ESTABLISHED IN 1846.

F. POWELL has gone to Canada for a visit, and will be absent some weeks. THE delayed mail yesterday cuts us short in our correspondence this week. LEWIS METZGER has been up in the copper country this week, taking in the towns there in the way of business. CHRISTMAS trees have been coming in quite freely for a day or so past. It's plain to see that somebody is going to get some presents. HAGER & JOHNSON have had an ice-house, designed for the temporary preservation of corpses, fitted up in the shed back of their store. It seems an age since the sun was seen last from this latitude. People are getting curious to see how he looks since he was trampled on by Venus.

BEHATED mails are the regular thing now, and regular mails the exception. It will do no good to grumble at the railroads either—the fault is chiefly with the weather department. NO MAIL went to Chicago yesterday, the M. H. & O. train connecting with that on the C. & N. W. R'y not reaching Negaunee in time, on account of the accident on the former road.

EVERETT BALL is home from the Orchard Lake military academy on a vacation, and he will remain here during the holidays. Life there seems to agree with him, as he is looking well and hearty. ALL ladies who will receive on New Year's day will confer a favor on their gentlemen friends if they will send their names to this office for publication. If sent in not later than Thursday evening, they will appear in our issue of the 30th.

J. H. GILLET is rebuilding the tug Odd Fellow, and will fix it up in good shape for use in Grand Marais harbor during his work there as contractor. He will also build two new scows for use at this place, will put in two steam pumps for wrecking, and a marine diver's apparatus. The tug A. C. Adams will remain at work at Marquette.

THIS is a disappointing world. Now that we can see our way clear to possession of a skating rink and all the fun it would imply there comes an untimely thaw and we are plunged again into a cave of gloom. The prospect is that the advertised opening on Christmas day will have to be postponed, "on account of the weather."

A SKATING rink will be opened on Christmas day at the head of Front Street, and will thereafter be kept open day and night. The proprietor is Joseph Nelson, and it is beyond doubt that he will make a success of the concern. Everybody is hereby advised to take it in on the opening day, and no urging will be needed to fill the place afterwards.

MANY members of the local division of the Ancient Order of Hibernians intend putting in a night with their Ishpeming brethren on the occasion of the New Year's ball to be given by the latter a week from next Monday evening. The Marquette division is preparing for a similar event at Mather's hall on the evening of February 2nd.

FOR the next week or ten days the D. M. & M. railroad company will sell round trip excursion tickets from Marquette to Detroit, the two Saginaws, Bay City, Lansing, Jackson, Grand Rapids, etc., at reduced rates—tickets good for twenty days. Apply at the company's local ticket office, or to F. Milligan, general passenger agent, Marquette.

A STORM of sleet and very damp snow set in Wednesday and has continued through Thursday. It was a change, but not for the better, as the wetness injured sleighing, and made the sidewalks so slippery that pedestrians went about with their lives in their hands and curs words on their tongues. We are getting a remarkable variety of weather this winter, and none that's particularly lovely.

THE M. H. & O. train which generally leaves here at 9:45 in the morning was delayed several hours yesterday, this being caused by the fact that the engine which was to haul it was off the track. The man who was the cause of the accident is responsible for a choice assortment of profane words hurled at it by people who were delayed in consequence of the mishap.

TRAINS on the D. M. & M. railroad have experienced some trouble in getting through for a fortnight back, owing to the amount of snow along the line. The fall has been much heavier on the other end of the road than here, the track being blocked in some places after the late storms so that clearing it was no small task. The passenger trains have been several hours late repeatedly from this cause.

CINDERS.

Iron ore is one of the most useful things in existence, and yet it was made in vein. The Bay of Tunis has 900 wives who get their dry goods and pin money in his name. His troubles must be almost greater than he can bear. Edison has been granted patents on 396 inventions, but the man who has been granted a patent on one that is so real utility has no occasion to give Edison all the sidewalk on that account. This reported that Mrs. Langtry's sister is coming over to chaperone that wayward beauty. She will find the charge a trying one. Mr. Langtry, armed with a bell-mouthed, double-barreled shot-gun, is about what the case calls for. A German baron who has been found guilty of swindling has been deprived of his title—that is, he has no longer the right to call himself a baron. He will be only a common swindler from this time forward. They punish crime with terrible severity in the old country. Cinders hears that Billy Patterson is going west, in search of the man who struck his famous namesake, the world renowned MINING JOURNAL comp and ex-bill-sticker. He'll find a man who threatened to do it in the "World" combination, but our Billy has forgiven the fellow for that long since.

Lawrence Barrett says that Mrs. Langtry "is no actress—she is simply a curiosity." Well, she is making a rattling curiosity of herself since she came to America, and there are plenty of queer people here who are ready to pay good money for a look at her. And money is what she wants, no matter how it was with the armless man in the story. This paper could not doubt secure puff from that cheap and paltry Detroit daily rag, if it would only consent to exchange with the blackmaling thing. But they would be dear at the price. Besides, its slurs are a better recommendation. The MINING JOURNAL cares nothing for its abuse, but we should hate to be punished with praise from that quarter.

We read that it will take the scientists six years to figure out the exact distance of the sun from the earth, on the basis of the observations made at the last transit of Venus. They should employ the arithmetician of a certain up the road sheet that is laboring to make itself and the public believe it a mining newspaper. The fellow would solve the problem with his eyes bandaged in six minutes.

"Why is it that girls can't whistle?" an inquisitive young fellow asked a sharp bluff street girl the other day. "Oh, they can, but they don't want to," was her response. "Well, why don't they want to?" he incautiously inquired. "Because," said she, "they have more purrups following them as if they were cats than they are worth." The answer seemed to satisfy him—anyway he quit asking the pestered maiden for further information on the point.

A mental imbecile who writes mining notes for an obscure county paper has a paragraph in the last number informing its readers that a mining company up the road "will give its men a week holiday," etc. Immediately following which is another announcing that a neighboring company "have suspended work with their diam-drill," and so on. Whence this difference in number? And where is the grammatical rule to be found that authorizes the singular discrimination in favor of the first-mentioned corporation?

Sam. Pieser came to town the other day to enjoy a brief visit with his more intimate friends. He tried to keep the vulgar mob from getting wind of his presence, but they "got onto him bigger'n a wolf" before he was with us three days, and now Sam carries his right arm in a sling—or a sling in his right arm, we're not sure which—they've been shaking hands with him so much. He was once in the clothing business here, in which he made himself popular with the young fellows by trusting them for their clothes, and they haven't forgotten it.

Cinders loans the requisite space to an aggrieved friend who has an experience to relate, and he does it in these winged words: It transpired at a social gathering of two people recently, a male and female. We were quietly pouring a flood of flowing language into the shell-like ear of the female portion of the gathering. She was a nice young lady—her manner was elegant and fashionable, etc. etc. She possessed of a shape that would adorn any society circle and her pretty face carried a pronounced expression that denoted an aggravated love for tripe and poetry. As before related, we were giving the young lady a flow of good English and were just beginning to realize that there was more poetry than tripe in the listener when this Mrs. Langtry of ours elevated her eyes, and, with a take-it-to-the-opera smile, delivered herself of the following: "You will excuse me for the intimation, but do you know that you so much resemble a very dear friend of mine that is now dead?" Only this and nothing more. We gazed at that young lady coldly. You could have detected the frigidity of an Arctic sea in our optics, but as her perception is poor it had not the desired effect. After a few hurried and disconnected remarks we stole slyly out into the night air. Now, friends, we stand up right here to make a few remarks. This thing is getting too prevalent. As far back in our early history as we wish to go, it has always been our fate to have some defenseless person spring this antiquated expression upon us, and just at the time when we were having the most enjoyment. How do we know that this dear departed friend always took first money for being the homeliest man at all church socials in the neighborhood and carried about in this cold world of ours an Oscar Wilde intellect? He, may have resembled old Nick, Sam Tilden or Ben Butler—may have had one of his eyes dug out and his right hand amputated and carried off as mementos by some sympathetic Indian. But for all we know to the contrary he may have been absent-minded enough to fall asleep on a railroad track, and when re-adjusted and sewed together, found his body both unsymmetrical and highly unserviceable. Upon what grounds can anyone base the supposition that we can think of that dead friend other than as a horse architect, who gained his notoriety at the close of life by a fall of six feet from a trap—having his fall checked by a person patted from a beam and attached to his person by a thoughtful sheriff? Is it christian-like to presume that we are ignorant of the fact that this mouldering stiff, now presumably wearing wings and with a harp slung to his person, in the upper region, may have had his nose chewed off by a Plute aquaw and his mustache kicked over his left eye by a constipated mule? My dear friends, we say nay. Should any of you be prompted to use a similar expression for our benefit again, come to us with that humility of demeanor which should always characterize you in the presence of your intellectual superiors, and tell us that you resemble some live person, celebrated for his many beauty and elegant shape. If you find it necessary to make a comparison with some one gone before, bring along his photograph to substantiate his claims to beauty.

SUPERVISORS' PROCEEDINGS.—The board of supervisors of Marquette county held a meeting at the court house in this city on Monday, Dec. 18. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the clerk and approved, when the regular order of business was proceeded with. The chairman of the auditing committee reported the claim of W. P. Healy, to the amount of $704.17, for legal services to the county in different cases, and the same was allowed in full by an unanimous vote. The committee on supplies and expenditures reported that the contract for erecting an iron fence around the court yard had been awarded to M. R. Manhard & Co., of Marquette, for the sum of $1,411, and that the work had been done to the satisfaction of the committee. The erection of a picket fence on the north side of the yard was also recommended. The report of this committee was accepted, and the bill of M. R. Manhard & Co. ordered paid. The committee on superintendents of the poor reported several small bills for repairs on the old poor house building, and recommended their payment. The report was accepted. Mr. Kirkpatrick offered a resolution that Messrs. Hall, Stevens and Read be appointed a committee to audit the accounts of the clerk and other outgoing county officers. Adopted. The chair then announced that the meeting was ready to act upon the bonds of incoming county officers, but none had been filed with the clerk, and it was resolved to act upon these at the next meeting. The committee on supplies and expenditures was authorized to advertise for sale a safe and sundry other articles, and the meeting then adjourned, subject to call.

The various churches of the city will observe Christmas in a quiet manner this year. The Christmas service at the Presbyterian church will be held to-morrow evening, the edifice having been beautifully decorated for the occasion. On Wednesday evening a general celebration will take place, and gifts will be distributed among the children. No service will be held in this church on Monday. At the Methodist-Episcopal church the choir and Sunday school will give a concert to-morrow evening, this to be followed by the bestowing of small memorial gifts upon the children. No service on Christmas day. The congregation of St. Paul's (Episcopal) church will observe the festival of the Nativity with the usual ceremonies. The services of the octave will be commenced at three o'clock to-morrow afternoon by a Sunday school service, consisting of evening prayer, the singing of carols, an address, etc., the regular evening service being omitted to accommodate this. The holy communion will be celebrated at 7 o'clock on Christmas morning, and will be followed by another service at 10:30 o'clock. A short service will also be held on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings. The Baptist church has been elegantly trimmed for the Christmas season, and appropriate services will be held there to-morrow evening by the pastor, Rev. Kerr B. Tupper. The services will commence at 7:30 o'clock, and all are invited to attend. The customary service will be had at the Roman Catholic church, in whose calendar Christmas is a holiday of the highest obligation, being always honored by the grandest of the ceremonial services of that church, and the liveliest devotion on the part of its members.

