

Transport Left Blazing In Raid On Jap Outpost

New Toehold Big Threat To Port Moresby

GENERAL MAC ARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, July 24 (Friday)—P—Allied bombers made five attacks Thursday on new Japanese installations near Buna, Papua, and left a 5,000-ton Japanese transport burning, Gen. MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

Buildings and barges at Gona mission, the settlement on the northern coast of New Guinea where the Japanese succeeded in disembarking between 1,500 and 2,500 troops Wednesday, were raided by Allied dive-bombers, a communique said.

This is the first time the use of dive-bombers against the Japanese has been mentioned in this area.

All the bombs fell in the target area.

Fighters also attacked the Gona toehold where an anti-aircraft battery was silenced.

The transport, apparently loaded with oil or gasoline, was left burning after being hit amidship, the communique said.

Difficult To Exploit

Won at heavy cost, the new Japanese incursion will be difficult to exploit because virtually impenetrable jungle-clad mountains, in which Owen Stanley range rises to 13,000 feet, separate the invaders from the U. S. and Australian troops on New Guinea's south shore. No vehicle roads exist and only a few footpaths which are extremely tough going are carved through the lush tropical growth.

The landing broke a four-month lull in the southwest Pacific following Japan's naval defeat in the Coral sea and might easily be the start of intense new campaigning.

Prime Minister John Curtin said the Japanese had been working steadily to make new incursions. Other enemy bases are 165 and 190 miles northwest of Buna at Lee and Salamaua—both frequent targets of Allied planes based at Port Moresby.

U. S. Troops Garrisoned There

The steaming, mosquito-plagued Port Moresby base is garrisoned by U. S. troops—including the 11th Airborne and some of Australia's best fighters. American fliers have borne the brunt of four months of touch-and-go air fighting.

By land it will be difficult for the Allies to get at the new Japanese outpost as for the enemy to attack Port Moresby. The Japanese at Lee and Salamaua have been unable to penetrate very far inland because of the jungle, wild beasts and wild tribes, some of which are cannibal.

Allied Patrols Attack Vessels Off French Coast

LONDON, July 23—P—Two effective attacks on superior enemy naval forces aided by German coastal batteries on the French coast have been made by units of the royal Netherlands navy, a Polish navy unit and a number of light British coastal craft, it was reported tonight.

One patrol of light coastal craft, including Netherlands and Polish naval craft, engaged a force of enemy minesweepers off the French coast, heading towards Calais.

After a brief fight in which the minesweepers were assisted by shore batteries, the Germans broke off and headed for safety, the reports said.

Another Allied patrol, under British command and including a Netherlands unit, attacked a large enemy tanker screened by armed trawler and a large number of torpedo boats.

A Netherlands boat scored a torpedo hit on the tanker and emerged from the fray with only two small holes in her hull.

Counsel Agree to Joint Custody in Baby Case

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., July 23—P—Custody of 3-year-old Patricia Hope, born to an unwed younger sister by an older sister's husband, may be determined next Monday by Circuit Judge James E. Spier when he reopens the case after two weeks' adjournment.

The baby, by counsel agreement, will live with her mother, Mrs. Alice Juanita Horvath, 20, in Cleveland for the six-month period starting August 1.

During that period, Carmel Hope, 37, who testified in court that he was the father of the baby, will be allowed a one-hour monthly visit.

For the second six-month period the custody will be reversed.

The baby has been cared for since birth by Mrs. Catherine Hope, 30, Mrs. Horvath, who married since the child was born, sought to regain its custody by habeas corpus action.

British Forces Consolidate Gains in Egypt

By Edward Kennedy

CAIRO, Egypt, July 23—P—The army of the Nile carried the fight to the Axis forces along the entire 40-mile Alamein desert front today for the second straight day, but its main attention was devoted to consolidating positions won in the opening phase of the new battle.

The British, seeking to force the issue, went into the third night of the attack without a major decision in sight.

An early assessment of British gains showed tank and infantry advances and consolidation in the center, at the western end of Ruweisat ridge and about Deir el Shein, and some progress by imperial infantry in both the northern and southern sectors.

Use New Tanks, Guns

Obviously the British had many new tanks and guns. The enemy forces encountered at most points were predominantly German, indicating diminished Italian participation in the main battle cauldron about 80 miles west of Alexandria. Some prisoners were taken.

(Axis communique said the British attacks in the main battle cauldron were repelled and counter-attacks launched, with the capture of 800 to 1,000 imperial prisoners and destruction of 130 tanks.)

Allied light bombers and fighter-bombers were late in starting their operations yesterday because of dust storms churned up by the bombing of enemy positions in the light of flares and the half-moon the night before.

The dust subsided about three hours after dawn, however, and the bombers attacked relentlessly throughout the rest of the day.

Nineteen direct hits and many near misses were scored on armored cars, vehicles and gun positions. Bombers Pound Axis Bases

The RAF lost 11 planes. The Germans had some dive-bombers in the air, but in general their aerial activity remained on a small scale.

While the main aerial activity was in the battle sector, U. S. Army heavy bombers joined the RAF in pounding Tobruk, Gazala, Salum, Fuka and Matruh, all Axis air supply bases.

The Middle Eastern news service estimated that RAF fighter bombers had destroyed 500 Axis vehicles and damaged more than 1,500 since the Battle of Egypt began, and said fierce attacks on Axis landing grounds in the last four days had smashed more than 100 grounded planes.

Naval Ship Construction Ahead of Goal

WASHINGTON, July 23—P—A 360 per cent increase in naval ship construction over a year ago and development of an air arm "which will provide the United States with the strongest offensive force in naval history" were reported tonight by the House naval committee.

In a progress summation of the Navy's construction program, the committee said that American industry was sending vessels down the ways far sooner than anticipated and that its ingenuity was turning out "improved models of all types" of planes.

The report declared that the Midway island Coral sea and other "demonstrated that aviation constitutes the determining factor in such conflicts."

3,230 Ships Being Built

It also said that the Navy, "with full realization of the efficiency of multi-engine land planes for patrols in certain areas," was using them for anti-submarine warfare "with outstanding success," and added that the first of those squadrons "accounted for not less than five Axis submarines."

The report said that 3,230 naval ships, in the classifications of combatant and auxiliary ships and patrol and mine craft, were building as of June 30, 1942, as compared with 637 a year ago.

In a breakdown of the scheduled program for ship completion during the fiscal year of 1941, the committee said that 60 combatant vessels were actually completed as compared with 48 expected.

Ten auxiliaries were completed as compared with nine predicted, and 143 patrol craft as compared with 133. Only construction of mine and district craft fell short of the goal, with 280 completed as compared with a schedule of 394.

Building Time Reduced

So sharp has been the speed-up in ship construction, that the time for completing a battleship has been cut from the pre-emergency average of 42 months to 36 months, aircraft carriers from 45 months to 17.3 months, heavy cruisers from 36.4 to 22.7, light cruisers, 38.8 to 22.3, destroyers, 27.2 to 11.6, and submarines, 21.2 to 11.5.

The report presented also a table giving the number of aircraft of all types added to the service during the past five years. The figures:

1939	.....	723
1940	.....	328
1941	.....	2,067
1942	.....	4,895

Enforce Post-War Peace By International Agency: Hull

WASHINGTON, July 23—(P)—Secretary of State Hull unfolded a blueprint tonight of some of the measures to be taken for "a better world when the war is won, including an international agency to keep the peace "by force, if necessary," and "adjustment of national armaments."

At the same time he warned the remaining neutrals that their professions of neutrality were "absurd and suicidal" in the face of the world-wide conflict and called upon "all peoples who prize liberty" to fight for it as their duty.

Hull's outline of post-war projects was one of the most specific yet made by a responsible official of the United Nations and amplified the policies previously advanced by Vice-President Wallace and Undersecretary Sumner Welles, among others.

It was delivered in an address broadcast over all national networks and for short-wave to the world. The speech had been awaited since President Roosevelt heralded it at his Tuesday press conference.

Create International Agency

Hull advocated the widely discussed "period of transition" during the war during which the United Nations cooperatively must "supplement and make more effective the action of countries individually in re-establishing public order, in providing swift relief, in meeting the manifold problems of readjustment."

"Beyond these," he continued, "there will lie before all countries the great constructive task of building human freedom and Christian morality on firmer and broader foundations than ever before. This task, too, will of necessity call for both national and international action."

To prevent war, Hull said it was "plain that some international agency must be created which can—by force, if necessary—keep the peace among nations in the future."

"There must be international cooperative action," he went on, "to set up the mechanisms which can thus insure peace. This must include eventual adjustment of national armaments in such a manner that the rule of law cannot be successfully challenged and that the burden of armaments may be reduced to a minimum."

Surveillance Necessary

"It is plain that one of the institutions which must be established and be given vitality is an international court of justice. It is equally clear that, in the process of re-establishing international order, the United Nations must exercise surveillance over aggressor nations until such time as the latter demonstrate their willingness and ability

Nazis Crack Defenses Northeast Of Rostov; Fierce Battle Raging

Nazis Step Up Air Raids On Britain

LONDON, July 24—(Friday)—P—The heaviest German air attack on Britain in weeks broke over three sections of England early today, with Nazi raiders scattering bombs and flares and defying intense anti-aircraft fire.

There were no immediate indications that the flares were concentrating on any one town.

RAF Attacks Occupied Areas

The raiders hit at the north and east Midlands, eastern England and East Anglia, sending down showers of flares and following them with high explosives.

The Germans flew over after another day of RAF attacks on occupied areas.

British Spitfires flew fast and low over the German-occupied day of such raiding, spattering machine-gun fire and pouring bombs on enemy troops and gun positions and road, rail and canal traffic.

Although the air ministry said the operations were not on a large scale, they were described as intensive, and stiff opposition from the defenders was implied in British announcement of the loss of seven of the swift fighters.

Duisberg Raid Successful

The Lannion airdrome in Brittany was raided, and lock gates and machinery of a canal in Holland used by the Germans as a supply artery were stabbed by cannon and machine-gun fire.

Reconnaissance photographs showed the RAF attack on Duisberg Tuesday was one of the most successful in the Ruhr.

The pictures disclosed that large fires had been set in many parts of the industrial area of the western section of the Ruhr with Duisberg as the center.

2 1-2 Billion Boost in Tax Bill Sought

By Jack Bell

WASHINGTON, July 23—P—Secretary Morgenthau asked the Senate finance committee today to increase the house-approved $271,000,000 tax bill by another $2,500,000,000—and was immediately subjected to a blast of Republican criticism that the Treasury's war borrowing program would "destroy any hope of controlling inflation."

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) made this charge after the Treasury chief had outlined proposed increases in individual, corporation and other taxes and had asked for the closing of such "loopholes" in the law as that which permits some state and municipal bonds to go untaxed by the Federal Government.

Questioning Morgenthau and Undersecretary Daniel W. Bell, Taft said he was convinced that the Treasury would have to sell more than $300,000,000 in bonds to commercial banks in order to finance a projected $77,000,000,000 war expenditure in the present fiscal year.

Bank Borrowing Necessary

"Any program that leaves the sale of $300,000,000 in bonds to commercial banks destroys any hope of controlling inflation," the Ohio Senator declared.

Taft did not offer an alternative to bank borrowing during the hearing, but he told reporters later he believed the answer lay in some form of compulsory bond sales or savings.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich) had opened the discussion by asking

23 Employees of DSR Fired as Result of Strike

DETROIT, July 23—P—Twenty-three employees of the Detroit department of street railways were officially discharged late today after they had been convicted by a board of review of one or more charges growing out of the partial disruption of the city transportation system last Friday.

They were in the first group of 26 of the wildcat strikers to face the board of review, set up by the DSR commission. One operator was found innocent of the charges and the cases of two were adjourned.

The cases of about 270 other strikers remain to be heard.

The strike, which was called by a group of employees despite warnings against it by union leaders, prevented large numbers of industrial workers from reaching their jobs in war plants.

Troops Probe Reports Of Parachute Landings

BALTIMORE, July 23—P—A company of state guardsmen returned tonight to the Ellicott City, Md., area where there were rumors of parachute landings despite an announcement by the third service command headquarters that investigation of the report had "proven negative."

Four companies of Maryland guardsmen, state police and minute men were thrown into a search of the farm area near Ellicott City, about 10 miles southwest of here, earlier in the day after a report of possible parachute landings today in Maryland and Virginia.

More U. S. Troops Reach British Isles

LONDON, July 23—P—The government declined flatly today to let commons in on whatever plans the tenor of its statement coupled with an announcement that Britain was digging deep into her remaining manpower aroused speculation as to whether a decision has been reached on an invasion of Europe to help Russia.

Further, it was officially disclosed that another United States convoy, one of the largest ever to cross the Atlantic, had brought many more U. S. soldiers and airmen to augment the Allied divisions now in the British Isles.

Second Front Major Topic

The thousands of newly-arrived soldiers included American pilots, ground crews, negro troops and other forces, a large corps of nurses and quantities of equipment. The convoy had a safe crossing and its personnel is scattered now over the British Isles in numerous training billets.

The second front was the major politico-military topic in all British circles from fish-and-chips shops to the highest quarters.

It was clear to people and government that their fate is bound up with that of Russia.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Britain's lord privy seal and commons spokesman for Prime Minister Churchill, gave the members of commons to understand the government would not tip its hand.

"Whatever intentions the government has in mind, it would be quite impossible for them to announce them either publicly or in secret session," Sir Stafford declared.

Call Up 18-Year-Olds

"In a matter of such vital importance for the safety of those engaged, it would not be right of the government to entrust the secret even to 615 people"—the house membership.

To bolster the armies and arms factories for whatever test the preliminary Russian situation might force, the government summoned all men born in the first half of 1924 and in 1894.

The 18-year-olds will register for the fighting services on August 15, the oldest will sign Saturday for employment in war plants.

Heart Attack Takes Life Of Edwin Miller

A heart attack caused the death, yesterday of Dr. Edwin Miller, professor of mathematics in the University of Michigan and son of Mrs. A. E. Miller, 339 East Ridge street.

The body of Dr. Miller, who was 37 years old, was found late yesterday afternoon in his automobile between Ann Arbor and Detroit.

No further details concerning his death were contained in the message received here.

The body will be brought to Marquette for interment.

Soldiers' Vote Measure Approved by House

WASHINGTON, July 23—(P)—Over the persistent but still objections of a small group of southern members, the House passed and sent to the Senate tonight legislation to give absent soldiers a chance to vote in the forthcoming elections.

The controversial measure was finally approved by a standing vote of 134 to 19.

The measure would provide in time of war, notwithstanding any provision of state law relating to elections, including registration requirements, those in the armed services otherwise qualified should be entitled to vote for electors of President, Vice-President and Senators and House members.

Reds Repulse Onslaughts On Stalingrad

By Eddy Gilmore

MOSCOW, July 24—(Friday)—P—With large forces of Axis tanks and mechanized infantry beating at the defenses of Rostov, the Russians reported today that their hard-pressed armies had fallen back on one sector of that critical front after repulsing seven attacks throughout yesterday.

Meanwhile, the Russians said, their forces defending the road to Stalingrad, on the Volga, repulsed strong enemy onslaughts yesterday, while in the Voronezh area at the northern end of the blazing front the Russian successes continued.

The Novochevassk area of the Rostov battle, some 20 miles northeast of the city proper, saw perhaps the most intense fighting of the day.

