OUR BEAVER ISLAND correspondence again reaches us in a bunch. Under date of February 28, the following:

Neddie McCauley and wife, of Sand Bay, were thrown out of their sleigh by the running away of their horse. He was hadly injured and she, having struck a fence post, died next

March 7. John Vincent brought a Norway pine from High island, Saturday, it was 70 feet long, 18 inches square, for the spar for schooner, Hattje Fisher. The yawl of the tug Clara Elliott, went adrift on a cake of ice last Booth & Sons are going to do business here on the point, those hustlers, the Martin boys, are going to fish for them the coming season with the Clara Elliott They got material for 100 additional nets over the ice.

James Gibson's horse got hurt by a fall on the ice.

The ice boat went spinning to Loneys point and return last Saturday.

Mr Clark came over to Sand Bay to look after things at Barkers, he goes over to Harbor Springs to day with a team for a load of supplies for the camp. We get a weekly mail from Cross Village. Every ice house is filled.

No fresh whitefish or trout in market yet. Suckers, herring and perch in limited supply.

ST JAMES, Mar. 20, 1891.

The mail carriers returned from the north shore last night. They went after James, son of John McCauley, who was sick, but he died on the oth inst. and was buried at St. Ignace

They leave for Cross Village in the morning with the mail which may be the last one sent over the ice. March has been cold, rainy and stormy, but this is a hostiful day and we hope a thaw is close at hand

They are building an addition to the old Condy Gallagher dock, a new store is to go up and business promises to be lively the coming season. Everybody is trying to turn up something instead of waiting for something to turn up, which betokens a good state of

La Grippe Again,

During the epidemic of La Grippe las season Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, proved to be the best remedy. Reports from the many who used it confirm this statement. They were not only quickly relieved, but the disease left no ba i after results. We ask you to give this remedy a trial and we guarantee that you will be satisfied with results, or the purchase price will be refunded. It has no equal in La Grippe, or any Throat, Chest or Lung Trouble Trial bottles free at John Finnegan's Drug Store. Large bottles, 50c. and $100.

Rheumatism cured in a day. - "Mystic Cure" for Rheumatism and neuralgia radically cures in I to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. "THE latest hing in our line," said a wholesale grocer Saturday, "is artificial eggs. They were invented and patented 1 y a Kansas genius, and are said to equal in every way genuine hen fruit. The process of manufacturing the component parts is, of course, a secret, but the shell is made of rubber, and is thin and pliable. They are designed for all purposes, but one. The best behaved and best informed hen in the world could never hatch one. They will retail for three cents a dozen."-Free Press, Detroit.

"WELL, GOOD NIGHT, Miss A-," said a young man the other evening to a Dwightville girl whom he was visiting. "I think it's better for me to go. I feel certain that if I stay two minutes longer I shall be indiscreet enough to kiss you."

"Well, good night, Mr. F ," replied the young girl. "Oh, by the way," she saided, "I want to show you my sachet bag before you go. It will only take a couple of min

It is only necessary to state that the young man in question is possessor of a bright intellect, and he quickly embraced the situation, and we can further assert that the girl was in it. - Binghampton Republican.

The census of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland was taken last Mon day. It was a count of the people only and was made at a given hour by the police and constabulary forces, blanks having been previously distributed to each householder. The system is very simple and very efficacious but would not be applicable to a country like ours.

Frost and snow in Alabama and Mississippi, as far south as Jackson and Birmingham, last Sunday, and much damage resulted.

For a number of years I have been subject to violent attacks of inflammatory rheumatism which generally lasted about two months. On the first of this month I was attacked in the knee and suffered severely for two-days, when I procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it relieved me almost instantly I therefore most cheerfully rocommend it to those who are similarly afflicted everywhere R. Cold and moisture combined have a torporzing effect upon the bodily organs, and the digestive and secretive processes are apt to be more tardily performed in the winter than in the fall. The same is true, also, of the secretory functions The bowels are also sluggish, and the pores of the skin throw off but little waste matter at this season. The system, therfore needs opening up a little and also purifying and regulating and the s fest surest and most thorough tonic and alterative that can be used for these purposes is Hostetter's Somach Bitters. Persons who wish to escape the rheumanc twinges, the dyspeptic agonies, the painful disturbances of the bowels, the bil ious attacks, and the nervous visitations, so common at this time of year, will do well to reinforce their system with this renowned vegetable stomachic and invigorant. It improves the appetite, strengthens the stomach, cheers the spirits, and renovates the whole physique.

Thousands possoned.

