

MR. TAFT RETURNS TO THE WHITE HOUSE

He Arrives in Washington After Having Been Absent for More Than Three Months; but His Stay Will Be Very Brief.

He Will Go to Connecticut Today and Will Not Take Up Routine Work Until Monday—He Will Make No Important Diplomatic Appointments Until After Jan. 1, and He Will Not Fill the Vacancy in the Supreme Court Until Congress Meets.

Washington, Nov. 10.—After an absence of more than three months, President Taft sleeps tonight in the White House. He left the capital Aug. 6, with the cheer of the crowds ringing in his ears.

On the arrival of Mr. Taft's train, the president was escorted through the crowd to the waiting room set aside for the president's use where members of the cabinet awaited him.

Mr. Taft's stay in Washington will be brief. He leaves tomorrow for Hartford and Hartford, Conn., and in the meantime will deliver an address at Washington tomorrow before the Laymen's Missionary society.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10.—"During my sixty days' travel there has been a moment or two of deliberation. During that time I have been studying what the executive should recommend to the incoming congress.

In the final speech of his 13,000-mile trip before an immense audience here this afternoon President Taft thus prefaced a preliminary statement of some of the recommendations of his first trip to the reconstruction of the arid lands.

"We have reached the time when a great many people in the West are counting on an immediate supply of water for the land upon which they have settled, and which is not forthcoming because the money applied to the reclamation fund does not come quickly enough to meet the exigency.

"I am strongly in favor of anticipating that fund, which is raised solely by the sale of public lands by issuing bonds.

"It seems wise, also, that the government should reserve control over the water power cities, and the coal lands, and the phosphates, so that they will not come into the hands of one corporation, but will be retained by the government, with power to restrict the prices at which the coal, or at least the power, is sold, to prevent the absorption into one command of all the power on the continent.

"We have an anti-trust law on our hands for enforcement, and the arrangement of the departments of the government in such a way as to make it more effective.

ARCHITECTURE BY LAYMAN.

Some Remarkable Results Achieved in Washington.

The Rise of Elliott Woods, Who Was Brought to Washington by Vice President Hendricks—He Has Done Good Work on the Great Office Buildings.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Elliott Woods was appointed superintendent of the United States Capitol, against the strenuous opposition of the American Institute of Architects, whose secretary also was a candidate for the place.

The first important work of Superintendent Woods was the reconstruction of the "old library space" in the Capitol, made vacant by the removal of the library to the new building.

GREAT OFFICE BUILDINGS.

But Mr. Woods will be best known by his construction of the great senate and house office buildings which the northeast and southeast of the Capitol respectively.

No Muck-Raking on Marble.

The marble for the Capitol came from Lee, Mass. The house office building was built of New York marble, and Senator Redfield Proctor's Vermont quarries furnished the marble for the rotunda columns only, substituting white wood for mahogany for the door frames, etc.

Proper Support For the Dome.

Mr. Woods warmly favors the plan to extend the eastern central wall of the Capitol eighteen feet to give adequate architectural support to the dome.

The Right Overcoat Is All Important

YOU'RE going to get a lot of good—or harm—out of the overcoat you buy this winter.

The harm comes from making a poor choice: one that bags where it shouldn't—draws where it should be full—one that lessens the measure of your manliness—that becomes shabby, shoddy and apologetic after the first few weeks of wear.

There's much to consider when you buy an overcoat. It should be made from a pure wool fabric—properly shrunk—its texture firm—its color fast.

It should be made by overcoat-specialists—in a shop where nothing else is made. Because there's a certain knack and knowledge that goes into the making of fine overcoats that's distinguished from every other kind of tailoring.

You'll find in the overcoats we're showing from the result of this specialized skill and individual workmanship. Every coat is a fine, full, gracefully draped garment, cut on swagger lines, one that will present its wearer at his best and keep him looking right.

We want you to see these new styles. Some have distinctive, young-mannish touches; others are conservative models that are always safe—always good style.

The prices are right too—splendid values for the man who wants to combine real worth and lasting value with money saving.

construction has been heard since congress authorized the work. A new building for the court of appeals must be erected in the square, and the question came whether or not to tear down the old buildings and erect a modern group.

Supervisor Woods, who has charge of the construction, determined to save the picturesque old structure. The stucco walls of the old building were falling away, and Mr. Woods decided to erect a new building for the court of appeal and imitate its exterior in stucco upon the walls of the old ones.

