

U. S. Won Great Victory In Attack On Jap Isles; Five Enemy War Vessels Sunk

3 Nazi Warships Hit, British Say, In Dover Battle

LONDON, Feb. 13 (Friday)—(By A. P.)—The long-refuged German battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst and the cruiser Prinz Eugen slipped away from their French coast anchorages Thursday with a strong air and surface escort and engaged the royal air force and the British navy in the greatest land-sea-air battle off the Dover coast since the fall of France.

After the furious battle, to which even the shore guns on the Dover cliff added their thunder, the German ships were last reported escaping to new bases in the Helgoland light.

The cost was great to both sides, in this tremendous gamble to free the 26,000-ton battleships and the Prinz Eugen, a survivor of the Bismark-Hood sinkings, for new Nazi implements in the Battle of the Atlantic.

British Rout Invaders In Lower Burma

By Daniel DeLuce

RANGOON, Burma, Feb. 12.—P—The Japanese attack on Salween river line wavered and broke in the Paan area, today before a stout British imperial defense and a bayonet charge in another vital sector sent the invaders scrambling for cover, abandoning their weapons.

It was the best news in many days from the Lower Burma battle-front which lies 80 air miles across the Gulf of Martaban from this sea-head of the Burma road. It was, moreover, proof of what the British can do with air support.

Crack Infantrymen in Action
The situation in the lower Salween was regarded in well-informed circles as definitely bettered, if still serious.

Indian infantrymen, who had been encircled, cut their way out of dangerous pockets and then savagely counter-attacked. Simultaneously, square-shouldered, hard-hitting "Koylis"—the King's own Yorkshire light infantrymen—who had been waiting impatiently for 11 days at the Martaban guidside for a chance at action, were thrown against the Japanese at a crucial moment.

"If encircled—charge!" has become the common tactic of the British troops.

The British command felt able to say that the violent enemy attack in the important Paan area of the river front, 30 miles above Martaban, was "successfully defeated after heavy fighting, and the Japanese temporarily have abandoned operations."

Japs Had Bridged Salween
The enemy had fought steadily and skillfully to throw a bridgehead across the Salween in the jungles of Paan, but the British positions have held fast with constant aid from the air.

Down at Martaban, at the mouth of the river, where the Japanese crossed and occupied the town, a unit of the King's own Yorkshire light infantry, Tommies from the

Six Senators Register For Draft Monday

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—P—Six Senators and approximately 70 Representatives will have to register next Monday when the selective service takes an inventory of men not over 44 or under 20 years of age and not already registered.

To accommodate the Congressional eligibles, special registration booths manned by local American Legion post commanders will be set up in the Capitol rotunda.

Sub Chaser Launched
JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Feb. 12.—P—The first of a number of submarine chasers being built here slid down the ways into the Ohio river today.

The chaser was christened by Mrs. F. G. Healy, wife of Lieut. Healy, supervisor for the shipbuilding company.

Invaders Two Miles From Singapore City

BOMBAY, Feb. 12.—P—The British tonight reported an intensification of Japanese pressure on the northern part of Singapore island and officially announced that the invaders were within two miles of the city of Singapore itself.

(This dispatch, delayed in transmission from Bombay, although confirming earlier indications of the British position on Singapore island brought the first official announcement of this position).

Tonight's regular Singapore communique, relayed here by radio, stated that "heavy fighting continues in the western and northern sectors" of the island, and indicated that the British still held the naval base in the north.

The British line, said the communique, runs from this base to Tanglin in the south. Tanglin is a point just two miles northwest of Singapore city.

Delay Fall of City
LONDON, Feb. 12.—P—The British imperial line on Singapore, still beating off the enveloping disaster, four times counter-attacked the Japanese invaders today, three of the charges breaking, but one of them accomplishing its apparent objective of covering the evacuation of women and children and the removal of portable military supplies.

Through the day and into the evening the clipped voice of the island's radio assured the world

JAPS FLABBERGASTED
TOKYO, (from Japanese broadcasts) Feb. 13.—(Friday)—P—Japanese military observers today expressed themselves as "flabbergasted at the human sense of duty of British army leaders" for not surrendering Singapore and thus sparing both their troops and civilians, Domei said in a broadcast.

that the imperial banners had not yet been struck, hopeless though the position still appeared.

At 3:30 p. m. British time (10:30 a. m. Eastern war time, Thursday) the Singapore station was calling out:

"The Japanese are endeavoring to obscure the real position on the island of Singapore behind extravagant claims."

"We are not only going to fight. We are going to win. We shall emerge from this struggle."

McDaniel Still in Port
And while the gallant optimism of this statement was scarcely supported by suggestions that all that could be taken from the island was being rushed out, the radio returned to the air at 10 p. m. Singapore time (11 a. m. Eastern war time).

Officials of the Navy and the state of Vermont, for which the Montpelier was named, were present, but there were no formal speeches. In keeping with the seriousness of the times, action, not words, was the keynote.

All three vessels—completed four to five months ahead of schedule—were launched within 10 minutes of each other. Five minutes later keels were laid for two new escort vessels.

ESDEL FORD IMPROVES
DETROIT, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor company, who underwent an operation January 17 for a stomach ulcer, is convalescing satisfactorily at his home in suburban St. Clair Shores, Henry Ford hospital officials said today.

Last Civilian Car Comes Off The Line

When Ford No. 30,337,509 (above) rolled off the automobile assembly line in Detroit, passenger car production ceased, as the giant factories of the industry prepared for huge-scale output of war implements. Around the last civilian new car for some time to come, workers hold a placard reading: "Watch out, Japs—here come the little japs next."

Higher Prices on Canned Goods Not Justified

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—P—Price Administrator Leon Henderson declared tonight that increased prices on canned goods were not justified by Government restrictions on use of tin cans.

Observing that full effects of the limitations probably would not be felt until after the crops are in next fall, Henderson asserted:

"Even then essential foods will not be affected. In some instances, the supplies will be even larger."

Soviet Army Begins New Drive, Belief

MOSCOW, Feb. 12.—P—Foreign military observers expressed the belief tonight that the Red army had launched behind the cloak of recent secretiveness new offensives intended to set the Nazis back hard on their heels before milder weather arrives.

They pointed out that spring now is on the way at the south end of the far stretched battle line and that even in the north the worst weather probably has passed.

Few Towns Listed by Name
Dispatches, which continue to mention few of the battle-won towns by name, report that the Germans still are being forced back, but indicate they are fighting along the line they would like to hold at any cost until good weather and their own anticipated spring offensive.

A midnight communique made the usual announcement—"during February 12 our troops advanced against heavy enemy resistance and occupied several populated places"—and added:

"German troops are suffering heavy losses in materials and particularly in manpower."

There have been indications repeatedly that the Red army regards this as the vital period of their own ground-gaining drive and is determined to swarm on over the German stand with the momentum already gained.

First Thrust Was Surprise
Observers here recalled that the first phase of the Soviet westward drive which began at Rostov-on-the-Don burst out of the same official hush which has prevailed for the past few days. Thus, too, came the surprise thrust between Moscow and Leningrad which dislodged the Germans from their control of vital rail lines.

There has been considerable emphasis on the Leningrad front where cavalry were said to be widening a gap in the German lines.

Give M'Arthur Supreme Command, Willkie Says
BOSTON, Feb. 12.—P—Wendell Willkie asserted tonight that there was "lack of mutual confidence and central direction" among our various fighting forces and demanded that General Douglas MacArthur be brought home from the Philippines and placed in supreme command under the President.

"Then," Willkie told the Middlesex Republican club, "the people of the United States will have reason to hope that skill, not bungling and confusion directs their efforts."

The Republican leader's assertion came in a Lincoln dinner address in which he assailed what he termed "nibbling" by the administration at the authority of Secretary of State Hull and he criticized the Administration's labor policy, declaring "we need a Levin, not a Perkins."

As for the part the Republican party should play, Willkie said "let us do more proposing than opposing. Let us exercise our freedom by developing our own policies."

Dutch Fight Bitterly To Halt Invasion

BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Dutch troops fought bitterly today to prevent extension of Japanese lodgments which already were menacing this key island of Java, but the progress of their struggle was obscured by unbroken silence from the hard-contested fronts.

"No further report," said the Dutch command in its afternoon communique, "has been received from the various parts of the archipelago where the fight against the invader is still being continued."

Word from authoritative but less official sources was similarly inconclusive as to the turn the fighting was taking, particularly on Celebes and Borneo islands.

Peril To Indies Grows
On Celebes, the enemy was seeking to consolidate footholds centered about Macassar, the principal port on the west side of the island, and at Balangnipa, just across the southern arm of the island. From both headquarters held above and below the Macassar and just to the east on the Gulf of Bone enemy troops were developing a maneuver to envelop the entire southern tip of the peninsula.

On Borneo, the invaders' spearheads were pointed toward Banjarmasin at the foot of the island, which lies only 300 miles above Soerabaya, the main Dutch-Allied naval base on Java.

(The Japanese claimed to have occupied Banjarmasin and to have completed the occupation of Macassar.)

While the growing peril to all the Dutch East Indies raised by the imminent fall of Singapore was being frankly recognized here, the expectation arose that Vice-Admiral C. E. L. Helfrich, the new high commander of the Allied naval

Ship Losses May Cause Rationing of Gasoline
WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—P—Rationing of gasoline in the east appeared tonight to be an early probability as a responsible source said Atlantic seaboard oil companies had reported that fast dwindling stocks, due to war loss and diversion of tanker ships, justified restrictions on non-essential consumption.

Oil circles heard that an industry committee reported to Secretary of Interior Ickes, that consumption should be cut 15 per cent between Feb. 15 and April 1, possibly by use of coupon books.

Senate Group Approves Appropriation for OCD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—P—A Senate appropriations sub-committee today approved a $100,000,000 appropriation for the Office of Civilian Defense, but not until it had cautioned Dean James M. Landis, new OCD director, to "be practical" in administering the organization.

Committeemen made it clear that this allotment applied to physical fitness and public entertainment programs started by the OCD before Landis became director.

U.S. Navy Fears Japs, Hephburn Says

TORONTO, Feb. 12.—P—Mitchell Hephburn, Ontario's provincial premier, sounded the possibility tonight of a Japanese invasion of Canada in three months and charged that the American Navy "is afraid to make contact" with the Japanese fleet.

Hephburn's ire was fanned by criticism of his previous statements in which he declared "the American Navy is in hiding." Yesterday Canadian Navy Minister Angus L. Macdonald said Hephburn's statement, coming from one who had long been opposed to the Canadian national government, in no way reflected the official view in Ottawa.

About the prospects of Japanese invasion, Hephburn said "they will come down the prairie side and not the Pacific. Although he failed to elaborate this statement, he apparently had the idea that Japanese forces, after driving through Alaska and across the formidable Canadian Rockies, might attempt to descend into the tableland country of central Canada from the north.

The object of such tactics by the Japanese, Hephburn explained, would be to establish themselves in Canada, close to the United States, and thus seek to block retaliation directly upon Japan itself. The Americans are the only people the Japanese really fear, Hephburn added.

The provincial premier stressed aside a statement by Col Frank Knox, U. S. Secretary of the Navy, "the tumults of war have already gone far away."

Seizure of Island Severe Blow
The occupation of Masbate was viewed by military men as of secondary importance except as an indication that the Japanese now consider themselves sufficiently strong to go ahead with the occupation of islands which had been bypassed while the invasion spearheads were thrust against MacArthur's forces, Singapore, Burma and the Netherlands Indies. Bohol and other islands are larger and more productive than Masbate.

Occupation of the island and city of Cebu, now threatened, would be a more severe blow, because the city has been the center of a communications network linked by radio to the United States.

Eleven Auxiliary Ships, 41 Planes Also Destroyed

By John M. Hightower

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(By A. P.)—The Navy department announced tonight that important Japanese naval and air bases flanking U. S. supply routes into New Zealand and Australia were wiped out in the recent bold attacks by units of the Pacific fleet on the Gilbert and Marshall islands.

The mighty offensive actions—first since the Japanese smashed at Pearl Harbor December 7—also yielded a rich harvest of destruction in ships and planes. Sixteen ships, including a converted aircraft carrier, a light cruiser, a destroyer and two submarines, were blasted into useless wreckage. Forty-one enemy planes either were sent flaming from the skies or battered to bits on the ground.

Japs Seizing Other Islands In Philippines

By Edward E. Bomar

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—P—A Japanese drive southward to occupy the remaining islands of the Philippines was disclosed today as more enemy troops massed for a renewed attempt to smash the defenses of the Bataan peninsula.

Nipponese troops who presumably moved southward from Luzon occupied the island of Masbate, the War department announced. Thus they extended their control to the central part of the archipelago which had escaped invasion.

In Masbate, seventh largest island in the Philippines, the invaders are within 200 miles of closing the gap between the island of Luzon and Mindanao, the southernmost extremity. Within a lesser radius are Cebu and Iloilo, the second and third cities of the Philippines.

Site of Large Gold Mine
Masbate, the captured island, has one of the best airports in the Philippines and is the site of a large gold mine.

A comparative lull in the Bataan fighting in the last 24 hours was said to indicate that the enemy was awaiting additional new supplies and reinforcements before resuming the offensive against General Douglas MacArthur's little defending army.

In Manila and other occupied areas of the islands, the Japanese had clamped tight control over all printed matter. A late day communique from the War department told of a Japanese proclamation which imposed the latest of many restrictions on the Filipinos.

No newspaper, book or pamphlet may be published without Japanese permission, and the contents must be censored, the proclamation said, threatening severe punishment of violators.

Meanwhile reports reaching MacArthur's headquarters suggest that occupied areas of Luzon faced a food scarcity because farmers had fled their homes to escape harsh treatment from Jap soldiers.

Enemy alarm over the situation was evidenced by a proclamation issued by Lieutenant General Masaharu Homma, the Japanese top commander, appealing to the Filipinos as "dear brethren" to harvest neglected crops.

The farmers have crowded into Manila or hidden in the mountains, the communique said.

"While you are hiding in the mountains to escape the war the crops will rot up and the seedlings of sugar cane for the next year will be lost," the proclamation said, "If you leave them you must die from starvation on the roads."

The invaders' commander urged the people not to be "misled by the cheap propaganda of the United States" and reassured them that "the tumults of war have already gone far away."

The twin-motored light bomber landed in a swamp pasture near the town of Tolt. Police Chief William Munson said the plane was flying low and the pilot seemed to be trying to keep it aloft.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(By A. P.)—The Navy department announced tonight that important Japanese naval and air bases flanking U. S. supply routes into New Zealand and Australia were wiped out in the recent bold attacks by units of the Pacific fleet on the Gilbert and Marshall islands.

The mighty offensive actions—first since the Japanese smashed at Pearl Harbor December 7—also yielded a rich harvest of destruction in ships and planes. Sixteen ships, including a converted aircraft carrier, a light cruiser, a destroyer and two submarines, were blasted into useless wreckage. Forty-one enemy planes either were sent flaming from the skies or battered to bits on the ground.

