Following are a few excerps from a statement made by R. W. Pullman, of regard to the recent forest fires on the Mesaba range:

"I have just returned from the Hibbing and Chisholm district, one of the many sections in Northern Minnesota where forest fires have raged during the whole of September. The flames continue their work, breaking out every little while over the burnt-over areas and starting in new territory wherever a spark falls in the brush. A vast area of the country lies a desolate waste.

"The people in this part of the state say that it is the driest year that they have ever known. The woods and the brush growth on cut-over land are as dry as tinder and fires can be seen in as many as a half dozen places at one time, starting from what no one knows. The natives give various causes of how the flames start, the most popular of which are sparks from engines, hunters and campers, careless brush burning by homesteaders and incendiaries. One man even advanced the theory of spontaneous combustion, and did not seem to like it when I told him that I thought this was hardly the case. In many sections up here the ground is of peat bog formation and a spark may burn for weeks after it finds a lodging before it is fanned into a flame.

France Also for Peace.

The chances of war between Bulgaria and Turkey are being minimized by Great Britain and France, who are working together and who have advised Turkey against it. Turkey apparently is disposed to follow this advice, and it is believed that if hasty by her brother, William Rattes, 18 action on the part of Turkey can be years old, who is attached to the prevented, Bulgaria will have difficulty in finding an excuse to begin war.

The action of Prince Ferdinand in proclaiming the independence of Bulgaria is condemned alike by the governments and press of Europe, but in some quarters this is considered a matter of minor importance, so long as it does not eventuate in war, as compared with the threatened annexation of the provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria-Hungary. Reports from Belgrade indicate that Servia has been aroused to the danger point, bands of Servians marching the streets of Belgrade and shouting for war with Austria.

BIG MILITARY PARADE

GEN. GRANT THE MARSHAL

Tablet Marking Site of Gen. Rochambeau's Camp Is Unveiled-Address by Vicomte de Chambrun.

Philadelphia.-Business in Philadelphia was practically at a standstill Monday while the citizens gave themselves over to the celebration of the two hundred and twenty-fifth birthday anniversary of the city. Probably the greatest throng that ever gathered along Broad street witnessed the military parade, which called out 20,-000 soldiers and sailors of the United States and of the National Guard of Pennsylvania.

Maj. Gen. Frederick D. Grant, commanding the department of the east, United States army, acted as grand marshal of the imposing pageant and received a veritable ovation all along the line of march.

In addition to this first of the spectacular parades planned in connection with the celebration of Founders' week, there were a number of incldents and events fraught with historic significance. At night the city was again a blaze of light. Much ingenuity has been shown in the electrical decorations and the display after nightfall is one of dazzling brilliance. The day began with a salute of .13 guns fired from each of the warships in the harbor and the trumpetings of mounted heralds in mediaeval costumes on the plaza of the city hall. Events followed fast from that time until one p. m., when the long military column began to move down North Broad street from Susquehanna ave-

One of the events of the day was of international importance. It was the unveiling of a bronze tablet at the city hall marking the site of the encampment of the French artny under Gen. Vicomte de Chambrun, secretary of the embassy at Washington, represented the French ambassador and paid a graceful tribute to America.

"But I—I—" Ann stammered—and then gazed helplessly at the squirming piece of humanity, so hastily and unceremonlously deposited on her lap. The woman had vanished. "Well!" Ann gasped for want of anything else to say, and Ann was seldom at a loss for words. "Rather abrupt, don't you think so?" Ann smiled sweetly at the man opposite, his forehead creased into two straight lines of annoyance. "Of all the confounded limits, she was the leader"-he growled. "If I only knew where she went or how she looked I would go after her and make her take the infernal-" "Don't call the poor little thing names, Dick! See, you have made him cry." Ann cooed softly and soothingly-deftly she turned the infant across her knees after the time immemorial method of pacifying young humanity. "Little chap is hungryyes, he is." Ann's voice was full of deep, vibrant caresses. The long, straight lines faded from Richard's forehea/1-little, deep ones appeared around his mouth. He watched Ann from under half-closed lids-decidedly this was a new and altogether wonder-

The train was surely moving-how long it had been in motion, neither knew. Ann had been absorbed in her efforts to quiet the now sleeping baby, and Richard lost in admiration of

"Dick, what shall we do?" Ann spoke after a long silence spent in staring at the swiftly moving landscape.

"Pitch, the thing out of the window" -the masculine element growled.

"Be serious, Dick-what shall we do?-it's only a few minutes until we reach Wentworth."

