

Navy Sinks Nine Jap Ships In Solomons; Allies Repel Axis Attack In 2-Day Battle

Axis Convoy Broken Up By British Fleet

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(By A. P.)—American and British forces battling for Tunisia have hurled back a second and larger enemy counter-attack in the Tebourba area, the Allied command in North Africa announced today, while Allied airmen kept up a heavy 'round-the-clock' pounding of Tunis and Bizerte and an Allied naval squadron broke up an Axis convoy carrying supplies destined for the battle field.

The land, sea and air action reported by the Allied force headquarters in North Africa was some of the heaviest of the whole campaign.

Larger Than Previous Thrust

The communique said that the counter-thrust by the Germans in the Tebourba area was even larger than that of last Tuesday, which had been described as the most determined Axis opposition this far in the campaign.

The counter-attack "was repulsed with considerable destruction of enemy equipment," the communique said.

Tebourba, the area of the critical fighting, is 35 miles south of Bizerte and 20 miles west of Tunis.

The communique also announced there had been fighting on the western outskirts of Djedeida, near Tunis.

Both sides were making full use of their air forces, the Allies sending over squadrons of planes day and night.

The communique said Allied planes blasted docks and the airfields at Bizerte and the airfield at Tunis while fighters carried out sweeps over the Gabes area and the forward fighting zones.

"Much damage has been done to both airfields, especially at Tunis, and many enemy aircraft on the ground have been destroyed," the communique said.

7 Axis Vessels Sunk
The communique reported six enemy planes were destroyed.

It told of a convoy battle previously disclosed by the admiralty in London and added one enemy destroyer, two enemy destroyers and four merchantmen listed by the admiralty as sunk.

As the American and British forces moved slowly forward against strengthening German resistance, bitter battles also were reported about Mateur, a rail junction 12 miles south of Bizerte, and at Pont De Fahs, 30 miles south of Tunis where a French force repulsed a German counter-attack.

The Allies were said to have destroyed 19 tanks in a clash between Mateur and Beja.

The Algiers radio said U. S. forces in the mountains outside Tunis were within sight of the capital, but "there still is plenty of hard fighting before Tunis is ours."

The report added that German resistance was getting stronger.

The British fleet likewise was reported close to shore, covering the Allied troop movements after its spectacular success Tuesday night.

U. S. Bombers Blast Tripoli
The enemy convoy southbound for Tunisia had been spotted by planes and a force of three cruisers and two destroyers fell upon it shortly after midnight. The convoy scattered and threw up smoke screens, but the four supply ships and two of the escorting destroyers soon were dispatched by the guns of the cruisers Aurora, Sirius and Argonaut, and the destroyers Quibron and Quentin.

All the British warships came out of the sea action undamaged and without casualties, but a subsequent attack by dive-bombers and torpedo planes sank the Quentin, a

18 Believed Drowned In Lake Sinking

CLEVELAND, Dec. 3.—P—The missing tanker-barge Cleveco, carrying 24,000 barrels of fuel oil for eastern war plants, apparently broke up with loss of all 18 crew members, the owners announced tonight, raising to 32 the toll of a double disaster on Lake Erie.

Coast Guard searching vessels, which lost contact with the Cleveco at 1 a. m., today, later found an oil slick, pieces of wreckage and six bodies.

Unable To Find Bodies

They were unable to determine then whether the bodies were from the Cleveco or from the tug Admiral, which sank yesterday with its crew of 14 while towing the tanker-barge to Cleveland.

Finding of the oil slick and bodies, however, led the Cleveland Tankers, Inc., to declare tonight "that in the opinion of the company the entire crew has been lost."

The Cleveco, a 250-foot steel hulled vessel resembling a lake freighter, carried no propulsion machinery.

The 94-ton Admiral went down swiftly in heavy seas before dawn Wednesday. The owners said the craft might have overturned when a heavy wave forced the tug to foul its towing cable.

The Cleveco, cut loose, drifted all day in storm, freezing weather which impeded searching boats and planes.

The last message from Captain Smith before the Cleveco radio went silent said: "Water is coming in, flooding the forecastle. But we're laying out here pretty."

The master of the tanker Comet, which found the oil slick, said that soundings would be made and a search continued for the Cleveco's wreckage.

Questionnaires, Snoopers Make Grocers Uneasy

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—P—Lawmakers convinced that Government questionnaires contain too many questions and too much air listened today to a grim description of a question-blizzard in a California grocery store.

From the lips of the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce they heard that business men opened their Washington mail distractedly singing "Praise the Lord and pass the inquisition."

They heard that one company had put in as many man-hours answering Government reports in a three-month period as would be required to build three Flying Fortresses.

Then, Baughan continued, the grocers had to contend with "old biddies" standing around their stores acting as "super-snoopers" in the enforcement of ceiling price posting requirements.

In addition to these self-appointed price inspectors, he estimated OPA had possibly 10,000 employees in California, but added hastily that he had left the state a week ago "and there are probably twice as many there now."

Germans Fail To Take Vital Tunisian Area

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN North Africa, Dec. 3.—(By A. P.)—Allied tank forces prepared for another smash at strong German positions 12 miles west of Tunis today after a 48-hour battle which resulted in "about equal losses on both sides."

The action was fought near Djedeida, 12 miles west of Tunis, and "the battlefield was dotted with wrecked tanks," a headquarters spokesman said.

Djedeida has changed hands several times, he said, but the Allies now are holding the western part of the village while American and British airmen continue to blast both Tunis and Bizerte on the northern coast.

A communique earlier said another big action was fought Tuesday at Tebourba, 20 miles west of Tunis and 35 miles south of Bizerte, when Allied tanks repulsed Nazi armored forces "with considerable destruction of enemy equipment."

Losses Heavy on Both Sides
The fighting still is going on in the Tebourba area.

The spokesman said: "The Germans made an all-out attempt to recapture Mateur, Djedeida, and Tebourba with a panzer attack for it is obvious that who holds this triangle eventually will win the battle for Tunis and Bizerte."

"They failed, but the losses have been heavy on both sides and the battlefield was dotted with wrecked tanks."

"We hold the western part of Djedeida which has changed hands several times in the battle."

Allied airmen and the British navy were giving all possible aid to the attacking ground forces, sprinkling the "bomb alley" area between Tunis and Bizerte with burning and sunken ships and blasting huge craters in Axis-held airfields still being used in the restricted Bizerte-Tunis areas.

The British navy striking under the cover of darkness Tuesday night caught an Axis convoy in the Mediterranean narrows which was

Congressman Protests Surrender of Powers

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—P—A protest that Congress might be reduced to the same state of impotence as Hitler's Reichstag was voiced today by Rep. Gearhart (R-Calif.) as the House ways and means committee began hearings on President Roosevelt's request for authority to suspend tariff laws to aid the war effort.

Bluntly asserting that powers already granted have been "abused and misused," Gearhart declared "it is time for Congress to check up before it finds itself in the low and lonely position of the German Reichstag."

"Millions in the United States," he said, "feel that we are filling down the same pathway as Germany" in yielding legislative powers to the executive. "Step by step," he added, "it can only lead to moral degradation."

Reds Destroy 40 Nazi Air Transports

By Eddy Gilmore

MOSCOW, Dec. 4.—(Friday)—P—Russian troops have destroyed 40 more Nazi transport planes trying to ferry aid to enemy forces pocketed in the Stalingrad area, captured a strategic height on the left bank of the Don river west of that city in a hand-to-hand fight, and smashed another hole in the enemy's lines west of Rzhev on the snow-choked central front, the Soviets announced early today.

More than 3,100 Germans fell during yesterday's widespread and violent actions to boost the toll of Nazi dead and captured to approximately 170,000, the Russians said.

Field dispatches said the hard-pressed Germans on the Rzhev-Velkie Luki front, northwest of Moscow were fighting in summer uniforms and were abandoning frozen tanks and guns on the blizzard-swept plains.

The midnight communique acknowledged strong German resistance and even counter-attacks, but gave this picture of the situation on the various fronts: "Stalingrad—Inside the northern factory belt the Russians dislodged the enemy from a number of buildings and wiped out an enemy company. Fifty planes, including 40 biplanes, were destroyed. The Russians two days ago announced the destruction of 50 transport planes trying to supply the Germans between the Don and Volga rivers.

Hundreds of Germans died on the southern outskirts of Stalingrad after a fierce fight in which the Red army captured an enemy stronghold which "covered the flank of a German formation."

On the left bank of the Don northwest of Stalingrad where the Russians are trying to encircle the entire Nazi siege army by driving southward to link up with other Soviet units, a strongly-fortified height was taken after a hand-to-hand fight in which the Germans lost 300 men, five guns and 10 blockhouses.

Another 1,200 Germans were killed and 13 tanks and armored cars, 90 trucks, eight mortars, 23 machine guns, and 28 blockhouses were destroyed southwest of Stalingrad, presumably along the railway leading toward Kotelnikovski.

Ski Troops in Action
Central front—German counter-attacks were beaten off east of Velkie Luki which is only 90 miles from the Latvian border. One Russian unit killed 600 Germans in this area where white-clothed Russian ski troops were reported engaging German Alpine reinforcements rushed up from the rear.

West of Rzhev, the Russians scored new gains, one unit smashing a strong enemy defense line to capture a station on a branch railway line. Another unit killed 1,000 Germans, destroyed six tanks and 150 trucks, and seized several inhabited localities. Dispatches also said that a heavy fight was going on south of Rzhev on the railway leading to Vyazma.

Rzhev, itself, is 130 miles northwest of Moscow. The Russians have been reported fighting in the outskirts of this heavily fortified German pivot for weeks.

Gen MacNider Wounded By Grenade Explosion

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, Nov. 24.—(Delayed)—P—Brig. Gen. Hanford MacNider, former assistant Secretary of War, received eight wounds in the explosion of a Japanese rifle grenade last night during the American attack on Buna, enemy stronghold on the northeastern New Guinea coast.

The general was in the American front lines during a mortar barrage when he was wounded.

(A spokesman at Allied headquarters in Australia announced Friday, Australian time, that General MacNider wasn't seriously injured, however. The general at present is recovering nicely in an Australian hospital, he said.)

U. S. Gets Air Base Rights In Liberia

By Richard L. Turner

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—P—A stronger American grip on North Africa, and increased domination of the south Atlantic narrows was indicated today by a State department announcement that Liberia had consented to establishment of American air bases there.

Troops of the United States, largely negro detachments, have already moved into the famous negro republic, and are already at work hatching new airports out of the jungles.

The State department said that action was taken at the request of Liberia, which felt that because of its geographical situation it was in danger of attack and wanted to "safeguard the independence and security of the republic."

Under the agreement which followed, the department added, Liberia retains its sovereignty unimpaired, but the United States is to have jurisdiction over all American military and civilian personnel.

Further to emphasize its close cooperation with the United States, the Liberian government recently expelled the German consul and his staff. The American minister, Lester Walton, is to return to Monrovia, the country's capital, soon.

A despatch from Monrovia today said the Liberian government has decided "on a policy of full collaboration with the United Nations during the existing hostilities."

Valuable as Air Station
Liberia is situated on the westward bulge of Africa, a little below Dakar. Airports there, some observers thought, would be of great value as way stations on the route of the Army transport command, over which supplies of all sorts have been flown to North Africa and the Near East.

Air force garrisons there also offer security against Axis attacks along the African coast, and the bases can be used to patrol the narrow section of the south Atlantic leading to South America against Axis submarines and surface raiders.

450 Japanese Wiped Out In Gona Area

By Vern Haugland

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN Australia, Dec. 4 (Friday)—P—Allied troops have wiped out 450 Japanese in the Gona area of New Guinea with only slight losses themselves, and Allied planes are attacking the remaining enemy coastal footholds at such low levels the Japanese are using their mortars as anti-aircraft guns, a spokesman said today.

The noon communique acknowledged the Japanese were "resisting stubbornly" every inch of ground both in the Gona and Buna sectors, but said "our ground forces are receiving artillery and air support."

The Allied airmen also dealt a smashing surprise blow in another sector, the island of Timor, where 21 Japanese planes were destroyed or damaged at Koepang, the communique said.

Make Only Slight Gains
The situation in New Guinea was summed up thus by an Allied spokesman:

"At Gona two Japanese machine gun posts were captured during a slight advance and 450 of the enemy were killed. An Allied patrol inflicted 20 casualties in the same area and artillery fire leveled several native huts in villages near Gona where the Japanese had entrenched themselves.

At Buna the Allied advance also was slight—a matter of a few yards through swamps where the Japanese resisted every foot of ground in close-quarter fighting.

Allied A-20 and B-25 bombers and Airacobra fighter planes continued to give the ground troops strong support, repeatedly strafing Japanese anti-aircraft posts, machine gun nests and barges.

One Japanese anti-aircraft gun was blown from its pit, and the American attack planes swept in so low the Japanese began firing on them with their mortars. They missed.

Enemy Warships Fleeing
There were no further reports of the Japanese destroyers that attempted to land reinforcements and were beaten off. When last seen the enemy warships were 40 miles off shore and heading north away from New Guinea.

Related reports said that Beau-fighter planes in the Gona area sank two empty barges and 20 others each containing about 20 Japanese soldiers. These barges were among those which apparently were intended to transfer troops to shore from the destroyers.

The Japanese lost 23 planes out of their screen over the destroyers, and today's communique added in-

Enemy Beaten in 'Round 3' Of Battle for Guadalcanal; One American Cruiser Lost

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(By A. P.)—The Japanese came out for round 3 Monday night in the Battle of Guadalcanal, the Navy announced today, but were beaten back again with nine of their ships sunk and thousands of their soldiers drowned.

The night engagement cost the United States one cruiser sunk "and other U. S. vessels damaged," a communique reported, but none of the Japanese soldiers being brought in by transports set foot on shore except possibly as bedraggled prisoners.

16 Ships Lost In African Occupation

By Blake Sullivan

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(P)—Sixteen Allied naval vessels, including five United States naval transports, were lost out of an estimated 850 participating in the occupation of North Africa nearly a month ago, announcements here and in Washington disclosed today, but casualties were described as "very small."

The delayed disclosures of Allied losses came almost simultaneously with an admiralty communique telling of another smashing blow at Axis supply lines to Tunisia—the sinking of four Axis transports and two destroyers last Tuesday by a British battle force that included three cruisers.