The raid on the mid-Pacific isles, a surprise attack brilliantly executed, was carried out January 31 under command of Vice-Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr., of Washington, D. C. The bases attacked were in the Marshall and Gilbert islands lying more than 2,000 miles southwest of Pearl Harbor. Five—Rio, Kwajalein, Wotje, Tarao and Jalut—are in the Marshall group, and one—Makin—is in the Gilbert group.

It is from the bases of these islands that the Japanese have sent their marauding submarines to raid shipping on the Pacific coast. It was from these bases, according to naval authorities here, that they intended to strike devastatingly at the U. S. convoys carrying reinforcements and supplies to Australia and New Zealand for the hard-pressed forces of the United Nations in the western Pacific.

The Navy department had announced in a communique February 1 that the raid had occurred, but little information as to results was given. Thus tonight's announcement was the first disclosure of how effective the action had been and the first clear indication of its extraordinary importance.

Shore Installations Destroyed
Wotje, lying 2,000 air miles southwest of Pearl Harbor and 635 miles due south of Wake island, was the primary fortified Japanese base in the area. At that place, the Navy said, the entire shore installation "was completely destroyed." Extensive installations likewise were destroyed at Roi and Tarao.

At Jalut, the raiders arrived in a rainstorm and succeeded only in blasting one auxiliary vessel, while at Makin two planes were destroyed, a third was wrecked at sea and one auxiliary vessel was badly damaged.

It was Kwajalein that greatest havoc was wrought among enemy ships. Ten surface ships and five submarines were surprised there.

"Our attacking forces," the Navy said, "destroyed one converted 17,000 ton aircraft carrier of the Yavuta (former ocean liner) class, one light cruiser, one destroyer, three large fleet tankers, one cargo vessel, two submarines and two large seaplanes." Other vessels were damaged.

While the communique made no mention of enemy resistance or of

Army Bomber Crash Near Seattle Kills Four
MCHORD FIELD, Wash., Feb. 12.—P—An Army bomber crash after the pilot evidently kept the plane aloft to avoid plunging into a small community 20 miles east of Seattle carried four men to death last night.

The twin-motored light bomber landed in a swamp pasture near the town of Tolt. Police Chief William Munson said the plane was flying low and the pilot seemed to be trying to keep it aloft.

The dead: Second Lieut. Harry L. Klein, 24, Chicago, pilot; Corp. W. W. Bentley, 23, Post Falls, Ida.; Pvt. Walter M. Dings, 24, Seattle; First Lieut. Harry C. Hosfelt, Detroit, an observer.

6,000 Yards Removed On Rock Project

With approximately 6,000 cubic yards of earth and rock already removed, the department of public works estimates that about three and one-half to four months will be required to cut through the point of rock on a relocation of US-41, three and one-half miles south of the city.

When work was started several weeks ago, less rock was found than was indicated in early surveys by the state highway department. The greatest mass of rock is that which juts out toward Lake Superior, forming a narrow, two-way curve, long considered one of the worst hazards on this section of US-41 and the scene of numerous accidents.

About One-Third Rock

Cutting into the hill behind the rock face, power shovel operators have found the going comparatively easy after breaking through a hard-pan top. Of the 6,000 cubic yards removed, about 2,000 have been rock. It is estimated that from 1,800 to 2,000 yards of rock remain to be excavated before the job is finished.

It is one of a few WPA emergency defense projects in this area, the work being approved because it provided for removal of a danger spot on a potential military highway. It is sponsored by the city of Marquette, which is furnishing equipment and materials.

Elimination of this hazard, it is believed, will be the first step in relocation of US-41 from this point to Harvey, a stretch which includes dangerous curves.

R. J. Dorow Officer Of State AFL

PORT HURON, Mich., Feb. 12—R. J. Dorow, Marquette, was elected to the office of vice-president of the Michigan Federation of Labor (AFL) in this city, delegates today may only two changes on the executive board, and chose Muskegon for the 1943 convention.

Arthur C. Stringari, organizer of the Detroit city employees, won the ninth vice-presidency, defeating Frank Riley and Jacob Robinson, presidents of other Detroit locals.

R. J. Dorow, Marquette, was unopposed for second vice-president.

For the only other offices for which there were contests, John Murray, Saginaw, incumbent, and John Warner, Kalamazoo, incumbent, were elected fifth and tenth vice-presidents, respectively.

Stingari, Murray and Warner won by large majorities.

George W. Dean, Detroit, president, and John Reid, Lansing, secretary-treasurer, were unanimously re-elected.

Scouts Will 'Govern' Marquette Tomorrow

All Boy Scouts in Marquette who will participate in "governing" the city tomorrow morning are reminded to be in their respective "offices" at 9 a. m., O. Lindgren, Scout executive, said yesterday.

Each Scout was elected or appointed last Saturday and has been instructed on his duties for the day.

Your Federal Income Tax

BAD DEBTS—YEAR IN WHICH DEDUCTIBLE

Worthless debts arising from unpaid wages, salaries, rents, and similar items of taxable income are not allowable deductions unless the income such items represent has been included in income for 1941 or a prior taxable year.

To be allowed as a deduction from gross income, a bad debt must have been determined by the taxpayer to be worthless within the taxable year for which it is claimed and, where books are kept, it also must have been charged off within the same year. The necessity for this provision is obvious. If a debt could be deducted without the requirement that it be charged off the taxpayer's books, the certainty of its worthlessness would be open to question. Neither the taxpayer nor the Government could be certain that a debt would not be claimed more than once.

If a debt were allowed as a deduction without regard to the year when it became worthless, such charges could be accumulated to be deducted in a year when there was a large income.

The burden is upon the taxpayer to show that a debt claimed as a deduction was without value during the taxable year. A statement should be attached to the return showing the propriety of any deduction for bad debts. If in the exercise of sound business judgment a taxpayer concludes, after making every reasonable effort to determine whether there is likelihood of recovery, that the debt is of no value, deduction for such debt is allowable. Court action as proof that the debt is worthless is not essential.

It is optional with the taxpayer, in a year prior to that in which a debt becomes wholly worthless, to take a deduction for partial loss if partial worthlessness occurs.

The provisions of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to bad-debt and partial bad-debt deductions are not applicable to a taxpayer, other than a bank as defined by the Act, where the debt is evidenced by bonds, debentures, notes, or certificates, or other evidences of indebtedness, issued by any corporation (including those issued by a Government or political subdivision thereof) with interest coupons or in registered form.

Building Fund For Salvation Army Sought

In an effort to replace the Salvation Army quarters on North Third street, which are considered unsanitary and unsafe, a Salvation Army building committee, composed of approximately 60 residents, has been organized to obtain funds for immediate construction of new quarters.

The condition of the present structure, officials assert, is so deplorable that it was decided a move to obtain new quarters could not be postponed. Initial plans indicate that a modern, fireproof brick building, limited in size to necessary requirements and facilities, can be constructed for approximately $18,000.

Plan General Drive

With this amount as a goal, a general drive will be conducted in the near future by the building committee, of which Young Kaufman is general chairman and Edward S. Bice, treasurer.

The initial gift canvass has been underway for some time, and "some substantial contributions already have been received," Kaufman said yesterday.

W. E. Miller will head the men's division, which will canvass the business district, and R. T. Hanna will have charge of the industrial division.

"This appeal," Salvation Army officials said yesterday, "has nothing to do with the Community Chest's annual campaign, which provides for current expenses only. This is a very necessary capital appeal and includes nothing for current expenses."

Would Mean Saving

"It is our hope that a building can be obtained through this campaign which will provide suitable headquarters for the Army for at least 50 years. A new building would mean a saving of $40 a month now being paid in rent for officers' living quarters. Officers would be able to live in a new building and would be on call 24 hours a day."

The Salvation Army has served Marquette continuously for more than 50 years and for the last 30 years and owned and occupied a building on the corner of Third and Bluff streets, which is now believed unfit for continued use. With this service record, the building committee is confident that the people of the community will respond generously to this appeal.

Eighth Edition Of Lure Book Being Printed

The eighth edition of the Upper Peninsula Development bureau's "Lure Book," one of the country's outstanding tourist information publications, is being printed and will be ready for distribution next month, George E. Bishop, secretary - manager, announced yesterday.

This year's book will contain more than 100 pages of pictures and editorial copy. The edition of 65,000 copies will be nearly one-third larger than previous issues and "will exceed all previous issues in beauty and utility," in the opinion of the Edward Dreier Advertising Agency, of Grand Rapids, which is in charge of layout and make-up.

"Art, all the way through the book, is the best we have ever had," Dreier said. "In my opinion it shows marked improvement over former editions. It should be well received by prospective vacationists."

As in previous years, the book will be distributed primarily through the bureau's information offices, maintained with the aid of the state, in larger midwestern cities. Thousands of copies also are mailed in response to inquiries received through metropolitan newspaper advertising and are distributed at outdoor and travel shows in the middle west.

Hundreds of requests for the 1942 Lure Book already have been received at the bureau's headquarters here.

Italian Arrested For Entering U. S. Illegally

GRAND RAPIDS, Feb. 12—P—Federal immigration inspectors today arrested Matteo D'Angelo, a 41-year-old railway section hand, for entering the United States illegally from Italy. D'Angelo was taken into custody while making applications for an alien identification card.

Joseph C. Als, special inspector for the immigration and naturalization service in Detroit, arrested D'Angelo and said he would be taken to Detroit Friday to face illegal entry charges. Als said ordinarily D'Angelo would be deported, but that because of the war he would probably be confined to a detention station.

In attempting to register under the act requiring registration of aliens of all enemy nations, D'Angelo asserted he had entered the country legally through the port of New York. When Als became suspicious and questioned the man further D'Angelo admitted he had entered in 1928 as an Italian seaman on shore leave.

He has a wife and two children still in Europe.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1942

which fighting can be carried on to good purpose on the Russian front is now of only a few weeks' duration. The beginnings of spring, with the melting of the snow and the softening of the ground, will usher in a period during which all troops will be, to large extent, immobilized until the spring is well advanced.

There is no doubt that the Russians will have to fight off another offensive no less bitterly waged than the one they were finally able to halt last year. To withstand it they will need all their resources and all the aid in material that this country and Britain can possibly get to them.

Now It Is Retreading

Steps for conservation of rubber, made all the more necessary by the news from the Far East, have now been extended to include the retreading of tires. It will be possible after the 19th only when the boards now rationing tires authorize the work to be done.

The public at large is out. It must confront the likelihood that when tires on cars it is using for convenience and pleasure are worn down they will have to be laid up. The number of users who will be given preference is so large that when they are served there will be little left for other owners.

All that has been written about the necessity of minimizing the use of cars and taking every care to get the utmost in service out of the tires now in hand takes on redoubled force. There will be strict limitation on use of rubber until the time comes when new supplies will be forthcoming, a time that now seems far distant.

The Far East will be cut off as a source of supply for an unpredictable time to come. This leaves only the guayule rubber produced in small quantities in the southwest and California, dribblets of rubber that will come from Brazil, the small production of synthetic plants in production and soon to come into production, and the synthetic plants, now existing only on paper, to be financed by the Federal Finance Corporation.

It will henceforth be only rudimentary wisdom for owners of cars not on the preferred lists to restrict their use to urgent needs. The more walking to and from the business districts and to fill social engagements is done, the more likelihood there will be that cars will be available when they may be badly needed some months in the future.

La Guardia Steps Down

Mr. LaGuardia has now resigned an office to which he should never have been appointed. He had a full-time job in the office of mayor of New York. There were innumerable alternative appointments to the office of director of civilian defense the President could have made that would have given the country as good service as Mr. LaGuardia would be able to give it.

Mr. Landis, whose appointment as assistant to Mr. LaGuardia was made by the President to lessen support behind the proposal, advanced in the House, to turn civilian defense over to the Army, is now to succeed to full authority in direction of the effort. There doubtless will be satisfactory organization of the work, if Mrs. Roosevelt will withdraw from it, and devote her time to private activities.

Much of the confusion has been attributed to her presence in the organization. It has been said, possibly without justification, that she has been giving orders independent of her chief. However this may be, she, because of her relation to the President, has had much more influence in direction of the effort than should be exercised by any subordinate.

Contemporary Opinion

Threatening Prediction We mildly make the seemingly required interpretation of the statement here by R. J. Thomas, president of the United Auto Workers, as the conference of union men from 90 plants with the General Motors management was bargaining.

He led up by renewing attack on William S. Knudsen in terms that reached a new peak for injustice, declaring that as co-director of the former Office of Production Management Knudsen "never represented the people of this country" and that as lieutenant general in charge of Army production he now really is only "a first-class inspector."

How may the author of this prediction be credited with purposing sincerely to help make the setup work? He refers, of course, to the Nelson one-man direction of war production and, as the agency to compose labor disputes, the War Labor board.

Taking Thomas in full, inference cannot be escaped of threat by UAW-CIO to kick the setup over, unless WLB or GM itself yield to the demand for the closed shop in the GM plants. And the situation here cannot be passed without noting that the matter up for next consideration by the board involves the larger question of the closed shop in Bethlehem and all the minor steel companies.

CIO Comes To District

The SWOC, an affiliate of the CIO, comes to the iron ranges of Michigan as a bargaining agent for the Spies-Virgil mine whose employes made it a preponderant choice in an official check-off last week.

The event is significant in our own area at least because it is the first foothold the union has been able to attain. In the only previous test, desperately fought within the ranks, the union was rejected by Verona employes a year ago so decisively that the CIO withdrew its organizer and left the matter in the hands of local members.

Unlike the Verona mines where the union asked an election at two properties, ignoring for the moment the James mine where it was aware of its weakness, the Spies-Virgil workers set themselves apart by organizing their own CIO chapter after having enrolled a heavy majority of the workers. Thus fortified, the union asked recognition leaving to the company the choice of an election or a check-off of the members.

We may judge from this that quiet, aggressive work by local members was more effective in enrolling the membership than the intensive campaigning conducted under the leadership of an imported organizer. Either that or the Spies-Virgil men were more amenable to joining or that sentiment among workers has changed.

What the result portends is a matter resting largely with the SWOC leadership. The Independent Mine Workers' union, recognized by the Verona group, has a bargaining agreement providing for seniority, vacations, and grievances but not for dues check-off or a closed shop. The mining companies have shown no disposition to grant workers the latter and if insisted upon, undoubtedly would be cause for dispute.

Wages and hours have been uniform in the steel industry and any move in one direction or the other would be applicable here as elsewhere.

Sane leadership by employer and employe with some effort to understand the rights and obligations of each in his own sphere of operations would inevitably mean satisfactory relations. In time of war crisis we may reasonably anticipate deferment of critical issues.

The Spies-Virgil has never been a highly profitable property of the Cleveland-Cliffs company, attested by its intermittent operating schedules and large accumulated stockpile in normal times. Of the CCI mines, it is one that could be held in reserve without prohibitive cost.

That is typical to more or less degree of Iron county mines all of whose profit factors are below those of other ranges. Operating demands of too costly a nature could insure to the injury rather than the benefit of the workers and of district payrolls, a fact The Reporter has emphasized in its labor discussions.

