THOSE wishing to buy first-class tin and hardware will do well to call on Peter Dolf, corner Front and Washington streets, for he keeps nothing but the best and will sell as low as anybody.

THE train from Munising on the D., M. & M. railroad, was stalled in a snow drift at Deerton, last Thursday night, where it will probably remain until the storm is over.

A gentleman from Randolph's camp at Grand Marais tells us that six barrels of sauerkraut were disposed of in twelve meals by the hungry woodsmen, and that there was but one Dutchman in the slant.

YESTERDAY morning a man was discovered in a bed room of the house of Mr. H. C. Taylor, on Bluff street. It was his son Neil, who woke up to find himself twenty-one years of age, and entitled to vote.

L. M. SPENCER has removed his harness shop to the store lately occupied by C. G. Collins, on Front street, near Main, where he will continue to please his customers by supplying them with the best of everything in his line.

MR. Ross, of the firm of Ross & Grove, the enterprising young men from Cincinnati, who have started a paint shop over Freeman Bros. livery stable, has been turning out some fine work lately. Mr. Grove is expected to arrive on Wednesday, when the firm will be ready to do plain and fancy printing in an artistic manner.

THE show given by the Oakes Bros., in Mather's hall the evening of the 25th was well attended, and was financially a success. The music was up to the average, but the playing was far below what Marquette audiences are used to, being devoid of novelty and showing either a lack of talent or a total obliviousness to the wants of the audience.

LAST Saturday evening Messrs. Owen Williams and W. W. Bittel connected the telephone in Mr. Pickard's office with Calumet, through Houghton, and heard the Calumet cornet band play several tunes. The connections made aggregated 150 miles, and the offices at Houghton, Negaunee, L'Anse, Michigan, Ishpeming, and others heard the music distinctly.

THE young till-tapper, Tommy Hogan, has been bound over to the coming term of the circuit court on a charge of grand larceny. The reason for the change is that his mother swore he was over 17 years of age, which debar him from participating in the benefits of the reform school. He can now be sentenced to a term of from three to ten years in the state prison.

ABOUT 10 o'clock on the night of the 25th, sheriff Jeffrey and marshal French were called from Mather's hall to quiet a general fight which was going on in Eugene LaBouchelle's saloon on Front street. The row was between a party of French and Irish who were having a lively set-to over some women who were visiting the folks in the rear part of the building. As the battle was over when the officers arrived no arrests were made.

THE new post-office regulation, of February 21, 1881, excludes from the third class of mail matter all printed matter filed out in writing, such as papers, circulars, handbills, etc. This matter, which under the provisions of Section 232 has been mailed in unsealed packages at the rate of one cent for each two ounces, or fraction thereof, must hereafter be prepaid at letter rates of postage.

CINDERS.

It's lots of fun hunting for pigs, but when you are sent for one to a house where only boarders are fattened, "it ain't no joke."

Voltaire said "God created women only to tame them."—Guess he has his hands too full to do the taming thoroughly in this neighborhood.

Did you ever hear a bed tick, or see a needle point?—Ez. No, but Cinders has severe recollections of having felt both.

It is said that "matches" are made in heaven, but a whiff of a burning match has led Cinders to believe they are manufactured in a much lower latitude, with a higher temperature and sulphurous tendencies.

Lavater remarked that "he who has neither friend nor enemy is without talents. He was rarer mixed, according to the expertness among, who have found that friends did not make the talents, but talents the friends, and that talents or ducts do not make as many friends as millions."

A little man of some four feet six inches, took offense at some article from one of our correspondents, and threatened to thrash him. When he was lifted by the nape of the neck high enough to gaze into the eyes of our six-foot, six and a quarter-inch correspondent, he saw fire or something else that had a cooling effect on his ardor.

A daughter of Erin being asked to make the lady manager of an orphan asylum acquainted with one of her friends, introduced the subject by saying:—"Mrs. Muldoon, this lady is the mother of seventy-five children 'thout divil a father, and she'd be after axin ye for a wee bit o' something to kape them."

He who drinks and goes away. But he who drinks between the drinks. Right quickly in the gutter sinks.

He who plays and is money out. Is nothing but a gambling lout. While he who leaves the table a winner, Is almost a saint; never a sinner.

The Washington correspondent of an exchange says "it is eight years since a senator was seen in his seat intoxicated." Wonder if that correspondent ever saw a man intoxicated in his seat. Cinders has seen many whose legs were a little off but never a man whose seat was drunk.

Not long ago a certain newspaper editor gratefully expressed his thanks through his journal for a pair of boots that had been presented him. And on the first instant the Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution printed a polite acknowledgment of the gift. The boots were an exquisitely decorative roll of butter. Peck's Sun.

Cinders would like to add to the above that he is under many obligations to the unknown person who presented an ounce of lead to a certain Arkansas editor in '78.

Her lips were like the leaves, he said, By Autumn's crimson taint; Her eyes like the snow-caps that preserve By pressing them, she hinted, The meaning of the gentle hint The lover did discern. And glided his lips to her'n. —Oconto Reporter.

He jumped as though he had been shot. By a powerful thunderbolt. He went down the road at a rapid trot, And kicked up a terrible dust; And when he shouted from afar, The girl she did discern. The awful mystic word "catarrh." She fainting there and then.

Our streets are being rapidly converted into miniature rivers, and the festive arches will be sailing ships made from the mighty shingle, on the rapid "I go on ravers," wading in the slush and aqua impura until that insinuating fluid permeates the leather foot-coversings of the said urethra, causing them (the boys, not the boots) to retire to the unwholesome atmosphere of the bed chamber with severe colds; which reminds us of our early childhood and the time we put on our first pair of boots. We had been reading Mother Goose, and were imitating the actions of "Doctor Foster, who went to Gloster in a shower of rain. He stepped in a puddle up to his middle, and never went there again." Besides being in the doctor's sorry plight, we had our basement thoroughly shingled, and had to go to bed until the boots recovered from the shrinking they received.

Def-stek pie! What is it? Is it alive? No; but if you'll tell me what it is I'll give you a case of this kind, but nevertheless, for the benefit of the public, I will tell what it is. In the first place boarders leave a part of the steak on their plates, also mutton chops, veal, hair-plus, ham, string and many other such things; they also throw their old shoes in the alley behind the hotel, and worn out underclothing is quietly dropped in the back yard; socks are left in closets.

Apple cores In the cuspadores. Cigar stubs in the hotel floors. Cats and kittens die off by scores. Old garments that men did want no more. And hung on the walls in days of yore, Are sent, sent.

By the villainous cook, Who, by hook or by crook, Her good principles forsook, And, with evil in her eye, Puts everything in the pie That she can spy Or on her claws can hook.

This is not tuff, you may rest assured, And if you had been as badly injured As I By that pie, You would want your life fully insured.

Some young men have too much gall for their own good and are liable to get into trouble when they do as one of Marquette's sons did last Sunday evening. A young couple were quietly strolling down Front street about 9:30, when the gentleman stepped into a cigar store to get a hot lemonade or cigar or something, leaving the lady on the outside. He had not been gone thirty seconds before another young blood stepped up, offered his arm and walked off with her. The smoker was rather surprised to see the prize being thus captured by the enemy, but he braced back, made everything taut below and began a stern chase, which in this case was a short one, for he overhauled the coquette being towed by a man of war, threw out his starboard jaw handle and helped the lady up hill. Some remarks about chewing a string were indulged in, so there is liable to be a naval encounter between the American man o' war and the German corvette.

RESOLVED, unanimously, by everybody, that the best interests of Marquette imperatively demand that James P. Pendill shall be continued for at least one more year at the head of our municipal government.