Losses Smaller Than Expected
Allied warships lost in the original Allied movement on Morocco and Algeria, the admiralty said, included the small British aircraft carrier Avenger, three destroyers, two cutters, a sloop, a mine-sweeper, an anti-aircraft ship, a depot ship and the corvette Gardenia. The toll of Allied naval vessels and transports in the hot fighting that occurred at several points was described in the house of commons as considerably smaller than expected and "far less than the enemy claimed."

The U. S. transports listed as sunk were the Tasker H. Bliss, the Hugh L. Scott and the Edward Rutledge—all lost off Casablanca, where the French put up their most spirited resistance; the Joseph Hewes, sunk off Rabat, Morocco, and the Leestown, sunk off Algiers. All were sunk by enemy submarines.

The U. S. Navy department added that three other transports, a destroyer and a tanker were damaged.

Lost Carrier Former Liner
The Bliss was identified as the former liner President Cleveland, gross tonnage 12,568; the Leestown as the former liner Santa Lucia, 9,133 tons; the Scott as the former President Pierce, 12,579 tons; the Rutledge as the former Exeter, 9,360 tons, and the Hewes as the former Excelsior of 9,359.

Japs' Dying Curses Heard By Americans

By Dean Schedler

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, Dec. 3.—P—Jungle-toughened Australian and American troops had divided the interior north shore of New Guinea into two contracting pockets around Buna and Gona today and fought so close to the enemy lines they could hear the curses of the dying Nipponese.

The plight of the fanatically fighting enemy grew graver and he was believed short of food and ammunition after the sixth attempt at reinforcement had been turned back at sea by the hammer blows of Flying Fortresses and other Allied planes which routed a destroyer force.

Allied troops already had infiltrated the cluster of grass huts which is Buna and controlled a shore line of about seven miles separating the Japanese trapped at Gona.

The drive to Buna possibly divided the enemy, further separating strong forces guarding a landing strip at Cape Endiaderre from his strongest forces at Sanananda, five miles up the coast from Buna.

In turning back the destroyers, more than 40 Allied planes shot down 23 Zeros which tried to provide a protective canopy. Allied sources believed the enemy was unable to land any troops or supplies, although four destroyers anchored for a short time about a mile offshore and four barges were seen fairly close to shore, moving in an aimless course.

Two Japanese troop transports and one cargo ship were sunk and six of their escorting warships were sent to the bottom of the sea. These included four destroyers and two other vessels which were either cruisers or large destroyers.

Before the Navy issued its communique, imperial headquarters in Tokyo had trumpeted the action not as an unsuccessful attempt to put reinforcements ashore at Guadalcanal but as "a fierce attack" by a Japanese "torpedo attack flotilla." Tokyo claimed the sinking of one American battleship, one cruiser of the Augusta type and two destroyers, to the loss of only one of their own destroyers.

Meanwhile American forces ashore on Guadalcanal hacked away at the Japanese left stranded there without reinforcements of men or fresh supplies, killing more than 100 of them in patrol skirmishes Tuesday and Wednesday (Guadalcanal date).

Success in Land Fighting
Successes in ground fighting, as well as in raids by aircraft from Henderson field, have been reported in intermittent action ever since the last bid of the foe to reinforce his troops was repulsed in the smashing naval victory of November 14-15.

At that time 28 Japanese ships were sunk and 10 damaged. Despite the crushing setback to the Japanese fleet, Secretary of the Navy Knox described the engagement as "round 2" and warned that the enemy could be expected to come back.

Thus the action earlier this week apparently constituted the "round 3" which Knox and other officials had foretold. The Japanese challenge in this round was beaten back, as decisively as was the earlier one, but the Japanese force apparently was much smaller, and the damage suffered by the enemy was correspondingly less.

American warships intercepted the Japanese armada in waters off the north coast of the island, in about the same vicinity as the scene of the last naval battle.

51 Ships Sunk in Area
"The enemy was interrupted in his attempt to reinforce and supply his troops on the island," the communique related succinctly, "and no landing was effected."

There did come ashore, however, some Japanese sailors rescued from life rafts the following day. They were off the destroyer Takinami, believed to be a 1,500-ton ship.

The sinkings announced in the latest action brought Japanese losses in the Solomons as officially announced so far to 131 ships sunk or damaged, including 51 sunk.

Axis Code Messages Limited by Argentina
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Dec. 3.—P—The Argentine government tonight limited diplomatic code messages to 100 words daily in drastically revised radio, telephone and telegraph regulations which will operate to the disadvantage of Axis embassies.

Shortly after the Interior ministry announced establishment of control stations especially to detect clandestine radio transmitters, the postoffice department, charged with carrying out the communications decree, disclosed the regulations affecting diplomatic messages.

While no nations were mentioned by the regulations, they clearly operated against Axis representatives.

In Japan, the diplomats of Germany, Japan and Italy each were limited to sending 100 words daily in code by radio. Other nations mostly use cable to which no limit has been applied, but the totalitarian states are unable to employ this method because all cables which have not been cut run through the United States or Brazil.

Act Now To Feed People Of Europe, Hoover Says

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—P—To save millions in starving Europe, former President Herbert Hoover said today he advised Herbert H. Lehman, newly appointed director of foreign relief and rehabilitation, that it was imperative that "we organize immediately" to feed the peoples of Nazi-occupied countries this winter.

Hoover, who in World War I held a post similar to that now occupied by Lehman, stressed that the need for immediate assistance was particularly acute in Belgium, the Netherlands, Poland, Greece and Norway.

Lehman, until yesterday governor of New York, met with the former President earlier to discuss relief problems.

17 SHOPPING DAYS TO Christmas Give WAR BONDS • STAMPS

Yule Parade To Be Held December 15

Marquette will have its Santa Claus lane and Yule parade as usual this month, but the main feature of downtown decorations has been discarded because of wartime restrictions.

There will be no colored lights in the large, attractive wreaths that will decorate business streets during the holiday season, Ben H. DeVoe, Chamber of Commerce secretary, said yesterday in announcing that the annual Christmas parade will be held Tuesday night, December 15. It will start at 7:15.

The lights have been dispensed with, DeVoe explained, in conformity with War Production Board regulations which call for conservation of electricity needed in the nation's war effort. However, merchants are permitted to use lighted displays in store windows during the holidays.

Stores will be opened, beginning December 15, until 9 each night until December 24. Christmas eve they will close at 6.

Meat Saving Drive Ends This Week

The "Share the Meat for Victory" campaign, underway in Marquette since December 1, will be concluded today and tomorrow by Neighborhood War Club leaders, cooperating with the nutrition committee of the Civilian Defense Council in an effort to bring useful information on meat conservation to every home in the city.

This project is a prelude to actual rationing of meat, which will be started by the Government shortly after January 1, and its purpose is to prepare the housewife for the ration restrictions by instructing her on the kinds of meat not included in the rationing program and informing her how to prepare meatless menus. This information is contained in pamphlets which are being distributed to homes by Neighborhood War Club leaders.

Escanaba's Appeal From Fine Ruling Supported

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 3.—P.—City Attorney Ganson Taggart today said members of the Michigan Association of Municipal Attorneys would confer soon on a plan to support the city of Escanaba's appeal from a court ruling assigning justice court fines to libraries.

Taggart said that under the ruling, handed down by the Delta county circuit court, such monies were directed to the county for distribution to libraries, and should not be turned over to the municipality. He declared that if Escanaba's appeal to the state supreme court were not successful, fines collected in Grand Rapids police court and traffic bureau could not be claimed by the city. During the last fiscal year the fines amounted to $78,222, Taggart said.

Permission to file a brief in support of Escanaba's position will be sought of the supreme court by the attorneys association, Taggart asserted.

No Drinks On December 24 After 10 P.M.

LANSING, Dec. 3.—P.—The state liquor control commission today ordered all vendors of beer, wine and liquor to cease the sale of serving of intoxicants by 10 p. m. Christmas eve, and to remain closed until at least 7 a. m. the following day.

Commissioner Felix H. H. Flynn said the commission considered such a policy would be "in keeping with the Christian spirit of the holiday."

It applies to all drinking places, and establishments selling bottled beer, wine and liquor for consumption off the premises, and licensed hotels.

"As a matter of fact," Flynn said, "it is our desire that these places stop the sale of intoxicants at 6 p. m. on Christmas eve, the hour when all state liquor stores will close it, but those who fail to close by 10 p. m. will be punished the same as any violator of any commission rule."

Clubs To Get Discount

Flynn said the commission also went on record as agreeing that effective as of December 1, licensed clubs would receive a 15 per cent discount on purchases of liquor stocks from state liquor depots. The supreme court held recently the clubs are entitled to this privilege, which is enjoyed by commercially operated drinking places.

The commissioner said no record was kept of sales to clubs prior to that date and none save the Detroit Athletic club, which instituted the suit, would receive refunds to cover the discounts.

Record was kept in that instance

Board Revises Compensation Case Rules

LANSING, Dec. 3.—The state department of labor and industry revised today its rules of practice and procedure in workmen's compensation cases, its first revision in seven years. The new rules are effective December 15.

Chairman John W. Gibson said the new rules would reduce by several weeks the waiting time for decisions on cases.

The major change is the virtual elimination of oral arguments before the commission on appeals from the awards of deputies. Previously, almost all cases were argued orally, but now will be only with consent of the commission. Instead the commission will consider an appeal 20 days after it has received transcripts of the hearing before a deputy.

Attorney Fees Limited

The rules forbid an attorney to charge a fee of more than 25 per cent of the accrued compensation

Hershey Asked To Defer Police Officers

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Dec. 3.—P.—Representative Paul W. Shafer, Third district Republican, said today that he has asked Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey to modify draft regulations to permit key men in state police organizations and local police departments to remain on the job.

"I also have informed him," Shafer added, "that unless such steps are taken, I will introduce an amendment providing for exemptions of these men in departments which are now being wrecked by failure to recognize their work as essential to the national defense."

Lieut. Ward Resigns From State Troops

The adjutant-general of Michigan has accepted the resignation of First Lieutenant James G. Ward, Jr., from the Michigan State Troops, Captain Ben H. DeVoe, commander of the 503rd company, announced yesterday.

Lieut. Ward, in active charge of the unit since January 1, 1942, resigned to enter the United States Army. His application for officers' candidate training has been accepted and he will leave Marquette Friday, December 11, for Fort Benning, Ga. Ward has been employed as city editor of The Daily Mining Journal during his five-year residence in Marquette.

DeVoe, receiving announcement of acceptance of Ward's resignation from Lt.-Col. George C. Moran, assistant adjutant-general of Michigan, said no one has been selected to fill the vacancy.

Company Needs 15 Recruits

Other vacancies exist in the 503rd company. DeVoe said that at present only 65 officers and men are on the roster, whereas its authorized quota is 80. Its ranks have been thinned by men entering the armed forces and war factories. Enlisted men, as well as non-commissioned officers are needed by the company.

Men interested in joining are asked to apply at the Palstra, where the company holds regular drills Friday nights. They also may consult Capt. DeVoe at the Chamber of Commerce office on South Front street.

Cold, Snow Blamed For Two Deaths

By The Associated Press

Lower Michigan was digging its way out Thursday night from a combination cold wave-snow storm which in two days took a toll of two lives and tied up traffic in many parts of the state.

Temperatures were reported rising in various parts of the Lower Peninsula although continued cold was forecast, and the weather man predicted only occasional light snow tonight. In Detroit the temperature went from 10 above zero this morning to 18 above at 2 p. m.

The storm which swept eastward across Lake Michigan hit hardest in the western part of the state. John Pettit, 69, Grand Rapids, was killed when two automobiles skidded and collided near Grandville. Mrs. Ella Doane, 70-year-old farm woman from Berrien county who had been ill, froze to death when she wandered from home in her night clothes in near-zero weather Friday morning.

Reports from district highway department offices at Cadillac said all trunklines in the 13-county Ludington-Petoskey-Clare triangle were open except for M-82 in Oceana county.

Many workers were prevented or delayed in reaching war factories in Hillsdale county this morning when roads were blocked by heavily drifted snow. Roads were generally open in the Grand Rapids district.

Bus service was resumed today between Muskegon and Ludington and between Traverse City and Manistee after a temporary cancellation.

Lumber Production At High Point Last Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (AP)—Lumber production in the United States last year was the highest since 1929, the Census Bureau reported today.

The 1941 production was 33,613,043,000 feet. In 1929 the cut was 36,886,032,000 feet.

The bureau said Oregon continued as the leading lumber producing state, supplying, with its neighboring state Washington, 34.6 per cent of the total output.

Store Sales In U. P. Up In October

October, 1942, sales in department stores in the Upper Peninsula stood 25 per cent above sales volume in October, 1941, according to figures released yesterday by the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis. Cumulative January through October sales show eight per cent rise from the corresponding 10 months in 1941.

Retail trade in the U. P. for October increased 20 per cent when compared with the same month last

First Class Petty Officer Reginald J. Carlyon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carlyon, Rock street, Negaunee, has returned to Norfolk, Va., where he is stationed with the U. S. Coast Guards, after spending a week's furlough in Negaunee visiting relatives and friends. He has been in the service eight years.

Continuing the seasonal increase, October department store sales for the Ninth Federal Reserve district (Minnesota, Montana, North and South Dakota, Northern Wisconsin and Upper Michigan) showed a nine per cent rise over last month and an 18 per cent increase over October, 1941. On a cumulative 10 months basis, the total sales of the 542 reporting stores in the Ninth district were 10 per cent over the similar 1941 period.

Only 600 Will Witness Inauguration Ceremony

LANSING, Dec. 3 (AP)—The Republican state central committee today said that attendance at the inauguration of Harry F. Kelly as Governor on New Year's day will be limited to 600 persons; the capacity of the house of representatives chamber in which the ceremony will occur.

Chairman John R. Dethmers said bleachers will have to be built to accommodate that many persons. He said the reception to follow would be brief and informal and an invitational luncheon will conclude the program. The traditional inaugural banquet and ball have been dropped from the program because of the war.

Volunteer Fire Fighter Unit Planned

LANSING, Dec. 3 (AP)—Plans for a volunteer forest fire fighting service in Michigan under sponsorship of the Office of Civilian Defense will be laid at a conference here Monday, it was announced today by Duward Robson, chief of the state conservation department's fire fighting staff and state coordinator of the Federal Forest Fire Fighters Service.

Robson said he had invited supervisors of national forests in Michigan and key men in his own organization to plan the summer campaign.