Union organization here is a new phenomenon. We hope it will in no way affect our employment stability after the insensate war demands are ended.—Iron River Reporter.

A Good Example In sentencing a violator who admitted catching 144 brook trout out of season and using a net in a trout stream, Justice Emil Mascotti, of Bessemer, set an example for other magistrates in this region, some of whom have been inclined to be too lenient in conservation law violation cases.

The sentence of $100 fine, with the alternative of 90 days in the county jail, was not too severe for such a flagrant violation.

Fishing and hunting are two of the most important forms of recreation that this region has to offer its residents and the violator who hunts or fishes out of season, uses illegal methods, or takes more than the lawful limit is cheating his fellow citizens.—Ironwood Daily Globe.

But We Have a Committee Even while the Normandy was still burning, Washington announced another committee—a "central committee" to help combat war front sabotage.

If committees and commissions could win this war, it would be over now.—Milwaukee Journal.

spite the pledges of labor peace and the machinery to provide it, strikes in war industries have begun and are still going on.—Detroit News.

American Morale

Those persons in the Capital who have set themselves up as guardians of public morale might profitably reflect upon two questions: What is the matter with American morale? And from what direction does the real threat to it come?

In the first place there is no evidence that anything is wrong with the morale of the people. On the contrary, there is every reason to believe it is far better than the morale of those who seem to think that professional dancers, movie actors, press agents and scores of lucrative jobs are indispensable ingredients of victory on the home front.

It has been but a few months since some people were convinced that the morale of the Army had gone to pot. But that myth has been pretty well exploded. The soldiers who were "going over the hill" in October—if one listened to the gloomy prophets—stuck to their guns and their training. Instead, and have since given a first-rate account of themselves whenever they have met the enemy.

Nor is there any reason to suppose that Americans in the civilian ranks are made of softer stuff. Given appropriate guidance in the really essential phases of civilian defenses, they will do their part of the job. And they will do it without being coddled and pampered by a comic opera assortment of highly paid morale-maintainers with fancy titles and vague duties.

It does not necessarily follow, however, that morale cannot or will not be undermined. The people of this country are prepared to pay the price of victory. They will buy the bonds, pay the taxes, give up the luxuries and comforts, do the work and endure whatever hardships may be necessary without any impairment of morale so long as their Government meets them halfway and restricts its own program to activities that are genuinely essential. But if the Government does not do this, it is foolish to suppose that the morale of the people can be maintained on a high plane, no matter how many dancers and movie stars may be rushed into the breach.

As a first step, the Office of Civilian Defense should drop all moon-doggling activities and stop wasting money on salaries and programs that contribute nothing to the war effort. And this should be followed up by a vigorous and thorough elimination of all governmental activities which smack of "politics as usual."

Testifying before a congressional committee, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, charged that "startling and shocking conditions of waste, extravagance and other indefensible practices" in the administration of the Farm Security Administration amount to a "national disgrace." In substance, he accused this agency of using public funds improperly to maintain governmental control over the individuals coming within the scope of its activities. Earlier, the administrator of the agency had admitted that Farm Security funds were used to pay poll taxes of needy farmers and had defended this as a "perfectly proper thing to do."

The administrator denied that the money was advanced for the payment of poll taxes with any thought of influencing the votes of the farmers. Be that as it may, there is no room for denial as to the effect on the morale of the hard-pressed taxpayer when he learns that the Government, instead of spending his money to fight the war, is using it to pay the salaries of dancers and movie stars and the poll taxes of prospective voters.

It is from this sort of governmental activity, repeated time and again, that the real threat to morale comes. And if there should be any breakdown on the home front it will not result from weakness on the part of the people, but because the administration, while wasting its energies on non-essential and even harmful "morale-building" activities, neglects to do the things that are really essential which constitute the really serious threat.—Washington Star.

New York Chats

By Charles B. Driscoll NEW YORK—Today we keep a sad anniversary. Four years ago, at midnight of February 13, Odd McIntyre passed on to new fields of endeavor.

How great was his hold upon the affections of his millions of readers is indicated by the fact that in my daily mail, four years after Odd's death, more than half the letters mention the man who formerly wrote in this space. All speak of him lovingly, and many quote from his writings. Every few days, someone sends me a yellowed clipping of some favorite passage of the great McIntyre.

Odd was buried on the 54th anniversary of his birth. Were he living now, he would be 58 next week. Many writers are just approaching the best of their output at that age.

Odd's health was bad. Steadily growing weakness caused him to determine to quit writing and retire to the James, but his wife had reconstructed by long distance, in Gallipolis. Unless his plans were changed, he would have been living there now.

But Odd's great public never would have permitted him to retire from writing. From him the people were for it. They wrote carloads of letters to the postmaster general. But the brass hats were lukewarm on the proposition. Instead of McIntyre, they printed pictures of several persons known only to a few.

Well, let's save those yellowed clippings. When 25 years have passed after Odd's death—that's only 21 more years—those of us still surviving may have an opportunity to nominate O. O. McIntyre for the Hall of Fame. Maybe by that time the bigwigs will even consider putting his portrait on a postage stamp.

Odd would be much embarrassed at such talk of his fame, were he living. But those who love him and cherish his memory would be happy to tell others, now unborn, about this gentle soul who captivated the American reading public by the expression of his lovable personality in a daily column.

Prisoners of Japan

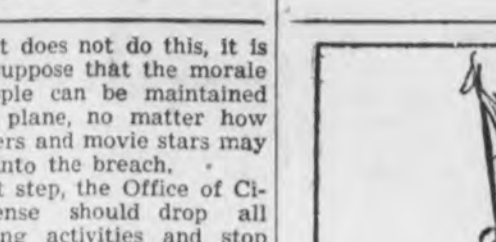

It is an unpleasant thought, but there are now in Japanese hands quite a few Americans. Some of them are members of our armed forces, others are civilians who have been interned. Whether the Japanese make any distinction of treatment between the two groups, whether, in deed, there is any effort to observe common decency toward the prisoners, is not known. Some information on the subject may shortly be available, for the American Red Cross has announced that the Japanese Government, through the International Red Cross in Geneva, has agreed to exchange details of war prisoners and noncombatants "as far as possible."

The Red Cross, it will soon be possible to send boxes of food and clothing to the captured Americans.

This is good news, and the American public should act on it with a generosity dwarfing its not inconsiderable donations in the past. At the same time, however, it is to be hoped that the Red Cross will be in a position to supervise the distribution of supplies for our fellow Americans in the Orient, so as to insure safe delivery. In Europe such supervision has, on the whole, worked quite successfully, but that is another matter.

Whether the Japanese will offer equal cooperation, if supplies destined for American prisoners are diverted to Japanese purposes, however, the news is bound to leak out in one way or another. This would, of course, determine sub-

Today In Washington

By David Lawrence WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 — Aluminum—the material needed for airplanes—is being produced in such huge quantities today that all the fears which were expressed last year to the effect that not enough of the metal would be available for military purposes have fortunately proved groundless.

Broadly speaking, production of aluminum has kept pace with military requirements even with the stepped up defense program that has been in operation since Pearl Harbor. This phenomenal result is due to the splendid efforts of the Aluminum Company of America and the Reynolds Metals Company.

The two principal producers—and the efforts of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in planning and financing new plants.

It is not permissible to tell the production figures, but the rate of production this very month exceeds anything hitherto accomplished by any other country in the world, and there is reason to believe that the United States alone—not counting Canada—will shortly be exceeding all the production of the Axis countries combined.

By the end of 1942 and early 1943 the capacity planned is such that the rate of production may reach the fantastic total of 3,000,000,000 pounds a year on the North American continent.

What is more important, however, for the moment, is the fact that aircraft production has not been impaired by lack of aluminum. Here and there an occasional bottleneck occurs due to some change in orders or specifications or delay in shipment, but on the whole the inventories recorded in Washington indicate that aircraft manufacturers have an abundant supply of aluminum for the big airplane program they are undertaking in the coming months of 1942.

With a plentiful supply of the primary metal—that is, for military but not for civilian purposes—the big problem is how to keep the fabrication plants ahead in production capacity. For the fabricating process often has to be employed again and again on the same primary metal when once it is cut into shapes and the surplus is gathered together for subsequent use.

Germany's Volume Unknown There is no reliable information available as to Axis production. Some estimates indicate that Hitler may be now producing aluminum at the rate of 1,000,000,000 pounds a year, but this is believed high. In order to achieve such a figure it would be necessary for all the facilities of occupied countries to be working full blast and for enough electric power to be available for such an enormous production.

But even assuming that Hitler has been making any such amount, it is the American hope to be producing three times that much by the end of 1942.

Smiles Friend — Cheer up; it might have something worse than gout. Ill — I can assure you I'm not kicking.—The Kablegram.

Symptoms British censors have received special orders to obliterate rows of kisses sent by soldiers and sailors to sweethearts and wives. It is all right to send the kisses by letter, so long as they are not put in rows since it is too easy to use a line of such characters as a code of signals. There is no objection to scattering the kisses hit and miss through the letter by means of Xs or other characters.—Capper's Weekly.

Inheritance A young private, walking through the park with his girl, met his sergeant. "This is my sister," he explained, bashfully. "That's all right," the sergeant replied kindly. "She used to be mine."

early 1943. This enormous quantity would not be of use to Hitler unless he had a plane program of the size which President Roosevelt announced not long ago.

If, therefore, the United States is to manufacture 60,000 planes in 1942 and 125,000 in 1943, there must be enough aluminum to accomplish such an objective, and present indications are that there will be. Undoubtedly the military requirements of a program such as has been announced since Pearl Harbor were not foreseen by anybody. But this is not a reflection on anyone who dealt with the problem last year. It is rather the result of unexpected developments and the interesting news is available now that notwithstanding the big jump in requirements, there will be enough aluminum produced to achieve the program.

Win War, Only Aim Nobody is giving much thought, incidentally, to what is going to happen to such a big aluminum capacity in post-war years. Canada is building up a tremendous plant capacity and unquestionably the European countries which have attained high production figures will have aluminum to sell. The prospect is that aluminum will play a much more vital part in civilian uses than ever before and that, of course, the price will be lower than ever before, permitting the use of aluminum in many things in which it heretofore has been prohibitive.

The question of what is to become of the Government plants or those financed by Government loans is not being considered. As Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production board, said the other day—the cost isn't being counted. The one aim is to win the war.

Closed Minds Annapolis classmates met the other day to honor the memory of Lieut. Comm. Walter D. La Mont, one of the Navy's forgotten men. Before he died last month La Mont had the tragic knowledge that his great invention, a lightweight boiler, which was spurned by the Navy of his own country, was being employed against the United States by its enemies. Both the Germans and the Japanese saw the advantage of the invention, although La Mont's superiors were blind to them.

La Mont's boiler, according to engineers, not only is much more efficient than the type used in American warships, but weighs only half as much and takes up only half as much space. The saving means greater speed, heavier armor, and more guns. But for 24 years the Navy refused to adopt the invention.

La Mont's story is more than the usual one of neglected genius and a prophet without honor in his own country. It demonstrates how men in the Navy department are incapable of thinking in terms of 1942. Naval architects and engineers who have spent their lives designing turrets, turret machinery and all the other machines and gadgets which have gone into warships cannot welcome change. Admirals who know all that is known about naval gunnery don't want to play a new game, at which they would be beginners.

These men have erected Maginot lines in their own minds to keep out all new ideas. They are loath or unable to rid themselves of their hostility to change, and there is now no executive direction in the Navy department that is sufficient, informed or forceful to compel them to modify their views. If Congress does not take the matter in hand the country never will get a modern fighting fleet.—Chicago Tribune.

Pedigreed Junk What is a medal? Is honor frozen into metal. When the honor is dead, the metal is junk.

So 21 prominent New Yorkers have found, at least, turning over to the scrap metal campaign medals presented them by Germany, Italy and Japan. There were German Iron Crosses, a Bavarian Distinguished Service medal, a solid gold sports medal presented by Hitler himself, honors which no doubt the recipients were glad to receive and proud to wear when they were presented.

But they felt that the honor was tarnished, and when the honor is gone out of a medal, scrap and dross remain.—La Porte Herald-Argus.

Guthner Head Of Army Setup In Peninsula

Brigadier General William E. Guthner, former commander of the 89th infantry brigade of the 45th division, has been assigned to direct Army activities in Illinois, Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, with the exception of Sault Ste. Marie, site of Fort Brady.

General Guthner's headquarters will be in Chicago. He will act as corps area representative in liaison with civilian authorities in national defense efforts.

Major General Clifford R. Powell has been assigned to serve in the same capacity in Lower Michigan. His headquarters will be in the Federal building, Detroit. The assignments were announced by Major General J. M. Cummins, Sixth corps area commander.

General Guthner's home is in Denver, where he served as police commissioner of the city since 1934. He is a former member of the Denver city council. He enlisted in the Sixth U. S. cavalry in January, 1902, and served a three-year enlistment, the early part of which was during the Philippine insurrection.

Returning to Colorado, he rejoined the National Guard and during the World war served overseas as a captain with the 157th infantry. February 20, 1934, he was promoted to brigadier general of the Colorado National Guard and was inducted into Federal service on September 16, 1940.

How to make Pillsbury's Self-frosted Chocolate Honey Cookies
The Army and Navy will fight over these!

Complete recipe:

Recipe makes 4 dozen delicious nut-studded, chocolate-covered cookies. Give the boys a treat!

1. Sift 2 1/2 c. Enriched Pillsbury's Best Flour once, measure; add 2 tsp. baking powder (or 1 tsp. double-acting), 1/4 tsp. soda, 1/2 tsp. salt, and 1/4 tsp. cinnamon; sift twice. (Two B-vitamins and iron are added to Pillsbury's Best, with no change in flavor, color, or baking quality.) 2. Cream 1/2 c. shortening and 1/2 c. shined honey together. Add 1 c. sugar gradually; beat until light. 3. Add 3 eggs well beaten; beat thoroughly. 4. Add 2 sqs. (2 ozs.) unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled, 1/2 c. chopped walnuts, and 1 tsp. vanilla; blend well. 5. Add dry ingredients gradually; mix well. (Pillsbury's Best blends so perfectly—gives you such fluffy batter—you'll agree it's best for cookies. It's just as good for all your baking—it's BAKE-PROVED! During mixing, samples are tested each hour for creaminess, appearance, and baking tests are made 4 to 6 times daily.) 6. Drop by teaspoonful onto greased baking sheet. 7. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 4 min. Sprinkle tops with 1/2 c. grated sweet baking chocolate. Bake about 8 min. longer, or until done. Let topping get firm before filling cookie jar or packing for mailing. These cookies are just the right size and shape for packing. And they stay fresh longer! ### Mattson Case Goes Over To Circuit Court

Harvey Mattson, of Chocoley township, charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than murder, was bound over to the February term of circuit court, following examination in city court before Judge John Siegel.

Mattson is charged with assault on a fellow worker in a lumber camp in Chocoley township on February 1. Unable to furnish bond of $3,000, he was committed to the county jail. The next term of circuit court opens February 24.

