AMENDING TO DEATH. In the last session of congress, when the reciprocity agreement was first sent to the senate, Senator Cummins, giving it a qualified approval, indicated that he was disposed to support it provided certain amendments were attached to it.

Clarence Darrow, of Chicago, is in Los Angeles, where he is to be engaged in the defense of the McNamara's, alleged dynamiters. Darrow has been identified with the defense in nearly all the celebrated cases in which organized labor has of late years been accused of high crimes and misdemeanors...

John W. Gates, one of the men who officiated at the birth of the United States Steel corporation, did not paint a very impressive picture of Andrew Carnegie, dean of library builders, when he testified before the house committee Saturday.

The campaign against reciprocity is unscrupulous and persistent, and is creating a situation full of menace. If it were submitted to the people at large there would be an overwhelming majority for the agreement.

Where the mining companies take so enlightened a view of the importance of safeguarding the interests of their men as they do in this region, there should be no trouble about securing the establishment of a rescue station containing apparatus to be used in the case of mine fires, yet we have not noted that any steps have been taken to apply the lesson of the Hartford mine disaster.

IT STARTLED THE WORLD When the astounding claims were first made for Bucklen's Arnica Salve, but certain wonderful cures have proved them true, and everywhere it is now known as the best salve on earth for Burns, Boils, Scalds, Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Swellings, Eczema, Chapped hands, Fever Sores and Piles.

Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

The contract was let by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron Company.

Mrs. Abbie Darling arrived here from Chicago Saturday and went direct to Grand Island, where she expects to remain for a prolonged stay. Mrs. Darling was prostrated by the heat in Chicago last Friday and as soon as she had recovered sufficiently to warrant travel, hurried to Grand Island to see her mother and seek relief from the heat.

Through the kindness of the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, which has granted permission to all who have made application, many of the company's vacant lots throughout the city are being converted into garden spots and to those who are working them to provide a good return for the effort and time expended. No charge is made by the company for the use of the lots.

—First Marquette Company.

R. R. French, East Michigan street, has the distinction of being the only veteran living in Michigan who enlisted from here. Mr. French went out with Company I, First Michigan infantry, which was recruited entirely from Marquette. This company went to the front July 27, 1861, and as the First Michigan was attached to the Army of the Potomac the members of Company I served three years in the thickest of the fight.

The origin of this company is quite interesting. About the time that Fort Sumter was fired on in the spring of 1861, sixty Marquette boys and young men organized a military company and held regular drills for some time. Application was made by the company to enlist under Lincoln's first call for 100 day men, but the Marquette boys were not admitted to the army, as the number of volunteers called for had been recruited before the Marquette application came into the hands of the Washington authorities.

After the defeat at Bull Run, however, the government issued its call for three year men. By that time the Marquette company had disbanded, but upon a recruiting officer coming here from Detroit, it was quickly reorganized and two days later a full company was on its way to the front.

RETURNS FROM CONVENTION.

T. T. Hurley Attended B. of R. T. Meeting at Harrisburg, Pa.

T. T. Hurley has returned from Harrisburg, Pa., where he has spent two or three weeks attending the national convention of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. Mr. Hurley states that he had a delightful trip and that he found much enjoyment in the meetings of the convention.

Several changes in the insurance features of the order were made at the convention. Under the new rules, any member who dies or is totally disabled will receive $1,500, instead of $1,250, as heretofore, and this without any increase in cost of insurance.

ORCHESTRA MADE FINE IMPRESSION

Impressive Programs Given at Opera House Yesterday Afternoon and Evening.

Yesterday at the Marquette opera house the St. Paul Symphony orchestra, in afternoon and evening programs, successfully completed one of the most ambitious undertakings in the musical life of Marquette. Walter Henry Rothwell conducts the St. Paul Symphony, and the organization includes fifty pieces. Associated with it on the present tour are five vocal artists: Mme. Rothwell-Wolf, prima donna soprano; Mme. Harriett Orendorff, soprano; Miss Annie Allison Jones, contralto; George Harris, Jr., tenor and Charles Champlin, basso. The instrumental soloists are Christian Timmer, violin; Rosario Bourdon, cello, and Clarence Warmelin, clarinet.

It is not too much to say that no other musical offering here ever gave real and substantial pleasure equal to that derived from the two admirable programs presented by this exceptional organization and the soloists associated with it. The evening's audience was large and highly enthusiastic. The one at the matinee was appreciative and enthusiastic without being large. Neighboring cities and towns were well represented. The programs made a profound impression and a vote of thanks for the gifted conductor and his organization unreserved approval.

The choice of numbers for both programs was a commendable concession to the fast returning demand for the proportion of both melody and harmony in musical compositions, the only kind of music that can permanently endure. Some composers, notably Strauss and Debussy of the modern school, have threatened the decadence of the opera and have seemed for a time to imperil the true essence of the musical spirit by the combination of sounds, and by making their orchestras shriek and groan in a veritably diabolical realism.

—Evening Program.