"Give it to some one else," Dick suggested, brightly. "There is no one in the car to give it to." Leave it on the seat then.' "It would fall off." "Pin it on, then."

"Dick, how can you be so heartless?" "Well, we can't take it off with us," The said doggedly. "Tom is going to meet us-we can't let him see itconfounded lubber-he sees a joke in everything-we would never hear the last of it. We will have to leave it on the train."

"Richard Manning, we won't leave the poor little thing on the train, by itself-it must be properly cared for by some one."

"That some one isn't going to be us. Its mother won't claim it. She's deserted it." "You know better, Richard." Ann, when displeased, had a very decisive way of saying Richard. Richard realized that it was time for him to do something practical; at the same time he must appease Ann. "Of course she will claim it," he agreed. "Rather out of the ordinary, isn't he?" "Certainly his mother will claim him, Richard." Ann was not easily ap-

"If that's the case, so much the better." The conductor spoke more affably-he saw all the responsibility vanishing from his shoulders. "Your wife can take charge of the baby, until its mother reaches there, on the train following this-it's only 20 minutes later."

"But she isn't my wife-yet, you see," Richard spoke desperately. "We are-er-we're to be married there." He straightened his shoulders, as if he defied the entire world to try to stop that ceremony. "You see, Ann's father-" The conductor collapsed roared with laughter.

"So you are the eloping couple-you are Major Deering's daughter?" he spoke to Ann. between paroxysms.

"There is an official searching through the train for you-he is in the next car." Richard moved over beside Ann; his face several shades paler. Ann forgot the sleeping baby and clutched Dick's coat sleeve. "Ann -" Richard gasped. "You will not tell." Ann looked at the conductor as if to measure her antagonist. The conductor looked soberly at Ann. "I suppose I will have to"-be said.

"But you must help us; papa wants me to marry a horrid old friend of his -and there's Richard-" she paused, as if the fact of Richard's existence made further explanation unnecessary.

"Papa's friend is rich, no doubt, and Richard is not, I suppose." The conductor spoke as if he were weighing Richard in the balance and Richard was found wanting.

"Richard has his law practice; he will make plenty for us-" Ann flared -then changed tactics. "Please help us," she said. No one resisted Ann when she said please. Ann's "Please" was a word of art-Ann realized it. Richard smiled; he knew the battle

A smooth-faced individual came down the aisle. Ann and Richard braced themselves. Ann kept her eyes on the conductor in Ann's conquering way.

"You won't find your parties in this car. Jenkins." The conductor arose as he spoke. He turned to Ann. "That's fine little chap-be sure to take good care of him," he said. Ann smiled her thanks. Ann's smile was

"I suppose you are right, Flinch." Jenkins spoke undecidedly, but if it wasn't for that baby that couple certainly fit the description. Jenkins looked searchingly at Richard. "He is about 25-tall-clean-shaven-gray eyes-brown, curly hair." He counted each item off on his fingers. The description fitted Richard. It was Ann's turn-deep blue eyes-light, wavy hair-slender-medium heightbrown dress-brown hat. That certainly fitted Ann. Ann bore the scrutiny and enumeration better than Richard; she was absorbed in watching the baby's sleepy efforts to get a pink, chubby hand in a mouth fully a size smaller than the hand.

"But the baby"-Jenkins swore softy under his breath. Ann's father had offered an alluring reward to the party who stopped the runaways. Jenkins was not romantic; his was a grasping nature. "Yes, the baby elfminates them;" Flinch spoke promptly and decidedly. He stood so that Jenkins could pass out first,

"You will reach your station in about ten minutes; I am sure you will find your message all right," he said pcintedly to Richard.

"We sure will-but it will be all right anyway," Richard spoke promptly. Ann smiled at him approvingly. "Bless the baby," she said, softly, as she gathered it up in her arms and kissed a tiny, dimpled hand.

"Same here," Richard echoed fervently. "Hang Tom and what Tom

Parisian Tea Gown

SAW lately a lovely trio of tea gowns which had been devised in-Paris for a round of Country-house parties, and they showed the tendency to overelaboration which is the pitfall of this particular kind of dress, says a writer in Country Life (Eng.) The first had a skirt of white tulle with a deep flounce of Venetian point mounted over soft satin of the palest rose color, just enough to give a faint suggestion of color under the lace and tulle. Over this was a directoire redingote, with the basques reaching to the hem of the skirt and forming a short train behind, the material of the redingote being a thick, soft silk in a lovely shade of rose. The short directoire fronts of the coat were caught with a single diamond button at the breast, and the soft square revers. as well as the edges of the basques and round the train, were embroidered with a raised design of roses in silver thread. The same embroidery formed turned-back cuffs to the elbow-sleeves, and a soft folded fichy of tulle appeared between the revers, while a most effective and original touch was given to the whole costume by a sash of deep Burgundy satin charmeuse which swathed the waist and was carelessly knotted at one side in front on a level with the hip. The particularly praiseworthy feature of this dress was that it was essentially a tea-gown; it could not be mistaken for a dinner-gown or an afternoon frock, and that positive note in a costume, no matter what occas meant for, is always praiseworthy.