In a recent work on heart disease. Dr. Franklin Miles—the noted specialist—gives many new and startling facts. Thousands of people are slowly poisoning themselves, weak ening their hearts by the use of tea, coffee, tobacco and alcohol These are Heart Whips, causing it to beat rapidly, thus gradually wear ing it out, producing shortness of breath when exercising, pains in the side and shoulder, hungry and faint spells. Finally the heart failure and sudden death. For weakened and irritated hearts the press everywhere highly recommend the New Heart Cure discovered by Dr. Franklin Miles, which is for sale at I. N. ALBERT PIKE; poet, lawyer, soldier, high up freemason, and all-round good fellow; born in Boston in 1809, an emigrant in early manhood to the southwest and for many years a leading citizen of Arkansas; valiant for the union in the war with Mexico and as valiant against it in that of the great rebellion, and since 1870 a resident of the capital city and one of its most noticeable ones, died, at his residence in that city on Sunday last. Green be the grass above his resting place; long remembered his virtues and sterling worth and soon forgotten and fully condoned his one

BLOOD was shed on the morning of April 2, at the Morewood coke works, near Mount Pleasant, Pa. The plant had been started up with non union men and the strikers, a thous and or more strong, charged at three o'clock in the morning, to drive off the force, stop the work and destroy the plant. An armed guard of sixty-five men fired two volleys with the re salt that seven men were killed and forty or more wounded. To one at this distance; and as the story is told in the dispatches, it looks as though the "defence" of the place and property was of the "offensive" sort, as though the guard began the killing. In war it is legitimate, but the guard would stand better at the bar of public opinion if it had a "casualty fist" too; if it had reserved the fire of its Winchesters until some one of its members had been hurt, a little.

Venesection, blood letting, has been all but abandoned by the profession of medicine and surgery as a remedial agent, but for the ensanity which occasionally seizes masses of faborers and impels them to riot there seems to be no other remedy. In such case it is efficient, as is seen now in the coke region, Since the killing and wounding at the Morewood works Master Workman Wilson is ready for a conference with the employers and the Huns whom he represents are about ready to resume their work—they have already stopped their rioting. It is deplorable that such insanity should exist; that so bru'al a remedy as rifte practice should be necessary; that only by killing and wounding can the supremacy of law be maintained and order be reserved; but that supremacy must be maintained and order must be preserved at any cost.

AMERICAN FARMERS have "good times" in ight. The London Standard of April 6 pub lishes a long and careful review of the agri cultural outlook in the course of which it says that the steady rise in wheat revives the hopes of the English farmer, adding that wheat will probably reach the highest price in many years, the principal cause of the rise being the failure of foreign crops. The wheat crops of France and Russia, according to the Standard, are much below the average and, the same paper says, the difference will be at least 20,000,000 quarters, adding : "It is expected that cold winds and frosts have almost destroyed the French crops. Germany, Holland, and Belgium all furnish pessumist reports. In Ronmania their is a decreased wheat area and in India there has been a bad wheat season. The only exception is Hungary. where there are better prospects, but it is al most certain that the world's wheat consumption will exceed the production computed. Whatever the magnitude of America's crop may be, it will not be sufficient to cover the European deficit, thus compelling an extensive draft upon the reserves for the third year in succession." The Standard in conclusion, says: "The increased home consumption, the decreased wheat area, owing to the spread of population and recourse to scientific tillage, in order to repair the waste of the first settlers, thus increasing the cost of productions, must inexitably remove the American tarmer's tormidable competition in European markets and allow the English farmer to look for-

BARON KRUEDNER, the well known Russian general, who was defeated by Osman Pasha at Plevaa, died recently in Russia at the age of 87 years. Kruedner, say Russian papers, was commander of the ninth army corps. Grand Duke Nicholas, commander in chief of the forces, ordered him to take the Plevna by storm. Kruedner however paid no attention to the command of his superior, as he was certain his forces were too weak to cope with those of the enemy. A second time the grand duke gave the command for Kruedner to begin the attack. The general told the courier to say to his imperial highness that he would not take the responsibility of storming Plevna without written orders from the grand duke, The written order came and Kruedner at once began the attack. As was expected he suffered an ignominious defeat. Shortly after the battle Kruedner met the Czar, Alexander II. 'What hast thou done with my soldiers?" cried the emperor. "Give them back to me." Without uttering a word in reply Kruedner drew from his pocket the written order of the grand duke and handed it to his majesty. The Czar read it, bowed to Kruedner and ex cused him without saying a woro. No blame was ever attached to Kruedner.

GEO. F. EDMUNIS, who has represented Vermont in the senate of the U. S. since 1866, and has been for all that time a prominent figure in that body, retires on the first of November next, his resignation having been tendered to the governor of the state and information of that fact communicated to the vice president. "Considerations entirely personal" move him. His term would have expired March 4, 1893. That Vermont will send a good man in his place is a matter of course; that she can send a man to make good the loss to the senate is not to be hoped; the best she has must lack his long experience and his ripened judgment.

