new departure, in department, says the Washington Post, is quiet, natural, frank and simple—a great improvement on the loudness which marked the demeanor of clubmen 40 years ago. Our young fellows have gone in for English ways, have not only appropriated British fashion in clothes, but have developed athletic and manly sporting tastes, while "tubbing" is more the custom. When, then, with the bath, the ride to hounds, plenty of outdoor exercise, hunting, shooting expeditions, and the sensible clothes of everyday wear, the race of young fellows is a decided improvement on the hard-drinking, dueling, security-going grandfathers, who loathed athletics and games of all sorts, except poker, and sought excitement in an occasional fox hunt and were not happy until they had been out on "the field of honor" several times and "bagged" their man.

Already a wall begins to go up in society as to where the men are to come from who can be counted upon to insure the buds a good time. The young fellows who have been facetiously dubbed "the geography class" by some club wag are not quite old enough to don the toga varilis, and yet too big to wear knickerbockers. The society of mamas, in a quandary, seriously think of making an appeal to Secretaries Herbert and Lamont to find something in the way of duty here for the dancing young army and navy men and thus relieve the pressure.

Wheat Bread in England.

It is only within recent years that wheaten bread has become a staple article of food among the laboring classes of England—in fact, some parts of the country still maintain the use of oats and barley in various forms in preference to wheat. In 1317 there was a great wheat harvest in England and the price suddenly dropped from 80 shillings to 6 shillings 8 pence a quarter. In proof, the following from Eden's "History of the Poor," published 100 years ago, may be quoted: "So small was the quantity of wheat used in the county of Cumberland (England) that it was only a rich family that used a peck of wheat in the course of the year, and that was used at Christmas."

MARQUETTE, Mich., Dec. 7, 1896. To the Hon. Mayor and common council of the city of Marquette:

GENTLEMEN: Your committee to whom was referred the matter of selecting and presenting to your honorable body the names of six gentlemen to serve as a commission, to act jointly with a like commission from Jackson and Ionia, with the view of drafting a bill and causing the same to be introduced at the next session of our legislature, making it obligatory for the state of Michigan to return all ex-convicts to the place from whence they came, would respectfully report that we have given the matter careful consideration and have arrived at the following conclusions:

1st. To present to your honorable body names of gentlemen who are willing to act on said commission and defray their own expenses is out of the question. None will go on that basis.

2nd. Your committee are of the opinion that a commission consisting of three is ample and, therefore, would respectfully present the following named gentlemen who have consented to act on said commission provided they are reimbursed to the amount of their actual expenses: Gad Smith, Rush Culver and C. D. Blanchard, and we would further recommend that the sum of one hundred dollars be appropriated from the general fund to defray the expenses of said commission.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

C. D. BLANCHARD, WALTER T. WARD, L. H. STAFFORD, Committee.

Said report was on motion received and ordered placed on file.

On motion of Alderman Sherman the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That Messrs. Gad Smith, Rush Culver and C. D. Blanchard be appointed a commission to act with like commissions of the cities of Jackson and Ionia to procure legislation providing transportation for ex-convicts to their homes, and that the mayor and controller be authorized to draw an order or orders for payment of actual necessary expenses of said commissioners, not exceeding one hundred dollars in all.

Ayes—Aldermen Desjardins, Jacobs, Pendill, Robertson, Sherman, Shea, Tobin, Trethewey, Vandenberg and Ward. Nays—Alderman Krieg.

HIGH SCHOOL MANUAL TRAINING

Ishpeming Schools Up to Date in Every Respect Now.

The boys attending the High School who are taking a course in manual training are greatly pleased with the equipment which was recently added to the department. Eight lathes and a band saw were among the principal machines installed. The latter is an up-to-date machine, embracing all the latest improvements. It is provided with an automatic brake and noiseless belt. The belts used on the lathes are also noiseless. Instead of their being connected with leather laces the joints are glued together with a preparation made especially for that purpose. Professor Davis, who has charge of the department, did the soliciting. He did the work so neatly that it is necessary to examine the belts closely to locate the connecting points. The sawing machine is provided with saws of various sizes, from one-eighth of an inch to one inch in width, so that light or reasonably heavy work can be done. The machinery is operated with power furnished by an electric motor.

Speaking of the new machinery Mr. Davis said that it would make a vast difference in the character of the work turned out during the coming year as compared with last year. Although the lathes have been in use but a short time some of the boys have already learned to operate them very well. By the end of the school year a number of the older pupils will have some very fine pieces of work, from the lathes as well as the bench, to show. Some good samples of bench work can be seen there now.