The FFFS will absorb the state "cooperators" system developed by the conservation department last summer to replace reduced fire fighting crews with civilian volunteers.

Robson said between 7,000 and 8,000 volunteers would be recruited by local and state defense councils late this winter. Those who are called on to fight woods fires will be paid the usual 30-cents-an-hour impressed labor rate paid to such workers by the state and will be given supplemental gasoline rations to attend instructional classes or to fight fires.

The four national park supervisors will be named area coordinators, Robson said, while local coordinators will be chosen from among Federal forest rangers and state conservation officers.

Chotts, in French north Africa, are shallow desert lakes from December to April, but make splendid highways the rest of the year.

Mussolini's Speech

MUSSOLINI'S 80 minute speech will go far to convince not only that Italy is slipping, but that Mussolini is slipping as well. It will be regarded as another of those speeches that might better not have been delivered. It should be enough that Italy should have been charged with stabbing France in the back without Mussolini admitting it. It should be enough for the world to know that Italy is incapable of defending itself without Mussolini's assurance that the Nazis, who most of the Italian people hate more than they may hate either the British or the Americans, will come in to bolster them up—and incidentally to lay down the terms under which they will be permitted to live.

If the speech was designed to bolster morale, the verdict will have to be, on the consequences that will flow from it, that it was illadvised and a failure. The Italian people are not far enough removed from knowledge of what is happening in the world not to understand that "my empire," as Mussolini is quoted as putting it, is lost beyond recovery. What destiny holds for this empire is a question far from answer. But nothing is more improbable than that it will be reestablished under unqualified Italian rule.

This people also is able to pass intelligent judgment on Mussolini's dictum that "Japan's intervention is the absolute guarantee of Axis victory." It has been able to sense as surely as the peoples of the United Nations that the events of the past month, beginning with the British attack at El Alamein, mark the turning of the road in the fortunes of war. It has had visual evidence of the mounting power of the United Nations in the devastating attacks on its industrial cities and seaports. It knows, beyond doubt, that Churchill's warning that they are the prelude of worse to come is soundly based on confidence that the day is near when the Axis will be thrown out of the North African littoral.

When this occurs there no longer will be need to search out Italian objectives from British airports. They will be much more readily accessible from the flying fields of one time Italian Libya and French Africa. Mussolini's assurance that the Nazis are coming to bolster the Italian armies can only mean that the air assault will be much more formidable and disastrous in character than it would be if the Italians stood alone.

None can rejoice that the prospective fate of Italy is so hard. There is in this country and in Britain no animosity toward the Italian people. They are liked and esteemed as the German people never have been. There is only regret that their acceptance of Mussolini, and the consequences of accepting him, doomed them to what is now in store. Their supreme misfortune lies in the condition that they are now, along with Mussolini, so caught up in the Nazi coils that there is for them no way out.

It Turns The Trick

If the desire of the Government in gas rationing is the saving of rubber, and not gas, as is the case, observation of traffic conditions the past two days has shown that it has taken the correct way of getting what it wants. Blocks that prior to Monday were filled with parked cars to the limit of their ability to take care of them now accommodate but a handful. The falling off in traffic has been marked. Cars are being kept at home for use only for essential purposes, the while those who were wont to use them for all purposes are wearing down shoe leather.

Prior to Monday the only restriction on traffic was the 35 mile limit. If it was not exactly observed, it was fairly well observed, though in the wide open spaces it could be violated without much danger of apprehension. But as a means of saving rubber, the Government's objective, it was not one, two, three with gas rationing. For the great majority of those subjected to rationing no hardship will be imposed. At the moment there is some confusion because those entitled to better than A cards have not been able to get what they should have. But given a little time those entitled to higher ratings will doubtless be able to get them. Meanwhile, the evidence that the Government has taken the only certain way to effect its purpose is convincing.

A Head Man At Last

Washington advises indicate that the President's decision in the contest, waging for some days, for control of scheduling of munitions output was in favor of the civil administration of the WPB under Donald Nelson. The problem was solved, the President says, as he previously said it would be, by getting the parties together and holding them together until they had come to an agreement. But it may be believed that it was not solved until the President had indicated that, if agreement could not be reached, he would dispose of the issue in favor of WPA.

This, it is to be hoped, is the last chapter in a months' long dispute over control of allocations, which means control over what will be produced, and an equally long evolution of a plan under which the nation's resources can be most effectively used in prosecution of the war. If there is finally an end to bickering over this issue, much more efficient production of the munitions of war, and particularly of those rated as of first importance, may be expected. The contest for precedence in control and allocation has been fraught with bad consequences.

The Army and Navy have not been repudiated. They will have considerable latitude in the schedule of munitions other than aircraft, which will be the particular province of Mr. Nelson's principal aide, Charles E. Wilson. But they will exercise such authority as they are given under a delegation of authority by Mr. Wilson, top man in allocation.

Under the new dispensation, it appears, allocation and control will, for the first time, have a completely authoritative directing head. It has required much travail and the passage of much time to bring about this highly desirable consummation.

Weather Deciding Factor

A considerable tonnage of iron ore probably will be shipped this month to lower lake ports from Lake Superior and Lake Michigan docks, if weather conditions permit. The normal lake shipping season closed November 30, but to meet war production demands the Government has asked ship operators to carry on as far as possible into December. For ore carried in December the freight rate will be increased 25 cents a ton and the Government will reimburse shippers for extra insurance costs.

The carriers will go as far as they can to comply with the Government's request, but despite the increased freight rate and insurance adjustment the tonnage they will be able to move will depend almost entirely upon weather. Movement of ships on Lake Superior has been almost nil the last week because of storms and conditions during the remainder of the month will be a gamble at best.

As for shipments from Marquette, the season's last cargo has been cleared from the South Shore dock, but a few more boats are scheduled for the L. S. & I. dock at Presque Isle. The bulk of whatever additional tonnage it will be possible to ship this month will be hauled from Duluth and Superior, and from Escanaba. The carriers have made a remarkable record this year, moving more than 91,000,000 tons up to December 1, the greatest tonnage in history, but less than the normal percentage of the district total has been shipped from Marquette because it was possible to move ore from this range to lower lake ports in a shorter time by hauling it to Escanaba by rail and loading it into boats there.

The amount of ore shipped in December may fall short of what the Government wants. If so, it may be expected that efforts of an unprecedented nature will be made to open navigation earlier than ever in the spring.

Contemporary Opinion

New Congress Should Be Strong The nation is looking to the new Congress, which meets in January, to show strength. It goes without contradiction that Congress under the New Deal has been a weak Congress, and that the executive has been strong. The cause is not so apparent. New Deal opponents would say that the weakness is due to overwhelming Democratic dominance. The national goal is not served by such preponderance of party strength, but it is doubtful if this is the sole cause of a weak Congress.

An essential weakness appears to be in the mechanical setup of Congress. It is still conducted as a kind of loose forum with small committees doing the real work. As a result Congress is dominated by pressure groups. Without adequate research personnel and facilities, congressmen are at the mercy of the lobbyists.

The new Congress will be no different from the old unless the mechanics of operation are brought into keeping with the times. Representative Everett M. Dirksen has proposed that Congress set up joint committees to seek out facts on war, economics and the post-war period. He would have an expert staff answerable to the committee at a great advantage in opposing the President now because he has the expert staff to feed him latest information, while Congress does not. Mr. Dirksen would remedy that situation.

All this would not necessarily weaken the executive. But it would make possible a Congress which can decide issues with the facts at hand. It would make a stronger Congress—one that is not the property of the lobbyists.—Bloomington, Ill., Pantagraph.

Only Half The Battle

Young women students at Temple University, asked to speculate on the future of matrimony, asserted that postwar homes would be happier than heretofore, because while the prospective bridegroom is off at war, the bride-to-be is learning all the answers to a workingman's problems, by working herself at lathe or bench to pass the ammunition.

Hence, say the coeds, wife will understand husband much better when peace returns. Probably, but understanding one's husband is only half the battle. There's nothing so exasperating as the first husband you come to—as the spouse who understands her husband so well that she gives him the feeling he is just a pawn on her chessboard. Someone should tell the young women at Temple that while the first step to married bliss is understanding your husband, the second step is keeping him from noticing it.—Chicago Sun.

Rumors Will Dissolve

With the war news in every theater running so heavily in favor of the United Nations as it has been in recent weeks, there is no danger in this country today of despair. There is no danger of defeatism. The only danger is overconfidence. Members of the Administration still lash out against the "rumor mongers." But rumors circulate and are credited among a people only when that people feel that they are not getting the truth. Give them the truth, let them feel that they are getting the truth, and rumors will dissolve like a fog under a strong sun.—New York Times.

Thirty Years Ago

Marquette (December 4, 1912) Late last night Schoch & Hallam's South Front street jewelry store was entered and robbed of several hundred dollars worth of valuable stock. Although the burglars did a crude job they made a clean getaway and officers have no clue to their identity. As far as the police are concerned the burglars' added insult to injury, as they left behind a hastily scribbled note as follows: "What do you think of the police force? I am from Chicago. Signed, Chicago Byrns."

The public playground at the corner of Front and Bluff streets is being dismantled for the winter. The bases and stands on the basketball court have been removed and the wooden slide, teeter-totter boards, swinging ladder and other movable parts taken down.

The West Washington street store of Louis Danziger, who purchased from Joseph Brickman the remaining stock of the Grabower store, damaged by fire the night of July 5, has been closed.

Jack Tattersall, chauffeur for N. M. Kaufman left for Chicago to drive the Kaufman DeLuxe car in that city until January.

Isbipening A party of bowlers from the Gwinn club rolled in interesting matches against Isbipening teams at the Empire alleys. In the four-man match Andrew Marino, of the Gwinn team, broke the alley record when he put down 261 pins. Henry Collins, of this city, previously held the record with a score of 258. Total one shipment from the Port of Escanaba for the season of 1912 were 5,232,201 tons, an increase of about 1,000,000 tons over the record for the port in 1911.

The high temperature put the streets and roads in very bad condition for sleighing. Several wagons were brought out in the afternoon. If the warm weather continues it will be impossible to use sleighs in some parts of the city.

A YMCA membership ticket to be used as a holiday gift is being prepared by the boys' department and it is expected that it will be a Christmas gift that will appeal to many parents. Every boy who receives a membership ticket will derive a lasting benefit, as he will be entitled to privileges of the gymnasium, use of the lobby and games and probably a trip to camp next summer. Membership fee for boys under 16 years of age is $2.25.

Negaunee H. S. Thompson, who has charge of the Champion property for the Oliver Iron Mining company, was in Negaunee on business. His camp, about eight miles from Chaplin, recently was broken into and badly damaged.

Nearly every mine in Negaunee can give places to additional men, but as little labor is coming in from outside it is a question whether the companies will be able to work their properties during the winter months as strongly as they would like to. A shortage of men, especially miners, is reported from every iron ore district in the Lake Superior region.

Members of the Negaunee club expect to complete the list of entries for the billiard and pool tournaments to be conducted during the winter months soon. Several already have signed the entry lists.

D. T. Morgan, of Negaunee, who has been in Republic for the last few weeks, was in the city looking over the Dodge property on Lincoln street. Mr. Morgan has not rented the dwelling, but has had several inquiries about it. (From The Mining Journal Files)

Quality, Not Quantity

There is much wisdom behind the request of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures for an end of the double feature for the duration. This request was voted after Lowell Mellett, who is chief of the Office of War Information's movie bureau, argued that the habit of sitting three or four hours, sometimes even longer, "with one's mind afloat in a fictional world," is hardly the best training for the rigors of war.

This does not suggest blanket indictment of movies in wartime. The motion picture industry has shown a very useful attitude toward the war; indeed, Hollywood played an energetic and awakened part in bringing the totalitarian threat home to Americans before Pearl Harbor. Moreover, the movies have been an important—if not uniformly salutary—propaganda medium outside the United States. And one picture such as "Mrs. Miniver" is certainly worth a great many thousands of words in bringing Americans and Britons into better understanding.

But criticism of the double feature is justified. Second films consume man-power and materials (already the War Production Board has been compelled to place limits on 35-mm. film); they waste the man-hours of audiences; they preclude the showing of certain messages and documentary films that the Government needs to get over to theater audiences;—and one picture at a smaller fee would leave more for taxes and war-bond savings.

The double feature was a development of the depression when people wanted escape and had time for it. Today there is a job to be done, and no time to waste, so off with the second picture.—Christian Science Monitor.

Yes, Observe Christmas

Donald M. Nelson does well to say now that Christmas will be a holiday in American production for an end of our factories on the day of the "Prince of Peace." In fact, we could not afford to do otherwise, for the spiritual power we gain is worth more than a few additional tanks and planes. We need to remember that here is a day which transcends all others in importance—a day that is not to be denied to any American if it is possible for him to observe it.

And then we need to remember that when we have observed it when we have held its sacredness inviolate, the spirit of freedom and Christianity alike will call us to the next day to expend once more the sweat of war. In other words, commemorate Christmas, but on the twenty-sixth make the ammunition. Cruel and hard as this seems, it is the only way by which there can be other Christmas to follow.—Milwaukee Journal.

Quotations

The effect of growing peace feeling in Italy places another strain on Hitler's war machine.—British Ambassador Lord Halifax.

It (civilian defense) still creeps in too many spots. Commands are still too narrowly and too loosely organized. Confusion still reigns in too many places.—Civilian Defense Director James Landis.

In the past we have tried to achieve peace in the wrong way, thinking that minding our own business and trying to meet our economic problems by ourselves would be an example which the rest of the world would follow. We forgot that our economic troubles were tied to the economic troubles of the rest of the world.—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

The Americas also are interested in the peace, and to that end shall, after the war, share the benefits of unity.—President Carlos Del Rio of Ecuador.

Today In Washington

By David Lawrence WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—President Roosevelt has apparently decided to reopen and intensify class warfare in America. He has disclosed that he is going to press for the enactment of a law not only leveling off salaries in America but cutting down the incomes of all men, women and children who have estates or investments netting them more than $25,000 a year.

Just what this reduction of incomes has to do with winning the war or just why America's most successful and talented citizens must be subjected to socialistic experiments in the midst of war, diverting energies and time that should be devoted to the production of goods and vital services needed in the war effort, is not explained by the President.

