The First Mill.

was completed, set up and exhibited in motion at the Cochrane works last Monday and gave eminent satisfaction, by the smoothness of its movement (there was, of course no grinding done) to the managers and all persons interested in the works. It was the next day taken down and shipped to Minneapolis where it will be exhibited at the exposition which opens there on Wednesday next, under the charge of Mr. J. S. Runciman, who has sold and put into operation several of the Cochrane mills made at the Dundas works and is thoroughly competent to point out its excellencies.

This mill is a train of "seven doubles"—fourteen pairs of rolls—five of the double pairs being 24, and two 30 inches in length and the rolls all nine inches in diameter. All are mounted on a single frame 38 feet long and five feet six inches wide and all driven by a single belt, and is what is called a 200-barrel mill, but it can be so driven as to turn out 225 barrels every 24 hours, and it can be sold for about $2,600.

We need not say that the event is of great interest to our citizens nor that each one who visited the works and saw the mill was encouraged in the belief that the mill is a good thing and the works capable of turning them out as fast as they may be called for.

Before going to Minneapolis Mr. Runciman goes to Des Moines, Iowa, to see a milling concern there which has corresponded concerning a train of Cochrane rolls and is a probable customer for one or more.

As our readers know, IRON PORT does not deal largely in "taffy" but we can not refrain from saying, in this connection, that those whose money is invested in the shares of the Cochrane company are fortunate in having as president and manager Mr. V. E. Feller, to whose pluck and energy they owe it that the company was not wrecked by the disaster that cost the lives of G. MacDonald and Mr. Cochrane, and that they are fortunate again in having secured the services of Mr. Brewster, their superintendent of the works; each is the right man for the position he occupies and, if they are spared, the Cochrane R. M. works will, we doubt not, be turning out mills to their full capacity and the company paying good dividends in '91.

SAND.

THE SURVEY for the M. & N. road hither was begun at Crystal Falls last Monday.

EP. YOCKEY's domestic affairs don't tram, somehow. He says he won't pay Alice's debts any more.

THE Society of the North Star will picnic at Eden Park on Friday, the 30th instant, and wind up with a dance in the evening.

WILL JACOB, who talked of coming here to practice homeopathy, has taken a wider field—bought a practice in Chicago and gone there.

WE LOSE ground a little this week, the ore shipments falling below 100,000. Shipments from the region are 245,129 tons and from Escanaba 94,730.

RATHBON BRO'S must have more room and to get it are extending their store 30 feet to the rear and "double decking" the extension, just as Ed. Erickson did. Good scheme.

"OH, MY; that breaks my heart," was the declaration of a Marquette man when he heard the result of the game last Sunday. Don't wonder. It turned our stomach, which is the weak spot in our innards.

NEGAUNEE offers a welcome and an honest umpire to the Marquette and Escanaba ball players. If the match is made and played it may as well be there as anywhere but no Negaunee umpire will do—that may as well be understood at the outset.

THE UNIONS of carpenters, cigar makers and tailors will celebrate "Labor Day," Monday, Sept. 2, by games and recreations at Eden Park. There will be music, dancing, eating and drinking, and all athletic sports, and, if the day be fair, no end of fun. If we can shirk labor on that day we shall take it in.

THE BANKER at Gladstone, Mr. Edwin C. Tice, seems to have been caught a little by Mr. Collom (over drafts, no doubt), as he takes a mortgage deed of lots 23 and 24, block 60, of the 1st addition to Gladstone and of lots 1, 2, 3 and 4 of section 6 and lots 2, 3 and 5 of section 7, 40-21 to secure payment of a certain promissory note for $3,000.

IF ANY one had, a week ago, suggested that the Delta County Bank or Jac. Buckholz was "shaky" he would have been laughed at, but they have both "gone up," a foot and a half, and the rest of the buildings in the block must. At present one who wants to avoid fatigue and the risk of a tumble will take the middle of the street.

DUNCAN, CLARK's monster combination opened to a big house at the Palace Family Theater last night, considering the very cold weather, and everyone was well paid for turning out. The show is out of the common rut of female minstrels, being organized to cater to lady audiences. Nothing was said or done to offend the most fastidious. Any one who can attend the opera or the Kiraly productions need not hesitate to see this company, and they are sure of large audiences during their short engagement here.—Sentinel, Milwaukee.

This company is on the boards at People's next Monday evening.

A COPY of the directory of Escanaba and Gladstone, "with the compliments of the publishers" reached us at the close of last week, inviting notice. We should be glad could we give it unqualified praise but we can not do so. It is well printed, of course, and well bound, but there our commendation must end: A more careless job than was done by those who collected the material we never saw. Opening it at hazard our eye catches "Blackwell" for Blackwell and sees "Lansing" given as the residence of A. O. B. instead of Gladstone, and that the error is not with the proof reader is evident—it is repeated every time the name occurs, a dozen times. Jac. Fontanna appears as "Fontanna," and others suffer in the same way in the Gladstone end of the book. The Escanaba end is not yet; the names of city officials, even, are misspelled or changed; French names are murdered, outright—"Bassan" for Vassan, "Blonger" for Belanger, "Nurchese" for Narcisse, and so on, indefinitely. Nor do those having English names escape the blunderer, Korten, Maquerades as "Courtan," Farrell as "Ferrell," etc.; or Irish, Glavin appearing as "Glarin" (though that is probably careless proof reading) and others in like manner. Omissions are not wanting; James S. Rogers, supervisor of 2d ward, does not appear nor Mr. Waite, of Royce & Waite. The Eagle Co. must do better, or it will be "stuck" with a dead book by some exacting community.

JOHN C. BAGNALL avers under oath that Ned Corcoran, Jim Lamb and Jerry Laughlin did on Saturday night last, when he was drunk, maltreat and abuse him and did moreover rob him of his wealth, and Justice Glaser's warrants issued on Tuesday commanding their arrest upon the charge. Meantime two of the accused parties had left town and are (on Tuesday) supposed to be in the Gogebic region, whence Sheriff McCarthy will endeavor to fetch them to answer. Had not Bagnall's drunk lasted too long (he was not fit to make oath until Tuesday morning) the arrests could have been made before the men left town, but when first brought before the magistrate to complain he wanted to clean out the court and was locked up to sober off.

SHERIFF McCarthy found Lamb and Laughlin at Fond du Lac and brought them back Thursday evening. There is no evidence against Corcoran, not even enough to call for his arrest and examination.

NINETEEN to sixteen is very sleazy ball playing for two such teams as the Marquette and Escanaba and we do not propose to do any bragging because our team had the big end of the score last Sunday. The Mining Journal will please take notice, however, that our "eye" is all right again, the echymosis reduced and the natural tint restored. But, as we have said, we can not boast; against such playing as that of Mr. Kaufman's team last Sunday we ought to have pitted Mr. Spoor's team of kids, which would have done better than McKenna's. The Escanaba club can play ball; we have seen it done; they proved it Sunday by retiring the Marquettes without a run in four of the nine innings, and they can do the other thing, as is shown by the score of the game of Sunday—five runs for the first and seven in the sixth, not one earned. The Marquettes can play, perhaps; we have not seen them do it, though.

THE North Star lost a subscriber last week by missing a "personal." We do not know that IRON PORT has suffered such loss for the same reason, but we do not know that certain of our friends have noted and mentioned such omissions and exhibited some signs of feeling, and we take this occasion to ask them if it is fair to expect us to keep tab on eight thousand people and announce the outgoing and incoming of each and the friends they entertain, unaided. We give of such matters all that we get, and gladly receive all the information given us; what more can we do unless the persons interested will drop us a line? Do that friends; then if we neglect you, kick.

BESIDES the mines noted last week as sold to the Schlesinger syndicate, the Armenia is now added to the list, and the opening of the M. & N. road, at once, and the building of a fleet of carriers by the Schlesinger syndicate is predicted. Schlesinger now controls nearly all the developed non-Bessemer properties of the Menominee range and can turn out 1,000,000 tons a year. If the M. & N. can secure that amount of work it can afford to be prompt about getting its road and docks ready.

REV. C. H. TYNDALL sends us a copy of the "Tabernacle Monthly," a publication by the society of which he is now pastor, the "Broome Street Tabernacle," New York. From it we perceive that Mr. T. has a "working billet"—there is a daily, noon prayer meeting, meetings on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and services on Sunday at 10.30 and 11 a. m. and at 2.30, 7 and 7.45 p. m.

IF THE MARQUETTE boys can not play they can make excuses and they do. They were "roasted" by the crowd and their tender feelings lacerated—they were beaten by the "bully" of an umpire, and so on, ad nauseam. Rats! Old, scurvy rats!

MR. MCKINNEY made good his boast that he could give bonds good enough for state treasurer. Abijah Weston is one of the sureties on his new bond and Abijah is very solid.

DISPATCH is the word with them all. The Ketchum's last trip from Ashtabula hither and return was made in four days and twelve hours.

THE Right Reverend George L. Gillespie, D. D., bishop of the diocese of western Michigan, will hold a visitation and administer the apostolic rite of confirmation at St. Stephen's (Episcopal) church in this city, on Tuesday evening next, the 20th inst. at 7.30 p. m.

CHARLES H. SHAFFER, of Onoto, has been appointed commissioner in charge of the Bay de Noquette and Lake Superior state road, the road and bridge authorized by the legislature last winter. We had hoped that the governor would appoint our townsman, David Oliver, but Charlie Shaffer will do—we're not kicking.

OUR NEIGHBOR HATTON lays upon our table a copy of the Northern Telegraph, published at Blackburn, England (his former home). We note in it three and a half columns of advertising by an American concern—the "Linotype Co."—of the type-setting machine it manufactures—certificates of its value by De Vinson, Rand McNally & Co., Victor Lawson, Whitlaw Reid and other Americans.

THE SHIPS of the Mutual line take the broom for speed as well as for carrying, the Corsica's big load securing one and the time of the Cambria on her last trip up taking the other. She arrived here Monday night only forty hours and ten minutes from Ashtabula and her actual running time (her engine having been stopped en route) was but 39.50, a speed of 16 miles an hour or better. They are flyers and are driven for all there is in them.

SOMETHING threw a car of freight No. 23 off the track Tuesday and when the timber from a car ahead of it began to come into the caboose and knock him about Mat Fogarty, the conductor, concluded it was time for him to "git" and he got, as promptly as he could. Some bruises and scratches he suffered but, luckily, no broken bones. One of the brakemen got a sprained ankle, jumping, lest worse befall him, and the road was obstructed for an hour or two.

IN THE GRAVEL used upon the street are large numbers of bowlders which will gradually work to the top, in use, and be thrown aside or, remaining on the roadway, be a detriment to it. If tramps and vags were furnished with hammers and made to work out their "ten days" cracking these bowlders into angular fragments it would be a good job, eh? and the broken stone would "pack" in the street and the vags and tramps would pack themselves out of town.

THE Marquette club can play ball. It did it at Ishpeming Wednesday, beating the Ishpeming (with an imported battery) in a hotly contested game of eleven innings, by a score of seven to six. It has challenged our club to play, on neutral grounds, the same nines that were engaged last Sunday, here, for $500 a side. Nobody here will put a dollar on that nine. It had not the catcher, Welsh, and it had two of the weakest of the clubs players in the field. If the challenge allowed the Escanaba club to make its best nine of players heretofore enlisted (no new men) it might, perhaps, be accepted.