One excellent feature of the manual training is that each boy must complete any work he undertakes without assistance from the instructor. Before starting the work the boys are given designs to study out. If they feel that they can accomplish the work they are told to go ahead with it, but not to ask for instructions. This is doubtless a good plan, as the pupils invariably have to do their work without assistance from the instructor or those further advanced.

The boys are shown how to use the tools properly. This, and the sharpening of the tools, are the first things taught them. Each boy has a complete set of lathe and bench tools. These must be kept in good condition or the boys hear from the professor.

A large rack, with a compartment in it for each student, has been provided. This was made in the school. The smaller samples of each boys' work are kept in the rack so that the parents or others interested may come there and examine them at any time.

The training department is certainly an interesting place and the boys who are taking the course are getting much valuable information. Professor Davis is a thorough instructor and has the boys under such perfect control that their time is well spent while they are in his charge.

The high school gymnasium is perhaps as interesting a place as the manual department. Since the fire department's apparatus was put there the equipment is quite complete. The boys make good use of the place. Every evening after school closes, also on Saturday afternoons, as many as one hundred of them will congregate there. There are several dozen Indian clubs and dumbbells in the racks and the floor is pretty well taken up with bars of different kinds, vaulting horses, spring boards, rowing and pulling machines, etc. Suspended from the ceiling are the rings, climbing poles, etc. The boys are not permitted to run about the gymnasium and interfere with the work of others. Professor Ewing has them in charge. In case they do not behave themselves and tramp properly they are denied the use of the apparatus. Some of the boys are quite proficient in gymnastic work. The pupils who train steadily in the gymnasium are provided with lockers where they keep their wearing apparel. The boys all appreciate the gymnasium and while they are kept under such good control as now the exercise they receive there will certainly be beneficial to them.

Manisung Is All Right.

A. F. Howard, who conducted a furniture and undertaking business in Ishpeming about a year ago, but who is now in a similar business at Manisung, spent yesterday with friends here. He has great faith in the future of the town. While it is not as lively there now as it was a few months ago Mr. Howard thinks Manisung is quite a town for its age. There are not a great many men working there at present, but quite a number are in the woods near there. He says at least fifteen hundred men will be employed about the mills next summer. Mr. Howard is enjoying a good patronage.

Danger Lurks in the Piano.

A somewhat heroic French scientist has boldly declared that a large number of nervous maladies from which girls at the present day suffer are to be attributed to playing the piano. Statistics show, according to this authority, that of 1,000 girls who study the instrument before the age of 12 no fewer than 600 suffer from this class of disorders, while of those who do not begin till later there are only some 200 per 1,000, and only 100 per 1,000 among those who have never learned to play the piano. The violin is also proved to be equally injurious. The remedy suggested is that children should not be permitted to study either instrument before the age of 16 at least, or, in case of delicate constitutions, not till a still later age.

Advice from the Gallery.

When "Faust" was being played in a small Lancashire town this incident is being told: After the duet Martha, who rushed on the stage, slightly raised one of the duetists, and cried out in alarm: "Oh, what shall I do?" There was a death-like silence in the house, when it was aroused by an old woman in the gallery shouting out: "The duetist has snuffed it, ye stoopid!"

Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for every season, but perhaps more generally needed when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison, Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c and $1.00 per bottle at E. ## THE TASSELS SAFE NOW.

College Girls at Baltimore Eat Turkey and Make Up.

Sophomores War on the Freshmen and Dismantle Their Caps—Retailatory Measures Result in Capitulation and a Return of the Captured Tassels.

The sophomore and freshman classes at the Woman's college celebrated Thanksgiving together. They had been at war for nearly a week over what is termed "The Rape of the Tassels." While the freshmen were attending an entertainment of the junior class the sophomores entered their rooms and cut off the tassels of all the college caps.

When the freshmen discovered their loss they determined to have revenge. At every opportunity they would clip the tassels from the caps of sophomores, until the latter, in self-defense, were compelled to cut off their own tassels and pin them on when the caps was to be used. At times the freshmen watched for an opportunity and stole up behind the wearer quietly, drew out the hat pins and seized the cap before any resistance could be made.

So the war went on with varying fortunes until Thanksgiving day, when a unanimous surrender was made on the part of the sophomores. At the close of the chapel exercises there was found hanging from one gallery to another of the main hall of Goucher hall, a long green string from which dangled gracefully the 40 lost tassels.

The sophomores surveyed it with such looks of admiration as an ordinary Indian might have regarded as many scalps. The freshmen, however, made a wild dash toward the object of their affection and soon appeared triumphantly wearing the tassels.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS' FAIR.