Policy Apparently Deliberate But it was not a chance comment that came from the President in his press conference. What he said must represent a deliberate policy of carrying on his feud against America's successful business men, because Mr. Roosevelt has been well aware of the furor which has resulted from the czarlike acts of his subordinate who, in disregard of the plain wishes of congress, wrote into the anti-inflation law a power that doesn't exist by mandate of law. The office of economic stabilization was supposed to prevent inflation, but, in fixing limits, it has not only reduced per salaries but it has actually increased thereby the profits of corporations, while denying individuals the salaries to which they have thought themselves entitled by contract with their employers.

Not only this, but the President's order undertakes to nullify the revenue laws passed by congress, denying the customary deductions to any citizen who may have more than $25,000 of net after paying the taxes that have been figured on his gross income "undiminished by any deductions."

In the new phase of the controversy, the President concedes that congressional action will be necessary but he has stated heretofore that when congress doesn't pass a law he wants, he can act anyway. So it is possible, using the same specious reasoning, for the executive to proclaim any day that all investments are equally subject to his anti-inflation policy. He has just as much authority to do that as to reduce pre-war salaries and call it anti-inflation.

The President made a rather peculiar defense of his policy in his conference with the press. He said the reduction of the salaries of executives was necessary to prevent national bankruptcy if we lost the war.

What Will Spain Do? The Spanish Government is beginning to find itself hooked on the horns of a dilemma. Nor does its war machine diminish as the German war machine moves to place for a counteroffensive against North Africa, where the campaign of the United Nations has produced abrupt change in Spain's position.

With Italy under Hitler's thumb, and all of France now submerged beneath a Nazi tide of occupation, Spain, the only large nation on the continent of Europe still enjoying respite from actual military control by the Germans. This immunity has suited Hitler for reasons military and political.

So long as Vichy ruled French Africa without interference, Spain, lying apart from the actual battle zone, provided a useful buffer for the Nazis. Also, Spain has been a valuable power station, when Fascist propaganda could be transmitted without interruption to Latin America.

While the poverty of the nation resulting from the civil war made it unattractive to the Germans, the Germans would have to fetch along all their supplies themselves.—Franco's willingness to aid German policy, his grants of man-power and to the German Army fighting Russia in the East, and the fact that a German defeat would quite possibly spell his own downfall, all made Franco's position a desirable one for the Germans.

Smiles Leading Question Judge—"You say you have known the defendant all your life. Tell the jury whether you think he would be guilty of stealing this money." Witness—"How much was it?"—Atlanta Two-Bells

Spoken In Jest A lawyer was defending a man accused of housebreaking, and said to the court: "Your Honor, I submit that my client did not break into the house at all. He found the parlor window open and merely inserted his right arm and removed a few trifling articles. Now my client's arm is not himself, and I fail to see how you can punish the whole individual for an offense committed by one of his limbs."

The judge considered this argument for several moments, and then replied: "That argument is very well put. Following it logically, I sentence the defendant's arm to one year's imprisonment. He can accompany it or not, as he chooses."

Spiced The battleship put in at a certain port on the west coast, and all the boys promptly applied for shore leave—except one. The officer doing out the passes sent for the man and said: "What's the matter? Are you the sailor who hasn't got a wife in this port?" The rating looked at the officer a long time. "No, sir, I'm the only one that has.—From the Sheffield (England) Weekly Telegraph.

eventual invasion of Spain by the United Nations, and its transformation into a battlefield where renewed civil war might ensue. On the other hand, were Franco to oppose military resistance to any German demands for right of way, that decision would not save Spain either, though it might offer promise of survival for El Caudillo himself.—Inasmuch as the Axis cause is no longer assured of victory.—Boston Daily Globe.

The Edge Of Darkness

By William Woods HAPPY BIRTHDAY CHAPTER XVI

The two girls, back home from the saeter, kneeled side by side on the bed in Margit's room and impatiently watched Osterholm down in the courtyard, as he hitched two horses to a sleigh.

"Look how he dawdles," she whispered tensely. "He won't be gone until dark."

"It's only quarter of three." Karen was still thinking of Karl. "Margit," she said, "do you realize it's his birthday. I have to make him so warm and quiet he'll forget everything. If I'm to be his wife, I have to be quick."

"Did he say anything when you gave him the note? Did he say he was sure he could come? Did he say it was all right?" "There was no time. But he nodded to me. We had an officer watching us."

It was three o'clock by Karen's watch before the farmer had climbed into the seat, wrapped the blankets around him, and waving goodbye to them, trotted the horses out the path, and down onto the Namsos road. As soon as he was out of sight the girls leaped off the bed and clattered downstairs, keeping a sharp lookout for the house-keeper and the farm hands. A few minutes later Karen was bundled up in gloves and jacket and fur hat, they had dug her knapsack from under a canvas in the cellar where it was hidden, and she was standing in the yard on her black skis. She kept asking, "Have I forgotten anything, Margit? Have I forgotten anything?"

Margit, shivering hugged her and kissed her cold cheek. The snow fell faster through the crisp and quiet air. "Get back before sun-up," she said. "Get back before anybody comes." And then she watched in the lowering twilight as Karen, carrying the knapsack over her shoulders, slid off silently over the first rise.

The evening came very fast, and brought a cold wind cutting from the northwest. Up in the forest, the dark, ice-laden spruce hung heavily down, casting gray shadows over the valley below, and the brook, when Karen crossed it, was a frozen series of slender stalactites, dropping shelf on shelf downward from the hills. When she got to the bare and desolate fields she traveled faster, came down in a long glide to the saeter cottage, swirled about, and stopped to catch her breath. Then she slipped off the knapsack, unhooked her skis, and opened the door to the dark house.

Margit was the only one who knew everything, from the beginning. It was to her that Karen had poured out the whole story when she came back, timidly and frightened from her first meeting with Karl. "Oh, Margit, Margit, he really loves me," she had cried. "What must I do? It was as if she had once pretended to be a woman, and now could no longer be a girl."

So they had talked it over, Margit most frightened than ever when she saw how serious her friend was about this most dangerous affair. "But he's German," she had said. "He's an enemy."

"I don't care," Karen had cried violently. "He's not like the rest. He can't help it if he wasn't born in Norway."

Once, in the midst of a quarrel, the younger girl had shouted, "I'll kill you if you say another word. If I could trust you I'd tell you why, but I will not stop seeing him."

So Margit had fallen silent, and said never another word. She had seen the weeks pass, counted their stolen meetings, and prayed no trouble would come of it.

Night after night, ignoring her father's scoldings, Karen had slept at the farm. She had grown quiet and thoughtful, and full of a strength and decision that not even Margit had ever suspected in her. She looked at her watch. It was later than she thought, so she got an old broom out of the corner and began to sweep, then dusted, and got three red pillows down out of the wardrobe for the chairs, and when the cottage was all clean and in order, and the things from the knapsack were laid out on the table, last of all, she went to the shed, collected wood, and brought it back in.

The flames spread and grew as if the logs were tinder, crackling and roaring with the wind down the chimney. The whole cottage became bright, and gradually a warmth spread into the farthest corners. Half an hour later, going out to get water for cooking, she was surprised to see how cheerful the little yellow windows looked in the middle of the dark field. By the time the pots started bubbling on the stove, there were already red candles out of the knapsack and set carefully in the center of the white table cloth, and gleaming plates with knives and forks on either side. When all the work was done, and the food stood covered on the stove, steaming and filling the whole cottage with good odors, and the tea simmered in a pot, making piping noises, and the wind roared down the flue and set the logs to crackling, Karen changed her clothes, put on a white shirt, open at the neck, and combed her hair again.

Then it was long and she heard his loud halloo outside, and jumped, trembling, fussed at the white cloth, looked for matches, lighted the candles on the table, then ran and flung open the door. "Karl," she cried. "Karl." He threw up an arm in greeting and swirled about in a great circle in the darkness. She plunged out into the snow to meet him. "Happy birthday, Karl. Happy birthday," she danced about excitedly, nearly losing her balance in the drifts. He unbuckled his skis and propped them up next to hers at the door. "Where have you never come. I was sure something had happened."

He laughed, flung an arm about her shoulders, and took one last look out at the field. "Well, wife, it's a long story. Just as I was leaving my last class, the Dean stopped in my office, and we had a talk. Herr Doktor Fischer, your teaching appointment at the University in Lausanne. 'Lausanne,' he said, 'Lausanne. It's such a pretty place.' He talked about their house near the lake, and how he would go in to his classes in the morning and come back at four every afternoon. 'We'll have a very warm winter. You'll like a dog, Karl,' and neighbors you could gossip with."

The wind blew hard outdoors, piling deep drifts up against the windows. Somewhere in the dark an owl hooted. Karl leaned back, looking all the while at her proud, tilted head across the table. He realized how she had changed since their first meeting. The pale skin of her throat was warm. Her bare arms on the table were round and smooth. Never before had she seemed so womanly.

She rose silently, picked up the lamp, and carried it to the mantle over the hearth. And then, standing in front of the warm fire, she shivered suddenly.

"Karl," she asked, turning "What's wrong?" "Nothing."

"You're going to be transferred from Trollness."

"No."

"Karl," she turned him about and made him face her. "Please tell me the truth. Troops are going to Russia, but I didn't think..."

"Well," he said after a moment, "it's only a rumor."

She felt cold and sick. "You're lying," she whispered. "It is true."

He took her by the shoulders. "And... even if it should turn out that way... it doesn't change anything. I'd be back... in time to go to Lausanne."

Peter Goldbach Services—Funeral services for Peter Goldbach, 66, who died Monday afternoon of a heart attack, were held Thursday morning in St. Ann's church with the Rev. Anthony Waschler conducting the services. Burial was in the Baraga cemetery. Mr. Goldbach was born at Assinins, November 26, 1876, the son of pioneer residents of the township, and, with the exception of two years spent in Detroit, spent his life in the township. Goldbach was snowed in at his cabin near the Pricett dam location during the recent blizzard. He had shoveled from the garage to the highway Monday morning in hope that snow plows would get the main road open that day. After lunch he decided to start the car and went out to the garage where he turned over to the motor with a crank and then got in the car to start it. Mrs. Goldbach found the body shortly after where he had partly fallen out of the car. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Archie Patterson and Lillian Goldbach, R. Signal Corps Jobs Open To Civilians

Representatives of the U. S. Civil Service commission and U. S. Army signal corps will come to Marquette next Tuesday and Wednesday to interview applicants for special training preparatory to entering the signal corps enlisted reserve.

The signal corps seeks qualified applicants for training as mechanic learners, junior repairmen and electronic students. Men or women between the ages of 16 and 35 will be considered for training as mechanic learner or junior repairman. If accepted they would be civilian employees of the War Department and would receive from $1,080 to $1,800 a year.

Applicants accepted for training as electronic students must be from 18 to 45 years old, men only, with two years of college training.

Report at USES Office

Persons interested in this opportunity to get specialized training and appointments to war service jobs are requested to report to the United States Employment Service office in Marquette as soon as possible. The USES is cooperating with the U. S. Civil Service commission and the Army signal corps.

Signal corps officers coming here next week represent the headquarters office of the Sixth Service Command, Chicago.

Qualified men between 18 and 45 years of age, able to pass the Army classification test and physical examination will be accepted for training leading to enlistment in the signal corps reserve. Having expressed a willingness to enlist in the signal corps reserve upon completion of the training, they will be removed from the jurisdiction of the local draft board and will be under the authority of the chief signal officer of the Sixth Service Command, who may call applicants to duty at any time.

Army Adjutant General In U. P. Next Week

LANSING, Dec. 3.—The anniversary of Pearl Harbor, falling on Monday, will bring Maj. Gen. James A. Ulio, adjutant general of the U. S. Army, to Michigan for a four-day tour.

Gen. Ulio's feature appearance will be a speaking engagement that night in Grand Rapids at a "Pearl Harbor mass meeting."

He will come to Detroit Monday morning, be greeted by Governor Van Wagoner and visit the Willow Run bomber plant. Enroute to Grand Rapids, he will stop at Michigan State college in East Lansing to address military students.

After the Grand Rapids visit, Gen. Ulio will leave Tuesday morning, halt at noon at Traverse City, cross the Straits of Mackinac by ferry during the night, and reach Sault Ste. Marie Wednesday for a military visit at Fort Brady.

Returning, Gen. Ulio will spend Wednesday night at West Branch and Thursday will visit the Defoe Boat Works at Bay City, the Wilcox-Rich airplane parts plant at Saginaw and the General Motors tank plant at Grand Blanc.

Police Battle Snow On Errand of Mercy

EAST LANSING, Dec. 3.—State police and highway department employees battled snow-drifts three hours yesterday in what proved to be an over-rushed errand of mercy.

State police were called to aid a snow-bound ambulance on the eastern edge of Ingham county, bearing 13-year-old Robert Bullock to St. Lawrence hospital in Lansing with acute appendicitis. The rescue car also got marooned and finally road equipment was called to extricate both machines.

Robert arrived at the hospital at 10:30 p. m., but the operation was not performed until today.

L'Anse

The American Legion auxiliary will hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday night. A Christmas program is planned and a lunch will be served in the club rooms.

Joseph Emblad and C. E. Delene, of the conservation department, have gone to southern Illinois to hunt ducks in the Mississippi river marshes.

James Rowe, who celebrated his 66th birthday November 26, has resigned his position as mechanic at the Fort plant because of ill health.

Mr. and Mrs. Felix Gustafson and daughter, Patricia Ann, have returned to their home in Detroit after visiting Mr. and Mrs. James Rowe.

Noble Drolson, yard foreman for the Armstrong-Hielman company 17 years, has been promoted to manager of the L'Anse branch following resignation of Frank E. Christianson, who has accepted a position with the Great Lakes Lumber company, Fort William, Ontario.

The war price and rationing board, located in the office of the county clerk at the court house, has been moved to an office on the second floor of the old gymnasium building on Main street formerly occupied by the unemployment department. Miss Eva Moilanen is chief clerk and is assisted by Miss Mary Simonich.

Beginning this week neighborhood war club leaders will canvass all homes in the village to collect torn silk and nylon hosiery. All washed stockings containing either pure silk or nylon or mixed silk and nylon or mixtures with cotton or rayon will be accepted. The collection will close December 9 and the goods will be shipped the following day. Stockings also may be turned into stores selling hosiery.

