Mrs. Trudeau Demands Damages for Fersonal Injuries.

ASKS FOR FIVE THOUSAND.

Woman Who Fell on a Defective Sidewalk Last May, Fracturing Her Shoulder, Asks Pay From City Council.

At the meeting of the common council, Tuesday night, a communication from Mrs. Felicite Trudeau was read, announcing that on the 26th day of May last she received a fall on a defective sidewalk on South Elmore street that dislocated and fractured her right shoulder and otherwise bruised and injured her so that she has suffered great pain and is permanently disabled.

The communication further stated that unless the city made a satisfactory offer of settlement with her, for damages, she would file suit for $5,000 for her injuries. The sidewalk in question is described as one leading to the south gate to lot 13 of block 38, at St. Anne's school.

Mrs. Trudeau has engaged George Gallup as her attorney and through him has given the council to understand that unless a satisfactory settlement is made without delay, her threatened suit will be filed. The communication before the council was referred to the sidewalk com feelingly. He said that he could investigation of the claim and report at the next regular meeting.

This promised damage suit against the city is nothing more than what has been anticipated for many prove a constant menace to life and limb and while some very commendable improvement in their condition has been unade this year there is still room for much more work of the same character.

Shown favors at Ishpeming.

"Rev. J. M. Langan, who yesterday severed his connection with St. John's parish, was given several surprises during the week," says the Ishpeming correspondent in Monday's Marquette Mining Journal. In every instance the surprise was accompanied by liberal cash donations. Four societies remembered the popular priest. These were the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hiberniaus: the Ladies' Court of Foresters; the Young Ladies' sodality and the Catholic Athletic club. The men of the parish also came forward with a liberal purse, the total amounting to a large number of visitors to the city camping facilities are unsurpassed. several hundred dollars. Meet at Crystal Falls This Week Was Largely Attended and a Pleasing Success. New Officers are Chosen.

In all probability the tournament of the Upper Peninsula Firemen's association for 1903 will be held in Escanaba. Chief James C. Tolan and Adam Henry of this city attended the tournament at Crystal Falls this week and it was hoped that they might persuade the association to select this city for its tournament in 1902, but Negaunee had a prior claim and was given the honor by a unanimous vote. The Escanaba delegates foresaw what was coming and put in an urgent bid for the meet of two years hence.

Of Chief Tolan's efforts the Marquette Mining Journal says: "Chief Tolan, of the Escanaba department, will be hot after the tournament in 1903. He has made application for membership for his department and it is likely the Sandy City men will be enrolled. Escanaba has a paid department, though, if admitted, an amateur team will be organized. Mr. Tolan says a visit of the upper peninsula firemen to Escanaba will surely be the means of bringing in a number of departments in that vicinity, including Gladstone, Rapid River and Manistique."

The tournament at Crystal Falls

ensuing year were as follows: President-Caspar Brand, Houghton; First Vice-president, Fred Keppler, Lake Linden; Second Vicepresident, Harry Barr, Ironwood; Secretary, Thomas Flyn, Negaunee; Treasurer, P. J. Mullally, Marquette.

Negaunee already has $3,000 pledged for the tournament of next year and it has been decided that one of the special features of the program there will be a practical test of fire fighting to be participated in by the various visiting departments.

BOERS AND BLACK MEN.

The Boers are reported to be killing all negroes in the British service whom they catch, whether armed or unarmod. At this a great deal of indignation is expressed in Great Britain and in the army bulletins. Lord Kitchener refers to the killing as "cold blooded murder," and the London correspondents reports that the "atrocities" have caused a feeling of horror all through the country. It is also announced by Mr. Chamberlain that the British authorities will regard such killing as murder, and will put to death all men guilty of it-when they are captured: Beyond doubt it does seem atrocious, to an Englishman or an American, to butcher in cold blood an unarmed non combatant or a prisoner of war. And yet we can understand how the Boers regard it as perfectly correct, and look with amused surprise and contempt upon our squeamishness in the matter.