To Be Held in New York for Benefit of Home Near Binghamton.

The international commercial travelers' exposition to be held in New York during the last two weeks of December promises to be one of the biggest things of the kind in the history of philanthropy in this country. The object of the enterprise is to raise funds for the completion of the Commercial Travelers' home on South Mountain, near Binghamton, N. Y., and Tuesday, December 1, was named as national commercial travelers' day. Theaters, hotels, business houses and enterprises of all kinds throughout the country, running up into the thousands, donated a percentage of their receipts toward the fair fund, while drummers in every line of business contributed a cash donation to the same object. Money and exhibits for the fair are pouring in on the executive committee, the cash contributions ranging from $1,000, the amount contributed by the New York Telephone company, downward. One hundred of the leading hotels in the United States have agreed to contribute $10,000, and the first ten season tickets for the fair, of an actual value of two dollars each, have already been sold at figures varying from $100 to $200 each.

ROOM FOR MORE CADETS.

Recommendation That Congress Increase Number of Appointments to West Point.

The annual report of the board of visitors to the West Point military academy recommends raising the requirements for admission, so as to provide that applicants shall be examined in such subjects as may be prescribed from time to time by the secretary of war before they shall be admitted to the academy.

As the barracks and academic buildings were found to be ample for the accommodation of at least 88 more cadets, or two at large for each state in the union, or one for each senator, and the additional cost would be slight, the board recommends that an act of congress should be passed, authorizing the nomination of one cadet by each United States senator, in addition to those now nominated by each member of the house of representatives.

The board of visitors recommend additions and improvements at the academy barracks, extension and repairs of riding hall and stables and a number of other improvements which they think will make the military academy the most complete school of the kind in the world.

PROSPERITY IN GERMANY.

Rejoices Over Good Business—American Goods That Find Ready Sale.

Consul J. C. Monaghan writes the department of state from Chemnitz that Germany rejoices over a good business for the first three-quarters of this year. Increased imports, especially of raw material for manufactures, and increased exports of manufactured articles are the cause. The value of imports for the first nine months was $785,400,000, against $742,798,000 for the corresponding period of 1895. The total exports for the first nine months of '96 were $638,944,000, against $598,288,000 for '95.

Among the articles most certain to make their way in Germany, if properly handled, Mr. Monaghan says, are wooden wares, carriages, desks, furniture, shoes, saws, files, crackers, biscuits, wafers and typewriters.

A Pretty Speech.

In one of Lowell's letters to Briggs the former mentions Thackeray's visit to Boston, and says that during the meeting of Thackeray with Ticknor, the latter said: "One mark of a gentleman is to be well-looking—for good blood shows itself in good features." "A pretty speech," replied Thackeray, "for one broken-nosed man to make to another," and in the letter Lowell added: "All Boston has been secretly tickled about it."

ANNUAL MASQUERADE BALL.

Negaunee German Aid Society Making Arrangements for Its Tenth.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Negaunee German Aid Society held last Sunday afternoon it was decided to give the annual masquerade ball of the order on Friday evening, Jan. 29. For the past nine years this organization has never failed to give a masquerade ball on the last Friday in January. These dances have always been a success socially and financially and the one this year will certainly not be an exception.

The committee in whose hands the preliminary arrangements have been placed is made up of Henry Coster, Richard Coppes, Alex Tenshek, Henry Schwartz and Dan Washmuth. The committee will meet next Sunday when matters pertaining to the music, prizes, etc., will be arranged. The amount to be expended in prizes will be the same as usual—about $65. This will be divided into seven or eight prizes. The price of tickets will be the same as last year—fifty cents for each person.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury. as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

DO NOT PUNGE OR WEAKEN THE BOWELS, but act specially on the liver and bile. A perfect liver corrector. Carter's Little Liver Pills.

Boiling River it is sure enough. It is not as large as the Mississippi, indeed it is quite small, but a mighty interesting stream for that. It issues from the sides of a mountain in a thousand tiny rills, more or less, and of almost as many colors. These gather themselves into pools and lakelets on the mountain's side, covering an area of about 200 acres. Overflowing their boundaries they slowly trickle down the sides of the mountain forming small cliffs, the most wonderful in the world. From a distance one can hardly believe what the eyesight reveals—white, black, orange, lemon, terra cotta, green, blue, red, pink, separate and in manifold combinations stand out before him. It is a hill of painted cliffs on the sides of the mountain, rises high above. And the odd part of it is that each of these exquisite colors represents a different temperature. Does that startle your credulity? Even so it is true.