Twas whispered on the street after the adjournment of the county board early in the week that the appointment of a special committee by that body to audit the accounts of the county clerk and other outgoing county officers meant more than appeared on its face, and that a shortage in the clerk's accounts might be looked for as a result of the committee's work. Following up the rumor, our reporter soon ascertained that it was based upon a failure of the clerk to comply strictly with the law requiring him to pay over to the county treasurer, within ten days after each term of the circuit court, the amount of entering fees in suits commenced and jury fees in jury cases tried, with a written statement of cases entered and tried, to correspond. For several terms past this duty had been neglected by the clerk, hence the damaging rumor of which his official conduct was the theme. The special committee, consisting of Messrs. Hall, Read and Stevens, met at the court house to discharge the duty imposed upon the gentlemen composing it, on Thursday. Probably the clerk was one of those to whose ears an intimation of what was in the wind had come, for on the same morning he paid over to the county treasurer $209.50, the amount of the fees alleged to have been wrongfully held back. The payment was, we are informed, unaccompanied by the statement required by law. The committee completed its task of auditing that official's accounts the same day, but has not yet reported its findings. It found $209.50 in the county treasury to the clerk's credit, however, that was not there on the day previous, but which should have been in the treasurer's hands long before it got there. And what further, "deponent knoweth not."

ON Sunday, Dec. 10th, Rev. E. R. Bishop, rector of the Episcopal church at this place, completed the fifth year of his pastorate here, and upon that occasion he delivered a sermon in which were contained various statistics relative to church affairs. He stated that during the time he has had charge of the church here the membership had been increased from 109 to 172—that 66 converts have been made—11 adults and 60 children have been baptized—34 marriages had been performed—40 burials had taken place—about 950 public services had been held and 576 sermons preached. The total collections for these five years were $47,785.68, and the parish is now entirely free from debt, besides having $1,552 invested for the completion of the tower of the church. A valuable property has also been purchased, and will be used as a hospital. It will probably be opened for this purpose early next spring. Over $400 has been pledged for its support during the first year. He also recommended the erection of a Sunday school chapel and the establishment of a parish school. The statement of the financial affairs of the parish cannot but be very gratifying to the members of the church, showing, as it does, such a prosperous condition in regard to money matters. Mr. Bishop has been requested by many of his congregation to again deliver this sermon, and it is not improbable that he may consent to do so at some future time.

SEVERAL saloonists down at Iron River have been running their places of business in a free-and-easy sort of way, and not having the fear of sheriff Jeffery before their eyes, have not chipped in their little licenses to help fill the county treasury. The county authorities couldn't stand this, and therefore the proper officers were sent after the delinquent vendors of "bug-juice." Three of them were brought up here to answer to the charge of selling liquor without a license, and on Monday were taken before justice O'Keefe. His honor considered that Martin Monahan had broken the law about $50 worth, and he accordingly sentenced him to pay a fine of that amount, besides giving him ten days in the county jail to think about it. The cases of the other two were laid over until to-day, to allow them time to get a license. If they have managed to do this they will pay all costs thus far incurred and depart in peace. There are a couple more of these fellows who have manifested a desire to compromise the matter, and they will probably be allowed to do so. These law-breakers, as well as others, have found out that they can not sin with impunity in Marquette county, for the eagle eye of the law and sheriff Jeffery is ever upon them.

In the city early this week was Mr. S. W. Hill, of Marshall, Mich., a gentleman who became familiar with the upper peninsula in the days of its early pioneers, as one of whom, indeed, he may properly be classed. Mr. Hill came to this peninsula in 1847-8, with the Foster and Whitney government survey. Some years later he became manager of the North America mine, which had the name in those days of being the largest mine in this country. It was situated near the present Iron Cliffs. This was in 1850, we believe. Subsequently Mr. Hill had charge of several copper mining enterprises, but of late years he has drifted out of personal connection with the active management of any of the mining industries of the district. He was twice a member of the legislature, and has filled a variety of important positions of public and private trust. If our reporter had not missed an interview with Mr. Hill he would probably have got matter for a chapter interesting reminiscences of early days on the u. p., but the subject "got away" this time, and our readers are deprived of it until it happens our way again. He left for home via the D. M. & M. route Wednesday evening.

THERE is in course of erection at Champion one of the finest school houses in the county, the same being built upon an elevated piece of ground between the old school house and the mine location. The new school is a frame structure, two stories high, with basement and cupola. It is of modern design, and when completed will present an imposing appearance. Two weeks since a new Methodist Episcopal church, costing in the neighborhood of $3,000, was dedicated free from debt. This location, acknowledged by all to be the most beautiful natural site on the peninsula, is fast acquiring an importance that will rank it among the more prominent business towns of the peninsula. The principal merchants are S. W. Watkins and R. T. McKay, of Beacon, and Beatty & Leopold, of the Dalliba, all three of which houses, together with the various mine offices and the depot, are connected with this city, Negaunee and Marquette by telephone, the line having been put in at the expense of the Champion company, one of the most pushing of the Lake Superior mining corporations.

HEAVEN grant that Christmas may bring eternal rest to the stock of debilitated turkeys left over from Thanksgiving, samples of which have been displayed in several grocery fronts about town ever since the latter holiday, to the serious detriment of the popular appetite for that noble bird! Why a dealer should discourage possible customers from entering his place by keeping in open sight, day after day, such disconsolate reminders of past enjoyment as the brace of fowls this reporter has had to pass and re-pass six times a day for a fortnight back is beyond our comprehension. It is a cheap way of advertising—the only way the proprietors of such stores practice, of which fact we offer in evidence the columns of the MINING JOURNAL. But it is effective. A bull-dog chained at the front door would not be more so in preventing customers from entering.

WE'RE out with a seventy two column paper again this week, to accommodate our mercantile friends, who will have space in the MINING JOURNAL for their announcements. A twelve-page newspaper makes a goodly one to look upon and an excellent one to advertise in, but it also makes considerable extra work, and we shall experience a sense of relief when the demand on our space eases up sufficiently to permit a return to our normal size, and gives us a chance to catch our breath. THE MINING JOURNAL has enjoyed a magnificent patronage during the past year, and for the favors extended by its army of appreciative friends the proprietors are deeply grateful. It is a genuine pleasure to deal with a clientele that places so generous an estimate on the value of our paper as do the readers of the MINING JOURNAL and its large list of advertising patrons.

IT isn't often that the county asylum for indigent persons has to do with the pleasant episodes of subnormal existence, but we have to note a pleasing departure from the ordinary routine of its affairs, which occurred there last Wednesday evening. On that date Mr. William Blackwood, of this city, and Miss Lizzie D. Wheeler, daughter of the keeper, spoke the vows that made them of one flesh. Rev. P. R. Parrish performing the nuptial ceremony in the presence of a small gathering of the more intimate friends of the parties. A wedding reception and banquet that followed was a most enjoyable sequel to the more solemn ceremony by which Divine sanction was given the union of the wedded pair. THE MINING JOURNAL tenders congratulations and throws (in its mind) the traditional slipper.

THERE isn't ice enough in the bay yet, even between the merchandise dock and the north shore, to prevent the smallest fishing tug from ploughing through it. Unless the weather grows much colder than it has been hitherto—which was cold enough for our taste—the bay will remain open all winter, and the ice men will be obliged to harvest their crop from the Cinders pond. Speaking of cold weather, it is a singular fact that it has been several degrees colder at Milwaukee, Chicago, and other lower points than in Marquette, eight degrees below zero being the coldest experienced here, while at the points named the temperature has been ever since down to a notch ten degrees under that.

E. H. THOMPSON, Esq., an accomplished educator who has taught acceptably in the city schools of Washington, D. C., and who comes well recommended, announces that he will give instructions in Spencerian penmanship and the ordinary branches to a limited number of pupils during the winter. The gentleman may be found at room 13, National bank building. The over-crowded state of the city public schools should induce parents who can afford it to avail themselves of this chance to secure careful training for their children from a competent instructor who will limit his class to a number not beyond the ability of one person to properly attend to.

THE children of the Episcopal Sunday school will hold their annual festival in Mather's hall, on Thursday evening, Dec. 28th. At this time and place will be given a charming little play entitled, "Santa Claus the First," the parts in which will be taken by the little folks of the Sunday school. The whole will conclude with the distribution of gifts from a Christmas tree placed in the hall. Judging from former entertainments of this character given by the young folks, this will be a complete success, and a large audience will doubtless gather to witness the performance.

ON another page will be found the county treasurer's report of liquor tax paid in by dealers in Marquette county during the year ended Nov. 30, 1882. It shows that the consumption of whisky, and the number of dealers who live by selling it, are steadily on the increase. One hundred and seventy-two wholesale and retail dealers and three manufacturers of malt liquors are represented on the roster, whose aggregate contributions to the county treasury reach the handsome total of $48,376.04. It takes a heap of the stuff to keep folks warm in this climate.

OUR friends of the German Aid Society request us to say that their annual masquerade will positively take place on Tuesday, Feb. 6th, at Mather's hall. And they further authorize us to state that they are engaged in preparations which will make that the most interesting masquerade ever given by the society, and that is saying a great deal. The masquerades of the Aid Society are always gorgeous affairs, and if this one overshadows the others, it will be more than immense, and well worth attending.

IKE NEUBERGER, the clothier, will spend this Christmas in the bustling city of Chicago, whither he goes to-morrow. Afterwards his trip will be extended to take in the great eastern marts, where Mr. Neuberger will negotiate for some novelties in the matter of spring goods to stock his mammoth establishment here when the spring time comes again. 'Tis pretty early to begin talking of that happy season, perhaps, but 'tis the early bird that catches the worm, and Ike is a mighty early bird in things pertaining to his business.

A NEAR approach to a serious fire occurred at the house of Dr. Desjardins on Thursday evening. As the family were sitting down to supper, a large hanging-lamp, which was suspended over the table, became detached from its fastenings and fell, striking the table and causing much havoc among the dishes. The lamp itself was broken, and the oil contained in it took fire, running over the floor and setting the carpet in a blaze. The flames were with some difficulty extinguished, but it was a narrow escape from a serious disaster.

DON'T fail to respond to the call made through our columns last week for donations of second-hand literature of any standard value. Take such of your religious, literary, temperance and scientific papers, pamphlets or magazines as you don't care to preserve to the post office when you go, and drop them into the large box under the writing-desk. It is an easy charity for you, but may mean much to somebody's lonely and reckless boy in the woods. Be sure and make your contribution early next week.

TUESDAY evening next, at Coles' hall, will open the fair of the French Catholic congregation, the same to continue through the holiday week. Thorough preparations have been made to render it an exceptionally pleasant affair, and we risk nothing of our reputation for prophetic skill in predicting that it will attract a large attendance. Church fairs invariably do in Marquette, because our people love to encourage worthy undertakings, and the proceeds of these fairs are always devoted to a good purpose.