Seven Attacks Repulsed

"In the Novochevassk area our troops fought defensive battles against large forces of enemy tanks and mechanized infantry," the midnight communique said.

"One of our units during the day repulsed seven enemy attacks and killed over 1,000 German officers and men. When our troops were threatened with encirclement they retreated to new positions upon the order of the command."

(This was the second straight day that the Russians had acknowledged a crack in the defenses around Novochevassk. Just how far the Red forces retreated was not indicated.)

Heavy pressure on the forces standing guard over Stalingrad continued.

The Russians declared the Germans were throwing in reserves in the fighting around Voronezh "and are trying with all their might to regain this lost position."

The Soviet report said several scores of tanks were disabled and about 1,000 men killed in one sector of the Voronezh front while in another sector one unit repulsed three counter-attacks and captured a fortified position.

Rostov Being Encircled

The Russians in the Voronezh area are hitting the Germans fiercely in an effort to relieve the pressure on the armies to the south.

"The most intense fighting was on the lefty north bank of the Don at Novochevassk, 20 miles northeast of Rostov, but other German columns were converging on the delta point of Voroshilovgrad and from Taganrog, 40 miles west of the Sea of Azov.

A similar three-headed threat increased by the hour the peril of Stalingrad, the great Volga city of tanks, munitions and refineries.

One German spearhead was about 100 miles west of Stalingrad along the railway leading to Likhaya. A second was in the southern valley of the Don near Tsimlyansk, which is about midway between Rostov and Stalingrad. Yet a third vanguard was striking along the Don valley southeast of Boguchar. There was nothing to confirm German reports of yesterday that the lower Don was breached on a broad front.

At the northern extremity of the 300-mile Don front the Russians made further bloody gains around Voronezh, killing about 9,000 Germans. Front dispatches said the narrow terrain was so littered with German and Rumanian dead that the Russians walked over corpses as they pressed forward.

The stoutness of the Russian position at Voronezh constituted a potential threat to the German flank and might be a birthplace of a Russian counter-attack against the extended 1,000-mile invasion force overrunning the rich farm and industrial basin of the Don.

Thunderous artillery duels were fought on the Kalinin front northwest of Moscow and before besieged Leningrad, but the rest of the 2,000 mile front was relatively quiet.

Wickard Announces Plan To Relieve Meat Shortage

Army Board Will Be Here August 3-7

Hundreds of selective service registrants from every county in the Upper Peninsula will be examined by officers of the U. S. Army medical examining board at St. Luke's hospital August 3-7, inclusive, and those who pass will be inducted immediately into the Army.

Same Examining Board

The board which will be here in August will be the same unit which visited Marquette in March, April and May. Upper Peninsula registrants were required to go to Traverse City in June and July, but the examination and induction center has been returned to this city.

Officers of the board are Capt. L. B. Killinger, chief executive officer; Capt. S. A. Moore, executive officer; and Capt. C. J. Sprunk, chief medical officer.

The number of men to be examined here in August is greater than in any previous month. For this reason it will be necessary to find additional quarters for them, Ben H. DeVoe, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said yesterday.

Residents of the city who wish to rent rooms to selectees on the nights of August 3, 4, 5 and 6 are asked to telephone the Chamber of Commerce office, number 411," he said.

Inmate Leaps To Death At State Prison

JACKSON, Mich., July 23—P—Without a sound, William Tomczik crawled from his hiding place in the water tower at the state prison of southern Michigan at 5 a. m. today and dropped to his death, ending the bizarre case which began when he murdered Andrew Faust, 65-year-old operating engineer, in the prison power house late yesterday.

Tomczik's leap, after carefully blindfolding himself, came even as prison guards, under the direction of Lieut. Howard Freeland, completed preparations to dislodge him from his refuge where he fled after the slaying.

Tomczik was sentenced from Detroit in 1940 to life imprisonment after his conviction for the murder of his employer, a woman junk yard operator.

Other inmates who watched the killing of Faust said Tomczik in a sudden frenzy attacked the aged man with a hatchet and a long knife. The knife, along with his watch, was dropped from the tower before Tomczik, himself, let go.

After the killing, Tomczik fled from the power plant and climbed the almost perpendicular ladders to the water tower, which, together with the nature of the construction of the steps to the tower, was able to prevent any attack by the guards. With dusk last night, Freeland decided to await daylight before making further efforts to capture him.

Then, just at dawn, Tomczik crawled out of the window and dropped. An arm was severed when it caught on a guy wire during the 150-foot fall from the tower.

Death was instantaneous, physicians said.

Industrial Employment Shows 5 Per Cent Gain

LANSING, July 23—P—Industrial employment in Michigan rose in June, the state department of labor and industry reported today, with the largest boost in the heavy-goods industries as munitions plants stepped up production.

The department said employment in the transportation, machinery and equipment group increased almost five per cent, coming within 18 per cent of June of 1941. Payrolls rose 7.4 per cent in all industries over the previous year.

The American naval base at Guantanamo, southeastern extremity of Cuba, was rented by treaty in 1903.

"Everything happens to me!" Those words or something to that effect probably went through L. C. Aschom's mind when he was informed all day Wednesday and ALL day Thursday that the display window lights at his store, Woolworth's were on during the test blackout—of all times!

There's a story behind the mishap, which clears up the matter considerably, but any mention of those lights will still leave Mr. Aschom gnashing his teeth, for the pesky Woolworth bulbs shone on blackout night with all the glitter and shimmering glory of opening night at Roxy's.

ton street." (There were a couple of other display lights on, but Aschom is the only one with a plausible excuse.)

Yeah! Doubly Sure! Aschom was in the store at 9 p. m. Tuesday for the express purpose of setting the time switch so the window lights would be out during the blackout. Just to make doubly sure, he set the switch for 9:30 instead of 10.

Well, as luck would have it, the darn switch didn't work and L. C. wasn't there to put things right because he was covering his district to see that residential lights were out.

"The irony of it all," L. C. mused yesterday, "Everything happens to me!"

State Named Guardian For Hospital Inmates

LANSING, July 23—P—The state revenue department reported today its move to obtain guardianship of inmates newly-admitted to state hospitals under terms of a 1941 amendment to the hospital laws is meeting with success.

Clarence W. Lock, deputy revenue commissioner, said some probate judges, who must act on applications for the appointment of guardians, described the 1941 act as contrary to the probate code, but that none had refused to appoint the state guardian and that only a few were delaying action.

Guardianship rights are not being sought over inmates committed prior to January 1, Lock said, but applications covering about 1,100 admitted to hospitals since that date will be filed. He said the amendment was designed to protect the state by increasing the chances of collecting for the cost of public care given mental and epileptic inmates.

Scrap Drive Leaders To Meet Tonight

Leaders will learn of the urgent need for more salvage material for the war program and will be instructed in methods of helping to fulfill that need at a general meeting of the enlarged county salvage committee in the city hall commission chambers this evening, beginning at 7:30.

"There is more work ahead for all of us in the program of salvaging rubber, metal, household fats and other items," Wilbur J. Weber, county salvage chairman, said yesterday. "This is an important meeting and every member should be present."

"Our work is not completed when we wind up one particular campaign," he emphasized. "This is war. It is a continuous effort for our men at the front, and it must be a continuous effort for all of us on the home front. It is important that members of the salvage committee be intelligently informed on the requirements of this sustained campaign so that it will reach the maximum point of efficiency."

Defense Leaders Invited
Committee members have been supplied by Weber with lists of co-workers on the various committees and on the general salvage group. The lists include names, addresses and telephone numbers. Any member not having transportation to the meeting this evening is instructed to telephone the co-member living closest to him and procure a ride.

"Six million more tons of scrap material are needed this year than were needed last year," Weber said.

In addition to the members of the committee, others invited to the session are Arthur F. Jacques, H. E. Patrick and Louis W. Biezer. City and county civilian defense leaders yesterday praised Weber for the work he is doing in organizing the county salvage campaign.

Open Discussion
The county civilian defense speakers' bureau, WPA salvage unit, Northern Michigan College of Education and other groups will be represented. In addition to workers from Marquette, Ishpeming and Negaunee, there will be several from Big Bay, Gwinn and Republic. Weber will speak on "Why an Intensified Salvage Campaign?" and Al Fontaine, Marquette chairman, will speak on "Salvage Information Please!" An open discussion also will be held.

Sold Drugs Illegally
NEWBERRY, July 23 — Harry Bellack, Newberry merchant charged with selling drugs without a license, changed his plea to guilty after originally pleading innocent and was sentenced to pay a fine of $30 and costs of $3.35 or serve 30 days in the Luce county jail. Arrested on a warrant signed by J. Cook, an inspector of the state pharmacy board, Bellack said he was not aware of any violation and chose to procure the advice of an attorney. The inspector visited the Bellack store July 14 and purchased a bottle of milk of magnesia, a bottle of mineral oil and a box of boric acid. The goods were sold by Mrs. Bellack as Mr. Bellack was out of town, said Cook. During the arraignment the inspector said that he had visited the Bellack store periodically during the past eight years. He said he repeatedly warned Bellack against selling certain drug items displayed on shelves. "When a man won't listen to you year after year, the only thing you can do is arrest him," Inspector Cook told Bellack.

New Conservation District
SAULT STE. MARIE, July 23 — Chippewa and Mackinac counties Tuesday achieved the status of a conservation district to be known as District 7 in the Conservation Department, it was announced by Francis P. Furlong, of Newberry, district supervisor from whose territory the new district was established. The conservation supervisor of district 7 will be John Angulum, native of Trout Lake, who has been assistant to Mr. Furlong at Newberry. Mr. Angulum entered the conservation officers' school at Sault Ste. Marie in 1936 as a conservation officer. In 1937 he was transferred to Iron River and in 1939 to Crystal Falls as assistant supervisor. In 1940 he went to Newberry. Serving with Mr. Angulum will be the following conservation officers: John Speck, Sault Ste. Marie; Joe Hill, Pickford; Roosevelt Haaken, DeTour; Ray Walker, St. Ignace; Irving Ladd, Trout Lake; Frank Nelson, Brimley, Alex McLean, Engadine. Mr. Angulum's headquarters will be at Sault Ste. Marie. Clare Farwell, former supervisor of the Sault district resigned from the department May 1 and is now residing at Trout Lake.

Stack Wrecked For Scrap
MANISTIQUE, July 23 — Scrap iron, between 75 and 100 tons of it, came crashing to the ground here yesterday morning when the Isackson Bros., Manistique scrap dealers, dynamited the old Newberry Lumber and Charcoal company stack. It was the first step in sending the vital scrap metal contained in the stack on to the factories which need it so badly.

Veteran Railroad Man Dies
ESCANABA, July 23 — Marshall J. Forest, 62, of 809 Stephenson avenue, resident of Escanaba 60 years, died Wednesday at St. Francis hospital, where he had been a patient since last Friday. He had been in ill health for a year. Mr. Forest was born in Montreal, Canada, Dec. 2, 1879, and entered the employ of the C. & N. W. railway in 1900 as a switchman. He retired on pension in January, 1940, after 40 years with the company.

The current crop corn of Argentina is estimated at 362 million bushels.

Destruction of tires or tubes or other rubber product, except by permit, is illegal in Canada.

FORD AND CARVER CONFER — Henry Ford (right) and Dr. George Washington Carver, Negro scientist, got together at Detroit in Ford's foods laboratory and discussed the potentialities of the soil, but denied they had any intention of teaming up in an effort to solve the rubber situation.

County Over Its Budget By $2,567

For the first time since the start of the current fiscal year, Marquette county expenditures are over the budget. The June report of the county's financial condition, submitted this week to the board of supervisors, shows an excess expenditure of $2,567.54.

Expenses for the period from September, 1941, to July 1, 1942, aggregated $213,817.57, compared with a budget allowance of $211,250.03. The unexpended balance for the remaining two months is $36,142.49.

Frank L. Denny, county accountant and purchasing agent, said the costs of running the county last month were increased because of the unusually long June term of circuit court, greater cost of apprehension of prisoners and the fact that the county's expenses in connection with state institutions and public charges actually are figured on an 11-month basis to date, although only 10 months of the fiscal year have passed.

Welfare Account Over
Past reports showed the county on the credit side each since September, 1941, except last month. Regular county expenses were well within the budget, being below the allotted figure by $5,854.09, but the welfare-relief account showed a deficit of $8,421.63 to make the total deficit $2,567.54.

Regular expenditures were $95,294.25, compared with a budget allowance of $101,148.34. Welfare-relief expenses were $118,523.32, against an allowance of $110,101.69. Expenditures exclusive of welfare-relief were well within the budget largely because of the showing of the general county expense account. General expenses totaled $11,718.06, compared with a budget allowance of $16,928.10. This is $5,208.04 under the budget and constitutes the bulk of the under-budget figure of $5,854.09 for regular expenses.

Comparison Of Accounts
Accounts over the budget were: Judiciary, $1,276.43; public records, $226.09; welfare and relief, $8,421.63.

Actual expenditures and total allowances for all accounts for the 10-month period follow:	Expenses	Budgeted
Judiciary	$1,276.09	$20,419.66
Legislative	12,671.55	13,500.73
Finance	6,019.53	6,462.34

Draft Will Affect Men In War Plants

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 23 — Brigadier Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national director of selective service, warned today that even war industries will lose men to the draft "and if they don't begin to make the necessary arrangements to replace them gradually, they are in for a rude awakening."

Gen. Hershey, speaking here before members of the International Baby Chick association, predicted that 300,000 men now in war industries will be replaced by women. "Young single men in the war industries were deferred in order to give their employers time to train replacements," he said. "If plant managers aren't now taking advantage of this opportunity, they will find themselves losing essential war workers in large numbers before they can be spared without interfering with production."

Millions Will Be Fighting
The selective service director asserted that "millions" of men would be fighting for the United States in the present war, "and that means millions must be selected and inducted."

Likening draft board officials to umpires, "who must call them as they see them," the general said said "dependency seems to be flourishing now in places where it never did before." He asserted claims for deferment on grounds of dependency would be checked more closely in the future.

Speaking earlier in the day, R. W. Blackburn, secretary of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said his organization demanded "that labor organizations refrain from attempts to organize farm people."

He repeated a statement adopted by the Federation recommending that Congress "make the anti-trust laws applicable to and enforceable with respect to organized labor."

Don't Lower Educational Standards, Elliott Says

LANSING, July 23 — Alertness that educational standards will be lowered during wartime was urged on the Michigan Congress of parents and teachers today by Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, state superintendent of public instruction.

Dr. Elliott told 200 women attending a leadership training program that children of a "lot of war workers, migrants and residents in isolated areas are sliding by without sufficient schooling."

Declaring a democracy depended on widespread literacy, the speaker pointed out 10 per cent of the first 2,000,000 men drafted for military service in the United States were found to be illiterate.

Lieut. Col. Owen J. Cleary, state air raid warden chief, suggested parents and teachers not stimulate hatred toward enemies but an "unswerving love of country which is just as potent in winning a war."

Extend Use of Oil Wells, Producers Asked

LANSING, July 23 — Proposals that Michigan make two oil wells grow where one now stands have been presented to the state conservation commission.

P. J. Hoffmaster, state supervisor of wells, said Michigan producers will be asked at a hearing here August 4 to study plans to obtain new production without additional steel by tapping two or more oil formations through a single well. The suggestion came from Federal officials.