When through with this beautiful painting process, these waters again come together and then, as if full of mischief like a pack of small boys trying to play hide and seek, dive down and remain under the ground for a space of two miles and then flow out from the mouth of a canyon as one of the clearest, most beautiful, green streams imaginable. Where these waters emerge from the mountain into the little lakes they are hot, boiling hot. During their dark underground journey they fall several hundred feet and also many degrees in hotness, so that when they again see daylight they are much cooler. This then is Boiling river, an underground mountain stream of hot water.

But you ask, where is it? Where can I see it? It is in Yellowstone Park at Mammoth Hot Springs. It is one of the lesser, mind you the lesser—wonders of this land of wonders. Go there and see it by all means but first send to Chas. S. Fee, General Passenger Agent, Northern Pacific Railroad, St. Paul, Minn., six cents for Wanderland '96, that tells all about this wonderful region. (7-34)

FOR THE TABLE.

Some Dishes That Are Truly Palatable, Yet Easily Prepared.

Veal Roast With Tomatoes.—Wash a fresh, tender roast of veal, lard it well, salt and pepper it and dredge with flour on both sides. Lay it in a baking pan with hot water enough to nearly cover it, and roast for an hour, basting with the gravy every ten or fifteen minutes. Then turn on the other side, and to the roast add a quart of peeled and mashed tomatoes, two or three onions chopped fine, two sprigs of parsley chopped fine and black pepper. Pour this mixture over the top and baste for another hour every ten minutes, adding boiling water as needed. Serve hot with its own gravy, which is to be eaten with rice cooked dry.

Deviled Lobster.—Chop the meat finely of a boiled lobster, after removing the obnoxious portions, keeping the coral by itself. Season the mince meat with cayenne, mustard, and some favorite sauce pungent in quality, salt and stir well together. Mix the coral smooth with strong vinegar till of a creamy consistency. Put the meat into a granite stew pan, with sufficient water to prevent burning. Bring to a boil, add a tablespoonful of butter and the prepared coral. When it all boils up remove from the fire.

Swilled Eggs.—Boil one dozen eggs hard, cut same lengthwise in halves, slicing about the bottom to make them stand. Extract the yolks, rub to a smooth paste with a little butter melted, cayenne pepper, a little mustard and a dash of vinegar. Fill the hollowed whites with this paste. Chop cresses, season with pepper, salt, vinegar and sugar. Spread same about two inches thick on a platter and lay the eggs thereon in rotation. Can use lettuce or cabbage instead of cress.

Scalloped Sweet Potatoes.—A dish of scalloped sweet potatoes is delicious. Peel, wash and slice them in thin slices, put a layer of them in a large pudding dish, sprinkle salt over them, with a very little powdered cracker crumbs, and put a bit of butter; then another layer of the sliced potatoes, cracker crumbs, salt and butter, until the dish is full. Don't be sparing of the butter, as this requires more than the scallop of white potatoes. Pour in milk enough to nearly cover and bake until nicely browned.

Sweet Potatoes Creamed.—Boil the potatoes. When cool enough peel and cut in half lengthwise, then cut each half in three long pieces. Place on a tin in a hot oven, sprinkle with salt and put two spoonfuls of butter in the pan; when they have been in a few minutes pour over them a cupful of sweet cream. When it is hot pour the creamed potatoes into a vegetable dish and serve.

Cocoanut Pudding.—Cream one cupful of sugar with the yolks of six eggs, and stir in one-half pound of grated cocoanut (fresh grated is better than the desiccated), one pint of rich milk, and one-half cupful of stale sponge cake crumbs, two teaspoonfuls of vanilla, and the whites of three eggs well frothed. Put in the oven and bake for 40 minutes. Add to the top of the pudding a meringue made of the whites of the other three eggs, beaten stiff into which has been stirred one-half cupful of powdered sugar. Let this brown slightly, then serve.—St. Louis Republic.

COCAINUT PUDGING.—Cream one cupful of sugar with the yolks of six eggs, and stir in one-half pound of grated cocoanut (fresh grated is better than the desiccated), one pint of rich milk, and one-half cupful of stale sponge cake crumbs, two teaspoonfuls of vanilla, and the whites of three eggs well frothed. Put in the oven and bake for 40 minutes. Add to the top of the pudding a meringue made of the whites of the other three eggs, beaten stiff into which has been stirred one-half cupful of powdered sugar. Let this brown slightly, then serve.—St. Louis Republic.

SICK HEADACHE Positively cured by these Little Pills.