Elmer A. Anderson, Ohio street, Marquette, arrested by state police for reckless driving February 8 on US-41 in Marquette township, paid a fine of $35 and $6.05 in lieu of serving 30 days in the county jail. The complaint charged Anderson with driving on the wrong side of the road and forcing a state police squad car off the highway.

Chris Thomas, Marquette, arrested by city police for vagrancy, was sentenced to serve 30 days in the county jail.

Kings Row

By Henry Bellmann

THE STORY: Schoolroom in small town Kings Row brings together orphaned Parris Mitchell, 12 and foreign-looking, who lives with French grandmother; Drake McHugh, 13 and "all boy"; beautiful Cassandra Tower; tomboy Randy Monaghan. Teacher Sally Venable muses on sharp social lines that will groove their lives as they grow up.

CHAPTER II

There was one individual in that noisy playground crowd who felt something of this social difference, and who thought about it. That was Parris Mitchell.

Parris was, in his own dark way, a beautiful boy. He was standing a little apart and was dreamily half thinking something of Miss Venable's thought. Inside they were all well, kind of alike. But outside—here everything was different.

It seemed, as he thought about it, to have something to do with a feeling of embarrassment. In class you were embarrassed by different things. Out here you felt easy and comfortable with some of the boys and girls and a little strange with others. It was very puzzling. But there were so many things that puzzled one and teased in one's head. You couldn't bother too much about them. He supposed he'd understand a lot more when he grew up. It must be very, very nice to be grown up.

Two or three girls were standing near, talking with their heads close together. He wondered why they always acted that way—as if they had secrets. Vera Lichinsky was one of them. She caught sight of him.

"You going down to Professor Berdorff's for your music lesson?"

"No, not today."
"Cause?"
"Well, 'cause why? It's your regular day, ain't it?"

"It's my birthday."
"Oh?" She looked slightly mystified. Nothing ever interfered with her violin lessons.

"I've got a new Bach piece." Vera made it sound important.

"Have you?"
"Yes. It's not very pretty."
"I have a new Bach piece, too."
"Is it pretty?"
"No."
"Is it hard?"
"Yes. It's in four flats."

"I've had pieces in all the keys. Long time ago. Ain't you?"
"No."
"Well, I've got to go." She turned with an air of serious decision. She did not look back.

"Hello, Parris." Cassandra Tower hung back from the other girls who were walking away, their heads still close together.

Parris blushed.
"Hello, Cassie."
"Do you like Vera Lichinsky?"
"I—I don't know."
"You don't know?"
"Well, I don't know. I guess I like her all right."

Cassandra smiled. "I heard you say today's your birthday. How old are you?"
"Twelve."
"I'm 13. Why don't you have a party?"
"I don't know."
"I'm going to have a party next Saturday."
"Are you?"
"Yes. I'm going to invite you."
"I'd like to come."
"Will your grandmother let you?"
"Of course."
"All right. I'll send you an invitation."
She walked backward for a little way, smiling. Parris smiled, too. She turned and ran until she caught up with her companions.

He walked slowly toward the stile which mounted the tall fence surrounding the school grounds. He did not see a little girl who stood outside watching him through the gap in the boards. She was smaller than Parris, and rather poorly dressed in a faded calico dress.

She was extremely blond, and an expression of sweetness—half angelic, half sensuous—gave her a somewhat enigmatic charm.

"Hello, Renee."
"Hello."
They proceeded without further speech along the road toward Parris' home. Renee lived on the von Elm place. Her father, Sven Gyllinson, was the overseer of the nurseries owned by Parris' grandmother. Renee and Parris had played together since they were babies.

She was only a few months younger than Parris, but she was a grade behind him in school. Seemingly, they took no notice of each other now. When he picked up a rock and threw it, she threw one also with ridiculous similar gestures. If he swung his book strap from one shoulder to the other, she did, too.

Apparently she wished nothing but his company. She was always "tagging" along—always had been as long as she could remember. No one teased him about her. Some of the boys had tried that and met with a fury in him that was as astonishing as it was inexplicable. Renee was a "racky" child, but her father worked for Parris' grandmother, so they decided maybe he had to look out for her.

As they neared home Renee spoke. "I'll be glad when school's out, won't you?"
"Yes."
"I'll be awful glad. We'll go swimmin' then, won't we?"
"Uh, huh," he answered indifferently.

"Up in our own pond?"
"Uh huh."
He opened the wicket gate and stood aside for her to pass through. She waved and turned into a lane that led to the overseer's cottage.

Parris Mitchell's mother had died when he was born, his father less than a year later. Since then he had been cared for by his maternal grandmother. She adored him, and he adored her. Doubtless she spoiled him in some ways, but she had trained him to the observance of an old-fashioned, Old World courtesy that made him somewhat conspicuous.

His grandmother, Marie Arnaut von Elm, was wholly French. Her family came originally from Lorraine. She had been twice married, the second time to a wandering German aristocrat who had come to America to make a fortune.

After various enterprises he had bought lands at Kings Row because of some fancied similarity of the soil to that of his native German province. He built a house of foreign fashion, laid out elaborate grounds, and manufactured sufficient wine to drink himself to death.

Marie von Elm was a resourceful woman. She employed French and German labor and turned the vineyards into a nursery. It had prospered, and she was now, 20 years after her husband's death, accounted a wealthy woman.

Kings Row had never known quite what to make of her. She was a "foreigner," but obviously did not fit into the usual categories of what were always derogatorily referred to as "the foreign elements." She had the bearing and manner of an aristocrat, and her manner of humor was of the kind that often made the women of Kings Row uncomfortable.

Madame von Elm spoke French or German by preference. She emphasized, underscored, and generally illumined her discourse with graphic movements of hands, shoulders and eyebrows.

Parris bore a striking resemblance to her.
She was waiting now for him to come home from school. Laying aside the thick reading glass, she gave a twist to the taffeta bow at her throat, and waited. She smiled a little. It was almost a smile of coquetry.

"Bon soir, grand'mere!" He held her very tight and kissed her four times on each smooth cheek. He rubbed his face against her hair. "Ma belle grand'mere!"
"Mon enfant." She held him off and put up her lorgnette. "Tu es fatigued?"
"Moi? Non. Pas du tout."
He laughed. She liked the trick he had of keeping his short square teeth tight together when he laughed.

"Are you hungry?"
"Of course."
Madame called, "Anna!"
A short fat maid appeared so quickly that one suspected that she had been waiting at the door. "Anna, dass Kind hat Hunger."
The maid smiled broadly. "Was willst du—Milch, Brod—eine Pastete?"
"Was fur Pastet gibt es, Anna?"
"Kirsch—ganz frisch."
The trilling discussion continued without anyone being aware of the shifts from one tongue to another. Parris decided on the cherry pie.

Madame turned to her desk again. "Go with Anna, please, Parris. I have more work."
After the pie he went directly to his piano practice. The square rosewood piano was old, and the keys were yellow, but it was in good tune. Very slowly, very carefully, counting aloud as he practiced, he attacked the Bach piece "in four flats." He began again at the beginning for the 10th time when his grandmother came to the door.

"What is this that you play?"
"It is an invention."
"Indeed. Is that something important?"
"Herr Berdorff says so."
"It is extremely ugly. It must be frightful to learn such a thing! Come with me—it is enough of this—in this invention as you call it—and it is your birthday. I have a present for you!"

Parris lay in bed listening to the little sounds of the night. He was very happy. It had been a beautiful evening, and his present—all those books! His "belle, belle, grand'mere!" He had heard Anna say that Madame was growing old. Old! Some day his grandmother would die—sooner than other boys' mothers who were much younger. Terror seized him. He took the edge of the quilt between his teeth so he wouldn't cry, but it was no use—he was already crying.

No, no, no! Le bon Dieu would never permit that. He remembered once that his grandmother had shrugged her shoulders contemptuously at something Anna said about trusting the good God. Was it—was it possible that his grandmother knew something she had never told him—that perhaps—perhaps there wasn't a bon Dieu at all, just as he had found out when he was a very little boy that there was no Santa Claus and no real giants.

He turned his face down into the pillow and pulled the covering over his head.

HILLS BROS COFFEE RHYMES

Old King Cole was a merry old soul, And very good taste had he; He called for his pipe, and he called for his bowl Full of good Hills Bros Coffee

Hills Bros Coffee never disappoints your taste

The fine, full-bodied flavor you find in your first pound of Hills Bros. Coffee comes in every pound. This is the result of "Controlled Roasting"—Hills Bros. exclusive process. Instead of being roasted by ordinary methods, this coffee is roasted a little at a time . . . continuously, evenly. Year in and year out, Hills Bros. rare blend receives this exact roasting which not only insures a uniform flavor, but a wonderful flavor that is different from other coffees.

"Now that's what I call good coffee!"

Hills Bros. Coffee is one coffee you can use in any kind of coffee-maker. The Correct Grind is guaranteed to produce best results in Drip, Glass Maker, Percolator, or Pot, if the directions on the side of the Hills Bros. Coffee can are followed.

Public Invited To Ski Show At Graveraet

The public is invited to attend a program of sound motion pictures of skiing and other entertainment sponsored by the Marquette Slalom club in the Louis G. Kaufman auditorium of Graveraet high school tonight, beginning at 8:15.

The pictures will appeal to everyone, not only to skiing enthusiasts, a club official said yesterday. "There are reels of Sonja Henie figure skating, and one film features the popular sport of mountain fly fishing. Skiing reels show Torger Tøkle, Otto Lang, Hannes Schneider and Birger Lund in action.

"Persons particularly interested in improving their skiing will profit by seeing pictures of these outstanding stars and also by paying close attention to the instructive parts of the program. Slalom and downhill technique is explained, and other phases of skiing given attention."

The Slalom club has engaged an orchestra for the occasion. Frank Richardson is in charge of entertainment to be offered in addition to the pictures.

Only a nominal admission charge will be made. There is no advance sale of tickets. Proceeds will go toward developing the Kiriln hill skiing center.

No Fireworks Or Turf Races At U.P. Fair

The board of directors of the Upper Peninsula state fair, meeting in Escanaba Wednesday, decided to eliminate horse races and fireworks from the program of entertainment this year, it was stated by Mrs. Helen G. Vierling, member of the board, who returned home yesterday after attending the meeting.

As special attractions the board has booked the Gus Sun all-girl revue and the same rodeo which was presented at the Chicago livestock exposition this year, as well as the Jimmy Lynch "Hell Drivers" as a thrill show.

Mrs. Vierling said the fair's annual bird house building contest was underway and that the board had increased the amount of money to be awarded in premiums in the cattle show and for exhibits in other departments.

The fair will open September 3 and continue through September 7.

Gwinn

Junior Study Club—The Junior Study club met in the clubhouse Monday evening. Following a business meeting the study of bandaging was continued. The next meeting will be held Monday, February 23.

Registration at Clubhouse—Registration for selective service for Forsyth township residents will be held Monday in the Gwinn clubhouse and will be for men from 20 to 45. Princeton men will register at the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company's main office at Princeton. The hours of registration are from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. Those who cannot register Monday may do so at the clubhouse Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6.

Women's Study Club—The Women's Study club met in the clubhouse Tuesday evening. A musical program followed the business session. Miss Elizabeth Nordeen sang several numbers, accompanied by Mrs. J. Witters; Miss Barbara Nylander played several piano numbers and George Kendrick played

College Men Sought For Ground Duty

Although recent War Department orders eliminated the two-year college requirement for enlistment as an aviation cadet, the Army air corps still needs men who have received college training. Corporal Carlton S. Olyer, in charge of the Army recruiting station in Marquette, said yesterday.

Because it takes 10 men on the ground to keep one in the air, the air corps has opened courses to men with engineering, scientific or mathematical training to fill important ground jobs. These men, who also will be known as aviation cadets and will receive commissions as second lieutenants, can enlist in armament, engineering, communication, meteorology and photography.

Armament training is extended to civilians, former cadets now in civil life and to cadets currently undergoing training, and preferably to men who have engineering or scientific background.

Here Are Requirements
Candidates for communication courses must have completed two full years of engineering studies or have had two years of college and hold an amateur radio license. Applicants for engineering must have completed at least three years of engineering study at an accredited college or university.

Prospective students for meteorology work must be college graduates, specializing in sciences, engineering or similar technical subjects and have had a thorough training in mathematics.

Photography training is given to those who have had three years of chemistry or geology. However, applications are being accepted at present.

These specialized fields are open to men 18 to 26, inclusive, and they need not pass the regular flight physical examination.

A medley of songs on the saxophone and was accompanied by Miss Ellen Danielson. In the absence of Mrs. E. E. Bjork, Mrs. Witters read her paper on Greenland. Miss Katherine Reagon presented a paper on Iceland and Mrs. Joel Gustafson talked on Newfoundland. Hostesses were Mrs. Anna Maynes and Mrs. Josephine Hendrickson.

First Aid Classes—All persons who registered for volunteer civilian defense duty, are requested to attend the organization meeting for the first aid course which will be held Sunday in the Gwinn high school at 2 p. m. Dr. J. E. Witters, of Gwinn, and instructors from Marquette will conduct the work. Persons who have not registered for defense duty may do so before the meeting at the school. The first aid course is required of all persons who wish to do civilian defense duty.

Registrars Meet Tonight At City Hall

An instruction meeting for volunteer registrars who will handle the selective service registration in Marquette Monday, February 16, will be held in the mayor's office in the city hall this evening, beginning at 7:30.

Registrars will be on duty from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. Monday at the 1-B precinct polling place at Fisher street school, in the city hall and at the 5-B precinct polling place on Presque Isle avenue.

Men who will be unable to register Monday may sign up at the draft board office in the Vierling block from 8:30 a. m. to 7 p. m. tomorrow or from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Sunday. All others, however, must register Monday.

The registration places will be open only on Monday, and the draft office will be open for registration Saturday and Sunday, but not Monday.

The registration is for all men between 20 and 44 years of age who did not sign up for the draft in October, 1940, or last July.

Baraga

AAA Makes Survey—John Erikainen, chairman of the Baraga county USDA war board, will attend the district war board meeting at Crystal Falls February 20. The meeting was called by Maurice A. Doan, state chairman. AAA committeemen who have made recent farm-to-farm surveys indicate that farmers of Baraga county will increase production on all vital foods. Increases to be made follow: milk cows 115 over 1941; milk production 115 over 1941; egg production 42 per cent over 1941

(an increase of approximately 60,000 dozen); farm garden increase of 15 per cent; oats increased by 50 acres of 25 per cent; barley increased by 400 acres or 70 per cent; small increase in hogs and beef cattle. Committeemen have advised farmers to save all their bur-lap bags for future use, because of the dwindling supply. Sacks should be hung in a dry protected place.

HEARING POSTPONED
WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—P—The bituminous coal division today postponed until April 13 a hearing on a request to allow the coal industry to make sales contracts on and after November 1 yearly, in order to begin shipments of Great Lakes cargo coal at the opening of navigation each spring. The postponement was requested by the consumers' council and a producers' board.

MAKE SOME, FOLKS, IF YOU WANT COMPLIMENTS

SAYS AUNT JENNY

Tender, light FULL FLAVOR Fruit Bread

so delicious made with purer Spry!