The hearing also will consider the Federal decision to increase Michigan oil allowables to 66,800

Ben Knauss To Speak At Dairy Meet

Ben Knauss, of Marquette, president of the Upper Peninsula Dairy Manufacturers' association, will take part in the advertising discussion at a meeting of milk plant operators and dairy farmers of barrels daily, instead of 64,800 as at present.

Houghton, Baraga and Ontonagon counties in South Range next Tuesday afternoon.

They will meet to consider participation in the American Dairy association's nationwide campaign of advertising dairy products.

Bert Obenhoff, of the Obenhoff Ice Cream company, of Calumet, is chairman of the committee on arrangements. William Cargo, Houghton county agricultural agent, is his assistant.

Dairy manufacturing plants expected to be represented include: Houghton county—Bridgeman-Russell company, Hancock; Obenhoff Ice Cream company, Calumet; Copper County Cheese Cooperative, Dollar Bay; Stella Cheese company, Baltic.

Ontonagon county—Ewen Farmers Produce company, Ewen; Ontonagon Valley Co-Op Creamery, Bruce's Crossing; Stella Cheese company, Mass; Superior Dairy company, Ontonagon.

Baraga county—Pelkie Co-Op Society, Inc., Pelkie; Watton-Covington Dairy, Watton.

Many farmers from the three counties are expected to attend this meeting.

The Board Is Frank

THOSE who want a frank presentation of bad news of the war have what they want from the shipping administration, which reports shipping losses for the week of July 12 at record figures.

These figures are not broken down, but it is a reasonable assumption that the greater part of the losses occurred in the waters of the two American continents. Wherever they occurred, it is frankly admitted that the tonnage lost greatly exceeded the rate of new construction.

The American yards must be, however, the principal dependence for making good the losses. But even if they were doing much better than they are doing their product could not make good, on the shipping board's statement, losses at the prevailing rate. The problem, therefore, is primarily one of defense against submarine attacks.

This may be one of the considerations that has led the President to appoint Admiral Leahy, late ambassador to France, his chief of staff. One of his principal functions, it may be assumed, will be advice to the President relating to measures for more effectively combating the submarines.

The success that has attended their depredations makes clear that long before the outbreak of the war with this country the Nazis had formulated a well organized campaign against shipping in American waters, and were ready to press the button the moment the time for it came.

The larger purpose was to bring about what has occurred, coincidence of a crippling rate of losses with the climatic effort to break Russian resistance. The submarine was to lessen the danger that the British and Americans would be able to create a second front at a critical hour.

It is a purpose that, even if all other dispositions for such an undertaking had been made, would have been effectively achieved. The best the shipping board is able to report is that "no essential military cargoes have been left on piers because of lack of ships."

If the Nazis were ready for submarine warfare to be carried into American waters the Navy was not ready to meet it. It was not sufficiently provided with the essential craft. There is no evidence that it anticipated the attack. It did not ask appropriation for provision of craft against the possible danger.

The Navy has presumably done all it could to meet the menace. But all it could do has been, and continues to be, far from sufficient. It is the unhappy prospect that considerable time has still to elapse before the rate of sinkings will be reduced even to the level of production of new tonnage.

If the situation in Russia is ominous it is no more ominous than the one in shipping.

American Losses

Losses in dead in the American forces since the outbreak of the war are reported at 4,801, those wounded at 3,218, and 36,124 are missing. The figures are comprehensive of men in all branches of the service. All but a small part of them are losses by the Army. They occurred principally in the fighting in the Philippines, and the missing are accounted for principally by the men surrendered on the Bataan peninsula and at Corregidor.

Little is, unfortunately, known about the manner in which the Japanese are caring for their prisoners. Some harrowing stories have been told. But the parents and kin of the men who are presumably prisoners should discount these stories. They are one of the inevitable by-products of war. They are usually shown to have been greatly exaggerated. Until the contrary is shown, it may be assumed that the American prisoners are being humanely treated, are fed as well as the Japanese soldiers and that their health is looked after. Their kin will be, at least, much easier in mind if they believe these things are so.

With the exception of the Russian and Chinese battlefields losses of life in the present war have been negligible compared with those in 1914-18. The Nazis overran the Low Countries and France with such rapidity that they had achieved all their goals before slaughter on the battlefields approached the loss of even a single week a quarter of a century ago.

What is in store for the British and the Americans depends on the course of the war. But losses for them will be relatively small up to the time they undertake to carry the war to the Nazis on the continent. Their proportions will then depend on the extent to which they have demolished defense points and decimated enemy troops by attack in the air with overwhelming force.

New York Politics

In an obvious effort to undermine Attorney General Bennett as a candidate for the Democratic nomination as governor of New York state, the American Labor party has announced that if he should be chosen it will put a third ticket in the field. As the American Labor party votes were the votes that enabled Governor Lehman to defeat Mr. Dewey in the last election, it is obvious that if Bennett were nominated and it supported a ticket of its own making Mr. Dewey would be elected.

As, if Senator Mead were nominated by the Democrats, the American Labor party would fall in behind him, those who urge his selection have been given a powerful lever with which to pry loose delegates Mr. Farley has believed were safely secured up for Mr. Bennett. While the President is taking no open part, it is no secret that he prefers Mead to Bennett. His aides in New York are doing all in their power to bring about Mead's election.

The situation is not shaping up as well as it might for the New York Democrats. If they nominate Bennett they will lose the votes of many members of the American Labor party. They are as unfriendly to Mr. Dewey as they are to Mr. Bennett, and would not support him. But they might decline to vote for either candidate, which for the Democrats would be about as bad. If, on the other hand, pressure inspired by the President brought about the nomination of Mead a considerable segment of the party would be in a resentful frame of mind. It is doubtful that it would come through for Mead.

On the Republican side things are in better order. Mr. Willkie, for reasons best known to himself, sought to build a fire under Mr. Dewey, but without success. He was not willing to become a candidate, and there was none other who might head off Dewey. He will be nominated unanimously. The conditions in the parties seem to assure that he will have a much more united party behind him than will take a stand behind the Democratic nominee.

If the President had kept hands off there would be no doubt that Bennett would be nominated. While the President has not come into the open, he has made his views sufficiently known to make the opposition to Bennett's selection formidable enough to make, despite the impressive array of delegates that have declared for him, his nomination doubtful.

At least as far as New York state is concerned the President is able to take time enough off from his duties as Commander-in-Chief to play politics as usual, with 1944 as well as 1942 in mind.

Contemporary Opinion

"One-Job Corps." Lieut. Col. Harold A. Furlong, state defense administrator, has served notice that air raid wardens have all they can attend to with their present duties. They want no others heaped upon them.

The immediate cause of Furlong's dictum is reported to have been an attempt on the part of the state safety commission secretary, Maxwell Halsey, to enlist the services of the wardens to put over in various cities a share-the-ride program. Other agencies are also said to have indicated that they would like to use the wardens to promote various projects.

The air raid wardens present a ready made organization of some 75,000 members, trained to respond at an instant's notice to an emergency call and manifestly willing to make the sacrifices that implies. It is neither fair nor particularly wise to burden them with other duties. For one, their services as air raid wardens might be urgently needed at just that time they were busy carrying out other duties. That they have signified their willingness to assume their present important functions should not be accepted as an invitation to impose upon them.

After all, an air raid warden is but one individual in his block. Others, without any special assignments, ought to be called upon to perform such jobs as organizing share-the-ride programs. There are thousands of people in Grand Rapids who are willing and able to take on such functions. It would, of course, take a little time to organize them into a working unit, just as it took many hours to build up the wardens' organization.

Furlong's attitude is wholly understandable. Should the wardens be used to promote the share-the-ride project, almost inevitably they would be called upon for other similar purposes. Let's ask some of the other people to do their part—it's also their war.—Grand Rapids Press.

Post-War Army Training

Costly tardiness in war preparation is urged as a reason for revising America's military system and insuring that no future international crisis shall lack the decision of this country's resources. Aided by the Army general staff, Rep. James W. Wadsworth, of New York, is preparing a bill to institute compulsory military training after the war.

The proposal is in line with plans for post-war construction that recently have received wide publicity. Assuming that victory will be won by the United Nations, it is contended that world conditions will require maintenance of a military force to police the danger zones and prevent recalcitrant nations from starting trouble all over again as soon as they can renew their preparations.

The law authorizing the draft for the present Army provides that all draftees must be returned to civilian status not later than six months from the close of the war. This has been the traditional attitude of the American people, but experience of two World wars proves that it is costly and dangerous to be caught unprepared.

Those contending for the compulsory training system say that it is the most efficient and least expensive way of insuring national preparedness at all times and that it will furnish young manhood a physical training and disciplinary improvement that will be one of the greatest assets of the nation.

It is not too soon to introduce such a plan. Required by the public is more likely to be receptive to the proposal than it would be in the slump of weariness that is sure to follow a prolonged war effort. Times have changed and old systems must give place to new.—Detroit News.

Thirty Years Ago

(July 24, 1912)

Marquette The huckleberry trains for Sand River will begin running on the South Shore next Monday morning. The trains will leave Marquette and returning will leave Sand River at 5:10 p. m. The round trip fare will be 25 cents. The berries are now ripening fast and quantities are already coming into the city.

Joseph Baraby, of Negaunee, candidate for the office of county treasurer, was a business visitor in Marquette. Miss Sylvia Shanks, of Chicago, who has been visiting for a week with her sister, Miss Dorothy Shanks, 418 High street, has returned home.

Miss Clara Gueff left for Green Bay, Wis., to resume her studies at St. Mary's. The day noted 23 unexpected cases of typhoid in Marquette at the present time and reports of recoveries are coming in every day. None of these cases are dangerous.

Isbepening The Keely Brewing company, represented here by Patrick Healy, lost its delivery horse in a fire in the barn at the rear of the Flannigan property on Division street last night. The barn was so badly damaged that it will be torn down. From all appearance the fire was of incendiary origin, as it was started inside.

James C. Wood, a former Isbepening attorney who left here several years ago for Marquette and who at present is practicing at the law office of Schoolcraft county, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for state senator from the Thirty-first senatorial district.

A daughter has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Will St. John. Miss Marie Harv entertained several young girl friends at a birthday party at her parents' home.

Percy Quayle, who has been working for the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company in Gwin in for several years, has moved his family back to Isbepening, having recently accepted a position with the Marquette County Gas & Electric company. Mr. Quayle worked in the Cleveland-Cliffs electrical department on the Swaney range.

Negaunee An exciting runaway which might have had serious results caused a commotion in the downtown district at the noon hour. Dr. Sheldon's horse, driven by his driver, became unmanageable while approaching the corner of Silver and Iron streets and in attempting to pass the Negaunee Bottling works wagon it collided with it, tipping it over and spilling the seat, driver and load of soft drinks.

The Bottling Works horse became excited and started on a dash for the end of the street, but was checked by onlookers. Captain Richard Roberts and daughter, Caroline, went to Little Lake to spend a few days visiting Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Smith, who are camping there.

Miss Leonore Stierle, of Marquette, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. H. E. Woods, Iron street.

Persons living on Lincoln street, as well as several on Main street, are complaining that shocks of the blasts from the city quarries are shaking their houses and doing damage to their plaster and foundations. The blasts seem to be heavier than previously, but Superintendent Hansen says that very small charges are being used.

Our Achilles' Heel

The Japs' hold on the tail end of the 1200-mile Aleutian Island chain is stronger and more dangerous than had been imagined, and getting the Japs out of Kiska, Attu and Agatu is going to be tougher than had been expected. That is the conclusion to be drawn from Keith Wheeler's highly informative dispatch on the grim game of blindman's bluff being played in the almost continuous shroud of fog, snow and rain in what Navy men call the weather factory of the Northern hemisphere.

Wheeler says the Japs are moving into the Aleutian waters with as heavy a concentration of warships, transports and planes as they have assembled anywhere save Midway—and that was an 80-ship armada. That the Japs are equipping their bases and doing a fair job of defending them despite their losses from our plane and submarine attacks, is evidenced by Wheeler's statement. "As usual, the Japs had their guns trained on the cloud breaks and five Catalinas came away as full of holes as shirts back from the ship's laundry."

If the Japs can make enough use of the bad weather to set up some well camouflaged air bases, or even underground airbases, they may be very hard to blast out.

Wheeler, attached to the United States fleet and the first accredited correspondent to reach Alaska, has done a fine service in calling attention to the fact that the Japs are not just on a weekend party. His story follows the statement made by Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Portland Oregonian, that the people should know the truth about the situation in Alaska. Said Hoyt: "If the Japs complete installations and start severe bombing of the Pacific Coast, the country in general will be ill prepared for such a catastrophe."

Twenty years ago the late Brig.-Gen. William Mitchell called Alaska "the Achilles' heel of American defense." Various military writers have pointed out that the Aleutian stepping stones constitute a menace to whichever country allows the other to make use of them. Now the Japs are using them, and they have shown by the conquest of the East Indian archipelago that they know how to use stepping stones.

As matters now stand, the Japs' Aleutian hold not only enables them to outflank Midway, but also the Russian sea aid air base of Petropavlovsk, in Kamchatka, which is less than 700 miles from Attu. Not so long ago, some military experts asserted that Russia undoubtedly would fight before she would allow the Japs to set up this new menace to Siberia.

The picture can be painted darker with statements such as that of Maj. Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson in the May issue of Harper's: "Alaska is the ideal point on the American continent for the basing of a knockout blow to the United States. It is highly probable that the Russian will endeavor to seize it even before attacking Siberia."

The Midway and Coral Sea victories were heart warming, but this Aleutian situation is slightly chilling, to say the least. The Japs are not there on some minor operation or some face-saving move. They are there to await their chance to hit at us and at Russia.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Quotations

It seems the Russians are animated by a sort of mystic fervor.—Das Schwarze Korps, Nazi elite guard paper.

There is a tremendous concentration of material and masses of troops in England not being put to immediate use. The troops are practically standing on each other's shoulders.—Joseph Curran, president, CIO National Maritime union.

Machines don't suffer; machines don't bleed; machines don't die. You, your sons, your brothers, your pals do that. Take pride in every machine you build and remember, you're building the circle of steel that protects all we hold dear.—Lieut.-Gen. Breton B. Somervell, commanding general, U. S. Services and Supply.

The Vicious Spiral

The Associated Press quotes an informed official as forecasting a possible move by the President to compel agreement on a "coordinated" wage policy and thus to restore the purchasing power of the War Labor board's decision last week in the Little Steel case to believe such a policy, long needed, at last had been fixed. But the returns were not all in. It develops the WLB's decision and policy were laid down totally without reference to either the Office of Price Administration or the War Manpower Commission, both of which have their own ideas on the subject.

The decision granting a 15 per cent increase to Little Steel workers purposely was to restore their purchasing power to the level of January, 1941. Between that time and May, 1942, the WLB asserted, the cost of living had risen 15 per cent. The increase in steel wages was intended exactly to offset wages to prices, the OPA now undertakes to predict. The addition to national purchasing power, say OPA officials, will amount to "several billion dollars," or enough in their estimation to crack the existing price ceiling wide open.

Though a result would follow should have appeared probable to the WLB and perhaps was, for the team was a cult member. Some arrangement was made for use of the name. "The girls used to like those black whiskers. I was mighty jonesome when I had to shave 'em off. But it wouldn't do to wear whiskers and wait on table, I guess."