Stucco construction is common with government buildings in Europe, hence he is wholly within the proprieties in renovating the exterior of the old court house, where Guitau was tried, and building the new one in stone.

The court house was designed by James Hoban, the architect of the White House, it was built with the proceeds of a lottery when Washington was a municipality, and afterward sold to the government. For both architectural and historical reasons the Capitol will be grateful to Superintendent Woods for preserving this old landmark.

ATE SNAKES IN THE DESERT.

Out of Water a Man Wanders Demented for Five Days.

Los Angeles, Nov. 10.—According to a letter received in this city from Lee Nev. C. A. Balha, former Los Angeles druggist, has been rescued from death on the Nevada desert after wandering five days demented and subsisting on the flesh of snakes and lizards and water obtained from the cactus plant. Balha left Leeland, Nev., for sand tanks on the trail to the Lee district. He was accompanied by Jack Laupfader. They ran out of water and Balha, being unable to go further, Laupfader pushed ahead and reached Lee. He returned with a searching party and Balha was found after several days' search.

SWISS HOME WORKERS.

An Exposition Showing the Conditions—Long Hours and Small Pay.

From a Nuremberg journey, Consul George Nicolas Iff has compiled a review of a house industry exposition which was held in Zurich, Switzerland, in which country the industry is largely carried on. He writes:

"By house industry is meant work done in the homes, usually in more or less remote mountain villages, and for which the raw materials are given out by factors, or selling agents, and so much per piece paid for the finished product. It is work in which all the members of the family, from the youngest to the oldest, participate, and their combined earnings are oftentimes pitifully small. It is not uncommon to find in the Erz Mountain top and trimmings districts families of five to seven persons—two adults and children from five to seventeen years of age—whose combined weekly earnings do not exceed $3.47 to $4.19. Children often get only three-fourths of a cent to one cent an hour and quite recently many children of five and six years of age were found in the Erz Mountain villages, on both the Saxon and Bohemian sides of the border, making linen rings at four cents a thousand, and it was a very poor child that could make half a thousand a day. The highest possible earnings of adult trimmings makers in these villages are 8 1/2 cents an hour, with an average of about half that amount. The most expert hand lace makers there rarely get more than 10 cents a thousand, and the toy makers at home are doing well when they earn from 1 1/2 to 2 cents an hour. Ninety hours' work a week for adults and sixty for children is not unusual.

"Yet even with such earnings the conditions of the German house workers are admittedly better than those of the Swiss, and, like similar expositions recently held at Berlin and Frankfurt, the purpose of the Zurich House Industry Exposition is not only to bring about better wage and living conditions among the house-workers, but also to attract attention to the need of legislation that will tend to improve such conditions. "In Switzerland in many districts house industry still holds the most important place. Notable examples are the straw hat industry of the Aargau, the wood-carrying industry of the Bernese highlands and the silk ribbon weaving industry of Basel. An astonishing amount of material has been brought together for this exposition, and its arrangement presents a vivid picture of the Swiss house industry. In displaying a series of exact reproductions of typical home workrooms showing working and living rooms, with the old machines and tools, often a single small room, poorly lighted and ill-ventilated, where whole families work, cook, eat and sleep. The silk weavers with their fashioned hand looms and the women of the Tessin and Aargau braiding straw for hats are shown side by side with the tobacco workers from Obermyental and the wood carvers of the Bernese highlands. "Even more interesting than these pictures are the statistics as to the workers and their earnings offered. In round figures, 130,000 persons are engaged in such occupations in Switzerland, and it is notable that three-fourths of this number are women and children under sixteen years of age. The earnings of these workers are given with great exactness and often present most distressing pictures. Cases are cited of old women earning less than one-half cent an hour braiding straw and four-fifths of a cent weaving tafetta. Such are more or less isolated cases, but there are a number of branches of house industry in which the average wages an hour are not much higher. For example, the following rates an hour are given: Embroiderers of church vestments, 1.4 cents; silk ribbon weaving, 1.08 cents; crocheted workers, 2.04 cents; linen weavers (male), 2.22 cents; glove makers, 2.42 cents; and shoe workers for factories, 2.96 cents. "The highest average hourly earnings in the Swiss house industries are: Wood carvers, 6.28 cents; fancy handbag weavers, 6.88 cents; watchmakers, 7.38 cents; and shoemakers (hand work), 9.64 cents. Even these maximum earnings fall far below the average factory wages; but much more serious is the total absence of all hygienic or sanitary precautions under which house industry is carried on. To inject into it some features of modernity is the main purpose of the exposition now in progress."

