ALGER'S SENATORIAL CANDI-

DACY.

The Detroit papers are doing a good deal of speculating concerning the candidacy of General Alger for the senatorial seat now filled by Senator McMillan. The prevailing belief among them is that Alger will drop out of the contest and that McMillan will be chosen to succeed himself without much of a struggle.

If this should happen an element of much trouble for the Republicans of Michigan in the next campaign would be eliminated. A contest between Alger and McMillan over the senatorship would greatly distract the party in the state, and might become so bitter as to Capital Paid In . . . $100,000 give the opposition control of the legis-Sprtlus . . . . . . . 10,000 lature. Republican party in the state will hope that Alger may decide not to be a candidate, and thus avert all possibility of disaster to the party. That Senator McMillan will not withdraw as a candidate has been fairly indicated by his expressions on the subject, as well as by the activity of his adherents since Alger disclosed the intention of being in the field for the senatorship in the coming election. If there is any "quitting" done it will have to be by Alger. One thing will operate powerfully to make Alger hesitate about giving Mc-Millan a clear field for the senatorial succession. It has been charged by Alger's closest friends, and not denied by McMillan, that when the latter was last elected he, in gratitude to Alger for having declined to be a candidate against him, promised not to seek a third term and to throw his support to Alger for the senatorship in 1900 should he then be a candidate for it. The violation of this promise must gail Alger greatly. His irritation on that account may determine him to enter the contest against McMillan when needed rest has restored his strength and reinvigorated his ambition. For the present he declines to commit himself regarding his intentions, leaving the newspapers to draw such inferences as they find warrant for from his conduct and the utterances of his friends. The iron market abroad is about as menting on the state of the trade in Great Britain, the Engineering and Min-

An American In London.

It has been said of the vast library in the British Museum that the 20,000 volumes kept in the reading room for current reference contain all that is worth reading in the million and a half volumes in the galleries. When an American author of eminence recently visited that great repository of knowledge, he was told by the librarian that The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia was more frequently called for than any of these twenty thousand volumes. As the twenty thousand volumes in the reference library, said the librarian, contained all that was valuable in the million and a half of books on the shelves, so The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia summed up and rendered accessible what was valuable in the twenty thousand.

The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia

marks the highest tide mark of the science, literature and art of the time. It is not simply an encyclopedia, dictionary and atlas. It includes all that varied knowledge for which heretofore one has been obliged to refer to encyclopedias, handbooks and special work on special subjects. It covers many reference works in one. It deals with knowledge rather than with opinions, hence you are never disappointed in going to it for information. It is in daily use in over three hundred colleges and universities, all of which have purchased The Century because they recognize it to be the standard work of reference as against all others. Besides, hundreds, and probably thousands of college professors have bought the work for his personal use.

The makers of the Century were all experts. In the preparation of The Century great care was taken that every feature of it should embody the highest and most accurate knowledge upon the subject by obtaining the services of those who are at the summit in their particular departments. The work is therfore the best ever produced. In its preparation over one million dollars were expended. This enormous cost is amply justified by perfectness of the completed work-a whole library in one publication.

WHAT A TRAVELER DISCOVERED

American works of reference are generally accepted with considerable reerve in conservative Great Britain, but cholarly persons there are not so blind as to deny themselves the benefits of a superior article, even if it is necessary to send across the seas for it. It is certainly a compliment to this country, and more particularly to the famous Century company, that the Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia was so promptly ac cepted as the standard of authority by the British courts and colleges. This was because it was evident that a work of such scope and scholarship had never before been carried to completion, and that a long period would necessarily elapse before anything on such an expensive scale could be again undertak en with a fair prospect of success.

In another column is an account of the surprise experienced by an American raveling abroad, when he learned, during a visit to the British Museum, that the Century was the work most called for and consulted of all in that noble ollection from the four corners of the vorld. This surprise was no more tartling, however, than is that of most ersons when they begin to use the Cenury for the first time, and learn that it really contains the things one desires to mow, and that each successive consultation of its pages displays the same happy quality. It is one that many nave expected of the old-fashioned reference works, but that has never been ealized until the completion of the Cen-

AN EXODUS TOMORROW.

BETWEEN RINGLING'S CIRCUS AT UNION PARK AND THE FIRE-MEN'S TOURNAMENT AT MAR-QUETTE THE HOME GUARD WILL BE VERY SMALL.

There will be a great outpouring of visiting in the city. the people of this city tomorrow and those who remain here will have it much to themselves. Ringling's circus at Union Park and the festivities of the first day of the fifth annual firemen's tournament at Marquette will be the people away for a day's amusement.

Tomorrow will be circus day. It is will be a tournament attraction. the Ringling show of '95 greatly strengthened and amplified. The tents will be pitched at Union Park, a point central between the twin cities. Ishpeming will be the headquarters of the circus, although the exhibition will be his themselves to that city if they care short time. to see this feature, and large numbers will go up to take it in.