THE CITY COUNCIL of Gladstone "got hot" over the treasury affair and the members used naughty words to and regarding each other. Mr. Patton, one of the aldermen (and the only one not committed to the treasurer's fortunes through thick and thin) was compelled to resign and the rest are trying to drive him out of town by getting him discharged from the employ of the railway company. In spite of the backing of the council, however, the treasurer will probably be brought to book and made to show his hand, proceedings under a writ of quo warranto having been commenced early in the week.

COLLUM will not be "let up" it seems, having been kept in jail all the week and several, separate charges of forgery entered against him. Nor will he "lie down," but will make a stubborn fight, denying everything and declaring the signatures of Mr. Blaisdell genuine. As the story is told in dispatches and newspapers he would seem to have hedged up his way in that direction by his words and acts at the time of the first discovery of the amount of the Blaisdell paper upon which he had raised money but dispatches and newspaper reports are not evidence and the outcome in court may show another state of affairs. One act, though, is evident; he did turn over his Gladstone property to Mr. Blaisdell's representative and that gentleman is in possession though two other deeds of the same property have since been made, to other parties, and are now filed for record here. The second of the deeds (as they appear on the record) is to Josiah Thompson, Jr., and the third to George McNair. Attachments and liens have been placed upon the same property until, as a Gladstone man stated the case in our hearing, "they are knee-deep." Work of development and improvement of the property is, of course, suspended. The dredge was towed down the bay last Tuesday morning en route to its home port. If it be true that Collom had intent to commit suicide in the event of detection, he has evidently reconsidered that point—he does not "say die" now.

BY THE COUNCIL, Monday evening, the sum of $500 was appropriated to aid the completion of the highway between the city and the farming neighborhood on Ford river. Of the amount $200 is to be expended by a committee composed of Ald. Moe, Lyons and Sullivan, at their discretion, and the balance to be paid on the completion of the work.

WHATEVER of reprobation shall be found herein concerning the Escanaba ball team must be taken and considered as "crossed out." The boys "made us mad" Sunday but their work at Ishpeming atones for former short-comings—wipes the slate clean of adverse criticism. In the first pair-off they were matched with Negaunee and easily disposed of that team—19 to 9. In the play-off Hancock (which had beaten Republic) and Marquette (which had beaten Ishpeming) were first to play and Marquette made no show at all, the copper country lads piling up 20 runs while the pets could find but three, and then there was a game—Escanaba and Hancock for first place and prize—and Billy Hamm has the cash in his trousers pocket. But it was not won by "luck" on one side or carelessness upon the other; it was "play ball" from start to finish and the score was Escanaba four, Hancock three—a good game, for losers as well as for winners. We knew the boys could play ball; had seen them do it; but hardly hoped that they would wake up and get there at Ishpeming—Sunday's slouching had shaken our faith. Marquette attempted "a little Marquette game" to beat them—lent two of the best men in its team—Myers and "the coon"—to Negaunee, in hope to shut them out on the first trial, but it did not serve and reacted on themselves in the game with Hancock, as those men were not allowed to take their places in that game. The band was out to welcome the team on its return yesterday morning. It goes to Iron Mountain to-day to play there to-morrow.

THE heirs (and H. A. Burt, administrator of the estate) of the late John Burt, having something more than a year ago brought suit against Richard Mason and F. H. Van Cleve to set aside a certain deed by which the said John Burt and his wife conveyed to F. H. Van Cleve lots 2 and 3 of section 22, town 40 north of range 22 west (being the east end of Saunders' Point and now embraced within the city of Gladstone), evidence in support of their bill of complaint was taken before Hon. E. P. Royce, circuit court commissioner, last week. The grounds on which the suit is based and the annulment of the deed asked for are, as we gather them, these: First, that Mason misrepresented to John Burt the value of the lands, and second, that at the time of the transfer John Burt was not competent, by reason of mental and physical infirmity, to transact business or make such a transfer. Hon. F. O. Clark is counsel for the heirs.

COLLUM was arraigned Tuesday and held for trial on eleven charges of forgery. Bail was fixed at $51,000, which his friends will no doubt furnish. A Chicago man tells the Inter Ocean that Collom "was one of the solid men of Gladstone," and counted "a far-seeing man" there, and that his downfall knocks the town cavew; all which is to be taken "with an onion." Gladstone people said, always, of Collom "either he knows something we don't or he's crazy;" and Gladstone is no worse off for what he has done than before he begun—is indeed benefited. He has dropped a good deal of money there and those who get his property will have to drop more to make it available for their purpose.

OUR POLICE ought to understand (should be made to understand if need be) that men who do not work and have no visible means of support, yet who have money to spend, are suspicious characters and liable to arrest, and that it is their duty as guardians of the peace and welfare of the community to "run them in." Did the force do its whole duty in this direction there would be fewer drunken men held up and robbed, fewer drunken men to suffer in that way, for these fellows get the men drunk first to rob them after. The police force does not seem, fully, to understand either its duties or its powers.

A SEASON of special, evangelistic effort is now in progress at the Methodist Episcopal church in our city. The pastor is assisted by Mrs. L. O. Robinson, of Indianapolis, a woman specially adapted and entirely consecrated to the work, and the effect of her labors is already apparent in an awakened interest, especially among the young. Services every evening in the week (except, perhaps, Saturday) and at the usual hours on Sunday. The public is cordially and earnestly invited to attend.

YOU are positive that this will wash!" taking up a corner of the calico in her thumb and finger and looking at it severely through her spectacles.

"Positive, ma'am," replied the clerk. It was his business to sell goods, and he had sold them so long that he could affirm unblushingly that anything would wash, from blue denim to mosquito netting, provided he was not required to explain in so many words what portion of the color and fabric would be left after the operation.

"Then I will take ten yards," "Yes'm," with celerity, as he began unfolding the goods.

While he was performing this pleasing task a drummer, without whom the country store is as incomplete as it would be without calico, stepped in at the door, and setting his sample case just inside, he wiped his perspiring brow with a gay silk handkerchief, as he said: "Mr. White in?" a sort of negative question, for his comprehensive glance about the store revealed that Mr. White was not in unless in hiding behind the counter.

"No, but he will be in about ten minutes," replied the clerk; "he stepped down street to see Mr. Green."

"Spring's a good time for greens," said the drummer, vaguely. In fact he was tired, cross and half down with spring sickness, and he hardly knew himself of what complexion his attempted joke was; whether he had reference to Mr. Green, the piece of light green calico in the clerk's hand, or to the withered maiden lady who had just taken young Yardstick's word so innocently.

"To, he, he," giggled the clerk, merrily; it was a part of his business to look smiling whether he understood the point of a joke or not. "Step right down to the end of the store, sir, and you'll find a pitcher of prime lemonade on the counter. I made it myself and can warrant it," with a knowing wink at the drummer. "Ten yards did you say, miss?"

"I think ten yards will be enough." She was thin and aged, with a row of little curls hanging in mathematical order from under a hat of girlish design, and she looked anxiously at the clerk through her glasses. "I want it made with three ruffles and an overskirt."

"Then I should think you would need twelve yards." The youth had found that an amateur knowledge of dress-making was of use to him, and had noticed with praiseworthy tact how many yards various styles and sizes of dresses required.

"Twelve yards, then," said the maiden, with a grateful blush; "I don't want to skimp it."

Meantime the drummer had found the lemonade, and after a generous taste had pronounced it good; indeed, as the clerk's wink had hinted, there was that mysterious addition to its cooling qualities known among the initiated as "a stick," whatever that may be, and the drummer smacked his lips with a satisfied smile, and seated himself on an inverted soap box to await Mr. White's return.

A drummer without his cigar is a rarity in the commercial world, so it was only a very few moments until the licensee of a first-rate brand of the article was ascending in odoriferous ways, while the drummer's stick head leaned back upon the edge of the counter in ecstatic reverie.

Mr. White had one weakness, an inordinate love for cats, of which he had a number and these parishioners upon his bounty were petted and indulged until all the intelligence their feline natures were capable of was developed.

Many a hungry and homeless child might envy the care these pets received. Moses, the great gray cat sitting upon the counter at this moment, in particular, for he was an especial pet, sleek, well fed and of a monstrous size.

Moses was accustomed to being petted and stroked by the customers at the store, out of deference to Mr. White's well-known peculiarity, and as the drummer's head rested there so near his headquarters, he looked at him curiously as if wondering what sort of a man this was who could remain so indifferent to his cattish claims to notice.

He was evidently puzzling over a question of etiquette in the matter, and soon reached out one paw and gently dabbed at the drummer's head—no response. Again, with his claws partially unheated, Moses' long forepaw patted the mysterious oily head—still no response, for the drummer's mind was calculating two per cent off and six per cent for cash too busily to be lightly disturbed.

There was nobody in this part of the store but the chore boy and he was giggling furiously as he watched Moses introducing himself. Now the gentleman of samples detected a cat as earnestly as Mr. White loved one; he was frequently obliged of prices, spring trade and similar topics, whitening a white bunny, as he did so.

The chore boy had gone out, the maiden in the front of the store was watching some business with minute care, and the drummer still held the cat, though his very soul revolved at the operation. He felt his anti-feline nature stirring within him as Moses, as there on his legs, his big, green eyes peacefully closed in a nap, the very picture of animal content, and a wild desire to do something by which to get revenge upon the creature who had so unobtrusively thrust himself upon his unwilling notice took unholy possession of him.

Mr. White was for the moment absorbed in a mental study of the stick he was whitening, together with the needed dry goods he was about to order, and looking quickly about to see that no one was observing him, the wicked commercial man pressed the end of his burning cigar against the pink nose of the sleeping cat.

Poor Moses! His misplaced confidence had a rude awakening, and he jumped into the air like a rocket, spluttering and yowling like a small steam engine, lighting in Mr. White's lap and tearing over his shoulder with such force that the good man, with the shock, tipped over into the salt barrel, bringing it, himself and the chair down to the floor with noisy celerity.

"Bless us, Mr. White," said the drummer, innocently, "has the cat gone mad?"

Moses in his pain and rage bounded upon the counter and scolded toward the maiden with blazing eyeballs and tail of a monstrous size, and hearing the word "mad" from the drummer's lips, she gave one horrified scream, bounded up on a chair, and gathering her skirts in one hand she waved her parasol, which she had caught up as a weapon of defense, with the other.

An old lady was just entering the door with a basket of eggs as Moses went out, and, not looking to the ways of his going, he rushed between her feet so unexpectedly that she lost her balance, and over she went, eggs and all.

The clerk had his hands full between the old lady, the eggs and the hysterical maiden in the chair, while the delectful drummer in the rear was officiously active in assisting Mr. White to his feet, dusting his clothing and exclaiming upon the surprising performance of the cat.

Bad to relate, after order was restored once more, the undeserving creature received his expected order from his unsuspecting patron, though if he could have seen the blister which poor Moses was nursing behind the barn he would no doubt have received a liberal supply of boot leather instead, and justly enough it must be allowed.

Mrs. F. M. HOWARD.

NOTES FOR FISHERMEN.

A skate is not an ice fish to eat. Epicures say that a pipe-fish should always be served smoking hot.

A man who catches a bellows-fish usually lets the fish do all the blowing.

The torpedo-fish is very rarely caught by a line, as it is no sooner sees a boat than it goes off.

The reason that the fish in the Mammoth cave have no eyes is that they do not live in the sea.

A black bass was caught in Long Island sound the other day. It was perfectly white, with golden spots.

A school of weak-fish held a recitation near the Atlantic cable recently, and the operator in New York overheard them declaiming the verb "to bite."