PUSHING WORK AT THE LUCY PROPERTY TO CLOSE OUT BUSINESS.

CLEVELAND-CLIFFS IRON COMPANY EXPECTS TO BEGIN REMOVING WATER FROM THE MINE WITHIN TEN DAYS.

The Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company is pushing the work at the Lucy property, where mining operations are to be resumed. An air compressor was placed on the ground Tuesday, and is now being installed. W. T. Cole, the Ishpeming boiler maker, has the contract to put the boilers in good condition. One of the boilers, installed a short time before the mine ceased operations, a few years ago, is still in good condition, and will need very little repairing, but the other will be given a general overhauling. Two steel stacks will be completed within a few days.

The officials of the company expect to begin removing water from the mine within a week or ten days. The greater part of the water will be raised by a hoisting apparatus, the pipes for which are already down seventy-five feet. It is not expected that it will take long to remove the water, as the underground workings are not very extensive. It is now expected that it will be possible to resume operations before the first of the year. All of the buildings are in fairly good condition and need but little attention.

W. T. Cole also has a contract to overhaul the boilers at the Davis mine, where the Breitung interests are to resume operations at an early date. Both the boilers are in bad condition and will need an extensive overhauling. The hoisting engine also needs considerable attention. The Davis engine house was some time ago broken into and part of the machinery was carried away. It is thought it was sold to junk dealers.

Considerable preparatory work will also be necessary at the Milwaukee mine. Work on the track leading to the properties is progressing satisfactorily, and it will not be long before the property will be ready for a full start. The Milwaukee property has been idle for many years. The new machinery, buildings, and other equipment is necessary. It is expected that the Breitung interest and Cleveland-Cliffs Iron Co. will need goodly forces at the three properties before the winter is far advanced. The Lucy mine will doubtless be the heaviest producer of the three, as it is the largest mine.

ELECTRIC TRANSMISSION LINES.

Wires Will Extend Over a Territory of Twenty-six Miles.

The men in charge of the outside work on the electric transmission lines being erected by the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company are letting themselves out to get up as much of the wire as possible before winter sets in. The wire, extending from the plant at the Maas mine to the company's new North Lake property, west of Ishpeming, will extend over a distance of eight miles. About seven miles of the wire has already been strung. The special wires are to be carried by the plant at the Maas mine to the Cleveland Lake mine at Ishpeming. They will pass close to Long and Miller lakes. The distance from the Cleveland Lake mine to the Swanzey range is eighteen miles. Some of the lower material has yet to arrive. It is doubtful if the Swanzey plant will be ready for operation by the first of the year. Much material has arrived at the Maas mine station during the past few weeks and several more carloads are on the way. The engine at the Maas will soon be ready for use, but it will be some weeks before the work will be completed in the transformer building for the plant.

TO SINK A SHAFT.

The Republic Iron & Steel company is preparing to sink a shaft northwest of the Cambria mine at a point about a mile between the Cambria and Lillie properties. W. T. Cole, the Ishpeming boiler maker, has been given a contract to overhaul a boiler that is to be used to generate power for the hoisting plant to be installed at the shaft. Mr. Cole expects to have the boiler back at the mine within a week or ten days. Meanwhile the company will erect a temporary building for the plant.

BISHOP WILLIAMS TALKS ABOUT TRIP

GAVE INTERESTING ACCOUNT LAST EVENING OF HIS RECENT VISIT TO SWEDEN.

WAS A DIPLOMATIC MISSION

As a Member of Commission from Church of England, He Met Royalty and Learned Churchmen of That Country.

Bishop G. Mott Williams gave an interesting account of his recent trip to Sweden at Morgan Memorial chapel last evening, to which a good sized audience listened attentively. The bishop went abroad as a member of a commission, appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, to confer with dignitaries of the Swedish church with a view of establishing closer relations between the Church of England and the Swedish church. Bishop Williams was the only American member of the commission and his selection as a member of that embassy was in itself an enviable distinction.

The bishop stated last evening that his trip had been a wholly enjoyable one, and that it had proven to be a diplomatic mission in a much greater degree than he had anticipated. While in Scandinavia, the commission was officially recognized by the Swedish government and the bishop had the opportunity to meet the kings of Sweden and Norway and was a guest at a dinner given by crown princess of Sweden, in addition to personal contact with many church and state officials of high rank. While there, he was particularly impressed at the extent to which the English language was spoken and the interest which the Swedish people manifest in American affairs, especially in the American phase of the socialistic movement.

