Diseases of Wine.

[Fortnightly Review.]

The cryptogam Mycoderma aceti, makes wine into vinegar; its congenor, Mycoderma vini, which lives on new young wine, fades and withers in old and does no harm. When, however, wine "spurts" in the barrel, is turbid to the eye, and flat to the taste — when, p. ured into a glas, a crow of small bubbles rises to the top, and when, sightly shaken, silky little waves move about m all directions, then a minute filament, about the thon anith part of a millimeter in diameter, of variable length and working the foreign word."

All red wines, especially the finest of the Cate d'Or, are subject to this disease, which makes them bitter and unfit to drink. White wines, on the contrary, are exempt from this, but are subject to another disease called maladie de la graisse. They, too, become turbid; but where the ed are bitter, these are flat, insipid, and viscous. This maladie de la graisse like is due to a filamentous organism like that which makes red wine spurt; but the two differ in structure and physiological action. The English Language in India. A short time back Mr. Bright delivered a speech well ming the marquis of Ripon back to England. Mr. Bright said that he was glad to learn that our noble English language, the language of Milton, was be-better know in India and was spreading to the masses of the people. The other day, happening to be walking by the barracks, I received a striking proof of the correctness of Mr. Bright's assertion. Tures very small native boys were having was represented by a piece of board resting against a large stone, the bat was a splint from some old box, and the ball was old 55 and angular. Mme. Bernhardt's Letter.

[Pall Mall Gazerte.] Mme. Bernhardt has written an interesting letter in defense of the sincerity of actors and actresse, seeking to prove that many of them really enter into the spirit of their parts. She declares that Croizette, after the famous poisoning scene in "Le Sphinx." used to remain some minutes pale and with chattering teeth; that Beanlevet always want real tears when performing King Lear and that Mounet Sully had veritable hallucinations when acting the malness