SCHOOLCRAFT county has not been geographically divided yet, but the people residing within its borders are nevertheless divided in their opinions, for some are in favor of having James Jones alias "Buffalo Bill," tried in Marquette, while others wish to have him tried in the county where he murdered Alexander Logan, February 25th. Should those who are in favor of his trial coming off here, gain the day, Jones will have to take a change of name from Schoolcraft to Marquette county.

THE MINING JOURNAL has received two numbers of the Duluth Weekly, a spy little four column quarto paper edited and published by Miss Susie M. Russell, whose enterprise and poetical efforts are above the average. In her apology Miss Russell says she "hopes that the larger press will not look down on us, but regard us as their 'little sister,' according to a seat in the corner, where we promise to be a good little girl and not tell tales out of school." Long life and a paying business to our pretty little sister and may she never have cause for a libel or breach of promise suit.

ON August 24th, 1878, while driving between Deer Lake and Ishpeming, Mrs. H. D. Lyons lost a handsome gold watch and opera chain in some bushes beside the road, and although a thorough search was instituted, reward offered and articles advertised quite extensively, nothing was heard from them until Wednesday morning last, when Mr. Lyons received a telegram from Mr. Hodgkins, of Deer Lake, telling him to take sheriff Jeffrey and go to the Winthrop location with a search warrant and visit the house of Max Lynton Lompree, a Frenchman, of Lyon, Mich. They did arrive at the latter place with Mrs. Lompree, the latter asked when the watch was lost. Mr. Lyons said about two years ago when the woman corrected him by saying "no, three years," thus indirectly acknowledging her possession of it. Without much more parley the woman produced from an old cupboard, the watch and chain. One of the children said he found it in the bushes, and that his mother was to have made necklaces of the chain, with which to decorate their sun-browned necks. Mr. Lyons will not prosecute the family because of their poverty and possible ignorance of the law.

HONORING DEITY.—Many of the very pious of our times, who, nevertheless are not very particular about observing the Golden Rule, are fearful that they may "dishonor God" by not holding orthodox opinions with regard to his character and attributes. The absurdity of such fears must be manifest to all who will consider our feebleness and the power we all concede to Him. As well think of a minnow in the depths of the ocean affecting unfavorably, by its opinions or thoughts, if it has any, the mighty steamship that rides upon its surface—only, after all, the comparison is not strong enough, by more than ten thousand per cent. I entertain wrong or imperfect opinions of deity, of course, and they may be, but can hardly be held as a crime; for, in this particular we must all be in the same boat—the finite being incapable of comprehending the infinite. It is safe to conclude that we treat God well when we treat each other well. A distinguished German—Norvalis, I think—says: "I touch God when I lay my hand on the human form." This hits the point exactly. So far as we know, man is the greatest visible representation of God's creative power. God himself we can never see, for he is invisible and unknowable except through his works, and is so far above and beyond us that we are utterly unable to comprehend him as a personality at all. The idea of the theologian who deifies a deity, or who honors him by not crediting it, or Him, with personality is too absurd to be taken into serious consideration. The fact is that those who don't believe in the personality of God, believe in his being far above and beyond all possible conceptions of personality. Old Pliny, the Roman philosopher, was a good type of this school. He said, "The universe itself is God." That is certainly doing tolerably well for a Serthion, as Pliny was, according to our modern notions. Whatever else may be said of this definition, it certainly doesn't "belittle Deity," and it will always remain a question whether any more restricted definition does not do it. If, in mind, I make God a person, I rob him of the very important attribute of omnipresence, for it would manifestly be absurd to even attempt the thought of a person occupying any two places in the world at the same time, much more to think of him as filling all the space and occupying countless millions of places.

Again, if God is a person, omniscient or Omnipotent, He must be bad, otherwise there would not be— as we know there is—more evil than good in the world. If I, a person, look on and see a man murder your wife and child, I having the power to prevent it, and the laws of our country will hold me particeps criminis. But let an impersonal power, say electricity or galvanism be present on such an occasion and no one would think of blaming it, although vastly superior in power to many thousands of men. MR. SINISIO.

"CAPT." Wm. Porteous, who was clerk on the Hurd the last two seasons, visited Marquette the early part of the week in the interest of Ward's Detroit & Lake Superior line of propellers. He states that he has been around Keweenaw Point, where he has received very flattering encouragement, and made some large contracts. The new line will consist of two fine propellers—the Northerner, which was built about three years ago, a staunch craft of 1,200 tons, and the S. F. Hodge, 800 tons, built last fall in Detroit. Mr. Porteous will be clerk of the latter, and those who have any dealings with the Hodge will find him one of the most genial gentlemen on the great lakes. The manager, Mr. Eber Ward, proposes to have one of the boats leave Buffalo, Cleveland, and Detroit every week, running through to Duluth and making landings at Marquette, Hancock, Ontonagon and all other shipping and receiving points. As there will be no transfers at Hancock the merchants further on will get their eastern freight from two to fifteen days earlier than heretofore, and will be saved the expense of handling twice at Hancock, as well as the dockage, besides getting their goods in a less damaged condition. The stockholders of the new line are Wm. H. Stevens, S. F. Hodge, (of the Detroit and Hancock lines), Don M. Dickinson, W. B. Wesson, Thos. W. Palmer, Eber Ward and Jno. M. Nicol, all of Detroit. It is the intention to put on more boats as fast as the business may warrant the company in doing so. The only regret that will be felt here is that the new company has not decided to put on a full complement of first-class passenger steamers.

At a recent consultation between the managers of the C. & N. W. and M., H. & O. railroads, some proposed changes in the running of trains were considered. The principal change contemplated is the addition of another through train, which, if put on, will leave Chicago about 10 A. M., and arrive at Negaunee early the next morning, where time for breakfast will be given the passengers before the departure of the M., H. & O. train for L'Anse. At the latter place close connection will be made with the steamer Ivanhoe, so that passengers for the copper country will suffer no delay at any point. On the return trip the M., H. & O. will arrive at Negaunee between 6:30 and 7:30 P. M., connecting with the through train for Chicago. The exact date when this change will take effect has not been definitely settled as yet, but will be, as soon as certain necessary arrangements can be made. The N. W. management has for some time been fully cognizant of the fact that an extra train was needed, and would have put it on but for some serious obstacles which have now been partially removed. The people of the upper peninsula will undoubtedly hail this announcement with delight, and wait anxiously for the day when the new departure shall take effect. The Northwestern trains are almost invariably overcrowded, causing much discomfort to the passengers, the trains from the south being seldom, if ever, on time. When these two enterprises begin to talk of a cause, their patrons very soon realize the effect.

Each rolled a barrel over the course used by the barrow racers, receiving well earned applause when they turned summersaults over their fire-water barrels and where in turn rolled over by them. This race was won by Lewis Collins in 59 1/2 seconds. The last contest was entered by four persons, who were blind-folded and who started in search of the pig which was let loose on the ice. After many vain attempts to find the porker, one of the racers stumbled over him, making the frightened animal "squeal like a stuck pig," which brought the other contestants to the spot, where, after much trouble and squealing the sweet smelling creature was taken into the strong embrace of Jas. Smart, who started to make his exit with him. On the way he fell any number of times and fairly shook the building by running his head against the wall. The crowd surged to and fro around the man and the pig, giving those at either end no chance to see the fun, and nearly smothering the pig. In just thirty-one minutes from the start, Smart carried off the prize. Altogether it was a laughable entertainment, and one which will long be remembered by the pig.

