Fifty-Eighth Year

Three Men To Be Executed For Treason

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Three men were condemned to death and their wives sentenced to long prison terms for the high crime of treason today by a young jurist who regarded their punishment as a stern warning against aiding the nation's enemies.

The three middle-aged couples, natives of Germany who became naturalized Americans, were pale, tight-lipped and tense while Federal Judge William J. Campbell declared they had committed "the most iniquitous offense on the unholy list of crimes," and pronounced their penalties.

He directed that the men be executed January 22 in the electric chair, and ordered that the women be imprisoned for 25 years and pay fines of $10,000 each.

Save Aid To Nazi Saboteur

The prisoners were convicted of treason by a jury November 14 for sheltering and assisting Herbert Haupt, one of the eight Nazi saboteurs who were smuggled into this country by U-boats last June. They are Haupt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Max Haupt; his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Froehling, and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Richard Weirich.

Tears of women spectators heightened the drama of the proceedings—second instance of the imposition of the death sentence for treason in the United States in 148 years—but the rapt audience seemed stirred more deeply by the eloquence of the 33-year-old judge. He stated that sabotage within our borders was as treasonable as spiking the guns of our soldiers on the battle fronts, and denounced those who scheme "to destroy their neighbors and this nation." He asserted:

"Here then is the most iniquitous offense on the unholy list of crimes, an offense which imperils the structure of our Government, the production of the tools for victory, the lives of our production workers and the very ideals of free humanity.

"It is the court's duty in sentencing these defendants to make sure that the punishment meted out to them will act as a timely and solemn warning to all who would attempt to commit the smallest act of sabotage, as well as those who would treasonably traffic with the enemies of the United States.

"Likewise the sentence must serve notice upon the enemy that the cunningly devised scheme for the use of American citizens of German birth as pawns in the game of sabotage and espionage in this country is doomed to failure."

Mercy Asked For Women

Judge Campbell reported the defendants had a fair trial—"a thing of the past" in the German Reich—and that mercy had been asked for the women because they were mothers.

Recalling the saboteurs' abortive plan to blow up American war plants, he declared the mothers who toil in war factories "in constant danger from saboteurs" also must be considered, and ruled that the three women had "forfeited any right to consideration as mothers."

However, he said the women undoubtedly followed the leadership of their husbands, and this impelled him to recognize "a distinction between the husbands' Nazis' slay two million Jews in Europe, report

Nazis Slay Two Million Jews in Europe, Report

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Dr. Stephen S. Wise, chairman of the World Jewish Congress, tonight said he had learned through sources confirmed by the State department that approximately half the estimated 4,000,000 Jews in Nazi-occupied Europe had been slain in an "extermination campaign."

Dr. Wise, who also is president of the American Jewish Congress and chairman of a committee composed of representatives of leading Jewish organizations in America, said these sources also disclosed:

1. That Hitler has ordered the extermination of all Jews in Nazi-ruled Europe in 1942.
2. That the Jewish population of Warsaw, Poland, already has been reduced from 500,000 to about 100,000 Jews.
3. That when chief Nazis speak of "exterminating" Jews in Poland, they speak of "four-fifths of the Jewish population in Hitler-ruled Europe," since that percentage either now is in Poland or enroute there under a Nazi grouping plan.
4. That Nazis have established a price of 50 reichsmarks for each corpse—mostly Jewish, Dr. Wise indicated—and are reclaiming bodies of slain civilians to be "processed into such war-essential commodities as soap, fats and fertilizer."

Secret Weapon Being Used, Germans Say

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—In the midst of one of their worst setbacks on the Russian front, the Germans gave currency tonight to a story that they were using a new "secret weapon" near Stalingrad.

"A new powerful German machine gun capable of firing 3,000 shots per minute was employed for the first time during heavy defensive fighting south of Stalingrad and in the Don bend," the German radio said.

Details about this new weapon will shortly be announced by German military quarters, it is stated.

Cook Held

Mrs. Mary O'Hare (above), chief cook at the Oregon State Hospital for the Insane at Salem, where 47 patients died of poisoning, was held by police along with assistant cook A. B. McKillop, while authorities prepared charges. More than 400 patients became ill after eating scrambled eggs into which insect powder had been mixed by mistake.

Jan Valtin Arrested; To Be Deported

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Richard Julius Herman Krebs, whose sensational book on his experiences as an agent of the Russian and German secret police was a best seller, has been taken into custody on a warrant ordering his deportation to Germany.

His apprehension near Bethel, Conn., was announced today by Attorney General Biddle, who approved the deportation order based on alleged violations of the 1917 and 1924 immigration acts. Krebs, who wrote "Out of the Night" under the name of Jan Valtin, is accused of illegally entering the country after once having been arrested and deported and after committing a crime (perjury) involving moral turpitude.

The author had been at liberty on $5,000 bond pending a decision by the immigration board of appeals on his appeal from the deportation proceedings. The board voted unanimously for the deportation order on the ground that Krebs had not been a person of good moral character during the past five years and that he was otherwise deportable.

Likely To Be Interned

Since he can not be deported to Germany until after the war, it was assumed he would be interned as an enemy alien.

He came to the United States in 1926 from Shanghai by way of Canada, he testified, after previously making brief visits to this country in 1921 and 1923-24. Krebs assaulted a Los Angeles storekeeper, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to ten years in St. Quentin prison. He was paroled after 39 months and deported on December 9, 1929.

Subsequently, the Justice department said, he admitted he had committed perjury by intentionally misstating the motives for the assault, thus "concealing the Communist party's connection with the crime."

Krebs was pardoned by the governor of California last year.

Marine Corps Flier, Killed In Heroic Action at Midway, Given Congressional Medal

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—Captain Richard E. Fleming, who bombed Japanese warships almost from their nest tops in the Battle of Midway and died a hero's death when his flaming plane plunged into the Pacific, today became the first Marine Corps aviator of the war to win the Congressional Medal of Honor.

President Roosevelt presented what he called the finest medal in all the world, posthumously to Fleming's mother, Mrs. Michael E. Fleming, St. Paul, Minn.

It was as one parent to another that the Chief Executive told Mrs. Fleming that his own boy, "Jimmie," a Marine Corps major, also had been at Midway briefly during the fighting. Jimmie went over in a bomber from Pearl Harbor, he related, to replace a major who had been killed.

Choking up but smiling, Mrs. Fleming took the medal and told the President: "I'm very proud."

In all the history of Marine aviation, only three other fliers have received the highest decoration of the nation.

Gravely, Mr. Roosevelt read the citation for "extraordinary heroism and conspicuous intrepidity above and beyond the call of duty in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States naval service."

It told how Fleming, 24-year-old

Nazi Grip On Stalingrad Weakening, Russians Slay 15,000 Enemy Troops; Fighting Spreads Over All of Tunisia

Axis Forces Landed Far Below Tunis

LONDON, Nov. 24.—(By A. P.)—The African second front fighting spread over almost all of Tunisia today and blazed fiercest on a new sector in the deep south of the French protectorate where Allied parachutists broke up an Axis mechanized column and supporting fighter planes shot up an Axis troop train.

The first disclosures of Axis dispositions in force in south Tunisia—the presence of the armored column and the use of a troop train—came almost simultaneously with a Vichy radio report that the Axis had landed large troop formations on the Tunisian east coastline at Sfax and Gabes, far below Bizerte and Tunis.

Repel Mechanized Column

An Allied communique announced that parachutists had repulsed the mechanized column operating in the south and captured prisoners. The train under attack of American fighter planes had an aerial escort, from which four Axis planes were shot down in dogfights.

No American planes were reported missing from these operations or the continuing bombings of Tunis and Bizerte.

"Local engagements" were fought over the greater part of Tunisia, said reports from Allied headquarters in North Africa, and an American-French force fought off a German "advance screen" southwest of Tunis while the British battered a similar Axis force along the Mediterranean coast.

The reported new landings would place Axis forces across the coastal road leading from Tunis to Italian Tripoli, the last potential refuge for Marshal Rommel's desert armies retreating westward across Libya.

Plan To Link Forces

The Axis intention apparently was to link its forces at Bizerte and Tunis via the coastal road to the garrisons of Tripoli and with Rommel's forces, too, if they eventually escape the British pursuit from the east.

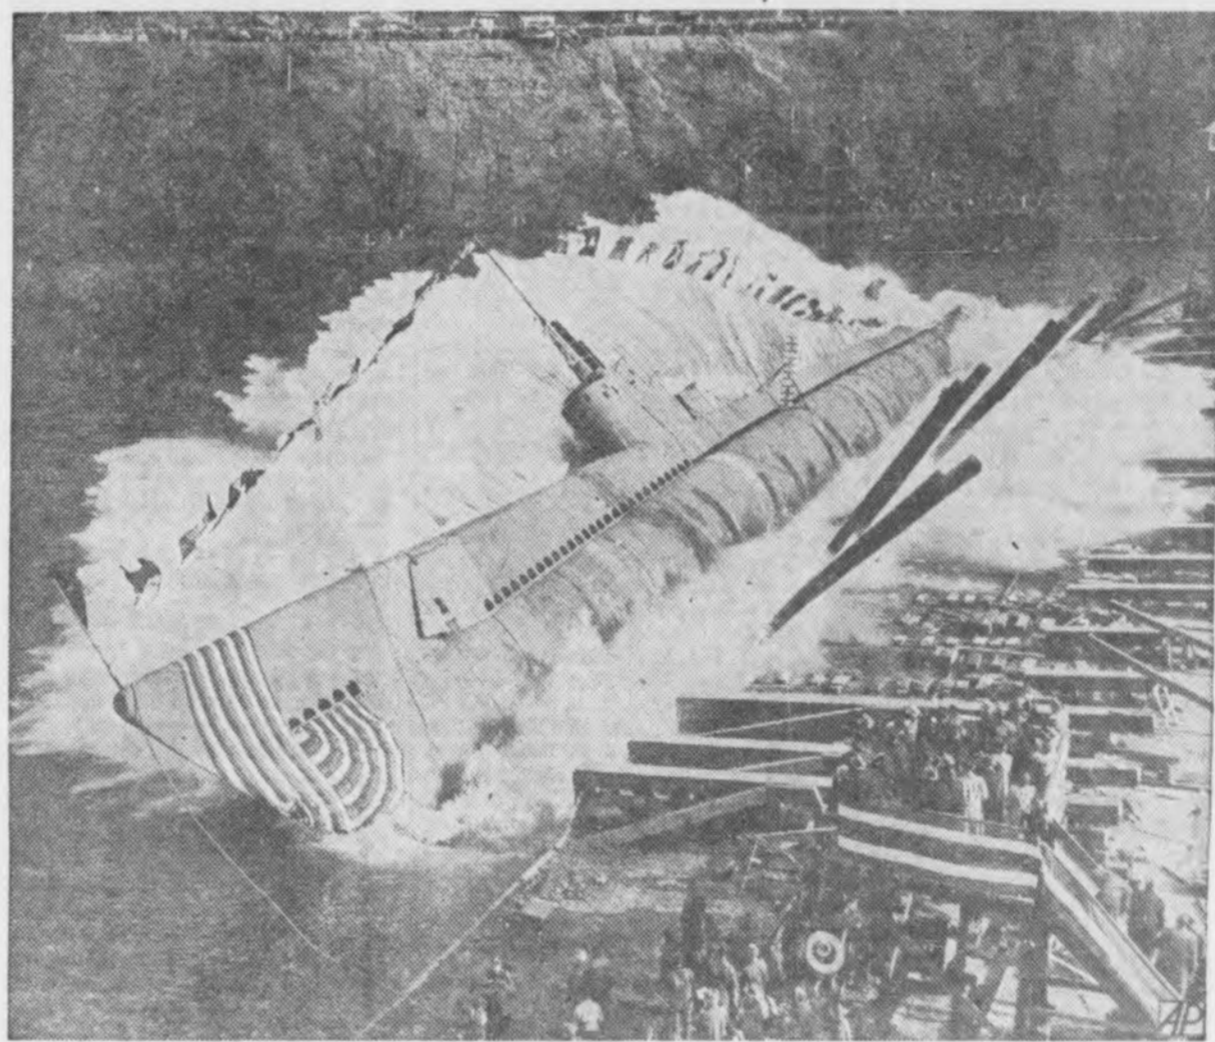

Sfax lies midway between Tunis and Tripoli near the top of the Gulf of Gabes, and Gabes, itself, is some 65 miles to the south, where the coastline turns from the north to eastward line leading to Tripoli.

Shuttling over the Sicilian channel area, Allied airmen blasted the Axis' African port of entry at Bizerte, strafed the Italian air base at Palermo, downed three planes of the North African shore and, according to Radio Algiers, destroyed nine planes on a Tunisian field.

Fourth Submarine Launched At Great Lakes

The U. S. S. Puffer, fourth submarine to be built for the U. S. Navy in the Great Lakes area, hits the water with a mighty splash as it is launched from the yards of the Manitowish Shipbuilding Company, at Manitowish, Wis. A crowd of 6,000 lined the river banks to see the fleet-type submarine hit the water.

Japs Fighting Bitterly On New Guinea

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, Nov. 25.—(Wednesday)—

—Fighting, close-quarter fighting is raging throughout the Buna-Gona section of the northeastern New Guinea coast as the entrapped Japanese troops are subjected to repeated low-level bombing and strafing attacks, the Allied high command announced today.

Nearly every type of plane in the Allied aerial armory went into action to support American and Australian ground forces closing in on Japanese troops along the 12-mile coastal strip.

Enemy Supply Dumps Hit

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's airmen made more than 100 sorties over the battle area, dropping hundreds of bombs of all calibers, and firing many thousands of rounds of lead and steel from their machine guns on enemy supply dumps, sandbagged positions, troop concentrations and artillery batteries.

Nine separate aerial assaults were made on a six-mile strip of coast between Gona and Sananda which bore the brunt of Allied pounding from the air and of offensive action by American and Australian forces on the ground.

The Allied air forces were reported unchallenged by enemy airmen throughout the day after their severe mauling at the hands of the Australians and Americans Nov. 21 and the daily Allied poundings of their upper New Guinea base of Lae.

Meanwhile heavy fighting was reported to have broken out again yesterday in the area around Gona. The Australians who entered that village Monday found the bodies of 100 dead Japanese. The bodies of other enemy dead and wounded were scattered along the beach and under palm trees.

Airfield Center of Battle

The battle around Buna centered around the airfield which the American and Australian units have been attacking steadily in the face of enemy artillery, mortar and machine gun fire.

The Allied high command's noon communique said fighting in the Buna-Gona sector was accompanied by Allied bombing forays on Japanese plane bases on Timor, New Ireland and at Lae, further up the New Guinea coast.

Yesterday's communique reported the Allies had entered Gona, 12 miles up the coast from Buna, and were closing in on the Japs' only remaining foothold in the sector.

The command reported heavy air units dropped 1,000-pound bombs, the most potential so far reported in use in the New Guinea fighting, on the airfield runway at Lae, where the enemy could be sending aerial support to its beleaguered troops. That raid occurred last night.

Food Shortage Result Of Buying Rush

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—(AP)—

Temporary food shortages were developing in some sections of the country as consumers, enjoying a record volume of purchasing power, rushed to none-too-heavily stocked grocery stores to buy supplies for bountiful Thanksgiving dinners.

Shoppers were showing up in meats, poultry and dairy products—items most in demand for military and lend-lease food programs.

Agriculture department officials said the demand for food this week was reaching unprecedented proportions. In addition to the heavy requirements of the Government, that meet war needs, there was a record demand from civilians. Some of this civilian demand was said to reflect fears of future food shortages.

Because of the high level of industrial and agriculture employment, more families than ever before were said by the officials to be financially able—and willing—to spread the traditional American-style turkey dinner, with trimmings rich in butter, milk, cream and eggs.

Large Demand; Average Supply

"We're faced with a situation," one official explained, "in which there is an abnormally large demand for better quality foods and just an average civilian supply. Under such circumstances, it is not possible to provide everyone with all the things he or she would like to have."

While emphasizing that the current food supply and production were sufficient to meet essential civilian needs, officials explained that temporary shortages could develop through failure or inability of local distributors to obtain sufficient supplies to meet abnormal demands. In some sections shortages of labor affected food distribution. In others transportation shortages interfered with movement of supplies.

In some localities grocers inaugurated their own rationing plan in an effort to spread available supplies among as many families as possible.

German Peril Greater Than Last Winter

By Kirke L. Shoup

With the Axis salient at Stalingrad tottering because of Red army "penetrations" from the rear, Hitler's boasted intuitive generalship seems in for its most crucial test of the war.

Counter measures are in process, the Nazi high command bulletin said in acknowledging the penetrations. That strongly hints at preparation of the German public for wide and deep retreat in Russia.

It remains to be seen, however, whether Hitler's backtracking order may not have been delayed too long again this year.

At no time last winter was Nazi peril in Russia as great as is now indicated in Moscow reports of further pressure from both jaws of the Red army vise closing in on the Stalingrad salient. Estimates of Axis forces within that huge pocket of the Don and the Don Volga corridor range from 250,000 to 500,000 men.

Escape Route Dangerous

Russian accounts of towns retaken picture both the north and south prongs widening as they move toward a junction. There remains an escape corridor westward, however, unserved by railroad and not more than 30 miles wide.

Assuming that Hitler has ordered evacuation to establish a winter front on the Donets, giving up hopes of taking Stalingrad, that would be a dangerously narrow bottleneck for withdrawal of so large a force. Another step forward by the Russians could fully command the retreat route.