The Swedish conference, said Bishop Williams, was the outcome of overtures made by the authorities of the Church of Sweden, with the approval of the king, expressed through the Bishop of Kalmar at the Swedish conference. For a closer relation of the Swedish and English churches. The conference accordingly requested the Archbishop of Canterbury to appoint a commission to make further inquiries on the subject. The archbishop appointed the Bishops of Winchester, Salisbury and Marquette, together with the Chancellor of Salisbury and the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge. The Archbishop of Upsala, Sweden, with whom they entered into correspondence, arranged to receive them on Sept. 21. The commissioners traveled to Sweden by way of Copenhagen.

Received by the King.

On Sept. 18, the Bishops of Winchester and Marquette and Dr. Mason had the honor of being received by the king of Sweden at his palace in Stockholm. He had returned that morning from elk hunting in the north and was about to start for some important military maneuvers. A worthy son of his father both in stature and abilities, he was most gracious to the commissioners, conversing with them in perfect English, and expressed a sympathetic interest in the business that had brought them to Sweden. The crown prince and princess were not less gracious, and invited the party to luncheon on the following Saturday.

The Swedish people took great interest in the occasion and gave them a kindly reception wherever they went. The papers contained accounts of the movements of the visitors, in some cases adorned with their portraits. The welcome of the ecclesiastical authorities was even more cordial. It would be impossible to exaggerate the warmth of Christian charity and brotherly kindness that was shown. When the commission arrived at Upsala, where the conference was held, the Archbishop of Upsala with his chapter and the Bishop of Kalmar, all in their official regalia, were at the station to meet them. Every provision had been made for the comfort and convenience of the visitors. They were entertained privately at dinner the first evening by the archbishop, and also the next evening at a more public banquet in his beautiful house. Bishop Williams, observing that the guests numbered thirty-nine, remarked that it was in compliment to the Thirty-nine Articles of the English church. The following evening they dined with one of the university professors, where, after dinner they had the pleasure of hearing a band of undergraduates singing as many Upsala students can sing.

Proceedings at Conference.

The conference proper lasted three days. It was held in the chapter house of the cathedral and the Archbishop of Upsala presided. The commissioners of the Archbishop of Canterbury were seated on his right and on his left were the Bishop of Kalmar and present and former members of the Cathedral chapter. The Swedish members of the conference numbered some of the most learned men of the kingdom. The sessions were largely taken up with the discussion of technical matters, the general purpose of which was to learn the exact differences that existed in the administration and creeds of the Anglican and Swedish churches. At one session the ecclesiastical position of Swedish settlers in America, of whom there are 40,000 in the Diocese of Marquette alone, was discussed. No resolutions were adopted or other formal action taken, but much of value was accomplished and steps were taken for another conference, as the ultimate result of which it is hoped there may be at least a partial amalgamation of the Swedish and Anglican churches.

During the session and afterward, there was some time for sightseeing, and Bishop Williams made the most of it. A number of the famous churches and libraries were visited as well as many other points of interest. Before leaving the peninsula, Bishop Williams called on the American minister to Norway and through his kindness obtained an audience with the king of that country, whom he found to be a pleasant, rather democratic and worthy ruler. The bishop repeatedly expressed his thorough enjoyment of his trip and ex-

TODAY IS OBSERVED AS GERMAN DAY

FREDERICK SCHILLER WAS BORN JUST 150 YEARS AGO—GERMANS HAVE AN IMPORTANT PLACE IN AMERICAN HISTORY.

On Oct. 6, 226 years ago, Pastorius and his band of German immigrants came to America and eighteen days later, they began laying out Germantown, the first German settlement in this country. One hundred and fifty years ago Frederick Schiller, whose name is known wherever German literature is read, was born. In honor of these great events in German-American history, today, Nov. 11, has been set apart as German day by the German societies throughout the United States. No special arrangements have been made for the observance of the day in Marquette, but in Milwaukee and other cities where a large proportion of the population came from "over the Rhine," the day will be generally celebrated.

JAILS BEING INSPECTED.

Secretary Murray Finds Better Places of Detention Are Needed.

Secretary M. T. Murray, of the state board of corrections and charities, is making the annual inspection of county jails and infirmaries as required by law, and is discovering in some counties conditions which indicate there is opportunity for great improvement. These places of detention are up to the standard required.