"Folks tell me this is the best Fruit Bread they ever tasted," says Aunt Jenny. "But I can't promise you these results with ordinary shortening. For they may dull the delicate spicy, fruity taste that makes this bread so delicious. Play safe. Use pure Spry and get the FULL FLAVOR. . . An' that goes for all bakin' an' fryin'. Get Spry now an' try this grand receipt today."

1 cake compressed yeast 2 tablespoons lukewarm water 1/2 cup Spry 1 1/2 teaspoons salt 1 1/2 cups sugar 1 1/2 cups water 4 teaspoons baking powder	4 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour 3 cups raisins 1/2 cup dates, cut in slices 3 eggs, well beaten 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg 1/2 teaspoon orange rind 1/2 cup sugar 1/2 cup water 4 teaspoons baking powder
---	---

Crumble yeast into water and dissolve. Combine Spry, salt and 1/4 cup sugar in large bowl and add boiling water. Stir until Spry is melted, then cool until lukewarm. Add yeast mixture and blend. Add 2 1/2 cups flour and mix well. Cover and let rise in a warm place until light and spongy (about 3 hours). Add raisins and dates and blend. Add beaten eggs and beat well. Sift cinnamon, nutmeg, baking powder and remaining 1 1/4 cups sugar with remaining 2 cups flour. Pour into two 8x5x3-inch Spry-coated loaf pans. Cover and let stand 1/2 hour. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 60 to 70 minutes. Makes 2 loaves. Citron may be used instead of dates if desired. Change to Spry today for all bakin' and fryin'. Hear your folks rave about your FULL FLAVOR cakes, pies, fried foods. And no unpleasant smell or smoke when frying.

News Behind The News

BY RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 — The Federal Government's annual expenditure for advertising itself has reached the staggering sum of almost 100 million dollars, according to an official breakdown by the Bureau of the Budget. But even Director Harold D. Smith's experts admit that they cannot compute hidden costs which skyrocket the total far above that figure.

The actual, traceable outlay for 1941 amounted to approximately 30 million dollars, of which 19 million dollars went for salaries. But this estimate does not include money laid out for the tons of circulars, posters, booklets, statistics and yearbooks which divulge the love life of the frog or the monthly Morgenthau borrowings. Nor does it take into account the 52 million dollar charge on the post office for free distribution of these pieces of literature, which exceeded 300 million last year. Agriculture spends the most for ballyhoo. With seven hundred and eleven full-time and 20,500 part-time employees engaged in publicity work, this department shelled out more than 11 million dollars in 1941 for headlines.

These items were tabulated without any recognition of the tremendous drain on the Treasury which such agencies as OGD, OFF, OGR, Army-Navy publicists and Henry Morgenthau's bond-selling establishment will impose in coming years. They have just begun to fling the gold around. When the accountants were asked to make the survey, nobody dreamed that high-priced fan dancers, movie stars, fiction writers, Hollywood cartoonists and prize fighters would be needed to keep Uncle Sam on the front page. It is probable that the current year's splurge for self-glorification will top 200 million dollars—or enough to build two battleships and eight destroyers.

TRICK — War Production Boss Donald M. Nelson has proved to certain members of Congress that he knows how to finger political ropes around Washington. Within two days he shifted his stand on one of the fastest moving bills ever submitted to Capitol Hill.

On January 29 he wrote a letter to Rivers and Harbors Chairman Mansfield, urging quick action on the proposal to build a new Sault Ste. Marie canal. He advocated prompt passage of the Brown bill, which provides for separate consideration of this undertaking. The argument for haste here lies in the fact that 85 per cent of the ore needed for weapons passes through this waterway. But on January 31 the former mail order executive withdrew his recommendation. He informed Mr. Mansfield that he had "learned" of the inclusion of the Soo project in the one billion dollar omnibus measure for internal improvements. Therefore, he explained, his original endorsement was superfluous.

The WPA head's acrobatics has created disillusionment among Congressional veterans. The Soo scheme was tied into the general legislation solely to corral votes for two of Roosevelt's cronies. These are the St. Lawrence seaway and the Florida ship canal. Both have been outlawed by the members as wasteful expenditures and they would be sidetracked again if presented so that a separate vote could be taken on their merits. They have been slipped into the "overall grab" to compel promoters of worthy developments to accept them or get nothing. It's an old trick.

PROBLEZ — Japan's successes in the Far East have forced a revolutionary switch in the Administration's basic tariff and trade policies. Cordell Hull's far-reaching scheme for a free exchange of goods among the world's empires of production has been laid on the shelf at least temporarily.

Earlier moves to make the United States self-sufficient in tin, rubber, minerals and other key products have failed because of Roosevelt-Hull-Wallace opposition. The advocates of economic internationalism hoped even as recently as December 7 that the need to develop these industries at home would be obviated. British and American naval authorities promised to keep open the sea lanes to Oceania. But now all objections to a program of self-containment have been withdrawn. Jesse H. Jones will finance a synthetic rubber business. Without a dissenting vote Congress okayed the Anderson-Downey bill for securing ganyu on a large scale. At the same time, Mr. Jones' No. 1 aide, Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, arranged for building roads into Brazilian jungles in order to tap the tree Hevea brasiliensis.

Harold L. Ickes, after avoiding the problem for years, has asked for millions to mine low-grade manganese. Within a few days he will announce a grandiose plan for bringing almost all the neglected resources of the west into production. It will not be long before almost every raw material needed in peace or war will be obtainable in quantity on the North American continent. How to revive the Hoover-Wallace system will present a difficult problem at the peace table.

WHIP — Democratic leaders in the House will not admit it, but their handling of the first deficiency bill arouses the suspicion that they tossed Mrs. Roosevelt, Melvyn Douglas, Mayris Chaney and Donald Duck to the wolves. They will go down the line for FDR, but not for the First Lady. Here is the amusing story:

Only a few members of the majority upheld Mrs. Roosevelt's management of Civilian Defense since Mayor La Guardia turned it over to her and James M. Landis. They grinned and frolicked as GOP-ers ridiculed her "fan dancers." They asked for their names on the final vote even after they learned that the President's wife wanted to appear before her critics to explain her viewpoint. A few hours after her plea they rushed the measure to final action. But the real tip-off to their delay can be found in the following episode:

With balloting on OGD appropriations due last Monday, the leadership sent out telegrams on Saturday, urging members to be present for this "important" test. To make their warning more impressive, Messrs. Bayliff, McCormack and Boland attached their respective titles—Speaker, Majority Leader, Majority Whip—to their signatures. But for the first time after coming into power they forwarded the stand-by signal to every man on the Republican side. It may have been just one of those mistakes, but again it may have been one of those things which happen in the best of political families.

HANDOUT—Treasury men hope that our sailors can shoot more accurately than they dictate, type-write and mimeograph.

When Frank Knox recently appeared on a radio program with the secretary of the Treasury, the Navy's handout spelled the latter's name as "Morganthau." In view of Henry's sensitiveness about "getting my name straight," the release was run over at a great loss of time. Even then the seaman made it "one million dollars" instead of "one million dollars."

New York

SHAKE — The debacle at Singapore shocks a public which has been pumped full of false optimism regarding the strength of this overrated "Asiatic Maginot Line." Why did it show up so poorly? Some of the unpalatable truths about the situation may be published. The island is another horrible example of failure to estimate the craft and power of Japan.

Civilian defense measures were not taken earlier because war profiteering rubber planters and tin miners were brawling with the legislative council as to the paying of costs. The first income tax measure ever introduced only passed after the Government abjectly promised that the rates would not exceed eight per cent. The levy was held up also by reason of disputes concerning the revenues which Indian and Chinese firms should be compelled to contribute.

The security of the city depended upon weak reeds which were broken by the wind—unprotected settlements sunk by air bombs; plantation workers and forest rangers supposed to act as guides through the jungles but who never were organized; Punjabis and Pathans trained as guerrillas only to be outdistanced by the advancing Japs; reinforcements and airplanes which did not arrive. Now the enemy may be able to sneak around the point and reach the Indian Ocean where he can torpedo our ships taking supplies for China to Burma and for Russia to Iran. Military experts here believe that while supplies cannot bring back life to Malaya, the warning lesson may help shake off British and American complacency.

BITTER — The old song "Yes, We Have No Bananas" may be revived if the U. S. Maritime Commission continues to take over many more ships from the famous line whose white fleets once sailed from here to tropical America bringing back fruit, cocoa, coconuts, and agricultural products. Already over half of its vessels have been chartered by this Government and Great Britain for which the company is well paid.

Because its boats are equipped with the most modern built-in refrigeration units, they are extremely valuable in transporting perishable goods. Since several of our AEF's are likely to see service in more than one remote hot country, additional craft may be commandeered. But there is another angle which offsets this need. After unloading food at our ports the steamers refill with cargoes, especially war materials, for the Canal Zone and our new bases in the Caribbean Sea. The floating ice chest already are packed with meat and vegetables for U. S. troops in the Isthmus, Dutch Guiana, and West Indian spots.

If trade with the small republics is cut off, the State Department will have a new headache over its Good Neighbor policy. Should the bananas be allowed to rot on the trees, unemployment, unrest, and bitter feeling toward Uncle Sam may result. However, emergency work on roads and military installations will absorb a number of those who formerly cultivated crops. Less modern freighters could import sugar and copper from these southern regions.

REVOLT — Berlin has just put the squeeze on Bulgaria to furnish several divisions of troops against the Soviet. Up to now Germany and Italy have been sending out favors to the Balkan satellite and asking nothing in return. They sent architects, engineers and technical experts to construct docks, warehouses, and port facilities at Varna and Burgas on the Black Sea and build various types of cargo ships. Blueprints were drawn for Danube river improvements and war-wrecked railroad lines to Turkey were repaired.

Now the two big partners ask for their pay in blood. Diplomats in neutral capitals believe that such demands show that either Hitler is greatly in need of fresh manpower or he wants to give the impression that all of Europe is united against the Kremlin. Otherwise he would not trust Sofia for heretofore its soldiers have proved unreliable allies. When four divisions were sent to police dismembered Yugoslavia, over five per cent of the guards deserted and joined General Mihailovich's patriots fighting against the Nazis in the hills.

Even greater is the risk against the USSR because Bulgarians are Slavonic and their religion Greek Orthodox like the Russians. Communist cells flourish throughout the country. Only recently the Eloff government was obliged to cancel three political meetings in the provinces because the peasants were showing signs of open revolt against its pro-Axis policies. An explosion may be touched off if soldiers are ordered to fire upon their "Muscovite brothers."

BOOTY — New York importers are somewhat puzzled over the rumor from Washington that the amount of new wool may be limited to 25 per cent of fabric weight in order to allow production of enough warm clothing next year. Recently stunt styles were ballyhoo showing spindly-tight trousers and coats so short that they looked like waiters' jackets.

Shortages may be severe before the struggle ends but today such is not the case. Conditions in the first World War were quite different. Previous to our entry we had drained our shelves to supply the Allies. But this time we had on hand, January 1, more than 558

Japs Using Life-Saving Equipment From America

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 — P —

Life-saving equipment given to Japan by the United States after the earthquake and fire which devastated Japan in 1923 has been found in use in the landing barges in which Japanese attacked the west coast of Batan peninsula in the Philippines.

Reporting this today, the War Department said barges captured by the defending troops contained equipment marked "United States Army transport Merritt."

They were part of the relief supplies which, ironically, were loaded on the transport Merritt in Manila for shipment to Japan under the direction of Douglas MacArthur, then commander of the Philippine scouts brigade.

The text of the communique No. 102 of the war, based on reports received here up to 4 p. m. EWT today:

"I, Philippine theater: "Several of the specially built barges which the Japanese used in attempting landings on the west coast of Batan have been captured. In them were life-saving and other equipment marked "United States Army transport Merritt." This equipment was part of the relief supplies given to Japan by the United States after the disastrous earthquake and fire which devastated much of Japan in 1923. In this connection it is interesting to note that these supplies were loaded on the Army transport Merritt in Manila for shipment to Japan under the direction of Brigadier General

Douglas MacArthur, then commander of the Philippine scouts brigade.

"2. There is nothing to report from other areas."

Contributed Millions for Relief

The Red Cross said that the American people contributed $11,631,000 for relief for the Japanese earthquake victims. The quake Sept. 1, 1923, killed 144,720 persons and injured 102,409. Two million people were without shelter. The Red Cross sent food, lumber, and portable hospital buildings.

"The arrival of the American fleet, under the command of Admiral Anderson," the Red Cross said, "provided means of communication and furnished supplies and transportation in the evacuation of American and other foreigners and in many ways gave great assistance in the American relief effort. Later came the Army transports Merritt and Meggs from Manila, each carrying a cargo of relief supplies and nursing personnel."

The only diamond mine of any real importance in the United States is at Murphresboro, Ark.

January Steel Output Largest for That Month

NEW YORK, Feb. 12 — P — The American Iron and Steel Institute said that steel production for January was the largest for that month on record and the fourth largest for any month in the industry's history although less than that of December, 1941.

The industry, operating at 94.7 per cent of capacity in January, produced 7,129,351 net tons of open hearth, bessemer and electric furnace steel ingots and castings which was three per cent above the previous January record of 6,928,085 tons established last year.

The December, 1941, total was 7,163,999 tons.

Steel output averaged 1,608,334 tons a week in January as compared with 1,620,814 tons per week in December a year ago and 1,563,902 tons per week in January, 1941.

Nearly 3,000,000 defense workers have received vocational training in 1,200 public vocational and trade schools, 155 colleges and universities, and 10,000 public school shops.

Prison Farm Sends Potato Load To Ionia

One carload of Green Mountain potatoes grown at the Marquette prison farm was sent yesterday by Milton Francis, prison farm superintendent, to Ionia. They will be used at the state reformatory there, at Jackson prison and at other state institutions in Lower Michigan.

"We also raised Russet Rurals and Chippewas and are preparing to send six more carloads for use by state institutions in the Lower Peninsula," Francis said.

"It is our intention to increase our acreage from 58 to 100 before spring so that we may supply more potatoes for state use. At present we are raising from 12,000 to 14,000 bushels a season on 58 acres where formerly only 6,000 acres were raised."

The prison farm has been a member of the state 300-bushel club for three years. The test plot last year, five acres, produced an average of 417 bushels an acre.

It was tested by extension specialists from Michigan State college.

The farm produces potatoes for use at the Marquette prison also, Francis said.

Costs only 3¢ to make a delicious apple turnover the KARO way

These apple turnovers are deliciously different . . . And it's KARO that gives them such wonderful flavor! We're giving you a recipe for 8 turnovers — because everyone calls for "seconds" when you serve these turnovers!

APPLE TURNOVERS
Recipe pastry (for 8 squares) 3 apples
1/4 cup KARO (blue label)
1 teaspoon nutmeg 1 teaspoon cinnamon

Slice apples. Mix together KARO, cinnamon and nutmeg. Lay slices of apple on one-half of each square of dough. Sprinkle with KARO mixture. Fold other half of square to form triangle. Press edges together with a floured fork, and prick top to allow steam to escape. Bake in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 20 minutes. Makes 8 turnovers.