It seems clear that only a massing of Nazi air power and the reversal of the westward march of reserves forced by the Anglo-American coup in Africa could insure against an Axis disaster in Russia. And with every sign pointing to an air crisis in the central Mediterranean.

Invasion of Japan Only Way to Victory, Belief

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 24.—

—Only a land invasion of Japan proper can defeat that nation, bred in a tradition of divine origin, in the opinion of Dr. Charles O. von der Plas, former governor of Java and member of the advisory council of the Netherlands government in London.

It is possible and desirable to retake some of the Dutch East Indies, he said today in an interview, and prevent the Japanese from getting use of oil, tin and other resources they so vitally need. Active resistance to the invader still is being carried on in Timor, Celebes and Borneo, he reported.

He said if the Allies could succeed in getting small arms to the East Indies, to both Dutch and Indonesians, an effective army of "several hundred thousand" would rise at a signal against the invader.

300,000 Nazis Imperilled, Vast Stocks of Arms Seized In Great Winter Offensive

By Eddy Gilmore

MOSCOW, Nov. 25 (Wednesday) — (By A. P.) — The three-month-old Nazi grip on Stalingrad was weakening today as a swiftly advancing Red army killed 15,000 more Germans yesterday and captured 12,000, including three divisional generals, in a great winter offensive rolling so fast that some Nazi units were cut down from behind in panicky retreat.

Yanks Cut Off Aid to Foe On Guadalcanal

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—

Apparently isolated by a tight blockade, Japanese on the island of Guadalcanal are yielding ground to slowly advancing American troops whose ultimate aim is to drive the foe into the sea, the Navy disclosed today.

Vigilant day and night patrols, presumably by aircraft and naval vessels, have made it "very unlikely" that the enemy has been able to get reinforcements ashore, Secretary of the Navy Knox said at a press conference.

A short time later, a communique said that on November 23 "United States forces continued limited advances west of the Matinikou river. This stream lies west of Henderson airfield, vital point in the American positions."

On the night of November 22-23, "United States aircraft attacked enemy positions," the communique stated, without giving details.

Before the great naval battle a fortnight ago, the Japanese were landing reinforcements on the island almost every other night. Cruiser-destroyer groups would come close to the beaches and feed in forces of up to 300 men.

"It remains to be seen, however, whether Hitler's backtracking order may not have been delayed too long again this year."

Boys Smothered To Death

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov. 24.—

—Scudder Hess, eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hess, Grand Rapids, smothered to death when a sand bank under which he had tunneled while playing caved in upon him. Efforts to revive him failed and he was pronounced dead by Dr. Paul W. Blossom, coroner.

Russians Official Announcements Raised the Toll of Nazis to 77,000 Dead and Captured, Not Counting Huge Numbers of Wounded Who Apparently Were Freezing to Death on the Frozen Steppes as Did Other German Units Last Winter in the Rout from Moscow.

Reds Seize War Equipment

The Red army's effort to encircle the entire Nazi army stationed before Stalingrad, estimated at 300,000, clearly was gaining in power. Two communique told of vast stocks of war equipment falling to the Red army tide, of at least one enemy airplane being seized so swiftly that scores of German planes were unable to take to the air.

Inside Stalingrad, itself, the Russians in front assaults also were gaining against Nazi detachments whose rear communications have been slashed by Russian flanking armies sweeping across the Don river far to the west.

The regular mid-night communique said 90 Germans were killed and dozens of enemy blockhouses occupied in a slow but steady advance inside Stalingrad, while in the Caucasus Red army units cut down additional hundreds of Nazis in successful stands in the Naichik and Tsunze sectors.

This bulletin added some details to the striking Russian successes above and below Stalingrad and inside the Don river bend, as announced in a special communique. One Red unit captured a Nazi airplane so swiftly, it said, that 42 enemy airplanes did not have time to take to the air. Twenty-five of these planes were destroyed, the other 17 were captured intact.

One Red army gained 25 miles northwest of Stalingrad; another drove an additional 12 miles ahead to the southwest on a line paralleling the Stalingrad-Novorossiisk railroad in an apparent attempt to drive straight across the northern Caucasus to the Black sea and shatter communication lines of the German mid-Caucasian army.

In the Don river elbow directly west of Stalingrad the Red army already had cut direct Nazi army communications with their faltering forces inside Stalingrad. It was inside the strategic Don river loop that the three Nazi generals were seized.

Twelve more Russian villages were taken in this huge pincers movement. (The German high command in a unique communique finally has admitted the gravity of the situation by acknowledging Soviet penetrations of German defenses.)

(The German radio said the Caucasian railroad was "a clear objective" of the Russian drive southward to Stalingrad, and acknowledged that the Red army had "made some progress" although assuring its listeners that German reserves from the west "have brought the whole situation under control with the exception of one railway.")

The Russians announced that during yesterday they had captured 1,164 guns of various caliber, 431 tanks, many in full working order, 88 planes—many of them intact, 3,940 trucks—a more than 5,000 horses, 3,000,000 shells, 18,000,000 cartridges and large numbers of infantry arms and other equipment and provisions which "still are being counted."

In the 25-mile advance northward of Stalingrad there was a significant subsidiary action mentioned by the Red army had "made some progress" although assuring its listeners that German reserves from the west "have brought the whole situation under control with the exception of one railway.")

A. J. Parker City's Second War Casualty

Marquette's second known casualty of World War II is Archibald James Parker, aviation ordnance man, second class, son of Mrs. Thomas D. Molby, 619 Division Street, who has been reported by the U. S. Navy Department as "missing in action" in the Solomon Islands sector.

Ordnanceman Parker served aboard an aircraft carrier which was hit several times by Jap bombers. He was missing after the raid, several of the crew having been thrown overboard during the action. His commanding officer, Lieut.-Cmdr. L. C. Simpler, reported, however, that "since some of the men were rescued, I am convinced we can not yet consider him lost."

Commended by his commanding officer for bravery and meritorious conduct in action, Ordnanceman Parker has been missing since October 16, when the action took place off Guadalcanal Island in the Lower Solomons. He was attached to Fighting Squadron Five of the U. S. Naval Air Forces.

Letter From Commander

In a letter received by Mrs. Molby yesterday, Lieut.-Cmdr. Simpler said:

"It is with the most sincere regret that I must inform you of the fact that your son, Archie James Parker, has been missing in action since October 16, 1942. I know that the Navy Department already has notified you of your loss, and I presume that you wish to know the circumstances.

"Your son was embarked with other members of the squadron, including myself, aboard a ship which suffered bomb hits by enemy bombing planes. I am sorry to say that he was missing after the raid. Since some of the men aboard were thrown overboard and were rescued, I am convinced that we can not yet consider your son lost. His many close friends in the squadron and myself are still hoping for word that he has been saved.

Commendation On Record

"Should your son not return, however, I want you to know that your loss is our loss, and I can speak similarly for every man and officer in the squadron. Archie distinguished himself while at Guadalcanal, Lower Solomons, and my commendation for his meritorious conduct in action has been made a matter of record. He also was rewarded by having his rating advanced from aviation ordnanceman, third class, to aviation ordnanceman, second class.

"I wish to express my regret at the present loss of your son from the squadron and my sincere hope is that he is alive and will rejoin us all soon."

Archie has one brother, Richard, and a stepister, Lilly Ann Molby, residing at 619 Division Street.

Nearly 1,000,000 Canadians will be employed in war production in 1943.

DAKAR SHIFTS TO DARLAN'S CONTROL—The strategic naval base of Dakar (above) and all the rest of French West Africa has come under the control of Admiral Jean Darlan, the former Vichy defense chief himself, announced. The statement indicates that Dakar, for two years a potential dagger pointed at the Western Hemisphere, has fallen to the Allies without bloodshed. (Associated Press Teletext)

Six Hunting Deaths In Peninsula

The deer season death toll in Michigan was increased to 12 with the report here yesterday of the death, in Mackinac County Monday, of 16-year-old Harold Schlehuber, Moran, shot accidentally by his hunting companion, Everett Litzner, also of Moran.

They were hunting near Moran when Litzner accidentally shot the young man in the back. The accident occurred about 2:15 Monday afternoon. Officers at regional headquarters of the conservation department here said Schlehuber died about five hours later.

12 Fatalities In State

Schlehuber's death was the sixth in the Upper Peninsula and the twelfth in the state.

Meanwhile the search for Edward Hickman, Detroit, continued northwest of Newberry. No trace of Hickman has been found since he became lost the second day of hunting season. All other hunters previously reported lost have been found, conservation officers reported yesterday.

Up to midnight Monday, 7,039 deer carcasses have been transported across the Straits of Mackinac

Andrew and Matt Anderson, both of Marquette.

Carl A. Berquist

Carl A. Berquist, four years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Berquist, former residents of Marquette, died at 11 yesterday morning in a Milwaukee hospital. He leaves his parents, a brother, Gary Ray, and a sister, Donna May. The body will be taken to Ishpeming for burial.

John F. Mack

John F. Mack, a former resident of this city, died in Detroit Monday night at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Sperlich, 55 Colorado Avenue.

He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Herman Sperlich and Mrs. Earl Lidell, of Detroit; two sons, Chester Mack, of Detroit, and William Mack, of San Francisco; six grandchildren, and two sisters, Mrs. Charles Lang, of Escanaba, and Mrs. Anton Mantel, of this city. Funeral services will be held in Detroit today.

Previous to going to Detroit, Mr. Mack was engaged in the grocery business here. For years he was employed in the circulation department of a Detroit newspaper, and prior to his retirement a few years ago he conducted a grocery store in Detroit.

Mrs. Enger Nelson

Funeral services for Mrs. Enger Nelson, who died in her home at 602 East Ohio Street Monday, will be held today at 2:30 p. m. in the Swanson funeral home with the Rev. Wilbur N. Palmquist officiating. Burial will take place in Park cemetery and the bearers will be Nels Blume Conrad Anderson, Oscar Johnson, Albert Anderson, Nels Wahlgren and Michael McCarty. Mothers of Servicemen To Be Honored Dec. 7

LANSING, Nov. 24.—P.—Governor Van Wagoner today proclaimed December 7 — anniversary of treacherous Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor—as Blue Star Mothers day, in tribute to mothers who have sons and daughters in the armed forces.

He said he issued the proclamation "in keeping with President Roosevelt's request that this date be observed as a day of prayer and silence" and to honor "mothers whose sacrifices and prayers are a constant ally supporting our men and women on the fighting fronts."

UNIWINCH
Loads The VICTORY FLEET

UNIWINCH, Lake Shore designed, engineered and manufactured cargo winch, has a tremendous job in America's war effort.

Ships that travel the seven seas carrying arms and supplies to our fighting men and their allies are loading and unloading cargo with UNIWINCH.

UNIWINCH is America's newest development in cargo winches and has been approved by the United States Maritime Commission. Because UNIWINCH is a self-contained unit that conserves deck space and eliminates controller houses on deck, its use results in a lightening of over-all ship's weight and permits additional deck storage of cargo. It is also cheaper and faster to install.

UNIWINCH is a Lake Shore contribution to Victory, as are the Gun Mount Castings, Machine Tool Parts, Airplane Parts and Airplane Engine Testing Bases being produced by Lake Shore and its sub-shops.

County Gets Final School Allotment

Marquette county's share of state primary school aid money, $44,680.36, has been received at the office of the county treasurer, it was announced yesterday by Stanley Williams, county school commissioner. This represents the second and last installment for the current school year.

The allotment is on the basis of $3.645 for each pupil in the county. The number of pupils in the county, according to the May 31, 1941, census, is 12,258.

Marquette city schools will receive $14,437.94 for 3,951 pupils. Ishpeming will get $7,916.94 for 2,172 students, and Negaunee's allotment is $6,608.38 for 1,813 pupils.

The apportionment among township school districts in the county follows:

Townships	Pupils	Apportionment
Champion	173	$ 637.87
Chocoma	312	1,137.24
Ely	199	725.35
Forsyth	584	2,128.68
Humboldt	154	561.33
Ishpeming	451	1,643.89
Marquette	206	750.87
Michigan	319	1,163.75
Negaunee	147	535.81
Powell	208	758.16
Zeigler	462	1,683.90
Richmond	361	1,315.84
Sands	78	284.31
Skandia	231	841.99
Tilden	257	936.76
Turin	86	313.47
West	162	590.49
West Branch	120	437.10

In The Hunting Bag

AS THE years go by and hunters' arguments turn to the best set of antlers they ever saw or heard of, chances are some one will mention the rack on the 200-pound buck shot in Marquette county yesterday by Paul Bunyan - er - Paul Runyon, who resides in Buchanan, Runyon, no relation to the mythical giant of the northwoods, or, for that matter, to the famous professional golfer of similar name, bagged a buck here that had 26 (count 'em) points, perfectly shaped antlers that measured 30 inches.

Lawrence Johnson, who lives on Fair avenue in the Piqua location, brought down a 150-pound buck the first day of the season while hunting near the Panorama fire tower. The animal had seven points.

One of the Marquette hunters who had luck on the second weekend of the season was Dexter Clark. He was hunting near Deerton last Sunday morning and shot an eight-point buck that weighed 178 pounds.

Sentenced to Prison

ST. IGNACE, Nov. 14—Lester Langdon, arraigned for breaking into LaRoque's drug store last summer with two others and stealing cash and cigarettes, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to serve nine months to 15 years in Marquette prison. Judge Halstead said he was taking into consideration the time the defendant had already spent in jail. Raymond Litzner

Chums at Great Lakes Learn They're Brothers

PORTSMOUTH, Va., Nov. 24—P—Two young American sailors who became chums and bunkmates after enlisting in the Navy the same day in separate cities have discovered they are brothers.

Charles H. Woods, 19, next to the youngest of a family of eight orphaned children in Barboursville, West, was adopted in 1937 by J. R. West, who moved to Columbus, Ohio, and lost all contact with his family.

Last September, Charles joined the Navy in Columbus and on the same day Garrett Woods, 17, signed up at Louisville, Ky. They met at the Great Lakes naval training station, where they occupied adjacent bunks, but didn't discover their relationship until they reached the Norfolk Navy yard when Charles mentioned a twin sister at Artemus, Ky.

"Why she's my sister, too," exclaimed Garrett.

Flynn's Trial on Rape Charges Set for Jan. 11

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 24—P—Film Actor Errol Flynn pleaded innocent here to charges of raping two under-age girls and requested, through his attorneys, the earliest possible trial.

In entering his plea immediately upon arraignment, Flynn waived a five-day delay to which he was entitled. Superior Judge Edward R. Brand set the trial for January 11.

Jerry Diesler, one of Flynn's lawyers, and Deputy District Attorney Thomas W. Cochran agreed the case probably will require two weeks for trial.

Flynn sat quietly beside his counsel, his hands folded, during the brief proceedings. He wore a sombre blue suit and his manner was serious.

The actor was held for trial after a preliminary hearing in which Peggy Satterlee and Betty Hansen, both now 17, appeared against him. Miss Hansen testified Flynn raped her during a party last September in the Bel-Air home of Fred McEvoy, British sportsman, and Miss Satterlee testified Flynn raped her twice during a cruise aboard his yacht in 1941, when she was 15.

Three New Headaches For Draft Boards

Three new draft classifications—2-C and 3-C, covering essential farm workers, and 4-A, men who have become more than 45 since their registration—are included in selective service regulations received by local draft boards yesterday.

Eligible for class 2-C are registrants who have no grounds for deferment other than their occupation and who are found to be necessary to, and regularly engaged in agricultural occupations essential to the war effort, according to the regulations.

Class 3-C is for registrants who are deferred because of dependency and are regularly engaged in an essential agricultural occupation. Seasonal or temporary workers are not eligible for these new classifications, and registrants deferred because of agricultural occupations must remain on the farms to continue their deferment.

Further Data Expected

Boards are prohibited from releasing men in these classes for enlistment in the Army or Navy, according to the regulations. Further information to guide draft boards is being prepared by the Department of Agriculture, according to the release. Until this information is obtained, it is recommended that boards confer with USDA county war boards in determining essential farm occupations.

Registrants who reach the age of 45 before induction will be classified as 4-A and can not be inducted without their written consent, according to the regulation. Previously men who were less than 45 when they registered were subject to induction.

Registrants of 18 and 19 will be classified under the same procedure as older men, according to another release. Postponement of induction may be granted men in this age bracket who are enrolled in regular courses of study in the 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th grades, to permit them to complete the school year.

The release emphasizes that the intent of the law is to include only courses of study in the usual high school level, and not to include elementary grammar school or university or college work.

News Bits About Marquette County Young Men in Armed Forces

EDITORS NOTE—The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard and Merchant Marines are growing in strength every day. That means more and more Marquette county men are "Serving U. S." They read and enjoy this column as faithfully as those of us at home. Don't fail them! Send in items about men in uniform to the Service Editor, The Mining Journal, Marquette, Mich., or telephone Marquette 150. In Ishpeming, phone 3; Negaunee, 404, and in Republic, 701.

MRS. AGNES BELMORE, 521 Oak street, Marquette, received good news in the mail yesterday—a letter from her son, Robert J. Belmore, who announced that he has been promoted to the grade of staff sergeant. He is stationed in Denton, Texas, with the U. S. Army glider corps. He enlisted last December, two days after the United States declared war on the Axis.

Norman R. Magoon, 108 East Park street, Marquette, has returned from Milwaukee where he passed the necessary examinations for acceptance as an aviation cadet in the U. S. Army Air corps.

PFC Theodore Honkala, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Honkala, Ishpeming, has returned to Camp Blanding, Fla., after spending a 14-day furlough at home. Ted is just a little disappointed about one thing during his furlough—he missed his bed. Don't feel too badly, though, Ted, there are plenty of sad-eyed nimrods.

