

DAILY MINING JOURNAL

Associated Press dispatches and is especially devoted to the Upper Peninsula interests.

Entered as mail matter of the second class in the postoffice at Marquette, Mich.

Money is plenty, crop prospects good, and there is no reason why the country should not enter on a period of riotous prosperity if congress would but pass any kind of a tariff revision bill and adjourn.

There are now four candidates for the gubernatorial nomination on the Republican side before the voters of the party.

Senator Burrows stands for the $4 a ton duty on print paper, which is a tax to that extent on the newspapers of Michigan in proportion to their consumption of the article.

"I do not favor the use by the American people of European made goods when they can be produced at home and fairly purchased," says Senator William Alden Smith in defining his attitude on the tariff legislation which is now being considered by the congress.

There is no greater hubbub endured by the American people today through their reverence for tradition and established forms than the jury, petit and grand—for one is as useless for the purposes of justice as the other.

A couple of illustrations of this fact are fresh in mind. One is the jury in the Calhoun case at San Francisco, which failed to convict that brazen corruptionist, and the other the grand jury in the Armstrong investigation, which spent weeks inquiring into prison and municipal matters at Jackson, and after much effort found little wool in the way of indictments beyond what it was able to bring on the testimony of Armstrong himself, the grafting warden whom General Green had already trapped.

In the Calhoun case over three months time was spent in the endeavor to select a jury and then it was composed of twelve men stupid enough to be unable to find a verdict, after a lengthy and costly trial, or false enough to duty to refuse to convict though the prosecution had amply established its case against Calhoun.

Still, just because our dads held to a blind faith in the jury we are putting up with it, though intelligent persons are pretty much of a mind that the jury system, as it exists at present, is an obstacle in the way of just administration of the laws, and should be dropped, or materially remodeled and changed.

ISN'T IT UNJUST TAXATION? It is not easy to see how the proposed tax on the net earnings of corporations can be justified on other grounds than that the government needs the money to be extracted from them in the arbitrary manner suggested by the president. While considering this question it may be well to remember that the corporation is a progressive outcome of modern business methods and experience, necessitated by the larger operations in commerce and industrial ventures attendant on the world's growth.

Amheek's Mill Operations. The work on the mill construction at the Amheek continues to go ahead with success and there is reason to believe that this one stamp mill is likely to be finished and ready to go into commission at the promised time.

It will not be disputed that the corporation has a legitimate place in the organization of our activities for the prosecution of many forms of enterprise; that under the corporate system schemes for the development of our resources, the expansion of our trade, and the promotion of the nation's prosperity generally, are more readily brought to a successful result than was possible by individual effort or under partnerships.

WILLIAM PETERS DIES IN GOLDFIELD

FORMER WELLKNOWN ISHPEMING ATTORNEY AND POLITICIAN VICTIM OF TUBERCULOSIS IN NEVADA CITY—SICK SIX MONTHS.

William Peters, a former wellknown attorney of Ishpeming, died Thursday evening at Goldfield, Nev. The announcement of his death was not an entire surprise to his relatives and friends here, as it had been known for some time that he was suffering from tuberculosis, and that there was no hope of his recovery. It is thought that he died in the Goldfield hospital, where he had been confined the greater part of the six months he had been ill. The funeral will be held tomorrow, with interment in the cemetery at Goldfield.

The deceased, who was one of Marquette county's best known politicians, left here for Goldfield two years ago this month. He practiced law there and was also engaged in other lines. Mr. Peters practiced his profession here for several years before going West. During his early years a politician he was fairly successful. He worked in the mines for a number of years until he had a leg fractured by a fall of ground. Shortly after that he secured a position in the office of the secretary of state at Lansing, going there to the auditor general's office. While holding these positions he studied law and was admitted to the bar at Lansing, returning to Ishpeming to practice.

A year or two after his return to this city he was elected a member of the state legislature from the second district of the county, serving one term. A few years later he served as circuit court commissioner of Marquette county and he was also city attorney for one year, having held the latter office about two years prior to his departure from the city. Three years ago last spring, and again two years ago, he was a candidate for recorder on the Citizens' ticket, but failed to land the nomination.