THERE will be music in the air Christmas if his honor trusts to a single police officer for the maintenance of order. It won't be music appropriate to the occasion, either, but of the sort that will send the angels who chant Christmas carols shuddering home to roost, while it sets listening devils to dancing wildly in fensish glee. Give us a special policeman or two on Christmas, if you can't do anything more. Mr. Mayor, that law-abiding residents may chew their plum pudding in peace.

YESTERDAY would seem to have been an "off" day for the M. H. & O. road, for, in addition to the slight accident mentioned in another place, the train from L'Anse, drawn by engine No. 5, had a wheel of the tender broke while on Carp hill, thus delaying the mail from Chicago about two hours, the train carrying this not being able to get through. The L'Anse train was taken back to Negaunee, and the belated mail train was at last enabled to reach here shortly after five o'clock.

THE Orchestra saloon has been fitted up in fine shape, and the proprietors, Jellison & Jobe, are confident that its style and the goods they set forth will please all their patrons. The seductive "Tom and Jerry" is now served up to customers, and all patrons are invited to call and get one free on Christmas morning. Oysters are also to be had there in every style.

THE late cold snap stimulates the coal and wood trade, and in both branches there has been a decided activity throughout the week. If the price of coal would only drop like the thermometer when cold weather approaches, then we would indeed be happy.

WHEN his duties as under sheriff call marshal French from the city, the municipality is left wholly unprovided with a peace officer. Is it good public policy to permit such a state of things? This conundrum is respectfully addressed to his honor, mayor Coles.

Lumbermen report plenty of snow in the woods, but say the swamps are not yet frozen sufficiently to bear heavy loads.

Written notices have been served on all saloon keepers by the marshal, forbidding the sale of intoxicants on the Sabbath. They all seem to be willing to live up to the law so far.

Don't fail to be on hand at the town hall Christmas eve, and see the little folks of the M. E. Sunday school have lots of fun. They will have a Christmas tree, speak pieces, sing, etc., and will no doubt go home believing this to be a pretty good world for children to live in.

We regret to learn of the illness of Carrie, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jobe. We hope for her speedy recovery.

M. H. Crocker, Esq., was in town this week, looking after his Cannon. He is well pleased with its condition, having seen some strictly first-class one raised from a shaft now being put down upon a four foot vein of very fine ore.

The play, "Among the Breakers," will be given under the auspices of the school teachers some time after New Year's. We believe the proceeds are to go to purchase an organ for some one of the departments.

We hear of a new notion store to be opened shortly by Willie Weiser, in the new building adjoining Mr. E. E. Weiser's residence. Give the boy a chance.

Johnny Rainey says he will give a turkey shoot for sure Christmas day. It will come off on the ice behind Gibson's barn. The distance will be 40 rods for open sight, and 80 rods for globe and peep sight guns. No cannons allowed. The turkeys will have to give the marksmen the benefit of their full size. Draw blood on one—he is yours. If you strike the ice about eleven feet off to the left, the turkey isn't yours and you pay Mr. Rainey a dime for miss-

Alex Laxstrom has let the contract to build a $4,000 hotel on the corner of Klamon avenue and Front street. That is he has let it rest for the present, until he thinks it over a little more.

Talk about Horace Greeley's writing. It was nothing to what ours must be, for last week we wrote "Messrs. McCabe and Johnson contemplate the erection of a skating rink" etc, and the intelligent typographer translated it "Messrs. McCabe, & Co. have completed," etc. We claim the belt. [All right—drop into the composing room any time you're in town and the comps will belt you on sight.—Ed.]

L. M. Spencer, Esq., was in town this week supplying his customers with goods in the saddlery line. He proposes to call monthly. Spencer is one of nature's noblemen, but our new harness maker here, Mr. Wm. Tamplin, says he calculates to carry a stock and do the sort of work that will bar out non-resident dealers.

The Iron Herald should find something better to do than casting unnamely insinuations upon any girl or young lady who may casually pick up even the "Police News" when it comes regularly to a public house kept by her father.

The Mining Journal.

ISHPEMING, DECEMBER 23, 1882.

A SOMEWHAT novel, yet no doubt interesting, entertainment will be given the patrons of the M. E. Sunday school at their church on Christmas (Monday) evening. The novel feature of the entertainment will consist of the arrival of a ship laden with presents for the little ones. Just how the ship will sail into the church is a little mysterious, yet the managers of the affair have sufficient confidence in the scheme to announce it, and therefore the Sunday school pupils should take sufficient stock in the affair to attend and see how the "old thing" works—and we guess there is no danger but that they all will get there. Besides this, a short address will be delivered, and some carols sung.

THE DEER LAKE furnace was on Saturday morning last the scene of a most distressing and fatal accident, the particulars of which, as near as can be ascertained, are these: Adolph Caron, a Frenchman, was on the stack attending to his duties, when the intensity of the ascending heat caused him to step back quickly, and, as it proved, too far, for he fell from off the cupola to the ground beneath, sustaining injuries which resulted in his death in a few short hours thereafter. When picked up and taken to his boarding house, it was found that his left leg was broken in three places, three ribs were broken in his left side, his shoulder was dislocated, and his arm broken. Death soon terminated his terrible sufferings. His remains have been taken to Quebec, his home, for interment. Deceased was 32 years of age, and had a wife and seven children living in a suburban parish of Quebec. He had brothers and sisters in this city.

THE HOSPITAL, since the alterations and improvements have been completed, ranks A 1 among the establishments of the kind in the state. With a full corps of surgeons, headed by Ishpeming's veteran physician, B. S. Bigelow, it has gained a prominence on the peninsula which will make it the foremost of its kind for a long time. At present there are but eight patients in the wards and only one case in that number of a serious character. To a certain extent it is a public hospital, though it is intended more for, and is supported by, the miners employed at the different mines in the vicinity of this city. We doubt very much if there is another as perfect in its management and appointment in the state. The faculty at present comprises doctors B. S. Bigelow, W. C. Harwood, C. S. Shipman and L. D. Cyr, all standing high in the profession. Their practice apart from the hospital is large and requires a great deal of attention. Ishpeming justly feels proud of her hospital and the able and gentlemanly corps of physicians.

"PARTNERS."—A novel suit to recover money was instituted in Justice Kennedy's court last Tuesday by Simon Cohn, a pack peddler. Cohn sued Getz & Paradise, of Michigan, who are peddler supply agents, to recover $300 which, he alleged, was deposited with them—an allegation the defendants did not deny, but claimed the right to keep the money because Cohn was a partner of another Getz—brother of the senior in the supply firm—and who has decamped owing the firm a like sum. The facts elicited at the examination showed that while Cohn was in one sense a partner of the absconded Getz, he was not so in law, and could not be held responsible for the money. The fact of the non-existence of a partnership was further proved by this; that while Getz bought his goods of his brother, Cohn bought his direct from New York. It appears that among pack peddlers who travel in company, a sort of understanding exists that in case one displays goods in a house, which he learns are wanted but which, from the exorbitant price placed upon them, or from any other cause, he can not sell, he sends along a "partner" whom he posts as to the cause of his own failure, and who, thus apprised, almost invariably disposes of the coveted goods. For instance: A certain pack peddler entered a small hotel in this city not long since, and while showing his goods to the servants one of the girls got "struck" on a piece of Irish poplin, but which she rejected with scorn when told the price was only eight dollars. Did the peddler lose the sale? Well, scarcely. He went down town and posted his "partner," who called on the girls in the afternoon, and sold the same identical piece of poplin, which had been rejected as too cheap in the morning, to Miss Haughtiness for $28. The partners then made a "divvy" of the "spoils." This is the sort of a partnership Cohn proved to have existed between himself and the absconded Cohn, and the court held that Getz & Paradise should pay back Cohn the $300 held by them in trust for him. The defendants have appealed the case.

CREDITORS pounced upon Hiram Eckert, proprietor of the Commercial house, last Tuesday, and now all that individual has got with which to do battle against adversity is a robust physique and a consequent capacity for labor. His property has all been seized. It seems that Eckert, who has been proprietor of the Commercial house but three months, was doing a cash business of some $1,500 to $1,800 per month.

At the time the tornado overtook him he owed to various firms about the city amounts aggregating between $1,100 and $1,200. Three of the heaviest creditors came upon him and demanded a chattel mortgage on his household goods to secure them. This mortgage Eckert gave. Other creditors, hearing of the action of their fellows, sought the various law offices about the city and issued garnishees against Eckert on all his boarders, thus cutting off all sources of income. By some hook or crook Eckert then surrendered his right in the hotel to Mr. Joseph Harrington, late of the "Club," who smilingly greeted all the boarders and notified them to regard him as landlord. Harrington held the ribbons all day Wednesday, but on Thursday evening surrendered his right (if he had any) to the Lake Superior Iron company. This company has turned the hotel over to Mr. George Chopat, who is again at the helm, but perhaps only temporarily. The reason for thus closing out Eckert is given by certain business men thusly: He was negotiating for a sale of the property to a certain female bagnio keeper of Green Bay, and the transfer was to have been made on Wednesday. The creditors getting wind of this took it for granted that Eckert intended to pocket the cash and then leave the city—and them. They did not want to see the old Commercial turned into a repository for soiled doves, and they didn't want to lose any money by Eckert, hence their action. Mr. Eckert denies both these charges—says he was not going to sell to the prostitute referred to, but to a certain gentleman from Green Bay, (it has since been ascertained by this reporter that the "gentleman from Green Bay" was none other than an agent for the prostitute), after which he intended to pay his creditors, the business of one of the heaviest of whom he was negotiating to buy out. This latter statement we are confident is true. We believe Mr. Eckert to be less culpable in the matter than he is regarded by some. We have had dealings with him and have always found him honest. The worst that can be said against him is that he has been keeping bad company, and designed surrendering his hotel to prostitutes, to prevent which a combination was formed that sat down on him, and with ample justification.

THE MINING JOURNAL, wishing to show its appreciation of those of our citizens who have added so much to the wealth and beauty of the city by the erection of fine modern dwellings, started out early in the fall to give a detailed description of the various residences as they from time to time were completed. To get these descriptions we have sometimes had to resort to strategy, as the owners are not courted newspaper notoriety, and, consequently, are somewhat loth to furnish us with facts. The one "altogether lovely" residence which we neglected to mention at the time of its occupancy, some few weeks ago, is that of Hon. J. P. Outhwaite; but we can assure that yet would fail to do the dwelling justice. It is a modern house, neat, substantial, roomy and comfortable, and has, from its conspicuous location, (on Main street next adjoining the Nelson house), excited the admiration of citizens and strangers alike. The basement, which extends under the whole building, is of stone, and contains the heating apparatus, laundry, cellar, fuel room, etc. The superstructure is a frame one. A prominent feature of the plan is the reception hall, which occupies the centre of the house, and is connected with the parlor and sitting room by large sliding doors, and which is also furnished with a fire place with beautiful oak mantel. The parlor and sitting room each has a fire place with fine walnut mantel. The decorations in these rooms are fine and much space would be required to suitably describe that feature. The library is the coziest of rooms, and the dining room, octagonal in shape, is very cheerful. All the windows on the first floor of the main building have stained glass transoms, and the staircase is lighted by windows of the same material, producing a most pleasing effect. The second story has a bath room and five chambers, one of which contains a fire place with cherry mantel. The halls of both floors are so arranged that access may be had to any room in the edifice without passing through any other room. The house is heated by steam, and is supplied with water and gas, the latter being manufactured on the premises. Mr. Wm. Farrell of this city was the architect and superintendent, and Mr. John Wahlman the builder. We like to mention these new residences, as nothing so contributes to the beauty of a city as the taste displayed in the homes of its people.