Cpl. Francis A. Carlson, better known to his friends in and about Marquette as "Reggie," is home on furlough from duties at Fort Knox, Ky. He left Marquette last May 11 and is with a reconnaissance battalion, having recently been graduated from a radio school. The son of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Carlson, 307 Division street, says the Army is okeh.

Pvt. Toivo D. Hamalainen, Route No. 1, Box 82, Marquette, has been transferred from Camp Roberts, Calif., to the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., which he likes much more. "I didn't think I'd ever get to see Alcatraz, but here it is right in the harbor," he writes. "There is only one soldier friend of mine from the north country here with me (not Alcatraz, but the Army camp). His name is Robert Germain and we left Marquette together. The officers treat us fine and we like it." Toivo's address is: 115th Signal (Radio Intelligence) Corps, Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.

Ten Upper Peninsula men accepted in Milwaukee Saturday for enlistment in the United States Navy. They are: Walter Ernest Hiiipakka, Ironwood; Eldred James Kneebone, Jr., Iron River; Hal Daniel Carpenter, Newberry; William Addison Cattell, John Joseph Toland, Sault Ste. Marie; Benjamin John Couchene, Gladstone; Arthur James DeLaire, Escanaba; Francis William Suksi, St. Ignace; William Paul Thornton, Menominee, and Robert Joseph Trotter, Norway.

Claude A. Fisk, H. A. 1/2, U. S. Navy, writes the Service Editor to report that he had so much success contacting fellows from the home town through the Service Column while stationed in Washington, D. C., that he'd like to have his new address published. Claude, who used to hold down one chair in George Hawke's widely-publicized "clip" joint, has been transferred from Washington, D. C., to Memphis, Tenn. His complete address follows: Dispensary D, U. S. Naval Training School, Aviation Maintenance, Memphis, Tenn.

Cpl. Philbert Clark, stationed at Camp Polk, La., is spending a 15-day furlough at the Joseph Gohert home, 716 North Sixth street, Marquette.

Aviation Cadet Robert Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wood, 135 Rock street, Marquette, has completed his pre-flight training at San Antonio, Tex., and has been transferred to Pine Bluff, Ark., for primary flight training. Bob, a former Mining Journal carrier, has been in the service since August 26.

Gordon Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Miller, 135 West Crescent street, Marquette, has been advanced from the grade of staff sergeant to first sergeant at Camp Livingston, La. Mail from friends is always welcome, Gordon says. You can reach him at this address: First Sgt. William Gordon Miller, Hdq. Co. 822, T. D. Bn., Camp Livingston, La.

Tech. Sgt. Reuben S. Hyry, recently transferred from California to Camp Pickett, Va., is spending a 12-day furlough at his home in Beacon. He says it's nice to be in barracks again with lights and hot water after three months of maneuvers in the desert.

Pvt. Ralph A. Hyry, who is on coastal patrol duty in Massachusetts, is spending a two-week furlough with relatives in Beacon. His furlough coincided with deer hunting season, which met with Ralph's whole-hearted approval.

Ontonagon, Keweenaw Assessments Increased

LANSING, Nov. 24—Louis M. Nims, chairman of the state tax commission, today announced results of reassessment of taxable properties in Ontonagon and Keweenaw counties, involving a 20 per cent raise in the total valuation of the former and an increase of about 8 per cent in Keweenaw.

Assessed valuation of Ontonagon county was increased from $6,922,794 to $9,014,185, most of the rise being applied to industrial properties and the personal property of commercial and industrial concerns. Assessed valuation of large timber holdings was equalized, some upward and some of them reduced.

The Keweenaw county reassessment was primarily for equalization purposes, involving a net increase of $22,285 to a new total of $3,289,350.

HELD ON THEFT CHARGE

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Nov. 24—A charged with embezzlement of approximately $3,900 from the Clark Equipment company, Buchanan, in scrap metal sales, Clarence D. Arnold, 52, assistant purchasing agent for the company, waived examination today and was bound over to the next term of Berrien county circuit court.

Deer 'Donates' Over Eight Pounds of Fat

Eugene Larson, Kaye avenue, won the commendation of the county salvage committee yesterday with his donation to the deer depot at the Marquette Sausage company of eight pounds and six ounces of deer fat, which he salvaged from his buck.

Other hunters who have deer carcasses hanging in cold storage or who have deer fat are reminded to turn them in as soon as possible. Seven hides already have been donated to Bert Dougherty at the deer depot and many others are expected to be added to the collection.

Sell Or Donate

Many hunters chose to sell their hides, but those who want to donate them for the war effort may do so at the Sausage company. Nimrods are informed that the conservation department cannot accept the hides directly. They must go through the regular trade channels or else be donated.

The War department and the War Production Board have stated that armed forces have definite need for deer hides, particularly since Asiatic and South American imports, formerly depended upon, have been curtailed. The Federal fish and wildlife service has been definitely assured the hide and leather trade will pick up the deer skins and see that they are sent to tanners and manufacturers. Many states besides Michigan are cooperating in the drive to deliver this material, needed especially by Arctic troops.

Fall Fatal to Aged Man

MENOMINEE, Nov. 24—Charles Neumeier, 86, died Sunday in St. Joseph's hospital. Death resulted from a spinal fracture suffered last week when he fell from the roof of a shed to which he had climbed to nail a piece of roofing which had been loosened by the wind.

Girl Gun Victim

IRONWOOD, Nov. 24—Mary Grace Zavodnik, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zavodnik, Ironwood township, was killed accidentally Sunday evening while cleaning a .22 calibre rifle in her upstairs room. Coroner Frederick Thiele said there would be no inquest.

Miner Instantly Killed

NORWAY, Nov. 24—Louis De Roock, 33, lifelong resident of Norway, was killed instantly Saturday night when a headpole over the main drift in the Central mine of the Penn group, at Vulcan, dropped under a fall of ore and struck him in the back of the head. His neck was broken.

Woodsmen Needed

AMASA, Nov. 24—Although from 125 to 130 men are employed, regularly, at four camps of the Patten Logging company, north of Amasa, more men are needed and one or more new camps would be opened if manpower could be obtained, it was reported here over the weekend. The four camps now active are those of John Faust, Wallie Fauset, Russell Spencer and Adam Myefski. The Patten company has been cutting pulp during the summer, and is now getting out logs. Shipping will begin in a week or 10 days, if weather permits. The company has a contract with the Ford Motor company to cut and deliver logs from Ford land, in addition to the activity on the Patten property. Production this year may drop about one-third from last, due to shortage of men, it was stated.

Killed in Action

SAULT STE. MARIE, Nov. 24—Another Sault youth died a hero in fighting for his country presumably somewhere in the South Pacific. He is Pvt. First Class Edward James O'Connor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Connor. He was killed in action "In the performance of his duty and in the service of his country" according to a telegram received by Mr. O'Connor, former city commissioner, from Lt. Gen. T. Holcomb, commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps.

Prisoner of Germans

IRON RIVER, Nov. 24—Lieut. William S. "Bud" Oberg, bombardier and navigator with the U. S. Air Force, and who on Oct. 22 was reported missing in action on the African fighting front, is a German prisoner of war, according to news received over the weekend by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Oberg. The following message was received from the adjutant general, J. A. Ulio, Washington, D. C.: "In accordance with the terms of the Geneva convention, with respect to interchange of information regarding prisoners of war, a report has been received by the War Department indicating that your son, Second Lieutenant William S. Oberg, Air Corps, formerly reported as missing, was taken prisoner of war."

The value of New Zealand's exports to Canada has more than doubled since 1940.

NOW SHE SHOPS "CASH AND CARRY" Without Painful Backache

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

War calls must go through this Thanksgiving

Please do not make social Long Distance calls

War goes right on, despite Thanksgiving. And messages essential to the war effort will crowd the wires as on other days.

War-loaded Long Distance lines cannot carry the usual flood of social calls this Thanksgiving.

Therefore, please make only the most urgent Long Distance calls on Thanksgiving Day, and keep those calls as brief as possible.

Jalopy Scrap Roundup Set For December

If you have an old jalopy rusting in your back yard or marring the view from your parlor window, get on the telephone and call Fred Goldenstedt, No. 53.

The jalopy scrap roundup will be conducted here from December 1 to 15, inclusive, under the sponsorship of the county salvage committee, and every unlicensed, unused motor vehicle which has long since seen its best days should be tossed into the scrap against the Axis.

"Goldenstedt, representative of the tire industry on the county salvage committee, will be in charge of the campaign in Marquette." W. J. Weber, salvage chairman, announced yesterday, "and we have been assured of whole-hearted assistance and cooperation of city and state police and county sheriff's department who are eager to get rid of unsightly jalopies."

Serves Double Purpose

"This presents us with the opportunity to get rid of them and at the same time put them to good use. There is considerable metal in an old car which can be melted down to make an implement of war and pave the way to a quicker victory."

Weber related the story of a huge jalopy drive in a midwestern city in which a party was given, the admission being an old "junk heap" of a car. As many persons as could cram into a jalopy were admitted free of charge.

The county chairman expressed hope that some similar entertainment could be given by a Marquette group with the aim of rounding up as many jalopies as possible.

The Amazing Russians

THE kind of a winter the Nazis are in for on the Russian front is forecast by the Russians' amazing accomplishment, after months of taking it on the Stalingrad front and in the Caucasus, in deep and threatening penetration by offensives both north and south of Stalingrad. Attended by heavy Nazi losses, they have placed the enemy before Stalingrad in a pocket. If it could be pinched off they would suffer the most serious reverse they have suffered since they first erupted against the Russian lines to the west.

Even if the present victory cannot be fully exploited it tells volumes about the situation on the Russian front as winter sets in. It shows that the Nazis have been able to sustain their costly assault on Stalingrad and their operations in the Caucasus only at the cost of greatly weakening their positions on the relatively inactive mileage of their farflung front. Their vulnerability to carefully planned and well supported attack is conclusively shown.

But such attack would not be possible if the Russians had not been able to couple their stubborn resistance to the Nazis in the areas of their concentrated offensives with organization backed by large forces of reserve troops and reserve armament for deadly blows at points where the Nazis had not foreseen attack.

It is shown that they have been able to hold off the Nazis at Stalingrad and in the Caucasus without calling on all their military power. It is shown that they used for this purpose the minimum of their strength requisite for it, while they made long range plans for effective counter movements. The new challenge to the Nazis explains the confidence that has pervaded Moscow even at moments when it may have seemed that the foe was on the verge of winning decisive successes.

The Nazis, it seems, are in for a winter comparable in trials and tribulations with those of the winter of '41-'42.

Boards' Work Approved

The Institute of Public Opinions records at 82 per cent public opinion that the draft boards have turned in a first rate job of administering the selective service law and have sought to deal fairly with all cases that have come before them. As many of those who find fault with the work of the boards do so for insufficient cause, it appears that their administration of the law has been, on the whole, commendable and satisfactory.

No group of men not in service has given of time and energy to preparation for and prosecution of the war as generously as those who have served on these boards. They have to hold protracted meetings, with but brief intervals between. As time passed, their duties became more onerous. The first few months, when there was an abundant supply of 1-A men to be drawn on to fill out quotas, they were, to large extent, nominal. But when the boards had to reclassify to build up the 1-A classification so that calls could be met, they became onerous, indeed. They have been called on to make many difficult, and close, decisions. That they have been able to make them with no more fault-finding than has occurred is a tribute to the manner in which they have done their work.

The members of these boards have worked without compensation, and with no reward other than satisfaction over patriotic work well done. As a result of their effort the tremendous task they have taken on has been carried out with a negligible part of the cost that would have been incurred under any other possible plan.

Comparable to them in value of service is the army of men and women who have been engaged for several months, also without compensation, in the various rationing activities. What has been accomplished shows not alone willingness of those called on to meet demanding and onerous duties, but a high order of ability on the part of the average citizen asked to undertake them to turn in a good job.

Cabinet Shake Up

If Sir Stafford Cripps is out of the Cabinet he is still an important figure in the British war effort. He ceases to serve as lord privy seal and leader in the House to become minister of aircraft production, which Mr. Churchill says "lies at the heart of our affairs." A Laborite, Mr. Morrison, succeeds him on the war council, and Anthony Eden becomes leader in the House. What is obscure is whether these changes were made at the instance of Sir Stafford Cripps or at the instance of Mr. Churchill. Whatever the case they were made without rupture of fairly good relations. Otherwise Sir Stafford Cripps would have retired from the government.

The change in his status, nevertheless, will be generally held to be a step down the ladder of precedence in government. It would probably have not occurred had he been successful in his mission to India. He was sent on it because he was the man held to be most likely to attain success. He knew well the leaders of the national movement and there was considerable confidence that he would be able to gain their cooperation on basis of promise of independence, with dominion status, after the war.

But he was compelled to return home without accomplishment. He doubtless did as well as any other Briton could have done, but his failure made him, in British eyes, a figure of diminished stature. Also figuring in the reshuffle is the condition that he has not been entirely fortunate in discharge of his duties as leader in the House.

The changes announced by Mr. Churchill again exemplify the flexibility of the British system of government compared with ours. The Roosevelt cabinet has been frozen, except for death and resignation, since 1932. Certain of its members have been objects of criticism at times so intense that under the British system their removal, or transfer to other posts, would have been inevitable.

Under the British system, after trial, and perhaps error, men in government can be placed where they can be of the greatest value under the conditions of the hour. Under ours they either are held, with few exceptions, where they were first placed or are thrown out entirely, and the opposition has no place in government and little recognition in legislation.

British government is, on the whole, stronger than ours because under the British constitution it is not only much more flexible, but also much more responsive to the will of the nation.

The Wallenslager Case

Mr. Wallenslager, dismissed from his position as chief mechanic for the city department of public works by Commissioner Patrick, head of that department, because of alleged inefficiency, has been reinstated after a hearing in which the charge of inefficiency was in no manner substantiated.

Statements made before the commission by 11 men employed in the department indicate that Mr. Wallenslager's reputation as a good mechanic is well deserved and strongly support a conclusion, apparently reached by the three members of the commission who voted for his reinstatement, that his dismissal was the result of personal grievances, trivial in character, on the part of one or two workers.

Commissioner Patrick attempts to justify his action on the ground that in his opinion Wallenslager, unable to do active work for a month because of an injured back, set a poor example for his fellow-employees by sitting "on the bench." He should have taken a sick leave, Patrick says. It may be that asking for sick leave would have been a better course for the mechanic to take. On the other hand, Wallenslager may have felt it was his duty to be in the shop where he could keep an eye on operations and give advice, even though he could not do active work. In any event there is nothing in his conduct to support Patrick's charge of inefficiency.

Commissioner McGinley, who voted with Patrick against Wallenslager, intimates that he acted on the strength of certain testimony not brought out in public hearing or in private meetings at which the case was discussed. If that is true, Mr. McGinley owed it to the other commissioners, as well as to Wallenslager, to put all his cards on the table.

As it stands on the record the case borders on the ridiculous, so far as Patrick and McGinley are concerned. The testimony and vote of three commissioners vindicate Wallenslager and he can, if he wants to, go back to his city job. But he has another job—one of several offered him immediately after he was fired—and he might be wise to stay where he is. He knows two commissioners are against him. He does not know how long the lineup will be three to two in his favor.

Contemporary Opinion

Embattled Individualist

It has been officially prophesied that 300,000 retail stores face closure during the coming year. This dire prediction may or may not prove true. But it does indicate to some extent the rigors of war time merchandising. Retail distribution is another one of those "non-essential" industries without which the country cannot get along. Every war worker must be fed, clothed and housed. And it is up to the merchant to do it. His shelves may be bare of many scarce commodities. He may be utterly confused on some of the new and complicated price regulations. He is up against the labor problem. His taxes are skyrocketing. His profit margins are dwindling. The government employs an army of snoopers to catch him in the act of violating regulations. He is the embattled individualist in a war-regimented economy. And yet he must keep going because we cannot get along without him.—Michigan Manufacturer and Financial Record.

Through Their Stomach

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard in fair weather and foul has kept up his leather-lunged chant that "Food will win the war." It was not always clear to everybody what he meant but, now that United States forces are in Africa, Mr. Wickard is able to illustrate. It is a political necessity, he told a New York audience, that starvation disappear from any country occupied by American troops. "We must make sure that reoccupation by our forces will be accompanied by a swift and well-planned importation of food, seed and essential supplies."

It hardly needs our comment to point out the good sense of this program, which seeks the way to nation's hearts through their stomach. Now that Hitler is penned in Europe—or will be when Tunisia falls—the war's duration depends more than ever on his hold over the subject Europeans he must police, and also feed. Certainly there could be no surer means of loosening his grip or preparing the way for invasion of the continent than to let Europeans know what liberation means by way of improvements in the menu.

Let starving Frenchmen know their compatriots are dining on T-bone steaks and the life of Gauleiter Laval will not be worth a link of sausage. The thought makes us fairly yearn for meat rationing. Send all the T-bones and spare ribs to Africa, we say, and let the aroma of the cooking drift over Europe. Food will come darn near winning the war!—Detroit News.

Thirty Years Ago

(November 25, 1912)

Marquette M. K. Reynolds has some unique photographs as a result of the heavy storm that swept the lake Saturday night and Sunday. The seas washed over the embankment between the Lake Shore boulevard and the lake near the intersection with the Pine street road at the furnace location, flooding the low land and giving the boulevard for some few hundred feet the appearance of a river. It was covered with several inches of water. Sunday Mr. Reynolds took a light canoe to the boulevard and obtained several snapshots of the craft as it was pulled here and there over the highway.

