

CARNEGIE'S FORTUNE.

The Pittsburgh Iron-Maker's First Big Venture in Oil.

It is an interesting fact not generally known that Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the big iron manufacturer, whose income was the subject of so much newspaper comment during the campaign, made his first big money in the oil business. The death, in Pittsburgh, of David A. Stewart, chairman of Carnegie Bros. & Co., suggests reference to the Columbus Oil Company, of which Mr. Stewart was treasurer and the active manager, and Mr. Carnegie one of the several stockholders. This company bought and operated the Story farm on Oil creek, between Titusville and Oil City, a history of which reads like a story of the Arabian Nights. It was the richest farm ever developed in the oil country, and from his interest in this farm Mr. Carnegie became comparatively a rich man. The farm was originally owned by William Story, who barely made a living from it prior to the discovery of petroleum. It consisted of 400 acres, and Mr. Story offered the place for $4,500, one-third of which was to be in cash and the balance in three annual payments. He could find no purchaser until oil was struck on the creek, and then he sold it to Mr. Carnegie and his friends for $35,000 cash. The Columbus Oil Company was organized to develop it May 1, 1861. Mr. Stewart was made treasurer and Mr. Carnegie one of the directors. The capital stock was $250,000, divided into 10,000 shares of $25 each. The farm proved to be productive beyond all expectation, and in the entire history of the petroleum industry no other farm has approached it as an oil bonanza. The first year's output was 20,800 barrels, and the following year it was increased to 89,600. In two and a half years after the incorporation of the company dividends had been declared amounting to 130 per cent. on the capital stock. In 1864 the production of the farm increased to 141,508 barrels. During this year the average price of oil was $9.87 per barrel. During the first six months of this year four dividends were declared, amounting to 160 per cent. on the capital stock. A month later the capital stock was increased to $2,500,000, and a dividend of 5 per cent. on this amount was at once declared from the earnings of the farm. Before the close of the year five dividends were declared, making in all 25 per cent. on the increased stock. Ten years after the first well was struck on the property the production of the farm was 142,034 barrels for that year. In these ten years 1,715,972 barrels were produced, and the whole amount of its dividends were 401 per cent. on its capital stock. In a law suit in Erie in 1885, Mr. Stewart, treasurer of the company, testified that the Columbus Oil Company had sold oil from the farm to the value of between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. Estimating the amount of oil produced by the farm since that time, the total output is placed by practical oil men between $9,000,000 and $10,000,000. Although the Story farm has been constantly operated for twenty-seven years it is still producing about 100 barrels a month. All the old original wells have been drained and abandoned some years ago, and the present production is from new wells drilled within the past few years. Hundreds of farms in the oil regions have yielded vast fortunes to their owners, but none of them have a record equal to this, and from this farm Mr. Carnegie received a start that has made him one of the money princes of the world.—Titusville (Pa.) Letter.

TREATMENT OF CLERKS.

How Store-Keepers Can Reduce Their Expenses to Mere Machines.
With the trapper, the finer the fur the more enticing the bait, and the lighter will the dead-fall come upon it; in this respect must the employer follow his example: The more useful you think the young man will be to you, the more fascinating must be your inducements to procure his services.
When he is once in your trap, rule him down, so that having performed all your requirements, his bodily strength will be exhausted, and his brain intoxicated by business, so as to muddy the channel of thought, that to gather one clear idea would simply be impossible.
Here and now you will find to be the most convenient time and place to relate to him how many first-class clerks you could have hired for much lower wages than what you are paying him. Never introduce him to a customer.
In speaking of the clerk, give him a title, as the man, the boy, or the girl, as the case may be.
When you enter the store in the morning, never speak or recognize the clerk—to act otherwise, would be what some people would call being too sociable with the clerks.
When you reprove the clerk begin to bombard him with hard words and dark sayings. Do this all in the presence of a roomful of customers, for you need not fear of losing custom, as a clerk never has any friends.
Charge the clerk for every article that he may stand in need of, if you do make one hundred per cent., and do this especially if he is working at panic wages.
N. B.—The main point in dealing with a clerk is to keep him humble.
Never treat him as a man, as it is not wholesome for a clerk.
Do not allow your clerk to have one evening during the week to inform himself; no, not two hours each day, lest he make a man of himself; but take every moment of his time, and when he grows older you will have a grand piece of machinery, yes, a self-working tool.—Texas Sittings.