Since it was plain that the young man (he's 35 now) is of Italian parentage, I asked him where he got that English name. "Oh, I changed my name because I have a brother, and I didn't want people to be getting us confused," he said.

Now, that is a reason! A good many trees have been planted along both sides of Sixth avenue, about 42d street, but the place doesn't look a bit like it used to.

Most of the plane trees put out this year and last are slim, skinny-looking youngsters, not quite big enough to make a showing. Will they grow? Maybe so. But it's my observation that trees along New York streets grow very slowly.

Many of the ancient brownstone fronts that were the pride of the town after the war between the states still survive in their original form, in the West Forties. Thousands have been wrecked, and other thousands have had modern fronts put on.

A four-story brownstone that must have been a whiz in its day is in West 46th street, and proudly bears the date of its erection in enormous figures, 1877. It is now occupied by a wig maker. The big front window on the ground floor is perpetually occupied by a display of plain and fancy wigs and toupees.

Besides the regular demand for toupees for the bald, there is a good trade to be had in the theater world, and dozen of places in midtown compete for the business. A big-wig is still an important official among us, although they no longer wear wigs as official dress. In England, judges and others still wear white wigs, and the higher the judge, the bigger and more pretentious the wig. Hence, big-wig.

Not Kind and Good—But Suit is filed to cancel the citizenship of a California geologist of German birth because he said he thought Hitler a kind and good man. This is out of line with the Four Freedoms and common sense.

Anyone who chooses to regard Hitler, Capone or any other gangster, as kindhearted benefactor should be free to do so, provided he commits no act subversive of our national effort to destroy Hitler's rule of aggression and balk his extension of that rule by force beyond the original limits of Germany.

If a man can be deprived of his citizenship simply for not hating Hitler, it follows that a lot of refugees—who are technically still in enemy aliens—should be given their citizenship at once. They hate Hitler as few Americans could, because of the personal wrongs that they, their kinsmen and co-religionists in general have suffered at his hands and those of his followers.

If anybody wants to act on a Californian who thinks Hitler is kind and good, it is inappropriate to attack his citizenship. The fitting process would be de lunatico inquirendo.—New Orleans Item.

Cargo Space Conservation The American aptitude for head work is one of our great military assets. Applying themselves to solution of our shipping problems, officers of the Army Service of Supplies have added 10 per cent to the available cargo space by cutting the average bulk of military material packed for shipment that much. Space saving on particular items has run as high as 60 per cent.

A few examples indicate the nature of the work done. Baling clothes instead of employing wood cases saves 35 per cent. Packing shoes in bulk instead of individual cartons saves 25 per cent. Putting two machine guns instead of one in a box saves 35 per cent. Making containers for small arms ammunition of thinner material will save 12 per cent. Thus it goes all through the inventory of military chattels. Stating the net result another way, the brain men of the Service of Supplies have, in practical effect, contributed one new cargo vessel for every 10 existing.—Detroit Free Press.

Sad Experience He was enlarging on the dangers of modern foods, and with a dramatic flourish he pointed a finger at a harassed-looking inoffensive listener: "What is it we all eat at some time or other, yet it's the worst thing in the world for us? Do you know?"

It appeared the little man did know, for he replied in a husky whisper: "Wedding Cake."—Cooper's Store News.

Logical Why don't you get some new toys? said the modern mother to the toy dealer. "You are selling the very same kind I had when I was a girl."

"Ah, madam," replied the wise old toy dealer, "what need do new toys when you have new children all the time?"—The Texas Outlook.

Today In Washington

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON, July 23—Without any extended explanation, but with a significance that will not be missed by the American people or by leaders abroad, President Roosevelt has taken the first step toward what may ultimately make him the generalissimo of the entire war effort of the United Nations.

Mr. Roosevelt has appointed a chief of staff of the U. S. armed forces. This is the first unification of the Army, Navy and air forces, under a single head that we have witnessed since the war began. The new appointment—Admiral Leahy—occupies a post that was never prescribed in our national defense statutes, but which logically can be created under an Executive order.

For the new chief of staff for the President of the United States is in effect an aide to the President—if it is desirable to think of it along traditional lines—but an aide who really will act as liaison between the President and the heads of any or all military agencies. It was inevitable that the appointment should be made because the President himself could not possibly give the orders and have someone at his side to sift details, advise him as to their meaning and follow through in the proper way on decisions once made.

An Excellent Move The move is an excellent one from many angles. First of all, the President has concentrated so much power in his own office that he cannot possibly give the orders and check up on their execution. He has had the help of Harry Hopkins, for instance, as his confidential adviser and aide on matters of lend-lease, but Mr. Hopkins is not a military man and many of the problems are of a technical nature with which no civilian can possibly become familiar during the operation of a major war.

Admiral Leahy, on the other hand, has the personal confidence of the President and is not only broadly familiar with the diplomatic aspects of this war, having served in the ticklish job of ambassador to the Vichy government, but he was chief of U. S. Naval operations for several years and was in intimate contact with President Roosevelt.

This correspondent and many other observers have been urging the appointment of a staff of naval and military and air officers who could be divested of any actual operation or administrative responsibilities and give their whole time and thinking to the broad problems of strategy. Admiral Leahy's appointment could mark the beginning of such a staff, for if the admiral called to his side the best military minds—we have in America it would be a logical step. For otherwise in due time he will become so loaded up with detail himself that he will be unable to give the planning side of the military situation the attention it will constantly demand.

What Constitution Intended Under the Constitution the President, being Commander-in-Chief of both the Army and Navy, represents the only unified high command we can have, but it was hardly intended by the Constitution that the Chief Executive should be equipped with the necessary technical knowledge to act as an operating executive in time of war. The most the President can do is to pick the right military advisers and follow the plans they recommend plus his own appraisal in the light of information from all other sources.

But basically the Constitutional term Commander-in-Chief was doubtless intended to be symbolic of the fact that all services were responsible to the Chief Executive and that each service would have its own commander-in-chief. It so happens that modern warfare makes it necessary to fight jointly and the more coordinated the heads of independent armed services is not sufficient. There must be someone to decide questions that arise during the coordinating process. The President has been trying to do the deciding and accomplishing the thousand and one other civilian tasks that fall to him. Now, however, he has acquired expert help and, in effect, a deputy commander-in-chief who he trusts and who can take a load of detail from his shoulders.

Leahy Well Qualified It is fortunate that there is a man available who is temperamentally and personally fitted to work in such a high post not only with the President, but with the high officers of the Army, Navy and air forces. Admiral Leahy has had broad experience. He will organize the military side of the President's wartime obligations and if in the end Mr. Roosevelt acquires the full responsibility for deciding how the forces of the United Nations shall be apportioned and what commanders shall be supreme in specific areas or zones, he will have at his side an adviser who can steer him through the maze of technical questions that arise in actually operating the biggest Army, Navy and air forces the world has ever seen assembled under a single command. We Were On Nazi List That the Nazis had us on their list of intended victims before the attack on Poland is revealed by Lieut. Col. Armando Lozano Bernales, former Mexican military attaché in Berlin, now back in Mexico. They tried to get Mexico to support a scheme for the landing of German troops in Tamulco, in return for territorial concessions to Mexico from other American republics, but he gave them the cold shoulder.

The Nazis knew that, in their aims for world domination, they would have to destroy the big countries like the United States. They could afford to let smaller ones remain at peace and even choose their own system of government, if they weren't in the way. Democracy would be helpless if it rested only in the second and third rate nations. Mexico, Finland, Denmark, Switzerland and others would never be powerful enough to challenge the Nazi-dominated world. They would have to regiment their trade in Germany's interests, so would be serving the Nazi purpose.

But the United States was too powerful and would have to be destroyed. The Nazis saw that was inevitable.—Rock Island Island.

Always Happens "Mother," asked little Peter, when the family had guests for dinner, "the dearest, too rich for me, or is there enough to go around?"

The Difficult Part The two Negro women were discussing their financial affairs at a bus stop when one was heard to say: "I dun' lo' my mistress that Ah wouldn't mind being so poor if it wasn't so inconvenient."

At Her Word She—"You can take me to the dance on the pier tonight if you like, unless (cooly) you meet somebody more attractive in the meantime."

He—"I say, that's jolly sporting of you. We'll leave it like that, then, shall we?"—Grit.

Logical Why don't you get some new toys? said the modern mother to the toy dealer. "You are selling the very same kind I had when I was a girl."

Queries From Tourists Off 27 Per Cent

Tourist inquiries received at its office in Marquette show a decline of 1,996 from the peak reached in 1941, the Upper Peninsula Development bureau reported yesterday. To July 15 a total of 5,446 inquiries regarding vacation possibilities in the Peninsula had been received at the Bureau's office, compared with 7,442 during the similar period in 1941, a drop of 27 per cent. The Development bureau's annual publication, the Lure Book, presenting information on the entire region, as well as pamphlets and information on any particular area desired, is sent to each inquirer.

The 27 per cent drop in inquiries closely parallels the 30 per cent decline shown in tourist traffic at the Straits of Mackinac this year, George E. Bishop, the Bureau's secretary-manager, pointed out. Since ferry traffic in 1941—highest on record—increased 23 per cent over the preceding year, the present tourist and resort patronage total is only seven per cent under 1941.

The Bureau continues to receive reports from resort areas throughout the Peninsula indicating that tourist patronage as a whole is gratifying, especially in centers offering good accommodations and diversified recreational opportunities.

Pearce Names Victory Fund Committee

Appointment of the regional Victory Fund committee for the Upper Peninsula was announced yesterday by E. L. Pearce, Union National bank, Marquette, regional chairman.

The committee, he explained, will promote the sale of Series F and G war bonds and other Government securities which will be offered from time to time to help finance the war.

The F and G bonds are offered especially for individuals who want to purchase more than $5,000 worth of bonds in one year and for corporations, associations, partnerships, societies and other groups not eligible to buy the better known E bonds.

The regional Victory Fund committee is part of the nationwide organization set up by the United States Treasury Department through the Federal Reserve System to carry out the task of promoting fullest possible purchase of these bonds. This setup will cooperate closely with the Treasury Department's war savings staff which is concentrating most of its efforts on the sale of Series E bonds.

Members of the Upper Peninsula committee are: E. L. Pearce, Union National bank, Marquette, chairman; G. Sherman Collins, First National bank, Negaunee; William Warmington, State Savings bank, Escanaba; Victor Lepisto, First National bank, Wakefield; Otto B. McNaughton, First National bank, Sault Ste. The Copper Harbor Lake Trout Derby, as it will be known, will open July 23, and will continue until September 15. Weekly prizes will be awarded and a grand prize will be given at the end of the Derby, on September 15. All trips will be made out of Copper Harbor.

Miriani Out; Pastor Fills Welfare Post

LANSING, July 23—P—Meeting shortly after Governor Van Wagener refused reappointment to Louis C. Miriani, of Detroit, and named two new members, the state social welfare commission today applied what appeared to be a finishing touch to a $14,000 welfare department stamp embezzlement case.

Van Wagener named the Rev. Fr. Peter P. Walkowiak, pastor of St. Florian's church of Hamtramck, to succeed Miriani and appointed Lawrence E. Bluth, Marquette City secretary of the State, County and Municipal Workers union-CIO, to complete the term of M. Clyde Stout, former chairman, who resigned because of illness.

Calls For Investigation

In making the appointments to complete the five-member commission, Van Wagener criticized what he described as past "unsavory business conditions" and called for complete investigation of the stamp theft shortage for part of which Dr. Philip A. Callahan, former social security director, was sent to prison.

Subsequently the commission heard reports from F. F. Fauri, present social security director, and Ben H. Cole, assistant attorney general, who said testimony by former colleagues of Dr. Callahan indicated that he had taken all of the $14,400 worth of stamps reported missing last winter by Federal auditors.

Cole pointed out that Dr. Callahan's conviction was based on the latter's admission to theft of approximately $6,000 worth of stamps, but said it was "common practice" to prosecute embezzlement cases with evidence substantiating smaller thefts than actually involved.

"The attorney general's office is absolutely certain that Dr. Callahan was responsible for the entire theft and that no other persons are involved with exception of two former employees who had guilty knowledge and since have been dismissed," Cole declared.

He informed the commission that it had "no further responsibility" in the case.

An expected showdown on proposed integration of welfare and social security operations failed to develop when the civil service department reported its recommendations for economies expected to total $200,000 a year were not completed.

Blythe said he favored consideration of the recommendations after Dr. Robert Keelo, University of Michigan sociologist, completes a survey of the welfare department at the request of Governor Van Wagener.

"Entitled To Control"

In replacing Miriani, Van Wagener ignored demands of Detroit city officials and social workers for reappointment of the independent Republican and president of the Michigan Welfare League. The Governor asserted he was entitled to control of the commission by his own appointees and those of his party.

"I have learned during the past 19 months that I cannot carry out this responsibility unless I exercise my right and power to name commissioners that I feel will work together and get results."

Two Men Charged With Non-Support

Henry Croschere, of Munising, a former resident of Marquette, and Alfred Becklund, of Marquette, waited examinations on charges of non-support when arraigned before Judge Siegel in city court yesterday and were bound over to the September term of circuit court. In default of $200 bonds, they were committed to the county jail.

The children involved are state charges. Miles Betts, county welfare agent, investigated the cases, and their arrests were ordered by probate court.

The complaint against Croschere alleges that he has failed to contribute toward the support of his eight children since March, 1942, and that against Becklund alleges that he has failed to contribute toward the support of his child since November, 1939.

News About Marquette County Men in Uniform

(Editor's Note—Don't be modest at a time like this! The men in service appreciate this column. It gives them a chance to keep tab on their home town buddies. If you have an item about anyone you know in military service, mail it to the Service Editor, The Mining Journal, Marquette, Mich., or telephone him at 148. He will need your cooperation to maintain this interesting feature for the duration. Telephone Marquette 150; Ishpeming 3; Negaunee 401, or Republic 701.)

MR. AND Mrs. James E. Hogan, of Marquette, have been informed via cablegram that their son, Pvt. Anthony V. Hogan, has arrived safely in England. He is with the 344th Engineers.

Pvt. Howard Borrov, of Marquette, has been in Iceland a year, but says: "It certainly doesn't seem that long." He likes being in service very much.

PFC Charles M. Cowling, stationed at the Army Air Base at Victorville, Calif., writes in to tell us about a show given for 8,000 officers and cadets. The show lasted two and a half hours and was applauded at great length by the men.

Among the notables appearing were Dinah Shore, Ray Rogers, Sons of the Pioneers, Barton McLane and Jerry Colonna. Bob Hope was master of ceremonies and there also was a cast of featured Republic and MGM actors.

"Hope and Colonna had 'em howling every minute," wrote Charlie, and Dinah Shore, after six request numbers, had to run off the stage so the rest of the show could continue." Editor's note: "H'mmmmm!"

"There's very little green down here—everything is red clay with the exception of a few trees" writes Pvt. Homer Nault, of Ishpeming. In a recent letter to his wife he told her that he liked Camp Pickett, Va., but still preferred Michigan weather.

Some time ago Pvt. George Rublein, of Marquette, gave us an idea of what the old legend about K. P. really was. It was while he was in the U. S. Naval Training station at San Diego, Calif. . . . he was up at 4:45 a. m. and spent the whole morning in the kitchen. Then he had a little while off, reported back there at 4 in the afternoon. He was not allowed to return to his barracks until all the work had been done . . . but he didn't say how many potatoes he peeled in that time.