The L. S. & I. railway closed its ore shipping season of 1912, loading the steamers Robbins and Grammer. The South Shore railway expects to close the season tomorrow when the steamer James Block is due to be loaded.

Sheriff Lehman received word from Humboldt that a saloon had been burglarized there. The robber made away with $20 in cash from the till. He also took two quarts of fine whiskey.

S. T. McReavey, the Mangum lumberman, spent the day in Marquette attending to business.

Ishpeming

Miss Martha Anderson, who has been a member of the choir of the Swedish Lutheran church, was tendered a surprise by the organization at her home on North Pine street. Miss Anderson soon will leave for Minneapolis, where she will reside.

Sleighs and cutters were in use here yesterday. The temperature was high and many enjoyed their first sleigh ride of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Nelson, 312 Jasper street, are the parents of a son.

John Hooper, one of Ishpeming's pioneer residents, was tendered a birthday surprise at his home on South Main street by members of his family. Mr. Hooper is 72 years of age. He has been a resident of the Lake Superior country for more than 45 years, having lived in the Copper Country before coming to Ishpeming.

Jacob Niemi and John Nurmi will leave tomorrow for Ironwood to attend a meeting of the Knights of Kaleva society. Delegates will be in attendance from every branch in the Upper Peninsula.

Neegaunaw

Robert Northey, of Northey Brothers, cigar manufacturers, transacted business in Gwin. About 75 students are now enrolled in the night school being conducted in the Case street building. It is expected that the enrollment will be nearly double that before the first of the year.

A petition asking for the use of the gymnasium in the high school building, signed by several Neegaunaw business men and many young men, will be presented to the board of education Friday evening. A member of the committee which is circulating the petition said that only one or two of the business men had refused to sign it. The young men of the town now have no place where they can spend their evenings to as good advantage as in the gymnasium. If the petition is granted it is planned to perfect an organization which will defray expenses connected with opening the gymnasium. It is a question what action the board will take on the petition. When the school was first opened, the board received many requests for use of the auditorium for entertainments by lodges and individuals. It was then decided that it should be used only for school entertainments. (From The Mining Journal Files)

War Changes Tastes

The war has wrought some drastic changes in America's reading tastes.

What but war could empty the shelves at Brentano's, leading Fifth avenue bookseller, of Dutton's "Navigation"—and keep them empty?

What but war could have popularized books on "How to Read Blueprints," books like "The Officer's Guide," "A Mathematics Refresher," "How to Get a Rating or Commission?"

The sale of technical, expensive "Jane's Fighting Ships" has jumped. Familiar volumes on jujitsu have currently bowed in popularity to a friendly little book on commando tactics called "Get Tough" that tells, and shows you with diagrams, how to break an opponent's arm or leg—suit yourself.

"The increase in demand for technical books," says H. K. Hutchens, Brentano's advertising manager, "is one of three important changes in America's wartime reading."

"Travel books," says Hutchens, listing another, "are out."

The third change is the trend from fiction to war and political books. "This does not mean," Hutchens elaborates, "that fiction is out-selling fiction. It never has, but in its own field it has made the vaster strides."

"Now here's a new category," says Hutchens, "touting Roul de Roussy de Sales' 'The Making of Tomorrow.'" "These postwar books. People are buying them." His pointing finger indicates Condifre's "Agenda for a Postwar World," Carr's "Condition of Peace," Hoover's "The Problems of Lasting Peace."

"There we are," deplors Hutchens, "losing the war and talking about how we're going to put it over on them at the peace conference."

But whether it's after war, the politics of war, returned foreign correspondents' accounts of war, "that's what the people want. They're so war conscious they'll read anything connected with it."

Hal Mattson, authors' agent, lists the decline of "escape" fiction as another chief change in wartime reading.

"You can't," says Mattson, "have anything written in a 1942-scene that sounds authentic without taking cognizance of the war."

"That doesn't mean the hero has to be a soldier. He may be a civilian, but if he is operating in 1942 and lives in New York he carries a gas rationing card and goes through a voluntary meatless Tuesday like everybody else."

Paradoxically, the place where escape fiction does seem to be preferred is in the armed forces. Servicemen put adventure and western stories first on their list.

Next in order, they prefer historical books, mystery and detective novels, biography and technical books.—Trudi McCullough in the Baltimore Sun.

Quotations

The time is here when all American people must understand that unnecessary travel can do real and serious harm to the war effort. Conditions will become much worse unless the American public comes to the rescue.—Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman.

The only test for military equipment is actual combat. It is a tribute to our military commands and aeronautical engineers that after less than one year of war we are bringing our planes to the point where they not only compete with, but usually excel, those of the enemy.—A. T. Colwell, aircraft manufacturing executive.

It is to our colleges and universities that we must look, not so much for the solution of our problems as for young men who have what it takes to solve them.—President Everett Case of Colgate University.

Whither Italy?

(November 25, 1942)

Sir Gerald Campbell, special assistant to British Ambassador Lord Halifax, predicted in New York a few days ago that as a result of the war in Africa, Italy might drop out of the war. He forecast a serious wave of reaction in that unhappy country when the Italian people learned how Rommel had abandoned scores of thousands of Italian troops in Libya. He cautioned, however, that no figure of national prominence in Italy has yet arisen to challenge Mussolini's control.

Sir Gerald's prediction derives from something more than mere wishful thinking; it has for its foundation the whole record of Italy's role in the war and certain concrete actions of her own government has taken.

The war has never been popular with the Italian people; even when the axis was winning in Africa there was little enthusiasm to be noted. They entered it ill-prepared to fight a protracted war. It will be recalled that it was not until two weeks before the fall of France that Italy declared war on its one-time ally. It was that act that President Roosevelt—with good reason—described as a "stab in the back" on June 11, 1940, one day after the Italian declaration. Clearly at that time Mussolini confidently expected the immediate and total collapse of the allies; he was thinking principally of what crumbs he could catch from the peace table if Italy were in on the "kill."

But the Fascist leader miscalculated. He led his country into war although it was a proven failure as an instrument of Italian enrichment on the basis of the ventures in Ethiopia and Spain. He invested heavily in both—far more in Spain than did Hitler—but neither paid him any returns. What had long been a country afflicted with serious industrial maladjustment became one bowed down by the drain of man-power and productive facilities of wars that brought no returns.

Italy has been confronted by an

New York Chats

By Charles B. Driscoll

NEW YORK—Cayenne pepper, used with discretion, adds a fine flavor to many dishes, but most of all, to oyster stew.

This simple doctrine I have been trying to put over with the Grand Central oyster bar for 17 years.

I think the best standard oyster stew in town is consumed by some thousands daily at Grand Central Terminal. But my contention is that they could make it much better by the addition of a mere speck of genuine cayenne.

Concerning this, I have talked to all the waiters, head waiters, captains, and majors, and have written at length to the president of the Union News Company, which owns the concession, I'm told.

I had no reply to my letter. From the waiters and head waiters I get blunt statements that red pepper is red pepper, and they know nothing about cayenne.

So, on a recent evening, I took two friends to the oyster bar at Grand Central. When the stew came up, savory and steaming, I ventured to suggest, "I can't get these people to serve cayenne pepper with their stews. Instead, they give you a dash of a tasteless paprika, just for the color effect. They don't know what real cayenne is, so I have brought along a small shaker of cayenne. I hope you will pardon me while I use a little shake, too, if I have any left."

Thereupon, with fine showmanship, I pulled out of my brief case a one-pound tin of cayenne. One pound of pepper, ground, uses a big can.

I opened the can, and took out a little on a spoon, for my own stew. Each of my friends asked for a whiff. People up and down the counter asked a bit.

Soon, customers were pouring salt and pepper out of the glass shakers belonging to Union News, and asking me to fill them with cayenne. I, being out for missionary work, obliged.

About this time, Georges, captain of waiters, formerly of the Algonquin, and an old friend of mine,

Title By Default

Less than a month after the R. A. F. blasted his great armament plant at Le Creusot, word comes from Paris of the death of Charles Prosper Eugene Schneider. It was, we feel sure, the ravages of age rather than rage or heartbreak over the devastation of his principal plant that contributed to his death. For France's greatest—perhaps the world's greatest—munitions maker was seldom given to temperamental extremes. M. Schneider was, by his own admission, a cynic, albeit an elegant and fashionably weary one. He was, in short, admirably equipped intellectually to carry on his trade as producer and impartial seller of instruments for mass death. That his success was phenomenal is a matter of record. He dominated the French arms industry. Through its subsidiaries he controlled most of the important armament factories of central Europe, including the Skoda Works. And his influence extended over banks, newspapers, mines, steel mills, and so on.

Yet, it was in matters which were not of public record and which involved the devious pattern of international finance and diplomacy that M. Schneider scored the personal triumphs that won him public acknowledgment as "the world's greatest peril to peace." It was a title to which he acceded more or less by default after the death of Sir Basil Zharoff. M. Schneider, it should be freely admitted, never seemed quite as sinister as the mysterious Zharoff. But, far be it from us to rank either in the hierarchy of those who used to be—and will again be—called merchants of death. M. Schneider's passing, however, does serve to recall an

Looking At A Road

Across Canada from Dawson Creek to Fairbanks, Alaska, rolls the new Alcan highway, a road more than 1,500 miles long that may become one of the most important war-supply arteries in the world. The building of it involved so many difficult contracting problems that Engineering News-Record sent its Western editor, Harold W. Richardson, to look over the road and report the technical achievements for road builders back home. Recently the News-Record published a preliminary report, which should be brought to the notice of youngsters in school who believe that modern journalists and engineers do most of their thinking in office chairs. Editor Richardson went by rail to Dawson Creek, riding at night in an upper berth of an old sleeper which "rolled and pitched all night over rough track while the car creaked and groaned." In an Army command car he went to Peace River, crossing on a ferry "in high wind, with difficulty." Reporting the grave supply problems, which threatened starvation for some workers, he cited his four-hour flight "in a nifty little seaplane," and estimated he had ridden 850 miles in a jeep. "My buddies," he wrote, "are getting recharged to some new and strange form of framework." Looking at a road seems such a sinecure to the fellow back home who must report long, dull dinner speeches. But the Alcan highway is like few other roads on earth. Even a sight of it involves risks.—New York Sun.

The firm received this letter of application for work: "Understand you is in need some sandersons and porters at the plant. I am a porter and would like to know how much you pay. Also, what is a sanderson and how much does it pay?"

The Noose

The man who tried to get the better of William Dean Howells generally lived to regret it. When the famous author was consul at Venice, he was quite stout, but not at all ashamed of it.

One day a friend, an extremely tall and lanky individual, called on Howells and exclaimed derisively: "My friend, if I were as fat as you are, I would hang myself."

"Well," said Howells, "if I ever decide to take your advice I'll use you for the rope."

Today In Washington

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24.—The American people ought to be made familiar with a new kind of official communique which would tell them not merely what the Japanese Navy has lost but what it still retains.

Unfortunately the basic information needed for such a communique is at present lacking. For in all candor it must be confessed that despite the honest belief of commanders on the spot as to what they destroyed, the smoke of battle and the difficulties of observation in night flying do not permit any such thing as a completely accurate score of what ships actually have been lost by either side.

Worse than this from the standpoint of appraisal of naval strength is the fact that nobody here knows absolutely what the Japanese Navy really consisted of when the war broke out or what has been built since.

Our clear-cut victory in the Solomon Islands battle is gratifying in every respect but an objective appraisal of the situation must be given, namely that the United States Navy faces a grim struggle for the supremacy of the Pacific and despite the optimistic inferences that can be drawn from the facts as already given out, the United States is by no means assured of victory as yet.

Japan Has Substantial Navy

To put it another way, the Japanese have a substantial Navy left which can impede our further progress from the Solomons and is still capable of a serious attack on Midway and Hawaii. If the enemy should by chance inflict a severe loss on what ships we have in the Pacific in any future battle, our strength in that ocean could be badly impaired and our efforts to maintain our supply lines crippled.

The Navy Department itself exudes neither optimism nor pessimism. It isn't trying to influence morale either way. It has been called "cautious" and "conservative" but neither of these terms really describes its deep-seated concern. Its attitude is based upon a knowledge that a mammoth job has been given our commanders in the Pacific with inadequate weapons and inadequate bases and that at the same time the United States Navy is to a large extent also responsible for protecting the Atlantic.

Few can realize the anxiety which has been felt here these last few months while the Navy was engaged in preparing to convoy the huge Atlantic Armada destined to North Africa and at the same time watching the Solomons area in the Pacific. Few will know till the war is over what risks were involved in dispersing our ships from ocean to ocean or how badly we

Glass May Replace Steel

The possibilities of glass as a substitute for war vital steel in reinforcing concrete is reported by the British press.

Two British architects who have been experimenting in this field state that glass reinforced concrete will carry four times the maximum load specified by the government for air raid shelters and they are now studying its use in spans up to 18 feet.

The glass used in the experiments is not specially strengthened. Strips are cut from the outer edge of glass as it comes from the rolling mill since this edge, being fire finished, is considered stronger for reinforcement purposes than cut or polished glass. The outer edges are usually cut off and remelted—therefore production is economical.—Foreign Commerce Weekly.

Military Idiots

In the first World War the first British expeditionary forces proudly called themselves the "Old Contemptibles," and today the Allied forces opposing the Axis are just as proud to be known as "the military idiots."

Just how the "Contemptible" phrase originated is a debatable point. The late Kaiser Wilhelm II is supposed to have ordered his army, on Aug. 19, 1914, to "walk over Gen. French's contemptible little army," which had landed on the coastlines. The Kaiser always denied that he had ever used such an expression.

Adolf Hitler, however, used his "military idiot" compliment for all the world to hear on Sept. 30, 1942, when he made his winter relief address in the Berlin Sports palace before 10,000 wounded soldiers.

"If I had an enemy of great military caliber I could figure out where he would attempt to attack," said the Fuehrer, "but as I have to deal with an enemy who is a military idiot one cannot say where the invasion attempt will be made."

Men Wanted To Train For Signal Corps

Applicants for enlistment in the U. S. Army Signal corps will be interviewed at the Northland hotel December 8 and 9 by Signal corps representatives of the Sixth Service Command.

Qualified men between 18 and 45 years of age, able to pass the Army classification test and physical examination will be accepted for training leading to enlistment in the Signal corps reserve. During the training period they will be considered civilian employees of the War department.

Having expressed a willingness to enlist in the Signal corps reserve upon completion of the training, they will be removed from the jurisdiction of the local draft board and will be under the authority of the chief signal officer of the Sixth Service Command, who may call applicants to duty at any time.

While training, they will receive salaries ranging from $1,020 to $2,000 a year, depending upon their education, background and results of the Army classification test.

Employees of Detroit War Plant Walk Out

DETROIT, Nov. 24—P—Nearly 1,000 employees of the Murray Corporation of America's Ecorse plant walked out this afternoon in what a company spokesman described as an apparent protest against failure of the War Labor Board to approve a union-company agreement on wage increases.

Officials of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) Murray Local No. 2 said the walkout was unauthorized and that they were making every effort to get the men to return to their jobs. The plant is engaged in war production.

The company spokesman said management and UAW-CIO representatives signed an agreement November 3 providing a 10-cent hour wage raise for tool and die makers and a 4-cent increase for production workers. A stipulation asking approval of the increases was forwarded to the WLB, he said, but there has been no reply.

OPA Wants Food Records In December

A request addressed to proprietors of boarding houses, restaurants, hotels, clubs, hospitals and institutions of Michigan by Arthur Sarvis, state chief of the Office of Price Administration, asks them to keep accurate records of food they use or sell in December.

Sarvis said that sometime after Dec. 31 the OPA will ask operators of these places of business to make reports based on facts they gathered in their individual cases during that month.

The notification was given because the majority of boarding houses, restaurants and others do not keep records of the data that will be needed. The Office of Price Administration explained that the facts are necessary so that it may have accurate information as to the effect of current rationing programs on the service of meals, and on the use of other foods that are not rationed. Current programs on which particular light will be thrown are those for coffee and sugar.

In explaining his request, Sarvis said: "Regardless of whether food commodities are rationed, OPA needs the fullest possible information on the use of available supplies. Boarding houses, restaurants, and hotels are among the largest users of foods and in many instances it is impossible to procure from them more than the most general kind of information."

"Therefore they are being requested to keep exact records of their use and sale of various foods during the month of December and also of the number of meals they serve and the dollar revenue they obtain from them. These statistics will be used in various ways in determining the effects of existing rationing programs, and will enable us to have a much clearer picture of the needs of public and private group eating places."

Court Defers Action On Aluminum Company Suit

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—P—The anti-trust suit brought by the Justice department and the Aluminum company saying the Court was unable to act because Chief Justice Stone and Associate Justices Reed, Murphy and Jackson considered themselves ineligible. Since the case was not dismissed, Court attaches said it would remain on the docket pending further action. There is no limit, it was said, on the length of time it can stay before the tribunal.

Meanwhile, a lower court decision in favor of the Aluminum company will remain in effect. This was delivered by the Federal district court at New York after a 26-month trial, longest in history.

Traditional Union Service Of Protestant Churches To Be Held Thursday

We Have Reason To Be Aware Of Thanksgiving

(By MANTHEI HOWE)

This year, for many persons, Thanksgiving will have a special meaning. In past years we have been grateful for the blessings vouchsafed us. But, in general, life had been so good to us for so many years that we came to accept our good fortune casually, as we accepted the comforts of modern conveniences like automobiles, furnance heated houses, electric lights, good food, comfortable homes.