CARD OF THANKS.—We would take this method of expressing grateful acknowledgement to Prof. Chas. Fohrman for his kind and valuable assistance in the rendering of "The Sleeping Princess," also thanks to Mrs. W. E. Johnstone and Miss Nellie Mildon. To the mothers who dressed us so beautifully and appreciatively we would say, "very much obliged."

Awards at the Cincinnati EXPOSITION.

DETROIT, MICH., OCTOBER 9, 1882.

In justice to our patrons and the line of goods they sell, we are proud to inform them that Garland Stoves and Ranges were awarded two first premiums and two medals, at the Cincinnati exposition, one medal being the only gold medal offered to manufacturers of cast iron stoves, and consequently the highest award in this class; the other a silver medal, which of itself is equal to the highest award received by our competitors, clearly vindicating the position taken that Garland Stoves and Ranges carried off the highest honors of the exposition, over all the leading manufacturers of the country, proving incontrovertibly that Garland Stoves and Ranges are immeasurably superior to all their competitors; the same has been proven in all parts of the Union. Wherever Garland Stoves and Ranges have been exhibited, they have been awarded first premiums, where offered, including all the leading expositions, state and county fairs throughout the country. They received six first premiums at the California state exposition, and the only first premium at the Minneapolis exposition, etc.

It was admitted by the visitors at the Cincinnati exposition, that our display of Stoves and Ranges was the finest display ever made there. We have had the same photographed, and are now figuring for copies to be sent to all our customers, which, if carried out, will be sent as promptly as possible.

Respectfully,

THE MINING JOURNAL.

Up to date, the output of the Cleveland mine for the season of 1882 is 206,035 tons, shipments to local furnaces since our last report having advanced it to that magnificent total.

The owner of the Gibben tract has, we learn taken steps to foreclose the several leases on which no royalty has been paid, and will at once proceed to thoroughly explore the property with the aid of a diamond drill.

A CHANGE has taken place in the management of the Detroit mine, D. F. Wadsworth, Esq., having resigned, and C. H. Cady, late of the Cleveland mine, having been appointed to succeed him as general manager.

ON the west side of the south-east section 19, 43-32, where Ames & McElroy have been at work for some months, the ledge has at last, after the most discouraging delays, been reached.

THE North Felch Iron company was organized in this city yesterday, with a capital stock of $500,000. The incorporators are Vine C. Watkins, Seymour Coleman, J. M. Longyear, Julian M. Case and C. H. Colton.

ONTONAGON COPPER NOTES.—The Miner says that underground work is being prosecuted on the Champion lode, at the Belt mine, where the miners are drifting east and west in good copper ground.

The American Manufacturer says that iron men of that city (Pittsburgh) who have grown gray in the business are firmly of the belief that after the holidays there will be a decided improvement in trade.

AN enormous lumber cut is reported for the season just closed for the mills at Marquette, Wis., and Menominee, Mich. The aggregate product of these mills is 300,638,246 feet, an increase of some 60,000,000 feet over

C. L. FITCH, M. E., who recently made an examination of the Iron Range Mining company's property, including an underground survey of the east pit of the Vulcan mine, has made the following report to the company:

I examined the property situated on the north-east quarter of the north-east quarter of section 14, range 20 west, township 39 north, as requested, and found in the forty to the west of it an ore formation which is being worked as a part of the East Vulcan mine.

The east pit of the East Vulcan is situated in the south-west corner of the forty, and the workings extend to within 4 feet of the corner of your location, at which place they are taking out ore of an excellent quality.

"FORTY cents a ton," says a would-be authority on the mines and minerals of this section, "would not pay the taxes"—referring to the cost of mining the product at one of our largest iron mines.

From which it appears that not even all manufacturers of pig iron are fully agreed as to what they want from congress. We submit that this excessive devotion to individual interests bids fair to work irreparable harm to the common welfare.

ONE of the most disquieting features of the existing situation in the iron industry, in our belief, is the want of unanimity among those engaged in its various branches.

This we deem the essence of unwisdom. Our friends fail to see that they are removing piecemeal the foundation that supports the superstructure under which they have all found shelter.

We find this explanation of the mystery surrounding the Keely motor in the standard elementary respectable sheet, the New York World.

The wrangles of those engaged in "protected" industries have a strong tendency in that direction. Instead of regarding the system as one whose good results they must expect to share with one another in equitable proportion, and with the whole country through a resultant enhancement of the general prosperity, many of these seem to look upon it as a policy of favoritism for a certain "chosen few" among the great industries of the country, and angrily antagonize measures of revision for which an imperious necessity exists to adapt the system to new industrial conditions growing out of the rapid development of our multifarious resources.

As having pertinence in this connection, we give the following special from Pittsburgh, which was printed in the Chicago Times under date of the 18th:

The pig-iron manufacturers of western Pennsylvania and eastern Ohio had a meeting at the Monongahela house to-day, for the purpose of forming an organization to look after their interests in the coming tariff legislation and check the downward tendency in prices if possible.

From which it appears that not even all manufacturers of pig iron are fully agreed as to what they want from congress. We submit that this excessive devotion to individual interests bids fair to work irreparable harm to the common welfare.

It now appears probable that congress will address itself to the task of tariff revision at this session, with an earnest intention of doing something towards dispelling the uncertainty that has too long shrouded the industries to be affected by its action.

The cut for the season of 1881. The Kirby Carpenter Co.'s mills are credited with the largest cut made by any one of the great lumbering companies grouped at the mouth of the Menominee river, the two mills of that company having manufactured 68,491,570 feet since they started up last spring.

While we are considering the policy of taxing church property in this country, our English cousins are discussing with equal ardor the propriety of taxing their deer parks, which have enjoyed immunity from taxation from time immemorial.

ESCANABA.—The "predatory cow" calls on her owner's neighbors, and leaves a card, the same as here in Marquette.

Referring to one Justice O'Mally, of whom a contemporary tells a laughable story, and whom it credits to Chicago, the Port says: Neither Dublin nor Chicago was the scene and theater of his judicial exploits, but our infant city of Escanaba.

The Port may not know that its "Dogberry" was for many years a prominent actor in the history of the upper peninsula, and, though very eccentric, a man of considerable natural ability and keen wit.

The American Lumber company, of Dollarville, will need very extensive shipping facilities for the immense cut of lumber they will next season put upon the market, all of which will be shipped at this point.

The Free Press is a trifle "off" in the statement that all of the above company's lumber product will be shipped at that point.

get business by circulating the report that nearly all who did take policies with me last year let them drop this year, while the truth of the matter is, that only two out of those I wrote up at that time (and these two were of the smallest policies issued) have failed to pay their subsequent premiums, as they came due; and this I am assured by the parties themselves is occasioned by no fault in the plan of insurance or lack of faith in the "New York Life." Thus the second falsehood falls to the ground. We have since taken a very large amount of insurance in the upper peninsula for the time extended, and only four policies, all being for small amounts, have lapsed. A SIMILAR RECORD CAN NOT BE SHOWN. I pity these poor, miserable agents who can only get business by outright falsehoods, or misrepresentation—and I would not notice them only for the desire to have the truth known, so that those who would invest in the only policy suitable for their circumstances, and in a first-class company, might not be deterred from so doing by the falsehoods of agents who represent very inferior companies, compared with the half dozen really first-class companies of this country. "The best in all things is the cheapest," and this is MORE than true in Life Insurance, for the better the Life Insurance is, the less it costs ultimately. Trusting that this will prevent anyone being misled by the above mentioned falsehoods, I remain yours truly,

TUTT'S EXPECTORANT
Is composed of Herbs and Mineralogous products, which permeate the substance of the Lungs, expectorate the cold matter, loosen the phlegm, and form a soothing coating, which relieves the irritation that causes the cough. It cleanses the lungs of all impurities, strengthens them when enfeebled by disease, invigorates the circulation of the blood, and braces the nervous system. Slight colds often end in consumption. It is dangerous to neglect them. Apply the remedy promptly. A single dose raises the phlegm, subsides inflammation, and it not only cures the most obstinate cough. A pleasant cordial, children take it readily. For Croup it is invaluable and should be in every family. In 25c and 50c Bottles.

TUTT'S PILLS
ACT DIRECTLY ON THE LIVER. Cures Chills and Fever, Dyspepsia, Stomachic, Bilious Colic, Constipation, Rheumatism, Torpid Liver, and Female Irregularities. If you do not feel very well, a single pill stimulates the stomach, restores the appetite, imparts vigor to the system.

A NOTED DIVINE SAYS:
Dr. TUTT:—Dear Sir: For ten years I have been a martyr to Dyspepsia, Constipation and other ailments. Last spring your pills were recommended to me; I used them until with little faith. I am now a well man, have good appetite, digestion perfect, regular stools, piles gone, and I have gained forty pounds solid. They are worth their weight in gold.

These sleighs have been thoroughly tested in the logging and mining regions, and have proved superior to any other sleighs heretofore used. They are loose jointed, the runners acting independently of each other. We claim for their superiority over all other loose jointed sleighs for the following reasons: They have a solid cast iron knee made in one piece, making them much stronger and less liable to get out of repair than any sleigh having the knee in two or more pieces. The knees are all alike, insuring uniformity of bearing, so that the sleigh must run correctly. It is the cheapest single team sleigh that can be made, has a less number of pieces, is less liable to breakage and is more easily repaired if broken than any other loose jointed sleigh. It has all the good points of other loose jointed sleighs without their defects. We also handle a full line of light business sleighs, pleasure sleighs, swell body, Portland, and other styles of cutters, and shall be pleased to quote lowest prices to dealers, lumbermen, miners, etc. Send for circular and prices to

We claim for their superiority over all other loose jointed sleighs for the following reasons: They have a solid cast iron knee made in one piece, making them much stronger and less liable to get out of repair than any sleigh having the knee in two or more pieces. The knees are all alike, insuring uniformity of bearing, so that the sleigh must run correctly. It is the cheapest single team sleigh that can be made, has a less number of pieces, is less liable to breakage and is more easily repaired if broken than any other loose jointed sleigh. It has all the good points of other loose jointed sleighs without their defects. We also handle a full line of light business sleighs, pleasure sleighs, swell body, Portland, and other styles of cutters, and shall be pleased to quote lowest prices to dealers, lumbermen, miners, etc. Send for circular and prices to

Is composed of Herbs and Mineralogous products, which permeate the substance of the Lungs, expectorate the cold matter, loosen the phlegm, and form a soothing coating, which relieves the irritation that causes the cough. It cleanses the lungs of all impurities, strengthens them when enfeebled by disease, invigorates the circulation of the blood, and braces the nervous system. Slight colds often end in consumption. It is dangerous to neglect them. Apply the remedy promptly. A single dose raises the phlegm, subsides inflammation, and it not only cures the most obstinate cough. A pleasant cordial, children take it readily. For Croup it is invaluable and should be in every family. In 25c and 50c Bottles.