THE FRENCH CREOLES.

Some of the Characteristics of This Singular People.

The French Creoles of the lower class are a hard-mouthed class of people, purchasing the stick of wood to-day and the handful of herbs that are to cook and season their potage, filling their small market baskets with innumerable pinches of this, that and the other, laying in a few sours of sugar and coffee at a time, and—going next day, for three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, and doing identically the same thing, in annual accumulation. Dislike to the accumulation of household goods, to well-stored cellars and pantries, to generous abundance, to picturesque profusion, to the essentials of a large-handed hospitality even within the narrow limits of their neighborhood acquaintances, an apt-like economy and abstemiousness, a curious juxtaposition of eternal self-restraint and a passion for sensations, colors, sounds, perfumes, fantastic sensualities, an instinct for microscopic money-getting wedded to an instinct that has filled New Orleans with noble institutions for the poor, the blind, the sick, the world weary; a passion for novels and for splendid churches, a fond endurance of rigors of cold and hunger for the brilliant efflorescence of carnprenant and carnival, a voluntary exile from all laughter and joy that their feet may twinkle a night or two on the mirrored floors of the masque balls down in Chartres and Royal streets; such are the fragments of sweet and bitter herbs that go to make up part of the paradox of Creole character and communicate to it an indefinable piquancy and strangeness by their thick bars of light and shadow.

The chief charm of the character is a touching gentleness and benignity that blends all other characteristics and permeates the whole constitution of the native Creole. There is something elegiac, tender, dreamy about the race, a remnant or recollection of earlier and better days, an aroma of exile coming from old colonial times, when so many emigrated from the gay fatherland to the trackless wilderness of Louisiana, seeking their fortunes. Disappointment seems to have impressed itself as a trait of heredity on their spiritual make up; a brooding languor has spread from the luxurious climate through the limbs and constitution of the immigrants, the adventurous spirit of the marvelous brothers Bienville, Iberville and Sauvaille, laid under perpetual embargo by a Chinese wall of swamp, bayou and bogus, has sunk into a curious psychological numbness and content with surroundings; geography, exploration, literature, research, travel (beyond the inevitable transit to France once in a lifetime) are unknown luxuries to these lotus-eating folk, and in their way they are as still in their sunny corner as the sun-loving alligator that haunts their streams.

The customs, games and sports of these exiles are full of reminiscences of the fatherland, mingled with odd accretions and aftergrowths, a clinging conservatism, a poetic susceptibility. There are songs and Christmas customs smacking of Gascony, Provence, Champagne, San Domingo, Franche-Comte, such as lingers in Canada and form touching links with the folk over the sea.—J. A. Harrison, in Autrefois.

STRANGE MISTAKES.

Some of the Laughable Experiences of an Eastern Bookseller.

Says a Portland bookseller: "At one time we were carrying a large stock of religious works, and one day I called out to one of my clerks, holding up a book which he had wrapped up for some one; 'Is this 'The City of God?' 'No, I guess not,' he said, without looking round, 'at least I never heard it called that before. It is generally called the Forest City. Perhaps it is Brooklyn.' He afterward explained that he thought I had found a reference in some book to a place called the City of God and wanted to know what city it meant."

"On another occasion a woman with a valise in her hand rushed in and asked a new boy if he had 'That Husband of Mine' in our store? He came rushing out to me in the back shop and said a woman wanted to know if her husband was in our store. I surmised what the trouble was and attended to her myself."