A perch belongs to the acanthopterygian order of fishes. This sounds funny if you try to say it fast.

The passengers on a southern steamer were treated not long since to a serenade by a troop of drum-fish.

In the South Sea Islands silver-fish are used as money, and one weighing four ounces passes for a quarter.

A hammer-head shark listened to a dude on board of a yacht telling some improbable story, and immediately "nalled" him.

A party of young men were lost off the banks of Newfoundland, and only reached land by the aid of a pilot-fish which towed the boat to land.

John Jones, a farmer in New Jersey, recently found a turtle weighing three hundred pounds in his well-bucket. He will have the bucket to prove his story.

At a recent dinner of the G. A. R. the members rebelled because a gar-fish was on the menu. They said that it was not right to make puns on their name.

Fishermen always guess at the weight of a cat-fish, because they say that if nature had intended them to be weighed in the regular way the cat-fish would have been supplied with scales.—Judge.

A New Alliment from Wheat.

According to Le Genie Civil, Dr. Dujardin-Besumetz recently exhibited at the Paris Academy of Medicine a new alimentary substance—"fromentine"—which is obtained from wheat by the aid of special mill-tones. Fromentine is the embryo of wheat reduced to flour and deprived of the oil which it contains. The substance contains three times more nitrogenous substance than meat, and a strong proportion of sugar. Thus, the amount of nitrogenous matter in it is fifty-one per cent, while that of the richest meat, mutton, is but twenty-one per cent, and the proportion of digestible substance reaches eighty-seven per cent of the total weight. Hence it would appear that it might advantageously replace powdered meat as a concentrated food. It can be used for making soups, and even for making biscuits, the taste of which would not be disagreeable.

The wheat germs employed are a by-product in the Schweitzer process of manufacturing a flour which can be kept for a long time without deteriorating.

MODERN PROVERBS.

He becomes fond of lying who gets weary of being upright.

Virtue ought to be our highest ambition, humility the end of that ambition.

They have made a sure progress in being transformed into fools who look upon their forefathers as the sons of an ape.

Why shall I fear death since this world is but a cellar beneath the great mansion which my Lord has been erecting for me? Shall I not rejoice when death lets me out of this dark abode?

Love is the key to "Home, Sweet Home," and they who try any other in wedlock must stand out with the storms of life sweeping over their heads. BACONAS.

FOR RURAL HEADERS.

The character of the milk is largely in the pasture field. If the cow eats badly flavored weeds, she will give badly flavored milk.

Rye straw, cut short, is the best material for packing eggs in barrels. Wheat and oats are more susceptible of retaining moisture.

WAGONS and carts that are used daily should have the axles well greased at least three times a week. It lessens the work of the horses.

FERTILE quarters cause lice on all classes of stock, and the vermin multiply very rapidly. An animal that is infested with vermin can not be kept in good condition, even with the best of feeding.

For home use a hog should never weigh more than 500 pounds net—550 pounds is better. Spring pigs of any improved breed can be brought to that size by the middle of December and at a little cost.

After the crops are harvested and stored away is often the best season to secure good drainage in the orchard and garden, and it is a very important item in securing a strong healthy growth of the trees.

CORN cut for fodder while in bloom, either to be dried or siloed, contains but thirteen per cent of solids. If left until ears are formed and the kernels begin to glaze it will have twenty-five per cent of solids.

If a crop is removed and another garden crop is not required, sow the land with rye; if cows are kept—the waste of a moderate garden will go far toward keeping one cow, and the rye will form acceptable food in both fall and spring. Pease may be used for the same purpose, but they end with the season.

A CORNER of the barn or an outbuilding devoted to the purpose of a work-shop, in which a bench can be placed, will enable the farmer to do many small jobs that otherwise entail loss of time in sending to the wood-worker or blacksmith. Only a few tools are required, and the cost will be but a small sum.

Sheep naturally huddle together, and this is especially hard on those poor in flesh from age or other causes. All the ticks in the flock will find their way on to the poorer sheep. They will be crowded from feeding troughs by their stronger companions. The only remedy is to keep weak and strong in separate apartments, putting only a few of the poorer together, giving them especial care.

The digestive organs soon get out of order when grain is fed to the exclusion of grass or bulky food. This is true of all classes of stock and also of poultry. It is better to feed hay alone than to allow a surfeit of grain, especially in summer. A variety of food promotes digestion and prevents disease. It is also more economical to give a variety, as less food is then required.

As a general rule the natural life of animals is about five times as long as the period required to attain maturity. This rule may be modified by artificial conditions. Thus certain breeds of cattle, sheep and swine have been brought by careful systems of breeding and feeding to mature at a much earlier age than the original period, without materially shortening the length of life. But these exceptions do not affect the general rule.

WOMEN WORTH MILLIONS.

Mrs. GARFIELD is a millionaire, judged by the standard of income.

Mrs. PARAN JEVENS' husband made $5,000,000 in hotels and left her the Victoria and a share in the Fifth Avenue.

Mrs. MOSES TAYLOR, the widow of the famous dry-goods merchant, is carefully estimated to be worth not less than $15,000,000.

Mrs. ROBERT L. STUART, the widow of the successful sugar merchant, inherited from him $500,000 outright and a life interest in $10,000,000.

Mrs. EDWIN STEVENS, who owns "Castle Point" at Hoboken, is one of the richest widows in America, and counts her wealth by millions.

Two elderly Misses Rhinelander have $5,000,000 between them, and bid fair to leave it to collateral heirs with wonderfully fat accumulations.

Mrs. MARSHALL O. ROBERTS, who is often pointed out as the most desirable part among fashionable widows, has a life interest in $1,000,000.

Mrs. ROBERT WINTHROP has a private fortune more than adequate to the maintenance of even such a fine old family name as hers. She has $10,000,000.

Mrs. ROBERT L. LIVINGSTON, who is Elbridge Gerry's mother-in-law, is worth $5,000,000. Mrs. Bradley Martin has $3,000,000 of her own besides all her husband's money.

Mrs. FREDERICK STEVENS that was, now the Duchesse de Dino, is a New Yorker still to the tune of ten real golden millions of her own, and now, one may say, the Duke's, too.

"The Widow Hammersley" that was, now her Grace the Duchesse of Marlborough, has a life interest in $5,000,000. Mrs. Augustus Schell, widow of the famous banker, has twelve solid millions of money while she lives.

Mrs. W. E. DODDS is worth $4,000,000, much of the income of which she sends to the heathens. Mrs. Robert Goelet is worth $3,000,000, and Mrs. John C. Green, the widow of the Princeton College patron, is reputed to be worth $10,000,000.

Mrs. CHAS. WADSWORTH, who lives in Washington, but is a New Yorker, is said to be worth $1,000,000. Miss Sarah Hitchcock is not only a society woman, but is said to have in her own right several millions with which to command society. Mrs. Levi P. Norton is said to have well over $1,000,000 of her own.

Mrs. JAMES P. KERNOCHEN has $1,500,000 in money and real estate at a low estimate. By the same apportionment Mrs. John C. Green has at least $3,000,000, and Mrs. Mason Jones, so often called by queer old people "Lady Mary Mason Jones," she has $1,000,000 of her own and is contesting the Hammersley will besides.

READ AND REMEMBER.

The richest man, whatever his lot, is he who's content with what he has got.

The man who knows himself may not always be proud of his acquaintance.

Vices sting us even in our pleasures, but virtue consoles us even in our pains.

That virtue which requires to be ever guarded is scarcely worth the sentinel.

Be earnest and don't worry. Inspiration is good. Zeal is better. Work is best of all.

We only know ourselves and what we really are when the force of circumstances brings us out.

Sixes and satins put out the kitchen fire.

He who would make a fool of himself will find many to help him.

The man who boasts that he is ready to shed his last drop of blood is apt to be particular about the first drop.

To be the friend of a sovereign you must be without passion, without ambition, without egotism, clear-sighted and far-sighted; in short, not a man.

We are not more ingenious in searching out bad motives for good actions when performed by others, than good motives for bad actions when performed by ourselves.

Wright, president of the Otter Creek Lumber company, owning a mill at Aral, twenty miles north of Frankfort, in a quarrel over the collection of taxes on the property, last Saturday, killed the under sheriff of the county, Neal Marshall, and Dr. Frank E. Thurber. A dispatch from Racine, Wis., Wright's home, says "No great surprise will be manifest when the news is known, as Wright was of a vicious and quarrelsome disposition. He is a brother of ex-postmaster H. W. Wright, now a heavy lumber dealer at Merrill Wis., and at one time, some years ago, he attacked his brother with a club and threatened to kill him, but was knocked down and disarmed. Upon another occasion he assaulted an uncle named Martin Knowles also cut one Neil Johnson in the face with a knife. through policy to conceal this trait in his character, but his natural instincts led him to get up a fight with the species as unerringly as if he had been a canine, and when Moses, with his claws fully unheated, drew his paw through his hair and left a decided scratch across his cranium, he turned with quick wrath, which was now assuaged by discovering who the aggressor was.

The eyes of the chore boy were upon him, however, and he well knew that if he gave way to his wrath no bill of goods would ornament his order-book at that time or any other. "Love me, love my cats," being one of Mr. White's mottoes in business as elsewhere.

He valued his sentiments under a deceitful smile, therefore, as he said: "Ah, puss, good kitty. Fine old fellow."

Thus as all Moses wanted, and down he came from his perch upon the drummer's lap for his customary petting.

It was an opportune move, for Mr. White was coming down the room and he smiled blandly upon the commercial person with great good humor as he saw him stroking his favorite's glossy fur with pretended amiability.

Mr. White seated himself upon a chair near by, and leaning back against a barrel half full of salt, he began talking glibly

JOKE AND JEST.

AN English writer says the girls of England "stand alone." The girls of England perhaps own onions.
TEACHER—"You may tell me, Michael, what makes Joseph a good ruler." Mickey (with a burst of enthusiasm)—"Because he was so straight, mum."
"PAPA, how does the sausage-maker buy his meat?" "By the pound, my son."
"Where does he generally buy it, papa?" "At the pound, my son."
Mrs. Blossom—"Is there any change in your pockets this morning, my dear?" Mr. Blossom—"None at all, my love. They are just as they were yesterday, thank you."
FRENCH NOT HER STRONG POINT. "So you were at Mrs. Marrable's dinner yesterday. What sort of a menu did they give you?" "I really can't tell you, for I didn't take any. It's a thing I very seldom touch."
A GENTLEMAN taking an apartment said to the landlady: "I assure you, madam, I never left a lodging but my landlady shed tears." "I hope, sir," said she, "it was not because you went away without paying."

In a recently published letter of Macaulay's is found the statement that "the partialities of an author for what he has written are as nothing as compared to the partialities of a publisher for what he has bought."
How INCONSISTENT some men are, to be sure! The same man who will cheerfully pay a dollar and a half to hear a woman whistle has been known to threaten instant annihilation to the office boy for doing the same thing.
MISTRESS—"Mercy on me, what a kitchen! Every pot, pan and dish is dirty, the table looks like a junk shop, and—why, it will take you a week to get things cleaned up! What have you been doing?" "Sure, mum, the young laddies has just been down here showing me how they roast a potato at the cooking school."
A BERLIN judge the other day when addressing a locksmith who appeared as witness, spoke as follows: "I should have thought you would dissuade your workmen from going to law for such a trifle." Witness—"That's what I did! I said: 'Children, said I, 'the clerk at the lawyer's will take your coat, and the lawyer will strip off your shirt, and as for the judge, why, man, he'll skin you alive!' You see, I talked sensibly to the folks like that, but it was all of no use!"