COLD WEATHER SHIRT WAISTS.

Heavy Linen in White and Plain Light and Dark Colors.

Among the shirt waists designed for autumn and early winter use are some light and dark colors. They are apparently almost tight-fitting, for the reason that the two deep side plaits crossing the outer ends of the shoulders are stitched flatly to the waist, and there is scarcely any fullness under the arms. The fronts close blindly a little toward the left side by means of an irregularly shaped band that is decorated with four large pearl buttons, the sleeves are of the "small" shirt type, plaited into the armsize and finished with turn-back cuffs, and there is a turnover boyish collar," which fastens with a fan-plaited mus-

Fancy wool braid of the scalloped or pointed order is being employed for the garnishing of some of the challis shirt waists, which are to be worn this winter under runabout street suits, as they are decidedly warmer than those of linen and launder equally as well. They have the twin deep shoulder plaits, but in addition there are shaped bias bands which encircle the neck from back to front whence they extend, gradually tapering to the waistline. The braid is used to border these bands and also as a finish for the cuffs of the conventionally shaped sleeves, and for the high turnover collar, which, like the cuffs, is decorated with small buttons similar to those fastened to the fronts. Magple reliefs for white net blouses are in the form of attachable neck and waist pattles, or rather, collar and cuffs, as they literally take the place of those accessories. They are formed of the two-inch side-plaited net ruffles shirred through the center on a tape attached to the under side. Their edges are bordered with very full little frillings of inch-wide black thread lace, which also finish the ends by being gathered into little fans which merge into a sort of rosette when they are joined at the back of the neck or at the outer side of the wrist.

Plain and Plaid Skirts.

One of the novelties in skirts for young girls is the insertion of a plait of plain colored cloth between groups of plaits in plaid cloth.

Young girls will wear plaited skirts more than grownups will and several new devices have come out to vary the sameness This colored ptait is one of them and has met with high

Sometimes the skirt carries a foursold color as a hem.

IN LAST SEASON'S STYLE.

Fur-Trimmed Hats Are Sure to Be the Mode Again.

The vogue which fur-banded and allfur hats enjoyed last winter has left of heavy linen in white and plain its traces on some of the shapes designed for the coming season, and while they are not so weighty and destructive to the hair as the heavfly trimmed felt hats are reputed to be, they are quite as fetching, inasmuch as the same softening effects about the face are gained. For instance, a hat may be wholly of some fabric such as satin or corded silk, but its brim may be edged with a narrow strip of fur, which is repeated in the edging or center banding of its ruching. Furs of many sorts will be used for this purpose, but most of all black marten, which is destined to enjoy a remendous vogue, and sealskin, which is said to be literally worth its weight in gold dollars. For the nonce, the light-colored furs-cfiinchilla, white fox and ermine-seem destined to be rather out of the running, but as it is to be a winter of both garments and trimmings of longhaired animals, the chances are that pelts of nearly every species will be in evidence,

Large hats will be the favorite during the fall. One of the striking characteristics of the new style is the immense crown, which is seldom high except in the directoire modes, but in circumference is enormous.

It is rumored that the chevron design will be the smart thing in all neutral tones of cloth for autumn wear. Smoke and elephant gray, several shades of brown and dark blue have all been dyed ready for the counters, and each one of them will be christened with a fine new name.

Tassels are enjoying a glorious reign of popularity. They fall from the back and adorn the panels of skirts, not to mention the increasing vogue for longtasseled fringes which edge the draped skirts of to day. And the new pointed tunics are nearly always finished with heavy tassels.

A round rosette of lace, fas'ened to the pigeon-tail jabot of lace, is recognized as one of the smartess collar decorations. The rosette is merely a. long ruffle tightly drawn to form a inch front panel to correspond, and it round disk. It takes three-quarters of always carries the five-inch fold of the a yard of lace 21/2 inches wide to form the rosette alone.

Good Roads

Who Should Build Them? Answer by an Expert

By H. H. GROSS, Secretary National Good Roads League.