The deceased was a member of the Knights of Pythias and Maccabees societies of this city and held an insurance policy in the latter. He was about forty years of age and is survived by his widow, two sons and one daughter, who reside here. Mr. Peters was married in Ishpeming some seventeen or eighteen years ago.

STOLE A MARCH.

James B. Quayle and Miss Bessie Richards stole a complete march on their relatives and friends Thursday evening when they were married at 8:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Matt Richards, on West Ridge street. Rev. C. L. Adams, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, performed the ceremony. The groom was supported by his cousin, Arthur Buzzo, and Miss Cora Richards, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. The only other relatives present were the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Quayle departed on the 4 o'clock train for Detroit and other points, to be absent a week or ten days. Several of Mr. Quayle's friends had a suspicion that he was to be married soon, but they were kept completely in the dark as to when the event was to take place. Both he and his bride have many friends in the city, who will wish them happiness in their wedded life.

"JOAN OF ARC" AT COMMENCEMENT

SCHILLER'S HISTORIC DRAMA WELL PRESENTED BY PUPILS OF CATHEDRAL SCHOOL.

EIGHT WERE GRADUATED

Young Women Who Have Completed High School Course at Catholic Institution Begin New Life.

The commencement exercises at the cathedral school last evening were a pleasing innovation, a classic musical drama being presented, instead of the formal program customary on such occasions. The choice of the class was Schiller's great historic drama "Joan of Arc," which was splendidly produced. While the play was an adaptation, much of the original language was preserved and the interpretation was very satisfactory.

The play opened with a group of children singing in the forest of Vosges, and wondering the while what has come over their companion Joan, who shuns their society and seeks constant communion with her God. A storm comes up and the children hasten home. At the close of the first act, Joan bids farewell to her parents, and announces that she must save her country from the invading English and bring about the coronation of the dauphin.

The second act reveals the weak dauphin ready to give up everything, believing that Destiny is with the English. Just then news is brought that the French army has won a signal victory through the encouragement and example of an unknown shepherd girl. She obtains an audience with the dauphin as the result of which she is given command of the army.

In the third act, the scene is the English camp, with the traitorous Queen Isabella and Duke of Burgundy in despair over their defeat at the hands of Joan and her soldiers. On Joan's arrival, she is attacked by Burgundy, but is protected from harm by Dunois and La Hire, her subordinate generals. In the end a reconciliation is effected with Burgundy, and he returns to the French cause.

This scene was beautifully set, on one side of the stage being a soldier's tent, in which a dull red fire was burning. The fourth act represents the coronation of the dauphin, and Joan's mission being ended, she asks leave to return to her home and spend the rest of her days in obscurity. The coronation scene was also delightfully well staged. In the last act, Joan is a captive of the English and is sentenced to be burned as a heretic. As she stands calm and prayerfully on the pile of lighted fagots, the final curtain goes down, and the Maid of Orleans becomes the Martyr of Rouen.

Interpretation Was Excellent. The character of Joan of Arc was splendidly taken by Margaret Scully, under whose interpretation the most unique figure in history was effectively portrayed. Josephine Donckers played the part of the weak-minded dauphin in an entirely satisfactory manner. The dauphin's chief generals, Dunois and La Hire, were the roles taken by Rose Van Linden and Mildred Dushane, both of whom were well cast in their military and war-like characters. Burgundy was well played by Louise Hogan, and Isabella, the unmerciful mother of the dauphin, was the part effectively handled by Mary Myers. Others who had speaking parts and added materially to the success of the production were: Margaret Dwyer, Mary Dillon, Jeannette Gröningner, Lydia Kimber, Elsie Constance, Mildred Mack, Josephine LaFave, Helen McCarthy, Iva Winkel, Wm. O'Reilly, Grover Quarters, Elsie Passender, Helen Green and Mabel Myers.

Class Receive Diplomas. Rose Van Linden spoke for the class of which she was a member just before the diplomas were presented. She told of their mingled feelings of joy and sorrow at leaving their school days behind, and paid a glowing tribute to their faithful teachers, and especially to Father Patten, who has so faithfully worked for the good of the school.

Before presenting the diplomas, Father Patten made a brief address in which he said that he considered the time spent in preparation of such exercises as "Joan of Arc" just as well spent as in what was called the actual work of the school room. He then spoke of the play and the graduation exercises as representing the great work being done by the school in training children for successful lives.