In six or seven counties out of the twenty-two he has already visited, Mr. Murray has found deplorable conditions. Particularly was this true of two counties wherein juvenile prisoners were herded in with hardened men under arrest for serious offenses. The law definitely prescribes that juveniles must be kept apart from older prisoners and the county authorities made earnest promises of reformation if they were given an opportunity without the facts being published. In another county the jail is a nondescript affair, with no accommodations by which the sexes may be segregated.

Secretary Murray is paying especial attention to the manner in which the laws relating to juvenile delinquencies are being enforced and is finding in some instances that county officers have paid little attention to the acts passed in 1907 and 1909. Some county infirmaries were found to be in bad condition without suitable accommodations for indigent patients, while some counties have been using their infirmaries as places of detention for juvenile offenders.

ANOTHER HANDICAP CONTEST.

Guid Hall Alleys to Be Scene of Individual Bowling Match.

There seems to be more general interest in bowling in Marquette this fall than ever before, and the series of five-man handicap matches that is being rolled nightly at the downtown alleys is drawing good crowds, many of whom are not bowlers themselves. Not to be left behind, the management of the Guid Hall alleys announces a handicap individual bowling contest, which will continue from Nov. 15 to Dec. 15. The dates above mentioned.

Each contestant will bowl fifteen games, three at a time. No game shall be counted unless announced beforehand to Mr. Bell, and unless played in competition with some other contestant. Games in this contest may be bowled at any time when the alleys are open except on Tuesday evenings. Prizes will be awarded as follows: First and second prizes for high average, and prize for high score in one game. No one shall be eligible for a prize unless he bowls the fifteen games within the dates above mentioned.

The committee of arrangements will consist of Charles Bell, Charles A. Carr and William Robertson, who will fix handicaps, decide all disputes, and have general charge of the contest.

Mrs. Gus Stock will be ready for fall dress making on the 10th of November at 326 East Michigan street. Bell phone 936 L. (11-11-14)

TODAY IS OBSERVED AS GERMAN DAY

FREDERICK SCHILLER WAS BORN JUST 150 YEARS AGO—GERMANS HAVE AN IMPORTANT PLACE IN AMERICAN HISTORY.

On Oct. 6, 226 years ago, Pastorius and his band of German immigrants came to America and eighteen days later, they began laying out Germantown, the first German settlement in this country. One hundred and fifty years ago Frederick Schiller, whose name is known wherever German literature is read, was born. In honor of these great events in German-American history, today, Nov. 11, has been set apart as German day by the German societies throughout the United States. No special arrangements have been made for the observance of the day in Marquette, but in Milwaukee and other cities where a large proportion of the population came from "over the Rhine," the day will be generally celebrated.

During the seventeenth century social conditions in Germany were frightful. A peculiar religious sect, closely akin to the Quakers in England, and the object of bitter persecution, William Penn visited Germany, and stirred up the religious people to such sympathy with his views that Pastorius, himself son of a judge and of high education, gathered a colony of Mennonites, weavers from Guedel on the Rhine, and they settled near Philadelphia, which they named for themselves, Germantown. As were the others, Pastorius' first residence was a mere dugout. William Penn wrote of Pastorius that he was "sober, upright, wise and pious—a man everywhere esteemed and of unspotted name."

From Germantown came the first protest against African slavery, in 1688. It was in the form of a quaintly worded petition, appealing to the golden rule in the following language: "Pray, what thing in the world can be done worse toward us than if men should rob or steal us away, and sell us for slaves to strange countries, separating husbands from their wives and children. Being now this is not done in the manner we will be done at; therefore we contradict and are against this traffic of men body."

More colonists came over from Germany and settlements were made in New York, western Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the Carolinas. In manufactures and type-setting the Germans excelled. When the war of the revolution broke out, the Germans displayed loyalty to their adopted country. Many Germans volunteered, and it was a German regiment that saved the day at Brandywine. Baron Steuben's heroic service at Valley Forge holds its place in history.

During the Civil war, too, the German-American performed notable deeds. Blanck's division protected the retreat from the battle of Bull Run. General Franz Sigel saved the state of Missouri to the union. And high among all the heroic German names in American history is that of Carl Schurz, who gave up his emulassy to Spain to become a general of volunteers.

But withal their loyalty to their chosen country has not driven out the custom of homage by the German-American population to the fatherland. It is to remind them never to allow the German language to become extinct, or to allow it to be expelled from their homes or schools, that the Germans in America have set Nov. 11 as German day.