MARY SULLIVAN, wife of John E. ("Yank") Sullivan, was arrested and tried before Judge O'Keefe on Thursday, on a charge of assault and battery referred by Mr. Thea Steppard, who stated that on Wednesday Mrs. Sullivan had, without cause, maliciously assault her with intent to do bodily injury. The defendant was sentenced to pay a fine of three dollars and costs, or in default of payment, take ten days in the county jail. She is a bad termagant, and it is to be hoped she will profit by this, the first lesson. The second lesson in the book was given her in the same court yesterday afternoon, when she was brought up for having assaulted the person and scratched the face of Mr. Steppard—the result of which was arrived at too late for this issue.

[The following communication was unavoidably crowded out of last week's issue.]

It is exceedingly ungracious to criticize the acts of men who, without reward and at a personal sacrifice devote themselves to the public interest and the saving of the property of others. Hence, in anything I may say, I do not intend to express anything but admiration and gratitude for the alertness, pluck and vigor of our city firemen. I am not a fireman nor have I had any experience whatever in the management of fires and it would justly be deemed an impertinence were I to offer to instruct men who have made that subject a study and who have gained experience therein by a term of service. But I want to call public attention to a defect or two in our system which I think, can easily be remedied. When a man's house is on fire he usually wants help, but it is not help for all the men and boys in town to invade his parlors, carrying in the mud and slush of the streets, nor is it help for them to swarm over the house handling everything that attracts their notice, and it is the business of the city authorities to see to it that this is not done. I saw men at Watson's house, at the time of the fire there pulling out drawers in dressing-tables and bureaus and inspecting the contents, opening photograph albums and looking handsomely bound books while boys rummaged every where, doing mischief. I don't suppose that any of them intended any wrong, but I do know that none of them had any business where they were. I hold that a man's house is as much his own when it is on fire as at any other time, and that he has a right to the possession of his property, and the right of the public authorities to extinguish fire for the protection of the adjoining property; but outside of this paramount right of the public the owner has a complete right to forbid that a drop of water be thrown, or that a man enter, upon his premises.

I say then that our police regulations are seriously defective. Surely a few good citizens can be found who can be invested with police powers for such occasions, and who will serve, without pay, if need be, and keep an unauthorized and irresponsible crowd out of a man's house and off his premises, especially when he is already the victim of one calamity, and is too busy to do it himself. Again, I take leave to suggest that no horse ought to be carried in to a man's dwelling until the necessity for so doing is imperative. With the flood of water that we can command it is scarcely possible that a fire will ever get beyond control, especially in the day time. It is very evident that the fire at Watson's could have been suppressed without injury to any part of the house or furniture, except that actually on fire, if the firemen had waited until the fire was located, and had then confined their water to the place where it was needed. It was just so at Jacob Brown's and at H. A. Butt's. These houses were all gutted and flooded throughout with any necessity whatever, the damage by water in each case being ten times greater than by the fire.

Of course it is easy to find fault and to tell how a thing might have been done, but I am certain that our plan of operation is defective in these two particulars, and that the defects can be remedied, and means devised, whereby a man's property can be protected rather than destroyed. I am told that some questions of dignity and authority have arisen between the Fire Marshal, or his assistants, and the foremen of hose companies. I should think that such questions ought to be impossible, the rights and duties of each ought to be clearly defined. I tried, two years ago, to get the city council and fire board to adopt a joint code of rules designed to settle all such questions and to remedy the abuses above complained of. If there was any reason for not doing it, except that it would cost something to print the rules, I never heard what it was. I am sure that I give expression to a very general demand that it be done now, at once. I had a hundred times rather pay the entire expense myself than to have my house abused as I consider was done in each of the cases above cited. M. H. MAYNARD.

THE STORY OF A SKULL.

The lights flashed from many windows on the storm raging in the night without, and all the gay world of San Francisco had collected in this elegant Nob Hill mansion to amuse itself and forget that the world held a care. The curtain ran down on the last scene of "The Hunchback" amid the murmurs of well-bred applause, and the beautiful young lady who had carried off the glory as Julia, and her lover, Clifford, came bowing before the curtain, and were loaded with the floral offerings, applause, and congratulations of the friends for whose pleasure they had been playing. Was it all play? Ten minutes later Lelia Everson stood in the library to rest a moment before joining the admiring throng who listened with so much delight to her charming delineation of the capricious Julia. Through the minds of more than one of the audience had flitted the thought that young Dr. Philip Ray threw a shade of tenderness into the part of Clifford that was not all stage effect; and who, looking at the woman, could wonder if he acknowledged her a queen? Leaning on the chimney-piece, her jeweled hands rivaling in whiteness the marble they touched, with her great dreamy brown eyes, that could flash with wit, half filled with tears; with her brown hair drawn away from her broad, smooth brow, catching in its waves the glint of the dim light falling from above. With the rich white silk clinging about her in stately folds, she formed a picture which riveted for an instant where he stood, in the doorway, the handsome young actor who a few moments since had held her in his arms and called her wife. It was acting, of course, and it was folly for him to dream that there had been a shade of yielding to the pressure he involuntarily gave the slender waist he was permitted to clasp in a stage embrace. It was folly to think those beautiful lips lost their scorn when he spoke, or that the dreamy eyes turned sometimes on him with a look that thrilled his heart with a great, wild hope. It was, acting of course, for an instant after did not freeze him with her indifference? But now he was powerless under the fascination of her beauty, and before he knew it he was at her side, and speaking words that betrayed what he had sworn would remain a secret of his own heart.

"My beautiful Lelia, cannot you see I was not acting? Do you think that the day after we could meet and part the same; that the enchantment of your loveliness would not work my destruction? I tell you I was not acting. I love you! I love you! It has come rushing like a tidal wave upon me. I have struggled to escape it, but in its seething, rolling, turbulent flood it has overwhelmed me, and thrown me at your feet. Will you not listen to me? May I not hope that in all these months I have gained one atom of your affection? With you as a guiding star, I will mold the world like clay; fortune must smile on me; I will wrench its treasures from the world and lay them at your feet. My beautiful queen, will you not accept my homage? I love you! I love you!"

She still leaned against the marble in her proud white beauty, with the half light streaming over her. "Have you quite finished?" she said, in the calm, slow way, the cruel unpunished tone he knew so well, and every word cut like a knife wound deep in quivering flesh. "Have you said all you have to say? Then," at his bowed head, "we will consider this scene ended." It was his doom; he read it in her face. Had she turned to marble, that her face was so white and still? But as the door closed on Philip Ray, the cold, proud beauty, who would not even listen to his passionate words, fell with a moan on the rug in the flickering firelight, sobbing with convulsive sobs that shook her slender form like supple willows in a winter's gale. "Philip!" she cried. "Oh, my king! How could I send you from me. Philip—Philip—I love you! I love you with my whole soul!" Philip Ray paused on the threshold, and as he did so caught the sound of a faint cry like the echo of his own name; the closed door yielding to his touch, he heard her words. Another instant and he was at her side, his arms were around her, his lips pouring on hers a wealth of passionate kisses, and he was murmuring in her ear his tender, burning speeches.

It was but a moment that she lay unresisting in her lover's embrace, another moment she drew herself away, and as the hot flush died from her face she seemed frozen, and the iciness had chained her tongue. Then all at once it loosened: "How dare you touch me? How dare you kiss me in that way? Are you a madman, or do you think me mad, that you presume to thus address me? Have I not already told you that our interview is ended?"

As she swept from the room, the rustle of her silken skirts sounded harshly in his ears, and the faint murmur of music, which crept up from the hall below, seemed like the echo of heavenly music to the senses of a soul in the tortures of purgatory, an agonizing remembrance of a lost paradise. As he made his way through the glittering, bejeweled throng below, from the lights and music to the night without, it blackness seemed light against the shadow lying in his own heart.