Not until we really entered the war, began to visualize the many tragedies that had come to people in other parts of the world, the burdens they have carried in occupied countries, did some of us really awaken to a realization of how much this country and its people had been blessed.

Be Thankful For Harvests

We will not be thankful tomorrow that we have had blessings at expense of other people's misery, but we will be duly grateful that somewhere in the world there are still people who have hours when they can be with their families; that there is one place where starvation is not so close to the hearths; that men, and women and little children may gather about the table to eat a bountiful dinner, and know that because of their country's bounty it will be possible to help starving people in other lands.

That is one of the things for which tomorrow we shall be supremely grateful—that we have the resources and the will to share with other nations.

We shall thankfully do with less fripples and trimmings on the menu, knowing that by doing so we can spare something for those so much less fortunate than ourselves.

Is Family Day

In many homes, for the first time on Thanksgiving there will be breaks in the family circle. Boys and girls who always gathered in the home, laughing, teasing, twitting each other as they huddled about the wish bone—many of those young folk will not be home this year.

Mothers and fathers will feel tears stinging their eyes as they face the absence of some of those young folk. But the tears won't fall. Instead, those American mothers and fathers who are humbly grateful that their children have measured up in the strength and unselfishness of character that has made them willing to do their share in helping to bring this war to a victorious conclusion.

Is Reason For Gratitude

Those parents will be thankful that their boys have the strong bodies and alert minds, the ability to withstand hardships and to keep smiling, that the fighting men must have in this war.

And those fathers and mothers, though they may not express it in words, will pray in their hearts that those young folk away from home may be granted the spirit not to be too lonely in the distant camps, but that they will bring themselves as bravely and courageously in facing those conflicts of the spirit, as they do in facing the dangers of war.

We all have reason to be thankful that this war has proved to the hearts of our people are still staunch and true; that America has other and more worthy symbols than the dollar mark; that men and women still place a higher value on holding to ideals and ethical principles than on merely the accumulation of money; that, out of the vanities and extravagances of prosperous years, the selfishness and materialism that too much prosperity may have seemed to have brought to this country, the war, with its attack on our beliefs, has resulted in an upsurge of the spirit of the willingness to serve.

Thankful For Promise Of Peace

As individuals and as a people we shall be humbly grateful that news from the battle fronts gives promise of a not too distant time when the insensate hate and evil loosed on the world will cease.

We know there will be bitter days ahead of us, that we shall be called upon to make personal sacrifices, that there will be heartaches to be endured, but tomorrow we shall remember to be duly thankful that, in our humble ways, we have been permitted to help stem the tide of the horror and evil that a few months ago threatened to overwhelm the world and obliterate civilization.

For the physical, political, mental and spiritual freedom still vouchsafed our people we should be deeply grateful, for not until war has made us realize that we could lose these freedoms, have some of us evaluated them fully.

Is Special Observance

So tomorrow when relatives and friends gather about the table, we'll feel that this is a memorable Thanksgiving, one that will mark something of a new perception of the brotherhood of man, a recognition of our responsibility not just to our own families, but to all people.

We shall be thankful for family, for friends, for shelter and food, and above all we should be thankful for the good health that gives us the appetite for food and a good digestion.

Thanksgiving is indubitably a family day, one of the happiest and most eagerly awaited days of the year. There will be something of solemnity about the observance this year. It could not well be otherwise, but there will still be the joy that comes from the knowledge of belonging to a family, though all the members cannot be home.

And let us be thankful for the serenity of spirit, the real spirit of Thanksgiving, that made us accept with quiet confidence that which had to be faced in the past year, and that will enable us to face everything which the ensuing year may bring.

Society-Club

Communion Thursday—A Holy Communion service will be held at 9 tomorrow in St. Paul's Episcopal church.

Carlsend Service—Walter Anderson, North Park Seminary, will conduct a Thanksgiving service at 7:30 tomorrow evening in the Covenant Mission church in Carlsend.

Choir Practice—A special practice of St. Mark's Lutheran church will be held at 7:30 tonight in the church parlors in preparation for the service on Advent Sunday.

Dinner Tonight—The Lutheran league of the Finnish National Lutheran church will serve a dinner at 6:15 tonight in the church parlors for members and their friends.

Sold More Bonds—The girls of high school age of Troop 7, Girl Scouts, have sold two more $100 war bonds. That is a news item that delights the Girl Scout Council and War Bond committee.

Lutheran Service—A Thanksgiving service will be held at 9:30 tomorrow morning in the Trinity Lutheran church; and at 11 Thursday morning in St. Paul's Lutheran church, Green Garden. The Rev. William Roepke will conduct the services.

Thanksgiving Service—At 8 Thursday night a Thanksgiving service will be held in the Finnish Evangelical National Lutheran church. The program will be in charge of the Lutheran league and there will be singing by the choir. The Rev. A. Maki will preach a sermon in Finnish. Following the service there will be a social hour in the church parlors.

Service Tomorrow—A Thanksgiving service will be held at 7:45 Thursday night in the Bethel Baptist church. There will be singing by the choir and a vocal solo by Mrs. Alphonse Peterson. A Thanksgiving sermon will be preached by the pastor, the Rev. Alex Olson. Following the service there will be a social hour and lunch in the church parlors. Not only members of the congregation, but all interested persons are invited to attend.

Christian Science Church Holds Service Thursday

As is customary in all Christian Science churches, a special service will be held Thanksgiving day in the church edifice, 223 Blaker street.

Following the usual order of service there will be a brief period in which members of the congregation may express their gratitude for healings and other help which they have received during the past year.

The Golden Text from Psalms (69:30), appropriate for the occasion, reads: "I will praise the name of God with a song, and will magnify Him with Thanksgiving."

The Bible citations include: "O come, let us sing unto the Lord: let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation. Let us come before His presence with thanksgiving, and make a joyful noise unto Him with psalms" (Psalms 95:1, 2).

Among the citations from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will be the following: "Are we really grateful for the good received? Then we shall avail ourselves of the blessings we have, and thus be fitted to receive more. Gratitude is much more than a verbal expression of thanks. Action expresses more gratitude than speech."

May Make Coke Iron

ESCANABA, Nov. 24—Because of a shortage of wood required for the manufacture of charcoal, the Delta Chemical and Iron company, Wells, will experiment with the manufacture of iron from coke instead of charcoal. G. C. Craver, general manager, reported yesterday. The company has produced charcoal iron in its furnace for many years and was one of the very few iron companies still producing charcoal iron. The shortage of wood, however, has reached an extremely acute stage and the company has decided to experiment with the manufacture of iron from coke to meet the changing conditions.

Bishop Page Preaches Sermon In First Baptist

In accordance with a tradition of some years' standing, a union service under the auspices of the Protestant church will be held at 10:30 Thursday morning in the First Baptist church.

The Rt. Rev. Herman R. Page, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Northern Michigan, will preach the sermon. It is the first occasion on which he has participated in the Thanksgiving union service in Marquette.

The following is the order of the service, which all interested persons are invited to attend:

Prelude: "Sonata".....Guilmant
Choral call to worship.
Hymn: "Now Thank We All Our God" Invocation and Lord's Prayer.
Chorale: "Open Now the Gates of Beauty".....Neander Girls' choir.
Responsive reading: Selection No. 145.
Gloria Patri.
Scripture lesson: Psalms 95, 100.
Antiphon: "Praise Ye the Lord".....Frank Senior and girls' choirs.
Congregational Prayer of Thanksgiving.
Hymn: "Come, Ye Thankful People, Come".....Vivaldi-Bach
Offertory: "Andante".....Russell Babcock, violinist
Doxology.

Hymn: "We Praise Thee, O God, Our Redeemer".....Benediction
Postlude: "Thanks Be to God".....Mendelssohn
Miss Ruth Sinclair is organist and choir director.

Weddings

Kellstrom-Fredrickson

David Fredrickson, of Skandia, announces the marriage of his daughter, Miss Verle Fredrickson, to Corporal Howard Kellstrom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mauritz Kellstrom, Iron River. The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock Saturday evening in the parsonage of the Methodist church in Iron River, the Rev. A. Egglund officiating.

The couple were attended by Mrs. Elmer Bergh, of this city, and Carl Anderson, of Gastra.

The bride wore a beige afternoon dress and brown hat. Red roses and yellow and white chrysanthemums formed her corsage. Her attendant wore a light blue dress and black hat and a corsage similar to the bride's.

Following the ceremony a wedding supper was served in the home of the groom's parents.

The bride, a graduate of Graveret, is employed by the Michigan Bell Telephone company and is living at 916 North Fourth street.

The groom, who is a graduate of the Iron River high school, has been home on furlough and will return shortly to Camp Young, California, where he is attached to Maintenance, Co. 6th, Armored division.

McCarthy-Bussiere

Miss Rosemary Bussiere, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Bussiere, 522 South Front street, was married to James L. McCarthy, son of Marcell McCarthy, of Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., at a nuptial high mass Monday morning in St. John's church, the Rev. Ver. M. Jodocy officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Wilbur Peterman, of Lansing, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and Clarence Bussiere, brother of the bride, was best man.

The bride wore a white silk shariskin dress made with full gathered skirt and sweetheart neckline. Her fingertip veil was held in place with a taria of transparent hem. A single strand of pearls was her only ornament. She carried a white mother-of-pearl prayer book with shower streamers of white satin ribbon and pink and white tea rose buds.

The matron of honor chose winter rose velvet for her dress, fashioned on the lines of the bride's gown, and wore a small Juliet cap of the velvet. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink tea roses and small white chrysanthemums.

A wedding dinner was served in the home of the bride's parents for members of the family.

After a short trip through north-

Juniors and sophomores had the best parent representation at the meeting which was conducted in the attendance contest. Seniors had 23, juniors 33, sophomores 32, and freshmen 18.

The singing of "America" ended the program which was followed by a social hour for which the hostess committee was: Mrs. J. C. Har-kin, Mrs. Howard Reynolds, Mrs. Ray Gunnerson, Mrs. F. E. West-ler, Mrs. Charles Franstog and Mrs. L. O. LaBonte. Mrs. George Spear and Mrs. Ian Brown poured at the table which had a bowl of red apples and white cathedral candles as its centerpiece arrangement.

ern Wisconsin, Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy will live in Escanaba where the groom is employed as flight instructor for the C. A. A. For traveling the bride wore a moss-green wool dressmaker's suit, a coat of brown pony fur, and a gold velvet hat.

Christmastime

The group also agreed to participate in the community singing project initiated and sponsored by the war singing service committee of the state.

The program opened with singing of "Pack Up Your Troubles," led by Martin M. Johnston, with Miss Norma Ross as the accompanist.

The group also sang "There's A Long, Long Trail," "There Are Smiles," and other songs popular during the first world war. Mrs. Charles Burr, accompanied by Mrs. George Quinnell, sang, "The Hills of Home" and "The Song of the Soul."

Mrs. W. L. Casler read an article from the national organization concerning membership.

Hours, Wages Regulated

Langan Ford, of the faculty, gave a brief resume of the history of apprenticeship training in the days of its sponsoring by the old trade Guilds, and noted that the vocational training program now conducted in the high school was initiated in 1935 under the supervision of W. M. Whitman. Hours and wage scales are in accordance with the regulations formulated in Lansing.

The vocational training course is open to girls and boys over 16 years of age. They attend school in the morning and must keep up to standard in the required subjects.

Special Program Will Be Given This Morning

Parents and friends of Graveret high school pupils are invited to attend the Thanksgiving program which will be presented at 11 this morning in the Louis G. Kaufman auditorium. The Rev. A. F. Runkel, pastor of the First Methodist church, will deliver the address. Following is the order of the observance and the verses for community singing:

Song: "Prayer of Thanksgiving"..... Netherlands folk tune
Audience
We gather together to ask the Lord's blessing.
He chastens and hastens His will to make known;
The wicked oppressing, O cease them distressing,
Sing praises to His name, He forgets not His own.

We all do extol Thee, Thou leader in battle,
And pray that Thou still our Defender wilt be,
Let Thy congregation escape tribulation:
Thy name be ever praised!
O, Lord make us free!

Trio: "We Thank Thee".....Fitzgerald
Vera Nikolsky, Harriet Alvord, Margaret Johnson
Address.....The Rev. A. F. Runkel
Song: "God of Our Fathers".....Warren
Audience
God of our father, Whose almighty hand Leads forth in beauty all the stars of heaven,
Of shining world in splendor through the skies,
Our grateful songs before Thy throne arise.

Thy love divine hath led us in the past,
In this free land by Thee our lot is cast;
Be Thou our ruler, guardian, guide and stay,
Thy word our law, Thy paths our chosen way.

From war's alarms, from deadly pestilence,
Be Thy strong arm our ever sure defense;
Thy true religion in our hearts increase,
Thy bounteous goodness nourish us in peace.

Refresh Thy people on their toilsome way,
Lead us from night to never-ending day;
Fill all our lives with love and grace divine,
And glory, laud, and praise be ever Thine.

The program opened with singing of "Pack Up Your Troubles," led by Martin M. Johnston, with Miss Norma Ross as the accompanist.

The group also sang "There's A Long, Long Trail," "There Are Smiles," and other songs popular during the first world war.

Mrs. Charles Burr, accompanied by Mrs. George Quinnell, sang, "The Hills of Home" and "The Song of the Soul."

Mrs. W. L. Casler read an article from the national organization concerning membership.

Parents and friends of Graveret high school pupils are invited to attend the Thanksgiving program which will be presented at 11 this morning in the Louis G. Kaufman auditorium.

The Rev. A. F. Runkel, pastor of the First Methodist church, will deliver the address. Following is the order of the observance and the verses for community singing:

Song: "Prayer of Thanksgiving"..... Netherlands folk tune
Audience
We gather together to ask the Lord's blessing.

He chastens and hastens His will to make known;
The wicked oppressing, O cease them distressing,
Sing praises to His name, He forgets not His own.

We all do extol Thee, Thou leader in battle,
And pray that Thou still our Defender wilt be,
Let Thy congregation escape tribulation:
Thy name be ever praised!
O, Lord make us free!

Trio: "We Thank Thee".....Fitzgerald
Vera Nikolsky, Harriet Alvord, Margaret Johnson
Address.....The Rev. A. F. Runkel
Song: "God of Our Fathers".....Warren
Audience
God of our father, Whose almighty hand Leads forth in beauty all the stars of heaven,

Of shining world in splendor through the skies,
Our grateful songs before Thy throne arise.

Thy love divine hath led us in the past,
In this free land by Thee our lot is cast;
Be Thou our ruler, guardian, guide and stay,
Thy word our law, Thy paths our chosen way.

From war's alarms, from deadly pestilence,
Be Thy strong arm our ever sure defense;
Thy true religion in our hearts increase,
Thy bounteous goodness nourish us in peace.

Refresh Thy people on their toilsome way,
Lead us from night to never-ending day;
Fill all our lives with love and grace divine,
And glory, laud, and praise be ever Thine.

Messiah Church Will Observe Thanksgiving

A Thanksgiving service will be held at 10:30 tomorrow morning in the Messiah Lutheran church. Offering will be taken which, it is expected, will be the largest in the history of the church. Alex Finlay, violinist, will play, "The Lost Chord" (Sullivan) while the offering is being received.

All three choirs of the church, under the direction of Miss Hildegarde Johnson, will participate in the service. The junior choir will sing "Eternal Source of Every Joy" by Bortnansky. A chorus, composed of the intermediate and senior choirs, will sing Kremser's "Prayer of Thanksgiving." Miss Claire Harkin, organist, will play "Agnus Dei" (Bizet) and "Grand Choeur" (Dubois).

The Rev. W. N. Falmquist, pastor of the church, will preach a sermon on "Our Nation's Gratitude to God." The service is planned in recognition of the President's request, that Thanksgiving day be observed as a day of prayer.

Persons, who do not have a church affiliation in the city are invited to share in the service at the Messiah Lutheran church.

Home Nursing Class Members Get Certificates

Instructors and home nursing committee members of Marquette county will meet at 2 Monday afternoon in the Northern Michigan Children's clinic for the purpose of discussing questions pertaining to the work and to make plans for additional classes which will be organized after the holidays.

At 7:30 Monday night, at a meeting to be held in the auditorium of the clinic, certificates will be presented to the members of the four classes which have completed the work. Dr. M. Cooperstock will give a talk on "Child Care." Motion pictures will be shown at the meeting which will be followed by a social hour.

800 Have Completed Course

The Home Nursing project has been one that has been conducted most effectively in the county. The women have proved that they are aware of the implication of a trained nurse's shortage in the county, due to the war. They, by enrolling in these courses, are showing that they are doing their share to contribute to war efforts.

The courses train the members of the class in caring for the ordinary illnesses that may occur in the family and that require nursing care, and also instructs the women in ways of protecting the health of the family and preventing illness.

Since last January, 800 women in the county have taken these practical and constructive courses of training. It is readily seen that if there is a need for nursing service in their own or relatives' families, they are prepared to help themselves and others, rather than to have to call on the already depleted nursing service.

Classes have been held in Gwin, Republic, North Lake, Ishpeming, Negaunee and Marquette.

Personnel of Committee

The Home Nursing committee includes: Miss Elba Morse, chairman; organizers, Mrs. J. P. Collins, Negaunee; Mrs. Ann McCann, Ishpeming; Mrs. E. L. Miller, Gwin; and Mrs. John Cox, Republic; sale of books, Miss Helen Farrell; registration, Mrs. Warren Lambert, Mrs. Douglas Vielmetti; equipment, Miss Alice Stewart; committee assistants, Mrs. Martha Hatch, Mrs. Mark LaBonte; publicity, Mrs. E. A. Moore.