The ordinances of the church such as baptism and marriage, were strictly denied to negroes. And it was officially declared that the "murdering" of a negro-as we should call it-was not an atrocious or a disgraceful crime, but at worst nothing more than a minor misdemeanor. Evidently, then, from the Boer point of view this general slaughter of negroes is nothing blameworthy. It is at par with, let us say, the killing of cattle to deprive an enemy 'of food. And the "feeling of horror." which is aroused by it is, or should be, directed not solely at the act itself, but at the antecedent system of which it is only the legitimate and natural product. It is not merely against General Kritzinger and his men that indignation is aroused, but against the system of civil and religious polity which has inspired them to their present deeds. At the same time we must have regard ofor the British point of view as well, and realize that in hanging all Boers found guilty of murdering negroes the British will not be indulging in wanton savagery, but will be living up to the traditions of their race and fulfilling the precepts of their systems of civil and religious polity, which have taught them to look upon a black man's life as being as sacred as a white man's. To the Boer, killing negroes is no murder. To the Briton it is murder. And each will act to his own point of view. # GROWTH OF OCEAN TRAVEL.

Large Increase in the Number of American Passengers on the Trans-Atlantic Lines.

The marked increase in the volume of ocean steamship travel of late years has occasioned extended comment among agents of trans-Atlantic lines. It is said that many Americans make six or more trips a year to the other side, where formerly they did not cross at all. Englishmen and Germans who are engaged in the manufacturing trades, industrials and even food raising, visit this side much oftener now. Quite a few come to look around with an idea of ascertaining how Americans have made such gigantic commercial strides in such a short time, but the great majority, realizing the necessity for adopting American methods where practicable, come here to purchase machinery and the like without which it would be impossible for them to copy Yankee thrift and industry, says the Chicago Chronicle.

Not nearly so common on the ocean ships as he was five or ten years ago is the English ranchman bound for the far west. He is now in the mining or engineering business in Mexico and Central America, although there are still many Britons engaged in the cattle raising business out west and throughout Canada. Some of the older vessels of our line shipped a large number of the mules and horses that were sent to South Africa from New Orleans for English army service. It was surprising to discover what a big percentage of these animals came from the ranches of Englishmen who had settled in the north and west.

Yet another reason for the increase in the number of travelurs across the ocean is the renewal of the good feeling between the two continents, particularly between England and the United States. There was a time, not long since, when neither cared to buy from the other. England was then in a superior position commercially and industrially and Americans were not making locomotives, steel rails, cars, heavy machinery or other expensive creations for the export trade. Since we began to send whole railroad trains to not only England, France and Germany, but to Australia, Russia, China, Japan and the East Indies, our drummers, merchants, engineers and artisans have broken through the foreign rush line like a champion football eleven and a display of their wares and samples in every cubby hole of the globe has caused buyers, to come in person to look us over more fully.

Where ships in the past were satis-

IN the days when every hero was a prince and every heroine a princess, long before authors had used up all the pretty make-believe subjects and had been obliged to turn to and hunt amongst the ugly everyday facts of life for material to write stories about, there lived a princess who was so lovely that when men first saw her they used to rub their eyes and pinch themselves to make sure that they were awake, and that she really was a live princess and not a part of a dream.

But the princess was as real as she was beautiful. In fact, the only difference between her and the other people you meet in the streets was that the gods had been kinder to her than to most foiks.

At her birth she had been given many gifts. The sun had kissed her checks, and this had come as such a surprise that the two little blushes that had been born there had never quite died away; the night shades, which were just hurrying off, left behind them two trailing shadows in her gentle eyes; the sun, too, had shed some of his gold amongst her curly locks; and nature hung a charm about her so that she had a way of winding herself around people's hearts, getting more and more tightly fixed every hour, until she nestled in some warm corner and got all and more than her share of love.