Mrs. Margaret Steele, 323 Iron street, Negaunee, received a letter from her son, Corp. James C. Steele, stationed somewhere in Ireland. He has been promoted to sergeant. He entered the service in October, 1940, with the National Guards at Marquette.

Pvt. Leo Mattson, Hdqs. Battery, 316th S. A. Batn, APO 81, Camp Rucker, writes to his aunt, Mrs. William Linna, in Ishpeming to say he likes the Army very much. The food is good, and he's making it his home. Private Mattson says "hello" to his friends and would like to hear from them.

The opinion held that the people of Michigan through their state constitution lacked authority to set up different or additional qualifications for the U. S. Congress than those in the Federal Constitution.

LANSING, July 23—P—The right of Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson, Wayne county's "one-man" grand jury, to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for U. S. Senator without resigning from the bench was held today in a formal opinion by Attorney General Herbert J. Rushton.

ed from an officers' training school at Fort Benning, Ga., and received a commission as second lieutenant. He is in the 83rd infantry division at Camp Atterbury, Ind.

The state constitution bars circuit judges from entering political activity during the term for which they are elected or for one year thereafter. Some politicians contended that clause was a barrier to Ferguson's Senatorial aspiration.

An opinion addressed to Prosecutor Menso R. Bolt, of Grand Rapids, held that a candidate for the office of delegate to a county convention is not a candidate for county office and need not file a personal appearance affidavit.

There were 77 patients (71 adults and six children) at Morgan early crop supplies before late varieties come into production.

The state onion crop has shown considerable improvement in the past two weeks, Lowe said, and the mint harvest is about to get underway with the crop in "much better" condition than a year ago.

Heights sanatorium at the end of May, compared with 88 patients, (84 adults and four children) in May, 1941, the monthly report of Dr. Robert F. Berry, superintendent, shows.

Four persons were discharged and six new patients were admitted during the month. Of the four discharged, two cases apparently were arrested, one was found to be non-tuberculous and one patient left against advice.

X-rays of out-patients numbered 276, compared with 239 in May, 1941, and 885 out-patients were given tuberculin tests, 133 less than were thus treated in May, 1941.

Expenditures last May were $7,383.14. Receipts totaled $3,508.88 and state aid amounted to $2,748.

Editor's Mail

Makes Suggestion
Editor, Mining Journal:
After having our "blackout" test in the city of Marquette and as the saying goes—it was almost perfect, but I wonder if it was. The women of Marquette were somewhat overlooked. Think of the big strapping strong men who will stay inside as errand boys, taking messages, carrying messages, even acting in clerk capacity, etc., in the civilian defense center, one of the best protected places. They should be doing the hard work, dangerous work, men's work, and leave these messenger jobs, and the like, for the women so they could be under as much protection as possible.

War-time is no time to play favorites or give the best positions to some one who can put on a little pressure. I know the women of Marquette want to do their share, and everything they possibly can do. We have very proud and brave women in the city of Marquette, some who have sent their sons to war, they are all glad to be of service. So why not leave the men take the harder and tougher jobs while as many women as possible get the inside jobs they really can do. Most likely, better than men because they are already trained for detailed work.

Of course I am a wounded World War veteran from back in 1917-18. Maybe I am way behind times, but I think of our new problems coming up every day, it is the procedure today to put women in men's places, when possible, so it will release men for other work, especially the dangerous work. Sitting in a protected place should be left for the women whenever possible. So from now on let's give the women this chance, also a helping hand. Let us remember the women are going to help win this war. They will take a big part in it. The war will be over much quicker with the right cooperation. I only offer this as a suggestion in the future and not to reflect on anyone. We all make mistakes. Tests bring them out. With suggestions they can be corrected. Thank you, PETER J. SCHON, Marquette, Mich., July 23, 1942.

Bad Weather Hits Fishing In Peninsula

LANSING, July 23—P—The state conservation department, in its weekly survey, reported today that heavy rains have hampered fishing in the Upper Peninsula and western lower Michigan, but that warmer weather in the rest of the state generally improved prospects.

The report by districts: Gogebic-Ontonagon—Fishing has been fair to good although some streams are high as the result of heavy rains. Smaller lakes producing fair catches while stream fishing is nearly at a standstill, except on the Ontonagon where fine walleyes catches are reported.

Houghton-Baraga—Limit catches reported on Coon and Petticoat lakes. Trout fishing good throughout the district, with more brook trout than rainbows being produced. Lake trout trolling is good off the south shore of the Keweenaw peninsula and near the Huron islands.

Marquette-Alger—Fishing has dropped due to heavy rains and cold weather.

Iron-Dickinson—Panfish and bass angling is good on the Menominee and lower Paint rivers. Bad weather has hindered fishing considerably.

Menominee-Delta—Heavy rains during the week caused rivers to overflow their banks. Lake fishing for all species is good, and pike are beginning to bite well in Ogonitz bay.

Luce-Chippewa—Good pike catches are reported on Lake George and the St. Marys river. Big Trout lake is producing excellent catches of pike and perch.

News Behind the News

By Ray Tucker

WASHINGTON, July 23—The surprise tactics, employed by the Japanese in the southwestern Pacific against Pearl Harbor and the Aleutians, have placed Washington on the qui vive against a repetition of this technique in an even more important area. In high Army-Navy circles it is feared that Panama will be the foe's next objective.

The destruction of this vital waterway has always been indicated as a key move on the Tokyo war blueprints which have fallen into our hands. For obvious reasons, including the repulses in the Coral sea and at Midway, the Japs have been unable to carry out this part of their general strategy. But nobody here doubts their eventual attempt to force the passage through which our warships and merchantmen sail from one ocean to another. Besides damaging us in a naval way, the stroke would add to the transportation difficulties which already place the United Nations at a disadvantage. In some circles, the occupation of Attu, Agattu and Kiska is regarded as a feint designed to lure our boats into that sector and leave the Canal Zone somewhat unprotected.

While details of recent negotiations and achievements cannot be published, President Roosevelt has moved quickly to provide land and aerial reinforcements for the "Big Ditch." In cooperation with certain South and Central American nations we have ringed that territory with three-dimensional defenses that are regarded as impregnable.

HAPPY—An inside but complicated play involving Leon Henderson, Jesse Jones and oil statesmen on the Senate finance committee has been arranged in an endeavor to abolish gas rationing in the East and remove this inflammable issue from the forthcoming campaign.

When the Price Administrator drafted tank cars to provide emergency supplies for the restricted regions, the railroads protested that they could not absorb the additional transportation costs. Leon's reply was to slap on an extra charge of two and a half cents per gallon, which merely aggravated everybody's resentment. Senators Russell, of Georgia, and Maloney, of Connecticut, forced adoption of a measure barring payment of salaries to any official who had approved or imposed this inflationary issue from the forthcoming campaign.

When the Price Administrator drafted tank cars to provide emergency supplies for the restricted regions, the railroads protested that they could not absorb the additional transportation costs. Leon's reply was to slap on an extra charge of two and a half cents per gallon, which merely aggravated everybody's resentment. Senators Russell, of Georgia, and Maloney, of Connecticut, forced adoption of a measure barring payment of salaries to any official who had approved or imposed this inflationary issue from the forthcoming campaign.

Mr. Jones, however, cannot assume this burden permanently, as it amounts to about 300 million dollars a year. So Senate Finance Committee Chairman George will move to amend the 1942 revenue bill by placing a one cent a gallon levy on motor fuel. With this Government assistance the lines say they can ship sufficient petroleum to permit repeal of the drastic curtailment which became effective yesterday. Then everybody should be happy.

MONEY—Only the authorized curb imposed on their tongues from the days they entered West Point and Annapolis prevent those high in the Army and Navy from disrupting Pollyanna statements issued periodically by the White House and the War Production Board. The men who do the planning and fighting know that the United States has not yet swung into stride. Here is the picture as they see it.

The number of soldiers overseas or in training totals more than two million, the exact figure being a military secret. But at least 800,000 will serve in the SOS as non-combatants, and another 200,000 must be kept at home as the nucleus and instructors for incoming units. That leaves only a million gun toters, which is all too few for manning the United Nations' far-flung trenches. Even with five million in uniform, the actual strength of our front-line force will be only half that seemingly impressive muster.

The paucity of our current contribution becomes more understandable when measured in terms of cash. Although the over-all armament bill is estimated at 220 billion dollars, only 36 billion approximately—or 16 per cent—has been spent and translated into weapons. The War department has dispersed 26 billion of 1942, and the Navy has cashed only 10 billion of 36. Another 10 billion has gone in shipbuilding and lend-lease supplies. And huge amounts of the money paid out have financed factory and yard construction. The "arsenal of democracy" is still "on order" in an appalling degree.

COURAGE—Elmer Davis' latest effort to set himself up as the central controller of war news met with flat failure. And this time he had many Washington correspondents against him in addition to important members of officialdom.

The head of the Office of War Information proposed to Secretaries Hull, Stimson and Knox that all material dealing with the conflict be issued to the press through him. His intentions were of the best, as they have been since he was drafted by the President to bring order out of chaos and to convince the people that they were getting the truth. But the inevitable effect of his scheme would have been the presentation of handouts, or what is known as "canned stuff." Before his allies and Bureau heads had finally okayed a release, it would have been stripped of any publishing value. There are too many play-actish and meticulous minds to satisfy.

As it is today, each department distributes communiques, and reporters covering a particular division obtain additional data and background from sources which they have cultivated over long periods. Although not entirely satisfactory, this system secures a more intelligent and comprehensive coverage on all fronts.

DEMANDS—Nelson A. Rockefeller may be a "good neighbor" to the Latin Americans, but he has made no hit with many of his fellow workers in the Department of Commerce building.

When he arrives in the morning he demands that the elevator operator hold him to his top floor office without stopping en route. Breathless employees rushing to escape black marks for tardiness have protested against the practice, but without avail. He parks his car in the driveway so that it blocks earlier arrivals and they are compelled to wait a long while at the end of the day until he leaves. They are curious to know whether he applies the same technique in wooing the sensitive Latinos.

New York

By Albert N. Leman

PERISH—Cables from abroad hint that the Allied staffs are backtracking from their original boasts of invading the Continent. The expense given for this hesitancy is that the cost of the gamble will be too high. Students of military sciences are puzzled that the generals should discover the price at this late hour. Surely they must have known that modern battles exact a frightful toll.

Many persons still cling to the discredited dogma—once expressed by the Liddell Hart school of strategists—about a struggle of "limited liability." This theory was that gold, oil, steel and aluminum decided the issue hence little blood needed to be spilled. The horrors of the Russian campaign have mocked this safe and sane bystander's fancy. During the First World war the Central Powers had nearly 3,400,000 soldiers killed and the Allies more than five million. Churchill maintains that already the Germans have lost as many as before and certainly the Soviet casualties have been far greater.

We were fifty fortunate 25 years ago. Fifty thousand of our boys died on the field or from wounds. We cannot hope to escape the full agony this time. The year's scheduled quota for Army, Navy and Marine corps of approximately four million is expected to grow to 10 million before the armistice. If we apply the ratio of those in the British empire slain in 1914-18, we must reckon on one in 10. It is a sober thought to estimate close to a million of our young men may perish before Germany and Japan are defeated.

PUSSYFOOTING—It is even more melancholy to contemplate that despite our sacrifice of life we may lose this war unless we take our task more seriously. Washington acts as if the result of next fall's ballot is as important as the outcome of this summer's battles. The nation takes its cue from the Capital. Since officialdom does not appear to be disturbed by the outlook, the common people assume that "all's right with the world."

The unwillingness of the Government to go all out on drastic emergency measures results in a widespread lack of urgency in our effort. One would imagine that this conflict is being waged around the canals of Mars and that Hitler and Hirohito have agreed to go for a smoke until candidate Tweedledee has purged Congressman Tweedledum. Because the word is circulated that the White House will not crack down until after the November elections, every fish clique is sticking its snout in the corn-mush.

Pressure blocs are wangling for high pay or prices; munitions factories are shutting down because no one in authority has the grit to ruthlessly seize necessary raw materials or scrap; the symptoms of infiltration become daily more apparent; New Deal zealots are sneaking through their pet schemes for Utopias; and the phrase, "every man for himself"—usually the death cry on a sinking ship—is the theme song on the banks of the Potomac. There is a growing belief that procrastination, partisanship and pussyfooting are rife because the Administration neither plans nor executes policies equal to the gravity of the hour.

STRAIN—New York manufacturing executives announce that we are about to supply Great Britain with new types of modern machinery to help her ammunition centers expand output. The sudden war demands in 1939 imposed such a great burden on industry overseas that it had to get along as best it could with old-fashioned tools and outmoded practices. The United States and to some extent Russia—who learned from us—are the only two powers which have mass production. England, Germany and the rest operate the bench system. Now we are to show Bevin's managers some of our belt-line methods.

A recent survey in the United Kingdom by Manhattan engineers disclosed that handling equipment is lacking. In many factories only the heaviest materials are moved by conveyors. Most of the parts are still carried to work tables in baskets, trays and small trucks. This process is slow and results in nervous fatigue for mechanics.

Nearly all of the island's plants operate beneath skylights which formerly were adequate. But the glass has been painted black as a concealment from air raiders. Employees often grope about the assembly units in semidarkness or in the glare of unprotected bulbs which causes headaches, eyestrain and inefficiency. We are to furnish modern illumination. U. S. technicians will teach the trade secrets of electric welding, a field in which we surpass. Our short cuts may speed up the number of new tanks and planes.

BRAVERY—When a henpecked spouse in this "land of the free" desires to break loose from his devoted ball and chain, he sometimes joins the Marines and sees the world. But no such truce from the bond of matrimony is available to the caballeros across the Rio Grande. After a peaceful day spent on an artillery range the troops hike home to barracks—and to all the noisy bliss of domestic life, for in Mexico the wives of the enlisted men travel with the army.

They are called "soldaderas" and they do all the cooking, washing and mending for their husbands. It's an old Spanish custom dating back to the days of the Madero revolution. But news of the organization of the WACC in the United States has threatened to disrupt this famous family arrangement because the modern senoras are demanding uniforms, pay and salutes like members of their sex north of the border.

The unique institution of Amazons originated during the turbulent times of the civil wars when thousands of dwellings were destroyed and homemakers had nowhere to go except to follow their husbands' campaigns. They frequently rode on top of freight cars while the cavalry galloped beside the track and threw kisses to them. These hardy feminists often displayed great bravery in battle. They nursed the wounded and when their male folk fell they would pick up their rifles and—as Molly Pitcher of United States history—fight in place of the fallen.

TAKE ROLL TO LANSING

BESSEMER, July 23—Members of the state tax commission and their staff of field men, who conducted a hearing and review of Bessemer property assessments left here today, taking with them the assessment roll. Changes which are to be made in the valuations will require from three days to a week, said a member of the commission. The exact percentage of increase in valuations will not be determined until then, but it was indicated that the average will be approximately 40 per cent. In holding the hearing, the tax commission acted under a writ of mandamus issued by the state supreme court. City Attorney M. E. Nolan said today that whether the city will take any further action on its controversy with the tax commission, whose authority it challenged, will be decided by the council after it receives official notice of changes made by the commission.