TUTT'S PILLS
ACT DIRECTLY ON THE LIVER. Cures Chills and Fever, Dyspepsia, Stomachic, Bilious Colic, Constipation, Rheumatism, Torpid Liver, and Female Irregularities. If you do not feel very well, a single pill stimulates the stomach, restores the appetite, imparts vigor to the system.

A NOTED DIVINE SAYS:
Dr. TUTT:—Dear Sir: For ten years I have been a martyr to Dyspepsia, Constipation and other ailments. Last spring your pills were recommended to me; I used them until with little faith. I am now a well man, have good appetite, digestion perfect, regular stools, piles gone, and I have gained forty pounds solid. They are worth their weight in gold.

NEGAUNEE.

THE rush for Christmas presents is what ails the clerks at L. D. Cyr's this afternoon.

BOTH the captains Hibbert, with their wives, have spent the past week in Chicago.

MR. WALTER A. ALLEN, local manager of the Concentrating works, has gone east to pass the holiday season.

THE great head-(and stomach)-of the Breitung house has been laid up a portion of the week with a severe throat trouble-not diphtheria.

INVITATIONS will be issued on Monday for the third, in the series of hops given in Winters' hall by the Negaunee social club, whose parties have hitherto been rare social treats.

MISS DELLA KRUSE, postmistress, is enjoying a brief vacation, visiting outside friends, and postmaster general Griffey is looking after our uncle's affairs in person.

THE "mayor" has called our attention to the fact that since the complaint of the MINING JOURNAL regarding the appearance of drunken men in herds upon the streets during business hours, he has done much to abate and suppress the nuisance.

THE city marshal, at the request of "mayor" Kirkwood, instituted a general sidewalk cleaning "bee" along Iron street last Monday afternoon.

THOSE of our young people who love to skate can now prepare for a moderate burrah, for the Barnes Bros. have secured, and will, (wind and weather permitting), to-day open, for the first time, a skating rink under the old Pendill block, above the carriage works.

THERE is a gentleman in the city whose occupation for the present is the humble one of "gin slinger" at the Breitung house bar, but who is capable of much better things.

THE destitute poor constitute a class that we have always with us, yet it is a matter of congratulation that this class, so far as Negaunee is concerned, is much less this season than during previous winters.

ONE TOO MANY.-A Frenchman giving his name as Jean Baptiste Barbeau was up before justice Theophile Roy on Friday last, charged with bigamy, the complainant being the father of the alleged superfluous wife.

Michigan state prison. The report of a contemporary to the effect that tar and feathers was thought of being dealt out to Barbeau is without foundation in fact.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVALS. - The approaching festival of Christmas, which comes down to us from the centuries of the past freighted with the blessings of good cheer, will be observed in this city in such a manner as will tend to bring much of happiness to the homes of the rich and poor alike.

The children of the Presbyterian church will not be looked after as a body this season, the reason being found in the yet unsettled state of affairs of the society, which is about to occupy its new church edifice, the building of which has taxed the society to its utmost financial ability.

LOST.-Pocket book containing about $70 in bills, besides papers of value only to the owner. B. B. Donohoe, who will liberally reward the person returning the same to his restaurant, on Iron street.

L. D. CYR'S Holiday Announcement!

The experience of the past several holiday seasons has taught us that there is a large portion of our people whose taste, in the various and sundry fancy, ornamental and useful articles which go to make up the catalogue of Christmas gifts, is somewhat beyond the line carried by the ordinary dealers.

The beautiful custom of sending Christmas and New Years Cards will be more than ever observed this year, and in anticipation of an immense local demand we have cards ranging in price from 5 cents to $11.

To enumerate the articles in our stock would require twice the space of the MINING JOURNAL, but we will call especial attention to our stock of Children's Toys, Cups, Saucers and Vases, Dressing Cases, Toilet Sets, Photograph and Autograph Albums, Party Fans, Placques, etc., etc.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

THE SONG OF OLD SANTA CLAUS. Ha, ha! ha, ha! I'm coming again, bounding o'er many an icy plain. Gath'ring up beautiful things as I go merrily, merrily over the snow.

But I'm here just a moment, then away, scattering bright presents about as I go. Hither and thither; and did you but know the fun and the pleasure, you'd envy me.

There's bright little Harry and cute little Rose. Almost go wild as they peep from the clothes. And see what I've brought them. Older ones, too.

Brim full of joy as they open and view some bright-looking treasure or gift, the small, it seldom e'er fails to bring pleasure to all. I'm king of the universe, just for a day.

Oh, but 'tis fun just to witness the way I disseminate happiness, on every side. Over bound regions and oceans wide! The poor little orphan comes in for a share.

The widow, too, often partakes of my fare. And sad-looking Poverty I try to relieve. And endeavor my best to comfort and please.

To give is a blessing that few but now prize. When favor they've found in good Fortune's eyes. Ere I bid you adieu once more for a year.

Now let me just whisper one word at your ear: Should there be more such presents for toys that one needs. You'll find I have made my headquarters at MEADS'.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—I take the pleasure of informing the public to look out for H. S. Benjamin, of Milwaukee, as the agent of the Brown patent sleigh knee, as a noted schemer, in trying to mislead and deceive the public, in stealing the advertisement and well known reputation of the Sweet loose-jointed Common Sense sleigh.

In trying to force his sleigh knee on the market, this schemer tells us that his sleigh has been thoroughly tested in the logging and mining regions, when he well knows that there is not a log sleigh in use, and it is not likely that lumber companies will do their logging in the summer season to accommodate Benjamin in testing his so-called log sleigh, as it was patented May 9th, 1882. Don't be deceived by this wanton schemer when he tells you that they are loose-jointed, etc., when he well knows that he can't build a loose-jointed sleigh under the Brown patent sleigh knee, unless he steals the right from Sweet to do so.

I hold a copy of the a-scented Brown sleigh knee patent, that I just received from the patent office, and in all the claims set forth there is not one word or claim about a loose-jointed sleigh, or anything that will warrant him in building one. So much for H. S. Benjamin and his cast knee. T. MORGAN, Agent for Sweet's loose-jointed sleigh. The only first-class sleigh in the market, and don't you forget it.

"VERY, VERY LOW."
 BY ERNEST JONES.
 We plough and sow, we're so very, very low,
 To the hell of the deep sunk mines;
 And the grain with the golden grain,
 And the grain with the fragrant hay,
 Our place we know—we're so very, very low,
 We're not too low to the grain to grow,
 But too low to the bread to eat.
 Down down we go, we're so very, very low,
 To the hell of the deep sunk mines;
 But we gather the proudest grains that grow,
 When the brow of a despot shines;
 And when'er he lacks upon our backs
 We're far too low to veto the tax.
 But not too low to pay.
 We're low, we're low—we're rabble we know
 But at our plastic power,
 The world at the lordlings' feet will grow,
 Into palace and church and tower;
 Then prostrate fall in the rich man's hall,
 And cringe at the rich man's door;
 We're not too low to build the wall,
 But too low to tread the floor.
 We're low, we're low—we're very, very low—
 Yet from our fingers glide
 The silken flow and the robes that grow
 Round the limbs of the great and good;
 And what we get and what we give,
 We know, and we know our share,
 We're not too low to take the law,
 But too low to the cloth to wear.
 We're low, we're low—we're very, very low—
 And yet when the trumpets ring
 Through the host of the proudest king;
 We're low, we're low, our place we know,
 As we not too low to rank and file;
 We're not too low to touch the soil,
 But too low to touch the spool.

A CLEVER CAPTURE.

I suppose there are few persons, who have had to make their way in the world, who have not, at one time or another, experienced the unpleasant pecuniary position, known as "laboring under temporary pressure." It has been my lot, and was my condition, when, seated one fine spring morning in St. James' Park, carelessly watching the happy little children feeding the water fowl, I heard my name pronounced, and looking round saw, standing by my side, with his hand extended for a cordial grasp, Frank Mowbray, of whom I had lost sight for at least eighteen months. We had not met since we were temporary members of a strolling theatrical company in the west of England. He had been with us a month only when he left as mysteriously and as suddenly as he had joined. No one seemed to know why, for though he had appeared in the small parts only, he displayed in their embodiment both aptitude and finish. He was a quiet, self-contained fellow, but was a general favorite from a certain courteous manner he possessed. For my own part, I was really glad to see him again, for, short as our acquaintance had been, I had found him a highly agreeable companion.

"And what are you doing now, Mowbray?" I asked.

"Oh," said he, "my former profession of course."

"What, still on the stage?" I inquired.

"The stage!" he exclaimed, laughing. "No, did you suppose then, like the rest, that I was a Richard or Othello? No, my dear boy; I am now what I was then, and neither more nor less."

"And that is—?" I asked.

"A detective," he replied emphatically.

"A detective!" I repeated in genuine surprise. "You a detective? Why, we all considered you an actor, and by no means a bad one!"

"Well," said he laughing, "I fancy that a member of my profession is none the worse fitted for his vocation if he can assume other individualities occasionally; at least, I have found it so."

Then, in reply to my further inquiries, he told me that he had been employed by a person of great wealth to watch, narrowly, the conduct of a member of our company, and to report to him the slightest indecorum or impropriety. And that reminded me we had among us at the time he joined our company a young lady of much beauty, and moderate ability, with whose name green-room gossip made rather free. It was stated she belonged to a wealthy family, but, having a desire to become an actress, was trying her powers on the provincial boards before venturing to challenge public opinion in a London theatre.

"Well, and now," said Frank, "what are you doing?"

I told him briefly and candidly the state of my affairs; that my prospects were of the most unpromising kind, and that I was anxious for any employment till better days might dawn.

"Well," said he, after a few moments' hesitation, "if you were not too particular, perhaps I might find you something to do."

"You?" I cried, "why, what is it?"

"Perhaps, though you are proud and would not consent to it?"

"I don't think pride would stand in the way just now," I rejoined. "What is it?"

"Would you like to go out to service?" he enquired.

"To service! what do you mean?" I asked in return.

"Would you accept a situation as servant, with a lady and gentleman? They have no family, but they keep a good deal of company at times. They live over Brixton way; the work would be easy, and the wages, perhaps—well"—and I saw a mischievous twinkle about his face as he spoke, "say twelve or perhaps fourteen pounds a year."

"What are you getting at?" I asked, almost indignantly.

"Don't be hasty," he answered quietly. "Take time to think. In all probability you would be required more than a month, and during that time I shall put you on a salary as well of two pounds a week."

"What on earth do you ask me for?" I inquired, bewildered by the apparent absurdity of the proposal.

"Well, I believe you would do it as well as any one I know, at present," he replied. "A professional detective might do too much; and a stranger would probably do too little."

"But what should I be expected to do?" I inquired, for Mowbray's quiet and earnest manner had its influence with me. "Perhaps, black boots and shoes, or clean knives and forks?"

"Probably," he quietly said, as usual. "I don't know what duties they might require, I only know what I want of you."

"And what may that be?" I asked.

"To go as soon as possible, I shall give you a character and be your reference. Here is my address"—and he handed me a card as he spoke. "If you obtain the place, all well and good; say as little and see as much as you can; and every day, before your master or mistress is up, send me a correct and minute account of every visitor that comes, everything that goes on in the house, their conversation, if possible, their amusements, occupations, the hours they keep, everything in fact."