RUMORS of Ashland ore contracts at $1 a ton have been free during the week but they have received only passing attention by vessel owners who seem less interested than at any time during the winter. Ore dealers generally expect to get Ashland tonnage at $1, and the few among them who have sold a little ore would take some tonnage now at that figure. Vessel owners feel that the ore men may be successful in this but the announcement of charters at such a figure will not create a sensation. Only a limited amount of tonnage can be expected to accept such a price.—Marine Review.

THE Engineering and Mining Journal is, when it speaks of engineering or mining, authority. When it travels out of its field and attempts to speak of the effect of tariffsit is merely an echo of cobdenism and talks just such rot as does the average importers, organ. An article in its issue of the 4th instant concerning the alleged "abuses in the copper trade" is a case in point. The "abuses" (if they exist, which we do not admit) have no closer relation with the tariff than has an upper peninsula snow storm with the "equinox of Saturn." Ne sutor ultra crépidam applies.

THE Ishpeming Press had information that the sale of playing cards and their use was prohibited in Manistique and made mention thereof. The Manistique papers, however, contradict the report and say that the book of 52 leaves can be procured there, all right, and that pedro, and smear, and, under proper conditions, two-call-five can be indulged in. They don't want it understood that church socials constitute the only form of amusement permitted in their town.

THE BOARD of control of the Coldwater school, after full investigation of the matter, refused to accept the resignation of the superintendent, Newkirk. It does not hold him blameless in connection with the affair which brought on the investigation, but does hold that his error was of judgment only and that his record and his devotion to the school is reason for condoning that one error and continuing him in charge.

THE ATTACK by the anti-Catholic societies of Chicago upon the republican candidate for mayor did not work exactly as was expected. Elmer Washburn, their candidate, comes out at the foot of the poll except for Tommy Morgan, and enough Irish-American votes were cast for Hempstead Washburne to place him at the head and make sure his election.

Ann now comes the Alger County Democrat, published at Munising by Wright & Crowe. Alger county needs two papers about as much as two sets of county officers—there's but starvation for one—but the Democrat will have the best of it for a couple of years as it will get what the state has to give—the tax list.

HAVING FAILED in an attempt to get a new county erected, the Range (of Iron Mountain) does not think it would be an easy ma ter to split the state of Michigan. Our brother Tuten is eminently concet. Unless a party exigency arose and the thing could be worked for the benefit of the party in power the attempt would be hopeless. We must get our law from Lansing.

THE TROUBLE in the Orchard Lake school was much exaggerated in the published reports. The captains of the four cadet companies unite in a statement that the breach of dicipline was not premeditated, but the outcome of a sudden impulse, and that "As a punishment the cadets have been deprived of their usual Easter vacation; and all cadet officers who participated in the movement have received additional punishment according to their rank. For taking part in this affair no cadet has been expelled or deprived of office, and the corps acknowledges the justice of the punishment given.

Never has a more friendly feeling existed between faculty and cadets than during this year; and that relation has not been disturbed in the least by this occurrence."

SOME ANXIETY is already being felt regard ing the large quantity of iron ore on the dokes at this port, and the daily transfer rate will soon be in order. There is about 800,000 ons of ore now occupying the ground on both sides of the river bed, a greater amount than has ever been there before at this time of the year. The large piles of last fall seems hard, ly to have diminished, and 15,000 tons per week has been about the average shipment by cars for several weeks past. Cleveland vessel men are not in any way exercised about the slow movement of the ore, as the 15th of May is yet a long way off, and good lively shipments after May 1st would soon leave room enough for discharging cargoes, especially with the network of Brown's patent hoists and other facilities now on the ground A reduction of wages is the theme uppermost in the minds of ore handlers and other labor engaged at the old river bed yet, the season will be all too short for time to be lost, and an equit able basis will no doubt be fixed upon by the time the ore begins to arrive,-Marine Re

ITALY'S very preparations for conflict have crippled her for it. The equipment of the costliest navy in the world, for the size of i. and the raising and maintenance of the enor mous standing army required by her obligation as a member of the triple alliance, have compelled the expediture of vast sums and the creation of a most burdensome and vexatious debt. It is now at least $3,000,000,000, or $100 for every man, woman and child of her wretched population, by far the largest debt per capita in Furope. More than $100,000,-000 are required yearly to meet interest charges; and these, with other prodigal expenditures, burden the people with taxatton to the constant danger point of revolution, and drive great numbers of them to this and other countries. A cabinet crisis was precipitated not long ago by the government call for an increase of the army, and Italy cannot possibly bear the tremendous cost of war with a power so distant and so strong as the United States. We may possess our souls in peace. - Journal, Detroit.

FREE TRADE TALK about the Brazilian reciprocity treaty's involving a surrender of the protective principle is pure demagogy. Not an article is allowed to come in free from Brazil which was not free under already existing protective legislation. A duty on these articles would be a duty for revenue—in other words, a free-trade tariff. Instead of the treaty's being a concession to free-trade, it is opposed to it, widening, as it does, the distance between our present method of levying duties and the revenue only method advocated by free-traders.