DINING-ROOM DAINTIES.

RASPBERRY VINEGAR.—Put two quarts of raspberries into a stone jar, and pour a quart of good elder vinegar over them; let them stand in this way two days, drain off and pour over two quarts more of fresh raspberries, let stand as before, and then strain them and add a pound of sugar to every one and a half pints of juice; boil ten minutes, bottle and seal.
SPICED CURRANTS, to serve with meat, are an agreeable relish. To four quarts of currants, washed and stemmed, add two and one-half quarts of light brown sugar, one spoonful of ground cinnamon, one of ground cloves and half a spoonful of ground allspice, also one pint of wine vinegar. Mash the currants, stir often and cook slowly for two hours.
A GOOD STEW.—Take a pound or more of lamb or veal cut from the best end of the neck. Cut this into small pieces, say an inch square or less, put it over the fire and let it simmer a quarter of an hour, adding to every pound of meat a pint of fresh, green shelled peas and sufficient water just to cover them. When nicely done, season with salt, pepper, butter and cream.

GERMAN PUFFS.—Put half a pound of butter and a teaspoonful of milk on the fire; have ready in a bowl a cupful of sifted flour; when the milk and butter have boiled stir the mixture gradually into the flour and beat till perfectly smooth. Beat six eggs, leaving out the whites of two; add three tablespoons of sugar and a little grated lemon rind. Drop the batter into small puff pans and bake the puffs in a moderately hot oven.
LIGHT PUDDING.—To a pint of water add the juice and thinly pared rind of a lemon, and boil in a saucepan; remove from the fire and stir in half a pound of butter and a cupful of sugar; then mix in very gradually and smoothly half a pound of flour, and let it cool; then add six well beaten eggs and a teaspoonful of baking powder, half fill some buttered cups and bake for twenty minutes in a quick oven; serve with a wine sauce and currant or any kind of jelly desired.
MUSHROOMS WITH TOAST.—Rub the tops of your mushrooms with a piece of flannel dipped in salt. Have some butter heated in a saucepan into which put the mushrooms with salt, cayenne and ground mace; let them stew gently until the butter has almost disappeared, when add cream and the grated rind of a lemon. Set back where they will only simmer until quite done. Have toasted bread cut in rounds, serve the mushrooms on them, and put a squeeze of lemon juice over each.

ODD OCCURRENCES.

RECENT earthquakes at Susanyville, Cal., turned the water of many springs, and also of Eagle lake, to a milky white.
A CHARLESTON druggist advertised that the milk of a cocoon would remove freckles, and 4,000 of the nuts were sold at retail in two days to woman folks. He got a commission of all sales.
CHARLOTTE HARBOR, Fla., is said to be so full of fish that it is actually running over. One day recently fully thirty pounds of fish jumped out on shore and were picked up by a citizen. There was one fifteen-pound roach, three five-pound snooks and five jack-fish.
DURING a recent hail-storm at Mount Dora, Fla., the hail drifted in banks. Many of the stones were an inch and a half in diameter, and several families stocked their loo chests with a supply that lasted three days. The hail did great damage to crops and window glass.
A CURIOS feature in ornithology is reported from Eckington, Yorkshire, Eng., where a hen hatched two chickens from one egg, both chickens being in perfect state except that they are joined together on one side of the membranes of the wing. Beyond this they walk about and feed in the usual manner.
A CITIZEN of Orange, N. J., had a hen which walked as though overloaded, and lifting her, he was surprised at her weight. Being of a curious turn of mind he killed her, performed an autopsy and found twenty-six egg yolks inclosed in one soft shell covering. Each yolk was full-sized and lacked only the white to be a perfect egg. The whole bunch was as large as a cocoon and weighed three and one-fourth pounds.
A LOUISVILLE (Ky.) couple were engaged to be married nearly fifty years ago. Soon after their engagement the man went to the war with Mexico. When he returned he had not money to begin housekeeping. As the young lady had a good home they waited. He enlisted in the Federal army at the outbreak of the civil war, but after the war was over was still unable to support a wife. Recently he got back pension of $1,700. He at once hunted up his old love, who was still waiting for him, and the pair were married.

THIS PAPER MAY BE FOUND ON FILE at Gen. F. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (75 Spruce St.) where advertising contracts will be made for it in New York.

BOB GARRETT is all right again.

AMERICA is not big enough for Barnum. He has gone to Europe with his show.

THE STRIKE of the coke makers was soon over and was a success. The men got their demand, in full.

MAYOR CREGIER says that "gambling will not be allowed" and adds, under his breath, "to be interfered with."

THE president of the French republic is such an admirer of American institutions that he takes lessons in poker.

CORPORAL TANKER may have made mistakes; what mere mortal has not? but none that counted against the "men who wore the blue."

GEN. ALGER for commander in chief of the G. A. R.? well, yes; if the boys insist. Only one year, though; we shall want him on another job in '92.

ATLANTA is, after Chattanooga, the most progressive of southern cities but she was silly enough to burn her postmaster in effigy because he appointed a colored clerk.

"PREHISTORIC monster found dead" according to the Detroit Journal. Boodie alderman? oh, no; they never die; just a megalosaurus thirty feet long and fifteen tall.

PAT GRANT goes for John Finerty in a letter occupying five columns of the Inter Ocean. Too long, Pat; too long by 75 per cent. If your rounds are as long as that the fight's a draw, sure.

TO PERFECT the title to a piece of Detroit real estate there were recorded last Saturday a marriage agreement dated in 1796, a deed dated in 1804, a quitclaim dated in 1805 and another in 1824, all in the French language.

DR. HAMMOND says of the so-called "elixir" of which so much is said just now, that neither Dr. Brown-Sequard nor himself claim anything more for it than tonic properties, and that in that respect even its value is yet undetermined. Sounds more like reason—than does.

CARELESS target practice with a rifle at Gladstone last Monday, resulted in the death of a man named Conn. The rifleman was near the railway station but his bullet ranged down Delta avenue, passed through the hat of one man, not wounding him, and through or into Conn's head.

POST CARDS are hereafter to be in three sizes and of better material. There will be a little dandy one for ladies and duds, one of the size now used for the commonalty, and a big one for merchants and business men. There will be an effort to have congress make a one cent rate for half-ounce letters, too.

A TRAIN on the Wis. Central road was held up and robbed by one man near Chippewa Falls August 8. The Shawano man has shifted his ground a little it seems. He's a nifty beggar—pity he does not put his coolness and pluck to better use. He wastes it in petty robberies that net-him nothing. Could ought to have him; he's worth a dozen like Jim Fisk.

THE ORDER of K. of L. is moribund. Its growth was phenomenal, its decadence has been proportionally rapid. Then, too, its master workman attempted an impossibility—tried to make the order a school instead of a fighting machine and finds out that with the material in his hand the scheme is impracticable. Martin Irons or Tom Barry could have held it together longer but in their hands it would have become dangerous— anarchistic, and it is better that it should die of inanition under Powderly than be crushed by the public in self-defense. Requiescat in pace.

THE SIOUX reservation is to be thrown open to settlement but no rush, as to Oklahoma, will take place. Congress must act before the lands can be entered and when that is done comes the question of the value of the lands for agricultural purposes, as to which Gen. Foster, chairman of the commission, says "my impression is that they are not worth much." The cattle growers will get them, probably, as the whole body of land is valuable for grazing. The trouble as to agriculture is the lack of moisture and the only means of overcoming that is irrigation and the only supply of water for that purpose the Missouri, river, a bad stream to handle.

IF ENERGETIC work will accomplish it the Brown County fair, to be held in Green Bay on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 10, 11, 12 and 13, will be the biggest fair in this part of the state and the largest ever held here. Every farmer should take an especial pride in it. While contributions from the cities are desired and encouraged the more the better, yet the farmers should not lose sight of the fact that the prime object of the fair is to aid, encourage and stimulate the agricultural, stock raising and dairying interests. It is too often the case that farmers come in and say, "I have a better animal than this of my neighbor's that took the prize, but I did not bring it." Let every farmer bring the best of his flocks and crops and compare notes with his neighbors as to breed or methods of culture and then the true objects of the fair will be realized. Liberal premiums are offered to induce competition, but the mere winning of a prize is far from being the only advantage to be gained from a fair. Brown county has a big reputation all through the state for its fairs and let us not only maintain but increase it this year.—Advocate, Green Bay.

AS THE SEASON advances it becomes plain that the advance in ore freights customary at this time of the year, if at all, will be insignificant as compared with former years, and will play no role whatever in the sale of what little ore is still uncovered. Owing to the early opening of navigation this year and the continued rush eastward of ore, the stock piles have been swept away much earlier than is usually the case, so that ore shipments are practically restricted to daily production. Naturally there would be a falling off in freights were it not for the grain trade, which will be large out of Duluth this year, so that taking everything into consideration, the tonnage released from the ore trade will naturally fall into the grain trade without any serious disturbances as to freight rates. During the past week some additional sales of standard Bessemer have been recorded at full quotations. Almost every mining company will exceed its original estimate of production this year, and there is no telling what the aggregate will be. That the total will exceed six million tons is quite certain, but everything points to a higher figure, so that a considerably larger output may be expected. Another important feature of the market is a contract just closed for supplying a series of eastern furnace plants, situated mainly in the Lehigh Valley, with lake ores, both Bessemer and high in phosphorus, for a period of six years. If the ore continues as satisfactory as it was found to be this year, the contract will mean an additional output of from 800,000 to 900,000 tons of ore to take the place of a mixture of low grade native and imported ores. The experience of the recent past seems to be that lake Superior ores are getting cheaper, by reason of the increase in mining, as the southern ore, which has cut from slopes, is getting dearer on account of the cost of production. There are those who claim that as soon as the expense of timbering and shafting the southern ore mines will become an important factor in the southern iron industry there will be enough of a change in prices to keep the southern product from any extended shipment. Barring unforeseen events, the present year bids fair to be the banner season in the lake Superior ore trade, a statement which will be received with a great deal more confidence when it is said that there is no sign of a boom anywhere, and that the business transacted has been purely and wholly of a legitimate character.—Iron Trade Review, Aug 8.

FREE-TRADE can never be fair trade. So far as free trade is fair we should have it, but so far as it interferes with either the establishment or maintenance of any of our essential industries it is pernicious; and it is the duty of a nation in self defense to impose protective duties. If protection protects, it is as natural as the law of self-defense, which is the first law of nature, and which is the law on which all criminal jurisprudence is founded. Mr. Henry George, in his work on "Protection or Free Trade," says: "Free trade is the natural trade—the trade that goes on in the absence of artificial restrictions. It is protection that had to be invented." We answer to this so had criminal law to be invented. This does not prove, however, that criminal law is detrimental to the interest of society, as would soon be found out were all criminal law to be abolished. Self-interest alone can not be proved to bring about the most beneficent results for the community. It is often very far from being enlightened, and frequently morally degraded.

An individual, actuated by his own selfish motives, will buy almost always in the cheapest market, no matter what industries suffer or what proportion of the population his action may tend to throw out of employment. He may not have sufficient foresight to see that his actions may not always conduce to the interests of the society to which he belongs, or even ultimately to his own best interests. Self-interest leads the thief to steal, and he does not realize how his self interest has misled him until he is lodged in jail. Professor Perry himself says: "Each man's right of freedom is limited, of course, by every other man's right of freedom, which he is not at liberty to infringe; and also in certain respects by what is called the general good, of which the judge must be the government under which he lives." In fact, it is now conceded by the leading economists that the doctrine of laissez faire has no scientific validity. The free trader is very tender of the interest of the consumer, but ignores that of the producer; while it is by no means clear that free trade is the best policy for the consumer, but that ultimately it is just the reverse. All men are consumers, but they are not all consumers of all products.—American Economist.