They also relieve Distress from Dyspepsia, Indigestion and Too Hearty Eating. A perfect remedy for Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Costed Tongue Pain in the Side, TORPID LIVER. They Regulate the Bowels. Purely Vegetable. Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

LYDIA WHEELOCK.

BY MARY E. WILKINS.

We all agree that Lydia Wheelock is very plain looking, but that she is very good. She was never handsome, even as a girl. She never had any youthful bloom, and her figure was always as clumsy and awkward as it is now. Poor Lydia, with her round shoulders and her high hips, always moved heavily among the light-tripping maids of her own age. Seen from behind, her broad, matronly back made her look old enough to be the mother of them all. Bright and delicate girlish ribbons and muslins, which set off their happy, youthful, flower-like faces, made poor Lydia's dull, thick cheeks look duller and thicker and heavier.

Some women, as plain-visaged as Lydia, seeing themselves, as it were, like dingy barnyard fowls among flocks of splendid snowy doves and humming birds, might have deliberately tried to cultivate loving kindness and sweet obligingness of manner as an offset. But Lydia was not brilliant enough for that, neither had she such personal ambition. It is doubtful if she had ever looked in the glass much, except to ascertain if her face was clean and her hair smooth, and if her lack of comeliness ever cost her an anxious hour.

As a child at school Lydia never whispered, was never tardy, seldom failed in her lessons, and never teased away another girl's candy. Besides, her mother always vouched for the fact that she was as good as a young and tender infant, and consequently seemed to have been actually born good.

"Lyddy never cried, except when she was real sick," her mother used to say. (She lived to be a very old woman, and napped upon her good daughter as if she were the favorite string of her whole life.) "Never knowed her to cry because she was mad, as the other children did. Lyddy allers took her nap regular an' slept all night without fussin'. An' she never banged her head on the floor 'cause she couldn't have her own way. She allers give in real pleasant and smilin'."

What was true of Lydia as a baby has undoubtedly been true of her ever since—she has "allers give in real pleasant an' smilin'." There may be some people who would urge the plea that Lydia had an easy temperament, and not naturally such a firm clutch upon her desires that it is agony to relinquish them. But if all the ways that Lydia has patiently and smilingly accepted have been her own ways, she must, even if her temperament had been ever so stolid, have had peculiar tastes and likings. Sometimes it would have been almost like a relish for the scalping-knife or the branding-iron. If Lydia has not, metaphorically speaking, many times during her life banged her head upon the floor, it has not been for lack of proper temptation. She has had from any human standpoint a hard life. Her father died when she was a young girl. She had to leave school and go about helping the neighbors with sewing and cleaning and extra household tasks when they had company, to earn a pittance for the support of herself and her mother. Lydia's mother, although she lived to be so old, was always a feeble woman, crippled with rheumatism.

Lydia lived patiently and laboriously, earning just enough to keep her mother comfortably and herself uncomfortably alive, and that was all. She had one good meal a day when she was working at a neighbor's. Often we know that was all she had, although she never said so and never complained.

Her mother never went without her three meals a day and her warm flannels, when the dread of Lydia's wife was that she might faint away some day at a neighbor's from lack of proper nourishment, and the state of her attire in midwinter be discovered. She confessed her great dread to somebody once, after she was married.

When Lydia was about 30 she suddenly got married, to the surprise of the whole village. Nobody had dreamed she would ever marry. She was so plain and so poor, and seemed years older than she was—old enough to be her own grandmother, as Mrs. Harrison White said. She married a man who had paid some attention to Mrs. Harrison White when she was a girl, and she was popularly supposed to favor him, but her parents objected, so she married Harrison White instead.

Elisha Wheelock, the man Lydia married, all the neighbors had called "a poor tool." He was good-looking and good-hearted, but seemed to have little ambition and little taste for industry. Moreover, everybody said he drank. Lurinda Snell said she had seen him when he could scarcely walk, and many others agreed with her. Although the village was surprised the village gave a sort of negative approval of the banns. Everybody agreed that a man like Wheelock couldn't hope to do any better. No pretty girl with a good home would forsake it for him, and as for Lydia, it was probably her first and only chance, and she could never hope to do any better either. Moreover, Elisha owned a comfortable house—his father had just died and left it to him, with quite a good-sized farm; and it was said positively that Lydia's mother was to live there. "Lydia's got a good home for herself and her mother if 'Lisha don't drink it up," people said. Some thought he would. Everybody watched to see the old homestead and the fertile acres transformed into thicket, draughts going down Elisha's throat, but they never did.