In consistently carrying out its protective policy, the United States government woke up to the fact that it was granting to certain nations privileges in our markets which had for them a money value, while like conces ions were denied to the staple products of other countries. On the other hand, our people were receiving no special favors of any kiad in the markets of these favored nations. Our government was confident that they could be induced to consent to pay for the privil eges they enjoyed by granting to us similar privileges in their markets. The correctness of this view has already been demonstrated by the Brazilian treaty, which makes a wide breach in the Brazilian tariff wall for the entry of American products exclusively. "Ah, but how inconsistent," exclaims the 'reformer," "for protectionists who have just been strengthening our own tariff walls to break down the tariffs of other countries." This also is demagogy. One of the arguments of protectionists is that tariffs hurt the foreign manufacturers against whose products they are tramed. Free-traders hold that the nations levying import duties are the ones injured. Protection says that the removal of duties from any nation's staple products benefits that nation most of all. Free trade sees in this removal only benefits for the nation which re moves the duty. Is it not, therefore, a part of the policy of protection, which has regard to the interests of our own people first of all, to try to gain from foreigners that which it has always held to be advantageous? Have we not always argued that foreigners would profit by the abolition of our tariff on their profit by the abolition of our tariff on their products? How, then, are we inconsistent in applying the same reasoning to ourselves in the case of foreign tariffs levied on our products? The Brazilian treaty is simply the outcome of enlightened protection carried to

DR. JOHN A. WYETH, erstwhile a rebeloldier, in the last number of the Century, has a tale of the horrors of Camp Morton, a prison camp at Indianapolis in which he was confined as a prisoner of war. Dr. Wyeth lies. It is a mean thing to say of him, but he leaves us no alternative. No man who saw rebel prisoners returning, fat and hearty, ready to take musket and haverrack and their place in line of march or battle but knows that he lies. No man who saw rebel prisoners in prison glad to be there, too, for the most part) but knows that he lies. And, fortunately, though most of those who had part in the conduct of Camp Morton are long since dead, there still live those who had knowledge of its affairs, and they know and testify that he lies, "like a shoamaker" There were none in the free states, in position of command or private citi zens, who desired such treatment of prisoners as he alleges-there were thousands who aided such prisoners in every lawful way there were some (especially in Indiana) who were only too ready to assist them in ways that were unla-ful and disloyal. Such a condition of things as Dr Wyeth portrays did not exist-could not have existed-in any federal prison camp, least of all at Camp Morton. Dr. Wyeth just merely lies, that,s all.

TRIMMERS of ore cargoes will be interested in the following, which we find in the Marine Review of April 2. It the machine does the work for which it is intended a couple of hundred brawny fellows residing in our cuy will be "looking for a job:"

In the office of Moore & Gilchrist, Cleve land, there is on exhibition a model of a device tor trimming vessels in the ore trade. A patent has been secured on the machine and preparations are being made for its manufacare and sale. It is a very simple contrivance and is looked upon with favor by vessel mas ters and managers of ore docks who are best fitted to judge of such a machine. A frame is made to fit the hatches of the vessel and upon this frame is mounted a funnel shaped hopper, curved below the mouth of the funnel and long enough to extend a few feet below the hatchway. The curve in that part of the hopper below the hatchway causes the ore to be thrown out some distance from the hatch and the whole machine revolves by means of pulleys upon a circular track, so that the fun nel makes a complete circle while the ore is passing in from the pockets, thus distributing all around the portion of the hold covered by two hatches. It is proposed to work four of the machines on a boat of eight hatches The mouth of the hopper, which will be of 14 inch steel, will be in most cases 51/4 feet in diameter. The contrivance is not a costly one and if it can be made to do the work of trimming now done by hand it will certainly reduce the cost.

CHEAP MEN, not cheap ships, are what give England the carrying trade of the world. Capt. McDougall has just visited the Pacific coast and we clip from an "interview" by the Marine Review:

"The reason why American vessels can not compete with foreign ones is plain enough We saw a most magnificent English ship, the Glen Breck. She was new and as fine a boat as one would wish to see. It was an honor to I went aboard and got acquainted with the captain. He told me that he was paid £18 a month. Think of a master of a first class lake vessel getting no more than $90 a month! The first mate's pay was £8 the second's £4 and poor Jack got but £2.10 The sailors on American boats in the coasting trade are paid $40 a month, as much as a first mate on an English vessel. And the wages paid the Glen Breck officers were high because she was a finer vessel than the ordinary. There were some hogs on the Glen Breck, and it is no ex aggeration to say that the only difference be ween the way that Jack and the hogs lived was that the hogs had cleaner quarters and a little better food.