PERHAPS it is but another "blue glass" craze but if it is there is a large amount of robust lying just now going on about the Brown-Sequard "elixir." From all points; east, west and south, daily, come reports of experiments made by physicians whose names ought to be guarantees of good faith in the experiments and absolute truthfulness in the reports, and in almost every instance startling results are given. Men who have been helpless and bed-ridden with paralysis and rheumatism are relieved by a single dose of the "elixir" and throw away their crutches, leave their beds and obtain relief from pain and complete use of their members. In the rare instances in which no results are reported there seems to have been nothing to be remedied, and in no instance has any evil result been reported. It is nonsense, of course, to talk of making the old young again, but it does seem as if there was something in it—these heretofore truthful people can not all have been overtaken by an epidemic of lying—faith can not be credited with cures of cripples who did not know what treatment they were getting or what results to expect.

PAT GRANT, the literary "railroad laborer," is just now paying his respects to John Finerty and we hope John enjoys it as well as the public does, but we don't believe so.

NEW postmaster for Quinnesec—appointed last Friday, week—Patrick Wildman. A. H. Mallen goes out.

BODIES are still uncovered, daily, by the excavators at Johnston, and will be, they say, for a year to come.

JAMES REDPATH knows who "Arthur Richmond" is but he won't tell. He says, however, that it is not Julian Hawthorne.

THE English jury having found Mrs. Maybrick guilty of murder and the judge having sentenced her to be hanged, a great many Englishmen want the "home office," in which the power to do so is lodged, to give her another chance, or to commute her sentence.

WE DO dodge some of the provisions of the liquor law, and we do play ball (after morning service in the churches) Sunday, but our log owners don't stand off the tax collector with rifles and kill him if he persists. It is in lower Michigan that such occurrences take place.

THEY'RE having no end of trouble with defective and fraudulent titles at the Sault. We note in the last number of the News notices of three suits to dispossess—two of the petitions alleging fraud in procurement and the third conveyance by a husband of property the title to which was in his wife, not in him.

THE Mining Journal "will not rebuke" us, and we tender thanks for the mercy shown. But our contemporary will please reflect a bit and it will become aware that IRON PORT has made no "assertions" whatever concerning the right or wrong of the matter. The attitude of the M. J. suggested a query, which the M. J. seems to be in no mood to answer—that's all.

NEW YORK wants (it's a New York characteristic) the proposed quadricentennial celebration of the discovery by Columbus held on Manhattan island but the Economist points to the fact that the city has not water sufficient for its own use, is not likely to be any better provided in '92, and declares that "the city of New York will in 1892 be an unfit place for the proposed celebration" and that, if it held there typhoid will rage and citizens and visitors alike will suffer.

THE Green Bay Fair promises sport. Its announcement in our columns this week gives particulars only in a few points, and it should be said that premiums are offered for excellence in every line and department of industry and that the result will no doubt be a great show. The premiums for speed are generous and will call out the flyers, and there will be trials of speed on each day during the fair. A complimentary ticket accompanies the advertisement which we shall endeavor to use and for which the management will accept our thanks.

DR. GUNSAULUS of Chicago tells a good story the joke of which is "a horse on" him. When a young man he almost fancied himself "a great preacher" but when preaching to a packed church one day a drunken man staggered in and took a seat. Fearful of consequences if the drunkard remained there, the Dr. suggested that the brother seemed to be sick and recommended the aid of the sexton and fresh air; to which the man was not too far gone to reply "It's a wonder to me this bad preaching don't make us all sick," turning the laugh on the Doctor and cutting his budding vanity up by the roots.

A NEW YORKER who was stopping for a day or two at a small town on the shore of Lake Huron saw many fish caught, and naturally became enthusiastic to make a few choice hauls himself. Going down to the only wharf, he asked about lines and bait and a 12-year-old boy replied:

"I furnish everything and charge 25 cents per hour."
"But isn't that high?"
"No, sir."
"I think it is a downright robbery, and I'll try some other place."
"All right," responded the boy. "There's this wharf, that old wreck, and that slab pile, and they are the only places to fish from. We've formed a trust and make the price, and if you want to fish you've got to come to it."

—Mead's Family Medicines should be in every household.

BROWN SQUARD, the eminent French physician offers the aged and infirm a new lease of life and relief from pain. He prepares, from the testes of lambs, a fluid which he administers by hypodermic injection, the effects of which are said to be almost magical. A Cincinnati doctor has this to say of his use of the new nostrum. "Tests were made on a dozen subjects. The first two patients were Thomas Alburn, an Englishman, 55 years old, and Fielden Weir a colored ex slave, 70 years of age. The latter was bent and crippled with rheumatism and Alburn had been lamed by erysipelas. The liquid was injected in the arms and legs. When both subjects returned in the evening they walked with ease, and to show his rejuvenation, Weir kicked with both feet as high as his head, ran about the room and danced. The Englishman has walked a dozen squares and declares all pain and stiffness has left his limbs. Both experiments were pronounced eminently successful."

Dr. Brainard, of Cleveland, has also experimented with it and reports that "It was used on several patients with startling success. Dr. Brainard's first injection was made into his own system and the effect on him was strengthening in a remarkable degree. Without their knowledge Dr. Brainard tried the discovery on several patients, and in each case there was a marked improvement. One man aged 70 had been gradually sinking for weeks had not been able to leave his bed. Dr. Brainard injected a dram of the fluid into the old man's skin and the next day he walked a mile. He describes himself as feeling twenty years younger." If that is all so, and we can raise cash enough to pay for the treatment, we'll carry the boys a while longer.

THE Mining News learns that the syndicate will construct a railroad from Escanaba to Norway, Iron Mountain, Florence, Crystal Falls and Stambaugh, which will be operated by the Milwaukee & Northern road, and that the latter company will build ore docks upon its recently acquired lands at Escanaba. This means a saving in freights of 50 cents a ton between this city and Escanaba, it being estimated that the syndicate's ore can be carried between Florence and that port at a cost of 20 cents per ton including the hauling of the empty ore cars back to the mine.

If Mr. Schlesinger or those whom he represents have any idea that the work which the Northwestern charges 70 cents a ton for—the hauling, weighing, storing and shipping of iron ore from the Menominee range—can be done at a cost of only 20 cents we don't wonder that they have decided to build a railroad of their own, but we very much fear they will be disappointed. However, we have too much respect for the gentlemen's business ability to believe that they have any such an idea. That competition will bring about a reduction of freight rates is probable, but twenty cents a ton is too low to be hoped for.

THE so called economy of the Cleveland administration is accounted for. The work was not done. The office of the sixth auditor of the treasury is a case in point. It has the handling of the accounts of postmasters and its work is found to be more than two years behindhand. Outgoing postmasters can not be settled with and their bondsmen released for that reason. Benedict's administration of the public printing house is another example: it allowed the buildings to become unsafe and it saved the wages of bookkeepers by keeping no books. The whole business was rotten and its much vaunted honesty was of a piece with its economy.

If rum-hole proprietors ever find a paradise on earth it will be in the upper peninsula of Michigan. The bloated bloodsuckers are puffed and lauded by the newspapers, elected to office by the taxpayers and cajoled by the "respectable element" of society to a degree nauseating to the temperance people of the rest of the state.—Journal, Detroit.

The most completely rum-ridden locality in the peninsula is a lodge of Good Templars as compared with Detroit and the blackguard who wrote the paragraph we quote knows it. Liquor dealers in this region pay their taxes, at any rate.

Two Buffalo elevator men, S. F. Sherman and E. C. Loveridge, have, it seems, stolen 500,000 bushels of wheat, more or less, and the owners naturally want to know where the money has gone. The men are in jail. The elevators they controlled were the "Lake Shore," "Dakota" and "International."

The Latest.

David S. Terry assaulted Justice Stephen W. Field, of the supreme court of the U. S. at Lathrop, California, on Wednesday last, and was killed by a pistol shot, by David Nagle, a deputy marshal of the court who had been detailed to defend Justice Field, as it was feared that Terry would attack him.

THE CARLSONS, man and wife, positively identified Burke as the man who, calling himself Frank Williams, was the tenant of their cottage in which Dr. Cronin was killed. Burke can squeal or hang as he prefers. If he gives away his principal his life will doubtless be spared—if not, the rope. It is said that O'Sullivan, the ice dealer, attempted suicide, ineffectually, last Sunday. Perhaps that would be the easiest way out for him and his jail-fellows but they can not be allowed to cheat justice in that way.

THE Sault Herald has base ball on the brain almost as badly as the chaps that make a business of the game. It is not content with the information we gave it the other day but wants to know what our churches say about it, especially about Sunday games. We can't inform it; it should send a man over to listen a while. Bah! It makes us tired. From a town full of brothels and gambling halls and thugs, to lecture us on our morals because we play ball on a Sunday afternoon is too cheeky for good manners. Did it ever hear about the "mote" and the "beam"?

LAST WEEK'S issue of the Hersey Outline contained a letter from one Joseph Schiegl, of Osceola county, setting forth that he had captured Tascott and sent him to prison for horse-stealing, but that the Chicago people, including the Chicago Herald, while admitting the prisoner's probable identity, refused to take any steps in the matter until Schiegl would assign his claim for the $50,000 reward.

The letter also charged that Mr. Stone, son-in-law of millionaire Snell, and nearly everybody else in Chicago was criminally interested in the conspiracy that resulted in Snell's murder.

That fifty thousand dollar reward has turned Mr. Schiegl's head, evidently.

"A LAZY TRIP" around the lakes in the T. W. Palmer is described by "C. M." in the Detroit Journal. We clip the following concerning Ashtabula:

Years ago Ashtabula was a thriving Ohio town noted chiefly for its anti-slavery opinions, its republican majorities, and as the place where Senator Ben Wade took the train. Today the town is dead; but the demons of the earth have taken the creek that empties into Lake Erie; have dredged it until the waters of the lake lie in deep slips among the hills; have cut away the great banks of clay to make room for the tracks of three railroads; and have constructed an enormous basin and turned it over to attendant imps and gnomes, who delve in the holds of vessels and after their own tricky fashion set at work their diabolical machinery to exchange cargoes of iron ore for cargoes of coal. * * * I can count 23 vessels, most of them steamers of the largest class, that are unloading at the docks, and probably there are at least seven more around the bend of the dirty creek. These vessels will leave at least 60,000 tons of ore during the three days that they are in port, and when they go their places will be taken by others, and so the work of supplying the Pittsburg furnaces will go on. At Cleveland and Erie the same thing is taking place.

WHETHER or not a tariff shall be laid on foreign products sent into this country for sale in competition with similar domestic products, will be found largely a question of doing justice by our own people, when once freed from the labyrinth of maxims and theories with which "tariff reformers" seek to surround the issue between the policies of protection and free-trade.

The men who preach for free-trade with Europe will not, and dare not, contend that their neighbors should send money to distant cities for goods, even if in so doing a few cents may be saved on each purchase. Nor are they likely to consent that peddlers may come into home communities, and without license (a tariff) sell their wares, when similar articles are on the shelves of home merchants who pay taxes for the support of local and state governments.