That morning as Lelia Everson and her father rolled home from the scene of her dramatic triumph, the handsome old gentleman, with the snowy hair and black sinister eyes, bent forward, and, taking his daughter hand, said to her, "Lelia, let me congratulate you upon your brilliant success as an actress." Silence. "Let me, too, congratulate you more heartily upon having made the most brilliant match of the season. Mr. Canning has told me that you have promised to be his wife." Still silence. But when the home door closed on them, and her foot touched the stair, she turned upon her father like a young empress: "I have done as you desired. I have given myself for gold that you might still be at least not a dishonored name. I have broken the truest heart in Christendom, and shattered its faith in woman. I have broken my own heart, and sold myself to the bondage of a thousand devils. I have cut off from my life all that makes the life of a woman either beautiful or good. I have done what you call my duty. And it is done. From this night we are strangers."

Six months later the newspapers of San Francisco rang the whole round of chaining adjectives to describe the wedding ceremonial of the Hon. Walter Canning and Miss Lelia Everson, the most beautiful of the Golden City's lovely daughters. Society called her a queen, and bent in idolatry at her feet, but her husband knew her to be a snow queen, an ice maiden, who glistened, sparkled, scintillated in the sunshine, but never melted.

They traveled far and wide. Mrs. Canning was as much the rage in the salons of Paris as in her own Western city. She received the admiring glances and grave attention of oriental nabobs with the same calm air that she accepted a hot-house flower from her respectful gray-haired gardener.

The civilized world held scarcely a spot but barren, desolate, parched, sun-dried Arizona, which she had not seen. And almost the first train which entered its borders carried among the party of gay excursionists the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Canning. Here, like an oasis in the desolation about her, they found a lovely, accomplished woman, who, following her husband in his failing fortunes and settling with him in this wild country, had gathered about her a rare group of curious memories of her remarkable sojourn among the semi-savages of Arizona. The gay young people glanced through the motley collection, and flitted off for other amusement. But Mrs. Canning, most sedate, lingered by her kindly hostess, and listened as she related strange scraps of incidents connected with the objects before them—queer relics of the ancient Aztec civilization; odd arrows and implements, warlike and peaceful, of a later barbarism. At last, taking up a skull from the group before her, she asked its history, and the cause of its peculiar decorations. Then the gentle old lady, in her sweet, monotonous voice told its story:

"A young physician," said she, "who was connected with the army, came to Arizona two years ago, and in a brave defense of some helpless immigrants who were attacked in the desert he fell, his brain pierced by an Indian arrow. This is his skull, and, as you see, an artist friend has drawn upon it these sketches, illustrative of his life. Here, his infancy, he lies a babe in his mother's arms. Next, his school days, a rosy-checked boy coasting on his sled. Next, a student, bending over his books. Then his entrance into the world, as the grave college president places, in his outstretched hand his diploma. Next, his appearance in the maelstrom of society. Last, his gallant defense of the helpless immigrants and heroic death in the desert."

"A strange, sad history, is it not?" calmly said Mrs. Canning. "What did you say his name was?" "Philip Ray?" "Was it the same cold woman who sat so still and collected a minute ago, who, in a harsh, choked voice, with starting eyes and trembling lips, begged again for the name?" "Philip Ray," repeated the gentle old lady, in wonder at the eagerness of her guest. "It was enough. With the empty skull pressed to her breast, she cried: 'I am indeed punished. I have murdered the man I loved!' and sank back white and still in her chair." "When they lifted her up she was dead; dead—with the skull of her murdered lover in her arms." "The Aragonaut." San Francisco, Feb. 1881.

[The above story is based upon incidents which really took place, and the characters who figure in it were known to many San Franciscans.]

I believe I know now what dar is one of dem niggers who has described, but I needs a cart and spade." "What for?" "Cause she has been out in de cullud cemetery for de last ten years. As I tole yer, Miss Sallie, dar is mighty few civil industrious niggers prowlin' about on de face of de yarf, but I'll do de best I knows," and he trudged off on his exploring expedition.

[To the Editor.] TOWARD the Pioneer of Manistique and its able editor we have none but the kindest feelings, and we can well believe that he has been misled in his estimate concerning the movement for the division of Schoolcraft county in placing it to the "Marquette ring," and we take his word for it that he does not oppose the division, only the boundaries. We wish it clearly understood that we seek separation for our own best interests, and not for the good of Marquette. Of course, we will pay tribute in the matter of county taxes to Marquette county, but Marquette will have no control over us except in judicial matters, nor will our supervisors be permitted to vote on the board of supervisors in Marquette in any matter except the quota of taxes to be raised in this county to keep up our end of the burden. W. A. Cox, Munising, March 20, 1881.

NOTIONS OF THE FIRST SETTLERS.—Mr. W. H. Amidon, one of the first settlers in the town of Gilmantown, Wis., and one of the most industrious and hard working men in the county, has been very severely troubled with rheumatic pains during the past few years, so much at times, that he was disabled from performing manual labor. Learning of the wonderful cures effected by the use of St. Jacobs Oil he procured a few bottles and experienced immediate relief. Many others of our acquaintance have used it and express themselves as highly gratified, with the relief it has afforded them. This king of medicines can be bought everywhere.—Mondovi, (Wis.) Buffalo Co. Herald.

BUSINESS IN DETROIT.—The marked improvement in business in Detroit is seen by the amount of business done "out of season." For example, Messrs. M. S. Smith & Co. no longer get "spring stocks," "fall stocks," and "winter stocks," but instead they keep their store filled with the choicest goods all the year around and add novelties constantly. The result is that some of the best days' sales made since war times have been made this very week, supposed to be in the midst of the dull season. The finest watches, the most elegant diamonds, the choicest bronzes, the most unique articles of bric-a-brac are to be found at M. S. Smith & Co.'s to-day.—Every Saturday.

The Mining Journal.

ISHPEMING, APRIL 2, 1881.

Dr. Bigelow and lady will retrace their steps northward in a few days. They are expected home by the latter part of next week.

WHEN Capt. Dickinson left here for the Commonwealth mine a large number of the miners employed at the New York sold their houses and pulled up stakes to go with him. Every one of them has since returned, and those who were so fortunate as to secure their former situations and houses consider themselves lucky. People don't know how good a place Ishpe- ming is to live in until they move away.

NEW CONGREGATION.—The Scandi- navian Lutheran congregation has grown so large of late as to render their church altogether too small for their accomodation, and they found themselves compelled either to build a larger church or divide the congrega- tion. They chose the latter alterna- tive. The church was owned by nearly an equal number of our Swedish and Norwegian Lutheran citizens, and in dividing, the Norwegian parties sold their share in the church to the Swedish members. The former immediately withdrew and organized a new church society. They have concluded to erect a house of worship at once, and have entered into negotiations for the same. The new church will be located on the newly improved street running east from Second street to Nebraska hill, and is to occupy a lot east of the new planing mill. It will be a neat frame structure of ample size to accommodate the congregation and Sunday school. J. Wahlman will have the building of it, and will commence work as soon as the weather permits. Even since the dividing of the congregation the Swedish Lutherans find their church too small for their purpose and will soon begin work on an addition to it. There are now three Scandinavian religious societies in this city, all of which are in a prosperous and growing condition.

NO PAPER SENT TO ANY AD DRESS UNLESS PAID FOR IN ADVANCE.

SUBSCRIBERS ordering their papers transferred from one address to another should be careful to give the name of the postoffice to which the paper is being sent at the time, in order to secure prompt attention, as otherwise the mail clerk may have to search through the entire list to find the name.

PARTICULAR NOTICE.—THE MINING JOURNAL will not be sent to subscribers after the expiration of the time subscribed and paid for, unless the subscription is renewed. Subscribers can always know when their subscription expires by comparing the number of the printed address on their papers with the corresponding number on their receipts.