GREATER things are doing in Australia than the mass of the American people realize. A federation convention has been sitting many weeks, and the Commonwealth of Australia is nearly born. The great Australian colonies. though ready for union, are not yet ready for disunion. They mean still to remain an integral part of the British Empire. They do, nevertheless, so far break with the present state of things as to propose that the Governors of each separate colony shall be appointed, not as now by the crown, but as the Parliament of that colony shall see fit. They borrow, moreover, from the United States the suggestion of a Supreme Court, which shall be the final appellate tribunal. The Australian Commonwealth, like the Federal authority in America, will derive all its powers by delegation and surrender from the separate colonies, and there are many other points in which the constitution of the United States has served them as a model.

Gov. PATTERSON, of Pennsylvania, has distinct ideas as to how mobs should be dealt with. Gen. Wiley, who took the militia into thecoke region had orders as follows:

"All other means of quieting riot and restoring order having been exhausted, the officer commanding the troops shall notify the rioters that they will be fired upon unless they promptly disperse. Should they not disperse the order to fire should be deliberately given. Every soldier will be expected to fire with effect, and the firing be continued until the

THE QUESTION with the producers of ore is not whether they can stand a higher rate of taxation (that is not an open question) but how to reduce the cost of their product so that their customers, the furnacemen of Ohio and Pennsylvania, can compete with the furnacemen of Alabama and Tennessee and so continue to be customers. Nor is the question confined to the producers of non-bessemer ores, either; the success of the experiment, at Chattanooga, in the making of steel by the "basic" process makes the producers of besse mer ores equally interested. Will the gentlemen of the legislature please read up on this point and let the knowledge they acquire have effect on their action.

HEADQUARTERS GRAND ARMY OF THE RE-

RUTLAND, VT., MARCH 4, 1891. [Circular Letter No. 3.] COMRADES:

Assembled as we are at this moment in one simultaneous Post meeting, to commemorate the founding of this our beloved Order, twenty five years ago, there are a few saltent points of our history which I deem it fitting to call to your remembrance at this time.

Dr. B. F. Stephenson, Surgeon of the 14th Illinois Infantry, and Chaplain W. J. Rutledge, of the same regiment, talked, as they ma ched under Sherman in Mississippi in '64, of the capacity for good in an organization of veterans, and agreed, if spared, to work out some plan to that end. In March, 1866, they, with others, met at Springfield, Ill., and on the sixth day of April, 1866, the first Post was young girl. "Oh, by the way," she added, organized at Decatur, Illinois; Comrade granting them a Charter, an exact fac simile of which I send you herewith. The first De partment Encampment was held at Spring-National Encampment at Indianapolis, Indiana, November 20th of the same year. Com rade S. A. Hurlbut was the first elected Commander in Chief, Comrade Stephenson having provisionally acted as such there ofore, and having called together the first National En campment. The violence of political strife at that time involved the new order more or less and substantially destroyed its vitality, especi ally in the section of the country where it had its origin-some of the Departments being left with nothing more than a mere nominal existence, with scarcely a Post in active operation. This was the situation at the time of the second National Encampment, held at Philadelphia, January 15, 1868, and continued till after the death of its founder, Aug. 30, 1871. His dream of an order grandly carrying out his noble conception seemed only a dream never to be realized.

At this point the peerless volunteer soldier. Logan, took command, succeeded in turn by Burnside, Devens and Hartranst. The nine years of service as commander-in-chief render ed by these faithful and devoted comrades, panying bond. now mustered out forever, and the work of the able staff officers of their administrations, laid deep and broad the foundations now so son have lived till now to share with us the fruits of his years of toil, despondency and disappointment, he would hardly recognize this our giant order which when he died was apparently so near its end. Wisely guided and carefully fostered, it has gathered strength each year, and to-day occupies a position of character, beneficence and influence second to no organization of our time. The same conservative course can keep it growing a few years more, despite our increasing death rate; but those comrades who celebrate the semicentennial anniversary, twentyfive years hence, who now turn with thankfulness to the founder and to the preservers of our order, to so conduct its affairs, to so guard it from dissension, and to so keep it true to its immortal principles, that its influence will be felt long after the of effort, each department its burden, to be loyally accepted, performed and borne, with a obligation that is ours.

Forward then, my comrades, into the next quarter century, with the one purpose animating us all, to still further extend our lines and to ight our camp fires yet more widely, not alone for our sakes, but as an inspiration to of the city engineer. the new generation. autiful was she, and fair; ale as marble; and her hair eemed like golden threads just spun From a summer noon-day sun; And the curtains or her eyes Fastened down by fringe of gold

Hid the tiny naure skies Underneath their velvet fold. Scarce a dozen summers old Was this little maid they found, Cold and lifeless on the ground.