The evening program of the St. Paul Symphony orchestra was devoted to selections from the most popular grand operas, opening with Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," with its five distinct motifs. Under the splendid direction of Mr. Rothwell and the admirable performance of the musicians the motif of the Mastersingers themselves, that of awakening love, the banner motif and the motif of love confessed and of subsequent impassioned ardor seemed as easily traced by the amateur as by the professional musician.

As in all programs arranged with taste, the suite from "Carmen" followed the foregoing selection. This suite includes "The Habanera," "The Leguilla" and "The Toreador Song," and, in marked contrast to any Wagnerian number, incarnates the dash, recklessness and daring of the unconventional, wayward and delirious Carmen.

"Colossus Aida," from "Aida," came after the suite from Carmen. The composer makes Rhadames, a young captain of the king's guards, sing this famous song to the daughter of the Ethiopian king, with whom he is in love. The great aria is one of Caruso's favorites, and Zerola has won notable triumphs in it, both in America and in Europe, last year winning immense success by singing it at Covent Garden. Mr. Harris did splendidly by it last night.

The "Walpurgis Night" Scene from "Faust" came next. In this captivating scene in the Hartz mountains, the enchanted hall, with its famous courtesans, and the prison vision in which Faust sees Marguerite, were made captivatingly realistic.

"The Hall of Song I Give the Greeting" from "Tannhauser," was then sung by Mme. Rothwell-Wolf. The aria opens the second act of "Tannhauser," set for the tournament of song, where Tannhauser competes in song with other knights for the hand of Elizabeth.

The ever popular quartet from "Rigoletto" added another gem to the list. It was sung by Mme. Harriett Orendorff, Miss Jones and Messrs. Champlin and Harris.

The "Prize Song" from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," arranged for violin was interpreted by Mr. Timmer and the orchestra. This song was rendered here by Evan Williams at the time of his recent recital at the opera house.

The prelude and barcarolle from Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman" are from one of the lighter-grand operas, and are both familiar and popular.

Mme. Rothwell-Wolf again appeared in "One Fine Day," from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly." In this song butterfly tells Sharpless of her certainty that Pinkerton will return to her, and it has done more than any other single thing to make the name of Geraldine Farrar famous.

"Entrance of the Gods into Valhalla," from "Rheingold," was the last regular number of the evening. This music comes in the prologue of Wagner's greatest work, "The Ring of the Nibelung," often called the prologue of the Tetralogy. It has two most prominent motifs: they being, first, Valhalla, revealing the splendor of the Palace of the Gods, and, second, the music of "Valhalla," the former being in D flat major. It was given in strains of sweetest calm, comporting with the original conception of the great author.

Afternoon Concert. The "William Tell" overture, opening the program in the afternoon, was the last masterpiece written by Rossini and "The Beautiful Blue Danube" waltzes at the close are the most popular work that has come from the pen of Strauss.

The "Peer Gynt" suite includes four numbers of the original concert performance combined by Grieg for orchestral performances. The No. 1 is descriptive of morning (Sunday morning) with faint and distant sounds intermingling in the air with the tinkling of cow bells and the repeating mountain echoes. The music attending the death of Asa, mother of Peer Gynt, is symbolic of the slow decay of nature during the season of autumn in the north country.

Other afternoon numbers were Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah" aria, sung by Schumann-Heink here on the occasion of her last recital, and presented this time by Miss Jones; also Tschai-kowski's "Valse des Fleurs," from the Nutteracker suite; two songs sung by Mr. Champlin; Georges' "Hymn to the Sun," sung by Mme. Orendorff; and the Berceuse and "Under the Linden" from Scenes Alsaciennes, by Jaerentfelt and Massenet, the latter number furnishing opportunities for Mr. Bourbon's cello and Mr. Warmelin's clarinet. The applause following this number was so incessant that Mr. Rothwell favored the audience with the only orchestra encore number of the afternoon, and he led his players through a graceful and dainty performance of Pieni's Serenade.

A Fine Organization. The orchestra has been assembled with special respect for balance in strings, brass, reeds and wood, and in excellence of its tonal quality it would be difficult to surpass. That such a finished ensemble should have grown out of five brief years is little short of marvelous, and its precision of attack, accuracy of progression, beauty in color and tint of tone, its expressive rhythms, startling climaxes, surprising timbre and artistic finish are often looked for in vain among the older organizations of the east, while the sincerity and enthusiasm of its work were refreshingly characteristic of the throbbing spirit of the west.

Mr. Rothwell is a conductor of distinguished gifts. His readings bespeak a strong individuality, properly modified by tactful application to the scene, and a profound study of the lives as well as the ideals and standards of the authors whose works he interprets. His orchestra is one great musical instrument, each member being a string or key responding intently and at once to the control of his personal will. The seat of his baton was technically correct, distinct and inspiring. As well in its tensely impassioned moments as in its oratorical passages he remains in full possession of himself, and his finely controlled emotions find response on the part of his organization, in a buoyancy and enthusiasm that made the heart increase its pulsations and the blood to course anew everywhere throughout the vast assemblage.

The work of the soloists, both vocal and instrumental, added immensely to the finished whole, each displaying a high degree of art, and meriting more detailed mention than can be given where so much is expected to be covered within the all too narrow limitations of a single article.