The following have been instructors for the classes held in Marquette: Nester school, Mrs. Douglas Vielmetti; Guild hall, Mrs. Wilhelmina Hartvig, Mrs. Fannie Grant; Graveret, Mrs. Dorothy White, Mrs. Marcella Arps, Mrs. Mark LaBonte.

Ishpeming Opens Cage Season At Stambaugh; Mathers Beat Redmen

3 Veterans On Hematite Court Roster

ISHPEMING, Nov. 24—Three regulars from the 1941-42 squad are on the team which Coach C. C. Watson will take to Stambaugh Wednesday where Ishpeming high school will open a basketball season curtailed because of wartime transportation difficulties.

The three regulars returning from last year, Anthony Marra, Anthony Gagliardi and William Gray, have retained their starting berths and will be in the lineup at the opening whistle Wednesday night. Marra will team with Keith LeClair, who saw considerable experience last year, at forward; Gagliardi will play center, and Gray and Paul Turino will fill the defense positions.

Nine others will accompany the team to Stambaugh and, doubtless, many of them will see action. They are Douglas Erickson, Paul Lemm, Stanley Winkkainen, Evely Tuomo, Richard Bergman, Francis Nardi, Clarence Aoyotte, Gustie Alanko and Jack Pascoe.

Four lettermen, two of them regulars, are missing from the 1942 squad. The four are Elsworth Hammar and Armas Hamre, who were regulars, and Michael Coluccio and Roy Tupala.

Because of restrictions on civilian automobile traffic, games with Lake Linden and Wakefield, schools met annually by Ishpeming, have been cancelled.

City Bowling League Meets Next Friday

Plans for the annual city holiday bowling tournament will be made at a business meeting of the Marquette Bowling association in the city hall Friday evening, beginning at 7:30.

In addition, officers will be elected and other important business matters discussed. Members of all men's bowling teams in the city are requested to attend.

Howard Bureau is serving as president of the association, succeeding Lloyd Price, who has left the city.

Holder of the coveted team trophy, donated by The Mining Journal, is the Munising Wood Products quintet, which probably will defend that honor in this season's tournament.

springs from Malta, rock island 63 miles south of Sicily—the same horrendous nest which has destroyed more than 1,000 enemy planes in this war.

Landing Ports Bombed, Report

Axis air fleets drawn from all parts of Europe were reported by the Morocco radio to have given Algiers four alerts last night and raided Tebessa on the Tunisian-Algerian border. Vichy also reported Bone and Bougie, forward Allied landing ports, were "heavily bombed."

The newest of the spiffire— which won air dominance over the European coast knifed through the Axis attackers and downed a third of one flight attacking French ground forces. Twin-engined United States fighters soared into the fray to protect Flying Fortresses battering Axis ports.

German Peril Greater Than Last Winter

ranee, Hitler hardly dare bring back to Russia air forces he has been marshaling in Sicily, on Sardinia, even in southern France.

Winter caught him napping in Russia last year. He has boasted that it could not happen again. Yet it is happening, and the full scope of the possible Nazi disaster in Russia, in Africa, and in Italy, cannot be even guessed.

Highest British authority has repeatedly proclaimed that U-boats, not the Luftwaffe nor Axis armies, were the most dangerous weapons in Hitler's arsenal.

Picture in Atlantic Changed

As a result of enlistment of Admiral Darlan, in the Allied cause, however, the war picture in the Atlantic is potentially changed strongly in Allied favor.

Dakar, the great French naval base in West Africa has ceased to be a threat as an Axis attack bridgehead. Darlan has aligned it and all French Africa with the Allied cause. What that can mean in shortening communication lines with the Western Hemisphere is yet to be disclosed. What change it means in Allied control of the submarine menace also is not as yet wholly clear.

That Dakar is closed to the Axis for any purpose and opened to Allied use in the anti-submarine campaign goes without saying.

In former times the word "hill" was applied to mountains as well as lower elevations.

Team Sports Should Be Out During War—Hedgecock

"College football and basketball should be discontinued for the duration of the war," C. B. Hedgecock, athletic director of Northern Michigan College of Education and coordinator of the CPT school in Escanaba, said in an address before the Escanaba Kiwanis club this week.

"I think it is the wrong practice to have college football and basketball in wartime when many of our fine boys are dying on far-flung battlefields," he asserted. "I see no objection to sports in high schools during these times, but in the universities and colleges young men should be concentrating on more important subjects."

"After all, there's a bigger fight on now than any basketball and football game."

Give Student More Work

Regarding the problem of keeping up morale in the colleges, Hedgecock said this could be accomplished by giving students more to do. "Increase their 15 hours of study to 30 hours and you won't have to worry about the esprit de corps of the young people," he added.

The civilian pilot training, transferred to Escanaba on November 1, 1942, was established in Marquette three years ago under the sponsorship of the Northern Michigan College. Since its opening, 124 students have been trained, all except 24 of whom are in military flying service.

Edward O. Wilson, flight instructor, and Hedgecock, head of the ground school, are now instructing 21 students, but the class soon will be increased to 32.

Plans are underway for construction, as soon as possible, of a barracks at the Escanaba airport to house CPT students. Present plans call for erecting it at the

Women's League Matches

Agnes Conway, anchor for the Beta Sigma Phi, scored 508 to lead her quintet to a 2-1 victory over Elks Aloys five in Women's league matches, on the Elks drives last night. M. Williams, a member of the losing five, had 502, including a third-100.

The Campbell Fuels swept three from the Centrals, the College Cleaners took a pair from the Michigan Bell No. 1 and Kinney's Shos defeated Ernie's Photo Shop in two games in other matches.

Shoreland Major Notes

Rudy's Cash Market and the Golf Club five not only have a race on for first place in the Shoreland Major league, but they're tossing the team high game record back and forth.

Last week, Rudy's won only one game from the Golf club but was a centergame 922 which broke the Golf club's 10-game winning streak and erased its previous league record of 908 for single game.

Monday night, however, in taking two from Campbell Fuels, another high ranking team, the Golf clubbers posted a 334 middle game, to win back the league record. Having won one each, the Golf club and Campbells were deadlocked at the end of the tenth frame of the third game, but the Golfers won out in an extra-frame playoff.

Rudy's dropped two to Central to permit the Golf club to advance within a game of first place. Tonella and Rupp blanked the Orange Crush. Deep Rock won two from Bancroft and the S. & S. Auto Supply won a pair from the Five-And-Ten.

northern factory district of Stalingrad.

This presaged an early rout of Nazi forces still entrenched in the ruins of that industrial city, in the opinion of observers. The greater arms of the offensive undoubtedly also will force an imminent decision on Nazi chiefs who had been told by Adolf Hitler to take Stalingrad at all costs.

The northern army of the great "Russian bear trap" had reached the town of Suruykino, apparently beyond the Serafimov sector, 85 miles northwest of Stalingrad on the Don river.

The central army after slicing southwest from the Volga to Kalatch on the easternmost point of the Don river bend, crossed that river apparently to make a junction with other Red army units crossing in the Kietskaya region, 75 miles northwest of Stalingrad.

With Nazi railroad arteries cut both above and below Stalingrad these central armies now were severing road links that ran straight eastward in the Don river elbow, and crossed that river by Nazi pontoons at a point only 25 miles short of Stalingrad.

It was in the Don river elbow that the Russians said they surrounded and captured the remnants of three Nazi divisions, including their generals and staff members.

A six-mile advance in the Don loop area yesterday found the Russians occupying the villages of Zimovsky, Kamyshtinka, Blizhnyeperepoka, Trekhostrovskaya and Sirotninskaya.

The southern Red army fanning out along the Stalingrad-Novorossisk railway reached Sadovoye in a 12-mile advance from Aksai. This village is more than 50 miles below besieged Stalingrad. The villages of Umantsevo and Pergruzny also were taken in this advance.

(The London Express quoted a Stockholm dispatch saying the Germans had "begun to pull out from Stalingrad.")

Republic Has Eight Men for Game Tonight

REPUBLIC, Nov. 24—Coach Chet Brown and his Republic high school basketball team will leave here at 8 Wednesday evening for National Mine where they will play Coach Pat Gleason's cagers, beginning at 8.

The Republic starting lineup will include Jussila, B. Mykkanen, T. Isaacson, M. Toivonen, J. McKeown, H. Johnson, K. Morris and E. Rytillahti. The team was given a jolt last week when Gene Peterson left school to enter the NYA school at Houghton and Stanley Rankinen left to join the U. S. Navy. Hall Hakala, another veteran of last year, is ineligible this semester.

Canadiens Tie Red Wings On Late Scores

MONTREAL, Nov. 24—P—Montreal's Canadiens came from behind to score four goals in the last period tonight and gain a 4-4 tie with the Detroit Red Wings in a National Hockey league game.

The deadlock left the Red Wings in a first-place tie with the Chicago Blackhawks, who played a 5-5 draw with Boston tonight, one point in front of the idle Toronto Maple Leafs, with whom they had shared the lead before tonight.

After watching the visitors take a 4-0 lead on three second-period goals and another in the third, the Canadiens went to work and tied it up on tallies by Toe Blake, Joe Benoit, Ray Getliffe and Gordie Drillon.

It was the second time in a row that the Canadiens had staged a third-period rally to earn a tie, but also their sixth consecutive game without a win. They scored three times to get a 3-3 draw with Chicago Sunday night.

After a scoreless first period, Sid Abel opened for the Wings in the second with Don Grosso and Eddie Wares in on the play. Midway through the session Syd Howe and Mud Bruneteau combined to put the Wings 2-up and Wares made it three with two minutes of the period remaining.

The Wings kept up the pressure as the third period opened and Carl Liscombe notched their fourth goal on passes from Bruneteau and Howe.

Twenty-four seconds after the last Detroit goal, Blake bagged one for Montreal and Benoit followed with the second, only 44 seconds later. Getliffe tallied at 7:20 and, with three and a half minutes remaining, Drillon scored the tying goal after a passing bout with Duddy O'Connor and Getliffe.

Bruins, Blackhawks Tie

BOSTON, Nov. 24—P—The Boston Bruins and Chicago Blackhawks each lengthened their National Hockey league string of undefeated games to five by staging a 5-5 tie tonight before a 9,000 crowd at the Boston Garden.

The Bruins, winners of their last four starts, came from behind to deadlock early in the final period, when Murphy Chamberlain bashed a straight 14-footer through goalie Bert Gardner after being set up by Herb Cain on a rush started by Captain Dit Clapper.

Chamberlain set up the first Boston score, made by Busher Jackson and "Bep" Buldino, 17-year-old left winger in action on Boston ice for the first time. Don Gallinger also beat Gardner before canny Bill Cowley shot the Bruins into a 4-3 lead. This was erased by March's second counter during the 12th minute of the second period.

In their four previous starts before their first Boston visit of the season, the Blackhawks collected three victories and a tie.

Tennessee has too much for Vanderbilt, Auburn for Clemson and Wake Forest for South Carolina. West Virginia should get over Miami and Alabama is my selection in its meeting with the Georgia Air Cadets.

USC-Notre Dame Game May Set Season's Mark

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 24—P—The Southern California - Notre Dame football game Saturday may set an attendance record for the season.

The USC ticket office said today that 60,000 admissions had been sold. Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum, scene of the contest, seats 103,000.

Interest in this game has been heightened by Southern California's comeback along the football trail after taking early season beatings from Tulane and Ohio State. The Trojans have smoothed their opposition in the last two games and may wind up as the west coast's nomination for the Rose Bowl contest in Pasadena New Year's day.

City Mixed Bowling Loop Starts Play Next Sunday

Open to all bowlers in the city, beginners and those who sport fancy hooks and curves, the Marquette Mixed Bowling league will hold its first session at the Shoreland alleys next Sunday evening, beginning at 7.

The league will be sanctioned by the American Bowling Congress, and since the war has caused a shortage of male bowlers on the home front, each team entered in the loop will consist of three women and two men.

Couples desiring to form a team and compete are urged to contact Frank Lynch, Shoreland alleys manager, who will make arrangements to complete the team. There will be no kiddy fee for the customary dinner at the end of the season, but many impromptu parties are being planned.

It is planned to organize an eight-team league. Six quints

Grange Picks Army To Beat Middie Foes

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—Army is back in step again and gets my vote against Navy in what can't miss being a savage fought battle at Annapolis on Saturday.

The Cadets bogged down a bit when the crack backs, Hank Mazur and Ralph Hill, suffered leg injuries in the Pennsylvania party.

Mazur and Hill were well rested while Princeton was being massacred, and Red Blaik has come up with several effective plebes in the way of replacements.

The new coach, Matt Vanni, has some very good material this year, including several boys from last year's Palmer team, and they should make a very good showing.

Michigan On St. Paul's Court Tonight

NEGAUNEE, Nov. 24—St. Paul's, of Negaunee, will open its 1942-43 basketball season on the home floor Wednesday night against Michigan.

Wednesday's game will be a double feature, with a preliminary slated for 7 and the main attraction at 8.

The starting five will be selected from the following candidates: St. Onge, captain; Gleason and Betaglio, Juniors; Polini and MacDonald, sophomores, and Brisson, freshman. Bessolo and Tosive may see some action.

Trendo, Negaunee, will handle the game.

Lawrence Tech Wins

DETROIT, Nov. 24—L—Led by Chet Gabriel, 6-foot 8-inch center who scored 18 points, Lawrence Tech swamped the Romulus Army air base team, 83 to 22, in a basketball game here tonight.

Lawrence Tech had a 45 to 12 advantage at the half.

Hunters Blast Dead Buck; There's a Reason

NEWBERRY, Nov. 24—The conservation department reports an unusual hunting story which concerns Clyde Francisco and Vernon Hale, Newberry. They hunted all day Monday without luck. As they were driving home, they saw the head of a big buck in the woods near the road. They both blasted at the deer and after the smoke cleared, it still stood there. Their curiosity aroused, the men crept slowly up to the buck. Coming close to it, they saw that it had been dead several days, having been shot in the stomach. The buck evidently bolted when shot, and, blinded by pain, ran into the crotch of a tree, where it died. The carcass was held upright in the tree and only the head could be seen from the road.

Elavsky And Parks Star In 33-22 Win

Outscoring the Red and White cagers in every period, Munising high school's basketball team defeated Graverat, 33-22, in the Sidney Adams gymnasium last night. The game, first for both clubs, marked the opening of the cage season in Marquette.

Forward Elavsky, of the Algers, hitting the netting five times from the field and converting three of five free throw attempts, paced both quintets with 13 points. A teammate, Center Parks, followed him in the scoring column with a total of nine, but had the dubious honor of missing eight out of nine charity tosses.

In fact, both teams were very weak on free throws, the Redmen scoring six and visitors five. Each side missed 14 attempts.

Two field goals by Parks in the opening period sent the Mathers off to a flying start and they were never headed. Ahead, 6-3, at the end of the first quarter, they led, 14-8, at intermission. Then Elavsky, held to a single free throw in the first half, netted five field goals in the last two periods, three of them in a fourth-quarter 11-point scoring spurge.

Forward Erickson, credited with a field goal in each of the first three periods and a free throw in the third, paced the losers with seven points. Coach Jim Soli, of Graverat, used 10 men in the Redmen's first court contest under his tutelage. Six of them broke into the scoring column.

School Debaters Lose In Ishpeming Tourney

NEWBERRY, Nov. 24—The Newberry high school debate team lost decisions to Ishpeming and Manistique in Ishpeming last weekend. Newberry did not have a negative team and the affirmative team participated in only two debates.

The debaters, Theodore Lone and Victor Berglund, the latter a novice, were coached by Victor Lone, Newberry high school faculty member. The second tournament is to be held in Gladstone on December 12.

Crystal Falls, Miner Fives Meet Tonight

NEGAUNEE, Nov. 24—The Negaunee Miners will make their first appearance of the season Wednesday evening when they meet the Crystal Falls Trojans on their court.

The Negaunee group consists of six lettermen from last season: Lee Erkkila, Ray Johnson, Charles Kirkpatrick, Richard Pellow, Robert McGregor and Robert Waters; three newly added Palmer boys; Werner Talus, Steven Trewhella and Charles Koski; two members of last year's "B" team, Donald Lampi and Martin Kangas; and Robert Tonkin and Raymond Stille.

This game marks the fourth time that the local boys have met Crystal Falls since the rivalry has been renewed.

The new coach, Matt Vanni, has some very good material this year, including several boys from last year's Palmer team, and they should make a very good showing.

Michigan On St. Paul's Court Tonight

NEGAUNEE, Nov. 24—St. Paul's, of Negaunee, will open its 1942-43 basketball season on the home floor Wednesday night against Michigan.

Wednesday's game will be a double feature, with a preliminary slated for 7 and the main attraction at 8.

The starting five will be selected from the following candidates: St. Onge, captain; Gleason and Betaglio, Juniors; Polini and MacDonald, sophomores, and Brisson, freshman. Bessolo and Tosive may see some action.

Trendo, Negaunee, will handle the game.

Lawrence Tech Wins

DETROIT, Nov. 24—L—Led by Chet Gabriel, 6-foot 8-inch center who scored 18 points, Lawrence Tech swamped the Romulus Army air base team, 83 to 22, in a basketball game here tonight.

Lawrence Tech had a 45 to 12 advantage at the half.

good Baylor array and look for Texas Christian to get back on the right track against Southern Methodist.

On the Pacific coast, it's Stanford over the California Air Cadets and Washington State over Washington.

Notice to Taxpayers

Notice is hereby given that the general tax roll of the city of Marquette, with all regular taxes, state, county and municipal, for the year 1942 spread thereon, has been deposited with me and is now in my office in the City Hall, and that the amount of taxes therein assessed and specified are due, and may be paid to me at any time up to and including the 28th day of February, 1943.