So the fishers sadly spread On the beach a ragged coat; Laid upon it B auty's dead; Lifted her into their boat. Tearfully, these fishers brown Rowed in silence to the town. Where the busy, bustling throng, Half in sorrow, half in song, On its way moves up and down.

In the holy chapel place, With a smile upon her face, Lice an angel did she seem Smiling in a happy dream! Now the flahers hear the peal Of the solemn music steal Through the chapei's scented air;

Now with heavy hearts they kneel While the good priest lists his prayer For their little maiden there:

'God of Heaven, earth and love, Look upon us from above In Thy mercy while we pray! Doth a mother far away Long to see her child again? Heal, O God, her grief with love! Comfort with Thy blessed grace All who miss this little face. Bless, O G d, these fishermen! GERALDINE'S FAILURE

The Lesson Learned by Experience on the Real Stage.

"Bravo! bravo!" There was vociferous applause with hands as well as voices "My dear, that girl is a born actress! How different private theatricals are nowadays! When I was a girl-Really-they will have her on again then!

The curtains dividing the audience from the mimic stage were once more drawn a little apart to admit a pretty girl with dark, righing hair and sparkling eyes, who advanced to make her bow in recognition of the plaudits which rang through the room. "Who is she?" asked a visitor.

"A Miss Geraldine Norton," was whispered back. "Hasn't any money, lives with an aunt who rather dislikes private theatricals. Might set her face against them utterly, only, luckily for the girl, she is engaged to a well-to-do young fellow-Sydney Ascot-else she'd have to be a governess." "Is he here?"

"Oh, yes! Behind the scenes! Ha, ha, ha!"

Sydney Ascot was behind the scenes. Indeed, at the wings, with his back against the wall, his arms folded, he had witnessed, with the gravest of faces, the triumph of his betrothed, in "The Belle's Stratagem."

"By Jove, Syd! doesn't she do it well?" exclaimed a friend, standing at his side. "Why, man, what a solemn countenance! Aren't you pleased?"

"Pleased!" was the response. "I wish to Heaven they'd-they'd hiss her." "By Jove-why?"

"Because such applause is enough to turn a girl's head and give her false notions. She'll believe she is a genius. All this will make her restless to achieve more public glories, and be discontented that she can't; while you know, as well as I, Ted, what a vastly different affair is the real thing from the imitation. The successful amateur imagines he or she has but to tep from the mimic to the real stage to score an equal victory, and, oh! the disapppointment! Geraldine is too fond of acting as it is."

"Here she comes," remarked Ted Downes, who deemed it best to slip away roun I the wing.

"Oh, Syd, what did you think of me?" exclaimed his betrothed, dancing up to him. "Was it not delightful? And to know it's all over! Ch, if it were only every every night! But you don't say what you thought of me?" "I thought you excellent-for an ama-

The girl's cheeks flushed a little deeper; a hurt expression settled on her features.

"You are not very enthusiastic, at any rate," she said, her lip curling. "You shall hear what the others are saying-that I'm born for an actress."

"Their praise is very injudicious, my love, if it makes you think that your acting here would be accepted at once on the real stage. There would be a lot of hard work, of drilling, of heart-burning disappointment, my darling, before you could obtain even half a suc-

"Save me from my friends." Their applause has sent many a young aspirant on the stage to sup cruel disappointment. There, darling, you are very clever as an amateur. Be wise, and think mine the truest praise. Thank Heaven, little wife, you have not to experience the falseness of any other." "If I were not going to marry you," observationed, with a toss, "I would go in the stage to morrow. I love it—I

"Because they applanded you," he smiled. "Supposing they had hissed? People are hissed on the real stage, you

She flashed an angry glance at him from her dark eyes.

"I love acting better than anything," she said/pointedly. "I don't believe what you say. I think you cruel, unjust to say it; and I begin to fancy we may not be as happy together as we thought. At any rate, we shall disagree on this point."

"Geraldine! "It's true, I love acting. Oh! I would so like to be an actress."

"Geraldine! Geraldine!" cried a young girl, running up. "Come here, dear; old Mrs. Hudson says she must be introduced to you." Every one's talking of your success."

Geraldine nodded triumphantly, and glanced back at her betrothed, as much as to say: "There, you see," as she hurried off.

"She is one of the sweetest, dearest of girls," reflected Sydney, as he slowly followed; "and they will spoil her. If they only knew what 'getting on the stage' means, they would be careful not to turn girls' or male idiots' heads by their folly. I will see Geraldine's aunt. Thank Heaven, I shall soon be my darling's guardian and protector." Geraldine slept very little that night, being too excited with her success.