"Some of the most amusing mistakes, however, are those made by people who get the titles of books wrong. They read about them in some catalogue or newspaper, but don't more than half remember the name, and the result is, to say the least, peculiar. One woman came in the other day and asked for 'The Rhinestone,' and went out mad because one of the clerks told her we didn't sell jewelry. Another wanted 'The Cardinal's Letter,' by Hawthorne. It took our whole force about fifteen minutes to get at what she really wanted, 'The Scarlet Letter.' She said she knew there was something red about it somewhere and thought it must be cardinal."—Portland Advertiser.

VOLCANIC DUST CLOUDS.

How They Travel Westward Round the Eastern Globe.

It appears that this cloud of dust started immediately from Krakatoa for a series of voyages round the world. The highway which it at first pursued may, for our present purpose, be sufficiently defined by the tropic of Cancer and the tropic of Capricorn, though it hardly approached these margins at first. Westward the dust of Krakatoa takes its way. In three days it had crossed the Indian Ocean, and was rapidly flying over the heart of Equatorial Africa; for another couple of days it was making a transatlantic journey, and then it might be found for still a couple of days more over the forests of Brazil ere it commenced the great Pacific voyage, which brought it back to the East Indies. The dust of Krakatoa had put a girdle round the earth in thirteen days. The shape of the cloud appears to have been elongated, so that it took two or three days to complete the passage over any stated place. When the dust cloud had regained the Straits of Sunda the eruption was all over, but the winds were still the same as before, and again the comminuted pumice sped on its impetuous career. The density of the cloud had, however, lessened. Doubtless much of the material was subsiding, and the remainder was becoming diffused over a wider area. Accordingly, we find that the track of the stream during this second revolution is somewhat wider than it was on the first, though mainly confined between the tropics. The speed with which the dust revolved was, however, unabated. Continents and oceans were again swept over with a velocity double that of an express train, and again the earth was surrounded within the fortnight. The dust cloud had now further widened its limits, but was still distinguishable, and with unlesened speed commenced for a third time to encircle the earth. The limits of the stream had spread themselves outside the tropics, though still falling short of Europe. There is no reason to think that there was any decline in the velocity of seventy-six miles per hour, but the gradual diffusion of the dust began to obliterate the indications by which its movements could be perceived, so that during and after the third circuit the phenomena became so confused that while their glory covered the earth the distinction between the successive returns had vanished. In November the area which contained the Krakatoa dust had sufficiently expanded from its original tropical limits to include Europe and the greater part of North America. During the winter months the suspended material gradually subsided, or, at all events, became evanescent, and in the following spring the earth regained its normal state in so far as the Straits of Sunda are concerned.—Contemporary Review.

BELTS AND GIRDLES.

Articles of Dress Worn Many Thousands of Years Ago.

The Egyptians, whose history, as recorded on their monuments and in their writings, is the most ancient of any with which we are acquainted, habitually wore broad belts of one kind or another. These girdles were used by both sexes, and we are informed by Prof. Macalister, were worn tight, this being apparently the cause of the remarkably slim waists which are so characteristic a feature of the sculptures and paintings of the ancient Egyptians. The breadth of their girdles varied considerably, but they were usually broad and made of linen. The women appeared to have frequently worn two distinct girdles, one high up, immediately below the bosom, while the other was placed lower, just above the hip-bones. There is no reason to suppose that the one round the waist proper was used to support any part of the clothing. The Semitic races, who derived their civilization mainly from the Egyptians, also wore girdles as part of their ordinary costume. With regard to the Jews and Phoenicians, we may remark that girdles, which were worn by both sexes, were recognized as being of benefit in assisting active exertion. As an instance of this, the case of Elijah may be quoted—Second Kings, xviii., 46—where it is stated that the prophet "girded up his loins" to run before Ahab. As is mentioned elsewhere in Scripture Elijah wore a leathern girdle, and the words in the original, which have been translated "girded up," should be rather "tightened up," and can be rendered more exactly by the Latin fortiter constrinxit than usual the English translation, which might lead to the erroneous impression that pulling up of the skirts was meant. The girding up of the loins referred to elsewhere in the Old Testament—for example, with regard to the ceremonies observed at the feast of the Passover—has the same signification, and expresses also the connection between such girding and active exertion. The Arab tribes of our own day wear girdles from their earliest infancy, and we are informed by Prof. Robertson Smith that in the case of the Bedouins they are worn tight as a matter of respectability. He further tells us that when he himself traveled in an Arab dress he was instructed always to draw his girdle tight, a loose girdle being regarded in the East, at the present day, as characteristic of a dissolute, luxurious person. In the privacy of home life the girdle is either loosened or removed. Many similar examples could be given with regard to other Semitic races.—National Review.