He stated that the patrons of the public schools were beginning to see that there was something radically wrong with the system, in that it did not teach morality and right living. As he said that he could be no morality without dogma, he declared that the root of the trouble was that religion was not being taught. The Catholic schools, he said, were trying to avoid that mistake. He declared that the public schools were against that, that the church was not inimical to republican institutions, and that it had always stood foremost as a patron of science and education. He expressed the belief that in time the American people would recognize the injustice now being done the Catholics under the public school system and that then steps would be taken to rectify that injustice.

The exercises closed with the singing of the class song. The following young ladies received diplomas: Elysmore Evelyne Constance, Margaret Mary Dwyer, Mary Elizabeth Dillon, Josephine Mary Donckers, Jeannette Carolyn Gröningner, Louise Kathryn Hogan, Lydia Kimber, Kimber, Rose Agatha Van Linden.

FEED WATER HEATER SHOWS UP WELL

SAVED OVER EIGHTEEN PER CENT IN FUEL ON TRIP FROM MARQUETTE TO HANCOCK AND RETURN.

The feed water heater, invented by John Currie, of Minneapolis, which was recently installed on South Shore locomotive No. 408, made a remarkably good showing in a test run from Marquette to the copper country on Fine freight Nos. 31 and 32 this week. Monday night the engine was sent out on the train without the heater attached and the amount of coal consumed carefully computed, and the same was done on the return trip. Wednesday night, the heater was attached and the same run was made, the trip being completed early Thursday morning. On the trip with the heater attached the train had more work to do and carried a heavier tonnage, but the amount of coal used per ton mile, showed a saving of 18.03 per cent, compared with the trip made without the heater. Other shorter tests have shown even a larger saving in fuel.

Not only was there a big saving in fuel with the heater attached but the fireman had the easiest trip of his life, as it was no trouble at all to keep up steam, even while coming up the L'Anse hill. Another great feature of the device is that the moderate fire necessary does away with most of the sparks thrown out of the stack, greatly lessening the danger of fires igniting along the right-of-way.

The "super-heater," as it is branded by its inventor, consists of a device for the using of exhaust steam in heating the water before it first enters the boiler. These heaters have been used successfully with stationary boilers, but never before, so far as known, has an attempt been made to connect them with a locomotive.

The super-heater consists of a cylinder, fourteen feet long and eighteen inches in diameter. This cylinder contains 151 small flues, each of which is charged when the heater is in operation with hot steam, fresh from the exhaust. The heat of this steam, exposed upon so great a surface of the water, which is pumped direct from the tender back to the cylinder, brings the water to a high temperature before it proceeds to the boiler, where the development of steam requires a much shorter space of time, and, it is estimated, from seven to eighteen per cent less fuel.

Railroad men who have inspected the invention regard it as one of practical value, and the results of the demonstration probably will be the placing of the device on the market, backed by sufficient capital to insure its success.

When there is considered the immense fuel cost annually to the railroads of America it will be seen that the cutting down of this expense even seven per cent will mean an enormous saving in coal and it is believed that the super-heater will average fully ten per cent the year around. One of the chief advantages of the heater is that it may be attached to locomotives of any type, and that any terminal machine shop can do the work.

are financially interest in the exploitation of the invention. To one familiar with the present waste in the development of locomotive power it would seem that the device will fill a long-felt want, and that there can be little doubt of its future.

It will mean less work for the fireman, less worry for the engineer, less expense to the railroad companies, and better results all around it, in practical service, the heater makes good the promise made on the first trial trip.

When in the Course of Human Events

It becomes necessary for a man to buy a suit of clothes, the question of value is of the utmost importance. All men are created equal, so far as buying from this store is concerned. The man who wants to pay $10 or $15 for his suit is equal here to the man who wishes to pay $18 to $30; one gets as good a proportion of value for his money as the other.

The corner stone, the foundation of this store is value giving to maintain the highest principles of business and if a mistake is made here we ask only the opportunity to correct it. This store is the home of the Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothes They represent the highest skill known to the tailoring art and are worn by the best dressers everywhere.