"Oh," I said, still in doubt, "I don't know what to say."

"Do it, I tell you!" he replied; "don't throw away your chances of a livelihood. Remember you will only be doing what you profess—sustaining a character, but for a longer time than usual. Now see here," he continued, as he drew a newspaper from his pocket. "Read this advertisement."

I took the paper, and read as he desired:

WANTED—A respectable young man, with good address, as servant out of livery. Liberal wages. Apply at Apple-dore Lodge, Road, Brixton.

"There you are!" he continued; "a respectable young man, of good address, and out of livery, a photograph of yourself! Now lose no time; get into a cab, and off you go! Stay, though," he said, seeing I still hesitated; "here's your first week in advance, to get anything you may require."

He had linked his arm through mine, and led me almost unknown to myself, to George street, where he hailed a hansom cab.

In obedience to the call, the cab was driven up, and I had, almost mechanically, stepped into it, and was on my way to Brixton, before I had well made up my mind how to decide. Wondering what it all might mean, we reached the end of the road mentioned in the advertisement. Here I deemed it prudent to alight, and, discharging the cab, presented myself at the door of Apple-dore Lodge. I have encountered a good many professional difficulties in the course of my career, such as undertaking a long part at a short notice, or suffering from what we understand as "stage fright," but I think I never felt more nervously apprehensive than during the few minutes between the ringing of the bell and the opening of the door by the servant.

"I have come in reference to the situation advertised in this morning's paper," I said.

"Please to walk in, young man," the girl replied, "and wait in the 'all, and I'll tell missus."

During the short interval that followed, I looked about me and carefully observed the place I had come to. The house was a snug suburban residence, of the kind dignified by the term "villa," or "lodge"—rather pretensions, perhaps, but well enough appointed, as far as I could judge.

Again the strange, nervous, aching sensation came over me, as I reflected on the responsibility or the absurdity of my undertaking—for, though, perhaps, not generally believed, we actors, as a class, are especially alive to the ridiculous—when a parlor door opened, and a tall, well-dressed youth, hat in hand, came out. He eyed me malignantly as he passed, I thought, and muttered, as he left the house, I suppose, to me, "Things looks fishy here, George! They wants you for nothing! Not me!" and so departed. From this I inferred he was an unsuccessful candidate.

The servant girl, again addressing me as "young man," requested me "to come forward, please, as the missus would see me."

In the breakfast room, looking on a garden at the back of the house, comfortably and even luxuriously furnished, I saw the lady of the house, a very lovely woman, and, I suppose, about five-and-twenty.

After the questions usual in such cases, and which I answered as well as I could, taking care, in all difficulties, to refer her to my late employer, whose card I at once presented, she inquired whether I had been much in service. I candidly admitted I was not experienced, and modestly hoped, by attention and assiduity, to afford no cause of complaint. But the lady seemed to attach no great importance to my experience, for she kindly said she could make allowance for all deficiencies if she perceived a "desire to deserve her own and captain Falcon's confidence."

By this time my nervousness had vanished, for the adventure had begun to assume rather an interesting appearance, and I no longer felt desirous of avoiding the engagement; so, when she asked, "And what wages would you accept?" I at once replied that, in consideration of my want of experience, I would make my terms as low as possible, and hoped she would not think twelve pounds a year too high.

To this proposal she gave a hearty assent, and it was understood I should commence my duties that evening. On leaving the house I hastened to report to Mowbray, as we had arranged, my progress in the affair. He seemed highly pleased at the success of his scheme so far, though he preserved a silence as to his motives. We dined together, had a most agreeable, chatty, comfortable afternoon, and, in the evening, having made what additions or changes I thought necessary in my wardrobe, and settled my affairs at my lodgings, I started to assume my new character.

The duties that evening were light enough, and any mistake passed unnoticed. I contrived to make a friend of the good-natured servant girl, who quickly perceived I was new at the business, and helped me considerably in my difficulties. From her I learnt that the master of the house, captain Falcon, was out a great deal to my advantage in the latter part of the day and evening—and at such times, his young wife was quite alone. They seemed to have but few acquaintances, and except when he brought friends home with him, saw little or no company. But the place was not a bad one, nor was the work hard.

At 10 o'clock the household retired to rest, excepting the mistress, who was accustomed to await her husband's return. The chamber allotted to me was in the front of the house, and, as I afterward discovered, over the one occupied by the captain and his wife. I am habitually a light sleeper, and on this particular night, the events of the day, so strange and unexpected, prevented my sinking into a sound slumber. I heard the hours striking from the neighboring church, and about 3 in the morning my attention was aroused by a heavy tread on the gravel of the garden path. Bearing in mind Mowbray's injunction to hear and see everything, I arose and opened the chamber door softly. I heard a light rap at the hall door, and could distinguish Mrs. Falcon's step as she proceeded to unfasten it. Then on came the heavy tread inside the house, and the voices of two persons in conversation; but as they retired to the drawing-room, I could not make out the subject of their conference. I had previously lain so long puzzling myself as to the nature of the mystery—if mystery there were—that surrounded these persons, that now I began to feel an unaccountable longing to ascertain what it might be. Physiologists tell us that at about this hour in the morning the vital powers are at their lowest, and we are more open to impressions, especially those which bear in them the elements of fear and apprehensiveness than at any other; and so, from speculating wildly about the life of these persons, under whose roof I so strangely found myself, might be, I worked myself at last into a fever of excitement lest the man whom I had not seen, but whose heavy footstep I heard, would assail and perhaps injure the woman who had so patiently awaited his coming; as he drew a newspaper from his pocket. "Read this advertisement."

I took the paper, and read as he desired:

Physiologists tell us that at about this hour in the morning the vital powers are at their lowest, and we are more open to impressions, especially those which bear in them the elements of fear and apprehensiveness than at any other; and so, from speculating wildly about the life of these persons, under whose roof I so strangely found myself, might be, I worked myself at last into a fever of excitement lest the man whom I had not seen, but whose heavy footstep I heard, would assail

The visitor, this time was a fair-faced young fellow, apparently about five or six and twenty, and with light curly hair, beard and mustache. He had, besides, a freshness in his manner, and a merry, boyish twinkle in his open face, that won upon me, and I resolved to save him if I could, from the brace of birds sarpey beside him. Once or twice he threw toward me a searching and intelligent glance, and I could not help wondering whether he had divined the character of his host and hostess, and was wondering in his turn whether I knew it, too. In my suspicions I was confirmed, when I was told as before, to produce the cigars and sherry, on which my master, as on the previous occasion, desired his guest's opinion. But I had not forgotten our former visitor's drowsy state in the cab, and so when told to hand the wine, I contrived to stumble, and spilled it over his knees. "Mind what you are about, my good fellow," he cried, "I'm half-drowned."

"I'm not," I replied, "and I feel convinced I won't be."

My master reprimanded me severely for my clumsiness, and desired me to fill another glass, and place it on the table.

I had no help, therefore but to obey, and could only hope my hint would be taken. Under one pretence or another, I contrived to loiter about the room, and as I kept perfectly still, my master and mistress seemed to have overlooked my presence.

Thus I was able to observe that my mistress practiced the same movements with her hands and fancy work as before, and yet, strange to say, with not the least result as to the result. The girl appeared to be winning. The captain's face had lost a little of its easy gaiety, and though he was perfectly self-possessed and polite, he seemed a little more anxious than usual. At the conclusion of another game I think it was carte they were playing, which again seemed in favor of the guest, he said, rather abruptly, "You don't take your wine! Pray tell me how you like it."

By the visitor seeming to hesitate, and to put him off by various modes of delay, such as examining the wine by the light, passing it under his nose, or affecting to sip, and then to pause and consider, but never drinking, I saw that my caution had not been in vain. At last, however, the captain pressed him so closely, there was no way out of it, as I thought, and becoming intensely interested in the scene I was closely observing, I quite accidentally dropped the silver I had been carelessly holding, or nervously passing from one hand to the other. The clattering noise of the fall caused the captain and his wife to look round, and at the same moment the visitor jerked the wine over his shoulder, and then immediately raised the empty glass to his lips, as in the act of drinking.

"A very nice dry wine, indeed," he said, and placed the empty glass on the table.

My master, with a good deal of anger in his tone and face, desired me to leave the room and take the coffee service to the parlor below. In passing behind the guest's chair for the purpose of removing his empty wine glass I happened to look, and saw from the position my master had taken that his back was reflected in the leaning mirror over the mantel piece at such an angle that the cards he held were also reflected there, as he leaned back in his seat.

From the situation Mrs. Falcon had taken a little in the rear, and as it were between the two, possibly with a view to communicate more easily with her husband, she had, clearly, not observed the accidental assistance the looking-glass afforded their intended victim, who was evidently no fool, and I saw at a glance that the game had been merely a pitted against ruse, for the clever to win. But right or wrong, sharp or no sharp, I could not help a strong feeling in favor of the stranger, and chuckled to myself at the evident chagrin with which the captain lost another game, while every moment his temper became shorter and his anxiety greater.

I had purposed the room as commanded, but purposely left the door ajar, and having disposed of the coffee service and glasses, stealthily returned to watch the fight. Before, however, I could reach the landing outside the drawing-room, I heard high words of altercation; the captain seemed to have lost all control over himself, and with a strong oath, and a loud voice, I heard him exclaim to his wife, "You have been playing me false!"

"I!" the frightened woman pleaded.

"Yes, you!—I say you!" he thundered out.

"Steady, captain, steady," said the visitor quietly. "That lady has played her part as well as it is possible to do, and I acknowledge her skill. My dear fellow," he went on as easily as before, "you are very clever, but you have made one mistake. Did you ever hear of two famous highwaymen, who, mutually mistaking one another, cried at the same time, 'Stand and deliver!' That is our case. I am not a greenhorn, but a bird of prey like yourself!"

"What do you mean by that?" the captain demanded.

"Now, come, come," the other said, careless as ever; "don't lose your temper. We can afford to be honest before one another, at least. Mrs. Falcon is a most accomplished confederate, I am sure, but you see I know almost as much as yourself. Suppose we shake hands, and for the future work together?"

The captain, half amazed and half angry, paused a few moments; then he said, looking narrowly at the young and frank face before him, "You are right; no man is a simpleton or a fool who can take me in! Yes; we will work together."

"Then," cried the other impulsively, "give me your hand on the bargain!"

The captain thrust out his hand, which the visitor seized with his most cordial grasp, and at the same time, with marvelous quickness and dexterity, slipped on a handcuff, drawing a moment afterward a revolver from his breast pocket, and presenting it at the astonished captain. "I arrest you on a charge of embezzlement in the banking house of Russell Brothers, five years ago! Stir an inch, and you are a dead man!"

"Who, and what the devil are you?" his prisoner fiercely demanded.

"I am Frank Mowbray," the detective quickly rejoined, "and I have been looking for you for some time, if you may as well go without fuss. Look to the law, Charley!"