ALL the questions before the American people to-day, none is more misunderstood than the one that heads this article. It is high time this subject was understood and acted upon intelligently. The following condensed statement may serve to clear the atmosphere and show that the building of good roads is not an impossible task. We often hear the statement: "There are 60 miles of roads in our township; at $5,000 per mile it would cost $300,000 to build them." Therefore they assume the task is an impossible one, as it would be from that viewpoint. The facts are that only the main highways need to be improved and from 15 to 25 miles in most townships would be ample. /In the central west $3,000 per mile would be the average cost, so the outlay ranges from $65,000 to $75,000 and not $300,000, as stated.

Of this amount the township should pay about one-third, the state one-third and the general government one-third, and this is what we should work on. The township's part should be paid by issuing 20-year bonds at say four per cent, interest. In order to meet the interest and pay off the bonds it would require the township to raise from $1,000 to $1,500 per year. This burden in a township will be scarcely felt. If in a state like Illinois, with 1,500 townships, the state should pay for state aid at the rate of $2,000 per township per year for ten years, making a total for the state for state aid of $15,000,000, the tax on farm property to raise this amount would be about 21/2 cents per acre per year! With state aid the townships can build gravel or stone roads upon the main highways at an average cost of ten cents per acre per year. This will cover both the local/tax and the state aid tax.

The first step toward an equitable solution is an up-to-date state aid law. Among the states that are taking steps to change their constitutions so the state may aid in building the roads are Wisconsin, Kentucky, Alabama and Arkansas. No state in the central west would gain so much by state aid as Illinois; due to the enormous amount of city and corporate property located in that state. Farm property pays only 30 per cent. of the state taxes, while the city of Chicago alone pays over 40 per cent. Fifteen states are now building roads by state aid and it works to the satisfaction of everyone. When state aid is established national aid will soon follow and then the question will be speedily

Fashion Makes Bond Slaves

By HUME NISBET.

We put on boots to keep out the cold and they soak in the damp; stockings to help the absorbing process, and thus confirm the risk of consumption. Nature makes us all beautiful, or would do so if we gave her a fair chance; and we spend years in bringing nature down to a level not to be described in any simile. Nature meant to endow us with sinews and muscles to give and take a squeeze, and we poultice them all over until they are flaccid and shrink at the slightest force,

Nature made the Greeks, and the Greeks owed what powers they possessed to the restraint they displayed in letting nature alone. Art, having no human nature now left unspoilt, points to the old Greeks. Taste admits art to be right, yet yields to fashion, while that graven calf stands with senseless hoof upon the roses and the lilies, calling itself the god of Modesty, Purity, and Taste, a modesty which ordains the female to cover her hands and feet and lay bare her breast, a purity which can show a naked arm and blush to show a naked foot.

We cannot improve upon the naked foot. The hand may wear rings, and to degraded senses look improved; the neck may have its chains, the ear, the arms, and ankles, even the nose, rings, according to the fancy of the wearer or the taste of the nation. I do not like rings or anything that divides the lines of symmetry, yet if one part be covered gold may be worn with advantage on other portions, but I defy any cover or ornament vet invented by man to improve the foot, which God has already so beautifully covered.

we muffle the feet in wool or cotton and cramp them inside the stiffest of tanned skins, dead skins over living skins, and think that this can be healthy. We shape them according to a fashion, square, round or pointed toes, never according to nature and the foot.

Airship's Efficiency War

By ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL.

As to the ultimate type of airship, that, to my mind, is a question that cannot be answered. There are two distinct classes of aerial vehicles-balloons, which are lighter than air, and airships, which are heavier than air. I believe that aerial navigation will be solved by the heavier than air machines, and consequently am giving all my attention to that class.

There are three varieties of heavier than air machines-aerodromes, helicoplera and the ornithopter. Aerodromes are divided into many types, and the type that will eventually be successful will be decided by experiments now being made, but I have the greatest confidence in the tetradons. As to the probable influence on social and political conditions, I might reply that I am not interested in that phase of the airship question and have not given it serious thought. I am anxious only to succeed without reference to the uses to which the machine may be put, but I will say that the success of the airship will revolutionize warfare. It may become, in fact, a war exterminating agency, and thus end all armed conflicts between nations. For instance, as an illustration of the tremendous use to which the airship will be put, a $7,000,-000 ship might easily be destroyed by a cheap machine, and by the same agencies whole cities

Vessels on Lake Superior last week were forced to seek shelter from a hurricane, which was accompanied by sleet and snow.

That Bryan is not oversanguine about the result of the coming election is evidenced by the fact that he is now hustling to save his own state from Taft.