All letters of a business character, such as advertisements and communications intended for the columns of this paper, should be addressed to "THE MINING JOURNAL," and not to the editor personally, as is often the case. Only letters of a personal or confidential nature should be addressed to—A. P. SWINERD.

All advertising sent from abroad must be paid for in advance, whether coming direct from the advertiser or through an advertising agency. Orders from advertising agents will not be accepted, or receive any attention whatsoever, unless based on our regular rates, and the usual commission and accompanied by the cash. This rule is imperative, and will not be departed from under any circumstances.

THE Union Iron & Steel company has secured an extension of the option on section 5, (Armstrong's,) till the first of June, agreeing to sink another 100-foot shaft by that time.

The people of the upper peninsula should unite in one unanimous remonstrance against a bill now pending in the state legislature the passage of which will give to the Ontonagon & Brule River railroad company 240 sections of the disputed Ontonagon & State line land grant for building twenty miles of road, without any guaranty that it will ever complete the line. This bill will give them all the lands within the grant which have been patented to others by the government, and the great value of which has been demonstrated through explorations made by those who supposed they were receiving valid titles when they purchased from the government. Under this bill the Brule company, (composed of Saginaw lumbermen,) can built the south twenty miles of the road and acquire title to the most valuable portion of the grant, and afterwards consult their own convenience and pleasure as to whether they will build further or abandon the work altogether. On the other hand, one of the companies owning and operating a line from Milwaukee northward and which is now completed to within seventy-five miles of the proposed southern terminus of the Ontonagon & Brule River road, and who are desirous of making connection with the proposed eastern extension of the Northern Pacific, has submitted a proposition to take the grant as it stands (allowing the state or general government to confirm the titles to such lands as have been sold within its limits) and build the road, giving the most ample security for its completion within such reasonable time as the legislature may prescribe.

It is the earnest desire of the people of the upper peninsula that the legislature shall so dispose of this grant as to secure the construction of the road within the shortest possible time. They care nothing about this or that company, further than the one or the other is most likely to deal fairly with the great interests to promote which the grant should be honestly applied. The legislature will, therefore, fail in the proper discharge of its duty if it does not require from the company taking the grant the amplest guaranties for the speedy completion of the line—not simply of a part of it, but of the whole. Among the conditions that should be imposed ought to be one requiring the company taking the grant to begin at, and work from, both ends. The Milwaukee company offers such guaranties; it will build the road for the unsold portion of the grant; the Saginaw lumbermen propose to gobble up lands which have been sold by the government, in most instances to bona fide purchasers, and offers no guaranty whatever for a faithful fulfillment of its contract. The legislature can settle all disputed points as to private claims within the grant, secure the building of the road, and very materially advance the growth and prosperity of the upper peninsula by throwing the Saginaw company over—unless, indeed, it comes forward with an offer to build the line for the grant as it now stands, coupled with good and sufficient security for the fulfillment of whatever contract it may enter into with the state.

In the meantime, our people should unitedly remonstrate against the passage of the bill now pending. Its passage would be an outrage upon a large number of honest claimants, who have paid their money to the government in good faith for lands embraced within the limits of the grant—a deliberate giving away of something for nothing—and a course of action which would certainly justify congress in declaring the grant forfeited to the general government at its very next session.

IMMIGRATION from Germany is on the increase, if the report that 1,100 persons had left Berlin for this country last week is true. Over 4,000 persons arrived in New York in a single day, mostly Germans.

Rev. Father Mahony, of Erie, Pa., claims to be working miracles, with the help of prayer, in healing the sick, lame, halt and blind, and raising the dead. He will take the lecture field in a few days, with the intention of letting the world know the great secret of his alleged marvelous powers.

THE action of the Wisconsin legislature in prohibiting the national custom of "treating" one's friends to any intoxicating beverage, is hard on the editors but a good thing for the taxpayers, who will not have to furnish their worthy solons with money to treat each other, or their several constituencies.

ST. LOUIS seems to think that the opening of the new Southern Route to San Francisco will bring enough California wheat to that city to make her (St. L.) the greatest grain market in the world. Chicago had better go to work on another through line or the city of big feed will get grain to the other big features of her trade.

A WISCONSIN legislator has introduced a bill which requires women to vote at the next state election upon the question whether or not they want the right of suffrage and to assume the privileges and obligations of the other sex. The bill provides that any woman who fails to vote upon this question, unless prevented by specific ailments, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and liable to a fine of not less than $100, or imprisonment for not less than three months, or both, in the discretion of the court. Probably he has had a fuss with his mother-in-law, and takes this way to get even with her.

It is a great pity that our presidents cannot be allowed to choose those whom they wish to shake hands with. From the date of the inauguration of Washington to the present time, the chief officers of our government have been annoyed and tired out by the frequent hand-shakings which they were forced into. We have seen Gen. Grant during his term of office stand in one place for nearly two hours, having his patience sorely tried by about 1,500 men, each of whom wished to ask him some question or speak with him on some subject. A half hour after the General had passed through this ordeal, most all the women of the town in which he was then visiting were severally introduced to him, a majority being so very anxious for a kiss that the gallant ex-president's osculatory powers were sadly deranged. General Phil. Sheridan, who was standing by, kindly offered to assist his late superior officer when a good looking girl was introduced, but Gen. Grant said he was of the opinion that a little sweet should be mixed with the old maid and dowager to make them palatable. Now if Grant could have made choice of those he should kiss or shake hands with he would probably have left the men out entirely, and not have been forced to retire to his room with a serious case of sea sickness, brought on by too much hand-shaking, of course. It does not seem to elevate a president in the minds of the women who kiss him, for, in the case just mentioned, one maiden lady, past a certain age, after going in one door and out the other four times and being kissed each time remarked to a neighbor that "the General's breath smells of whisky." The MINING JOURNAL would respectfully advise president Garfield to inaugurate a new fashion, and take his pick of the ripe red lips and freemen's hands, thus changing the time honored custom from an irksome duty into a pleasant recreation.

FUN WITH THE BOYS. FLORENCE.—Extracted from the News of the 26th: A substantial jail is soon to be built in Florence; the money needed has been subscribed by the citizens of that place.

Fred. Gage has been appointed deputy-sheriff for this end of Marinette county. The News advises the young men of Florence to organize a boat club. Probably it is trying to help our regatta scheme along.

On last Wednesday, Mr. Daniel Hall was so unfortunate as to be kicked in the face, by a horse. One of the shoe calks inflicted a bad bruise on his head, but he is happy to state he is recovering from the injury.

Don't forget the "poor printer." If you don't support him, by prompt payments in the regular line, you may have to take care of him in the poor house, and that would have a bad appearance in print.

Theodore Lindner, who has charge of the exploring operations of the Menominee Mining Co., has discovered some very peculiar fossils on section B, 40, 18, a short distance north of Florence.

Mines will crop out so thick next summer in this region that they will lap over each other like the coats of an onion.

The News of the 24th last, says: "The Chicago, Portage & Superior railroads have given bonds for $200,000 to complete its line from the North Wisconsin Junction to Superior. 'All roads lead to Rome', and when the new railroad gets fairly under way, Duluth, the present Rome of this region, will gather it in."

Died, March 16th, 1881, after a short life and lingering illness, the Duluth Boat Club. This promising child of spring full fledged into life, but from lack of necessary nutriment, and as assistance, has thus early flown to the happy hunting grounds. Peace to it, and may the boys of Duluth never try again to make such a successful failure.

The village election resulted, as was expected, in a victory for democracy, the party electing their whole ticket from president to constable, at majorities ranging from 5 to 61. The candidates and their majorities were, for president—C. Montgomery—19; trustees—C. S. Barber—32; Thomas Ryan—19; R. F. Berdie—5; clerk—J. H. Ruehle—61; treasurer—E. M. mill arrived yesterday and will be taken to the mine of Brunsweller at once. There is to be a lively work in the Ashland district this spring. Men are already coming in. The mineral district will be thoroughly prospected as soon as the snow leaves. New and valuable discoveries are reported.