There is no necessity of speaking in commendation of the Ringling Brothers' show. It is easily the finest and largest circus that has ever visited this section. It is a sweeping recommendation. The feaures are all fine and some of them marvelous. It is a tremendous show for the admission price of fifty cents.

In '95 a delay in reaching here from Houghton prevented a second performance in the evening. There will be no plete performances will be given. leaving that city at six o'clock and will attend the circus in the evening.

TOOK THE WRONG TRAIN.

A well known Negaunee man is the day. He went to that city to see the Ringling circus, desiring to attend the the circus will be here. After the perintending to catch a special train up the He was accompanied by several they found a train waiting and as it was pulling out the gentleman in question boarded it thinking it was going around the loop to this city. He was surprised that the rest of the Nemile the Negaunee man noticed that it did not take the loop track. This circumstance bothered him and he inquired about the train he was riding that he was bowling merrily on his way to Newberry. It was a matter of only a few seconds before he was out on the ties trudging back to Marquette. As the subject of the mistake is considerable of a railroad traveler his friends justly consider it "one on him."

QUEER CUSTOMER.

This Man Wanted New Clothes to Look Like Old Ones.

"I had a very queer customer one day last week," said a clerk in a big clothing store, according to the Brooklyn Times. "He came in wearing an anxious, perturbed expression and asked the head salesman to direct him to the 'slickest' clerk in the store. He was ent to me.

"He took me to one side and in a confidential way said: I'm to be married four days from now to a young woman who is coming on from the west, She has never seen me. She is a friend of my sister, who has cracked me up as the pink of perfection.

"The only thing I know is how to make money. I never bothered about my dress before in my life, but now I want to be particular. I want a complete wardrobe in a hurry. I know you yesterday for the first time since he can fix me with new clothes from head to foot, but that ain't what I want. I sent the clothing to the cleaners, the shirts to a laundry, and the hats to the block room.

City Offers Reward of Three Hundred Dollars for His Arrest and Capture.

SECOND ATTEMPT TO FIRE HOUSE BY THE BREWERY.

are working hard to unearth him. Yesterday forenoon he added to his list of atrocities by making an attempt to material against the side of the building and when discovered ran for the woods as fast as his legs would take him. Those who saw him were at some distance from him and it is by no means certain that they can identify him. FOUR PEOPLE SAW HIM.

Those who saw him were Peter Werner, his two daughters and a farmer named Stonebreaker. The Werners drove advised no demand for cash wheat at out to the scene of the fire to view the that point today. Primary receipts ruins. They drove down near the house and saw a man whom they took for a workman piling boards up against over a million was again disappointing the building. They called to him to know if they would be able to drive and flour, 660,000 bushels. Continental down where he was. This was the first he had seen of them, and as soon as their shouts attracted his attention he cut and ran. In his flight he passed through Stonebreaker's field and gave the farmer a flying view.

Certain traces which he left behind him support the theory that he is the same man who successfully fired the building Sunday night.

BULLET IN A DOG.

The prison bloodhounds worked on both trails, the one which he left in his Sunday evening flight and the one he left yesterday. They traced him in each case to the road and there lost the scent. It is possible he got into some vehicle and was driven away. In the night hunt there is reason to believe one of the hounds got close to him, for when the dogs were rounded up after several hours' ineffectual work one of the dogs was found with a hole in his side which appeared to have been made by a revolver bullet.

Chief Maney has given his entire time to the case since Sunday night and is it was evident that there was to be a doing his utmost to effect the capture.

Volume of Business Increases and Prices of Coppers Stiffen.

Yesterday was the most encouraging day the copper market has had for weeks. Business was so good as to even justify the suspicion that the long promised revival is at hand. The sales were upwards of 17,000 shares and nearly all active stocks made decided advances.

Arcadian went up 41/2 to 79, the highest quotation on the stock in weeks. Ar-Atlantic nold advanced one to 151/2. was going against the tide and dropped one to 29. Old Colony went up one to 10. Old Dominion advanced 1% to 38%. Osceola scored a gain of 11/2, closing at 901/2. A gain of 11/2 was made by Parrot, which closed at Tamarack advanced three to 225. Utah was stronger and made a net gain of one, the close being 441/2. Winona fell two to 11. Fractional changes were made by a number of other stocks.

No London copper quotations were received yesterday. Paine, Webber & Co. sent the following about the Boston market in their daily copper letter:

When the committee reports were reached Alderman Gorman presented the report of the finance committee on the Grace furnace tax matter. The report included the decision of the supervisors to demand 75 cents on the dollar and recommended that the council take the same stand. A resolution adopting the report of the committee and instructing the recorder to notify the furnace own-

The report was adopted and the sewer will be meeting with the same remarkable success it had in London, and the further built.