On all state and county taxes paid to me on or before January 30, 1943, no collection fee will be charged, and on all such taxes paid to me on or after January 10th, 1943, a collection fee of four per centum will be charged. On all municipal taxes paid on or after December 3, 1942, interest at the rate now in force, per month, from August 1, 1942, will be charged.

That the city charter makes this notice a sufficient demand for the payment of all taxes on said roll.

Dated Marquette, Mich., Dec. 1, 1942.

GLEN B. WILSON,
City Treasurer.

How slushy days split radiators

THIS often happens: Winter puts on some heat... Car runs hotter... Temperamental anti-freeze passes out. Cold swings back. Anti-freeze too far gone. Bye-bye radiator.

Or else you can put in Super Pyro anti-freeze, with so much stability that even a good burst of Winter warmth will still leave your Super Pyro pretty much where it was—not hopelessly boiled down, but ready with all kinds of its original strength to save your car from cold's sure come-back.

The gist of it is that the more heat your anti-freeze can stand, the more anti-freeze you've always got left to help in disarming the cold. And the less anti-freeze you'll ever need to add. Protection like that for this Winter isn't anywhere out of your reach. Just super your fill of this highly heat-safe, cold-safe Super Pyro—today—for your well-nigh priceless car!

Heiden Made President Of Sports Club

ISHPEMING, Nov. 24—Spencer Heiden, manager of the J. C. Penney store here, last night was named president of the IshpeMING Winter Sports club, succeeding C. R. Sundblad, resigned. Mr. Heiden is the fourth president of the organization now in its sixth year.

Other officers are Al Quaal, vice-president Howard Meldyn, treasurer, and Fred Berg, secretary. A board of directors and an advisory board will be named by the new president soon.

Plan Membership Carvass

The club decided to start its membership drive Saturday, with Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts making a canvass. Although the organization is going on a war economy basis, it has been stressed that its acreage is so extended and its facilities so varied, it will require between $1,500 and $1,800 to finance the club, even if its activities are limited.

However, with this amount on hand, it will be possible to give IshpeMING children and adults a full program of supervised outdoor sports which will be as varied as any in the past, but without spectacular entertainment.

Special Services For Thanksgiving

ISHPEMING, Nov. 24—IshpeMING churches are observing Thanksgiving with special services. One of the highlights will be the concert at 8 Thursday evening in the Evangelical Mission; another is the union service at 10 Thursday morning in the Presbyterian church, with the Rev. Lewis Keast, First Methodist church pastor, speaking.

The Thanksgiving play will be given at 8 Thursday evening in the First Methodist church.

Evangelical Mission
Some of the outstanding singers of the community will be heard in the concert in the Evangelical Mission church Thursday evening. The Rev. Eugene Lundberg will sing, as will Henry Augustson and Mrs. George Drew. Mrs. Maude Mudge will play piano selections. The program:

Invocation.
Hymn—Congregation.
Vocal, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains"—Mrs. George Drew.
Vocal, selected—Henry Augustson.
Vocal, selected—Mrs. Maude Mudge.
Vocal, selected—The Rev. Eugene Lundberg.
Vocal, "How Lovely Are Thy Dwelling"—Mrs. George Drew.
Offertory.
Vocal, "Thanks Be to God"—The Rev. Eugene Lundberg.
"Praise the Name of Jesus,"—Church choir.
Vocal, selected—Henry Augustson.
Prayer of Thanksgiving

Bethany Lutheran
Thanksgiving service, 10 a. m. Sermon, "Gratitude, An Evidence of Christian Life."
Junior choir anthem: "A Song of Thanksgiving" (Parks).
Bethany choir anthems: "Prayer of Thanksgiving" (Kremer).

First Methodist
The Youth Fellowship of the First Methodist church will present its Thanksgiving play at 8 Thursday evening in the parlors of the church. For many years young people of the church have presented a program Thanksgiving evening. The play is entitled: "There's A Man in the House." The characters are:

Miss Selma Slowcomb—Alice Stanawick
Peg—Hety Makl.
Lila—Betty Holmgren.
Prudence Featherbee—Hazel Richards.
Arabella—Dorothy Carlyon.
Mrs. Peasey—Betty Thompson.
Mary Markey—Blanch Andrews.
The Maid!
Miss Dorothy Paul, Miss Elizabeth Phillips and Miss Clarice Brown will direct the play.
There will be a candy sale and refreshments.

Beth Lutheran
Thanksgiving services in Finnish at 7:30 p. m. Thanksgiving day. Coffee will be served in the church parlors after the service by Mrs. Solomon Kangas, Mrs. Lempi Maki and Mrs. Frank Sillanpaa.

Obituary

William Laakso

MICHIGAMME, Nov. 24—William Laakso, 39, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matt Laakso, Michigamme, died today in the Newberry state hospital, where he had been a patient for four months.

In addition to his parents, he leaves the following sisters and brothers: Miss Ruth Laakso, Michigamme; Mrs. Sulu Talbacka and Mrs. Waino Binola, IshpeMING; Mrs. Henry Hoyer, Besmet, S. D.; Mrs. Ida Barchard and Mrs. Harlan Bolheim, Chicago; Mrs. Irene Barry, Fresno, Calif., and Nick and George Laakso, Kalamazoo.

Funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. K. Ruotsalainen, IshpeMING, at 2 p. m. Friday in Stensrud's funeral home and burial will be made in Lakeview cemetery.

Citizenship Class Meets Monday Evening

ISHPEMING, Nov. 24—In cooperation with the national citizenship educational program, classroom facilities in the Grammar school have been made available for a citizenship class which will hold its first meeting at 7 next Monday evening. It will be conducted by instructors trained through the WPA.

Letters to all non-citizens in IshpeMING have been sent by the immigration and naturalization service of the United States Department of Justice, Detroit, urging these persons to become citizens. Attention is particularly called to the requirements for citizenship, such as being able to speak English and having at least general knowledge concerning the government and constitution of the United States. Textbooks will be provided by the immigration and naturalization service.

Life in Army Camp Helpful, Bishop Says

ISHPEMING, Nov. 24—Wild stories of improper conditions in Army posts can be largely discounted, it was asserted here today by the Rt. Rev. Herman Riddle Page, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Northern Michigan, in an address to the Town club in the Mather Inn.

There are a lot of temptations for a soldier at an Army post, the bishop said, but more of them are temptations "upward" than "downward." He based his statements on his own experience as an Army chaplain and the knowledge of life in Army camps he gained as a result of that service.

There is not one-third as much drinking done in an Army camp as is common at a college football game, he asserted, adding that soldiers have a better record of conduct.

Soldiers Closer to Church
Men in the forces are closer to the church than those in civilian life, he said. He cited an example at Fort Knox, where of 6,000 men at the time he was there, 2,000 attended worship regularly on Sunday, which is, he said, noteworthy because almost a third of the camp personnel is in town on weekend leave.

He challenged his audience to show the same comparable figures for cities like IshpeMING.

Bishop Page described the training of chaplains, how all faiths are brought together in one school, Chaplains get military drill, he said, to condition them for the task of following the men so they can be of service to them at the front in their hour of need.

Violation of Michigan statutes is involved in storage of gasoline in anything but a metal container, painted red and having the word "gasoline" lettered upon it. Prohibited by state law is storage of more than five gallons of gasoline in any building now used exclusively for flammable liquids.

Up to five gallons may be stored legally only in a safe, can, properly painted, safeguarded and passed by the Underwriters Laboratories.

Weddings

Delongchamp-Beaupied

CHAMPION, Nov. 24—Miss Ethel Marie Beau pied, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Beau pied, Champion, became the bride of Felix Delongchamp, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Delongchamp, Champion, on October 10. The ceremony took place in the Sacred Heart church, with the Rev. B. Karol officiating.

Storage Of Gas Limited By Statutes

ISHPEMING, Nov. 24—Persons who seek to defeat rationing by storing gasoline at home may run the risk of cancellation of fire insurance and other protection, Chief Arthur Brown, of the fire department, said today in warning against what he termed "an extremely dangerous practice."

Attention of the chief has been called to reports that some persons have sought to increase their store of motor fuel as a cushion against slim rations when rationing goes into effect.

"I wonder," he said, "how many persons know how far a spark can be thrown just by turning on an electric switch? There is always the danger of combustible fumes, if gasoline is not properly stored. State Statutes

"Home storage is dangerous and also is a peril to insurance policies. It is pointed out by insurance men that indemnities under policies can be revoked if it can be proved gasoline has been illegally and improperly stored on premises damaged by fire."

Pastor Urges Appreciation Of Liberties

ISHPEMING, Nov. 24—"This year, when freedom hangs in the balance, we should be doubly appreciative of our wonderful liberties," the Rev. Eugene Lundberg, pastor of the Evangelical Mission church, declared today in a Thanksgiving message to the community.

"The greatest cause for thanksgiving is the truth that God lives and watches over His people," he said. "Little, cheap usurpers try in vain to banish Him. They will soon perish, but He is the same, yesterday, today and forever."

The text of his message follows:

Cites Pilgrims' Voyage
"For those who are reluctant to give thanks while the clouds of war hang overhead, we review the story of the heroic pilgrims who landed at Plymouth on December 19, 1620. They had experienced a difficult voyage of 65 days on the ship of Captain Jones, and his crew of rough, unsympathetic sailors. One of the 102 pilgrims, William Button, died at sea; but a child was born to Stephen and Elizabeth Hopkins, fittingly named Oceanus, which held the number to 102.

"During that first winter, the Grim Reaper gathered an appalling harvest. Governor Bradford wrote: 'It pleased God to visit us with death daily, and with so general a disease that the living were scarce able to bury the dead.' In the spring, the Mayflower returned to England, but not one of the colonists went with her!

"That summer they planted 20 acres of corn and six acres of barley and peas. The corn and barley yielded a fair crop, but the peas were a complete failure. Yet, the 51 survivors were so well pleased that Governor Bradford sent four men out to shoot fowl for a celebration of thanksgiving. Massachusetts and his entire tribe attended the festivity, participating with Indian songs. For three days they dined together, and poured out their thankfulness to God.

Much To Be Thankful For
"Perhaps, if we compared the past year of our own lives to those first wretched months of the Pilgrims experienced, we would find a true basis for thanksgiving, even in this period of world crisis.

"Today, when it is threatened, we should be more thankful than ever for this great country of ours. We should realize more fully that there is no other country in the world that offers such unlimited opportunities to its citizens. Where else can one witness the continuous miracle of advancement, from the humblest of circumstances, to the greatest positions of honor; even the presidency? For this, we offer our thanks.

"This year, when freedom hangs in the balance, we should be doubly appreciative of our wonderful liberties, which we have too often taken for granted. The Pilgrims sailed a stormy sea, and braved the untold hardships of a new land to worship after the dictates of their conscience. We have all lived in the sunshine of complete religious liberty, and freedom of worship; but all too few have availed themselves of this really great privilege. Nevertheless, may we all be thankful for it.

"The greatest cause for thanksgiving is the truth that God lives and watches over His people. Little cheap usurpers try in vain to banish Him and enthrone themselves. They will soon perish, but He is the same, yesterday, today and forever. In the final consummation, the wrong will fall and the right will win, and Christ will reign victorious. With this certainty before us, let us not withhold our thanks, but proclaim it more fervently than ever before."

Yule Lighting On Streets Ruled Out

NEGAUNEE, Nov. 24—There will be no holiday outdoor lighting program for the city of Negaunee. This was specifically stated by two authorities today, the board of public works and the committee which handled the Santa Claus Lane celebration last year.

"The order of the War Production Board, asking for elimination of street illuminating, decorating, will be rigidly adhered to," said a member of the board of public works this morning. Whether the Community Christmas tree will also be sacrificed, was not stated.

The Santa Claus Lane committee indicated that it was endeavoring to learn from other sources, not named, the possibility of other means of decorating.

"No date has been determined for formal opening of the Christmas season," said a member of the committee, "but we expect the merchants will get together soon to discuss this matter."

"Our neighboring communities, who probably will decide against Christmas lighting, are, however, planning formal observance of the opening of the season and it is likely that steps in this direction will be taken in Negaunee."

New Support For Walk On Iron Street

NEGAUNEE, Nov. 24—Supports under the sidewalk on Iron street in front of the Kirkwood hall and adjoining property are being strengthened, public works officials said today, because the walk was found to be in dangerous condition for pedestrians.

"It has been good fortune," said one, "that on occasions when pedestrian traffic has been heavy, this walk has not collapsed."

Coal bins for adjoining properties were constructed under the walks and angle iron and six-inch beams put in as supports. These, however, have corroded to a point where they were crumbling and the walk has been without proper support.

All danger, however, has been eliminated, as these spaces have been filled in with sand to make a permanent base for the sidewalk. In the spring, when the sand has settled, a new walk will be constructed.

Property owners will have to find new locations for coal bins. The work done to date is being paid for by property owners.

Many Parents Will Attend Scout Dinner

NEGAUNEE, Nov. 24—A large attendance is expected Monday evening, November 30, when Boy Scouts and their families meet at a potluck dinner for their annual get-together and election of officers.

Committees of troop mothers have been promoting the event and expect 350 to 400 persons to attend. All members of Scout families are being invited and rivalry has been built up among troops to see which will have the largest family representation.

Paul Young, Scout executive, who has been working diligently on the promotion of this type of program to stress the neighborhood phase of Scouting work, said excellent entertainment has been provided.

The Rev. Finton Tehan, of St. Paul's church, will be the principal speaker and in addition to the election of the central district council officers, a Scouting film,

Girl Scouts To Give Christmas Town Tea

NEGAUNEE, Nov. 24—"Girl Scouts have discovered the true meaning of Christmas in songland since they have been working on the Christmas town tea," Mrs. J. P. Collins said today.

"Wouldn't you like to know why we sing our Christmas songs and how they have been brought down through the ages to us? The Girl Scouts would like to share with you, through story and song, the hope that this Yuletide may more nearly approach the true significance of a blessed Christmas."

The tea will take place in the gymnasium of the Central grade school at 2 Saturday, December 5. Tickets may be obtained from any Scout at a nominal admission.

AMERICA GIVES THANKS FOR THE "Lean Days" OF ITS STRENGTH

A little less than a year ago, a fat, flabby America, dozing in the sun, narrowly escaped an assassin's death-thrust, aimed from behind.

We are thankful that nothing more serious than a "flesh wound" was inflicted, stirring the giant to furious action, and the greatest outpouring of the weapons of victory that the world has ever seen.

These are stern days of sacrifice, stripped of many of our accustomed comforts and pleasures. We are not happy. We are not care-free. But we are united, determined,—and thankful.

TB Field Nurse Gives Report Of Work In County

Residents of Marquette county have been receiving envelopes this week containing Christmas seals mailed by the Michigan Tuberculosis association. They are reminders that the state and county organizations are urging everyone to purchase as generously as possible of the seals this year.

Since the money from those seals defrays the educational program and phases of preventive work, and contributes to helping defray expenses incidental to the work of Miss Mary Murray, of Morgan Heights, readers will be more than ordinarily interested in the report which Miss Murray gave at the recent meeting of the county TB association.

She told the history of a case from the time the tuberculin or patch test is given, and on positive reaction, is checked with an X-ray and sputum examinations. The person with active tuberculosis is admitted to the sanatorium where he is given all the major types of treatment employed in tuberculosis.

Miss Murray emphasized the importance of rest in tuberculosis, and noted that such surgical procedures as the painless method of collapsing the diseased lung, the severing of the phrenic nerve, and thoracoplasty, are all safe and not painful procedures and that they afford rest to the diseased lung.

The speaker noted that patients discharged from the sanatorium, as arrested cases, can lead a normal life in the community thereafter if they will exercise reasonable precautions in regard to living habits.

Early Discovery Important
Miss Murray emphasized the extreme importance of early diagnosis in those who suffer from active tuberculosis, their isolation from the community and treatment in the sanatorium.

"The problem, then," said the speaker, "in the control of tuberculosis, is not so much in the treatment of it, as was the case 30 years ago, but in the discovery of active tuberculosis victims who, through their ignorance of the presence of the disease, pass it on to others."

In her statistical report of the work in the out-patient department from October 1, 1941 to September 30, 1942, Miss Murray reported 502 home calls and 402 letters sent to patients.

In the county 1,141 X-rays of adults, and 723 of students were made. The field nurse brought 83 records and 447 students to the clinic.

Out of 2,264 skin tests given at the sanatorium and in the schools there were 180 positive reactors. Four children were admitted to the children's unit at Morgan Heights, and 53 adults were admitted.

In the direct educational field work he listed six talks given to PTA, hospital and allied groups, and the 24 class room talks given by Miss Murray. There are 842 cases listed in the family folders in the active files of the society.

Head of Coast Guard Auxiliary Takes Oath
WASHINGTON, Nov. 24—P—Lieut. Commander Dorothy C. Stratton, a dean of women with a merry, somewhat impish grin that crinkles up around her blue eyes, stopped smiling this afternoon for a very solemn event—her oath of office as head of the Coast Guard's newly organized Spars, another feminine unit in uniform.

It was a gold band occasion with high-ranking Coast Guard officers watching as Rear Admiral L. T. Chalker, assistant commandant, administered the oath to the slim, erect 43-year-old woman who is on leave as dean of women at Purdue university in Lafayette, Ind.

Standing by, too, was Lieut. Commander Mildred McAfee, director of the Spars' older sister organization, the Waves. Until she was sworn in, Lieut. Commander Stratton was a lieutenant in the Waves.