The same policy requires foreigners with machinery and capital beyond our reach, and whose power may be used for our detriment, to pay something—and pay well—by way of tariff when coming here with their products to compete against American enterprise and American capital, which are steadily taxed without possibility of escape or desire for evasion.

Protection for domestic industries is but the broadening of that humane and natural policy observed in keeping for the members of our family such money as they can conveniently earn rather than paying it out to strangers; the same we advocate in local communities—trading with home merchants, employing home mechanics, patronizing home papers; in short, protection requires the sending away of no money that may be prudently retained for the comfort of our own households and the advancement of the community in which we make our home.—Am. Economist.

A Protective Tariff vs. Monopoly.

Among the efforts to popularize the policy of free foreign trade is the charge that protection encourages "monopoly," the absorption under one control of some entire line of business, and the resultant advance in price of the product thus controlled. Such tactics may be ingenious, and not without influence with the unwary, but upon examination the charge will be found defective in lacking facts for its support. Combinations there are in plenty, and when these get matters in hand they are quite certain to turn their advantage to personal gain, without fear of law, or sympathy for purchasers of products. But they are in no wise chargeable to our protective policy, nor confined to the United States. If there be any truth in the contention of free trade advocates that protection enhances prices, its effect must be to render combinations more difficult, by requiring larger sums of money for maintaining control of the markets.

The fact is that one of the first combinations for forcing up prices was formed in Great Britain shortly after Richard Cobden and other free trade statesmen had secured changes in the British fiscal policy. This was among the tin plate manufacturers, and the "trust" then organized has been pretty solidly preserved to the present time—so well in fact that every effort to encourage the manufacture of tin plate in this country at once encounters the vigorous opposition of those who reflect English opinion this side the Atlantic.

The fallacy of charging trade combinations to protection becomes apparent by a glance at two just now especially prominent—the Standard Oil company and the coffee corner. No tariff is laid on either crude petroleum or coffee, and the fact is the latter is not produced in this country at all. The case with sugar, just now forced to an inordinately high figure, differs only in so far as but a tithe of the quantity involved is of domestic production. The influence operating to "corner" these and other products are found just as potent in England as here; in fact efforts in that direction become effective only by control of foreign markets, made possible by the co-operation of foreign capital.

Our tariff is no more responsible for the existence of combinations for putting up prices of products than it is for the agreement between railroads to keep up their freight and passenger charges, the combination of gas companies to make city patrons pay a high price for light, or a resolution of farmers in a neighborhood to hold their wheat until a certain price is offered.

WHETHER or not a tariff shall be laid on foreign products sent into this country for sale in competition with similar domestic products, will be found largely a question of doing justice by our own people, when once freed from the labyrinth of maxims and theories with which "tariff reformers" seek to surround the issue between the policies of protection and free-trade.

The men who preach for free-trade with Europe will not, and dare not, contend that their neighbors should send money to distant cities for goods, even if in so doing a few cents may be saved on each purchase. An average of five feet of water is estimated to fall annually over the whole earth, and assuming that condensation takes place at an average height of 8,000 feet, scientists conclude that the force of evaporation to supply such rainfall must equal the lifting of 323,000,000 pounds of water 8,000 feet in every minute, or about three hundred billion horse power constantly exerted. Of this prodigious amount of energy thus created a very small proportion is transferred to the waters that run back through rivers to the sea, and a still smaller fraction is utilized by man; the remainder is dissipated in space.

YEAST has been largely used in medicine for many years, especially in Europe, where the highest opinion is entertained of its valuable qualities. It is used not only in scurvy, diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles and cholera infantum, but in cases of typhus it is actually a specific. Its entire harmlessness permits its use in large quantities, and to break up severe cases of typhus from 100 to 300 grains are administered. In severe cases of diphtheria six to eight grains of unfermented fluid yeast are given to children every hour, and the mouth and face are mopped at the same intervals with a mixture of one part yeast and five or six parts water.

The figure of Laura Bridgeman was a familiar one. MRS. HARRISON recently said to a friend: "It may be that after a time I shall get used to the unpleasant features of my present position, but just now I am not in a contented frame of mind. I don't like the White House as a residence. I detest the publicity which pertains to our home life and I regret that I am obliged to see so little of my husband. Is it not absurd that my father and the babies should be gossiped about all over the country? My husband is President, but that is no reason why the rest of us should be made public characters."

The aggregate wheat acreage this year is the largest since 1884, and that of spring wheat alone is greater than it was in that year. There is some reason still to hope that the yield, too, this year will be as heavy as that of 1884—518,000,000 bushels—which was the largest wheat crop ever grown in this country.

ISABEL;

From Shop to Mansion.

The Romantic Story of a Dress Maker's Rise in Life.

BY MRS. F. M. HOWARD.

Isabel could rest, so far as her overwhelming anxiety would allow her to, with perfect confidence that Mrs. Montford and Lillian were doing all for him which could be done.

The delirium had given way to a heavy stupor, and there must soon be a change for the better or worse, and the change was awaited with breathless interest.

"Do not grieve so, dear auntie," said Lillian, gently, when Isabel, overcome by the thought that he might die, had given way to violent weeping.

"Uncle Harvey has such a grand constitution, you know; why, I am perfectly astonished at him for being sick at all, it is an unprecedented performance on his part, I can assure you."

Her gentle rally was better in this case than sympathy, and hope sprang up anew in the wife's heart, and she began to look forward more cheerfully to the expected turn in the disease.

It was her night to watch with him, and she took her place by the bedside with a more hopeful spirit than she had cherished since he had been sick.

About midnight she noticed that he breathed more naturally, and, going close to him, she noticed with a heart throbbing with delight that there was a faint sparkle of moisture on his hitherto parched and strained forehead; she took her handkerchief and gently wiped it off, fearing she might be mistaken, but no, it was true, and in a few moments it reappeared and she knew he was better.

"Oh, God, I thank Thee," she cried, as she sank upon her knees in mute thanksgiving.

Perhaps the great emotion of her heart swayed a sympathetic chord in his, for in a few moments he opened his eyes, and, looking at her with kind recognition, whispered, feebly: "Isabel."

"My love, my darling!" she whispered softly in his ear.

He seemed to struggle with memory. "You do love me, then," he whispered, faintly.

"Better than my life, dearest love," she said, gently pressing her lips to his.

He smiled wearily, like a tired child, and with a look of ineffable content dropped off to sleep again, while she sat by his side in a tumult of joy.

"How is he?" said Mrs. Montford, who came in to relieve her watch.

"He is better," she whispered. "He knows me and spoke to me."

"Thank the Lord for His mercies!" said the good woman, fervently, and taking Isabel in her arms as if she had been her own child, "now go to bed, dearie, and sleep like a top until morning."

The sun was high when the overtaxed wife awoke from her long and dreamless slumber: the slumber of sweet relief after long days and nights of weariness and agonizing suspense, and she hurriedly dressed herself and went into the sick-room.

Lillian was there, and her husband was awake. He greeted her with a smile, infantile in its weakness, yet full of love and trust, as she bent over him and whispered glad words of love and thankfulness into his ear.

"Have I, then, been so very sick?" he asked, feebly, as her tears of joy fell upon his face.

"I think, Uncle Harvey, you deserve a good scolding for giving us such a scare," Lillian answered for her. "If it hadn't been for my excellent nursing there's no knowing what would have happened to you. Aunt Isabel and that big-eyed doctor were glowering over you like a couple of lunatics when I came to the rescue."

He was too weak to reply to her lively sallies, but he pressed his wife's hand with a feeble energy.

It seemed as if she could not be demonstrative enough after the long period of cold indecision through which she had passed; she knew now that she had loved him for months when she had imagined herself grateful only, and she sighed as she thought how his kind and noble heart must have been wounded by her coldness, and she strove to make amends by showing him every phase of tenderness her full heart could devise.

"I think I must go home now," said Lillian, playfully, the next day. "I have rescued one forlorn man from a premature fate, and I shall have another to drag from the brink of despair if I do not get back to Ralph. Mamma says he wanders to and fro like the disconsolate ghost of Melancholy."

"I little thought that your long-talked-of visit was to be such a doleful affair as this," said Isabel. "But, indeed, Lillian, you do not know how much you have helped me."

"I assure you I take full credit to myself for all I have done," she answered, willfully. "I do believe Uncle Harvey got up this little diversion just for the purpose of testing the affection of his friends."

"Then I deserved to be disappointed, didn't I?" he said, weakly. He enjoyed her bright rally, as it showed him that he was once more among flesh and blood people instead of the dim and ghostly forms among which he had moved during the weeks when his diseased fancy had distorted every thing about him into unreal shapes.

Isabel was not disappointed in Lillian; the bright, sweet girl was just the generous, whole-souled little woman she had imagined her to be, and a warm affection had sprung up between them.

"You have forgiven me, then, for marrying your uncle?" Isabel said, mischievously, as they were waiting in the drawing-room for the carriage which was to take Lillian away.

"Yes," she replied, promptly, "and have given you my blessing, figuratively speaking." Then more thoughtfully: "Your case is only another demonstration of the fact which mamma and I have argued over ever since I went in pinafores, that a person's position in life does not necessarily determine all his qualities of head and heart."

"Well, what do you think of her?" said Mrs. Stanford, after Lillian's return, and when other inquiries had been answered.

"I think Uncle Harvey might have hunted the city over without finding any one so perfectly suited to him as Aunt Isabel," replied Lillian, warmly.

"Even if she was a plebeian shop-girl," said Mr. Stanford, with a smile.

"I'm afraid the blue blood of the Carringtons would boil if they should hear you speak of their kinswoman under that title," said Lillian, laughing. "Aunt Isabel told me that Major Carrington was terribly shocked when she told him how she had been forced to earn a living."

Harvey Falconer's return to health was as rapid as could be expected, considering his extreme weakness, and he was as yet but the pallid ghost of himself as he sat up in his easy chair, or laid upon the puffy cushioned lounge in the home room.

It was very long past Christmas and they had received an urgent invitation from Major Carrington to spend the remainder of the winter at Elm Park, and had decided to go as soon as the travel was strong enough to travel. Dr. Conroy had advised the change of climate, and Mr. Falconer, with his blood debilitated and chilled by sickness, looked forward to it gratefully.

"Dr. Conroy had been like a brother in this time of trouble, and the Falconers, who had respected and admired him before, were now bound to him by the ties of affection as well.

He who comes to us in our hour of trouble not only makes himself our friend, but commands affection also, and the earnest, faithful physician not only heals the sickness by the aid of his skillful knowledge, but brings his sympathy, his soothing word and kindly touch, winning a place for himself in our hearts which no other can fill.

Dr. Conroy was one of those who brought his heart with him to a sick chamber. Many a mother could testify that he had ministered to her sick babe as tenderly as if it had been his own.

It was this element of tenderness in his nature which endeared him to Lottie Ford, and with him affection for the fair, sweet girl, so gentle and uncomplaining in her suffering, had sprung up spontaneously, and he had made her but few visits before he became conscious that she was the one woman of all the world whom he wished to call his wife, and as he was a straightforward man, he had lost no time in showing her his heart.

She was steadily improving under his care, and could now walk with one crutch with but little pain, and there was every reason to hope that her recovery was to be complete, and she was preparing for the visit at home with great delight.

"Lottie, dear," said Isabel as they sat in her cheerful room, "you will spend the time with us before your marriage, will you not? We shall return in February, and I shall hope to see you soon after we come home."

"Yes," replied Lottie; "Malcolm wishes me to remain under treatment for some time yet. He is thinking he can get father better employment here than he has in New York. If it were not for that I should feel as if I must pass my last months of maiden life with mother."