Foods prepared "the KARO way" supply extra food energy. KARO is rich in Dextrose, food-energy sugar

Whoops, Think If We All Have To Wear Slacks!

(By MANTHEI HOWE)

Heigho, the war is going to make a lot of folk eat crow. Herewith I offer myself as Exhibit A among those who are forced to eat hundreds and hundreds of words uttered once upon a time.

The past three or four weeks there have been a number of stories printed about this, that, or the other school board or school administrative officers being petitioned to permit high school girls to wear slacks.

Some school boards have recognized the fact that the wearing of slacks might be a real saving in the dress budget.

Is Sensible Reason

Girls, working in factories, are wearing slacks in the interest of safety, for flapping skirts are no little hazard when working around machinery. Girls or women engaged in defense industries which require them to do a bit of climbing or reaching have donned slacks.

Well, here's where I begin to gulp crow. I still think that most women do not look their best in slacks. Even the slim-hipped, flat-tanned girls lose something of their feminine identity when they don slacks, or any garb that approaches the look of trousers.

Women who are in the fair, fat and forty bracket in slacks are not subjects the artist would want to paint, unless he happens to be a cartoonist.

I still think that some of the plump-contoured women look like meal sacks, full to bursting and tied in the middle, when they wear slacks. Now that the tie rationing is in force, it may even be that some of the women will be riding bicycles and it will be a sight somewhat hard on the eyes to see the hefty women in slacks whizzing down the street, a rear view somewhat resembling a big pan of bread dough set to rise and overflowing the boundaries of the pan.

O. K., Let's Wear 'Em

But, despite my deep antipathy to slacks if the wearing of such garb will contribute one iota to the efficiency of the women engaged in defense work I am all for it.

If the substitution of slacks for the usual dresses worn by high school girls and even teachers will help the budget and make it possible for the wearers of slacks to buy a few more thrift stamps and defense bonds, more power to them. Certainly if silk or nylon stockings are going to be difficult to obtain this summer and expensive in price, slacks would solve that difficulty for the girls during a good part of the day.

And in the instance of high school girls, they might look better in slacks than running around barelegged because unfortunately the kind of ladies presiding at the birth of a lot of us didn't wish pretty legs on us. Rough as to texture, bulged, bowed, too fat or too thin... many feminine legs are not things of beauty and might just as well be covered up.

Anyhow, there is one consolation in this vogue for slacks. They will look better than would divided skirts or bloomers if the girls had decided to adopt such.

Might Be Benefit

There is just the possibility, too, that the girls and women who decide to wear slacks and try them on will be so horrified at the way the streamlined slacks show bulges where they shouldn't be, that the girls will go for exercise that will reduce the bulges and make the contours correspond more nearly to the bodily outlines the slacks require.

Every woman who wears an 18 size dress or larger will recall with a bitter clarity of memory the time she went down to buy a new dress and, stripped down to her slip, she caught a startling view of herself in the full length, all-revealing mirrors; and was so horrified at the spectacle of her bulging before and behind, that she went right home and began to bend and stretch and cut down on rich desserts.

One can even see in the increasing vogue for slacks an aid to making women take more kindly to sugar rationing. They will cut out the two lumps of sugar in tea or coffee, will use less sugar on breakfast foods and will eye askance the dessert that gives them unwanted calories that are so effective in putting on the poundage.

Certainly, if three or four women in a household invest in slacks and see themselves as others see them, they'll do a right-about-face on their food habits, and think of meals in terms of nutrition and not of eating whatever happens to appeal to their appetites.

They Like Skirts

Of course, skirts will not disappear from the landscapes. Girls and women will wear skirts evenings and during the hours when they aren't working. Some of them will even hold to the theory of wearing their skirts to work. For there is no denying that skirts are a somewhat kindly camouflage for the form not so divine. Moreover, some women like skirts, just as they like being women. They have no least desire to be men.

Ordinarily I thank my stars I'm a woman; infinitely prefer that to being a man, only in war time my attitude about that is slipping and shifting and changing just as it has about slacks, for it would be a deep satisfaction to be able to whang effectively at some of the forces now threatening America.

Since women cannot make such direct and effective contributions, I'm all for forwarding anything and everything they can do to help, and if wearing slacks is going to do the least tiny bit toward making our efforts more effective, I'm

Society-Club

Change In Meeting—Junior Light Brigade of the Suomi Synod church will not meet today and there will be no choir rehearsal today. Instead a Valentine party will be held at 2 Saturday afternoon.

Song Service—The choir of the Carlsberg Covenant Mission church will present a program of special music at the song service to be held at 7:30 Sunday night. The public is especially invited to attend.

Prize Winner—In giving the prize winners for the Victory V card party which the Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary held recently in the Federated Women's club, the publicity chairman credited Mrs. Louis Pinard with winning the prize in auction. Mrs. Alex Beaudry was the winner.

Writes Song—At the Lions "Buy a Bomber" dance which will be held tonight in the Northland the orchestra will play a song the words and music for which were written by a Marquette woman. It is a military march song, entitled, "I Like to Play in a U. S. Band" and the composer is Miss Helen Freiberg, 214 East Prospect street.

Men Serve Supper—The Luther League of the Finnish Lutheran church will hold a supper at 5:30 tonight in the social rooms of the church, West Bluff street. The meal will be served by the men of the society. All members planning to attend are reminded of the small charge to be made to defray the expenses of the meal.

Meeting Tonight—The Young People's society of the Bethel Baptist church will hold a meeting at 8 tonight in the church. The program will include a reading by Mrs. Emil Swanson, a vocal duet by Miss Nancy Omen and Miss Shirley Smyth, and a solo by Gunnard Rudness. Jack Holbrook will give a short talk. Following the meeting there will be a social hour when refreshments will be served.

Housewives Should Visit Orange Show

Housewives in this area will be interested in the "orange show" now being held at the Fruit Market on South Third street, a novel display of many kinds of California, Texas and Florida oranges intended to acquaint buyers with the various sizes, quality, grades and distinguishing characteristics.

More than 30 cases of oranges have been arranged along one side of the store, showing sharp contrasts in sizes and grades. There are 10 sizes of California navels, several sizes of Floridians and samples of the Texas and Texas Temple varieties.

all for it, even if there comes an edict ordering all women to wear slacks.

But if, and when, the day ever comes that I shall have to go to work all trimly beslacked, my ears will be red until I get used to effect of those trousered legs belonging to me. Wouldn't be surprised if I'd observe Lent and prepare for the slack era by eschewing candy, sugar in beverages, and walking and walking miles. It's a thought that might result in my ears being shell-pink instead of red.

Gross Proceeds Must Be Given To Organization

Often new notices are received of sales, benefits, entertainments and similar activities given as means of raising money for the American National Red Cross. It is suggested that presidents of various organizations contemplating such projects familiarize themselves with the policy of the organization.

The act of Congress approved January 5, 1905, which is the charter of the American Red Cross limits the use of Red Cross name and emblem to the Sanitary Corps of the Army and Navy and to the American Red Cross, and makes it unlawful for others to use the name or emblem for the purpose of trade or as an advertisement to induce the sale of any article whatsoever, or for any business or charitable purpose.

It is clearly not permissible to use the name or emblem of the Red Cross in trade for the advertisement or promotion of the sale of any article or service even though a part or all of the proceeds from such sales are to be contributed to the American Red Cross.

Can't Deduct Cost of Expenses
Benefits, entertainments and similar methods of raising funds shall not be undertaken on behalf of the American Red Cross except with the prior approval of the national organization, or the appropriate chapter. Consistent with the spirit of the law, it is not the policy of the RED CROSS to authorize benefits or entertainments in its behalf UNLESS THE ENTIRE GROSS PROCEEDS therefrom are to be contributed to the Red Cross.

The name or emblem of the Red Cross may not be used in the promotion or advertisement of benefits where a part or all of the expenses are to be deducted from the proceeds.

However, any one who gives a dance or a party and afterward decides to give part of the money made to the Red Cross can do so, and it will be gratefully received; only there cannot be prior announcement that such a dance or entertainment is to be given for Red Cross purposes.

Is Sensible Rule
This rule has been made as practical for the American Red Cross and for the public. For it removes any misunderstandings or criticisms as to the proportion of the receipts consumed in the expenses of such events.

As an illustration, there is to be a Red Cross benefit concert given by the Marquette Woman's chorus on Sunday, March 8, in the auditorium of the Northern Michigan College of Education. Every cent taken in from the ticket sale will be turned over to the Red Cross. If there are any expenses incidental to giving the concert, they will not be covered by proceeds from the concert, but will be met by a private individual or club defraying the expenses. That holds good for all programs advertised as benefits for the Red Cross.

This lengthy explanation is given to assure that the ruling is fully understood.

Dixie Deb Queens Cotton Crop

No place like ho-hum, yawns Camille Anderson, Memphis charmer, morning after her selection as 1942 Maid of Cotton. She'll be leaving for nation-wide junket as King Cotton's attractive ambassador, modeling cotton clothes appropriate for defense workers. Miss Anderson's father is plantation owner.

British War Relief Unit Holds Meeting In City Hall Saturday; Urges Large Attendance

Members of the Marquette unit of the British War Relief society and all other interested persons are urged to attend the meeting to be held, at 2 Saturday afternoon, in the city hall.

Realizing that the need for relief is more urgent now than ever, the Marquette unit plans to redouble its efforts, and is formulating plans for ways to do this effectively.

Is American Weapon

F. Cecil Baker, chairman of the administrative committee, says: "Today with the United States a full partner with Britain in the world-wide war against tyranny and international lawlessness, our aid to the defenders of Britain's vital ramparts is part and parcel of our own war effort. And as we Americans muster all the powers at our command to smite the common enemy wherever he rears his head, it is the stark truth that the stubborn resistance of the British people continues to be one of our most valuable American weapons. We must sustain their vigor and morale."

The society points out that during the past intensive bombings enormous volumes of clothing were destroyed as were private homes, stores, and warehouses.

Even without the bombings there would, by this time, have been a painful shortage of wearing apparel in Great Britain. For during the past two years, Britain's entire economy has been geared to wartime production, with priority given to guns, tanks, shells, planes.

Needs All Possible Aid
So with every available factory given over to wartime production, even without the tremendous shortage of apparel created by the bombings, Britain would need help in supplying civilian garments.

The society reminds that in the London suburb of Chislehurst, thousands of people make their homes in caves which were dug out of the chalk cliffs by miners many years ago. Says a bulletin from the society: "It is not undervaluing the need to say that the BWRs could double or triple its fund-raising and its clothing collection and still fail to overcome the tremendous deficit in simple every day necessities of life in Britain."

What would you say if—
You are being introduced to another person—
(a) "I'm pleased to meet you?"
(b) "How do you do?"

Answers
1. No.
2. No. She should say "John" or "my husband."
3. No.
4. Yes.
5. "Thank you." Or "Thank you; I hope I'll see you again soon."

Better "What Would You Do" solution—(b)

NATIONAL FORESTS
The national forest system of the United States began under President Benjamin Harrison, who set aside 1,250,000 acres in Wyoming. Celebrating its 50th anniversary in 1941, the system now includes 160 forests covering nearly one-tenth of the American land area.

Bits Of This And That Make Chitter-Chatter

Possibly you have heard folk, overwhelmed by a multiplicity of problems and worries, say childishly: "I wouldn't mind being a dog, then I wouldn't have worries and troubles. I wouldn't feel!"

Hmm... there is a dog in town that has troubles and is on occasions a deep indigo blue. His real master, the perfect person in his estimation, is Bob who has left town.

Said Bob has been away for some months, but yesterday noon the dog was in a downtown store with Bob's father. The animal was getting along well enough, chiseling a bit of sandwich now and then.

But, suddenly, some one said: "Bob" and the dog gave a sharp bark, looked around queringly, and then placing his head on a woman's lap, waiting to be patted and consoled, the dog stared at her mournfully.

Bay "Bob" at any time in that dog's hearing and he is immediately alert. Obviously he has been a dreadfully lonesome dog.

Lumberjack Songs

Many folk in town recall the days when lumbering was a great industry in this section, when the lumberjacks came tramping through the streets after the spring drive, shouting their songs, prepared to celebrate the end of the winter's work.

There are many folk who have heard the songs of the lumberjacks. Often, or rather usually, they were long drawn out ballads somewhat lugubrious in tone.

A recent announcement says that Professor Earl Clifton Beck, of the faculty of the Central Michigan College of Education, has compiled and edited a book which has been entitled "Songs of the Michigan Lumberjacks." The book has just been published.

There are 104 of the songs in the book, with a chapter on bunkhouse stories. One suspects that Professor Beck may have had to edit some of the stories somewhat carefully and with regretful ruthlessness.

The lumberjack stories and songs are reminders of a picturesque era, of men who had virtues greater than their vices, a hard-working, hard-playing, and sometimes hard-drinking crew.

Paul Bunyan yarns have been handed on by the burly lumberjacks of the American lumber camps, and for the sake of historical records, it is well to have as nearly complete collections as possible of the songs that were sung in the bunkhouse and when the men were at work.

About "Superman"

Parents who have been wondering whether the adventures of Superman form good literary food for their children will be interested in the following excerpts from the comment made by Dr. Lauretta Bender, child psychologist, who has had a wide experience in the psychiatric division of Bellevue hospital in New York.

She says: "Normal, well-adjusted children with active minds, given insufficient outlets or in whom natural drives for adventure are curbed, will demand satisfaction in the form of some excitement. Their desire for blood and thunder is a desire to solve the problems of the threat of blood and thunder against themselves or those they love, as well as the problem of their own impulses to retaliate and punish in like form. The comics may be said to offer the same type of mental catharsis to its readers that Aristotle claimed was an attribute of the drama. This effect of the comic book in normal children is comparable to the therapeutic effect in the emotionally disturbed child. Well-balanced children are not upset by even the more horrible scenes in the comics as long as the reason for the threat of torture is clear and the issues are well stated.

"If the child seems to react with some emotional or behavior disorder to reading the comic books, the reason predisposing him to the trigger action it supplies lies within the child and should be sought. It is evident from our case studies that whatever anxiety, aggression or confusion was attributable to the comic books could be traced farther back to the basic traumatic factors within the children's background. It is felt that even the more obviously emotionally unstable child should not be deprived of the possible benefits he will gain from reading comic books.

"Subject matter in the comics deals with fundamental problems presented in caricatured form. Aggression is dealt with in most of the stories, but its purpose as carried out by the hero is to prevent hostile and noxious aggression by others. Punishment is a constant factor, but it is justified punishment."

Finnish Church Plans Week-End Sales, Meetings

The northern group of the Marquette Finnish Evangelical Lutheran church of the Suomi Synod announces the following weekend program:

A baked goods sale will be held Saturday from 9 a. m. to noon, at the J. & H. electric company shop, 106 North Third street, where the real Finnish-style, homemade "Nisua", bread, rolls, cakes, and cookies may be purchased.