Sydney Ascet slept, perhaps, not quite so much, for thinking of her. The following afternoon he carried out his intention of seeing Miss Frob-shere, the aunt of his betrothed. "My dear Sydney!" exclaimed the old lady, "the girl's just lost her head about it. I wish all the private theatricals were at the bottom of the sea, that I do. If a girl, or a young man, is only praised enough by friends, they think they have but to step upon the real stage to become at once a Charlotte Cushman or an Edwin Booth. There is no fever like the acting fever. Why," added the old lady, to Sydney's surprise; "I even caught the disease a little in my young days; only my parents, Heaven bless them, stamped it out." "I don't mind private theatricals," put in Sydney, gravely; "save where it leads to false ideas, and—"

"My dear boy, you can't separate the one from the other. Now there is a letter come from the Griggses to Geraldine, wanting her to play Polly Eccles in 'Caste,' and since not a syllable can I get out of her. I tried by the most enticing subject. 'My love,' I said, 'I was thinking about your trous-seau.' 'Oh, aunt,' she interrupted, 'don't disturb me. I want to learn this part. The Griggses have given me such short notice.' Here she is."

As she spoke, Geraldine came slowly into the room, through the conservatory. Her eyes were fixed upon one of Samuel French's little yellow playbooks, her lips moved. Miss Frobshere shrugged her shoulders.

"Ah, Sydney!" exclaimed his betrothed, looking up, her eyes dancing, "I hope you don't want me to go out? I really must get this by heart. Oh, it's such a nice part—I wish you'd give me my cues."

"All right," he rejoined, taking the book.

"What a good fellow!" and she began. "Well, what do you think, eh?" "Why. I've seen Ada Rehan-a born actress," he said. quietly; "and I must own you don't quite understand the character. Of course it may please your friends of last night-"

Geraldine snatched the book from his

"If you can not approve, you need not insult," she said, coldly, haughtily. "He is right, Dine. What he says is for your good," put in Miss Frobshere.

"My dear aunt, at present being dependent upon you, you of course may say what you please," replied Geraldine, as, with the stately step of a Fanny Davenport, she quitted the room.

She did not appear again while Sydney was there. He went away down-hearted. That golden future. which he had regarded as so securely his, seemed vanishing in the dim dis-

The next morning, while he sat at breakfast, a hurried note reached him from Miss Frobshere.

"Come to me at once," it ran. "I am distracted. Geraldine has gone!"

Gone! For a few seconds he sat motionless, unable to realize the words. Then he sprang up, and was soon hastening to the villa. It was quite true. Geraldine had gone to bed early the previous evening, and next morning her aunt had waited breakfast for her half an hour; then had sent to her room, to find its occupant flown. In vain they searched-not a clew could they discover. They both guessed the truth, and the letter each received that afternoon confirmed it. Sydney's was to this effect:

"My DEAREST:—I am, I feel, about to cause you great pain; but I can not avoid it. I re-lease you; I ask you to release me. We think so differently on some points, that I feel we should never be happy as man and wife. The fault would be mine—I own it. I am conscious of histrionic talents within me, which would be endless misery and regret, did I suppress them. I can not suppress them. I know you are of a different opinion. One day you may have to acknowledge that my friends of last night were right, and you were wrong. In plain words, I am going on the stage, and I mean to be—if not an Ada Rehan, at least a success. There!—it must rest with you how we meet in the future; for I love you, and shall never love another so well, if ever again. "Yours affectionately,

"Is it to be, I wonder, adjeu or our voir?"

"I will find her," cried poor Sydney "Heaven help her! she knows not what she has done. Ignorant, trustful, am-hitious, she will become the dupe of every theatrical agent, every impostor—if not worse. How, too, will she live?

She has no money—"
"Yes, she has," put in Miss Frob-"Her savings bank book has She has over a thousand dollars she'll draw it all out."

"It will be enough for her to live on, thank God, until I find her!" ejaculated Sydney—"until we can persuade her to communicate with us."

But such a result did not arrive. No notice was taken of the advertisements he put in the papers nearly every day, imploring her, in mysterious sentences, to make her whereabouts known—as-

as she wished it she only would write, "Perhaps she has succeeded; she real-fied talent." remarked Miss Frob-ere, compassionating the suffering of her once prospective nephew 'Perhaps she has secured an engagement and gone on the road."

Sydney shook his head. "If she has, she has paid her thousand dollars for it," he replied; "and even then. I think she would be so delighted that in triumph she would write to let us know."

It was no good studying the columns of the dramatic papers to see if her aunt's forlorn hope was correct, for, of course, Geraldine had changed her name. How was be to find her? Oh, if he could! She might go on the stage, she might do any thing, if she would only let him watch over and protect her as a husband. But six months passed away, and there was no word, no sign of Geraldine.

What might be happening to ber? What privations, what suffering might she not be enduring. He knew she would endure much before her pride would let her acquaint them with it.