"Oh, isn't that lovely!" cried Isabel, "if you can have the little mother near you; she will have to adopt me, too, for I long for a mother so," and she gave a sigh for the lost mother in her grave.

"Mother's heart is large enough for us both," replied Lottie, smiling, "and I only fear that shall have occasion to be jealous of you. They will come in the spring, if all works as we expect, and as Dr. Conroy is almost positive it will."

"Then I fear I am to be disappointed in having the pleasure of making a darling little wedding for you," said Isabel, a shade coming over her face. "I had anticipated having such a quite select affair."

"Well," replied Lottie, "you and mother may decide that when the time comes, for I must confess that with father and mother here, your home would seem as much like my home as any place could."

"You darling," said Isabel, relieved. "Then I shall coax my mother until she is obliged to consent to be rid of me; of course you will go to housekeeping at once."

"Yes, Dr. Conroy is so thoroughly tired of boarding, though upon what scale I am sure I know not; I have never questioned him."

"Not a pinched one, my dear," said Isabel, nodding her head knowingly. "The doctor is far from being a poor man."

"I am glad of that," said Lottie, sweetly. "I had feared so much that I might be a hindrance to him, if he was yet poor, and struggling for success, but if he can afford such an expensive luxury as a weakly wife is liable to be, I shall feel better satisfied, for of course it would be folly for me to expect to be as strong as many are."

"Yes, my little friend, you might as well decide that you are never going to bear the world on those slender shoulders of yours, and save yourself some inevitable disappointment; but you have a mission of sweetness and patience, which no one but you can accomplish, and which the most of us would fall in. So be comforted, my dear; it seems to be one of the compensations of life that the weakness of the flesh adds strength and grace to the spirit."

Major Carrington met the travelers at the station when they alighted, and welcomed them with warm Southern hospitality. Mr. Falconer had borne the journey even better than he expected, and though languid and pale, was in good spirits, and prepared to be pleased with all he saw.

A roomy traveling carriage was waiting for them, and the burly, colored coachman looked curiously, yet respectfully, at Isabel, as she came forward, for the news had spread among the older colored people that "Missy Alicia's" long-lost daughter was coming, and this faithful fellow had been on the place ever since he was born, before the war as a slave, since as a hired servant.

A ride of a few miles, through lovely scenery brought them to the natural park of elms, from which the place was named, Elm Park, the carriage winding through them, past a miniature lake, and bank after bank of roses and other flowers, which, though not in bloom, were yet green and suggestive of their summer beauties. The house was a fine specimen of a Southern home, wide verandas on all sides, supported by heavy pillars, around which twined wide-spreading branches of the lovely Baltimore Belle, Marchal Niel rose and clustering clematis.

"My dear girl, welcome, thrice welcome to our home," said Mrs. Carrington, a tall, stately lady, who came out upon the veranda to meet them, taking her in a warm embrace.

"And here is Caroline, waiting to welcome her cousin," said the Major, as a tall, graceful girl, and the image of her mother, came to the door of the hall, while Mrs. Carrington gracefully welcomed Mr. Falconer and Grace. Caroline grasped Isabel's hand with cordial warmth, and when introduced her to Adelaide, her sister, also tall and graceful, but with more of the Carrington style of features.

Isabel could scarcely control her emotions as she entered the house, though she could not have analyzed her feelings, but Mrs. Carrington's coming in was quick to observe and assign a reason for her agitation, and kindly led her to a small sitting room off the hall, and, summoning a portly colored woman, she gave directions that the guests should be taken at once to the rooms they were to occupy.

"Dinner will be served in about an hour, if that will give you time to rest," said the Major, as they were ascending the stairs.

"Plenty of time," replied Mr. Falconer. "A bath and a five minutes nap will render me, at least, capable of doing full justice to your hospitality."

"My darling!" said Mr. Falconer, tenderly, as Dinah, after stirring the fire in the grate, which was, at this season of the year, necessary even in the sunny South, and showing Isabel where to find clothes-press and bath rooms, at last disappeared.

He saw that she was on the verge of tears, and drew her to his arms. "I am so strangely happy," she said, as she leaned her head upon his sheltering breast and burst into tears of excitement.

"It is a wonderful experience for you," he said, smoothing her hair gently, as he removed her hat, "and you have need of all your fortitude to take you through it without over-taxing your nerves." She was trembling even now like a leaf.

"How selfish I am," she said, after she had become more calm. "I forgot in my own thoughts how weak you are still," for he was trembling, too, in his sympathy for her. "Forgive me, dear," and she in her turn became the comforter, and forced him to lie down upon an easy couch, while she opened trunks, and made preparations for the toilet.

They were large, airy rooms which had been given them, the windows opening out upon a delightful prospect, with distant Richmond just appearing in view.

"Oh, how funny," said Grace, who had been exploring the bedrooms and looking from the windows. "There's just ever so many little bits of houses out this way; does Major Carrington have tenement houses to rent?"

"Yes, my dear," replied her father, smiling at her natural mistake; "but the tenants are his own working-people—these colored people you saw about the place—who, with their families, occupy these houses."

Meanwhile a discussion was going on below. "She's pure Carrington, isn't she?" said Caroline, as she languidly dropped into a chair.

"The very image of Chester," said Mrs. Carrington.

"Her eyes and hair will remind you of Alicia when you see her again," remarked the Major. "By the way, where is Chester?"

"He is having one of his gloomy fits today," answered his wife, "and though I told him his daughter was coming, it seemed to make no impression upon his mind, and he has wandered off."

"He isn't alone?" said the Major, a little anxiously.

"Oh, no. I sent Pompey after him as usual, and he will take care of him."

"I wonder Mrs. Pembroke is not here," said Adelaide, looking from the window. "I fear meeting so many of us at once is going to be very exciting for Cousin Isabel. I noticed her hand trembled in mine when I took it."

"She is not looking as well as when I saw her," said Major Carrington. "Her husband's sickness has, doubtless, been a strain upon her nerves."

"Mamma, oughtn't we to send Lizette and Otto to help them dress?"

"I hardly know what they have been accustomed to," replied Mrs. Carrington. "People live so differently in the North and South."

"I think, my dear," laughed the Major, "that my niece would consider a dressing-maid a nuisance."

"Well, I am sure if I were obliged to comb my own hair, I should soon decide to wear it cropped close," said Adelaide, laughing, giving her fine head, adorned with heavy braids, a toss.

"Still, if you had always been accustomed to being your own hair-dresser," remarked Caroline.

"Habits are inexorable things," said Mrs. Carrington, "and, for the present, I will send Lizette to inquire if Mrs. Falconer would like her assistance in dressing."

A neat colored girl made her appearance in answer to the bell, and Mrs. Carrington gave her her directions.

"Pears like dem Northern ladies ain't fust quality no how," was Lizette's dissatisfied comment as she descended the stairs, after Isabel had kindly declined her services at her toilet. She had never been accustomed to such assistance, and looked upon it as more of a hindrance than a help, except in exceptional cases. "But, den, I spec' it all in de 'bringin' up," she concluded, philosophically.

A carriage was at the door as Lizette reached the hall, and Major Carrington was handing out an old lady with tender respect. It was Mrs. Pembroke, and she said eagerly as she took his offered arm: "Has she come?"

CHAPTER XI.

Grace tripped lightly down the stairs, dressed in a dainty silk of coruscant blue, her floating hair fastened back with a silver dagger; Isabel followed her, dressed simply and elegantly in a plain black silk, a fichu of creamy real lace about her neck, in the fleecy folds of which shone the diamond locket, her only ornament, and Mr. Falconer, quite rested from his bath, cheerfully brought up the rear.

Caroline met them at the foot of the stairs and ushered them into a spacious drawing-room, elegantly furnished; a little, old lady was sitting on a sofa, her hair, which was snowy white, was arranged in little curly puffs on each side of her white temples; her eyes were a deep brown, and her small mouth had a peculiarly sweet expression. She, too, was dressed in a heavy black silk, she sat low at the throat, and filled in with fold on fold of whitest, fleeciest lace, and on her breast glittered a diamond locket, the exact counterpart of that worn by Isabel.

She arose eagerly as Isabel entered, Grace hiding shyly in the shadow of her dress, and took a step forward, her small, white hands extended.

"Cousin Isabel, this is Mrs. Pembroke," said Caroline, and Isabel stepped forward impulsively, and took the quaint, appealing little figure in her strong young arms with a loving caress, as she whispered fondly: "My darling grandmother! I am so happy to have found you at last," as the happy tears rose to her eyes.

The old lady held her off at arms' length, and looked at her through a mist of tears. "You are more Carrington than Pembroke," she said at last, brokenly, "but I can see my Alicia's beautiful hair and her lovely eyes."

"And I hope, dear grandmamma, you may find Alicia's heart also," said Isabel, patting the wrinkled little face lovingly.

"Yes, yes, my child's own loving ways," murmured the old lady, more to herself than to others.

UPPER PENINSULA.

A suit is brought by the heirs of the old Indian chief, Shawano, for possession of the island formerly occupied by him at the foot of the rapids, and another by the heirs of Mrs. Matilda Bernier for possession of claim 126.

The U. S. is now in possession of the island and H. W. Seymour of the claim. Shadflies so thick that they put out the electric light—by being crushed between driving belt and pulley until the belt was so slippery that it would not drive the dynamo.—Soo Democrat.

The U. S. armed steamer Michigan lay at anchor in the lake off her last Saturday and Sunday. Heavy thunderstorm yesterday [Wednesday]—house occupied by A. Moneys struck, set on fire and partially burned, and Mrs. Monette and a child severely but not fatally injured. Copper is "pooled" again to maintain the price—12 cents for lake and 11 for casting brands.—Gazette, Houghton.

Olaf Venstrom has a device for separating iron ore from rock after the whole has been crushed to the requisite fineness [If we understood aright, the trouble with the Negaunee concern was the cost of the crushing]. Mr. Russell is invited to address the convention to be held at the Soo on the 28th upon "the Lake Superior region and its resources." John Meitner, a sailor, was run over and fatally injured in the railroad yard this morning. A drunken Finn was badly beaten in Gorman's livery stable Thursday afternoon and may die of the injuries received. Another company, the "Detroit," has been formed to work a forty near Ishpeming for gold [and the pockets of outsiders for greenbacks].—M. J., 9th.

Another death by diphtheria—four cases out of seven. D. W. Lewis died yesterday, of consumption. Debois tent, Maccabees, was organized Monday evening.—Pioneer, Manistique.

The Escanaba club met its Waterloo at Marquette Sunday [Beg pardon: no only its Bull Run]. The Lake Linden electric plant will consist of a 200-h-p engine, two dynamos for incandescent lights, 950 lights each, two 50 light arc-light dynamos and two boilers. An electric street light was broken Friday and it was then discovered that its upper story contained a sparrow's nest in which were five young birds.—Copper Journal, Hancock.

Mr. Willis has rented rooms in John R. Wood's brick block, which will be used by himself and associates, who are here to superintend the survey and construction of a new railroad from this city to Escanaba. A surveying party will be sent out at once, and it is asserted that the new road will be ready for business next May.—Range, Iron Mountain.