If Only Flowers Grew As Readily As Weed Pests

(By MANTHEI HOWE)

If you were a gangling lanky youngster you probably frequently heard some adult say to your parents: "My, he grows like a weed, doesn't he?" Likely you didn't quite see the sense of the remark, but if you have since taken up gardening, you know that the growth of the weeds with not the least encouragement from you outstrips the growth of the flowers.

The pesky weeds thrive without artificial vitamins. They grow and grow and wreck your garden and disposition unless you camp on the job of rooting them out every moment.

Mrs. Abby Beecher Roberts, a director of the Michigan Wild Flower association, urges folk to get after the weeds that are seeding the earth so prolifically right now.

They Look Harmless
Some of those pesky things are so beguilingly innocent looking, too. For instance, take the Canadian thistle. It grows to a great height, has pale lavender flowers and looks rather picturesque growing along the way, but it is a Federal outlaw. Thirty-nine states have laws requiring property owners to destroy it.

Even more delicately appearing is Creeping Jennie. One conceals the name doesn't sound alluring, but certainly the plant might tempt the unsuspecting gardener to bring it into the home garden.

Ordinarily it does not grow in profusion this far north, but Mrs. Roberts found some plants growing out of a crack in the pavement at the corner of Fifth and Spring streets. It has a delicate green foliage and blossoms that are lovely. They look like small versions of white morning glories with a faint brushing of pink on the back.

However, the plant was rather eloquently named, for can Jennie ever creep, rooting its way in crops and even choking out a stand of corn. Jennie is an outlaw, too, so if you see those fragile appearing, decorative blossoms, root the weed out to the last tiny bit of root.

Doesn't Wear Label
Bottles containing poison are required by law to be plainly labeled as dangerous, but there is no such provision to protect folk from a poisonous weed, the wild parsnip.

That's another weed that is wickedly attractive. In the bouquet of weed samples which Mrs. Roberts gathered and brought to the office, poison parsnip was quite some attractive flowering wild plant. It started as a small clump at Deer Track and Mrs. Roberts didn't know its identity. By the time she had found it was poisonous to cattle it had spread and there was the job of rooting it out of the fields.

The leaf, a yellow green, does not (except for color) look so unlike the leaves of some poppies, and the flower which rises on a long stem before it is in full bloom resembles one of the flower on dill, and when matured looks like Queen Anne's lace only that its blossom is yellow instead of white.

When the weed over runs a hay field, animals eat it and are poisoned. Farmers, especially, need to take precautions to clear their poison out of their fields, in fact off their farms, for it sheds thousands of seeds from the big flower cluster. Agree that it lends itself to effective wild flower bouquet arrangements, poison parsnip is a bad actor and needs to be ruthlessly eliminated. It is a biennial, so if you conscientiously root it out for two years you will likely be freed of the pest.

Inconspicuous But True
Some of these obnoxious weeds are so attractive that it is hard to believe they are a menace to farm crops and gardens as it is to believe that a beautiful face may be long to a dangerously wicked woman.

Take the hawk weed that grows in such profusion. From small rosettes of dark green leaves it rears its long flower stalk topped with pale yellow blossoms that resemble puny dandelions. When there is a large growth the hawk weed provides a most spectacular stand of brilliant color. But cattle hate the stuff and won't eat hay in which there is the weed. One plot of hay at Deer Track was ruined because hawk weed thrived. The only way to get rid of the pest is to uproot the weed while it is in flower and burn it immediately, root and branch and blossom, before it has opportunity to distribute its seeds.

And probably all of you know that pesky quack grass with its enormous long root, and the rag weed. Both have to be uprooted and burned before they can be eliminated. They are as tenacious in their infiltration as an army of Japanese and nothing but drastic measure drives them out. Ignore their presence and quack grass and ragweed grow and multiply, and getting rid of them becomes a real problem.

You Can Have Mine
There is another weed which has been cursed and discussed by owners of lawns because it is such a sturdy and vigorous grower and that's the plantain. You know the weed that grows in a flat rosette of wide leaves on your lawn. From the center rises the flower that when it is about ready to seed all the surrounding patch, look like a miniature cat-tail. That is a bit more easily dug out if you keep at it and at it, and get busy before it seeds. It does have one contribution to make. It is said that a tea made of the leaves affords a wash that relieves sore and aching feet, and a leaf or two put in the sole of the shoe when one has to take a long hike lends comfort to the walker.

However, I'm willing to forego the comfort rather than have to weed those plantains out of the lawn. Any one who wants such vaunted foot-ease may come and take all the plantains they want out of my yard.

There may be some folk who feel that even the weeds are God's work

Society-Club

Celebrated Birthday—Miss Ann Ford, 111 East Ridge street, entertained at a 1 o'clock luncheon Wednesday afternoon on her birthday. Eleven guests attended. Bouquets of mixed garden flowers formed the trim for the buffet table and the living room. Out-of-town guests were Miss Jane Barton, of Saginaw, and Miss Janet Mitchell, of Lansing.

Made Low Score—The women golfers of the Marquette Golf and Country club played the qualifying round for the president's trophy Wednesday afternoon. A prize was offered for the low medal score with handicap and was awarded to Mrs. T. P. Cook who had a score of 3 for 18 holes. That probably is the lowest score for any woman in the club.

Recruiting For Cadets Will Close Today

This is the last day fellows will be recruited for the Home Guards Cadets. Interested lads between the ages of 12 and 16 may apply at the recruiting office, 216 East Hewitt avenue, telephone 768. The hours are 9 to 11 this morning and 1 to 3 this afternoon.

The group meets regularly every Friday night, the same evening on which the state troop drills. Indicative of the interest the fellows are taking in the organization of the Cadets may be gleaned from the fact that Kenneth Hetherington hitch-hiked in from Harvey to join the Cadets and will hitch-hike in every Friday night for drill.

All interested fellows in the 12-16 age bracket are urged to enroll this morning if possible and certainly during the afternoon, for this is the final opportunity.

and shouldn't be destroyed. There may be such folk, but likely they are archnatural philosophers who never tried to farm or garden. Those who till the soil in even the most meager fashion will be ready to swear that all weeds are spawn of the devil, that with no least encouragement they will break all growth records, and any one who gives information on how to get rid of them is a public benefactor.

Anyhow a lot of those weeds are going to seed now and are being carried far and wide on the wind. Next week it won't do so much good to get them out. The time to root them out and burn them is now.

Samuel W. Wheeler camp, United Spanish War Veterans, are sponsoring the MacArthur lapel button sale tomorrow as a benefit for the Service Center, which will receive all proceeds from the project.

The committee composed of George Boven, W. A. Lyons and J. C. Gannon bespeak the generous cooperation of residents.

The MacArthur buttons are being sold for 10 cents a piece or as much more as you care to pay. Proceeds will form a fund upon which the Service Center may draw as emergencies or incidental needs arise from time to time. All work on the part of the women at the Service club is volunteer.

There is no money to operate the club except as it is received from individual contribution or through such a project as this undertaken under the auspices of the Spanish War Veterans, and it is hoped every one will purchase a MacArthur button.

'Here Is My Home' By Gessner, Former U. P. Resident, Is Novel All Americans Should Read

"Here Is My Home," by Robert Gessner, is a book which many readers will find more satisfying than any they have read in a long time. Moreover, the author is an Upper Peninsula man, a native of Escanaba. The novel can be obtained at the Peter White Public Library.

This book is one that is especially timely, one which every American should read that he may not, even in thought, be as stupid and intolerant as some of the characters in the story, which though all-fictitious, are prototypes which will be found in too many communities in America.

Is Vivid Characterization
Eloquently, a quotation from Whitman sounds the basic thought in the novel: "This America is only you and me." The novel presents a stark and indelibly etched cross-section of the racial and cultural composition of America.

There is a streak of the crusader in Robert Gessner as you are well aware if you have read his preceding books — "Massacre," "Broken Arrow," "Upsurge," and "Some of My Best Friends Are Jews" and "The children of their marriage with the divergent strains of their ancestry showing up in their personalities, the difficulties of adjustment, the heritage of social ostracism that such intermarriages so often imply, are handled skillfully and realistically in this more than ordinarily fine book.

You'll Recognize Types
Pierre L'Mousquetaires, the lumberjack; Pete Goodman, the ruthless foreman; Ogden Norris, the pioneering small town newspaper publisher; Father Francis, the Catholic parish priest; Ferdinand Jeremiah Christian Budge, doctor of dental surgery, the town rebel; the old Potawatomi chief; Katy Goodman who had cooked in a lumber camp; Jasper and Mabel Goldschmidt . . . if you are at all familiar with your small towns of America, those that mushroomed into being in the nineties you will recall folk who are identical twin to those delineated in this novel.

Just as typical are the incidents that occur. The chicanery that chiseled profits out of the lumberjack and gouged him when possible; the stupidity that made lumbermen clear the country of its stand of trees; the futile efforts of Ogden Norris to make people appreciate the necessity and wisdom of conservation; the double crossing perpetrated by Pete Goodman who was not at all perturbed by the ethics of the question, for he had simply done first what the other fellow planned to do to him; the attack of the Klu Klux Klan directed against Bernard Straus and instigated by his father-in-law—all the dramatic scenes in the novel in slightly less accentuated forms and versions are familiar to all Americans.

Bernard, like many another foreigner come to these shores, "wondered about his country. The panic of 1907 was truly unprecedented. That in this Promised Land financial holdings could be wiped out, signatures dishonored, rich and affluent men exposed as crooks and fools, was a revelation from hell."

Richard L. West, son of Dr. and Mrs. Luther S. West, of this city, has received an appointment to the United States Military Academy and yesterday visited his parents, enroute to West Point.

He received his appointment from Congressman Frank Hook and probably is about as jubilant as any young man in town. He began going through the necessary detailed procedure last January. He was an alternate, with John McNabb, of Negaunee, as principal for the appointment.

Richard West (Dick as he is better known to Marquette folk) rather thought he had slim chance at appointment and had taken a job for the summer. He was employed by the U. S. Forest Service in connection with white pine blister rust control at Plumans National Forest, Granite Basin, California, and resigned to accept his appointment to West Point.

On July 1 he received notice to appear at Fort Snelling for examination. Since he was in California that was rather a long jump, so he received permission to be examined in San Francisco. He had to walk four miles over a trail and then hitch-hiked 40 miles to Orville where he was to get his credentials. Through some misadventure, due to the station being closed for Sunday, he had to go to Sacramento before being supplied with the proper credentials to present at San Francisco.

There were 34 young men taking the physical in San Francisco, one of them a star athlete from Hawaii. The examinations required four days, after which he returned to Granite Basin.

When the names of applicants from Negaunee and from Houghton were announced as receiving the appointments, as alternate he felt his chance to get in was slim.

However, if applicants from a Congressional district fail to appear for examination that gives an opportunity for some of the alternates. The superintendent of West Point has the list of all applicants which is sent with recommendations to the Adjutant General in Washington who appoints the boys to fill the vacancies. Richard West, had been nominated as alternate by Congressman Hook, left Marquette yesterday to go to West Point.

His school and achievements record is an exceptionally good one. During his attendance at the W. K. Kellogg junior and senior high schools in Battle Creek, Michigan, he did most creditable work in music, and was rated with achievements in student government, and citizenship, as a member of the Student Council, chairman of the school library committee, and baritone soloist in the school band. He was recipient of the citizenship award of the Sons of American Revolution.

While a student of the John D. Pierce high school, from which he graduated at the age of 15, he was successful in oratory and dramatics, was secretary of the senior class, was a member of six-man football team, and graduated with the highest scholastic standing in a class of 25.

Did Additional Work
After graduation he took a year of special training in typing, shorthand, history, and higher mathematics in which he excels, and then enrolled in the Northern Michigan College of Education.

He was president of the freshman class, a member of the college band, and a member of the staff of the college paper.

In addition to that formalized academic training, previous to coming to Marquette, he completed five years of 4-H club work covering projects in dairy cattle, farm crops, handicraft, and economic entomology; and served as president of the county 4-H club in Barry county.

He is a member of the First Methodist church, is affiliated with the Theta Omicron Rho fraternity and is scribe of the Marquette chapter of DeMolay.

Richard is a son of Dr. Luther S. West, who is head of the division of natural sciences of the Northern Michigan College of Education. Dr. West was for four years a member of the faculty of Cornell university; for 13 years was professor of biology at Battle Creek college, and for five years dean of arts and sciences at Battle Creek. He is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and is a member of several other scientific and educational societies. He is a Veteran of World War I. The family is of American Colonial stock and includes a number of individuals with honorable military records, including General Nathaniel Green, of the American Revolution, a direct ancestor.

Friends of Dick and his family will be happy to learn that he has received his appointment to the United States Military Academy, an opportunity which he richly deserves, and the obligations of which he will discharge most creditably.

CCI Contest Ends; Another Will Follow

ISHPEMING, July 23—The first contest conducted by the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company in its "More Ore to Win the War" campaign has closed with eight suggestions worthy of adoption and prize award. So pleased is the company with the results that it is announcing to employees a second contest to end November 30, 1942, for suggestions sent in after August 1.

First prize in the contest now closing is $100, second $75 and third $50 and there are five of $25 each. The committee selecting the prize winners does not know the names of the men making the suggestions. Means of identification were set up when the contest was announced and the prize winners are asked to identify their articles, printed in the latest issue of the Miner's Safety Bulletin, published by the company.

Most of the suggestions offered had to do with means of speeding up production by coordinating equipment used in various stages from blasting to loading, although one deals with structural phases and another with building up timbering crews.

Calling attention of the men again to the new production records established, the Bulletin congratulates them, but adds: "There are weeks and months of hardship ahead of us. Every American realizes that we are only starting to experience the inconveniences and the sacrifices which we shall have to make, not only to win this war, but to save our country."

Inland Steel To Test Labor Board Power

ISHPEMING, July 23—A Federal court test of the War Labor Board's power to impose so-called union security is in prospect, Inland Steel company officials indicated today in Chicago.

This indication was contained in a telegram sent Wednesday afternoon to the War Labor Board by Ernest S. Ballard, attorney for Inland.

The telegram is, in effect, a request by Inland that the board cooperate in securing a court determination of its powers by granting Inland sufficient time for such a test-by extending the July 26 deadline within which the company is required to take a stand on the board's July 16 decision.

The telegram, addressed to the War Labor Board, read:

"Reference case No. 35, Inland Steel Company and Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Inland Steel company respectfully requests the board to extend the 10-day period, expiring July 26 within which the company is required to advise the board whether it will comply with the directive order on union security—so as to permit the company to secure a determination from the Federal courts as to whether the board's directive order on union security is beyond the power conferred on the board by the President. We are prepared to institute suit within three days and will be ready for hearing as soon as court can hear us."

August 2 Date Selected For Legion Picnic

ISHPEMING, July 23 — The county-wide American Legion picnic, sponsored by Albert V. Braden post, of IshpeMING, will be held at the winter sports area Sunday, August 2, it was announced this afternoon. Details of the program have not been determined.

Commanders of the three major posts in the county met this week and agreed upon the date. Efforts will be made to have the three drum and bugle corps put on exhibitions and appear in a massed drill.

One of the features of the day will be the dedication, by the Legion, of the new steel flagpole at the winter sports area. It was obtained several months ago, but has not been installed at the grounds. The national colors now fly from a wooden pole.