The Spring Campaign.

The exact trouble about the matter is that the democratic, conventional Grand Rapids Thursday was a very tame and spiritless affair. There was an absence of genuine enthusiasm which could not be supplied by the disheartened, although the delegates tried hard to make the best of the situation.

The democratic state ticket is a respectable one. It is neither very strong nor very weak. It will doubtless receive its party vote and there is no reason to expect it will do more than that.

As we have just said, the democrats have no possible chance of electing their ticket unless the republicans of the state, in their own confidence and feeling of security, give them the election. It ought not to be necessary to warn republicans not to be caught napping.

This is the situation precisely. The tickets are now all in the field and it is asserted that many third party prohibitionists, whose motto is "anything to beat the republicans," will vote the democratic ticket.

Two INDIANS filled up with L'Anse whisky on one of the cold days just at the close of February and one of them was frozen to death on his way home. The minister at the mission, Rev. Mr. Porritt, has commenced proceedings against five liquor dealers at L'Anse for selling to Indians in violation of law, and some fool writes him the following letter:

L'ANSK, Mich., March 2d '89. To C. I. Porritt: DEAR SIR:—Rumor is around town that you are doing all that is possible to have the saloon keepers arrested on account of selling liquor to the Indians. It is a duty for me to let you know that you should better shut your mouth & keep quiet about that.

I've noticed that all fools is egotists, but all egotists is not fools. I reckon it 'ud make a heap o'hard feelin's of we cood "see ourselves as others see us;" but of others cood see us as we see ourselves, it 'ud be the biggest surprise party that ever was known.

I've noticed that them that asks the most queschuns hain't allus the best informed. I reckon it 'ud be a heap easier for to "find a needle in a haystack" than it 'ud be to find two human bein's eggsact mates.

I've noticed that them that thinks that there haint no help is generally the ones that haf the most reesen to be afraid that there is. I reckon there's more surprises at heaven's gate than annywhere else in the hull unyverse. I've noticed that when a feller finds out that his opinyon conflicts with his interests he changes either one or tother mitey quick.

I've noticed that there's mighty few men that's sharp enuff to diskliver a hois in a feller's shoe, or the shoe's well blacked an' polished. I reckon of everybody 'ud get what they think they deserve in this world, yo' cood find standin' room on the top o' the Washin'ton Monument fur all the poor fokes yo' cood scrape up; and of nobody 'ud git no more'n they achshully deserve, the rich fokes woodn't be no ways crowded in the same place.

Carlo, the Finn who was shot by Mc Donald (clearly in self-defense) may not lose the leg, but the wound is a bad one. Verville's livery barn, Champion, burned yesterday—horses all saved. One turn of the M. J. poetry machine rid the town of Fitz, in such a hurry that he forgot to pay his hotel bill. Mr. Fitch can't give the copper country a second passenger train just yet, 'twouldn't pay. Will do it just as soon as he can.—M. J. 13th.

Village election.—Bosch president, Wilson clerk, Guck treasurer. John Hart attempted to turn three drunken Finns out of Mrs. Jolie's premises and was so cut with a knife that his life is in danger. Henry Finnella and Elias Lakki are in custody to await the result.—Times, Lake Linden. Mc Killop goes out, Parker comes in. Going to enlarge to eight columns. Does any man differ with us? Let him unspout [Put it in English and maybe he will].—Herald, the Soo.