It was the same wherever she went. Everyone loved her, first for her beauty and afterwards for herself. Old men and women, young men and maidens, kings and courtiers alike, made her queen of their hearts. But in spite of all this love and admiration, the poor, pretty princess was not happy. For amongst other gifts the gods had given her a golden heart. Now, a heart of gold sounds a very nice possession. People envied her, and used to tell their children stories about the beautiful princess with a heart of gold. But the princess herself found it anything but comfortable, and sometimes very heavy. The fault was that it was too fine a possession for everyday use. It was not soft and yielding like ordinary hearts on which it is easy to make impressions, and so it came to pass that, while everybody loved her, the poor princess could not love anyone. By this I mean anyone in particular, which, after all, is the only but all the time she ached to be able "Sometimes it is, sometimes it is not," said the woman. "You pay your money, but you can't take your choice. You must risk so much." "Thank you," she said, "for your advice; but I don't think I care to take your tonic. I don't want to smirch my white wings just as soon as I have discovered that I have got them."

"Perhaps you are right," said the woman, laconically. Then she added, passionately: "Oh, I wish I had been as strong as you are! Mine are full of black quills; not really black, you know, but smirched and smearedtheir freshness gone. The world would rub up against them, and I had a silly idea that men liked piebald effects. Now I know that this is a mistake."

"Never mind, you have had the luxury of love and suffering," said the princess. "I know neither."

So, although the princess did not take the advice, the two parted friends. "You will let me know when you find yourself in the last department on the left," the woman cried after her as she want away.

"Yes," said the princess, "I willif I ever arrive there."

So the princess returned to the palace really no wiser toan she had left it. All the comfort she had found was that when the little gold heart hung more heavily than usual she used to wrap her white wings closer around her and tell herself that there was not one single smirched feather in either of them.

Suitors still came and wooed her

BURIED TREASURE FOUND.

Negro Finds Hatful of Gold-Coins Near Spot Made Famous by Poe.

Poe's famous story of buried treasures-""De Gold Bug"-whose scenes were -located on an island off the Carolina coast, has a realization in actual life in that same region, reports the Philadelphia Press, Recently, near Burlington, N. C., a negro found a hat full of gold double eagles buried under a live oak tree.

He was a very ignorant fellow, and did not know the value of them unth some negroes had taken some from him. The coin which he found heart. was worth $1,250. The excitement in that district has become very great, and boys and men are out in of love potions. He said they were the fields with hoes, sticks, shovels dangerous, and, worse than all, un--anything to dig with-trying to find some more of the hidden wealth.

One farmer has had to plant his corn three times in the past week, and is now sitting out in his field on a stump with a shotgun in his lap to keep off intruders.

There is great curiosity to know where this money came from, and the date of the coin. It is now found that the gold is all dated 1857. Just before Sherman's famous march to the sea the Bank of Newburn hid $55,000 in gold and $700 in jewelry in a vault near Burlington. Sherman's army camped near this spot, and some of the men, hearing that money had been buried, looked for some signs of it.

They found the earth disturbed and pitched a tent over the place where the treasure had been deposited, and got it all. It is now thought that the soldiers in turn buried it, as small amounts are being found in and about the place where the $1,250 was found. They evidently intended to return later and get it after the war;

"It is no good being so silly," she said at last to herself. "If you go on crying you will only make your eyes red and yourself ugly, and then where will you be? Worse off than before! for folks will leave off loving you, and you will then have nothing left."

So, being a very practical princess, she set to work to dry her eyes, and, having powdered her nose, she sent for the court physician, of whom she demanded a love potion which would cure her complaint and melt her

Rumors are current that the reason why the departure from London for Germany of King Edward and other royal mourners had been delayed was that the German police authorities had received information of a plot which the anarchists had intended to put into execution at Friedrichshof. It is certainly somewhat significant that even now the exact hour of the king's departure has not been made known. However, it is known that preparations for his departure are complete. Accompanied by Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria, he will leave London Friday evening and reach Cronberg in time to be present at the memorial service, which is to be held there Sunday.