The Baraga county salvage committee this week delivered to the county USO organization checks amounting to $80.69, which represent proceeds of scrap metal and rubber donated by citizens of the village. The salvage committee also received this week a six-foot pennant which Baraga county is entitled to fly on the county flagstaff for achieving its quota of 100 pounds of scrap metal a person in the October drive. Baraga county exceeded its quota during the drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Tollefson announced the marriage of their son, Einar, to Miss Margaret Karoline Umphenboch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Umphenboch, Detroit on November 11. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Scarvie at the home of the bride's parents, Miss Elsie Umphenboch, a sister of the bride, and Erling Peterson, a step-brother of the groom, were attendants. The couple will reside in Detroit where the groom is employed. Mr. Tollefson is a graduate of the L'Anse high school and has spent several years sailing on the ocean between San Francisco and Australia before the outbreak of the war.

A farewell dinner party was given this week by the L'Anse Masonic lodge at the Earmart club honoring Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Christianson, who will leave the community to take up residence at Fort William, Ontario, where Mr. Christianson has accepted a position as sales manager for the Great Lakes Lumber company. During the program following the dinner, Francis Kotila, worshipful master of the lodge and toastmaster, introduced Mayor A. William Beesley, L'Anse, and John Beck, president of the village of Baraga, for remarks. Arthur Ohman, in behalf of the Masons, presented Mr. and Mrs. Christianson with leather traveling luggage. G. F. Biekkola, president of the Commercial club, also presented the couple with gifts. Mr. Christianson was a charter member and one of the organizers of the L'Anse lodge. He also has served on the village council and at present is president of the Baraga County Sportsman's club. Mrs. Christianson has been active in civic affairs and has served as president of the township board of education.

U. S. To Help Farmers Solve Labor Problems

CHICAGO, Dec. 3.—American farmers, who have been asked to produce a record supply of food next year, today were assured the Government would help them solve their manpower problems.

Production, price and labor policies for the year ahead were discussed by Secretary Wickard and other Agriculture department officials at a conference with members of state farm war boards from 10 midwestern states.

Lyle F. Watts, assistant to the Secretary, stated that farm workers must be made to realize that they are more important to the country on the land than in the Army.

He estimated a minimum of 8,500,000 farm workers would be needed in 1943, reported that 1,615,000 farm workers had shifted to non-farm jobs and the armed forces in a year, and conceded that manpower would be the crucial factor in plans for the largest output of food in history.

Gas Ration Appeal Method Explained by OPA Attorney

The method by which motorists are to make appeals for a larger gasoline ration than that allowed in the first registration just completed was outlined yesterday by Edwin G. Gemrich, state rationing attorney for OPA.

Appeals must be made on OPA form R-122, which is to be made out in duplicate, Gemrich said, and filed with the local war price and rationing board. The form requires answers to five questions, which must be answered to establish the basis for the appeal.

"The appeal may be accompanied by documentary evidence supporting the appeal," Gemrich stated, "and inasmuch as the determination will be decided on the strength of the Statement of Appeal plus the application and such other documentary evidence as submitted, the appellant should make his appeal complete in the first instance."

Must File in 30 Days

"He must set forth in his statement the specific section, or sections, of the rationing regulations which he claims to be inconsistent with his allowed ration. Copies of gasoline rationing regulations are available at all local board offices and may be consulted for the purpose of determining the specific section.

"Appeals must be filed within 30 days after the applicant has received notice of the local board's action. The board then has five days in which to reconsider its action or in which to forward the appeal to the state office.

"When the appeal reaches the state office, the state director may affirm or reverse the action of the local board, or may modify and remand it to the board for further action."

Gemrich said the Michigan office expected to handle from 6,000 to 10,000 appeals, based on the experience of the business volume tabulated in the 17 Eastern states which have had gasoline rationing since last July.

To help handle the expected load Gemrich appealed to Wayne county attorneys for aid in processing appeals. The response, he said, was overwhelming, more than 435 attorneys volunteering.

150 Attorneys Instructed

"Because it would be impractical to handle such a large group we selected at random 150 attorneys from the volunteer group," Gemrich said. "These attended a 15-hour training course conducted by the OPA's legal staff and the proper procedure of handling appeals was outlined to them."

"A docket system has been established and as appears come in and all the information is gathered this office will parcel the work out to the volunteers who will do the actual work on them and then return them to the OPA office for review."

Gemrich warned against the writing of letters or filing appeals directly with the state office. In such case, he said, the appeals will have to be returned to the sender and this will result in needless delay in having the case reviewed.

Jury Draws Curtain On Striptease, Fan Dance

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The curtain fell on striptease Margie Hart's G-string and Noel Toy's fan dance in "Wine, Women and Song" today when a jury of seven men and five women held the show to be indecent.

The producer agreed to close the production immediately when that action was made a condition of bail continuance until December 17, when sentence on a misdemeanor charge will be passed.

The defendants in the case—as much in the background at the trial as in the theater—were Producer I. H. Herk, Company Manager Semuel Funt and Stage Manager Herman Shapiro.

It took the defendants—with Miss Hart and Miss Toy giving mild demonstrations of their art and stage apparel—several days to complete their case.

But the jury was ready with its decision in 104 minutes, including lunch during that time.

Gas 'Bootleggers' Halt Work in Food Plants

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Dec. 3.—An official of the Battle Creek Gas Co. today said that gas "bootleggers" who used stove oven heat to supplement house heating during the cold spell caused the stoppage of gas supplies to all but one Battle Creek food company last night.

David H. Frazer, Jr., president of the gas company, said all the plants were affected by the shortage except the Kellogg Co., which has a stand-by supply. Hundreds of persons were thrown out of work when the ovens were closed. Most plants were receiving from 10 to 25 per cent of their normal gas supply by noon today.

Frazer asked customers to voluntarily ration their gas and warned that unless they do a critical situation will develop here.

Friday, 13th, Black Cat Day for Nips

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is another account of the United States-Japanese naval battle of November 13, written on shell-scarred Guadalcanal Island. Correspondent J. Norman Lodge adds new and vivid details to this now-famous engagement.)

By J. Norman Lodge

GUADALCANAL, Solomon Islands, Nov. 14—(Delayed)—A terrific two-day battle for possession of Guadalcanal ended, temporarily, at noon today, with the American flag still flying over Henderson field and with a large Japanese naval task force retiring with evidently mortal wounds for a battleship, two cruisers and three destroyers.

The naval action took place an hour after Friday the thirteenth was born. It was a disastrous black cat day for the Nips.

The Japanese force comprised two battleships, four cruisers and at least 12 destroyers. Our force was considerably smaller, but like lions in a cage, the Japanese ships by consistent nipping forced the full Jap task force to retreat.

The naval action followed two days of air preparation during which the dragon flies took an unmerciful beating. While the air fighting was taking place, the Japanese task force was steaming from the north near Bougainville, to shell the coast and engage the American fleet. The Japs never got a chance to shell the coast that night, but they did get a chance to engage a United States task force, which had just finished escorting a huge store of supplies to this island, and stood by while they were unloaded.

Pass Between Jap Fleet
At nightfall the men of war set out on patrol while the transport and supply vessels headed for home bases. Shortly after midnight of November 12, as our force neared Savo, between Guadalcanal and Florida islands in what is known as "Dead Man's reef," it passed between the lined-up Japanese fleet.

Without warning the Japanese searchlights flooded the narrow gut with light and cannon roared. The leading United States destroyer caught a broadside port and starboard, staggered, but answered with everything she had, forcing the portside enemy cruiser to withdraw momentarily.

This gave the following destroyers of our forces the fighting chance they needed. But looming up on the northwest side of Savo was a huge battleship of the Kongo class, which fired at point-blank range everything she had. Our destroyers and cruisers answered and the air was filled with shells in enfilade fire.

For 45 minutes the full scale battle lasted. During that hectic 45 minutes the Kongo class battleship was seriously damaged and forced to withdraw to the southern tip of Savo island, where hours later she was still burning, and taking American torpedoes, bombs and shells. Meanwhile four of our destroyers were taking the full brunt of enemy fire. One fired full broadside torpedoes into a Japanese cruiser, but took a terrific beating, finally disappearing beneath the placid waters with its flag still flying.

Another, beaten almost to scrap by enemy shells, got hit in the forward magazine and blew up as the skipper stood at his post after directing others to abandon ship. Most of the crew were brought safely ashore.

Two Others Go Down

A like fate attended the third, and many of her crew were blown 50 yards clear of the ship. They, too, were rescued in large numbers.

The fourth, badly crippled, fired to the last, and the rescued sailors brought ashore her flag. She was later sunk by our own forces to preclude possibility of her armament falling into the hands of the enemy.

Other destroyers tossed shells and torpedoes into the Japanese flotilla as fast as human hands could load and reload the guns' tubes. Cruisers were throwing up fire so it seemed as if "machine gun bullets were going through the air," according to an officer aboard. The Kongo class battleship was taking a continual pounding all this time; it withdrew and two Japanese cruisers, badly hurt, trailed toward the north.

As the shelling ceased, boats and tank lighters began streaming in and with survivors of the sinking ships. By scores they kept coming to the beach until late afternoon.

Sailors, black as Kaffirs from oil and burns, leaped ashore and, despite a five-hour ordeal in the stinking waters, asked first for a chance to take a swim in the fast-flowing Lunga river to get rid of the grease.

Several remarked sadly, "you can't fight battleships with cans." (Sailors for destroyers.)

Planes Pound Battleship
As the naval engagement quieted, torpedo and bombing planes from Henderson field set out after remnants of the Japanese task force. The Kongo class battleship received plenty of attention, but stubbornly refused to settle beneath the waves. Torpedoes were sent into the hull, in addition to several aerial bombs. But remnants of her crew kept up steam, and wounded though she was, she had approximately six knots headway as dusk fell.

Meanwhile, two enemy cruisers had been given coups de grace from the air, and went down abreast of Tulagi. The waters were reported filled with dead Japs, and many picked up alive but suffering from internal hemorrhages from depth charge explosions.

One of our light cruisers was dead in the water by this time and although it made anchorage safely, it finally was scuttled by its own crew on orders of the high command. Admiral Norman Scott and his entire staff, with the exception of one junior officer, was reported killed in the first broadside, which took off the flag bridge. The night of Friday the thirteenth, Nip cruisers and destroyers made two runs past Guadalcanal, and poured scores of shells into Henderson field without inflicting damage. The runways were unmolested and the casualty list was only seven slightly wounded by shell fragments.

Finally Sink Big Battleship
Promptly at daybreak Saturday morning, scout bombers again

went after the Kongo type battleship and finally, as a wounded elephant might settle down to death from loss of blood, the huge steel monster, with holes throughout its sides, decks, askew, and littered with debris and dead crewmen, sighed a huge puff of steam and went to the bottom from loss of buoyancy.

Other air bombers placed bombs on one cruiser and sunk torpedoes into the other.

Scouts reported a Japanese fleet comprising at least a battleship, four cruisers and 12 destroyers is assembled 150 to 200 miles north of Guadalcanal and indications are a second full scale naval engagement is in the offing.

Reports have just come from scout bombers that a large Japanese transport has been sunk and another set afire since our noon-day luncheon.

A second naval engagement was fought the night of November 14-15, Guadalcanal time, and a Japanese battleship or heavy cruiser, three large cruisers and one destroyer were sunk and others damaged.

The Japs probably will get the idea eventually they are not wanted at Guadalcanal and the Marine, Navy and Army are doing everything possible to convince them.

Bomber Lads Pack Punch In Solomons

Sherman Montrose, Acme Newspictures cameraman, who landed with the Marines on Guadalcanal last August, and whose pictures were distributed to newspapers of the country through the "photographic pool," has just returned to San Francisco from his assignment. Below, he presents the fifth of six informative, exciting stories of life on Guadalcanal.

By SHERMAN MONTROSE
Written for NEA Service

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3—Fighter pilots pack the glamor, and bomber lads, the punch. But ask any of them what takes the intestinal fortitude, the cool nerve and the steady eye, and they'll give you the nod to the fellows who pilot one of the Navy's newest potent weapons—the torpedo bomber.

If you're a correspondent-photographer in the Solomons, you may get to see in one of these planes on an attack. Usually you go up only once, and you're darned thankful to get back on the ground again. You emerge from the experience with a feeling of hero worship toward your pilot akin to small-boy days.

If you didn't have religion when you went up, you got it up there close to God.

Often the biggest thrills in life come unexpectedly. It was like that one October day in Guadalcanal when Navy and Marine pilots are daily writing the most glorious chapters in the history of our fighting.

Watching Tojo
You had been down at the beach to watch Tojo come over on one of his almost-daily bombing raids on the island. As usual, his bombs fell wide of their mark, but you had tried to empty a sand trap when a strafing Zero came down the beach, a Frumman fighter hard on his heels "filling his tail with arrows."

You'd swing back to Henderson son Field to see what was going on there, just in time to see a "TBF"—torpedo bomber Grumman—taxi to take off. You signal wildly to the pilot, point to the camera and self, make a sign common on the highways and he signals you to come on.

So you'd grabbed a few extra rolls of film for a Leica, a couple of film packs for a Graphic, stuffed filters in your green Marine uniform work suit, dodged under the "prop" and climbed aboard.

In the navigator's compartment between pilot and gunner, you'd wrestled with a reclining chute while taking off, finally to give it up after you were convinced it had been made for a small man instead of a six-footer. Having placed entire faith in the pilot, you start to look around to see where you're going—and with whom.

You spot a squadron of scout bombers loaded with business-like 500-pound bombs and join the formation with the uncomfortable realization that you're in the only torpedo bomber in the squadron.

For an hour or more you fly north of 10,000, eyes on the sky above, eagerly scanning the water below. By this time you've realized you're looking for trouble, but aren't sure that you want to find it. Despite lack of fighter protection, machine gunners manning the rear guns in the "scouts" give you a well-protected feeling.

Cloud Pictures
You make pictures dodging in and out of cumulus clouds and hope they turn out as well as they should, wishing you had some color film along.

After losing your comrades in a heavy cloud, you come out into the open, glance below, see this target:

Spread out on a cobalt sea, sterns kicking out white streamers of wake, two cruisers and four destroyers dodged and swayed. You take your eyes from the scene for a moment to tighten your safety belt and your plane starts to buck and kick like a steer. "Rough up here," you mutter audibly, then look over the side to see you're in the middle of puffing balls of black smoke.

Up until now you've been just an observer of something remote. Then it suddenly becomes very personal. "Hell," you remark with some surprise, "that's A.A. and they're shooting at us."

Your still unknown pilot looks over the air above, swings into a wide arc as the scout bombers start peeling off. You try to watch the bombers and their target and a cruiser dead ahead of your nose, but the angle of your plane interferes. Then you start down.

