You'll find every desirable feature in the Maxwell "35" and several you? will not find embodied in any other "car and anywhere near its price

Cunningham Auto Co., Woodward Ave. Detroit, Michigan

Motor of ample power to take car with full The easy riding qualities of this car load anywhere, any time.

The motor in the Maxwell "35" is of the "bloc" type with 4-inch bore and 43-inch stroke, developing full 35 horsepower. Adjustable valves completely enclosed. Three-bearing, chrome nickel steel crankshaft. Two inch connecting rod bearings. All bear] ings of nickel, babbitt cast. Splitdorf dual ignition, independent of the starting and lighting system. Splash oiling system insures proper lubrication of every moving part of the motor; oil reservoir operated by vacuum system maintains constant oil level in crank case. Holley 'single adjustment carburetor, with hot and cold air supply controlled from dash to suit changes in temperature.

Transmission of well known make and acknowledged to be the most reliable

The transmission is mounted on the rear axle and is the dependable Covert-selective 'type, three speeds forward and one reverse. All gears of heat-treated nickel steel. Noiseless roller bearings. Clutch is of adjustable cone type; leather faced with spring plungers for easy engagement. No jerky starting as a ride in the "35" will prove.

Much depends upon the steering gear and control parts of a car

You can depend absolutely upon the reliability of the Maxwell "35" steering and control mechanism. The steering gear is the famous "Barnes" make (there's nothing better manufactured) located on the left side and mounted rigidly to side member of frame and firmly braced at the dash. Spark and throttle control rods enclosed in steering post and operated on top of steering wheel. Accelerator operated by right foot. Gear shift lever is in center of car and is operated by right hand. Emergency brake lever alongside operates 13¹/₂ inch expanding brake. Clutch and service brake pedals are both adjustable. The foot (service) brake controls 14-inch contracting brake acting on brake drums bolted to rear wheels.

You'll experience no fatigue, no matter how far you travel in a Maxwell "35." Long 364-inch semielliptic front springs together with the 42-inch threequarter elliptic rear springs supplemented by soft, deep upholstering provide comfortable riding qualities that are hard to equal. 33x4-in tires also add their, share to the comfort-giving features of this car.

A starting and lighting system that is in keeping with all the other good points of this model

The electric starting and lighting equipment of the Maxwell "35" is known as the Deaco independent system. The generator and starter, motor are separate units. We have no hesitancy in stating that there is not a better starter on any car than that used on the model "35."

Other worthy features of this splendid motor car

Weston-Mott rear axle; clear-vision windshield; electric head, side and tail lights; electric horn; speedometer; and spare tire carrier at rear.

The body of the " Maxwell "35" like all other Maxwell bodies was designed by Bruce Ott, who is recognized as the foremost automobile body designer in the industry. There is beauty in its every line and curve; it is finely upholstered and of ample proportions. A demonstration in this sterling quality Maxwell will substantiate our every claim for it and prove that no car in the field around its price is better made.