Lydia has had her way in one respect, if not in others, and that one may suffice for much. She has certainly had her way with Elisha Wheelock and made a man of him. Not a drop has he drunk, so far as people know—and all the neighbors have watched—in all the years since he married Lydia. He has worked steadily on his farm, he does not owe a dollar, and he is said to have a nice little sum in the savings bank. Moreover, he is a deacon of the church, and on the school committee.

Some of the neighbors say openly that Elisha would never have been deacon if it had not been for his wife; that Lydia ought to have been deacon, and since she could not, because she was a woman, they made her one by proxy through her husband. Elisha is a good deacon—a very good deacon, indeed—and he has Lydia to fully and carefully advise him.

Lydia has never had any children, but she has always had a large family. She began with her own mother and her husband's mother, and a little orphan second cousin of her husband's who had lived with the Wheelocks since her parents died. Her own mother, as I said before, was very feeble and a deal of care; her husband's mother had a jealous, irritable disposition and was very difficult to live with; the orphan cousin was delicate, had the rickets, and, people said, none too clear a mind. Lydia kept no servant, and she had to work hard to keep her house in order, sew and mend, build up her husband's character, and reconcile all the opposite dispositions and requirements of her family. She has had to delve in a spiritual as well as temporal field, and employ heart and soul and hands at the same time ever since she was married. After her mother died an old aunt of Elisha's, who would otherwise have had to go upon the town, came to live with them. She is stoned-deaf and has a curiously inquiring mind, but it is said that Lydia never loses her patience and never wears of shouting the most useless information into her straining ears.

It was accounted somewhat fortunate that Elisha's mother did not live long after Aunt Inez appeared, for it would have been, not too great a strain upon Lydia's patience—nobody doubts the long-suffering of that—but for her strength, to reconcile two such characters and keep the peace for any length of time. However, Elisha's mother had not been dead long before a sister of the rickety orphan cousin, who grows more and more of a charge as the years go on, lost her husband and came to live at the Wheelock place with her four children. They said she would be a great help to Lydia, but she is a pretty young thing, in spite of her four children; she is a good singer, and she is constant at all the sociables and singing-schools, and does a deal of fancy-work, and the neighbors think Lydia has to take nearly all the care of the children. They also think that the young widow is setting her cap here and there, and hope she may marry and so relieve poor Lydia of herself and her children. But, after all, it would be only a temporary relief. Some other widow, or orphan, or aged and infirm aunt, would descend upon her, for it is well known that it is Lydia who aids and abets her husband in his charity toward his needy relations. And, moreover, it is told how she lets the children and the additional expenses be as small a source of worry to him as possible. Some of the neighbors think that if Lydia Wheelock stints herself much more, to provide for widows and orphans, she cannot go to meeting for lack of simply decent covering. Lurinda Snell is positive that she keeps her shawl on in hot weather to cover up her sleeves, which are past mending in any decorous fashion, and simply make a show of their innumerable and not very harmonious patches. And as for her bonnets, it is actually an insult to look attentively at them.

Poor Lydia has not had a new carpet in her sitting-room since she was married. The one Elisha's mother had was old then, and long ago went to the rag man. Ever since she has lived on the bare boards. It is a dreadful thing in this village not to have a carpet in the sitting-room. The neighbors have never got over being shocked at the loud taps of their shoes on the bare boards when they enter Lydia's. She had a rag carpet almost done, they say, when Lottie Green and her children came; since then she had no time nor opportunity to finish it.

But everybody knew that if Lydia and Elisha did not do much for other people she could have a tapestry carpet in her sitting-room, and a black silk dress every year. She sees to it, however, that Elisha is not stinted in his discomfort. He has his good Sunday clothes, and looks as well as any man in the village.

Lydia is a good cook, and is said to simply pamper her husband's appetite, and takes more pains to do so the more she has in her family. We are all very sure that Lydia never neglects her husband for his needy relations, nor relaxes for an instant her watchful eye upon his spiritual and temporal needs. Miss Lurinda Snell declares that she has built up a fire in the north parlor every evening this winter that Elisha may sit in there and read his paper, and not be annoyed by Lottie Green's children. They are very noisy, boisterous children.

Lydia Wheelock, busy as she is with her own household cares, does not confine her ministrations to them. If a neighbor is ill Lydia is always ready to watch with her, and a most invaluable nurse she is. Not a neighbor but would rather have Lydia than anybody else over her when she is ill.

Lydia is always in the house of mourning; people claim her sympathy as if it were their right, and she seems to recognize her obligation toward all suffering without question. She is also always ready with her aid on occasions of rejoicings, at wedding feasts, as well as funerals. She comes to the front with her kindly sympathy when the exigencies of human life arise.