There is more coal stored within the limits of the city of Superior today than in any other city in the World, 3,304,000 tons is the amount in round numbers, and of the amount 759,000 tons is anthracite and 2,545,000 bituminous.

"Absent without leave" is recorded twenty-nine times in the single session of the legislature of 1903 against the record of Lawton Hemans, the democratic Through tickets sold at lowest prices to candidate for governor. Some of the most important items of the legislation of that session were transacted during Mr. Hemans', "absence without leave." If Mr. Hemans' record for zeal in behalf of his constituents was typical of his party it is not strange that they were not successful in doing efficient guard duty as members of the legis-

There are no sore spots on 'Puss" Palmer of Manistee. He says he fought a hard fight and a clean fight, and lost, but has no fault to find with the result. Senator Fuller, he says, is admirably equipped for auditor general's office, and will make an excellent servant for the state. Even Link Avery of Port Huron, who has been so severely jolted from Washington, comes up smiling with the comment that he has no fault to find with the G. O. P., and that it is the party for the people to tie to. Instances could be multiplied to show that the game loser is by no means extinct.-Mining

W. J. Bryan states that advices received by him from party workers indicate an increasing democratic sentiment throughout the United States. "A candidate can only form opinions of his chances" he said "through reports made to him by party workers. Every report made to me indicates that not only is the trend among voters toward democracy this year but the sentiment for our party is increasing. My advices are that we will have a large majority of the popular vote and also have a majority in the electoral Maybe Mr Bryan is right, and maybe not-we incline to the latter belief, however.

Lincoln Avery, collector of customs at Port Huron, has been removed from office by President Roosevelt, for alleged infraction of the federal statute prohibiting political assessments.

Sympathy will of course be felt for Mr. Avery, but the law whose infraction led to the removal is an admirable law. It should be obeyed and there is no better way of insuring obedience to it than through a policy which holds somebody responsible for disobedience. Developments of the past summer create a desire for a state law of the same effect covering the case of assessments on state appointees. The power to levy contributions on public officers and employes is the most effective of all devices in upbuilding and holding together political machines and there is no surer way of destroying the domination of political machines than by depriving them of the power to levy such contributions.

A law prohibiting campaign assessments might also be an admirable thing in the municipal jurisdiction.

OF SIN

By ALAN HAMILTON

"I hope she'll git it," lamented Deacon Phibry, tapping a cream biscuit on the head and gazing gravely at his gray-haired spouse. "Ye see, it's like this. Either Mellie Peevy draws that silk dress, or else we'll all be in the lunatic asylum."

"I know," assented his wife in a weary monotone. She was a small, faded woman, whose forehead was always marked by three querulous wrinkles. "She was in here yesterday and almost prayed she might git the prize. She's gitting awfully tiresome." "Abigail Bunker had no business," growled the deacon, "to go to her and solicit her money. The Lawd knows she's hard up enough without paying and he knew they were too heavy to 50 cents for the chance of drawing a black silk dress in any Ladies' Auxillary fair."

"For land's sakes, hush!" whispered his wife, "Here she comes now."

And the creaking of the screen door in allowing a portly woman of worried demeanor to enter drowned the deacon's groan, "D've think, Mrs. Phibry, Number 21 is a lucky number?" asked the newcomer nervously, unfumbling with the clasp of an ancient reticule. "I almost wish now I'd taken

"Don't ye think I stand any chance?" implored Mrs. Peevy, locking and opening her fat fingers- rapidly."I dreamed last night I was going to git it with 22."

"If you had two tickets you'd stand twice as much of a chance, of course." declared Mrs. Phibry, whose keen eye never failed to detect any possible advantage that might accrue to the Ladies' Auxiliary. Thus it was due largely to Mellie Peevy's ticket and the uncertainty at and explained it as an all-conquering tached thereto that the Ladies' Aux. impulse, something done in a dreamiliary fair was patronized beyond all precedent on the last night.

The committee cunningly held back the drawing for the last event: but throughout the evening the widow sat bolt upright, oblivious to the program of recitations and vocal numbers, with eyes only for the table of prizes. The large package in brown paper was undoubtedly it, and she studied it hungrily. To think so thin a wrapper could contain so much happiness!

"Will Deacon Phibry please step forward?" asked one of the committee, and the deacon, surprised and flustered, squeaked his painful way to the small platform, where his new boots caught the rays from two kerosene lamps and discarded them in halos He was informed, after he had stood motionless for what seemed to him to be several years, that the committee wished him to draw from a hat the lucky number designating the owner of the black silk dress. The first number selected would win. It had been arranged that Elder Tomper was to pass up the hat, filled with numbers, and as he performed his part in the ceremony he looked in Deacon Phibry's eyes to be miles away; exactly as if the deacon were gazing through the big end of a telescope.