I had already entered the room when the captain was secured, and was but just in time to prevent his wife unlocking a drawer in a bookcase, to which she had gone for the purpose, and where we afterward found a six-shooter, capped and loaded, and probably placed there in the event of a contingency like the present; and I shall not easily forget the change of expression in that gentle face at the moment—white as death, but with such a glare of baffled rage and despair as I had never seen before, nor have met since. To this succeeded a violent fit of hysterics, and we left her, eventually, in the care of the maid servants, whom the unusual commotion had brought up stairs.

"Tell the cabman at the door to be ready," said Mowbray, calmly as usual; "and tell Martin to come up."

I found that a cab had been driven quietly to the door, and another officer was waiting inside in readiness, so that I inferred all had been carefully pre-arranged, and that Frank had made pretty sure of effecting the capture.

In due course the captain was examined, committed for trial, and eventually convicted. His sentence was very heavy, and he had no chance of escape from the commencement of the case.

Sometime afterward, I was speaking to Mowbray of the circumstance, and expressed surprise that he should have taken such a circuitous route to arrive at a point which he must have been certain of from the first.

"I preferred to wait, Charley," said he, "to the chance of mistake. I had my suspicions some time that this captain Falcon was the Frederick Conway I had previously known, and who at the time of the embezzlement had given me the slip; but the distance of date and the alteration of his appearance, were likely to deceive me. I knew, however, the man I wanted had a scar on the right wrist, the result of some trouble in which he had been engaged, and when I grasped his hand after the game of cards, I saw it. That was the link wanting for my chain of evidence. I had learnt what places he frequented, and on more than one occasion found he picked up young fellows with more money than experience, whom he induced to accompany him home, and I knew it could be with one object only—under. I threw myself in his way, and so made his acquaintance; and he regarded me as a victim, like the rest."

"But how," I asked, "did you find the advertisement for the servant, and know it referred to him?"

"I had followed him home more than once," Mowbray answered, and spent a good deal of leisure time in the neighborhood of Apple-dore Lodge, and one day saw his wife go to a registry office. A keen sportsman, Charley, when the game is shy, never throws away a chance; so I ascertained, when the lady had left the office, that she was in quest of a servant, out of livery, and had been unsuccessful in her inquiry. Persons like this Conway, or Falcon, and his wife do not, as a rule, give themselves much personal trouble, and it would come easier to her to advertise. I thought; so I looked over the lists of the 'Wanted's' every morning—and you know what result. Our Warwickshire friend, who knew everything, was right when he said, 'There's a divinity doth shake our ends, rough-hew them as we will!' for if you had not been down on your luck, and watching the ducks in St. James' park that morning when I met you, you might never have enjoyed the proud privilege of serving your country, by assisting in what the newspapers called, at the time, 'A Clever Capture!'

TO THE KINGS OF EUROPE.—The following is a copy of a proclamation issued in Europe by prince Krapotkin, one of the Nihilist leaders, and is interesting reading:
Where you number ten we number ten millions.
Where you produce one necessity of life we produce a million.
Where you cultivate one rod of land we plough and reap from a thousand fields.
We build the ships and you sail them.
We build the railroads and you own them.
We grow the bread and you deny it to us.
While you have unused millions of money stored in your vaults, our wives and ourselves work wearily forever for bread and water.
You have pictures and music and dancing; the theatre, the fest, the social, the lecture and books, and do nothing.
We have misery and hunger and thirst and crime, the prison, the work-house, the asylum and the grave, and yet we do all.
We are tired of this and will suffer it no more.
Give us what we earn and a government to protect it.
For if you do not we shall take it by force.
We, in the name of liberty, knock at the doors of royalty, and bid the king, the prince and the cross to come out and work with us in the field.
If they come not they must die.

THE CONDUCTOR.—I had been suffering with a severe cold for several days, and was so hoarse I could not speak above a whisper. Nov. 16th I met one of Dr. Warner's agents on my train. He handed me a bottle of White Wine of Tar Syrup and one hour after taking the first dose my hoarseness commenced to leave me. In twenty-four hours my voice was quite clear and natural and the cold nearly cured. It is the best remedy I ever saw. Respectfully, C. W. WARREN, Conductor, Chicago & Northwestern R. R. Winona, Minn., Nov. 29, 1879.

A MERCHANT in a Kentucky town recently bought from a Louisville traveling man a bill of goods, and when the order went to the house they refused to fill it at the price. The merchant was mad and went to see about it. He spoke his mind freely and among his remarks he said:
"There's only one thing sold in your old town as cheap as I can get it in Cincinnati."
"What's that?" asked the seller, expecting to get an order anyhow.
"Postage stamps," replied the country merchant, as he slammed the door natural and out of his feelings with a damp bourbon poultice.—Drummer.

AN ELASTIC COSTUME.—A ball supper is agony to many women, because tight lacing makes it inadvisable to eat heartily, but there was one matron, on a recent occasion in New York, who overcame all such difficulty. She ate heartily and still remained comfortable. I do not know, says a correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer, whether she holds a patent on the device, but I am going to describe it anyhow, and whoever copies it must take her own chance of a suit of infringement. It was what may be called a duplex, front-action, adjustable basque. It had the material cut away from the front of the lining in vest shape, and trimmed up each side and around the neck with a revers collar of the trimming. The lining was provided with eyelet holes and a lacing string, so that it might be drawn as loosely or as closely as the wearer chose. To conceal this lacing a shirred vest of silk or satin was set on just inside the revers collar, and each shirring was merely a tape facing on the wrong side in which was inserted an elastic ribbon which permitted it to expand or contract. There were five of these crossway shirrings, the upper one being at the top of the front parts, and above this the vest was arranged in four easy plaits that were sewed on the neck double at the top to form a standing frill. A hook and loop on each shirred place fastened the vest below, and there were similar ones above. I saw the wearer let out a few lines of lacing of her corsets in the dressing-room before supper and adjust the basque to the enlargement, but she ate more than she intended to evidently, for afterward she retired to ease her corsage once more.

A CERTAIN LAWYER in Virginia City, had been down to Salina to try a case. Returning to town the conductor was very impertinent in his manner because the lawyer was rather tardy in producing his ticket when called for to be punched. Some one called the lawyer remarked to a friend next to him: "The Southern Pacific shall never see a cent of my money after this." "Going to foot it up and down from now on, eh?" sneered the conductor. "Oh, no," replied the lawyer; "instead of buying my ticket at the office I shall pay my fare to you."

THE SIGN WOULD ANSWER.—A woman who opened a small millinery shop engaged a painter to paint her a sign. When it came home the other day she saw that it read, "Mrs. J. Blank," etc., and she called out: "You have an extra 'n' in Mrs.' and you must paint the sign over again." The painter saw the error, but he didn't want the job of correcting it, and he replied: "Madam, haven't you had two husbands?" "Yes, sir." "You were a Mrs. when you lost the first?" "I was." "And do you think a woman can go on marrying forever and not lengthen out her title?" "Mrs. means a married woman or a widow." "Mrs." means a woman who has been married twice, and is young enough to marry again; and only yesterday a rich old chap was in our shop, and said if he had any idea that you were heartless, he'd come up—"Oh, well, you can nail up the sign," she interrupted. And it is there to-day.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

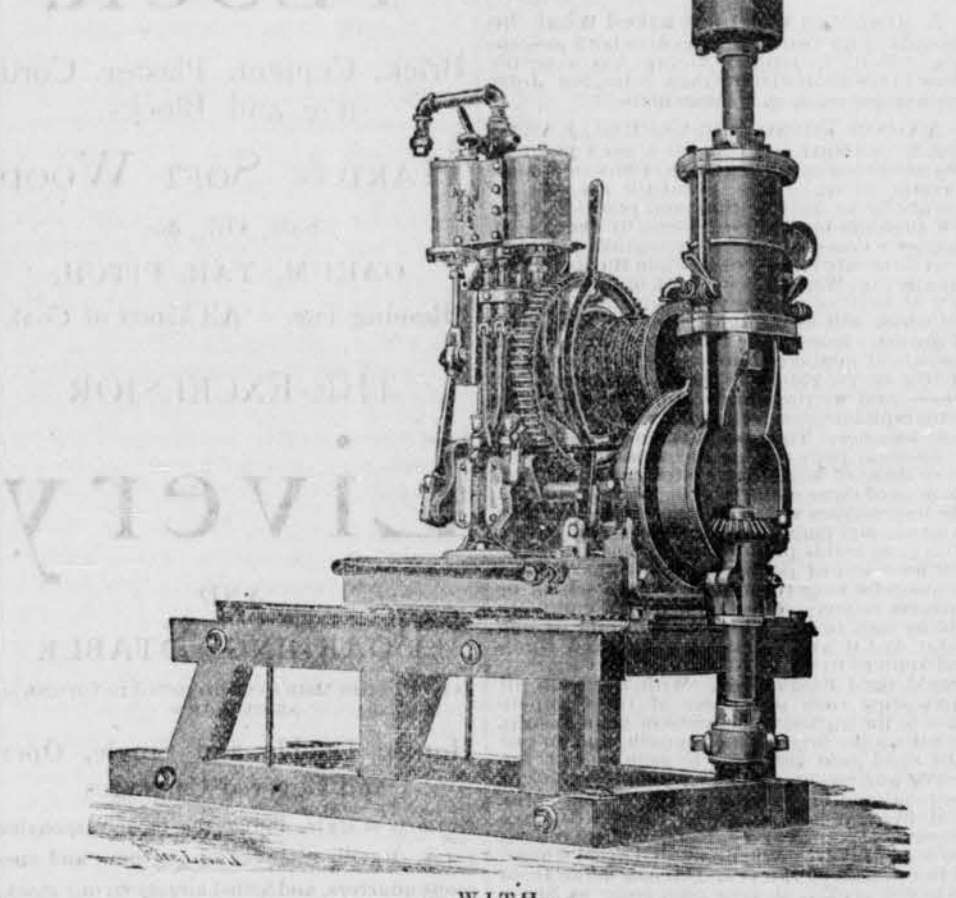

Messrs. Editors:
The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Fram, Mass., who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-story, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants, to help her answer the large correspondence which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special burden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and an satisfied of the truth of this.
On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. One says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhoea, irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."
It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, set in harmony with the laws that govern the female system.
It costs only $1. per bottle or six for $5, and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.
For Kidney Complaints of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.
"Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the Liver. Her Blood Purifier works wonders in its special line and bids fair to equal the Compound in its popularity.
All must respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose sole ambition is to do good to others."

Ears for the Million!
Foo Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil
Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the ONLY ABSOLUTE CURE FOR DEAFNESS KNOWN.
This oil is abstracted from a peculiar species of small WHITE SHARK, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as CARBOHARDON RONDELLETTI. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1410. Its cures were so numerous and MANY SO SEEMINGLY MIRACULOUS, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for OVER 300 YEARS NO DEAFNESS HAS EXISTED AMONG THE CHINESE PEOPLE. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1.00 per bottle.

Hear What the Deaf Say.
It has performed a miracle in my case. I have no unearthly noises in my head and hear much better. I have been greatly benefited. My deafness helped a great deal—think another bottle will cure me.
"Its virtues are unquestionable and its CURATIVE CHARACTER ABSOLUTE, AS THE WRITER CAN PERSONALLY TESTIFY, BOTH FROM EXPERIENCE AND OBSERVATION. Write at once to HAYLOCK & JENNY, 7 Day Street, New York, enclosing $1.00, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."

