It is well known that a watch will stop for some unexpected reason and go on again all right if it is given a slight jolt. The same trouble may not cecur again for years. This is an acci-dent to which all watches are liable when carried around on the person. It is due to the hairspring stud or the regulator pins. The cause is a sudden jump or quick movement, such as get-ting on a moving car. A jolt is given to the balance-wheel and hairspring and this renders the catching possible. The jolt must come at a particular fraction of a second during the revolution of the balance-wheel, otherwise the spring will not catch.—N. Y. Journal.

AN INTERESTING RELIC. A Battered Tablet from the Ancient Temple of Herod. In the interesting museum of antiquities at Constantinople the object that struck me most was a hoary, battered tablet, with a long Greek inscription cut on it in seven lines. It was discovered in Jerusalem about the end of May, 1871, by the French archaeolo-Thomas A. Edison, who has given gist, Clermont-Ganneau, at a considera graphic description of Herod's temple and mentions that the court of the borhood of a Roentgen tube and to his Gentiles was separated from the part astonishment he found that he could that was restricted to the Jews by two parallel walls, about 15 feet apart. The outer wall was about 41/2 feet high. Josephus menstill intact? In the case of a deaf man, tions that the Romans respected this law and no Gentile ever ventured to intrude beyond this point.

The prohibition in question, however, was long regarded as apocryphal, even although Philo spoke of the inscription and corroborated the statement of the Jewish historian. But the discovery of Clermont-Ganneau has placed the matter beyond dispute. The tablet which he found was part of one of the columns guarding the inner sanctuary from the approach of unhallowed feet, and the connection between the inscription carved on it and the passage in Josephus is most strik ing. The expressions and forms are almost identical. There is indeed a curious variation in the Greek word for "balustrade," or partition wall. In the passage in Josephus it is druphaktos, whereas in the inscription it is truphaktos; but this variation may be accounted for by the fact that Josephus used the correct classical term. while the inscription spelled the word according to the Jewish method of pronouncing it, changing a d into a t. Josephus twice refers to the inscription, once in his "Antiquities;" and the parallel passages are differently worded, showing that he did not intend to give the exact phraseology of the stone monument, but only the sense; and, tried, by the use of direct rays and also therefore, that the tablet should give the sense of Josephus' words, without suffocated by Sulphur.

While two men were hunting on the Yellowstone river, they saw in a small gulch a grizzly bear, curled up as if asleep. Being men of experience, they climbed up the side of the gulch and, when out of reach, hurled rocks at the hum animal. To their surprise it never moved, although hit quite frequently. Presently it dawned upon them that There was no wound on its body, and while the men were pondering over this singular circumstance, they became conscious of a sense of suffocation from strong sulphur fumes, arising from several holes in the ground near by. At some risk they investigated further and found the skeletons of four other bears, an elk, squirrels and other small game, all evidently asphyxiated by the noxious gases. The gulch made a natural basin in which the gas settled, and, as it is heavy and lies near the surface, quadrupeds fall easy victims in this death-trap. Even the hunters suffered from severe headache and neusea, after their brief stay .-- Golden Navs.

that the old-fashioned, laborious way of washing was ever given to woman as her particular work? It's an imposition on her. She ought to have had only the easiest things to do-and men, strong, healthy men, ought to have taken up this washing business. Now, here is a suggestion. In those families that still stick to soap and make their washing needlessly hard and unpleasant, let the men do that work. They're better fitted for it. In the families that use Pearline ("use with-out soap) and make washing easy, let the women do it. They won't mind it. 517 arranging the preliminaries for the society to the Ishpeming lodge of the

He believes in fashion and art for those who can afford them morally and financially, but he loaths the hypocracy of so called "society" that he finds in the palaces of sham. "It is possible for more sunshine to find its way into a hut than into such as these," he deelared.

In closing he emphisized his opening statement that happiness was from within, not from without.

Last Jury Case.

Yesterday afternoon in the circuit court a verdict was brought in in the last case to be tried by a jury this term. The case was one appealed from a justice court and concerned a cow on which the lower court had set a value of $60.

Charles Upstrom and Carl Hansen. Upstrom had a cow for which he engaged pasturage with Hanson for $2 a month. The understanding was that he should turn his cow out of the barn at the same time the Hansen cows were turned out, and that the Hansen children would drive them to pasture and bring them back at night. As the children were small and the father was afraid they might get hooked they were not to go into the barn and unloose the Upstrom cow. They were taken sick, and there was no one to drive the cows to pasture, but Upstrom did not notice this and turned his animal out just the same.