We look across at the meeting-house on a Sunday and see Lydia sitting listening to the sermon, her plain face uplifted with the expression of a saint, under that bonnet which we avoid glancing at for love of her, and our hearts are full of gratitude for this good woman in our village.—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE OLD LAWYER.

Depew Says What He Ought to Be to the Community.
I know of no more charming member of the community than the old lawyer, says Chauncey Depew. I studied with a judge who, as I left his office, had completed the 86th year of his life and the 65th year of his practice. The old lawyer is the custodian of the secrets of the community. If he has been true to his profession, and to his best instincts and teachings, he has been the benefactor of the village or the town or the county in which he has spent his life. He has settled family disputes, he has reconciled heirs to the provisions of wills, he has adjusted satisfactorily to all and to the prevention of family feuds the distribution of estates, he has prevented neighborhood vendettas on boundary lines, he has brought old-time enmities into cordial friendships, he has made clients and money by being honest, faithful and true. The secrets of his register, of his safe and of his memory are the skeletons of the family closets of the whole neighborhood. But the process of modern cremation does not more perfectly destroy the human frame than does this lawyer's fidelity to his oath keep out of sight these family skeletons.

Harvey, who was a cripple and who took this means of occupying his time and adding to his income. He has since died, and the office is for sale. It contains a fine assortment of plain and fancy type faces; leads, slugs, rules, etc., in sufficient quantity; a first class Gordon press (foot power), a power paper cutter, lead cutter, tabulating press, etc., together with cabinets and various other aids to the work of a job printing office. The press is new, not 10,000 impressions having been made on it, and the material all in first class condition. The parties holding the office can make no use of it, and it will be sold at a great bargain. It is a fine chance for some young man who has a taste for printing to procure a good working outfit at a nominal figure. Address inquiries to L. D. Harvey, Chocolay, Mich. Co-Defendent With Beveridge in Famous Murder Case Discharged from Custody.

TESTIMONY SHOWED ONLY ACCESSORY AFTER THE FACT.

Herring Fishers Disagree About Size of Net Meshes—Dwyer Anxious to Find an Opponent—New Kind of Bicycle.

NEW TURN IN FAMOUS CASE.

From a private telegram received here last evening it is learned that Redpath has been discharged and the case against Beveridge continued till the February term of court. This is decidedly a new turn in the famous murder action, which is so familiar to every man and woman in the upper peninsula.

Later at night THE MINING JOURNAL received a special telegram containing more detailed, though still meagre, information. The case was set for trial at Bessemer, in Gogebic county, yesterday. Deputy Attorney General Chase of Grand Rapids and A. R. Adams, prosecuting attorney of Ontonagon, representing the state, appeared before Judge Steere. The defense was represented by H. O. Fairchild of Green Bay.

Mr. Fairchild moved for the discharge of Redpath from custody on the grounds that the testimony on the examination showed that Redpath could have been nothing more than accessory after the fact, whereas he was charged with being a principal. The motion was granted by the court and Redpath given his liberty.

The prosecutor then made a motion and presented affidavits to show that the main witness for the state, Mrs. Brant Peterson, was sick in Marquette, and that it would be impossible for the prosecution to go to trial. This motion was granted and the case carried over till the February term.

Beveridge was not admitted to bond but is returned to jail in Bessemer.

These Want Larger Nets.

There seems to be a difference of opinion among the Marquette fishermen about the size of nets best for catching Lake Superior herring. One class of fishers are getting up a bill to present to the legislature to have it made legal to fish for herring with nets of one and three-quarter inch mesh, and another class says that it is opposed to the proposed change, that the nets now legal are all right, and if the mesh were a quarter of an inch larger it wouldn't do any hurt.

"What those fellows want," said Captain Parker, owner of the tug Theora, "is to have a law that will allow them to catch young whitefish. There was a law passed seven years ago just to prevent that sort of thing, but these fellows have never been made to observe it till just lately."

"I'm not afraid to say," he continued, "that that old Frenchman down by the rolling mill caught as many whitefish this season as both of the tugs combined, and you can tell him that I said so."

While the captain and the reporter were talking a fisher named John McLean walked into the fish shanty. He told how that very morning as an experiment he had set a three-inch, a quarter larger than legal, net, and had caught forty-five or fifty pounds of herring.

"At a quarter of a cent a pound that doesn't make you much," said the reporter. "How much do you usually catch with the one and three-quarter inch mesh nets?"