Impressive Services. Cronberg, Aug. 9 .--- The funeral service held at Friedrichshof late Thursday afternoon was simple but highly impressive. It was performed at the request of the late dowager empress by the bishop of Ripon, her own chaplain, assisted by Rev. Thomas Teignmouth Shore, canon of Worcester. The coffin stood in the death chamber, covered with a long black pall and strewn with white roses. At the foot with bowed head and slightly in advance of the other mourners stood Emperor William in the uniform of the Black hussars, the regiment of the late dowager empress. Just behind him were all the other members of the royal family, except Prince Henry of Prussia. The other mourners, who formed two lines in the rear, included Prince and Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, Col. Primelwitz, Crown Prince Frederick William's aid; Count von Seckendorff, who was the secretary of the deceased; the duke of Cambridge, the grand duke of Hesse and a few court officials. The service was conducted entirely without music. It consisted of a portion of the burial service of the Church of England, the ninetieth Psalm, a reading from the First Epistle to the Corinthians and the benediction. The congregation rendered the responses. Immediately after its conclusion Em-

One of the smartest milliners in Paris, she who is celebrated for the building up of hats on the heads of her clients, has ust lance a hat of green straw of tricorne shape, with for sole trimming a couple of saucylooking green parrot's wings.

Other shaped hats of black straw or green straw, or of green black and mixed, are similarly trimmed, and the whole "chic" lies in the fact that there is absolutely no trimming other than the wings. The same house is making hats of soft coarse white straw with embroideries in straw of violets and their leaves in their natural colors.

At the same place I saw a hat that reminded me of nothing so much as an illustration out of Mrs. Beeton's cookery book. It was perfectly round, small, and, save for one of the new "plateau" crowns, periectly flat. It was of green straw, and between the flat crown and the equally flat brim was a very stiff ruche of black velvet ribbon. Around, the edge of the brim on the outside was a single row of cherries with their leaves arranged in the stiff fashion one assoclates with the cherry and candied peel decoration on a jelly or a cream. Cherries, by the way, form at present one of the most fashionable of trimmings. Natural colored, or navy blue or red straws with cherries are

A STARTLING BLACK AND WHITE COMBINATION.

Wide low toques having something of the Amazon idea all in red poppies, and similar ones in cornflowers, are popular, as are also marguerite toques trimmed with bows of black velvet ribbón.

Wings are just beginning to be extensively used by the smartest milliners. A pink toque of soft straw is made very wide and has a couple of wings of the same shade sticking out at, the sides. The turban-shaped toque is still fashionable and is made in some light-colored tulle, covered with real lace, or in straw. ## MINES FAR BENEATH THE OCEAN.

Deep down under the ocean in various parts of Europe, so deep in some cases that the roar of the water above them is not beard, are coal mines in which men spend their lives as unknown to the world as though they did not exist. The most remarkable of these submarine mines is that at Whitehaven, which extends for four miles under the Irish sea. At a depth of 100 fathoms a tunnel has been hewn out and hundreds of little branches cut here and there, and in these pitch-dark galleries hun-dreds of miners work day and night with a world of water above their heads. The cut shows how these mines are planned.

Clever Swindlers Use Original Plates of a Defunct State Bank. Chief Wilkie, of the secret service, has received a number of bank notes printed from the original plates used by the state bank of New Brunswick, N. J., over 50 years ago. will be placed on trial in the Houghton county circuit court. Mr. St. John is at present employed as a clerk at the Fair Savings Bank, and is firmly convinced that he will be acquitted, if, indeed, the case is not thrown out of court when called for trial. It will be remembered that St. John was one of three clerks employ ed by Miller at the time of the fire who were afterwards arrested on the charge of arson and an attempt to blackmail Mr. Miller. Isaac Stephenson Places a Herd on His Farms to Protect Sheep.

Hón. Isaac Stephenson has recently purchased from a dealer in Chicago a flock of 46 beautiful full grown Angora goats, which were taken directly to one of his farms says the Marinette North Star. Experiments have developed a new use for the Angora goat and made that animal almost indispensable to the sheep raising industry. It has been found that by placing several of, the goats with a flock of sheep all danger of trouble with dogs is obviated, as the pugnacious Angora will but an ugly dog off the lot with ease. Western sheep men have adopted the plan extensively, and in districts where dogs frequently harass sheep, the goats are herded together and a sad fate awaits the unlucky canine who gets mixed up with the flock. Whether a wolf could be handled by the goats has not yet been shown, but they are said to be perfectly fearless and fatally quick with their horns. This section is by no means free from the depredations of dogs and instances of the death of sheep are frequently reported.  $\pi$