Public To Be Educated On Meat Saving

EAST LANSING, Nov. 24—Michigan is preparing ground-work for a nation-wide educational campaign in meat conservation scheduled November 30-December 5, the state defense council reported today.

Dean Marie Dye, of Michigan State college, chairman of the council's nutrition committee, said leaders now are being trained in local neighborhood war clubs and nutrition committees to participate in a house-to-house campaign designed to pave the way for meat rationing beginning around January 1.

She said nutrition groups had been organized in all but a few of the state's 83 counties. Details of the campaign will be announced at Washington, Dean Dye said, pointing out, however, that the public already "is eating into next year's supply of meat" and that the Government will seek to carry a strong plea for meat conservation into every home.

Public Confused

The council reiterated its stand of impartiality in the meat program despite contention of Mrs. Ida Z. Kleinman, Detroit, that the public is confused by conflicting reports. She said many dealers in the Detroit area were "pushing" plans for meatless days. Lt. Col. Harold A. Furlong, state defense administrator, said the council had been advised by the War Production Board not to advocate meatless days in Michigan, instead promoting conservation of meat through planned menus.

Meanwhile, Raymond J. Foley, state housing administrator, reported that Michigan's housing problem had been clarified somewhat by WPB action in continuing acceptance of priority applications for building materials.

He said the Detroit-Ypsilanti and Muskegon housing problems still were critical, but had showed some improvement. Of the 24,000 units earmarked for private construction near Detroit, approximately 17,000 were built or under construction, while the remainder may be ready for occupancy by next July, Foley said. Only about half of 12,000 units planned for public construction in the area are beyond the blueprint stage.

At Muskegon, he said, it was likely that the bulk of 500 projected family units and 500 temporary dwelling units would be constructed. Elsewhere in the state, housing problems may be more serious than anticipated at Adrian, Saginaw and Flint, and less serious at Midland and Lansing due to fluctuating industrial demands, he said.

Many War Clubs Formed

Don C. Weeks, director of Michigan's war service corps, estimated that approximately 90 per cent of 166 local defense councils has responded to a request to organize neighborhood war clubs.

Governor Van Wagener appeared at the council's luncheon and expressed "personal appreciation" for the council's cooperation during his term of office which ends December 31. He described the council as "one of the best in the country."

John W. Gibson, chairman of the state department of labor and industry, submitted a report of the council's labor committee calling for increased efforts to relieve housing and transportation problems, to spur cooperation by management in plant scrap salvage and to fix responsibility for air precautions in industrial plants.

News Behind the News

By Ray Tucker

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 — Basic difficulty in this nation's rationing system is that there has been hardly any correlation between military and domestic programs. It seems almost incredible, but insiders insist that the Army and Navy have never sat down with Leon Henderson and told him how much gasoline, oil, food, coffee etc. they need for the armed forces abroad, our Allies and for softening up people subjected by the Nazis.

Every commodity placed on an A, B, C, or X card basis was computed and allocated by the Hendersons without full knowledge of the demands which such a movement as the North African campaign would impose. For some strange reason the makers of war never relayed their plans and requirements—even in a vague form—to the economists. And as our conquests of new territory expand, the inroads our successes will make on our home economy will become more and more burdensome.

The bread-and-butter troubles which this lack of coordination has caused demonstrates vividly the need for creation of some sort of a joint war and economic commission. It would resemble the War Production Board which functioned so efficiently in the First World War. In short, it is time that Chief of Staff George C. Marshall and War Production boss Donald M. Nelson go together.

BLAME—Mr. Henderson is one of the most admirable figures in the Capital, whether or not one agrees with his political philosophy. As he forecast when he was named Price Administrator last Spring, he is playing the role of ersatz martyr for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The curbs already imposed on our everyday life and drastic curtailments just around the corner—and they are going to be far more burdensome than anyone suspects—have been imposed by Leon. He issued and signed the orders. But he has not made a single decision without advance consent and full approval of the White House. That statement, incidentally, goes for every restrictive ukase emanating from Washington.

It is obvious that the President cannot and should not shoulder blame for each decree which irritates some element of the populace. He has dropped routine domestic affairs to devote his time to the sole problem of winning the war. Therefore the boy from Millville, New Jersey, must take it on the chin. Luckily, he has an iron mug.

BOUL—The inside story can now be told of the last-minute cancellation of the Louis-Corn champion-ship fight for Army-Navy relief. It depicts the affair as a costly comedy of financial and pugilistic errors. Everybody concerned, except the Secretary of War who did not know what the fistcuffs were all about, and Grantland Rice, voted for the enterprise.

When generals, skilled sports writers and Mike Jacobs first met, the champ's promoter explained that Louis needed forty thousand dollars to liquidate his debts—guess who?—Mr. Jacobs. Young Corn did not figure in this stud poker deal; he was only the challenger. At the final discussion it developed that the sum Joe owed Mike totaled one hundred and forty thousand dollars.

The Washington top dogs blinked when they saw these figures. But they agreed to go through with the match and pay off the champ's peacetime obligation. It was then that the Secretary of War heard about it and blew up at a Thursday press conference. He said that he had been "shocked" when he learned the details of the arrangements. Every Army officer favored staying in the contest and so did civilian athletic advisers Washington had drafted to raise money for war widows and orphans. The only other opponent to the battle royal was Grantland Rice, who headed the original sportswriters' committee. And, of course, in all American journalistic history there is no more likable figure than "Grant."

But he resigned in protest. John Kieran, the amiable sports oracle of the New York Times and the intellectual expert of "Information Please", took over the chairmanship when Rice quit. His name is printed on the Capital is regarded as a classic. Here is part of it:

"Of course the American people object because Joe Louis can leave his barracks and settle last year's liabilities by a few rounds of fighting. But what man, colonel or private, can step out of his uniform for a few moments and make that amount of dough?"

"Nobody but Joe. The public forgets that no other soldier in all the American Army could in thirty minutes earn perhaps five hundred thousand dollars for the widows and the kids of our boys fighting in the Pacific and in Africa."

The Secretary, unfortunately, did not know that side of the picture. His aides who had approved the bout did not tell him the low-down. So the affair was called off.

AUTOGRAPH—James E. Butler, the extremely popular representative of Editor and Publisher in Washington, swanked around at the canteen party which the American Legion Post of the National Press Club staged recently for servicemen in the vicinity.

"Jim", like fellow reporters, paid ten bucks to help finance the affair. When he showed up at an entertainment he received his reward. A young, starry-eyed soldier accosted him with the question, "Are you a Washington correspondent?"

Butler, of course, allowed that he was. And for the first time in his journalistic career Jim knows that he is a big shot, for the youngster asked him for his autograph!

Winning The War

By Albert N. Leman

RAINBOW—If the new Soviet offensive in the Black Sea sector gathers momentum, Hitler may discover that he has wasted an entire Summer and an untold number of lives to win a prize he cannot keep. Realization of this fact should have a shattering effect on home morale. The Reichsfuehrer drove into the mountain to destroy or capture oil and food. Nazi territorial gains and the Red's scorched earth policy cost Russia dearly. Nevertheless, Berlin has scant loot to show for all its mighty efforts.

An official report smuggled from Germany to New York boasts that the Ukraine will soon supply more than four million tons of grain. But it admits that harvesting is difficult because motor tractors were demolished and plow horses driven off. Autumn work in the fields was done by barefooted peasant women. Such labor and lack of equipment cannot produce promised bounty. Returns from the rich-loaned North Caucasus, which formerly yielded twenty-two per cent of Stalin's wheat, are even less than those listed from White Russia.

Manganese and iron ore have been exploited but slight mention is made in the document regarding the factories in the Kharkov area. Evidently the retreating Cossacks wrecked them beyond repair. Hope is expressed by Axis economists that some of the plants will reopen in 1943 but in the same paragraph is the statement that more than five hundred thousand mechanics and machine operators have been shipped to Ruhr industries. Nothing is printed about oil, the goal of this year's campaign, although by now a few of the ruined wells may have been restored. If the revelations are accurate, the Germans found scarcely more than a grave at the end of their rainbow.

KNIVES—The Russian situation has improved although the loss of factories will create the worst food stringencies this Winter since the days of the awful famines of the earlier Bolshevik regimes. A Manhattan engineer, just back from the petroleum regions, relates cheerful news. So many men were mobilized in the Red armies that great shortages in mine and oil well labor handicapped late spring production. The secretive Slavs had not admitted it but the American expert discloses that thousands of Hindu workers were imported from India to relieve the condition. The Baku pumps were operated overtime and the precious fuel was rushed up the Volga before the Germans closed the river.

He says Axis boasts about sauntering easily across the Caucasus ranges have not materialized—as everyone familiar with the zone predicted months ago. Units of Alpine climbers were picked off by snipers and other divisions are floundering in the snow attempting to move guns into the valleys. As for scaling the peaks, the returned visitor maintains the idea is fantastic. The Georgian so-called modern military road goes through a narrow gorge six thousand feet deep and five miles long. The highway at Mount Kazbek is cut from solid rock. One stick of dynamite could cause it to vanish completely. The enemy tried to drop parachutists behind the peaks but fierce tribesmen armed with old muskets and long knives mopped them up as fast as they landed.

PAINT—Lack of necessary metals for ships, tanks and cannon substitutes in plastics. New York chemists confess that even scientists are amazed at the usages to which these modern substances can be put. Every day a new invention in a fresh field is reported. One of the latest is pipe made from pressed fiber, so light that without effort a man can balance seven ten-foot lengths on his shoulder, and yet each tube is strong enough to support the weight of three men. Tomorrow's plumbers will not need their traditional helpers. Kaiser is now employing synthetic resin plywood in his boats. Thin veneers of the material are joined together and actually molded to curved surfaces so that a section more than eighty feet long may be utilized for the side of a torpedo craft. This process has limitless possibilities for houses in that an architect's most beautiful designs can be easily developed.

The paint industry thought that it was doomed when certain oils were cut off by the war. But today we have air-drying varnishes and enamels based on ersatz resins which cover vessels, planes and bridges. We are developing water emulsions which are highly resistant to moisture and scrubbing. They harden in a few hours and are not inflammable. Tomorrow's raincoats will be surfaced with them instead of with rubber.

TERRORISM—Shipping officials who arrive in New York from India say that the British are waging a tiny war in the Sind province which has the support of all factions. It is being fought in the jungles against the fanatical Hurs, a tribe of dacoits who spend their time plundering and murdering peaceful neighbors. For more than seventy years the spasmodic violence of these outlaws has been a headache for the police but recently the marauders killed public officials and sabotaged so many army telegraph lines that the authorities suspect they are being egged on by secret Axis agents.

The gangsters embrace an unrecognized branch of Mohammedanism but in order to scandalize the faithful they deliberately build mosques facing north, away from Mecca. One of their sports is to hide in the long grass and shoot down Hindus for target practice. They commit such unspeakable acts of terrorism that humble peasants in the vicinity dare not complain.

Their Pir—or ruler—isn't satisfied with a bird cage for a diversion. He has more bizarre ideas. When soldiers finally battered their way into his palace, they discovered that the scoundrel has confined a boy in a narrow box with a small circular hole in the floor as the prisoner's only source of air. Servants said their master amused himself berating the victim. The fiend was captured, but several thousand of his followers fled to the woods. Now troops are rounding them up one by one.

The Edge of Darkness

By William Woods

THE STORY: All Norway is preparing for revolt against Nazi conquerors. SS Major Ruck has arrived in Trondheim to advise the commandant that steps must be taken to curb growing unrest. Meanwhile Karl Fischer, drawn to Karen Stensgard, finds that he cannot remove her picture from his mind.

CONFLICT
CHAPTER VIII
At nightfall, Knut Osterholm went down to the well-stocked cellar of his farm, blacked out the narrow windows near the ceiling with tarpaper, and stationed two of his hired boys whom he could trust at the door. Some time after eleven o'clock, fourteen men and two women crept by various paths from the village and the hills, and one by one slid out of the darkness into the dimly-lighted room.

In the center of a long table stood one lone lamp. Along the stone walls were unfinished wooden benches. Sverre Hammer, the man from Stoklund, his head swathed in bandages and his burned hands like lumps wrapped in white gauze, sat at the head of the table. He was a sharp, hook-nosed man about thirty, with a sickeningly empty-looking face, smeared across the forehead with a long, red gash, covered with yellow salve. One gazed at him a long time before one realized that his peculiarly naked look, came from his eyebrows and eyelashes having been seared away.

When the meeting started, the doctor was standing beside him, with his hands in his pockets, rocking importantly back and forth on his toes. Gunnar Brogge and his wife, Solveig, were sitting on the stairs. Next to them stood Pastor Aalesen, a thin, sandy-haired young man with a bright flush on his cheeks. Lars Malken, his face looking gray and more deeply lined than ever, stood under a window with Gerd Ebjarnesen. The others, fishermen, two laborers, Morten Mortensen, who had come down from near the saeter, and another farmer named Kjerfot, a little man with a beard, who owned a small plot down near the fiord edge, were seated uncomfortably along the benches. Knut Osterholm himself, his dark, rugged head half buried in the collar of an old coat, stood hunched over with his back to the outside door.

Hammer had been telling them how when down in Stoklund the soldiers had come, all caution had been forgotten. They had picked up their guns and called the children into the houses. The German captain had been the first to die. "When he fell from that shot," he said in his brittle voice, "for a minute it was quiet. It was as if somebody had clapped a blanket over the whole town, and all you could hear was your own breathing. Then the soldiers ran up and dragged the captain's body back behind some buildings and out of the line of fire."

Gunnar interrupted. "How were you situated? How many of you?"

"A hundred and four. We were facing town with our backs to the water and the wharf on one side. On the other flank we had a little hill we could keep pretty well covered. He stopped and stared moodily at his hands, which he kept cradling in front of him. "About that time," he said, "was when young Olav Brande launched the boat."

"I knew him," Malken interrupted. "He was a fine boy."

Sverre Hammer paid no attention. "He jammed in all who go," he said, "of the women and children, with the idea of setting them adrift until it was all over. But the first detachment of troops had got up on some roofs by then, and they picked him off like a sparrow just as he was getting the boat away. We scattered. With machine guns they were picking off a man here and there, and whenever they had cleared a space, they'd come running up doubled over, until sometimes there weren't more than twenty or thirty meters between us. The women had come back from the boats, and most of them were lying on plings under the wharf. We could hear some of them crying. But if they'd come up, they would have had to cross the open dock."

"What happened to them?" asked the pastor. His high, boyish voice quavered.

"Some of them were shot," Hammer said coldly. "Some got away."

"Go on," cried Gunnar.

"The men around the table were white-lipped, leaning tense forward. All that Hammer said they could see in terms of their own wives and houses. The lamp on the table flickered in a draft.

"We fought until dark," Hammer said slowly, "and held them off. We'd moved up the hill on our flank, and had the machine gun in a fine spot, with the whole town lying down in front of us. About that time, one of the women . . . I suppose she thought it was dark enough . . . came up from under the dock and started crawling toward us. We kept watching her. Two of the old men started to pray. But they saw her and let go with a burst of fire. She got up and began to run, but she didn't get ten steps before they caught her. Her husband broke out from behind our barricade and ran out to help her, screaming at them to leave her alone, and crying, "I'm coming, Anna; I'm coming."

The words trailed off. The pastor buried his face in his hands. When Hammer started talking again he sounded very tired.

"About nine o'clock," he said, "there hadn't been any new troops yet, and their firing stopped. We sat back and began to talk over it. We could make the boats in the dark . . . there had to be a way out. It was about five minutes, and then we heard planes overhead. We doused our lights. They sent down a flare and dived. We could not hear a sound over the howling of the motors. It was like a hundred waves set loose. All of a sudden houses started bursting into flame. First one, then another. The whole fiord was yellow. Then their mortar started firing again, and its first shot smashed our machine gun and killed everybody within ten paces of it. We broke, who ever was left, and they came at us from two sides. Somehow I got down to the wharf. I had to keep my arm in front of my eyes, the flames were so bright. All I could smell was powder, salt water and burning wood. The walls were falling in all around me. Even the trees were on fire . . ."

Suddenly he stopped. Not a man breathed.

"What happened? Where are the women?"

"I don't know."

"What did they do to those they caught?"

"I don't know."

"What if we fought too, and no one followed us? What if every town in Norway . . . ?"

Pastor Aalesen leaped up. His hair was disheveled. His plump cheeks were burning. "It's wrong," he cried. "It would be murder. It's against God's will." His voice rang out. Everybody looked up and saw him wavering on the stairs with his arm outstretched.

Sverre Hammer shoved the table violently aside and started forward. Gunnar held him back. The man was beside himself. "They slaughtered us in the streets," he cried furiously, "and you tell me about murder."

"Pastor, Pastor," Stensgard was pushing his way forward. "You are a man of God, but in these times . . ."

"In these times I must cry out all the louder. Now is when you need me."

"By God, pastor . . ." cried Gunnar.

"Jesus said, 'They that take the sword shall perish by the sword.' He will give us away," cried Hammer. "How can you trust a man who talks like that?"

"God have mercy on you," cried Aalesen fervently.

The whole dim room was in turmoil. The lamp threw wavering, fitful shadows of moving men on the low-beamed ceiling.

"Traitor," called one of them. "Coward!"

"Listen to me," he pleaded. "We are all Norwegians. I love my country as much as you do. But you will ravage it, turn yourself into beasts. Do you want your children to be bombed as the children were in Stoklund? Do you want your whole lives torn apart for a conflict you had no hand in starting?"

"Yes, cried Solveig suddenly, "if those things have to happen."