"This is it," you mutter unhappily and hold on with everything you've got, wonder if it would do any good to pray, decide it's too late in life to be a hypocrite.

Into the Dive
For a few seconds you take your eyes off the scene ahead, shift to the right. Huge water spouts envelop a big destroyer. Then a big explosion. Smoke and debris rise. Automatically you raise camera to get eye level, snap the shutter, re-wind, snap, re-wind and snap again. You try to get your target in the camera range finder but you're bouncing around too much and the dive now is at a steep angle doing 300 miles an hour or more.

Then your seat rises and kicks you in the seat of your pants and you instinctively know that the torpedo is away. The plane banks sharp to the left and you offer that same seat to the enemy. Stomach muscles contract and you brace yourself for a hail of machine gun bullets. But the expected shock doesn't come.

The man ahead of you with your life in his hands starts getting out of there, and you're glad of it. He gets altitude, banks again and you look over the side

News Behind the News

By Ray Tucker

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—A study of the railroad map of middle Europe, particularly the transportation systems of France and Germany, demonstrates the wisdom of the Roosevelt-Churchill decision to choose North Africa as the springboard for an eventual offensive against the Hitler-controlled Continent.

Historical enmity impelled Paris and Berlin to construct their internal lines in an east-west direction. The same considerations governed when they built canals, military highways and feeders. Since 1870 both nations have laid tracks with the fear of future war rather than the thought of free exchange of goods dominating their blueprints and influencing their foreign offices. As a result of this martial versus engineering complex, there is only one worth-while French line running from north to south; namely, the Paris-Marseilles route.

The lack of links between industrial France and Germany and the "soft side" of Vichy's erstwhile provinces makes it extremely difficult for Der Fuehrer to prepare against an Allied attack from this area. He cannot rush supplies and troops there in volume and he cannot maneuver quickly to meet a shifty United Nations onslaught. That single ribbon of steel will undoubtedly become the main target of Anglo-American bombers when the Axis forces in Tunisia have been Dunkirked.

WINDUP—Confidential figures on United Nations against Axis output of planes underlie our leaders' private beliefs that it won't be long now. It is generally recognized here that Roosevelt-Churchill warnings against overconfidence and expectations of a quick victory are designed to prevent a letdown in the factories, in the homes and on the battlefield.

With aerial superiority becoming the principal factor in the struggle, there is no gaining anything following authentic data: The United States manufactured more than 5,000 bombers, pursuits and trainers last month. We have three new formidable models coming into large-scale production, but only one type, the Mustang, has been identified. England rolled out 2,800, Russia 2,200, while Canada and Australia kicked through with a combined total of almost 1,000. That makes a total of more than 11,000.

Hitler's capacity slumped from 2,300 in June to only 1,200 in September because of obsolescence and the need for retooling. It is believed here that the monthly turnover of Germany and Italy does not exceed 3,000, possibly less, and that Japan is lucky to place 1,000 new machines in the air every 30 days.

Anglo-American experts discount predictions that Der Fuehrer will be liquidated through internal and external troubles by next spring or summer, although bets on that basis to see one destroyer burning fiercely. You make more pictures. Your target is still in one piece, however, and you wonder if you made a hit.

More planes come up and you lose that "all alone" feeling you've had during the dive. You count 'em. Yep, all safe. "It's all over," you breathe thankfully as you start home to Henderson Field at Guadalcanal.

Sometime later, your pilot turns, grins over his shoulders and gives a "Thumbs up," hands back a map on which is written "Cape Esperance, Lotsa Jap landings there." He points over to a point of land jutting out from the north end of Guadalcanal.

He leaves the formation, heads for the cape, machine guns spitting. Jap landing boats dot the water below as you think you see Nips scattering in the palm trees.

Strafing Barges
Down the coastline you roll, forward and aft machine guns spitting and you see bullet patterns around the landing barges.

Henderson Field is soon ahead and you land, climb weakly from the cockpit, knees wobbly and heart still playing tricks. Your pilot takes off his goggles and you recognize him as Lt. Henry "Swede" Larsen.

"Like it?" he asks. "Great," you reply in what you hope are manful tones. "Did we get him?"
Larsen curses soulfully but softly. "Nope. Fish slid just ahead of his bows. Got a premature release. But he was dead in the water anyhow. We slid a couple of fish into him this morning. Just wanted to make sure some one didn't tow him in—they won't now we've busted up that formation."

Then you realize this is Larsen's second torpedo attack of the day—just a daily incident for the Navy fliers who "park the fish" for Uncle Sam in the Solomons.

Northern Dairy Homo-D Milk Goes Deer Hunting

This is a story of two gallons of Homo-D milk and two quarts of Homogenized coffee cream that took to the woods on Saturday, November 14th. (It was bottled on Friday the 13th). The report comes back that the milk was as fresh tasting on Saturday, Nov. 21st as it was a week before. It was not frozen or kept under artificial refrigeration. Oatmeal was set outside in a shady place and at night it was brought into camp to keep from freezing. The coffee cream was used up Friday, Nov. 20th so no real test was made on how long it would remain fresh. The camp being out of cream did not drink black coffee—so sir, they used rich, creamy Homo-D milk in their coffee. Yes, there was a little difference in the result, but claims are made that if you use just a little more, you can't tell the difference.

PETRIFFED—Prospective "celebration" of Paul V. McNutt as Secretary of the Interior marks the last act in as fine a political assassination as this blasé Capital has witnessed in many years. Even the rals of the snow-haired Hooper concede that he might as well wear his 1944 Presidential ambitions in moth balls.

When he returned to Washington from the Philippines to become Federal Security Administrator, friends warned him that he was giving hostages to the White House by becoming a member of the official family. "No," grinned Paul (this was before the 1940 national convention), "I have an agreement with President Roosevelt that I can go on with my campaign."

Soon, however, he was "smeared" by inspired reports that his "two per cent club" and his income tax payment were under investigation by the Internal Revenue Bureau. Even if F. D. R. had not sought a third term, that undisputed cloud would have hung over the Indiana boy and sidetracked him.

Mr. McNutt saw in his post as chairman of the War Manpower Commission an asset to his 1944 prospects. He hired fancy publicity men and signed an endless series of orders, letters and placards with the idea of keeping his name before the people. Nobody regards his inclusion in the Cabinet as a promotion, except socially. Inter-departments in Washington, with the expiring Indian and petrified forests as its livest problems.

FILIBUSTER—An unofficial bipartisan coalition in the House has framed a behind-the-scenes scheme to force the Democratic management to permit a larger Republican representation on key committees. Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin (R.) has not yet convinced Speaker Sam Rayburn (D.) that his demands should be granted. In view of the increased enrollment on his side of the aisle, "Joe" insists that units consisting of 25 members should have thirteen Rayburnites to twelve G. O. P.—ers.

whereas the existing ratio approximates fifteen to ten. The Texan believes that his Bay State colleague is altogether too grasping.

But Mr. Martin's crowd has strong majority support for its program, and anti-New Deal Southerners plan to do something about it. Unless the Speaker yields, the alliance will vote down vital bills reported to the chamber by the leadership through the Rules Committee. It figures that a few stinging defeats of this sort will obtain its objective. Note: Underlying motive of the proposed parliamentary filibuster is to lodge control of the lower body in the hands of the conservatives.

Winning The War

By Albert N. Leman

PEACE—A point was brought into the open by Prime Minister Churchill in his radio speech which went unnoticed by the public, but has recently been the anxious concern of realistic diplomats. He hinted that the struggle with Germany might end first and then the United Kingdom would join its entire forces with those of the U. S. A. against Hirohito. He could not promise what Russia would do because apparently he had no assurance from the Kremlin that it eventually will break off relations with Tokyo.

Statecraft experts think that the Soviet will not make a separate armistice with Hitler. The hatred of the nation aroused by countless atrocities is so tense that even Stalin might not be safe should he shake hands with the enemy before the Nazis are exterminated. The anxiety now is that, once the Wehrmacht is smashed, Moscow will announce that her part of the bargain has been fulfilled and she will not take on Japan.

The United States thus would lose Siberia as a base for offensives by way of Alaska and the airfields of Vladivostok. But of far more importance is the fact that, before we have crushed Nippon, the United States and Britain may be weaker in manpower, ships, planes and material.

Russia at peace will have time in which to grow strong again. She would be in a position to impose her will on the next Versailles conference which meets to settle the boundary lines of Finland, the Baltic states and Poland and to decide the future course of Europe. Uncle Sam and John Bull—still enmeshed in the war—would be unable to check the ambitions of the northern bear.

RIVALRY—In such an event there would arise the lament that American boys were used chiefly to make the world safe for Communism. This fear has been present in certain capitalist and church circles although it has been lessened somewhat by the almost universal admiration for the bravery shown at Stalingrad, Sevastopol and Moscow. However, the Administration appears to trust our Ally to the limit and has passed the word that never were relations better.

The belief held by many foreign policy experts is that we can win Russia's undying gratitude if we help her during the next few months. Even if the Reichswehr is halted or hurled back, the civilian population is due to suffer the worst winter thus far, in which an all-time peak of hunger will be reached. The bountiful Ukraine wheat fields are lost, the rich cattle country of the north Caucasus is looted, the limited transportation system cannot carry food from remote farms when guns are needed at the front. From now on it will be a race between American supply ships and the Four Horsemen.

Idealists hope that if we save the Muscovites from starvation they will pay their debt to us by attacking Japan. Realists expect a similar outcome for entirely different reasons. They argue that the new Siberian empire always will be at the mercy of a strong Nippon. Therefore with Germany out of the way it will be to Russia's advantage to gang up with us and forever eliminate her Asiatic rival.

PANIC—Civilian defense experts are sitting in quietly on the various official investigations of the holocaust in Boston which destroyed nearly 500 lives. Although they are not saying this for publication, they look upon the catastrophe as a ghastly preview of what could happen in any great American city if a desperate Goering should drop some of the new German incendiaries which not only scatter flames but also—after a deceiving lapse of seven minutes—explode and blow firemen to bits.

Mayor LaGuardia, for example, argues that the Nazis are likely to try out this diabolical "toy" on New York in order to retaliate for recent reverses through a psychological victory. The latest device is tossed in a packet holding three dozen smaller bombs. A tiny charge releases the cluster, which falls over a wide area. Each unit weighs four pounds and is twice as heavy as the older type of torch. It is so powerful that it can penetrate from roof to street floor and when it bursts can shatter ordinary walls and ceilings. Often the TNT section breaks off from the regular container and cannot be seen in the darkness until it is too late.

A few such hellish weapons, rained upon a street crowded with Christmas shoppers or plunged into a close-packed building, would cause not only conflagration, but also panic. The O. C. D. realizes that it was mob terror—far more than fire and smoke—that caused the horror in New England. That is why air raid volunteers are urged again and again not to let down in their training and drills.

The density of population in New York City's lower East Side has declined by more than 50 per cent since 1905.

In the first seven months of 1942, 300,000 more tons of steel plates were produced in the U. S. than in all of 1941.

Woman's Club Hears Talk On 'Christian Democracy In War Time'

Most Women Earn Citations For Gallantry

(By MANTHEI HOWE)

It has been quite generally conceded that women who have loved ones in the military service, carry a load of heartache and worry that is properly evaluated, makes them as deserving of an accolade of worthy service as any soldier in the war. But there is a comforting thought in the situation that the women overlook.

Women have been accustomed through the years to thinking about the welfare of the members of their family. It is the love and sympathy of mother, wife, or sweetheart that has made men try to do their best in any work assigned to them.

Men Care Too, But—

When mothers send their men to war, it's a bit harder on them than on fathers. I don't mean that fathers don't feel that sickening sweep of anxiety when the postman does not bring the expected letter. Nor do I mean that mothers don't clamp their lips tight when they face the possibility that the lad may not return.

But men are able to be out of the house and about their work. There are the problems of business to be solved, people to meet, the hurry and rush to get the job done that, though it does not crowd the thought of the absent sons, brothers, or friends out of their mind, does mercifully dull the full consciousness of it 12 hours of the day.

The mothers, as they go about their daily work at home, have constant reminders of the absent boys. They don't pause in front of some of the snapshots that are on his dresser. They may hurry the work of cleaning that room, but they can't help but be conscious of the clothes closet in such strangely unusual neatness and order.

In a file of old magazines, mother finds the crossword puzzle book the lad had fooled with when he was home.

Rooms Speak To Them

If they try to clear out all those articles that stir the memory the bare room may be even more uncomfortable and grim reminder.

The wife can't sit in the living room reading the sewing without her husband's favorite chair reminding her of his absence. If she sits in his chair because there is some feeling of the comfort of his presence there, her usual chair beside the book case recalls the difference between that evening and others they had spent together, as does the need of going around to lock the doors, or to attend to the furnace, or do any of the other dozens of things which her husband always did.

It is the women who, no matter how busy they may be, are always at the door 15 or 20 minutes before the mail is due on his rounds. It is the women who wonder if the men are well, if they are getting good food, if they are comfortably sheltered, and if they are lonely. The bonds to which they cling are the letters that come.

Of course the women, most of them and the best of them, don't say much about it when they are thinking. They go around smiling briskly attending to work.

It is no use to tell them not to worry. There is something in the tenderness of women, their loyalty to loved ones, that makes it impossible for them to stop thinking about them through the hours of the day and the night, but there is a comforting thought they might well keep in mind.

Is Big Adventure

Reminder of that came after a recent talk with a lad home on furlough. He said: "I'm glad to be in the service. A fellow has to do his share. And really it is rather wonderful the opportunity service gives a fellow to see the country. I'd been to Minneapolis, Toledo, and Chicago, but that was about as far as I'd been. It isn't likely that it would have been possible for me to travel much farther. But in the few months in the Army, I've been clear across our country."

Another man in service writes from the Pacific coast: "How you would enjoy it if you could see the mountains out here, the scenery, and meet the people. Wish you could have heard the opera that I heard on my free night last week."

Two fellows write of their youth and delight at seeing England. Others had been in Palestine. Concede that there is danger for them in this situation which takes them so far from home, thousands of miles farther than they ever would have gone in a life time, but think of the adventure it is to them.

Youth is restless and adventurous, thank goodness, and usually that urge to see distant places cannot be indulged, but the war has made it possible for hundreds of thousands of lads. For many it will be of more practical value than a college education. They will acquire in a few months a maturity of thought and of outlook that would not have been theirs for years had they never had to leave home.