It will be a family basket picnic and all Legionnaires in the county are invited to attend and bring their families. Tables and stoves will be sufficient in number to accommodate the crowd.

Officials of the Winter sports club will cooperate with the Legion in handling arrangements.

ISHPEMING, July 23—The Negaunee city band, under the direction of Joseph Violetta, will play the first of a series of Marquette county "exchange" concerts in Ishpeping at 8 Friday night.

The band will parade from the high school through the business section to the Mather Inn, where the concert will be played in the Rock Garden.

Mr. Violetta has prepared an interesting program, with Walter Warren playing a baritone horn solo, "Rocked In the Cradle of the Deep."

Additional interest centers around the march, "First Iron Ore Centennial of Negaunee," written by Victor J. Sarvello, of Ishpeping, and played by the band.

Mr. Violetta is also dedicating the last march on the program, "Chicago Tribune," to one of the old members of the Negaunee city band, now residing in Ishpeping, William Heavyside, Sr.

The program follows: "The Star Spangled Banner" Concert march, "Immortal Legends" (Keenan).

"Dixie Rhazadey" (Leidzen). "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep" (Laurendeau)—Walter Warren, Baritone soloist.

Murder in Ferry Command

By A. W. O'BRIEN

RESCUE AND REUNION

CHAPTER XIV

A faint hope, or perhaps only a sorrowful curiosity, prompted Clyde Dawson to telephone the port commander who had told him of Carole Fiske's disappearance aboard the torpedoed steamer Fort Gengary.

"Captain," he said, "I recall that the girl I'm hunting was given accommodation in a cabin with an officer's wife. Can you tell me where I could find this rescued woman?"

"She was brought to the St. John's General hospital," the naval officer replied. "Let me call the hospital and find out if she is able to see you. I'll ring you back."

With permission of the head doctor, the commander arranged a short interview with the surviving woman passenger, Dawson found her waiting for him in the sun porch. Pausing only to congratulate her on being saved, he asked if she knew Carole Fiske.

"Yes, she shared the cabin with me . . . in fact — the woman's voice lowered to a whisper — 'I wouldn't be alive if it wasn't for Carole Fiske. When the torpedo hit I was asleep in my bunk . . ."

"The horrible crash woke me, and the next moment the ship listed heavily to starboard. It was terrible . . . the lighting system was destroyed and the portholes were sealed for blackout, so we were in utter darkness. I heard people screaming, then I must have fainted . . . I have a bad heart anyway."

"They told me later that Carole dragged me from the cabin through the passageway and onto the deck. When I came to, a sailor was helping her lift me into a lifeboat. Just then the ship listed worse than ever. They barely shoved the lifeboat clear when the ship keeled over. Carole—the woman's voice broke—"Carole didn't have time to climb in. She was probably too exhausted. If I had only kept my senses . . . if I hadn't been ill, she might . . ."

The woman covered her face with her hands. Dawson, without a word, rose to his feet and walked slowly from the ward. For the second time within an hour he walked unseeing through the wintry streets of St. John's, heedless of direction, of traffic and of passers-by. Clyde Dawson had seen death so often, had barely escaped it himself with only the fatalistic second thought that it was part of his job. But Carole Fiske . . . pert, keen-witted, smartly dressed . . . her moments of quiet concern about Darwin Lemoy . . . Carole Fiske, out there in the blizzard-blown Atlantic graveyard in the dark of night. . . . And all because he had played the cagey, cock-sure investigator too long. A word from him and she would have still been here.

Dawson's aimless steps had led him back to the Newfoundland Hotel. Wearily he mounted the circular stairway to the main lobby. As he passed the desk the clerk halted him.

"Naval headquarters has been calling you, Mr. Dawson — it's most urgent, they say. I'll have you connected by phone."

"The captain came on the line immediately. 'I've been trying to find you, Dawson . . . damn good news, my boy! An American flying boat spotted three people on a raft, made a landing in a heavy sea and brought them back to the American naval base. . . .'"

"The girl?" Dawson's voice was tense.

"She's one of the three and her condition is reported satisfactory, although she is suffering from exposure. I figured you'd want to rush down there, so I had them hold a corvette that was about to sail for Halifax. Hurry to the Dockward Pier. . . ."

Carole Fiske looked surprisingly well when Dawson entered the women's section of the Naval Hospital. Her eyes widened as he walked quickly to her bedside and clasped her hand.

"If ever I prayed in my life," he said with emotion. "I'll pray tonight to thank God for this miracle."

"There is little possibility of your ever forgiving me for misjudging you, but we investigators often do that until . . ."

"Investigator?" the words fell heavily from her lips.

"Yes, Carole. I am a member of the Canadian Intelligence Department. The entire spy ring has been cleaned up in cooperation with the FBI. There are many unfortunate details of which I must inform you eventually, but

"My brother?"

"He is dead."

There was a pause. Then she took a deep breath.

"And Darwin?"

"Darwin is also"—Dawson's eyes met her burning stare frankly—"dead. But he was a very brave man and, whatever his past connections, he did your country and mine a great service. There are heroes who die in unglamorous settings, but they are heroes nonetheless. You see, Carole, I, too, liked Darwin very much. . . ."

"We were to be married — that was what he meant by being sorry to miss the reunion," she said in a dull monotone.

She was made of good stuff. Not a tear—only a cloud of sadness on her brow. She had obviously anticipated bad news, but this was a harder blow than she could possibly have expected.

"There is only one thing more," Dawson said. "No matter how hard it is, please try to wipe this sorry business from your mind. Don't try to probe for the full story. It is now a war secret and besides, you know the most important thing of all — that Darwin redeemed himself nobly and loved you as he should. . . ."

Carole Fiske looked at Dawson strangely.

"You are so different now. There is a kindness about your way of bringing this awful news that has taken away a lot of its sting. I always felt guilty about the night in Chicago when you were almost shot . . . they overheard my phone call to you on the extension and forced me to go with them."

Dawson nodded. "I had surmised as much. Now"—he held out his hand—"will you please forgive me for all my boorishness?"

With a sad smile, she took his hand.

Dawson turned to go, but she called him back. Carole had raised herself in the bed, leaning on one elbow. Her beautiful black hair, still showing signs of salt water, fell to her shoulders.

"But, Clyde"—there was something of alarm in her voice—"what shall I do now? Will they let me go back . . . should I see . . ."

She suddenly seemed a lonely and badly frightened girl. Dawson answered quietly.

"Would you prefer if I waited for you to get well—and take you back home, Carole?"

The girl's brow cleared and gratitude showed in her eyes.

"I would be most thankful. This . . . all this . . . has left me feeling as if I were in a strange, baffling world. And besides," she smiled wanly—"I've rather grown accustomed to having you around."

Bath Urges 'Courageous' Labor Policy

ISHPEMING, July 23—Development of natural resources at home, commendation of the Administration for "failure to establish a wise and courageous labor policy," and the menace of inflation are among the points stressed here yesterday by Russell J. Bath, Iron Mountain insurance man and Republican candidate for nomination to Congress.

Planning another visit to Marquette county in the near future, Bath set forth nine principal points in his platform, as follows:

"Democracy. Democracy is for the whole, not for any class. Therefore, I intend to be a representative of all the people, not one class. War profits and graft. I denounce secret negotiations between Government agents and favored contractors, which have resulted in unreasonable war profits and graft.

"Foreign subsidies. A press dispatch advises that a sum reported at $14,000,000 is granted by the present Administration to open an iron ore mine in Brazil. It further says $5,000,000 is granted to build a railroad to this mine, the product of which will be used in competition to the mines of this country, and, particularly the Upper Peninsula. This is sabotaging American home industry. I am against it. I'm for opening our mines here and developing our natural resources at home.

"Non-essential spending. I demand that this be stopped; that waste and extravagance be eliminated at once.

Synthetic Rubber

"Rubber. The inexcusable delay in starting the manufacture of synthetic rubber, the discord among officials and the confusion resulting therefrom in the public's mind, should bring a demand for clarification of all points at once. The issue is vital to our nation, our arm forces, small business and individuals.

"Censorship. Wise censorship, without political control, must be our aim. The war effort first; an understanding public, second.

"Failure in labor policy. I condemn the Administration for failure to establish a wise and courageous labor policy. It is retarding our war effort.

"Inflation. It must be dealt with in a realistic way. This is one of the greatest menaces facing our country. Only intelligent treatment of inflation can prevent troubles that will be so far reaching as to effect generation upon generation to come.

"Victory. Let me make this plain and paramount. My loyalty for victory is to the Stars and Stripes and the nation for which they are a symbol. I will support and prosecute with vigor all measures to hasten victory. I will oppose and not tolerate all measures which delay our war effort or those that are disguised as war measures when their full force is political expediency. When our boys in the armed forces return victorious, I want a clear conscience on the help they got, from our Government."

Morgenthau what amount of bonds he was going to have to "force" into commercial banks.

"If you don't mind my saying so," Morgenthau snapped, "the choice of the word 'force' is unfortunate. I enjoy these little exchanges with you, but what we have to do with the banks and the whole country on this borrowing program is damn serious. In the final analysis, we have to look to the banks for the money we don't get elsewhere."

Objects to Mine Reference

Senator Johnson (D-Colo.) said he took "violent exception" to Morgenthau's reference to mines as a "privileged group" having special advantages under existing laws which permit them to compute a depletion allowance on their property before figuring taxes.

Johnson said the mining of critical metals was a vital war industry and that ore bodies have definite limitations and accordingly are subject to physical depletion. Wiping out of the depletion allowances, he declared, would result in confiscatory taxation "and definitely stop the mining of minerals."

One of Morgenthau's aides told Johnson the Treasury department had approved a provision in the House bill exempting from the excess profits levy bonuses paid for the mining of certain minerals. Johnson agreed that would be of considerable help to the industry.

Dog Owners Get Warning From Warden

NEGAUNEE, July 23—Negaunee residents were warned today by County Dog Warden Al Christensen that they have been negligent in getting licenses.

"The people of this city," he said, "have been very cooperative and friendly in individual cases. But as a group they have not been impressed with previous requests to purchase licenses for their pets."

The warden said that although he has spent 14 days on office work this month, he has disposed of 26 dogs in July in several communities.

The license fee is $2 for males and $4 for females. "We endeavor to spend every other day in Ishpeming and Negaunee," said Warden Christensen, "but in the event of calls for emergency service, we come up here regardless of schedule. Our department would like to see the public cooperate more as a group in getting licenses, but I want to commend those who have contacted personally for the friendly manner in which I have been able to adjust situations arising out of enforcement of the dog law."

Food Prices Up 32 Per Cent During War

ed, or might be permitted to rise more rapidly. It is notable that in this war, the violent month-to-month fluctuations that occurred in the last war have been avoided.

Also, Administration controllers have thus far not found it feasible to regulate all food prices. At the beginning of the price ceiling effort, the general theory was that such things as fresh fruits and vegetables were so dependent upon local weather and supply conditions that price regulation would not work but that, in general, packed and aged foods could be controlled.

The OPA considered granting a subsidy where necessary to keep packers going, should farm prices rise to the point that they could not do business under the retail price ceiling. But so far Congress has turned thumbs down on subsidies. The OPA has found it necessary to permit a 15 per cent boost on ceilings for canned and dried fruits. Some packers now say the meat ceiling is not permitting them to operate and is responsible for shortages in some cities.

Food Prices Only One Item
On the other hand, the Department of Agriculture has been striving to increase production of meats and dairy products to meet the demands for lease-lend and feeding our growing military forces. Some increase in prices of such items appears to have been considered desirable to stimulate production. For instance, the Agricultural Marketing Administration boosted the price at which it was supporting wholesale butter at Chicago by three cents a pound this week.

Statisticians point out that in control of cost of living, food prices are only one item. The national industrial conference board, in its index of living costs for wage earners, gives food 33 per cent of the average family budget. As incomes increase, the percentage required for food alone becomes smaller in the family budget. The conference board's cost of living index since August, 1939, has increased ity to live at peace with other nations."

Enforce Post-War Peace By International Agency: Hull

Hull also called for reduction of excessive trade barriers, international monetary stabilization and machinery through which capital may "move on equitable terms to financially weaker countries."

In appealing to neutral nations to apply "the law of self-defense and self-preservation rather than professions of neutrality," Hull asserted that this was no ordinary war but an attempt by depraved and cruel leaders "to conquer and enslave this country and every country."

In such a conflict, Hull emphasized, professions of neutrality "are as absurd and as suicidal as are such professions on the part of a citizen of a peaceful community attacked by a band of confessed outlaws."

World Enslavement Axis Goal
For the would-be conquerors against whom 28 United Nations are fighting are determined to "convert the two billions of the earth's inhabitants into abject victims and tools of their insatiable lust for power and dominion," he said.

"There is no surer way for men and for nations to show themselves unworthy of liberty," Hull solemnly warned, "than by supine submission and refusal to fight, to render more difficult the task of those who are fighting for the preservation of human freedom—unless it be to align themselves freely and voluntarily with the destroyers of liberty."

Hull did not single out any particular neutral statesman or nation, but emphasized that "there is no chance for liberty for any people anywhere save through the victory of the free peoples. Never did a plainer duty to fight against its foes devolve upon all peoples who prize liberty and all who aspire to it."

War Started in 1931
The Secretary of State said the present world conflict actually began in 1931 when Japan invaded China.

In the years that followed, he continued, the United States "made every honorable and feasible effort to prevent spread of the conflicts and to safeguard this country against being drawn into war."

"But danger increased all around us," he went on. "Peaceful, unoffending countries, one after another, were brought under the heel of the invader, both in Europe and in Asia. Hitler and the Japanese war lords, by their acts and their official declarations, have made it plain that the purpose of the Japanese is to conquer and dominate virtually one-half of the world with one-half of its population, while Hitler's purpose is, first, to conquer continental Europe, and then to seize the British Isles, and through control of the British fleet to 'dominate the seven seas.'"

Realization that these plans and purposes created a state of imminent and acute danger to all remaining peaceful countries, especially to those of the Western Hemisphere, Hull said, "forced us to only a little over 15 per cent. The USBLS index of average hourly wage rates for factory workers has risen more than 30 per cent in the same period."

Sunday Game Tribute To Service Men

NEGAUNEE, July 23—A Veteran's Night, to honor some of the boys leaving town to enter the armed services and to accept other war work will be observed at 6:15 Sunday, July 26, when the Negaunee Legion and Herbie's Service, outstanding softball teams, clash.

Honored will be See Violetta, who has already assumed duties as manager of the Ironwood office of the Michigan State Employment Service; Toivo Mailla, member of the team now in the Army, Royce Ludholz, who leaves soon to join the naval air corps; and Dom Ghiardi, who is leaving for the Coast Guard academy in New London, Conn. The players will be presented with a gift from the teams. A small fee will be charged spectators.

Herbie's Service is leading the league in Iron Mountain, and the Legion is on top of the heap in Negaunee. The game brings together two of the best softball teams in the western half of the Peninsula and will give local fans an idea of how the Legion will stack up in the U. P. tournament in Escanaba.

Al Rudness will serve as umpire. Lammi and Ghiardi, two old timers, will appear with the team for the first time this season. Mantyla, Nault and Lammi will share the pitching assignment.