Legion Auxiliary Program Accents Defense Theme

Though there are even now many opportunities for women in volunteer defense work, these will doubtless increase as the programs begin to function and additional needs arise, Miss Adda Eldredge said in the talk she gave, Wednesday night, at the meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary, held in the Federated Women's club.

She gave a brief resume of civilian defense programs set up in Marquette and reminded that Red Cross projects afforded opportunity for women who could knit, sew, and make surgical dressings, pointing out that there was also opportunity for women to volunteer for office work and messenger service, and such workers should notify Mrs. W. P. Chamberlain.

The speaker stressed the contribution to defense that women could make by employing thrift in the management of their homes, by taking first aid courses, availing themselves of instruction in home nursing for which classes will be formed in the near future; by attending nutrition classes; and by participating in the work of salvage campaigns.

Women Aid Morale

Miss Eldredge placed special emphasis on the role of women in keeping up morale by their attitudes in the home and in the community, a role that will become increasingly important as civilians begin to feel the pinch of the many readjustments of living made necessary by the war.

Walter Toupin sang two solos, "Why Don't We Do This More Often?" and "We Did It Before and We Can Do It Again."

The Auxiliary endorsed their member, Mrs. Julia Flanigan, as candidate for the presidency of the twelfth district.

Mrs. Rose St. Onge and Mrs. Margaret Evon presided at the table at the social hour following the program. The decorations were arranged by Mrs. Jane Kelly and her committee. The centerpiece was a large and attractive valentine about which were grouped red candles. Red streamers running the length of the table and candles in red accented the valentine motif.

dining room in The Northland. A low broad bowl of red gladioli and white freesia formed the centerpiece.

Following dinner, cards were played, and the guests presented Miss Robertson with a Spode sugar and creamer.

Winter Queen Candidates Near Finale

ISHPEMING, Feb. 12—All persons who have not cast votes for Ishpeming's winter queen are reminded they have until 6 p. m. Saturday to support their favorite candidate.

Ballot boxes are at Maurice Johnson's and Fred Berg's sporting goods shop, Eman's shoe store, Creamland and Sundblad's. The list of queen candidates is displayed above each ballot box.

A committee of the Winter Sports club will count the ballots Saturday night and the queen will be crowned Friday evening, February 21.

Candidates and club members have sold Winter Sports club memberships and although the sale is smaller than the 1941 record, there should be an increase by Saturday night. Most of the girls have been campaigning vigorously the past week.

No preference of any candidate has to be made when a membership is purchased. A stub is attached to each membership card and this is to be torn off and dropped in the ballot box.

L'Anse

John Voakes, of Flint, is visiting his mother on the Bay Shore Drive. Mrs. Fred Dyer, of Sault Ste. Marie, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Whipple.

Peter Foss, of Lake Gogebic state park, has returned to his home after visiting his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Foucault.

William McGlue post, American Legion, is sponsoring a dancing party for auxiliary members in the Legion clubrooms Saturday night. Members may bring friends.

Circle No. 1, of the Women's society for Christian Service, of the Methodist church, met at the home of Mrs. M. E. Gipp Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Robert Sgerer was the assisting hostess.

A bi-monthly meeting of the L'Anse Camera club will be held Tuesday night in the club's darkroom at the high school. Darkroom materials will be available to members at cost.

At a recent meeting of funeral directors for Baraga, Ontonagon and Houghton counties, Harold Hansen, of L'Anse, was elected president of the district organization.

C. J. Sullivan, superintendent of the L'Anse township schools, and George Paquette, Norman D. McKindies, and Werner Mattson, of the board of education, are in Lansing attending a meeting of school officials.

Miss Molly O'Connor has announced that half-year auto plates can now be secured at the branch office in the court house. Stickers for the windshield, instead of half-year plates, will be used on commercial and farm vehicles.

Patrick Brennan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Brennan, was inducted recently into the naval aviation cadets at Marquette. The group of 25 will be known as the U. P. Wildcats squadron. He is a graduate of the L'Anse high school and Notre Dame university.

Registration Hours—The L'Anse draft office will be open Saturday from 8:30 a. m. to 7 p. m., and Sunday from 10 to 5 for the purpose of registering male residents between the ages of 20 and 45 who will not be able to call at the office on February 16, the day of registration. The office will be open February 16 from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m.

Red Cross Funds—The final report of the Red Cross war fund drive has been sent to the board of supervisors for audit, and to N. J. Martin, chairman of the Red Cross chapter. The surplus of $245, or 15 per cent of the amount raised, remains in the county treasury. The surplus over $1,700 will be retained in a war emergency fund under the jurisdiction of Mrs. F. F. Marshall, chairman.

Knew Tokle In Norway — Torger Tokle, who has won many medals in competition with other ski jumpers in this country during the last three years, and who will jump at the Iron Mountain meet March 1, was a neighbor of the Ivar Gransell family, of L'Anse, when they lived in the town of Løkkens-Verk near Trondheim, Norway. Tokle, the youngest of a family of 21, learned to ski early, but, according to Edward Gransell, he little dreamed of the fame that awaited him in the sports world. Edward and Torger were playmates together. Tokle has joined the Army and wishes to be sent to Norway with an American force to help drive the Nazis from his homeland. He has seven brothers and sisters in the hands of the Germans. One of the

State Keeping Large Liquor Stock on Hand

LANSING, Feb. 12—P—The state liquor control commission disclosed that it is keeping Michigan's drinking public supplied for six-week periods because of transportation uncertainties. Such a stock, the commission said, costs approximately $7,000,000. In the past, it was explained by Commissioner James D. Dotsch, a three weeks' supply was considered sufficient. Dotsch took exception to recent charges by Auditor General Vernon J. Brown in a summary of general fund revenues presented to the legislature that the liquor commission failed "to regularly transfer from its earnings to the general fund the amount estimated." Dotsch said the commission has paid $5,835,000 into the general fund last month, about $1,500,000 less than in the corresponding month of 1941, but had balanced the difference in the past week. "If they need more money from us," he asserted, "they should tell us about it and we would liquidate enough of our inventory to give it to them. But we are keeping our inventory high because this is a rising market, and we are saving money by doing it."

Registrants Cannot Enlist After Checkup

LANSING, Feb. 12—P—Draft registrants submitting to Army physical examinations are denied the right to enlist in any branch of the armed forces, except as flying cadets, under provisions of new selective service orders. The new orders, according to selective service officials, are designed to prevent upsets in filling induction quotas by enlistments of men about to be drafted. Col. E. M. Rosecrans, state selective service director, informed draft boards henceforth to advise registrants called for physical examinations that it will be too late to enlist if found physically fit by Army examiners.

School of Instruction For Registrars Tonight

ISHPEMING, Feb. 12—Registrars for the selective service enrollment, particularly chief registrars, are reminded of the instruction session to be held at 7:30 Friday evening in the council chambers of the city hall.

Advance registration is possible from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Saturday and from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. Sunday for the convenience of those who will be unable to register Monday. There will be a large corps on hand for the regular registration schedule Monday, February 16, when the hours will be 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. in the city council chambers. Industrial executives will assist in registering their workers at their places of employment.

Emphasis is placed on the fact that those already registered need not re-enroll. Confusion exists on this point, draft board members said today.

Police Make Survey Of Explosives

ISHPEMING, Feb. 12—City police, through Chief Nestor Eckloff, are making a survey of firearms, explosives and ammunition being sold in the city by wholesalers or retailers.

Blank forms given to all known dealers must be turned in to the state police, which organization requested the survey as part of the defense program.

Chief Eckloff said this morning he had reason to believe some food merchants are selling ammunition and he asked them to report voluntarily.

Chief Eckloff was asked to send in reports as he gets them and not hold them up until the survey is complete.

"While we can readily go to the better known places such as sporting goods shops and hardware stores," the chief said, "for this information, it is not possible for us to know which neighborhood shops and grocery stores have stocks of ammunition. Proprietors of these stores should give us the information voluntarily."

Before the war, the 4,300,000 passenger cars and 1,400,000 commercial motor vehicles in continental Europe required about 75,000,000,000 gallons of imported gasoline, in addition to quantities produced at home.

2 Ski Meets Arranged For Young Riders

ISHPEMING, Feb. 12.—The first junior ski tourney of the year will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Winter Sports area.

Saturday there will be a ski meet on Teal Lake hill, starting at 2, for boys 12 to 14 years of age. They will have a regulated tourney, the same as in past years, with starters, judges and scorers.

Starting at 2:30 Sunday afternoon, on the Baby Lake hill, more challenging of the two on the area, there will be a tournament for boys 15 to 17 and a senior class for riders over 17 years of age.

Riders may enter the tournament at Eman's Shoe store or the Winter Sports clubhouse. An unusually large entry list is expected because the juniors want to make up for lost time, having been denied tournaments for several weeks. The Winter Sports club refused to sponsor a meet last week, because the hills were not in good condition. Rather than risk injury to riders, the proposed meet was cancelled.

About 300 persons attended the opening toboggan party at the area last night.

Invaders Two Miles From Singapore City

ship was lying offshore under an ending bombing attack, sent out a dispatch timed 3:35 p. m. (4:45 a. m. Eastern war time) that the invaders were thrusting steadily forward toward the last British positions, although their casualties had been piling up from violent British overnight counter-assaults and powerful British artillery fire.

As to his own position, and inferentially that of other refugees trying to get out, McDaniel remarked:

"We were bombed incessantly until sundown yesterday and throughout today. We were dive-bombed half a dozen times, but we are still afloat and may get away tonight."

The Japanese claimed that only British "remnants" held on in the northwestern outskirts of Singapore city and that "final operations" had begun, but their radio broadcast admitted the battle was still to be won.

Strong as was the British defense, it was a defense of desperation and appeared to have its chief value in the fact that the invader was being delayed at much cost to himself.

Fragmentary information available here tonight indicated that the most urgent of all British resistance was centered on the reserves in the middle of the island.

The people of London felt a certain sad pride at the chant of the newspaper vendors—"We are still there, still there"—but there was evidence that glory in defeat would not soothe the public press or parliament, all angered as they had not been angered since the fiasco in Norway.

Parliamentary Revolt Possible
Some observers expressed a belief that Singapore's fall would set off a parliamentary revolt that would endanger not only the cabinet but—some said—Prime Minister Churchill himself.

Three critics of the government bolted the Liberal National party, which is represented in the Churchill administration, and it appeared that, led by former War Secretary Hore-Belisha, they would join Sir Stafford Cripps, the former ambassador to Moscow, in forming the strongest opposition that the prime minister has yet faced.

It was made known tonight that Prime Minister Churchill was expected to broadcast a survey of the war situation at 9 p. m. (4 p. m. E. W. T.) Sunday.

Many believed Churchill would attempt to explain why Singapore was falling and that he would outline plans for the future. Informal quarters agreed that it would take all of his oratorical gift to keep his cabinet intact and perhaps even to keep himself in office.

To Be Relayed To U. S.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Prime Minister Winston Churchill's broadcast review of the war, scheduled from England for Sunday afternoon, will be relayed in this country by the NBC, CBS and MBS networks starting at 4 o'clock EWT.

Japs Meet Stiff Resistance

TOKYO (From Japanese Broadcasts), Feb. 13.—(Friday)—P—The Japanese, after all but proclaiming the fall of Singapore two days ago, acknowledged today that the defenders of the big British base still were putting up a "fierce resistance" and disclosed that British warships were aiding the defense.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, in a dispatch "from a certain base," said that Japanese pilots had observed activity among some 30 ships in the neighborhood of the port of Singapore. Domei added that "this leads one to believe that last efforts are being made by the British forces to escape."

"Thus both British naval and merchant ships still were active in Singapore waters."

As this announcement was made it was disclosed that Emperor Hirohito had remained awake all of Wednesday night so that he might receive without delay the latest news from Singapore, whose fall he apparently expected momentarily.

Nazis Say City Captured
(While the Japanese, themselves, thus were still awaiting official announcement of Singapore's fall, the Axis radio elsewhere had reported celebrations in various parts of the world of the purported actual fall of the base.)

(The Berlin radio said that in Buenos Aires "the fall of Singapore was the great news of the day" Wednesday night; in Berlin itself the radio broadcast a special announcement, of the type hitherto reserved solely for German victories, "announcing the fall of Singapore;" the Rome radio said "great enthusiasm" had been displayed in Rome over the fact that the Japanese shortly after landing on Singapore island had "captured the entire fortress.")

Domei said that "immediately following the fall of Singapore island, Premier Djo is scheduled to appear" before the Japanese parliament and deliver a "momentous address," dwelling on the significance of the event and its effect on future Japanese war policy.

Grant Wood, Famed Mid-Western Artist, Dies

IOWA CITY, Ia., Feb. 12.—P—

Grant Wood, famed mid-western artist whose painting caused periodic nation-wide controversies, died here tonight.

Recognized as one of the greatest portraiters on canvas of the mid-western scene and the leader in what has been termed a new "regional" school of art, the Iowan would have been 50 years old tomorrow.

Attending physicians said death resulted from cancer of the liver. Wood entered the hospital November 24, and underwent a major operation December 19.

He had been professor of fine arts at the University of Iowa since June, 1941, and had been on the school's staff since 1934.

3 Warships Hit in Sea Battle; Report

immediately were sent out to attack together with Swordfish aircraft of the fleet air arm, strongly escorted by RAF fighters.

"Attacks by both Swordfish and coastal aircraft were pressed close to home in the face of intense fire from all vessels and opposition by enemy fighters."

"Reports indicate the Swordfish scored at least one hit on one of the enemy heavy ships and one of the motor torpedo boats also claimed a possible hit, but owing to the intense barrage and the heavy smoke screen put up by the enemy it was impossible to see the results of the attack."

Dover Guns in Attack
"Six Swordfish aircraft are missing, but some of the crews have been saved. There were no casualties in the coastal craft."

"During this time the Dover defenses opened fire at extreme range which was replied to by enemy shore batteries on the French coast."

"The enemy force was repeatedly attacked by aircraft of the RAF, strongly escorted by fighters. The results were difficult to see owing to low clouds, but according to preliminary reports coastal command Beauforts claimed three hits with torpedoes and the bomber command crews said that each of the main enemy units was hit by bombs."

"The attacks were pressed home with the greatest determination in the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire and strong fighter opposition which resulted in the loss of 20 of our bombers (including five aircraft of the coastal command) and 16 fighters. "Fifteen enemy fighters were destroyed by our fighter escort and at least three more by the bombers themselves."

Destroyers Join Fighting

"Destroyers under the command of Captain C. T. M. Pizey, R. N., in H. M. S. Campbell also proceeded to intercept and attack the enemy."

"At 3:34 p. m. our destroyers sighted the enemy and went into the attack in the face of very heavy enemy aircraft and also heavy gunfire from all the enemy's surface ships."

"Our destroyers took advantage of a rain squall to press the attacks home. Owing to low visibility the heavy fire to which the destroyers were subjected, it was not possible to be certain of the result of the attack, but there is reason to believe that at least one torpedo hit was obtained."

"Casualties in our destroyers were not heavy."

"When last sighted, the enemy had become separated and were making for ports in the Helgoland light."