Think Of Their Side

So the women who have men in the service have that bit of satisfaction. They may rest assured that it isn't fun for the men who are in the combat zone, but even there the irresistible spirit of youth manages to crack a joke.

The men in the service in foreign lands but not in the combat zone are often having what they would call "a swell time" wandering down strange and picturesque streets, making new friends, seeing things novel in their experience. There is fooling in the barracks even when the men are undergoing intensive training. It cannot be otherwise where so many men foregather. That man's world has something of charm, quite unlike the ordinary lives the men have lived.

Of course the men write that they are lonely, that they'd like to be home and stick their legs under their own table, that they'd like to know what is going on. They are eager for the day when they can

'Teen Age Makeup Needn't Be Problem

Simple good grooming technique should be as natural and matter-of-fact for a girl of 12 as for her mother, says Alicia Hart. A youngster who has been guided properly does not have to be reminded to wash her hands before coming to the table or to scrub her neck and elbows before going to bed.

A wise mother will handle the question of teen-age makeup smoothly enough to prevent its becoming an issue. In the first place, if your daughter's classmates use lipstick that's a pretty real reason for her following suit—unless she is the very rare youngster who wants to be "different." Most normal youngsters want, decidedly, not to stand out from the crowd.

Have Beauty Standards
However, it might be well to keep her informed of countrywide standards for girls of her age—to keep her informed, for instance, that the very young girl in most towns wears lipstick lightly, wears eye makeup never, but does brush her brows and lashes regularly and brushes them with cream or oil for a party.

She uses face powder designed especially for her young skin, and a mild cream or powder deodorant after her bath. She creams lips, hands and wrists frequently—and of course brushes her hair thoroughly three or four times a week. Chronic skin blemishes should receive attention—expert attention if possible. Regardless of age, or sex either that matter, modern parents don't shrug off complexion worries with "she (or he) will outgrow them." Take the girl—or boy—to the family physician for treatment. Very often a shift away from sweets, fats or other rich foods is indicated.

return, but—keep in mind, too, that for many of them there is the adventure of making new friends, seeing new places. Let that knowledge make the absence a bit easier for the women to bear.

Sometime there should be a special badge to designate the courage of the thousands of loving women who, despite loneliness and unspoken fear, continue to care for the family, go to church, do their shopping, attend to themselves in community affairs.

War does not show up some women in a pretty light, but in most instances the women measure up marvelously. They deserve a citation for gallantry.

Dr. Luther West Accents Faith Of Men At Front

Dr. Luther S. West, of the Northern Michigan College of Education faculty, in his talk on "Christian Democracy in War Time," which he gave at the meeting of the Marquette Woman's club Wednesday afternoon, traced the development of religion and government.

In a comprehensive discussion, stressing the correlation of government and the social order, he noted that extreme individualism was unmindful of social responsibility and there resulted anarchy; that where the ideal of social responsibility overrides all other rights, we have collectivism or communism, and that in Fascism and nationalism, the individual is lost in the crowd.

Democracy Is Not a Plan
Pointing out that orderly individualism is the ideal, the speaker reminded that Theodore Parker says: "Democracy is direct self government over all the people, for all the people, by all the people," and reminded that democracy is a principle, rather than a plan; and that it may proceed under a republic, constitutional monarchy or other structure, where "control is only by persuasion, persuasion only by reason and justice."

Dr. West noted a corresponding evolution and development in religions with varying viewpoints as to God's qualities, but stressed that a serviceable philosophy of religion must do justice to the individual and society.

"Jesus made it so," the speaker emphasized, reminding that Jesus was an individualist since he did not feel it necessary to adhere to orthodox methods in his own work, and teaching, and that he dealt with persons one by one, wherever possible, and held personal conduct to be of the greatest importance.

Live at the Highest Level
Said the speaker: "Jesus lived at his own highest level. God and man can meet when man does this. When we cultivate the good that is in ourselves, God's power flows into us. The rise of society to higher levels depends and is contingent upon cooperation with the senior partner."

Noting that, apart from the family, the church is the oldest of social agencies, Dr. West recalled to his hearers that the church has mothered the schools of Europe and America, the modern theater, the hospitals, social services, and has the duty of mothering "democracy" which, "between the extremes of anarchy and autocracy, presupposes the dignity of every individual, as Christianity presupposes the dignity of the individual soul. Collectivism, by necessity, permits the dignity of but one or at most a very few. Even the insane, the incompetent, may contribute to the building of society by eliciting, because of their need, desirable traits in others."

"Let religion and government join hands in preserving man's freedom of choice. * * * Great advances in science, education have never come by reform of a faltering generation, but rather by imaginative idealism of maturing youth and great achievements in religion are much the same."

The speaker urged that those left of the home front strive to achieve and maintain a faith as pure and strong as that which actuated the fighting men on Bataan. Following the program tea was served at a table covered with a picturesque grouping—a mirror flanked by two chairs, a table with Christmas candles in many colors, forming the lighting for the chair in which was seated the lovely French doll which came from Nice, France, and is the property of Mrs. Jack Messenger. Mrs. E. J. LeVeque and Mrs. A. Sverson presided at the table.

Home From Casablanca
ESCANABA, Dec. 3—Still suffering slightly from shock as a result of harrowing experiences in the American invasion of Casablanca, Foy Arbour, 20, member of an anti-aircraft gun crew aboard a U. S. Navy transport, arrived Tuesday night on a 30-day "survivor's leave" to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Arbour, 321 Ludington street. "I cannot tell you the whole story until the Navy releases the information, but I can say that we saw plenty of action," Arbour said. The Escanaba seaman described the surprise invasion of North Africa as "beautifully executed." "They had a hunch we were coming, for they had just

NON-PRIORITY PLAYTHINGS—This young miss casts a critical eye upon the Christmas 1942 version of "rag doll" that has replaced last year's rubber toys. The dolls, attired in Army and Navy uniforms, may not be of the pretty-pretty type—but their faces certainly have "character." (From Marshall Field, Chicago)

Party Held For The Arthur Pelto

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pelto, 510 Norwood street, were guests of honor at a surprise party held in the social rooms in St. Mark's Lutheran church in observance of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

Preceding the reception a program was held in the church. Miss Martha Siskinen played the traditional wedding music as the couple with their attendants, Mrs. Selma Wiljanen, of Neagunee, and Charles Koski, marched up the aisle. The altar was trimmed with yellow and white chrysanthemums and lighted candles in silver holders.

Following congregational singing, a poem was read by Mrs. Chester Kiltinen and Mrs. Filis Lammil sang a solo. The Rev. Arnold Stadius, the pastor, gave a short address and presented the anniversary gifts to the couple. The ceremonial ended with congregational singing.

Hostesses at the reception were Mrs. J. Pinola, Mrs. Henry Ahopelto, Mrs. E. Hill, Mrs. Swante Maki, Mrs. Emil Johnson, Mrs. Eino Helberg and Mrs. Anna Lake. The table was decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums and candles, and a large three-tiered wedding cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Pelto were married in Marquette November 23, 1917, the Rev. J. H. Heimonen officiating. The couple has three sons, Eino serving in the United States Army; Onni, in Detroit, and Wesley, of this city.

started to put up barbed wire entanglements along the beach," Arbour related to a reporter. "But they did not know when and where we would attack, and our troops quickly disposed of all resistance."

Serving in North Africa

KENTON, Dec. 3—Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gorske have received an interesting letter from their son, Joseph, who is in North Africa. He states that a parade on Fifth avenue in New York was nothing in comparison to the taking over of an unidentified town in North Africa. When the men entered the town, he writes, the natives cheered and greeted them in a gawk that candy, fruit and other things. The service man is in a tank division. He said that the officers were well deserving of the high honor which was bestowed on them for their gallantry.

"We hope," said Quaal, "to have everything in readiness for December 16, when the Christmas season officially opens in Ishpeming. There is a possibility that stringers will be placed across the city square, but that is not definite. It would have been impossible, regardless of WPB regulations against street illumination, to have as extensive a lighting program as

Quaal Books Male Quartet For April 5

ISHPEMING, Dec. 3—The Southwestern, one of the best male quartets on the concert platform today, will be one of the attractions in the winter concert series in Ishpe- ming. It will be heard in matinee and evening performances Monday, April 5.

When George Quaal, sponsoring the series, made his first announcement, the last two numbers were not definitely booked. It was possible this morning to place the quartet on the schedule and Quaal is certain that the other attraction, which will be announced soon, will be one of the most colorful of the series.

The series opens January 12 with Stephan Hero, violinist. Four of the five contracts call for matinee and evening concerts.

No Agreement Reached In Shipyard Walkout

SOUTH PORTLAND, Maine, Dec. 3—P—Production at the South Portland Shipbuilding Corp. yard remained virtually at a standstill today as management and union representatives continued discussions of wage classifications and the latter endeavored to persuade employees who walked out earlier in the week to return to their jobs.

The yard is engaged in building Liberty ships for the U. S. Maritime Commission. Union leaders indicated they were trying to get the workers back in force for the day shift tomorrow. The walkout was without union sanction.

Cause of the walkout was the alleged failure of employees to receive wages on new scale rates authorized by the War Labor Board.

Are You Tall? Apply For Extra Gas Rations

DETROIT, Dec. 3—P—Six-foot-six-inch Harry H. Cooke got a supplemental gas ration book today just because he's tall.

Cooke said in his application for additional gasoline: "Because of my height, I have to stoop when I ride standing up in a bus or street car. Consequently, when I arrive at work I have a stiff neck and cannot perform my duties satisfactorily."

That sounded like nonsense to his board members, so they investigated. They found it was true, found that Cooke is a tool grinder and granted him a "B" book.

NORTON AT CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—(AP)—Editors from 25 states today met with N. R. Howard, assistant director of censorship in charge of the press division, to discuss voluntary censorship problems. Among the editors, who will keep newspapers in their home states posted, are Floyd Miller, Daily Tribune, Royal Oak, Mich., and John P. Norton, the Morning Press, Escanaba, Mich.

LEGAL TO SKIP SCHOOL

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Dec. 3—P—The war is not without its compensations for Ann Arbor high school seniors. It has made it legal to skip school. Their board of education has decreed that they may cut classes each afternoon from now until Christmas to work in Ann Arbor's labor-scarce stores.

Battle Tools Leave Plants In Rising Tide

(EDITOR'S NOTE: David J. Wilkie has spent most of the past year inside the one-time automobile plants, in intimate contact with their contribution to the war. Here is his view of what has been and is being done, one year after Pearl Harbor.)

By David J. Wilkie
DETROIT, Dec. 3—P—Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini couldn't possibly have visualized what they were bringing down upon themselves when they forced the United States into this war. . . .

That was an inescapable conclusion 12 months after Pearl Harbor as I view the nation's great one-time automobile industry in full war dress, pouring out the implements of mechanized warfare in almost unbelievable volume.

Magic has been wrought on the industry's production lines. Army tanks, aircraft engines requiring the precision of watch-making, pursuit airplanes and bombers, sub-assemblies for both, cannon, shells, and scores of other battle tools were only blueprints to the automobile manufacturers a short time ago; today they roll out of the factories in an enormous, swelling stream.

And behind that which can be written about and described is still another effort—the production of weapons the Axis dictators won't know about until they strike. A year ago when the size of the task that was to fall upon the motor car makers became apparent, it was said conversion to all-out war effort would require many months; it might be the end of 1942 before it could be achieved.

Months Ahead Of Schedule
The change-over was completed months ahead of schedule; there was relatively little unemployment during the transition; today the industry is roaring rapidly toward peak capacity, a capacity that will be determined solely by the availability of raw materials.

Charles E. Wilson, president of General Motors corporation, expressed the industry's own appraisal from Britain's Winston Churchill: "We are at the end of the beginning."

And: "We are past the conversion stage; we have proved we could do these things. We are now entering the phase of improving the quality and effectiveness of our product."

I have been privileged to see a large part of the industry's productive effort in operation. . . . Pratt & Whitney, Rolls-Royce and Allison aircraft engines coming off assembly lines by the hundreds every day; dozens of production lines, some a half mile in length, jammed with the latest types of Army tanks; pursuit and bomber plane sub-assemblies and completed units; anti-aircraft cannon being produced and shipped by the thousands; gun mounts, shells and such things.

Achieve Mass Production
The sight is more than impressive; as indicative of what lies ahead for Hitler, Hirohito and Mussolini it is fearsome.

One fact stands out as the erstwhile motor car industry comes to the first anniversary of Pearl Harbor: Mass production of almost everything mechanical the United Nations forces need for the war of horsepower has been achieved.

"From here on," as one industry leader expressed it, the problem will be one of balancing output. That, he added, means making sure that material is not consumed for items that will have to wait a long time for companion units, whether these be airplanes and their engines, tanks and their guns, ammunition and the weapons to hurl it at the enemy.

That's what the industry hopes for from the new materials control program.

How much has the industry produced in war materiel since last December? Specific figures cannot be given, but dollar volume deliveries to date have been in excess of $4,000,000,000 and production currently is at the rate of about $7,000,000,000 a year. That's approximately double the normal annual peacetime rate of output.

But dollar volume rapidly is losing its significance as an indication of production totals; certainly it gives no information to the enemy because industry has stepped up output and lowered unit costs in the process as its leaders said it would when they started the job. More is being made with less.

Items that once required days to machine and assemble now are being turned out in hours; operations that formerly required hours are done in minutes.

Production Costs Reduced
Production costs have been reduced all down the line from bomber planes to shell clips. It is not uncommon to find three and four units being turned out now for the cost of one and two a year ago. This has been done despite numerous design changes on weapons in production. Many of these changes have been suggested by the industry engineers themselves. Not only have these changes saved hours and days in production processes, but they have contributed materially to a wider spreading out of critical materials.

In the car industry they call it telescoping time with straight line production.

No one company can be singled out as leading the motor car industry's war production task for every unit of the industry from the small parts manufacturer to the largest of the former passenger car and truck producers has laid aside competition until the war is won.

America's industrial might is on the march, the industry's leaders assert, and the tempo will be quickened by at least another 50 per cent, before the peak is reached.

BALL WAR CASUALTY
HILLSDALE, Mich., Dec. 3—P—The annual firemen's ball, which has held a place on Hillside's social calendar yearly since 1850, fell victim today to the exigencies of war. Fire Chief Guy Mitchell said that, because of wartime conditions and gasoline rationing, the ball would not be held this year.