A party of surveyors left here Wednesday morning in search of the most practical route for the Northern Pacific Railroad east from Ashland. Upon their decision will depend whether we are to have the benefit of the N. P. R. R.

OSTONAGONS.—From the Miner of the 26th we learn that several hundred piles have been driven and the foundation nearly finished for the new saw mill, which will be, when completed, 180 feet long. The engine will be located in a separate building 50x60 feet. The mill will have two circulars and one gang saw. Wakefield, Trow & Co.'s lumber business is to be sold, if a purchaser can be found.

With iron in the southern part of the county, copper in the central part and silver in the northern part, there is no reason why Ontonagon should not soon become the Mecca of all seeking investments.

The work of connecting the two shafts of the Aztec mine is being pushed forward as fast as possible, and new veins of copper are being found. The stamp mill will be put in order in the spring.

The Mass mine will put in an addition of eight beds of stamps in its mill, which will give it twenty-four. The Mass is the largest producing copper mine in Ontonagon county.

The National mine report shows $2,072,531 to have been expended on machinery, material, labor and supplies used in re-opening the mine, which the tributors left in a very bad condition having thrown all waste rock and other debris taken from above the 4th level down the shafts, thus choking them and making the present undertaking very difficult. The water is being lowered at the rate of an inch an hour, the pump making but six strokes per minute.

L'ANSE.—The young people of the village as well as some of the older ones who love to sing and enjoy music, have been enjoying a feast during the winter in the school devoted to that inspiring branch of science, held one evening in each week at the school house, and under the instruction of that accomplished gentleman and thoroughly versed vocalist, Mr. W. L. Chase. The class numbers some twenty-five or thirty persons, and among the number we noticed several voices of more than ordinary culture. Mrs. J. B. Smith presides at the organ, and with her full, clear and sympathetic voice renders Mr. Chase very valuable assistance.

On the evening of our visit this lady's voice at times seemed to afford the main inspiration for the gathered pupils. The notes rippled from her throat seemingly without effort, and the high notes were reached without rushing, and in a graceful and highly artistic manner. As the singing for the evening was all concert work, we could not distinguish the voices of the different pupils, but we do know that the harmony produced by their mingling, struck us as reaching far above ordinary singing schools. The younger members of the class have made rapid strides during the term, and should the work continue we venture the opinion that Mr. Chase will turn out a class of singers that will be a life-long honor to his skill, and a lasting blessing to the various homes represented in his class, on account of the beauties of skilled melody which they are bound to have in the family circle. There are many individual voices in L'Anse, we are told, that would rank with the artistic.

The small party gathered at Norton's store last Friday evening, were treated to the phenomena of a musical concert by telephone, from Michigan and Houghton. A quartette of voices at Michigan, accompanied by an organ and violin, were distinctly heard by those gathered around the instrument.

Each word could be as distinctly heard as if in the same room, and the conversation of Mr. Dee, from Houghton, was, with the aid of a paraboloid funnel being placed over the earpiece, heard across the room, a distance of fifty feet from the instrument. On the following evening the telephone was opened from Lake Linden to Marquette, taking in the intervening offices of Calumet, Houghton, Franklin, Quincy, L'Anse, Michigan, Champion, Ishpeming and Negaunee. Conversation was heard distinctly from one end of the line to the other, a distance of some 120 miles, and a concert at Calumet was enjoyed by the operators all along the line.

James Healy, sheriff of Houghton county came here on Sunday, in quest of three Norwegian men who were wanted on a charge of rape. He found them in our county jail, they having been arrested by Sheriff Shea, of this county, on the strength of a telegram from the Houghton authorities.

The L'Anse debating club is indebted to the Hon. J. A. Hubbell for a lot of very valuable books—enough to form the nucleus for a library.

The debating society met in the school house last Monday evening, and debated the question previously announced. Mr. Shields, of the Hancock society, acting as umpire. The question for next debate is "Resolved, That the women should have the right of suffrage," with Thos. Brady affirmative leader and J. Q. McKernan for the negative.

Sheriff Shea is, or has been, off on a flying trip to Ontonagon county on business for Sheriff Hooley, of Houghton county.

This is vacation week with our schools, and the sidewalks are monopolized by the young hoodlums playing marbles for keeps.

The following ticket for township officers was placed in nomination by a people's caucus held at the Lloyd house on Tuesday evening: For supervisor, Edwin L. Mason. For township clerk, John O'Connor. For township treasurer, John Q. McKernan. For commissioner of highways, Peter Sant.

For superintendent of schools, George Seaman. For justice of the peace, full term, John Q. McKernan. For justice of the peace, to fill vacancy, George F. Hecker. For justice of the peace, to fill vacancy, Harvey Selden.

Dr. O. D. Jones, of Marquette, arrived in town Tuesday and put up at the Ogden house, where he will repair defective teeth; but there are some mouths here which are decidedly past all hope of improvement.

If sudden paternal greatness offers sufficient grounds for one to judge by, the infant son of Mr. Bobeck must weigh upwards of a ton.

Much illness exists in our village—illness of body, illness of mind, illness of good will, illness of sundry tempers, illness of those qualities in some masculines which tend to make them gentlemanly, and that illness which characterizes a sored, morose, disagreeable, lying and otherwise evil disposition.

Our very enterprising druggist has again made additions to his stock, and now has on hand a large supply of fishing tackle, base ball outfits, baby carriages (which pleases the individual whose initial the twenty-third letter of the alphabet indicates), and many other things too numerous to mention.

A dancing club has recently been formed here consisting of many individuals of this place and Champion. The first dance came off at Mr. Schwendenham's hall last Thursday evening, where a general good time was experienced by all, the music having been furnished by Derago and Johnson, of Marquette.

One of our prettiest young men recently conceived the mad design of learning to walk, and took his first lesson in a shaft house, where he became dizzy and very nearly walked into the shaft, and into eternity. He says, however, he'll learn or break his neck in the attempt, and he probably will—take the alternative.

As stated some time since in this department, our "Pinafore" base ball club has been re-organized, and we have at last, after repeated appeals, obtained permission to publish the names of the players, who enumerate about thusly:—A. Munch, c.; Morris O'Herran, p.; J. Morrisset, sr., s.; Con. Sullivan, 1st b.; John Dolan, 2nd b.; Geo. Block, 3rd b.; Louis Dosey, (imported), l. f.; Lewis Schweitzer, c. f.; John Moore, sr., r. f.; M. Schultz, sub. The pitcher will act as captain in the game with the Chicago 7th and the catcher will occupy the same position in the contest with the Harvards the first week in August, the exact date of which has not as yet been fixed upon. Michigan will doubtless wear the belt the coming season, providing the boys above mentioned do not "jump" the club to accept of better salaries in the b. b. field elsewhere.

Should you ask me whence this story, Though no legend or tradition, Fraught with odors of the forest, With no dew or damp of meadows, But with curling smoke of wigwags, With the rushing of great Francis, With his frequent repetition, And his wild reverberation, As of sunlight in the mountains, I should answer, I should tell you Straightway in such words as follows: This Frank Larson—you must know him, Now the happiest of all men, Happiest here in Michigan, Smiles so blandly when you meet him, Smiles all over in his gladness, Is so happy that our village, Scarce can hold his joyous figure, When he says, "his boys please something, Take some fiery fire-water, To celebrate this great occasion, Celebrate this little Larson; Give this girl a happy entrance To this now not lonely village, Drink till you can drink no longer, Till the hero, the Shub-shub-gah, And 'en that old Mudjekewis Shall reel as they gaze upon us." Frank, this tale will still continue, Still continue this narration, 'Till his home is filled with Larsons, Filled with little ones like "papa," That for ages may continue To increase this name of Larson. Tears forbid us to go further, To tell what yet here may happen, But we venture the assertion That in such things our fair hamlet 'Takes the cake' from all locations. Brings in humans not by couples, But by lives and tens and twenties, That we may in the near future, Out-vote all our sister hamlets; Then you bet we got the court house—Get all of the county buildings, Elect men in Michigan, To take all these "fat things" truly, Which will make our peaceful burghers Very, very happy.