The deacon grasped the head covering mechanically, but as he glanced down his gaze was caught and held by the numerals "21." They seemed to fill the whole hat, to fill the whole ball, be lifted. He panted for fresh air as he realized it was time to shake the hat above his head, and instantly the number diminished down to the size of a pinhead-it was being eliminated altogether. The slightest jar would shift it to the bottom.

But, he reasoned dumbly, if it were dexterously slipped under the sweat band, like that; and the hat shaken, like that; and the free hand raised heeding the salutation of welcome and and dipped into the receptacle. like that, where the ticket invitingly thrust itself forth-like that-it would all be very simple.

> Then with a jolt he realized what he had done. The widow was weeping spasmodically and hugging her treascheering wildly, as though a verdice of "Not guilty" had been returned, with a public favorite in the dock, and Miss Bunker was snapping her eyes in chagrin. The deacon blindly passed the hat and its burden of forlorn hopes to the elder and staggered down from the platform and out of the ball into the night.

"Well, she got it," gasped Mrs. Phibry, after running to overtake him "And we cleared $186."

From that hour life lost its cheer for the deacon. As the days passed and Ms own conscience, he had to give himself credit for committing his first offense almost unconsciously. If he ow, as if the drawing had already had been familiar with the theory of hypnotism he would have attributed carried off the prize. "It seems pesky his deception to the widow's hungry,

It was not until two months after Elder Tomper died when the decedent's son had returned from abroad, that the will was opened and read. Deacon Phibry was designated as executor; but it was two codicils that created the comment-for their provisions were unusual even in unique charity, Codicil-one, dated the day after the auxiliary fair, provided:

I herewith instruct my executor to set aside from my estate such a sum as will provide yearly, for a period of ten years, in income that will be sufficient to purchase one black silk dress pattern, pattern to be the property of the Ladies' Auxiliary, the said auxiliary to offer aforesaid pattern as a prize by such methods as may be deemed best by said auxiliary's committee in holding its year-

But codicil two caused even a greater ripple of pleasant speculation; for this read:

I hereby change codicil one of my last will and testament so as to read that the term of the black slik dress trust fund shall terminate on the death of my ex utor, Elmathan Phibry, and shall be sufficient to provide only one-half of a black slik dress pattern, on condition that my said executor shall provide for the other half. odicil one is hereby revoked. "And here is a letter for you, Dea con Phlbry, found in the decedent's effects and marked "Personal," said the lawyer, passing over a missive.

The deacon opened it jealously, and found scrawled therein:

CRIME OF THE CLOCKS

Man Who Missed a Train Frees His Mind About a Com-mon Nulsance.

"I am firmly convinced," said the man who sat swabbing his face in the railroad station waiting room, hot and indignant because he had missed his train. "that the man maintaining in a public place a clock that does not keep time ought to be found guilty of felonious misdemeanor, if not of something worse, and punished, if that were possible, with a penalty in some measure commensurate with his crime.

"I am not sure that I would hank him for the first offense-at least I would not make such a punishment mandatory; I would leave something. to the discretion of the judge and jury -but I would make the penalty cumulative. For instance, I would have the law so read that after a man had been found four times guilty of this crime he must be hanged or electrocuted four times, with no escape, and I don't know but what I would both hang and electrocute him.

"For I can conceive of no higher crime than that of a man who sets up a clock in a public place and then fails to keep it going correctly.

"Understand me clearly. I do not refer now to clocks in church steeples, on which I never rely; they may be right and they may be wrong. Nominally they are supposed to be looked after by the sexton, but really they represent the congregation, a divided responsibility; and on anything for which the responsibility is divided you can never rely. The church clock goes its own sweet way through the week with nobody to look after it, and so on it I never rely.

"Nor do I permit myself to be misled by tower clocks, which, like the church clocks, may be right and may be wrong. You might think that the tower clocks would be looked after scrupulously by those who owned them, but up so high, so near the sky, and though looked at dally by many. they seem sometimes to be quite overlooked and forgotten by those whose business it should be to keep constant watch over them; and I have learned by experience not to rely on tower clocks.

"And I have long since ceased to rely on clocks simply because they had the word 'Regulator' printed on their face. I have known such clocks that were model timekeepers, but putting that name on their face didn't make them so. Have we not all seen one story shacks with a sign up rending 'Grand Palace Hotel?' But that sign didn't make the shack a palace any more than printing the word 'Regulator on the face of a two-dollar clock makes that a perfect timekeeper. So'I have long since ceased to be mislead by the word 'Regulator.'