Wage Dispute Causes Five-Hour Walkout

DETROIT, Dec. 3—P—A five-hour walkout by approximately 6,000 employees of the Budd Manufacturing company here ended this afternoon, after arrangements were made for negotiations on a dispute over wages paid to newly-employed women workers.

Robert E. Lomasney, conciliator for the state labor mediation board, said members of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) local 306 claimed the company was paying about 400 new women employees 97 cents an hour for the same work being done by women already employed at 88 cents an hour.

Company officials could not be reached for comment. Lomasney and Richard Harris, conciliator of the department of labor, participated in the conference which ended the walkout, described by union leaders as unauthorized.

MAY RIDE CIRCUIT AGAIN
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 3—(AP)—Probate Judge Clark E. Higbee advances a suggestion to meet the complaint of witnesses that they do not have sufficient gasoline to travel for a court appearance. "Maybe," he said, "judges will have to ride their 'circuits' again, as in olden days, unless some provision is made to get witnesses into court. Perhaps the state legislature will do something about it."

Gas Ration Board Nears End of Work

NEGAUNEE, Dec. 3—Negaunee's gasoline rationing board today disposed of the last of the rationing applications it received, but will sit as a panel Friday to check its work. No clerical help will be needed.

The board has not been able, because of the pressure of its work, to give figures, but to observers it appeared that three of four applications for Class B rations were

GAS BOOKS READY, BUT—

NEGAUNEE, Dec. 3—The Negaunee gasoline rationing board has approved petitions for supplemental allowances and ration books have been issued for 75 applicants who have not presented their certificates of registration. The books are in the hands of the office and will be given to the applicants Friday if the certificates are brought in.

being granted. Many applicants for Class C books were given B allowances, however.

H. S. Doolittle, clerk for the board, this afternoon said: "This whole matter of registration and rationing has been a gratifying experience, because it was impressive to see the way in which volunteer workers have done their work, sincerely trying to be fair to all, especially staying late hours to complete the task."

"Negaunee can well be proud of the panel selected for rationing and of the workers who assisted in various capacities during this rush period."

Germans Fail To Take Vital Tunisian Area

trying to ferry supplies and probably troop reinforcements to Tunisia. Big British naval guns sank or left on fire four merchant ships and three Italian destroyers in this first surface blow at Axis sea communications.

Two of the Axis merchant ships were believed to be troopships. The Allied communiqué said that "much damage has been done" to Axis airdromes, especially at Tunis, and a spokesman here filled in the details.

Flying Fortresses with a P-38 fighter escort bombed the hangars at Sidi Ahmed airfield near Bizerte and also the docks and naval port, scoring hits on ships and installations.

American medium bombers attacked anti-aircraft concentrations at Gabes, on the southeastern Tunisian coast, while the RAF used its light and medium bombers to blast Tunis and Bizerte in both a day and night offensive.

The communiqué said six Axis planes were destroyed yesterday, but a spokesman of the 12th air forces said a recapitulation of U. S. airmen's activities showed that eight Axis planes were destroyed, five in combat and three on the ground.

Twenty-one more planes were damaged, he said, six in combat and 15 on the ground, in the stubborn fight for aerial supremacy so vital to the success of the campaign.

Furious Two-Day Affair
The Allied spokesman said the ground battle was a furious two-day affair, but now both sides were regrouping the forces and seeking to recover wrecked tanks.

"The edge will go to the one who regains his strength more quickly," he said.

He estimated that the Germans have 14,000 combat troops available for battle.

"The enemy is trying desperately to regain the vital Mateur-Djedida-Tebourba triangle and it is evident he plans to stay in Tunisia until the last possible moment."

"The Germans always have derided the British for Dunkerque; and maybe they are out to prove they are ready to die for the Fuehrer."

It is now estimated that swans live only about 25 years, not 100 years as formerly thought.

16 Ships Lost In African Occupation

All had been converted to naval use since the war began, the first three having been commissioned as transports in September.

The British aircraft carrier Avengeur lost in the vast operation was the former American cargo-passenger liner Rio Hudson of 17,500 tons, launched two years ago at Chester, Pa.

The three destroyers listed by A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, as sunk were the Broke and the Martin, both British, and the Isaac Sweers, a Netherlands ship.

Struck by a torpedo off Algiers, the Sweers went down swiftly, but 138 of the Dutch crew of 220 were believed to have survived. The Sweers previously had taken a gallant part in a naval action in the Mediterranean in which two Italian cruisers were destroyed and a torpedo boat was crippled.

British subs sank 10 ships. The cutters Walney and Hartland, two former U. S. Coast Guard vessels transferred to the royal navy in 1941, were sunk in what Alexander said was a gallant attempt to prevent the scuttling of blockships in Oran harbor. Although burning, the cutters smashed through the harbor boom and penetrated to the inner harbor to land troops before they went down, he said.

Alexander told commons that, as against these losses inflicted on the great Allied seaborne expedition, seven Axis supply ships, three tankers and two destroyers had been sunk in the Mediterranean by British submarines since the Allied landing of November 8. In addition, an Axis cruiser, two destroyers and four supply ships had been damaged, he said, while anti-aircraft fire from naval ships had destroyed 25 enemy planes at latest count.

Five Persons Die In Canadian Bomber Crash
HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 3—P—Two girl war plant workers taking an airplane flight as a reward for victory bond sales were among five persons killed today when a Canadian bomber crashed in wooded Point Pleasant park here.

One was Miss Jean Curran, Dartmouth. The other's name was withheld temporarily pending notification of her relatives. The girls were employees of Clark Ruse Aircraft, Ltd., owner of the bomber, which had undergone tests and was to have been turned over shortly to the Canadian air force.

Cause of the accident, in which all aboard were killed, was not determined.

Comforts necessary for the fitness of crews on military aircraft include air supply, heating, seating, soundproofing, lighting, food, lavatory facilities.

100 Hospital Employees Made Ill by Food

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Dec. 3—P—University hospital was short-staffed today when 100 employees, stricken yesterday with a gastrointestinal ailment, failed to report for work.

Dr. A. C. Kerlikowski, hospital spokesman, said a diagnosis had not been completed, but it was "assumed" the employees' illness was caused by something they ate.

He added most of the workers were expected to report for duty tomorrow.

About 70 per cent of the absentees were student nurses, with the remainder graduate nurses and internes.

Other 21 destroyed or damaged as a result of the blow at Koepang on the southwestern tip of Timor.

This raid, which caught the Japs so completely by surprise that their ground planes were devastated by the cannon and machine gun fire of the low-flying Allies, overshadowed the news from New Guinea where split groups of enemy defenders are entrapped at Gona and Buna.

The noon communiqué reported only intermittent ground fighting in those areas in which the Japs, cleverly dug in, were "resisting stubbornly."

18 Jap Bombers Hit
The Koepang raiders damaged or destroyed 18 Jap bombers and three fighters, leaving fires among the aircraft and fuel dumps which were visible for 50 miles away.

Much bombing attention has been directed by General MacArthur at Portuguese Timor, northwest of Australia, since receipt of reports that the Japs, faced with possible loss of New Guinea, were moving in troops and equipment. Many of these plane raids have been occupied with the strafing of troops in Timor towns.

Heat therapy has moved out of the hospitals and into the aircraft industry. It is used to smooth wrinkles in the aluminum skins of the wings.

FINLAND GOT INDEPENDENCE 25 YEARS AGO
NEGAUNEE, Dec. 3—Sunday evening, in the Finnish Evangelical Lutheran church, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the independence of Finland will be observed.

The Rev. John E. Hattula, pastor of the congregation, has chosen "God Builds a Nation" as the theme for his Sunday night sermon commemorating the independence anniversary.

The service will start at 7:30. In discussing the program this afternoon, the Rev. Hattula said: "December 6, 1917, 25 years will have passed since Finland got its independence. The United States acknowledged this in May, 1919. It is significant this democracy in the north has again decided to pay $168,500 of its debt to the United States. Finns in the United States, although loyal to this country, cannot forget that momentous day 25 years ago when Finnish independence was achieved."

ATLANTIC CHARTER NOT BINDING, SENATORS SAY
WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—P—A proposed agreement with Panama which President Roosevelt submitted to Congress as a resolution instead of a treaty touched off debate today in which critical Senators contended that the Atlantic Charter and the United Nations' agreement were not binding on the United States.

The officers said they had been unable to ascertain Hickman's reason for going to Chicago without notifying his hunting companion or his wife.

The Ninth U. S. Air Force in Libya sent its bombers 400 miles over the desert to Tripoli in three attacks which damaged that port so severely that "considerable repair work" will be necessary before it can be used at full capacity, an American communiqué at Cairo said. Six merchant ships were sunk or damaged at Tripoli, a large warehouse on the Spanish mole was demolished and a great hole was knocked in the Karsmanli mole. British Liberators continued the attacks on Tripoli Tuesday night.

Planes Destroy Axis Tanks
Other bombers attacked the British eighth army in Libya, drawn up before the strong Axis defense position at El Agheila, attacked Bizerte and Gabes in Tunisia, shot up a train and torpedoed a tanker southbound from Sicily. No Eighth army plane was lost although air activity increased over El Agheila, a Cairo communiqué said. Ground forces continued patrol operations.

Other Allied planes attached to the British first army and its American and French supporting columns ranged widely over Tunisia, shooting up enemy airfields at Tunis and Bizerte and attacking ground positions. Swift P-38's were credited with knocking out several enemy tanks.

Home Nursing Units Formed By Red Cross

MUNISING, Dec. 3—The Alger county Red Cross is sponsoring classes in home nursing and one group will complete the course next week under the leadership of Miss June Gordon, R. N.

Miss Doris Mae Waring, chairman of the project, announces that new classes will be formed after January 1, and urges all who can do so to enroll. Enrollments will be taken by Mrs. W. J. Bauman, phone 38-W, and Mrs. George Kemp, phone 79.

"Safeguarding health is one of the major problems of wartime," Miss Waring said in pointing out that home nursing groups are being organized throughout the country. With the calling of doctors and nurses into military service the responsibility for maintaining health at home must fall on individuals, she said, and the home nursing corps is being set up to meet that job.

Son of Alger Couple Lost In Solomons

MUNISING, Dec. 3—Charles N. Stickeny, boatswain's mate, first class, U. S. Coast Guard, is "missing in action," his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Newell J. Stickeny, have been informed by the Navy department.

Although the Navy did not disclose where the action took place, it is presumed to be in the Solomon island area. No particulars of the action were disclosed.

Stickeny's wife and two children live in Newberry. His parents reside at San Point, and his father is a member of the Munising Coast Guard station.

Charles Stickeny, a member of the Coast Guard for 10 years and a former member of the Grand Marais station, recently was the subject of a news story concerning an incident which took place between American and Japanese forces in the Solomons during the American invasion of Guadalcanal.

The story concerned a small fleet of motorboats which made a dash from Guadalcanal island to Tulagi island under heavy fire and outboarded a Japanese submarine. The underdog team tried to cut off the U. S. forces, but fire from American shore batteries finally forced the sub to change its course and allowed the Yanks to reach shore safely.

Ahoy! You Landlubbers!

Try this Typical

Sailors' Dessert

Nothing appeals to keen appetites more than rich plum duff. Flavorful and fruity. Not wasteful of sugar, it's a practical wartime dish! Prunes and Vitamin-and-Mineral Enriched Flour make it very nutritious... Every sack of Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Enriched Flour contains added amounts of two important "B" vitamins and iron. That means it's better for you. Yet there's been no change in its baking qualities, color or taste.

They're Pigs in Blankets!

Easy and quick to make. They make a hit for a "hurry-up" supper or lunch.

All you need is:

2 cups sifted GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Flour... 1 tsp. Salt... 3 tsp. Baking Powder... 4 tsp. Shortening... 3/4 to 1 cup Milk... 8 Little Sausages or Wieners (cooked)

SIFT the flour, salt and baking powder together. Cut in the shortening with a pastry blender (or 2 knives) until finely blended. Then stir in just enough milk to make a soft dough.

Roll out 1/4 inch thick on a lightly floured cloth-covered board, and cut in oblong pieces to make the "blankets" for the sausages. Place a cooked sausage or wiener in the center of each piece and roll dough around it, letting the sausage show at each end; then press edges to seal firmly. Now place on lightly greased baking sheet.

Bake 15 minutes in a hot oven (450°). Makes servings. Delicious when served hot with a Cream Sauce.

Perfect results guaranteed only with Gold Medal "Kitchen-tested" Enriched Flour

LIGHT PLUM DUFF... TRY IT!

SPECIAL NOTE: To improvise a steamer, arrange a rack 2 inches above the bottom of a covered roaster.

For molds: use one 7" tube-center mold (1 qt. size), coffee cans or (to mold in individual servings) jelly glasses. Fill molds 1/2 to 3/4 full. Then cover with waxed paper, and place molds in steamer over water that's already boiling. The steam must surround the mold. Cover steamer tightly. Don't lift lid during steaming, so be sure lower kettle has enough water to last through steaming time.

Use at least 2 1/2 cups water in cooking prunes, so you'll have 2 cups of juice left for the sauce.

2 cups sifted GOLD MEDAL "Kitchen-tested" Enriched Flour... 4 tsp. Baking Powder... 1/2 tsp. Salt... 2 tsp. Sugar... 2 tsp. Shortening... 1 cup Milk... 2 cups cooked Prunes (drained, pitted).

SIFT the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar together. Then cut in the shortening with a pastry blender or two knives until finely blended. Add milk and mix to make a soft dough.

Arrange 4 large cooked, pitted prunes (spread open) at equal distances apart on the bottom of a greased pudding mold, and cover with a thin layer of dough (dropping it lightly from a spoon)... then with a layer of prunes (opened)... being sure that the prunes come out to the edge of the mold. Repeat this procedure, with alternate layers of dough and prunes, till all are used. Finish with a thin layer of dough on top.

HOT PRUNE SAUCE

3 tsp. Cornstarch... 3/4 cup Sugar... 2 cups cold Prune Juice (in which prunes were cooked)... 2 tsp. Lemon Juice or mild Vinagar... 1 tsp. Butter... 1/2 tsp. Nutmeg

MIX cornstarch and sugar with the cold prune juice and lemon juice (or vinagar). Cook over a low heat until thick—stirring frequently to keep from lumping. Remove from heat and blend in the butter and nutmeg.