The departure of March from this village was fraught with sufficient "lionism" to meet the most sanguine expectations of our prospectively inclined weather predictors.

At a gathering in the Town hall last Wednesday evening, by some denominated "caucus," the more prominent nominations were as follows: Supervisor, Mr. S. Kinney; clerk, Mr. M. J. Canning; treasurer, Mr. W. P. Evertz. The nomination of these gentlemen, the latter of whom was nominated by acclamation, is undoubtedly a good one, inasmuch as all are well qualified, and if elected can give ought but satisfaction to the residents of the township. However, it is thought other candidates will appear on split tickets next Monday, the result of which will appear in this department next week.

REPUBLIC.—Election day on Monday next. Mr. W. C. Brown, of the firm of Brown Bros., manufacturers of wooden goods at Marquette, was up on business Tuesday.

Mr. A. F. Leopold returned from his somewhat extended trip east and west, on Thursday last. As says his glad to get back to Republic, and our young folks are delighted to have him with them again.

Rumor says that we will have another grocery store in town before long.

A caucus for the purpose of nominating township officers, to be voted for at the coming election, was held at the town hall Friday evening, March 25th, when the following ticket was placed in nomination:—Supervisor, Capt. Peter Pascoe; township clerk, E. Ericson; treasurer, Geo. Wilson; superintendent of schools, John Northmore; school inspector, Peter Pascoe; highway commissioner, James Dowler; justice of the peace, W. A. Anderson; constables, Wm. Runkle, Wm. Anderson, Chas. Kingstead, Wm. Pearce.

David Morgan, Jr., who has been visiting his friends in Ohio, is expected back on Monday next.

As previously advertised, the last entertainment of the literary society, for the season, was given on Monday evening. The hall was completely filled and there were many strangers present. The programme was long and beautifully arranged. The first song and chorus, "Drifting with the Tide," was simply grand, the chorus being the best one given during the literary season, the solo being sung by Miss Annie Dowler and the chorus by the Misses Carrie Pascoe, Annie Dowler, Messrs. McCabe, Ball, Dowler, Roe, and Mrs. Peter Pascoe, Jr.

The essay, "The Mother of a Nation," by Mrs. Geo. Wilson, was one of the best essays we have heard for some time. The instrumental music given by Mrs. Baldwin was received with rounds of applause, which it justly merited. The recitation, "Mad Mag," by Mrs. Albert Heath, was a beautiful selection and rendered in first class style. The address, "How this

Old Nungo, an old Indian 70 years of age, when speaking of the severe winter the other day, said that he had never seen so much snow since he was a "wauoose."

When J. E. Williams and his son Harry went home from the shop last Saturday at mid-night, they found the rest of the family, eight in number, suffering from the effects of coal gas, the youngest, a babe of two years, being insensible, while the other seven were vomiting, and too weak to be of assistance to each other.

"What was said to start it?" "That, sir, I have not been able to ascertain. I have made a few inquiries, but my investigations are without satisfactory results." "What was said to start it?" "There were some remarks not at all indicative of humility of spirit, and some language which you would not expect me to remember." "Did one of them insult the other?" "Different men put different constructions upon words. I would not like to say that my affront was intended. I will say, though, that the language was not scriptural." "Did the lie pass? Did either say the other lied?" "My impression as to that is not founded upon an accurate recollection of the identical language employed. I dislike to err and can scarcely give you a direct reply." "Were there any blows struck?" "It seems to me that there was smiting involved in the controversy." "Which one struck first?" "I don't think I am prepared to say who inaugurated the assault. It may have been one, and it may have been the other."

THERE is no accounting for taste, yet it is sad to think that a certain class of Negaunee people will cling to "Will You Love When I Mold," as their favorite song.

OPERETTA.—Prof. C. A. Fohrman has commenced to organize the juveniles and some grown people, for the production of "Little Red Riding Hood," as an operetta, and expects to have everything in readiness for its presentation by Easter Monday. All who remember the skill with which the professor organized and produced "Golden Hair and the Three Bears," will appreciate the beauty of the entertainment promised.

THE marshal takes drunks off the street almost every day in the week, and sobers them in the lock-up. On Tuesday he met an ugly drunken citizen on the street with a bottle of whisky in his hand. On attempting to arrest the man he showed fight, but the marshal succeeded in snatching the bottle from him, and by keeping the bottle in sight and himself a rod ahead of the drunk, the latter was induced to follow the marshal right into the gate of the prison.

DRAMATIC.—The citizens are promised a dramatic treat in the near future, by our own and only Negaunee Dramatic Association. The play proposed is "the streets of New York." This drama has both "blud and luv" in it, and is chock full of romance from scene one, act one, to the dropping of the curtain and the dousing of the gim. From the known ability of the cast of characters, we have no hesitancy in saying that the production of this play will afford an immense amount of pleasure to the theatre going people. About April 25th will be selected as the date.

Two young roughs named respectively Tom Shea and Patrick Toole assaulted a middle aged man named John Julian, while he was walking along Jackson street at night some time since, bruising him severely. Julian afterwards found out who the assaulting parties were, and had warrants issued for them charging them with assault and battery. Shea got wind of the warrants and skipped out, but Toole was arrested and on Tuesday forenoon was fined five dollars and costs by justice B. D. Jones. When Shea returns he will be dealt with in a like manner, if not more severely. They are specimens of youthful desperadoes, of which the city has a number, and an example should be made of them.

THE county convention for the selection of delegates to the judicial convention was held at the Breitung house on Monday. The following delegates were elected: G. W. Hayden, J. Q. Adams, H. O. Young, J. F. Stevens, S. M. Billings, A. W. Maitland, E. J. Mapes, J. C. Morse, C. H. Hall, E. E. Osborn, Norman McLeod and H. E. Warner.

SOLID FOR GRANT.—The convention for the nomination of a candidate for circuit judge for the newly organized 25th judicial circuit, which embraces the counties of Marquette, Delta and Menominee, met at the office of the Breitung house last Wednesday afternoon. The only delegates present were those from Marquette county, Menominee failing to send delegates because of the known Grant preferences of the Marquette delegation, and they being solid for Brown. Delta county was not represented on account of the short notice which had been given them of the convention, and the day set being the day of the meeting of the county board of supervisors. A telegram from a prominent resident of Delta county, stated that could the convention be postponed until Thursday they would be represented, but Mr. Adams responded that the postponement could not be made; that if they would telegraph proxies and preferences their vote would be respected. This they failed to do; hence the one county convention. At 2:30 p. m. Mr. Hayden, chairman of the delegation, called the convention to order, and nominated Mr. C. H. Hall for chairman, who was unanimously elected, after which Mr. E. E. Osborn was chosen secretary in the same manner. The secretary, having been the secretary of the county convention read the list of delegates, and the list being correct, a motion was made and carried to dispense with the usual committee on credentials. The delegates were all present but Messrs. J. C. Morse, S. M. Billings, Norman McLeod and H. O. Young. Mr. Adams showed evidence that he had been appointed proxy for Mr. Morse; Mr. E. C. Anthony, appeared as proxy for Mr. McLeod, and E. E. Osborn as proxy for Mr. Young. Mr. Billings sent no proxy. On motion of Mr. Mapes an informal ballot was taken for circuit judge, Mr. J. F. Stevens acted as teller, and after counting the votes reported a unanimous thing for C. B. Grant, of Houghton. On motion of Mr. Adams, the vote was declared formal and Mr. Grant made the unanimous choice of the convention. Mr. Adams moved the election of a judicial committee of five, for the ensuing six years; three from Marquette, one from Delta and one from Menominee. The motion was carried and the following committee elected: John Q. Adams, E. J. Mapes, E. E. Osborn, E. P. Royce and A. L. Sawyer. The secretary was instructed to furnish each of the three county clerks with a list of the committee, and one to each member. Mr. Griffey was instructed to print the tickets. A resolution of thanks to the proprietor of the house was carried unanimously, after which the convention adjourned sine die.