"For that matter, may we not find in jewelers' windows, where of all places you would expect to find clocks showing the correct time, clocks that are minutes off? I never rely on a clocksimply because I see it in a jeweler's window

"Nor do I rely on the barber shop clock, nor on any of the many clocks that I find in many semi-public places, and least of all do I rely on clocks found in homes; for clocks are as various and as irresponsible as men.

"And now I am coming to the real point of what I want to say. There is one sort of clock set up in public places upon which we should be able to rely with absolute security, and that is the clock that is set up by a bustness man in front of his place of busi-

Now there is a clock that really ought always to be kept in perfect. order and keeping perfect time. For does not this man place it there to attract attention to himself and his goods for his own profit? Does he not thereby expect to derive benefits from the public, and should not the public he able to rely upon receiving a reciprocal benefit from him? Does he not thereby substantially say that what he has to offer is good and worthy of attention, and is it not reasonable to suppose that he invites our confidence in his clock as well as his goods?

"And would you not suppose that the most commonplace considerations of selfishness would prompt him to keep that clock always in perfect order, to confirm and increase for his own profit the confidence that he invites? You'd think so, wouldn't you? But how many clocks are so?"

"I infer from what you say," said the tranquil man waiting for his train to whom these remarks had been made, "that you have trusted some public clock somewhere and so missed your

"Your inference is quite correct," said the hot and indignant man, "and what I said to you as to the penalties that I think ought to attach to this crime of failure to keep public clocks in order is only a brief, limited, short, condensed, mild, abbreviated, attenuated and expurgated statement of what I think the penalty really ought to be. What I would do if I could to the man guilty of this crime I wouldn't care to .say."

Dr. Hamilton referred to the many important cases that, have occurred during the last 50 years in New York, where so-called "emotional insanity" had been advanced as an excuse for crime generally, and was disposed to ridicule this form of subterfuge. "It is really a legal compromise with the truth. ' So-called 'emotional insanity' has been one of the most frequent devices selected to arouse false sympathy with criminal violence. People have been led to believe that there is such a thing as a sudden frenzy of passion, a feeling which has led a man most of us know, the Sickles-Key case to shoot another suddenly, and which was one of the earliest American absolves him from all responsibility. That is one of the absurdities adopted la certain desperate lawyers, who, in Daniel Sickles, a popular veteran of the name of science, attempt to mystify hysterical juries. In this connection I may refer to the dangerous precedent that has been recently tal weakness, living to a good old age adopted of letting the outraged wife of the defendant tell the story of her wrongs with the idea of showing how readily it might have inflamed an injured man and produced an insanity which rendered him irresponsible.

It was said that the court proceedings would not require the board to stop the counting. The board recounted Lapeer county. Warner, on the recount of the votes cast in Huron county sustained a net loss of 101 votes with the ballots from a number of townships to be counted. The vote in two townships, Fairhaven and Caseville, had been thrown out in its entirety because of the failure of the inspectors of the primary election to Republican state ticket: write their initials on the backs of the ballots as the law requires. Gov. Warner sustained a net loss of 70 votes in these townships. He lost 17 in Sard Beach because of distinguishing marks and other defects in the ballots. In Dwight township he lost 15 and Bradley two. The losses in the townships counted up are as follows:

Michigan Democratic Ticket Named.

A protracted discussion of the party platform in the resolutions committee as a result of the introduction of some planks held by the party leaders to be too radical furnished the feature of the state Democratic convention at Saginaw. There were but two contests in the election of the state ticket and in each case they were settled on the first ballot. Pollowing is the ticket, Lawton T. Hemans of Mason having been nominated for governor at the primary election in September:

Lieutenant governor, S. D. Williams, Detroit; secretary of state, Frank T. McDonald, Sault Ste, Marie: stafe treas-urer, Robert J. Whaley, Flipti auditor general, William F. Montague, Kalamazoo; attorney general, James G. Tucker, Coleman; superintendent public instruction, W. Sherman Lister, Ionia; land commissioner, J. W. Tierney, Roscommon: member state board of education, Justin R. Whiting, Jackson; justice of supreme court to fill vacancy, Mark Norris, Grand presidential electors-at-large, John C. Mershon, Saginaw; John E. Bible, Ionia.