A Big Thing.

W. J. Wallace will commence the 25th of this month (February) and close out to whoever may want to purchase, his real estate, except his dwelling house and store, consisting of nineteen lots, some with desirable houses and some without, but all desirable property, together with his farm property consisting of four hundred and ten acres of land with good houses and barns and sixty acres cleared, the balance is all heavily timbered with hardwood, cedar and pine. A mill power and plenty of good springs on the land. The land is situated between Gladstone and Escanaba, two and one half miles from Gladstone and five miles from Escanaba and is the natural ferding place and also the natural place for a bridge. An island in the middle of the Escanaba River and at this point always above high water making a fine place for a bridge, together with a grist mill near the bridge. I think it would be a favorable place for some enterprising man to start a village. I have had frequent opportunities to sell lots for saloons and stores at this point: the names of parties will be given on sale of land.

Also an interest in three thousand acres of mineral land and about two hundred acres of other wild land.

A half interest in a store lot in the village of Norway will also be sold.

I have a lot of young cows, two pair of well matched steers, two head of good beef cattle and one hundred and fifty cords of good dry hard wood. All of the above property will go cheap for Cash. Come early and get the benefit of my sudden notion of selling at once without reserve.

February 14 1889. W. J. WALLACE. —Dry Hard wood, at low prices. Inquire of Peter Semer.

The Age of Modern Man.

People are fond of saying that "mankind is growing wiser and weaker." But is it really so? Let us glance at the facts. According to the latest statistics there are more centenarians now living than at any previous time in the history of the world. Why? Because of the great discoveries in medical science which afford him immunity from disease that formerly devastated mankind. "Greatest of them all is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the best blood-purifier and renovator of the age. Scrofula, fever-sores, tumors, unsightly ulcers and eruptions vanish like magic beneath its beneficent influence

Broke up From Childhood.

I have been afflicted with Scrofula ever since I was a small child. To tell of all I have suffered would be a picture too dark and painful to think of. Years of misery I endured, bad digestion, no appetite, rheumatism in my feet, all these and more than these have made my life a misery. For fifteen years I followed the prescriptions of physicians, which was no more to me than water poured on the ground. Two years ago I took S. S. S., and nothing in all my wretched and unhappy life was such a blessing to me as that medicine. After taking six bottles I was a new creature, was free from pain, was clear from rheumatism, was able to sleep, to eat and work, and was well and happy. My rheumatism has been cured and has never returned. S. S. S. has certainly been a wonderful blessing to me. SUSTE E. MOSS. Gallatin, Tenn., Dec. 13, 1888.

A Sad Death.

Is it not sad to see your friends and neighbors die with kidney complaint or any disease of the urinary organs, when if they had taken Hill's English Buchu and Cubebs, it would have cured them of their disease and restored them to health!

Painful Sores.

I have been afflicted with very painful sores in times past, causing bad boils, and showing that my blood was remarkably impure. After using a great number of remedies without benefit, I at length bought Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), and it has cured me sound and well. JOHN TICE. Nile Iron Works, Hamilton, O., Dec. 27.

A Little Boy.

Last year my little boy John had breaking out with sores all over his body, which was painful and troublesome. After using other remedies for several months, while the sores grew worse, I was induced to give him Swift's Specific. He began to improve at once, and after taking three bottles the eruption was gone, and the child was altogether healed. J. F. COCK. Albany, Ga., Sept. 20, 1888.

Swift's Specific is entirely a vegetable medicine, and is the only medicine which has ever cured Blood Poison, Scrofula, Blood Humors and kindred diseases. Send for our books on Blood and Skin diseases, mailed free. The Swift Specific Co., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam, for Coughs and Colds does, it is indeed wonderful.