MAKE HENS LAY
SWEET'S PATENT COMMON SENSE SLEIGH.

THE STRONGEST, MOST DURABLE, AND MOST PERFECT SLEIGH IN USE.
I RESPECTFULLY CALL THE ATTENTION of Lumbermen to this cut, showing Sweet's Logging and Supply Sleighs. We are now making eight different sizes, suitable for all kinds of work, both double and single, and of any width of track desired. It is a well known fact that these Sleighs will draw larger loads with more ease of draft over rough roads and bad places than any other Sleigh produced. They are built loose jointed, so that each runner will act independent of each other, and will not tip over in bad places, as the common stiff-jointed sleigh is sure to do. They also have a Patent Shoe, Concave Heel, so as to prevent the sleigh from slewing or sliding sideways, so that the sleigh is bound to keep the track, which is a large item to every man that drives a team. I keep on hand all sizes of Logging, Light and Heavy Teaming and Delivery Sleighs, all warranted to give perfect satisfaction. Parties will please send their orders in time for the coming winter, and not wait until the rush comes.
As this valuable sleigh is sold and shipped west and north-west by the car load—over 25,000 now in use—the best of references given on application.

CAUGHT IN A PRAIRIE STORM.

"Prairie! The very name can make me shiver. When covered with snow they are as trackless as the ocean to an unskilled navigator. I would about as soon cross the Sahara without a guide, as try to get over the snowy plains of the west and northwest. The real fright I once had in one of these tracts, sir, was bad enough to serve me for a lifetime."

"Tell us about it, captain?" "Well, I can't mind. My Uncle Dan and his family were staying at the D. settlement, for he had taken the western fever, and they went out there. Uncle Dan was always a speculator—though he did manage to line his pockets well. He purchased a large tract of land at D. with an eye, it must have been, to some such promise as were held out to Abraham of old: for acres and acres of land he could never personally utilize, though later he could sell it again to advantage. I was out helping him. The family consisted of his wife, two grown up daughters, and two sons; and there was a niece, Cordelia. From the first time I saw Cordelia Bardwell, I thought a great deal of her. Perhaps that is the reason I stayed in the uncivilized place."

"The weather may break up any week, now, Rolfe, and I must have the lumber ready to come down the river as far as the forks with the freshets." "Well, sir, I am ready to go over to Bingley's Mills for you, and to make what arrangements you please about the timber."

"Uncle Dan, may I go to Bingley's Mills, too?" cried a pleading, pretty voice, as Hector hurried off to harness the brown mare. "I could hardly believe my ears; the voice was Cordelia's."

"The child must be crazy!" called out aunt. "Do you know the length of the journey, Delia?" "It's a lovely day, aunt; it won't hurt me."

"Yes, it is a lovely day, mother, so clear and calm," cried one of the other girls—Myra, I think—with quite an eager tone; "and poor Delia never goes any where."

"That was true; but still I felt astonished. Later, I knew that it was a kind of conspiracy. The girls all wanted to get some trustworthy person to the post-office at Bingley's Mills to post letters and get some that were lying there, not intended for papa and mamma to read."

"I really don't see why Delia should not go," said the unsuspecting, good natured uncle. "You will be sure to take care of her, Rolfe?" "I'll try to, sir."

"So in less than half an hour from the time it was mentioned, I was gathering up the reins and Brown Bess was tossing her head until the bells jingled merrily."

"It's royal traveling," called out Uncle Dan, as we started. "Don't be out too late, Rolfe, for it has been a severe snap of weather lately, and—"

"The rest was lost in the crunching of the crusty snow, and the 'ping, ping, ping' of the cup-shaped bells."

"This is an unexpected honor, Miss Cordelia, I began, as the sleigh went smoothly along."

"Susan and Almira voted me their minister plenipotentiary," she responded coldly. "I and Cordelia—who was no blood relation of mine—had a falling out of recent date, which made it feel all the more surprising she would have cared to go with me that day. She was one of those high-spirited girls who never strike their colors."

Brown Bess and the sleigh came round to the inn door, the sun, wading for hours through snow-clouds, had sunk in a bank of leaden blue and could not be more than an hour high."

"A little risky," said the man, gazing at the cardinal points of the compass, and shaking his head slightly. "Cordelia, her glowing cheeks nearly as bright as her scarlet hood, came forward with an animated manner. As I drew the buffaloes around her I thought how, a week or two ago, I should have esteemed the privilege of this close companionship invaluable, but I did not seem to appreciate it now."

"We dashed away. The air was damp and cutting, and as we came upon the open prairie, it stung our cheeks like needles. Half an hour after starting I said to her: 'If the snow only keeps off, we shall be along merrily.' Cordelia gazed up from her scarlet hood; she did not seem to think much about it one way or the other."

"Did you accomplish your postal commission, Miss Cordelia?" "Oh yes, thank you."

"At that very moment a particle of icy snow fell on my glove. I would not believe that the mare had flung the particle from her flying heels. But in a minute more a handful of fine particles sifted over us both. Cordelia gave me a half startled glance. I spoke out cheerily to the mare, and tucked the blankets around my companion. A half hour longer found the north wind rapidly and perceptibly rising, while the icy flakes were tinkling on the crusty surface round our way. Quite soon there were small whirlwinds driving the dry, powdery stuff around and around, and then spinning it up in a little column. Darkness came down rapidly, but not before the wind was fearfully increased, and the atmosphere was white with tiny flakes that drifted by us in loose billowing folds."

"Cordelia did not speak, she only tightened the fur scarf around her neck and sat perfectly quiet. At that moment I would have given a fortune if the girl had been safe at my uncle's, and I breasting the storm alone. We came to a belt of woodland, just ten miles of our journey through; nearly twenty more before us. Heaven! it seemed like a voyage across the world. And an almost awful fear was tugging at my heart."

"Are you cold?" I asked, drawing Cordelia closer to me. "Nothing to speak of," she cheerfully replied. But I felt a strong shudder shake her from head to foot."

"Presently the sleigh pitched considerably, although I had a tight rein. 'Rolfe,' she began, and I thought I again felt her frame tremble, though her voice was cool and steady. The wind does not strike on us just as it did; neither did we pitch this morning as we are doing now. Have we lost the road?"

"By Heaven, you have spoken my thoughts, Cordelia! I circled about while a damp, icy coolness broke out from every pore of my skin. She shuddered again, but said nothing."

"I knotted the reins and dropped them over the dashboard. This was why the mare had held so hardly—she knew better than I; I must trust to her instinct. In twenty minutes she had swung around so as to bring the wind to the old quarter with us. It was blowing heavily, I put my arms around my companion to hold the blankets in place."

"Just then a faint sound reached my startled ear. A swift shudder shook me, and I came near crying aloud. Another melancholy cry. I would have drawn the blankets about Cordelia's head."

"I hear it," she softly whispered. And in my terror and agony I drew her closer in a covetous clasp. "The sound came again. The mare heard it also, I knew, and then the jingling of the bells was changed to even strokes. She had broken from a hard trot into a gallop. My thoughts flew to the uttermost bounds of earth in a moment, and from earth to heaven. I prayed for the safety of my companion more than for my own."

"The short cry and the long wail. Wolves were calling each other to the banquet. "We were actually flying over the ground. We could not be far from home; but in the universal whiteness there were no landmarks, and alas, alas! every year was now distinctly audible. The dreadful animals must soon leap upon us. I looked from side to side, expecting a gaunt form to spring against the sleigh. Brown Bess, true to herself and to us, bore on steadily and fleetly; she knew the way."

"I tried to draw Cordelia down to the bottom of the sleigh, but she resisted. "Don't," Rolfe, I would rather meet death with my eyes open," she said, pushing away the furs from her face. "The darkness was as intense as it can be in winter, and—Heaven have mercy! are they surrounding us? Hear the yelps ahead, their cries! The air seemed rent with demoniac yells, snarls and shrieking howls."

"Remembering the short-handled axe in the bottom of the sleigh, I threw off my gloves and seized it with the grip of desperation. "With my foot braced upon the iron of the sleigh outside, I half knelt, axe in hand, expecting one of the dusky fiends to leap each instant upon us. The mare wavered a moment, and the sounds grew fiercer, and then with a shrill neigh leaped on again. Somehow the wolves did not come nearer—and Brown Bess flew along as though she knew our lives were in her power. The awful sound grew less distinct, and with a reverend 'God be praised,' I strove to be calm."

"Cordelia, look! Cordelia, we are saved!" I shouted, breaking into something between a laugh and a cry. "Oh, Cordelia, look!" "The foaming mare was dashing through a line of torches, and the settlers sent up a joyous shout, and the yelling dogs dashed about in a chorus of delight. "Brown Bess, good lady, would not pause; she thought the wolves were after her still, and dashed on, reeking with foam, to her own stable. My weeping aunt and excited cousins bore Cordelia in; while I felt more thankful to God than I ever had cause to feel. "But that terrible fighting of wolves close upon us—what did it mean?" I asked later, when before the blazing fire I in vain essayed to steady my nerves. "And why did they not come on to the attack? Was it a miracle?" "It was one of my stags," explained Uncle Dan. "Anderson came in and said the late unusually cold weather had made the cowardly creatures bold and ravenous; and he and I heard them signaling the pack soon after sunset. We knew they might overtake you if you delayed your return until after dark; so we slew the stag and drove out with him so far as we deemed advisable, hoping that they might find and fight over it while you were dashing past. We grew wild with fright as time passed on, Rolfe; and arming ourselves with torches, pushed on to meet you."

"His plan had succeeded in saving us—good old Uncle Dan! But I don't like the word prairie either."

"What became of Cordelia, captain?" "Cordelia? Ah! I thought that I told you that 'y' aunt and cousins bore her into the house in their arms."

"No evasion. Did you humbly beg her pardon later, for vexing her in opposing her pet theories?" "I did that, sir. I told her that she had proved in herself, by her own bravery, every good thing which she had said of her sex."

"Did she forgive you?" "Not exactly."

"She was right, captain. She should have punished you severely."

"She did. Oh! she did. She—married me!"

"ITEMS OF INTEREST. A WOMAN was offered a sealskin cloak that would suit her at the end of seven minutes she exclaimed: 'Mind, it's got to be a $250 one.'"

"TO PARTIALLY atone for our many sins during the year now closing we wish to expose a fraud. We refer to the large packs of horse-dung and manure, which the Sheridans are absolutely pure and immensely valuable. This statement is true."

"BUT, father, you know that love makes the time fly," said an enthusiastic daughter, who was striving in favor of her bridal trip than usual. "Yes, my dear, I know it does at first," replied the old gentleman; "but you don't take time to find in the end that time will make love fly."

INCREASE YOUR CAPITAL.

Those desiring to make money on small and medium investments in grain, provisions and stock speculations, can do so by operating on our plan. From May 1st, 1881, to the present date, our investments of $10 to $1,000 each profit have been realized and paid to investors amounting to several times the original investment. Profits paid first of every month, still leaving the original investment making money or payable on demand. Extensive circulars and statements of fund W sent free. We want responsible agents, who will report on crops and introduce the plan. Liberal commissions paid.