At Brest For Almost Year

"Further reports from our forces are awaited."

In the last few days there have been persistent reports that German warships were preparing to slip from their berths at Brest. They have been pinned there nearly 12 months by attack after attack by the RAF.

In all more than 110 air attacks have been made on the ships, during which some of Britain's most powerful armor piercing bombs were dropped on and near them from a great height. It is known that on many occasions there have been near misses.

Last July the Scharnhorst slipped from Brest to La Pallice, but she was bombed there and returned to Brest.

The Germans once tried to fool the RAF with a new form of camouflage. Giant cobwebs of netting were hung over the ships, but British reconnaissance airmen spotted the ruse and bombed the ships again.

Nightmare for Airmen

Daring torpedo attacks have been made by bomber aircraft on the lair. Brest, owing to its baselike construction, was a bomber pilot's nightmare. It was virtually impossible to hit the ships while they were in the great harbor.

One aircraft tried to solve the problem by hopping in low over the dock wall and loosing a torpedo, but the airmen paid for the bold stroke with their lives.

Liquidation of Bank Assets To Be Completed

LANSING, Feb. 12.—P—Maurice Eveland, state banking commissioner, today predicted liquidation would be completed this year in "a majority" of the 137 Michigan banks and trust companies still carrying assets impounded in the bank holiday nine years ago.

Since February 14, 1933, when all banks were closed, $441,488,795 of the $481,229,914 impounded has been returned to depositors, averaging $91.74 for each $100 impounded, Eveland said. Of the 436 state banks and trust companies closed by the holiday order, 207 reopened immediately without loss to depositors of their $254,295,905 in assets, while the 167 banks and three trust companies allowed to reorganize have returned $141,374,703 of their $170,125,496 impounded deposits.

The state banking department, Eveland said, in speeding liquidation of assets still impounded, would impose rigid economies and consolidate receiverships where possible to reduce "overhead" costs.

British Rout Invaders In Lower Burma

English northland, got at close quarters with the invaders and charged with the bayonet.

"The enemy fled, throwing away their weapons and suffering considerable casualties," the communiqué said.

It was believed that detachments of the invading force still occupied abandoned Martaban, but the British so invested the area that enemy aircraft were brought up to pound them in the environs of the town.

Aerial Defenders Get Results

The RAF's Blenheim bombers and the Hurricane and Tomahawk fighters flown by both the British and the American volunteer group again were blasting at the enemy's forward positions along the whole front, both morning and evening.

These planes have been in the fight from the start—aerial artillery and cavalry of the Burma defense which now is beginning to show its first signs of success.

Moreover, the combined RAF and AVG defense of Rangoon, itself, had so discouraged the Japanese that they made no attempt to raid the city last night.

Tennis courts during the Middle Ages were either excavated or walled-in areas surrounding castles. They were filled with water in time of war but during peace time the moats were drained and the dry beds were used as tennis courts.

WORLD WAR I 1917

The United States Government restricted the use of sugar in World War I. The response of The Coca-Cola Company was expressed in the newspaper advertisement reproduced at the left.

Again, Sugar enlists for Victory

WORLD WAR II 1942

History repeats itself in World War II. Sugar has been called to war again. Our government has restricted the use of sugar for all. Naturally, that includes Coca-Cola.

You'll continue to find Coca-Cola around the corner from anywhere, though we regret that you won't be able to enjoy the pause that refreshes as often as you might like. Our volume has been reduced. But this we pledge: the character of Coca-Cola will be unimpaired. The American people can continue to trust its quality.

As in 1917, we count upon the patience of dealers everywhere. Conserving sugar is another step toward Victory. Whatever any of us may have, or may not have, Victory we must have above all else!

Friendship Of Japs Spurned By Manilans

By Clark Lee

WITH GENERAL MACARTHUR ON BATAAN PENINSULA, Feb. 11—(Delayed)—The distant boom of cannon and the trickle of battle news from the jungle telegraph have bolstered the morale of the people in occupied Manila, authentic news reaching the U. S. fighting forces disclose.

The Japanese, on the other hand, by the brutality of their now uniformed sentries and the widespread hunger they have brought to the city have failed completely to win the friendship of Manila's Filipinos in nearly a month and a half of occupation.

Manilans, who long ago were told by the Japanese that General MacArthur's forces had been annihilated on Bataan, now are circulating the cheerful rumor that "MacArthur will have dinner in a Manila hotel before the end of the month."

Wounded brought into city

Many Japanese wounded now are being brought into Manila from the fighting on Bataan, and the bodies of Japanese military dead are being cremated within the city.

The Japanese soldiery, even some of the highest officers, appear terrified at the prospect of air raids, and run for shelter every time they believe American planes may be approaching.

One Japanese officer is reliably quoted as saying Japan has no hope for eventual victory and that "all Japanese forces sent to the Philippines must die here."

At least 10 and possibly 20 Filipinos have been reported executed at old Fort Santiago, formerly MacArthur's headquarters, for opposing the Japanese.

Their bodies were thrown into Manila bay.

This kind of brutality precedes executions.

Filipinos formerly employed by the U. S. Army or Navy are tied hatless to telephone poles on the main boulevards of Manila for three days and nights, kicked and slapped by passing Japanese sentries and given little food.

Courts Officially Mistreated

Then if the Japanese decide they assisted Americans they are put to death.

Two high officials of the supreme court, Judge Arsenio Lozon and Judge Gregorio Narvasa were thus trussed publicly for several hours before they were released with an unctuous "Sorry, mistake."

The suspects are denounced by Manila's Quislings—politically Sakdalistas and Ganaps—who point out the victims to sentries, who they are tied up themselves; hence they make accusations at random.

One Filipino who told the Japanese where they could find 5,000 gallons of hidden gasoline was first rewarded, then later shot for failing to uncover additional supplies.

There have been few anti-Japanese demonstrations because of the fears of reprisals, but hatred of the invaders and their puppets, such as Artemio Ricarte, long known on these islands as "the viper," and Emilio Aguinaldo, military leader of the 1899 insurrection, is understood to be widespread.

Food, Money Scarce

Food and money are very scarce, almost the only supplies coming from looters who raided warehouses and stores after the U. S. Army evacuated the city.

Rice when available costs 25 cents a package where it used to be five cents. A single match costs 15 centavos.

Business and industrial life is dead. The Filipinos are ignoring Japanese appeals to go back to work.

Jap bazaars are the only stores open. Trolleys and one bus line

Maki-Kalmi

NEGAUNEE, Feb. 12—Miss Vivian Maki, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Maki, of Eben Junction, and Rudolph Kalmi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Toivo Kalmi, of Negaunee, were married Saturday by the Rev. John E. Hattula in a ceremony in the parsonage of the Finnish Evangelical Lutheran church.

The couple was attended by Miss Laimi Rantanen, of Covington, and Vilho Saari, of Negaunee. They will reside in Negaunee.

New Car Registrations Near All-Time High

DETROIT, Feb. 12—(AP)—New passenger car registrations in the United States during 1941 reached a total of 3,731,166 units, a figure surpassed only in 1929 by 3,880,206 registrations. It was reported today by R. L. Polk & Company, statistical agency.

In addition, 640,697 new truck registrations were reported for the past year. The previous highest in this classification was in 1937 when 618,249 new units were registered.

For the month of December, new passenger car registrations totaled 174,188 units, a decrease of 47.9 per cent compared with December, 1940. New truck registrations for that month were 41,006 units, a decrease of 13.05 per cent compared with December, 1940.

run, but only half a dozen private cars are allowed to operate.

Americans interned in the city are allowed the freedom of the campus of Santos Tomas university at certain hours and may receive a little fruit once every four days from their former servants and employes.

Soldiers Use Bayonets

Their treatment, however, is pretty much up to the sentries who sometimes forbid male internees to shave for a certain number of days.

Americans over 50 and women with young children are allowed to live at home, but they lack food and money.

A majority of the Japanese soldiers now on duty in the city are quite young. They now have abandoned their uniforms and wear makeshift civilian outfits with a uniform helmet and usually carry only a bayonet.

They use these bayonets... Recently a 7-year-old Filipino boy was run through for walking behind instead of in front of sentry. The child's father then was bayoneted when he tried to recover the body.

forces in the southwest Pacific, would concentrate on the defense of Java and Soerabaja.

Dutch Welcome Appointment

His forces are greatly outnumbered.

Admiral Helfrich's appointment—in succession to the American Admiral Thomas C. Hart—was widely welcomed by the Dutch people, although the change came at a grave time.

The Dutch and some among their allies had thought that Netherlands officers should have been given greater responsibility when the original Pacific command was formed, because of their knowledge of this area and the ability they have shown.

'We Will Go On Fighting'

BATAVIA, Feb. 13—(Friday)—Gravely disturbed by the imminent British collapse at Singapore and reports that there was doubt in Washington circles that Allied aid could reach Dutch Java in time to withstand the Japanese invasion tide, a Netherlands semi-official spokesman declared grimly today:

"We will go on fighting and damn the consequences."

"The fall of Singapore does not alter the determination of the N. E. I. to fight on alone," this spokesman told the Aneta news agency "even if the Allies were to abandon them as a base and continue operations from Australia."

This comment was elicited by a report that such a withdrawal is being talked about in the United States, and well-informed circles here said such a withdrawal "would be very unwise because it would give Japan a cheap victory, a gate to the Indian ocean and all the raw materials she needs to push onward."

"Japan doesn't have a ghost of a chance that the N. E. I. will lay down their arms despite the increasingly dangerous position. We will go on fighting and damn the consequences."

Flier Pictures Herself As Counter-Espionage Agent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—(AP)—Laura Ingalls, speed flier accused of being an unregistered Nazi agent, testified today that in her contacts with the German embassy she pictured herself as "a Mata Hari, and international spy" working to scotch subversive influences in the United States.

At times she testified that her aim was to ingratiate herself with the Germans so she could learn and expose their secrets, while at others she said she had been incensed at lend-lease aid to Britain and at "British propaganda" in this country.

Miss Ingalls is accused of failing to register with the State department as an agent of the Reich.

Records show that there are nearly 5,000,000 cars in the United States which are 10 years old or older.

A nominal sum will be charged and a program and lunch will follow the game hour.

Navy Scores Great Victory Over Enemy

the procedure of the attacking forces, the fact that some American planes were shot down indicated that the enemy did resist fiercely with as much power as he could bring to bear on such short notice.

At Toroa, a U. S. cruiser was hit by a small bomb. Whether there were casualties was not stated. Four U. S. scout bombers were lost in the attacks on Roi and Kawajalein islands and one was lost at Toroa. On February 1 the Navy had reported a total of 11 U. S. planes had failed to return from the attack. The discrepancy in that report and in the one issued tonight as to the cost of the raid to the fleet forces was not immediately clarified.

Jap airplanes destroyed in the Gilbert islands were two large seaplanes, 15 fighter planes, 11 scout bombers and 10 additional bombers.

In addition to those which the Navy described as having been destroyed in the main actions in the Gilbert islands, the official announcement also disclosed that at Makin Island in the Marshall group American forces destroyed two enemy patrol planes and badly damaged one auxiliary vessel while a third enemy patrol plane was destroyed at sea.

Six Islands Attacked

The raids were conducted against Makin, former British island which the Japanese occupied the day they attacked Pearl Harbor, December 7, and the following islands in the Gilbert group which Japan originally obtained under mandate after the World War:

Jaluit, Toroa, Kwajalein, Roi (in the Kwajalein atoll) and Taroa in the Maloelap atoll.

In summarizing destruction to shore establishments the Navy said that at Roi two hangars, ammunition dumps, fuel storage, all stores and warehouses and the radio building were laid waste.

At Toroa the entire shore installation was turned into wreckage. It had consisted of two hangars, oil and gas storage, shops and store houses, two anti-aircraft batteries and five intermediate coastal guns.

At Taroa, the Navy said, two hangars, all fuel tanks and industrial buildings were destroyed. Seven fighter planes and five scout bombers in the air plus

First Lady To Resign From OCD

ITHACA, N. Y., Feb. 12—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt indicated today she would step down shortly as assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense and added she saw "no reason for staying after my job is completed."

Declaring at a press conference she always intended to resign when organization of the OCD is finished, she said she expected it to be completed "very soon."

The First Lady defended appointment of her friends, Actor Melvyn Douglas and Dancer Mayris Chaney to OCD positions, both in the press meeting and when she spoke later on Cornell university's farm and home week program.

Completing Organization

"I doubt," Mrs. Roosevelt told reporters, "if the people who have made attacks on Melvyn Douglas would hesitate to ask him to take part in a benefit performance for charity."

She added it would be hard to match the generosity of the people who have attacked Douglas and Miss Chaney with that of the people of the arts.

Mrs. Roosevelt declared the Office of Civilian Defense has been "gradually feeling its way" and is finally getting its organization completed in Washington but not in regional offices.

James M. Landis, new OCD chief, disclosed in Washington yesterday the President's wife is working on a thorough reorganization of the community and volunteer participation division. He said he hoped she would remain as assistant OCD director until she finished the reorganization.

'Attacked If You Approve It'

In response to questions about Miss Chaney's appointment, Mrs. Roosevelt commented:

"When someone appears with a program and she is one you know, you are attacked if you approve it. But if the program came from someone you did not know, you would be attacked because you appointed someone you know nothing about."

Discussing the OCD's dancing courses as part of the physical fitness program, she said many persons would rather participate in dancing classes than setting up exercises.

She said some people think "there is something immoral about dancing," but pointed out dancing classes had been started by the physical fitness section because people asked for them.

Legion Club Dance Opens '42 Carnival

MUNISING, Feb. 12—Munising's annual winter carnival will get underway at 10 Friday night when a dance is held in the Legion County club. On that occasion Queen Ella Mae Cox will be introduced by Mayor John W. Hannah.

Dance music will be played by Joe Parker's college band, of Marquette. A highlight of the program will be a floor show which will include two vocal numbers, "Rosa O'Day" and the "Marine Hymn," by members of the Queen's court, Patty Ann Johnson, Vivian LaCombe, Betty LaBonte, Catherine Dougherty and Iris Luell; a dance by Pat Gattis and Bob Bauman and accordion selections by Edward Bartels and Frank Wenzel.

"Fun Police" Saturday

The carnival itself will begin Saturday morning when "fun police" will begin looking for "law-breakers" (folks who are not wearing winter sports clothes). Other events scheduled for the day are a dog derby at 1 on Elm avenue, snowshoe races at the city playgrounds at 1:45, followed by the annual American Legion-Lions club softball game at 2; a winter sports parade at 4 p. m. and a "kangaroo court" about 5 p. m. at the corner of Elm and Munising avenues. At 7:30 the carnival ice revue and queen's coronation will be held at the city ice rink in the bay shore park. Queens from other Upper Peninsula cities have been invited to take part in the crowning of Queen Ella Mae Cox, and skating groups from several Peninsula cities will appear in the ice revue.

The seventh annual ski jumping tournament of the Munising Ski club will conclude the weekend. It is scheduled for 2 p. m. Sunday.

Ice Carnival Program