THE NOMINEE. Hon. Claudius Buchanan Grant, was born in York county, Maine, October 25th, 1835, and is of Scotch-English descent. Through his own exertions he prepared for college in his native county, and in 1855 entered the University of Michigan, from which he graduated, in the classical course, in 1859. He then taught three years in the Ann Arbor high school; the first year as assistant teacher of the classics, and the last year as principal. In 1862 he resigned and organized a company of the 20th Michigan infantry, was commissioned captain of Co. D.; was afterwards promoted major, then Lieutenant, then Colonel of the regiment. He remained in the army until the surrender of Lee, and participated with his regiment in numerous important engagements. On retiring from the army he returned to Ann Arbor and entered the law department of the university, graduated in 1866, and associated himself with Hon. Alpheus Felch. He was afterwards recorder of the city, member of the school board, and postmaster of Ann Arbor; was in the legislature four years, and a regent of the university eight years; was appointed by president Grant an alternate commissioner of the centennial commission for the state of Michigan, and held the position until the close of the exhibition. Mr. Grant moved from Ann Arbor to Houghton, his present home, in 1873, and associated himself with J. H. Chandler, in the practice of his profession. He has also been appointed prosecuting attorney for that county. In 1883 Mr. Grant married the eldest daughter of ex-Gov. Alpheus Felch. In politics he has always been a republican of the stalwart kind, but on this occasion enters the canvass as a non-partisan candidate.

In the nominations made for city officers it will be seen that the MINING JOURNAL slate was generally accepted. If we could make a weather slate with like success our happiness would be complete. THE democratic or people's convention met in Sterling's hall on Wednesday evening, and spent a good portion of the evening in trying to select a chairman. After the chairman had been selected the music began: Geo. O. Houston was nominated for mayor; Chas. Muck, for assessor—here it was discovered that the convention was packed by persons not in sympathy with the programme of the bosses, and the meeting was adjourned until Thursday evening, when the other nominations were made.

The city convention of the Republicans met at the engine house on Wednesday evening and nominated the following ticket without much noise: For mayor, Joseph Winter; assessor, James F. Foley; treasurer, D. McDonald; recorder, Byron D. Jones; school inspector, F. A. Hendryx; justice of the peace, Byron D. Jones; constables, Samuel Bennett, Gordon Murray, Geo. Gordon and Samuel Hooper. Supervisors—1st ward, Norman McLeod; 2d ward, Isaac Johnson; 3d ward, N. Hibbert. Aldermen—1st ward, A. W. Maitland; 2d ward, Chas. Sundberg; 3d ward, George McDonald. The convention was neither boisterous nor quiet, but sort o' half-and-half.

THE CITY LIBRARY.—We are not fully appreciating the value, as an educational agency, of our city library, so wisely supplemented by the costly and well chosen books of the White Library. In order to fulfil their rightful destiny these libraries should be made centers of instruction to the entire community—the grand rendezvous of those who desire to cultivate their own minds or to educate and elevate the people. A public library having well selected books conveniently arranged in a pleasant, well lighted room should be the means of rounding out and enlarging the meagre education most of us obtain in the schools. Nothing serves better to broaden and deepen the mind than an intimate acquaintance with good books; not that we need read all the books in a library, but that we should be acquainted with them and should know how to use and understand them when necessary. Such an acquaintance with books would not prevent the careful reading and thorough digesting of a few choice books, but would supplement and extend the stores of knowledge gathered in a disciplined mind.

As a very important aid to the reader in consulting a library, a good catalogue stands first. Such a catalogue should be made with a definite system giving due attention to subjects, titles and authors. To some extent it should be an index to the contents of the books themselves, as well as a list of the shelves and alcoves on which certain books may be found. Cyclopaedias, dictionaries of all kinds, and all works of reference, should be placed within easy reach of all.

Again, the educated portion of the community should feel under obligation to encourage the right use of the library, and should cheerfully direct the unskilled reader how and where to find books that will give the mind strong meat, and how to avoid the wishy washy trash that will only weaken and destroy intellectual growth. Men of means will find in the public library a worthy object to which they may wisely contribute of their substance, assured that the memory of a good deed lives long.

By rightly directed effort the city library, so wisely supplemented by the White Library can and will be made one of our best educational agencies.

THOMAS CARLYLE.—"Thomas Carlyle, 'the man of letters,' is no more. He has fallen at the stroke of death, which leecheth no man escape; which sinketh all beneath its irresistible touch; the mighty and gladiatorial, with the weak and insignificant. But oh what a fall was there! when that sun of genius—that sublime exemplary character gave way to the inevitable laws of nature, and to the demand of eternity. No pen can portray—no tongue can utter a conception worthy of that event. For over four score years Thomas Carlyle has battled with the incidents attendant to this life. During the greater portion of his long and comparatively uniform existence, he has poured out endless streams of thought (varnished as it were with that unrivalled eloquence and brilliancy that distinguished all his writings) to lift, if possible, and restore his fellow creatures from the degradation to which they seemed to have unwarily plunged in a great measure; and thanks to the Almighty that glorious instrument has brought fame and success. Many are the intellects that have been directed to the path of rectitude and righteous discipline through his influence. Yea! many are the souls that have been redeemed and saved to principle through the medium of his ever impassioned and pathetic discourse. Tears will unconsciously steal down the cheeks of his most intimate associates, when they realize that those most wonderfully chiselled features and brow are never more to be seen by them on this earth. Those eyes are never again to look forth as the windows wherein resides a mighty brain; but are closed forever. The subject of this sketch was a prodigious reader; and the miraculous quickness in which he acquired the contents of a book is incredible to ordinary minds. An anecdote is thus told of him that illustrates his marvellous faculty. Being invited to dine with a friend, he accepted, and on arriving was left in the library a few minutes to await summons for refreshments. At last he was called and the conversation having turned from one topic to another, finally rested on books. The reverend asked Mr. Carlyle if he had read this volume, and that volume and being answered yes, hastened to enquire, when it transpired that his friend had read the whole library through in that short space of time. Another is told of him in relation to his friend and associate, Charles Dickens. It seems that the latter requested a loan of books, the request being granted he awaited their arrival, when to his dismay the drayman drove up with a load. This shows Carlyle's reading propensities. But the great and good man who has made himself so famous for his philanthropy and ability, has relapsed into the dismal and dreaded portals of eternal life; and it is needless to say that although his imperfect frame has been reduced 'dust to dust,' yet the memories of a greatful world will ever call to recollection a man who formed one of the most stalwart pillars of human achievement that ever shone with the celestial light of a true and confiding life.

SPEAKING of governors suggests the mention of an item we received from Mr. Henry A. Knight, foreman at Chas. Waters & Co.'s Governor and Valve works, Boston, Mass. I have used St. Jacobs Oil among our employes and find that it never fails to cure. The men are delighted with the wonderful effects of the Oil, as it has cured them of bruises, burns, etc.—