Pair Placed On Probation By Judge Bell

IRON MOUNTAIN, July 23—Willard Mayotte, 30, and Lyle K. Carr, 26, of Negaunee, charged with attempted larceny from an automobile in connection with an unsuccessful attempt Sunday night to take a tire from a car parked on US-2 about a mile north of the state police barracks, yesterday afternoon were sentenced to two years probation by Judge Frank A. Bell in circuit court.

Mayotte and Carr pleaded guilty when arraigned yesterday morning. Louis Mayotte, who was with them in the car when they were arrested, pleaded not guilty and the charge

Negaunee Briefs

Mrs. Gust Danielson and daughter, Ellen, have returned from Minneapolis after a brief visit with relatives and friends. The Misses Katherine Fauson and Ellen Torreano, of Calumet, are visiting at the home of Mary Torreano. Mrs. Walter L. Lahti has returned from Chicago where she visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Erich Wedin.

Two men pleaded guilty yesterday in municipal court to charges of being drunk. Algot Benson, of Teal Lake location, was released upon payment of $10 fine and $4.50 costs. Reino Koski, of Palmer, drew a $5 fine and $3.75 costs, which were paid.

August Quota Of Tires And Tubes Higher

WASHINGTON, July 23—P—State tire and tube rationing quotas for August, higher in most categories than in July, were announced today by the Office of Price Administration.

For the most essential passenger car services, 58,308 new tires will be made available, compared with 57,097 this month; 87,860 grade 2 new tires will be distributed for the restricted classification of war workers, against 23,402 in July; and 637,859 recapped tires will be available. There were 555,077 for July. The tube quota is 418,910, against 323,087 for July.

Quotas for trucks, buses, farm tractors and other heavy vehicles also were increased, partly because of normal seasonal increase in demand and partly because of "evolution" against him was dismissed on motion of John V. Zanardi.

Thomas Gets Shipment Of Auto Plates

NEGAUNEE, July 23—A delayed shipment of auto license plates has been received by the Negaunee branch office of the department of state, Captain Joseph Thomas reported this afternoon. Persons who have paid for plates have been given receipts and these are now being honored.

Those who bought license plates for the first half of the year are reminded that these are good until the end of August. When they apply for renewal of the second-half plate, they get a strip of metal which covers the date stamped in the plate and the license number is in small figures. Thomas again urged auto owners to get last-half licenses as early as possible to avoid confusion in the last minute rush.

"We always know we'll have that rush," he said, "but it can be avoided in great measure if people will come in now when they can get immediate attention."

YOUNGEST ASSOCIATE JUSTICE

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR

She's as Lively as a Youngster—Now her Backache is better. Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Selling Depresses Stocks; Steels Lead Decline

NEW YORK, July 23.—Selling, while never in excessive volume, was sufficient today to depress stock market leaders fractions to more than two points.

The weak steels of yesterday tried for a comeback at the start, but never got anywhere in particular and, by mid-day, this group, along with scattered blue chips, was in the forefront of the decline.

Of 649 stocks traded, 380 were down, 97 up and 177 unchanged. Among leaders were 332,253 shares of Aluminum of America, Singer, Mfg., Bell Telephone of Canada and Insurance Co. of North America.

All Bond Groups Join Downturn

NEW YORK, July 23.—After making a feeble attempt to hold the advanced positions attained on Wednesday, the bond market lapsed into a slow motion retreat today.

Wheat Prices Go Lower In Quiet Trading

CHICAGO, July 23.—Wheat prices eased nearly a cent in quiet trading today under a limited amount of selling which found little buying interest in the market.

Most other grains and soybeans followed wheat lower, with sharp declines recorded in the July contracts of oats and soybeans, but corn maintained a firm undertone throughout the session.

Wheat closed 3-8 to 7-8 cent lower yesterday's finish, July $1.17 1/4, September $1.19 3/8 to 1-4, and corn was off 1-4 to 1-4 higher, July 88 5/8, September 90 1/4 to 1-8.

Seney Sleeps And Dreams Of Yesteryear

BY KENDRICK KIMBALL
(In Detroit News)

Michigan's "Gomorrah of the Middle West" a few generations ago is a nice place for a long and quiet sleep today.

This term was applied by shocked pastors to Seney, lumber town in Schoolcraft County—and they had a good reason to be shocked over the antics of a large portion of its 2,500 inhabitants, who fought, knifed and gouged each other under the flickering lights of 20 saloons.

Life was as cheap as well water in the hell-roaring community of the logging era.

Today one is likely to pass through Michigan's "toughest town" of the logging era without noticing it. The 2,500 inhabitants have dwindled to 50, whose biggest excitement is the arrival of a new collection of records for the "juke box" in the weather beaten hotel.

One sees a tourist munching an ice cream cone where Tim Kane, gigantic woods boss, fell to his death after running a block with a bowie knife through his heart. Or a small boy trying to fly a kite where "Frying Pan Maggie," who allegedly seasoned her food with snuff, bounced six bullets off a Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic locomotive because the engineer made a face at her.

Bit Heads Off Snakes

The wild asters nod gently where P. K. Small, a rascal of the darkest hue, bit the head from snakes "for the drinks," and where "Raymond" beat time with a bung starter as he declaimed the Iliad and the Odyssey in the original Greek. "Raymond" was a high official in a Southern state, who joined Seney's astounding collection of scamps, outlaws and two-fisted hearties because of a scandal.

Other memories include the Harcourt-Dunne feud and its two fatal shootings, and the epic road and tumble fight between Hughie Long and "Killer" Shea. And such additional figures as "Lightheart," who dwelt in two sugar barrels and subsisted on raw beef livers—Jim Summers, gambler and three-run man—and Leon Zolozig, McKinley's assassin, who swung a pick with a railroad crew.

In comparison life is a wan and feeble thing in the 1942 version of Seney, now merely a railroad stop. Physically the community consists of the hotel, a general store, restaurant and soft drink stand, several gasoline stations and a half dozen homes.

Nudist Last 'Jailbird'

The rugged ghosts of the past would be ashamed to know that the last person arrested in Seney was a nudist, who persisted in bathing in the Fox River without attire. That was 10 years ago, and he was the last occupant of the village lockup, now used as a community storage room. It contains ironing boards, storm windows, waffle irons, a chiffonier, phonograph and other property of several families.

Some 40 years ago a gang of huskies took the roof off the same cell to liberate a comrade whom the town marshal arrested—with apologies—for disturbing the peace. He had merely chewed off his opponent's ear in a fight. "Yes, things are a little dull today," said William Bonenburg, justice of the peace and jail custodian. "We don't have a town marshal because we don't need one. In 15 years I've had about a dozen cases, mostly game law violations during the deer season. Once in a while I have a marriage, though, and that really peeps things up."

HEIFER GORES WOMAN

SAULT STE. MARIE, July 23—Mrs. Marvin Hoonstra, of Gladys, was gored by a two-year-old heifer this morning when she was driving cows from a field. The animal attacked her in a fence corner and wounded her about the stomach and face. After about a half hour of trying to avoid the animal she managed to escape. She was taken for treatment of injuries to the Sault by her husband, who had been working in a back field at the time.

American Soldier 'Tourists' Provide London With a Decided Yankee Accent

London is just as curious about its new American "tourists" as the "tourists" are about everything in Britain's capital. Above, two British Land Army girls are very much interested in the club and whistle carried by American Military Policemen.

BY DONN SUTTON
Editor of NEA Service

LONDON, July 23—The "American tourists" are back—so London is more like London again.

But the tourists who, these days, stand gawking at the snag-toothed architectural relics of the blitz, demand non-existent Milwaukee beer in the pubs, over-tip and under-tip taxi drivers, complain about English coffee and misidentify Cockney girl clerks as nobelwomen—these American tourists are ruddy young men from all the 48 states, and they wear the khaki or the blue of war-young America's armed forces. "America Square"

Their firm tread on the pavements of this great gray city by the Thames has replaced the clicking high-heels of American society women and the rubber soles of expatriate American male loafers who returned—and precipitately—to their homeland when the bombs began to crash down.

1942's doughboys play baseball before uncomprehending spectators in the London parks. They stroll through the streets and offices about a famous thoroughfare junction here that has been renamed "America Square." They date and dance and drink with English girls of all classes. And they get along with the Tommies considerably better than did their elders in the last great war.

Conspicuous in this sea of uniforms which is London, are the olive-drab blouses and "pink pants" of American Army officers—the executive vanguard of the fast-swelling U. S. forces in the British Isles. Their brisk footfalls sound in the dark corridors of government offices in Whitehall as they request this-and-that with customary Yankee directness—and usually get it. They toil, shirt-sleeved and wrinkle-browed, in their plain and cluttered offices by day; they are omnipresent in smart hotels and restaurants by evening.

No British "Reserve" Doughboys on leave in London find themselves the objects of a warm and widespread hospitality which upsets their preconceived notions of British "reserve." They actually are overwhelmed with invitations to English homes—from the proud mansions in the nearby countryside and rose-twined suburban villas to humble East End flats.

Even since the publication of a questionnaire entitled, "Details in Connection with Hospitality to American Troops on Leave in Great Britain," letters offering such hospitality have been flooding the American Red Cross headquarters at the rate of about 500 a day. And there are scores of telephoned invitations.

One Welsh miner wrote that he had lost his wife, but that he would be only too pleased to share his house with a Pennsylvania miner. A Limehouse girl wrote that she would be happy to make a permanent home for a rich American soldier.

Bed, Bath, Breakfast 30c

Actual homes-abroad for lonely soldiers on leave in this capital city are two American Red Cross service clubs—the older American Eagle Club and the newer and more spacious Washington Club.

The recently opened Washington Club is a refurbished hotel which many pre-war tourists would recognize even though it has been partly rebuilt since German bombs destroyed one wall.

Four "bedroom floors" will sleep 300 men. Rate: 50 cents for bed, bath and breakfast. In the building are a barber shop, a tailor shop, a cable office and a branch Army post office. There are dressing rooms and showers for boys who wish only to clean up in the course of the day. There is an office which possesses out information on everything from bus routes and sight-seeing tours to how much to tip a London waiter.

The Yankee soldier may buy 20-cent bus tickets, incidentally, which entitle him to an unlimited number of rides on those famous, red-painted, sign-covered double-deckers.

Can Visit Clubs

To minimize the friction which occasionally arises between two peoples who speak the same language but have different accents and different customs, there are lectures which, according to Club Director William L. Gower, "will interpret the British to our boys and our boys to the British."

Looking to a possible resumption of the blitzes, the Washington Club has a decontamination room and a first aid post, with a trained nurse on duty day and night. The basement ballroom is an air raid shelter.

Any Allied soldier may visit this American service club if he is accompanied by a doughboy. But on the ground floor of the club is the U. S. A. Lounge—a room reserved exclusively for American soldiers who want to get into a 100 per cent American atmosphere, eat hamburgers, and sandwiches, imbibe milk and cola drinks.

The American Eagle Club is operated similarly, though its building is not quite so lavishly decorated nor so new. This club also maintains outside buildings with 200 beds for transient doughboys.

Only unhappy incident in the Eagle Club's history was that day when a young non-commissioned officer, who had been helping to make the place ready for a forthcoming visit of the King and Queen, became so excited as Their Majesties actually loomed in the doorway that he courtseyed instead of saluting. (He maintains that he merely slipped.)

Time For Social Life

The social life of American officers in London, too, is not to be sneezed at. They are guests on Sunday afternoons at large and spectacular officers' dances presided over by the Marchioness of Townsend. They may bring their own girl partners—or choose from the feminine elite of London who serve as hostesses.

Comment of one young American captain: "I always knew Sherman was exaggerating."

SEEK AIRPORT PROJECT

BESSEMER, July 23—The county airport committee was authorized by the board yesterday to visit Marquette county to confer with officials there regarding the procedure followed by that county in obtaining a WPA airport project. This action was taken in connection with a proposal that a WPA project be sought for expansion of the Gogebic county airport, since, it was declared, the county has received no official confirmation of Congressman Frank E. Hook's announcement that the Government planned to spend nearly a million dollars in expanding the airport for Army use.

Carlson Heads Fund Drive For Refugee Pilots

A story in The Enquirer (Cincinnati, Ohio) of July 18, carried a picture of a former Marquette resident, Gustave Carlson, professor at the University of Cincinnati, who is head of the "Wings for Norway, Inc." which is a group of Swedish-American residents who are trying to raise a fund of $300,000 to buy training planes for the Norwegians training at Camp Little Norway, in Toronto, Canada.

Professor Carlson is a graduate of the Northern Michigan College of Education and received his Ph.D. degree at the University of Michigan. He married a Marquette girl, the former Beth Erickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Erickson, of this city, who is also a graduate of Northern.

In the picture with Professor Carlson are Sergeant Pilot Andreas and Lieutenant Nils C. Melin, who are in Cincinnati to help publicize the appeal for the $300,000 fund.

Escaped to England Lieutenant Melin, a native of Sweden, is now a naturalized American, and Sergeant Pilot Andreas, 22 years old, is one of the boys who fled from Norway to England in an open fishing boat across the north sea after a year's imprisonment under Nazi rule.

Lieutenant Melin is a member of the Norwegian Army Air Force and Sergeant Andreas is with the Norwegian Navy Air Force. Both have headquarters at "Little Norway," a colony of refugee soldiers and civilians at Toronto, Canada.

Sergeant Andreas says he is using a fictitious name because he has relatives in Norway who might be harmed if his identity were disclosed. With 18 companions he stole a Nazi fishing boat at night and sailed to England.

He said: "I don't know who the men were that I sailed with. We met only after it had been arranged that a boat should be taken." With a quizzical grin he added: "An organization whom I contacted helped us."

Barred From U. S. Corps Although a naturalized citizen, Lieutenant Melin was unable to join the American fighting forces because he was born in Sweden. He has the distinction of being the only Swedish pilot to hold the rank of Lieutenant in the Royal Norwegian Air Force.

The fund raising campaign, known as "Wings for Norway" is designed to aid all free Norwegian pilots, men who are in the same positions as the "free French." The money is to be turned over to the United States Treasury, then turned into lend-lease material.

From Cincinnati, the fliers will go to St. Louis, thence to Lunds-borg, Kansas, center of a large Swedish colony. They expect to visit 35 cities.

Professor and Mrs. Carlson are rather toying with the idea that the two pilots may visit the Upper Peninsula and wonder if $10,000 could be raised here so there might be a plane called the U. P. but there is much red tape to be unreeled before that becomes an actuality. It is an idea which the "Wings for Norway" chairman is pondering.

Books Sent To Coast Guards In Copper Country

The "8 et 40" has made itself responsible for collecting books for the duration for men in service at outlying military posts, in the merchant marine, and the Coast Guard service. Mrs. Helen Vierling, chairman, says that recently it was found that 40 men in the coast guard at Portage, 20 at Eagle Harbor, and 150 at Sandy Hill, had no reading material and no access to such.

The Victory book committee immediately collected 550 books which a truck from the Marquette coast guard took to the Copper Country. The assortment was an excellent one including books on chemistry, accounting, mystery, adventure and western stories.

The book chairman reminds that the "8 et 40" will continue to sponsor the collection of books and reminds all persons having books of interest to men to take them to the Peter White Public Library where they will be sorted and distributed to supply other needs at stations such as those in the Copper Country.

here visiting Mrs. Swanson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Axel Carlson. Mrs. Swanson formerly was Hazel Carlson.