The corner stone of the Florence County court house was successfully laid, with elaborate and imposing ceremonies, on Monday afternoon, under the auspices of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Wisconsin, assisted by the members of Fisher Lodge, this city, and a large number of brethren from Iron Mountain, Crystal Falls, Iron River, Menasha and other Wisconsin and Michigan cities. The Masons assembled at the local lodge room at 1 o'clock, where a special communication of the Grand Lodge was held, Grand Secretary John W. Laffin, of Milwaukee, acting as grand master; Dr. H. E. Mann, of Marinette, deputy grand master; Hugh McLaughlin, of Iron Mountain, grand senior warden, and D. C. Lockwood, of Crystal Falls, acting as grand junior warden.—Mining News, Florence.

The Milwaukee & Northern road again has its engineers in this neighborhood, and there is but little doubt that the extension of the road to Norway will soon be begun. 50 good miners wanted at the Dunn mine, Crystal Falls. Wages from 2.00 to 2.25. W. M. Ramsdell, hardware merchant, while assisting in the search last week, for the bodies of the young ladies drowned in the river below Vulcan, was poisoned by poison oak.—Current, Norway.

The contracts for lighting are given—that for arc lights to the Brush, and for incandescent to the Westinghouse company. Miner died—whisky did it. G. A. R. men of Ishpeming and Republic will charter a sleeping car for the trip to Milwaukee and use it for quarters during their stay. Transient chaps with "bankrupt stocks" will have to put up $200 before they can open up in Marquette, hereafter.—M. J., 10th.

Charlie Finley, the assistant roadmaster of the M. & N. who has been superintending the repairing of this end of the road, will leave on Monday morning to take charge of the track lying from Hill Creek through. He is one of the most experienced men in the company's employ, and there will be no delay while Charley has the management of affairs. It will not be long now before the gap will be closed by the extension of the steel band which will connect Ontonagon county with the outside world and mark a new era in its future.—Herald, Ontonagon.

A village organization is proposed for Baraga. Otto Sangerbush received "a good sized embursement of the skin" and thinks the benedictus of Wednesday to blame for it. Benedicts beat bachelors, 9 to 4, in three innings. The vote on the loan question was very light but the lean goes—104 to 6.—Sentinel, L'Anse.

The body of a murdered man was found near Interior on Thursday Aug. 8. The body of an infant was found near the fair grounds in this city last Saturday. It is probable that the child was born and abandoned in the bushes where the body was found. Capt. Cundy, of the Champion mine has resigned. Champion folks are sorry. Nineteen to sixteen means bad play on the part of Escanaba and worse on that of Marquette. The program of the base ball tournament at Ishpeming is Marquette vs. Ishpeming and Hancock vs. Republic Tuesday, Escanaba vs. Negaunee and the saw-off Wednesday. Negaunee firemen had a fine trip to visit at Iron Mountain.—M. J., 12th.

John D. Mersereau is building a residence—two story and a mansard—30 rooms—$6,000, in Lakeside. Louis McGraw, disorderly conductor—$54.50 or 90 days but sentence suspended and Louis gone. Dirty scoundrel, ought to be in the penitentiary. Local assembly of K. of L. to disband. C. L. Co. assessed on $282,000, Manistique L. Co. on $190,000, Weston L. Co. on $100,000, J. D. Weston $54,000; all others $77,750.—Sun Manistique.

Hawley & McGraw will build a mill at the mouth of Dead River and a rail road to bring the logs to it. Our band took second money in the contest at Muskegon. A mysterious project, involving the building of a short piece of railroad is on foot near Negaunee. W. R. Burt and other Saginaw gentlemen are in it. Rained all day Tuesday and the A. O. U. W. celebration at Ishpeming was set back a day. The night watchman on the merchandise pier shot a wall-eyed pike which weighed 28 pounds with his revolver Friday night. Marquette nine challenges Escanaba to play for $500, same players as last Sunday [no go—can't raise the stuff].—M. J., 14th.

Another death from diphtheria in the family of Frank Fydel yesterday. No driving park this year. The brothels "must go." Catholic fair opens at the Opera house this evening. Miss Anna Parker is down with diphtheria.—Pioneer, Manistique.

THE WEEK.

Gen. Henry Dupont, head of the great firm of powder makers at Wilmington, Delaware, died August 8. His estate is worth $15,000,000.

Collom, the Minneapolis forger, was arrested Thursday and bail was refused until the entire amount of the forged paper should be known. It is believed that he intended suicide as he had, within the last three months, taken out policies on his life for $115,000.

E. S. Allen, president of a New York street railway company, has been issuing fraudulent certificates of stock, with forged signatures, and is locked up. A hundred thousand was his figure: Cheap rascal.

By an explosion of a natural gas main of the Monongahela Natural Gas Company at Pittsburg Friday night, two men were instantly killed, two were fatally injured, and about twenty were seriously hurt.

Colonel James Curry, of the United States marines, retired, died suddenly at Fortress Monroe, Va., Thursday night.

Fire destroyed the round-house of the Wisconsin Central Railway at Ashland, Wis., Thursday night, and four engines were also consumed. Loss 40,000.

A train on the Pittsburg and Western Railroad left the track near Edensburg, Pa., Friday afternoon, and the cars all turned over. The passengers were all more or less injured, but none seriously.

Burke was arraigned on Friday, Aug. 9, and pleaded not guilty to each of the two indictments against him.

Bob Campbell, a hand employed in one of the racing stables at Monmouth Park had a colt entered for a big race the other day and landed the stakes, $31,000, and $10,000 bets by winning it. He was worth $350, what his horse cost him, when the horses started and $40,000 90 minutes later.

A couple of half-breed Hawaiians who had been educated abroad at the expense of the government, Robert W. Wilcox and Robert Boyd, attempted a revolution in that kingdom on the 30th ultimo but failed and are prisoners. Seven of their followers were killed and twelve wounded. Their object was to get rid of Kalakaua, and make Liliuokalani queen, not to change the form of government.

Deputy U. S. Marshal Hager was killed on his own premises in Wyoming co., West Va., last Saturday. Moonshiners did it, no doubt.

The Laredo man was not Tascott, though the resemblance was great enough to justify his arrest.

A brick maker at Hastings, Minn., finds his material to carry gold to the value of six dollars to the ton and won't make brick of it any more.

The trouble is not entirely over in the coke region. The men employed by Frick & Co., received (or were promised) the advance and want to resume work but the Huns of the Mammoth works have not reached an agreement and will not permit them to do so. A fight is probable as the Huns are armed and determined.

Forest fires are doing much damage in the Willamette valley, Oregon. It has had no rain for two months and is as dry as tinder.

An attempt to rob a train on the Iron Mountain railroad near Newport, Ark., failed and one of the robbers was captured but the conductor was severely wounded and the porter killed.

Bay City saloonkeepers—that is, many of them—refused to pay their license, and prosecutions were begun. The result is that $8,000 have been recovered.

Mrs. Lena Jackman, of Mosherville, daughter of Byron Hoag, had married against her father's wishes and the marriage was a failure. Mrs. Jackman tried to commit suicide with poison Thursday, and it required one physician one stomach pump and 12 hours' time to save her life.

The militia camp at Goguc lake broke up Wednesday morning after "a good time" of a week's duration. The boys made a good record, too, this year. It is proposed to occupy the same ground for five years to come, perhaps permanently.

Charles Doughty, receiver of the Saginaw land office, died last Sunday of cancer. He was 75 years old.

Ellis Wilcox celebrated his 100th birthday at Berlin, Ills., Monday, by a picnic on his farm. A thousand persons were present but not one livelier than the century-old host.

Harry See was found dead at his home at St. Joseph, Ill., Monday morning. He had two bullet holes through him and his wife is supposed to have killed him in self-defense (she is badly bruised) but she says nothing.

Franz Josef, the Austrian Kaiser, is at Berlin, the guest of his brother of Germany, and there he high jinks, sars enough, unter den Linden. Alexander Mott, son of Valentine Mott, died Monday at the age of 63 years. Father and son were eminent surgeons of New York and a son of Alexander, named Valentine, is already eminent in the same profession.

Mrs. Maybrick is to be hanged on Monday, August 26, unless relieved.

A swarm of bees, disturbed by a runaway team, stung the horses to death and two men so badly that their lives are in extreme danger.

Forced to Leave Home. Over 60 people were forced to leave their homes yesterday to call for a free trial package of Lane's Family Medicine. If your blood is bad, your liver and kidneys out of order, if you are constipated and have headache and an unsightly complexion, don't fail to call on any druggist to-day for a free trial sample of this grand remedy. The ladies praise it. Every one likes it. Large size package 50 cents.

Consumption Surely Cured. To the EDITOR—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy FREE to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their express and post office address. Respectfully, T. A. SLOCUM, M. C., 181 Pearl St, New York.

John Yeldell, the negro who was taken from Pittsburg to South Carolina and tried for murder, was acquitted and was also saved from lynching.

The Verdict Unanimous. W. D. Solt, druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of rheumatism of 10 years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Belleville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the liver, kidneys or blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at J. N. Mead's drug store.

The Shafter "dressed meat law" passed by the Minnesota legislature last winter has again been decided unconstitutional.

Idleness is a Dangerous Fault. In the kidneys. When inactive they speedily fall into disrepair. Those obstinate and fatal maladies, Bright's disease and diabetes, ensue with terrible certainty upon the inaction of the organs affected. Catarrh of the bladder, enuresis, gravel and strangury are also to be apprehended from a partial paralysis of the bladder, of which weakness and sluggishness are the causes. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a fine tonic and promoter of activity for the renal organs, and one which can be relied upon to afford them the requisite stimulus without exciting them—an effect to be feared from the unmedicated alcoholic excitant of commerce. A further beneficial effect of the Bitters, by renewing activity of the kidneys, is to enable them to drain from the blood in its passage through them, impurities productive of rheumatism and dropsy. Nervousness, fever and age, constipation and dyspepsia are conquered by the Bitters. 41

Gold "placers" have been found in Brown Co., Indiana, and will be worked.

A Valuable Remedy. A letter from S. F. Wardwell, Boston says: "I used Clark's Extract of Flax (papillon) Catarrh Cure in June last for Hay Fever with great satisfaction, and find it the only thing I have seen which would allay, without irritation, the inflammation of the nostrils and throat. Its soothing and healing properties were marked and immediate." Large bottles $1.00. Clark's Flax Soap is the latest and best. Try it. 25 cents. Ask for them at Mead's Drug Store.

An iron bridge 258 feet long and weighing 2,500 tons was moved 45 feet in twelve minutes. The bridge was only out of use 58 minutes, all told.

Mr. Thos. C. Lee, proprietor of the Lee Hotel Arkadelphia, Ark., says that Swift's Specific has so strengthened his wife for her labors as hostess that he can recommend and emphasize the assertion that as a tonic for ladies and children S. S. S. has no equal.

Mr. B. F. Whatley is a prominent merchant of Rushton, La. He says that he has sold Swift's Specific to many persons, and knows of some wonderful cases of blood diseases, and has never heard of a failure to cure. Several cases of contagious blood poison were cured after all the doctors and all other remedies had failed.

I am of the opinion S. S. S. should stand at the head of the list of blood remedies. I arrived at this conclusion from the testimony of scores of persons who have told me of the good results from its use. I have been sold S. S. S. for years, and it has won a large sale. C. A. GRIFFITH, Mayflower, Ark.

Mercury and potash mixtures dry up the secretions of the body, cause mercurial rheumatism and dyspepsia, and finally run the system down to such a condition that other diseases are induced. Swift's Specific builds up the patient from the first dose, and gives life and vigor to the whole human frame.

A Woman's Discovery. "Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this country. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death was imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption and was much relieved on taking the first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus writes W. C. Hamrick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Get a free trial bottle at J. N. Mead's drug store.