"Sometimes we get as much as a hundred and fifty pounds and sometimes we don't get any. But my small mesh is sixteen or eighteen feet deep and the big one I had was only four. The trouble isn't with the quantity they catch. They catch too many now. That's what makes the price so low. If they caught less they would be paid a higher price, probably go up to three or four cents where they ought to be, then it wouldn't be wearing out twice and doing the work for nothing."

Dwyer Wants a Match.

Professor M. J. Dwyer is very anxious to make a wrestling match before he leaves the upper peninsula. He will end his class here in about thirty days and go to Toledo, O., where he will have a large class. He says he is anxious to show the people of Marquette what his system of physical culture does as a developer of strength, and for this reason would like to make a match with some good man before he leaves. His class is in such condition that it would not interfere with his training.

He makes two challenges. He will wrestle any man in the world at 160 pounds, bar none, in catch-as-catch-can for $500 or any part of it and post a forfeit on demand. The professor claims the middle weight championship of the world in Greco-Roman or catch-as-catch-can, and says he stands ready to defend it against all comers.

When he was in Ishpeming he tried Cornish wrestling, which is not his style and with which he was ill acquainted. He succeeded in throwing more than a score, but Rowett, champion wrestler of the copper country came on him fresh, having only met only two men, and succeeded in downing the professor. However Mr. Dwyer is not ready to yield to Rowett's claim of best man and comes out with a special challenge for him.

He will meet Rowett any where, preferably in Marquette county, in a mixed match. One bout is to be Cornish, the other Greco-Roman and the third bout is to be the choice of the man who throws his antagonist the quicker in the first two. This gives each man a chance at his special style of wrestling. He proposes to meet Rowett for a hundred dollars side.

The professor is endeavoring to learn Rowett's exact whereabouts that he may address him a personal as well as a public challenge but he has not as yet been able to do so.

Novel Wheel.
Hardware window decoration might almost be classed among the lost arts, so rare is it to see anything more than a miscellaneous collection of cartridges and tin washboilers on exhibition.

For this reason the window exhibition at Manhard-Jopling's is worthy of note. It is a bicycle, every part of which is made from articles of stock. Andy Forbes is the builder.

It is of the safety pattern. The wheels themselves are made of large circular saws. Inch and a quarter hemp cable is what the tires are composed of. They are punctureless. The frame is made of one man saws and buck saw blades and a cant hook. The front forks are of axe handles, the rear forks of bucksaw blades, and the cant hook is the bar. The handle bars are braces; the seat is a meat saw. The cranks are coffee mill handles with skates on the ends for pedals. The sprocket wheels are small circular saws, and a small chain completes the driving apparatus. A dash lamp is used for a headlight.

The similitude to a regular machine is not far fetched at all, in fact it looks as if all it needed were someone to get on and ride it off.

Tax Sale Ended.

Yesterday forenoon finished the annual tax sale, two days and a half being consumed in crying the different descriptions on which taxes were owing in Marquette county.

The sale was as numerously attended as usual, but many of those who attended were interested only to a limited amount. The sum total of the sales has not been figured out yet, but it is between nine and ten thousand dollars, a little under what it was last year. The feature of the sale was the smallness of the undivided interests some people were willing to pay the taxes to secure.

In conversation with the treasurer a reporter jestingly suggested that in view of the number of tax titles that had been knocked out in the courts buying one was a good deal like "going against" the shell game.

"Not at all," said Mr. Wright. "A tax title is a good investment, that is if you know the land you're buying on. You may get the land, or if you don't you may make the owners pay liberally to clear the cloud on the title. If it's redeemed or the title knocked out you get the money you have put in and interest at 8 per cent. It's a good way of investing money at 8 per cent., in other words."

Entertainment and Ball.

In Fraternity hall this evening will be given an entertainment and ball. The affair is under the direction of Albert St. Cyr, who will be assisted by the Queen City quartette and a number of local amateurs. The program is a varied one.

There will be a stereopticon part, showing some beautiful African scenes on a thousand mile trip up the Congo, also a number of railroad and water scenes that have never been shown before on a public scene.

Albert St. Cyr and Fred Price acrobats and contortionists, will introduce some funny work in leaping, bending and chair balancing. Vocal and instrumental music will be rendered by the Queen City quartette and other members of the company. The quartette is composed of Messrs John Hogan, Charles Christian, Joe Hogan and David Oshinsky. Joe Broad will introduce all styles of elog, jig and reel dancing, and will give $100 to any man who will meet and defeat him in all around dancing.

The admission will be a quarter for adults and fifteen cents for children.