John T. Winship of Saginaw was reelected chairman of the state central committee. The platform, which contains about 1,400 words, is devoted almost entirely to state issues. It "reasserts our allegiance to the principles of majority rule and pure Democracy." and says of the national platform and ticket: "We cheerfully and earnestly indorse the national platform and fully believing in the wisdom, honesty and integrity of purpose of our standard bearers, William J. Bryan and John W. Kern, pledge to them our allegiance and assistance and hearty support, believing that under their leadership and by their election the people would receive relief from the many ills from which they are now suffering by reason of the class legislation of the Republican party."-

Road Plans Farm on Track.

President Hawks of the Detroit & Mackinac railway says the company is planning to operate a continuous farm along its right of way next season. It is proposed to cultivate the land each side of the track, planting a diversity of crops. There is a twofold purpose in this plan. One is to show travelers on the road and intending settlers what can be done with the soil and another is to avoid the numerous fires which are started along the railroad by sparks from locomotives when weeds and dry grass are allowed to accumulate each season. The company will also operate a 40-acre model farm at Emery Junction.

Veterinaries Organize.

The Northern Michigan Veterinary Medical association was organized at Traverse City with a charter membership of 15, all veterinary surgeons. The object of the association is establishing a standard of prices and bettering the service. The officers are: F. C. Scott, Traverse City, president; A. W. Medbert, Kingsley, vice-president, and S. V. Lewis, Suttons Bay, secretarytreasurer.

Michigan Union Quits Independence.

The Michigan Union, American Soclety of Equity, concluded its sessions at Traverse City, the following officers being elected: President, Walter E. Greilick, Traverse City; vice-president, James Howey, East Jordan; secretary, Charles Emerson, Traverse City: treasurer, L. E. Heffer, Sherwood; organizer, George Soper, Stanwood; delegates to the national convention, President Greilick and M. M. Drake, Trufant; directors, W. H. Beeman, Empire; C. A. Maston, Sherwood, and M. M. Drake, Trufant.

The Republican state convention guit at Detroit when in a din that than ten feet W. G. Malcomson read the resolutions which were adopted convention met for the afternoon session the battle lay between Fuller and Simpson. It was Wayne that determined the final result. If the big delegation had split it is very likely that Simpson would have been nominated. But the 129 votes of Wayne went solld to Fuller and this made the nomination. It was unheard of for a Wayne delegation to stand as a unit, but there were two contributing causes; the fact that the friends of Gov. Warner were in control and also because Thomas J. Navin was out to settle an old feud with Palmer. The Appeal Again in Recount Tangle.

Proceeding to the work of recounting the ballots cast for governor at the recent primary election, the state canvassers found themselves involved in a complication of legal technicalities. Although the votes in several townships were examined, the board adjourned temporarily without having definitely determined what the result should be in any township under investigation. The attorneys for Dr. Bradley and Gov. Warner in the meantime prepared themselves for another appeal to the supreme court to secure a construction of the law with reference to distinguishing marks on ballots, the duties of election inspectors, and so forth. It was agreed by the attorneys that if the election laws the voters of the state would be disfranchised.

Propose Canal Across Michigan.

To project a canal to connect Lakes Michigan and Huron at Grand Haven and Saginaw, the Grand-Saginaw Valley Deep Waterway association was organized by delegates from six cities along the route of the proposed waterway. Delegates were appointed to attend the convention of the National Deep Waterways association in Chicago and plans were discussed as to how best to further the plan of a deep canal across the state, making use of the valleys of the Grand and the Saginaw rivers. The following were appointed as delegates to attend the National Waterways convention: H. W. Hubbell, Saginaw; B. G. Coryell, Chesaning; Willis Miller, Chesaning; Charles Kerr, Ashley, and Nat Robbins, Grand Haven.

Kern Is Lansing's Guest.

John Kern, Democratic candidate for vice-president, was listened to by a crowd of several hundred people representing all political parties, when he made a brief speech at the Hotel Downey. Mr. Kern was introduced by Lawton T. Hemans, Democratic candidate' for governor of Michigan. Vice-presidential Candidate Watkins of the Prohibition party was at the same hotel during Mr. Kern's visit, but the two candidates did not meet.

Michigan Troops Back Home.

The brigade of the Michigan National Guard consisting of three regiments and two troops of cavalry which has been in joint army maneuvers at Indianapolis, Ind., has returned home.

Plan Industrial Week.

Saginaw is planning to hold a unique industrial exposition, to be known as "merchants' and manufacturers' week." The exposition will be held in November in the new auditorium, and it is expected that exhibits of 200 of Saginaw's factories and of a large number of mercantile establishments will be made. A committee, headed by Mayor Baum, is engaged in making preparations for the event. It will be patterned to a certain extent after the annual furniture exhibit at Grand Rapids.