Sydney Ascot during these months, was never at rest. Night and day, when he knew rehearsals were on he haunted the stage-doors of various theaters. He took upon himself the role of actor, and was constantly paying fees to theatrical agents for impossible engagements, which gave him the right, however, to drop in at all times at their offices, but never did he see or hear of Geraldine. "I must give it up. She must be traveling," he thought, dejectedly, as he sat one morning at breakfast. "I can't search all through the country." He was scanning the advertisements as usual, when his eye lighted on this: "To ladies and gentlemen with histrionic talent. Vacancies. For further particulars apply to Rossmere, No. -Ninety-seventh street, New York City, between three and six p. m."

"It's a last chance. I'll try," decided Sydney. At three he was at the house, when he was shown into a rather large, dingy room, with dark merino curtains over a recess-window. The walls were liberally plastered with the photos of actors and actresses of the day. Theatrical papers were scattered on the table Several applicants of both sexes were already there. Not the form he sought, and Sidney, having tipped the small boy who acted as usher to summon him last, stepped into the deep shadow of the curtain, sat down and waited.

Knock, knock! in they came, dupe after dupe, with hope and ambition or hopeless despair beating at each heart. But no Geraldine.

It was drawing near six o'clock; only one applicant was now waiting beside himself - a showily dressed, much made-up young girl-when the door opened, and-she, Geraldine, entered.

At last! Sydney caught his breath, his brain whirled, he felt suffocating, then he recovered and looked at her Oh! Heaven, what a change! The face was still pretty, but so pale, so lined with anxiety, the cruel hope deferred that maketh the heart sick. She knew the other, for the latter spoke:

"Got no chance yet, my dear, eh?" "No," replied Geraldine, listlessly, sitting down. "I've come here to try; but it's the old thing, of course-a fee, and promises never realized."

"You'd best follow my advice. Take to opera bouffe. You are pretty, with a good figure. You'll get engaged for that, just to stand on in a crowd. It keeps off starvation. Then, in time, you may be intrusted with a line or two starve first." "That's just what I fear you will do, my dear," remarked the actress, as. summoned by the boy, she left the

As the door closed, believing she was alone Geraldine dropped her head on the table with a moan.

"If this fails me," she almost sobbed. "what shall I do?-oh, what shall I do?" "Return to me, to your right home in my heart, my darling, my love. Oh, Heaven is merciful to me, for, at last. I have found you, Geraldine!"

MAGIC LANTERN WONDERS.

Microscopic Organisms Enlarged and Made Visible.

The magic lantern was invented long before the development of photography gave it a practical value," said an expert in sun pictures. "Photography has discovered much more serious and important use for the magic lantern. By its aid the lecturer is able to show the most beautiful photographs, magnified to big d mensions, for the benefit of large audiences. In the same way maps are projected gigantically upon the screen which would require great labor to entarge with accuracy. Magic lantern slides for such purposes are made by photography in this way: A glass negative is obtained from an actual scene, a' photograph or other object, and from this negative a photograph is taken on glass. This latter photograph is the magic lantern slide-a 'positive,' like an ordinary photograph. An interesting and familiar application of the magic lantern is made by revolving two glass dishes with concentric painted patterns in the lantern, working the two in opposite ways by a simple wheel contrivance, so that the patterns are mingled in a beautiful kaleidoscope fash on. But more curious and useful is the idea of placing living organisms within double slides of glass-inclosing water, so that the organisms in question are exhibited upon the screen alive actually, for the study of the knowing and the ignorant. Even the growth of crystals, in process, is shown in a similar way, though not less extraordinary is the method practiced with the aid of the nagic lantern of causing figures upon the white sheet, by a simple device, to grow to be giants that threaten to deour the spectators." - Washington

Physical Perfection.

The love of the beautiful is an instinct of the race. Man everywhere seeks to express this sentiment, a savage in the adornment of his person with garish paints and beads, the great artist in his model of the human form divine. The early lessons in the nursery should instill into the mind the duty of making the very best of the faces and forms God has given us, and the necessity of health to beauty is a truth which needs only to be stated. We all want to be physically perfect, and unless proper food is chosen for each individual, carefully adapted to age and constitution, the process of development is interfered with and illness results. Without nutrition there can not be beauty; without proper assimilation of food there is no nutrition; without proper digestion there is no assimilation.—Albany Jour-

JACK'S MOTHER-IN-LAW.

The Pathetic Tale of a Victim of an Old Joke.

Jack's mother-in-law was coming to make them a visit. Jack had married Alice down in the country, where he had gone one summer for the fishing. He had been so much in love with Alice that he had not paid much attention to her mother during their courtship; and, to tell the truth, he had almost forgotten about her since. She seemed to Jack a good old soul, but rather tiresome and poky. Now, there was nothing poky about Jack's set. Even the old women whom he knew were "up-and-a-coming," as he used to say, so Alice's mother with her quiet ways and almost slavish devotion to her pretty daughter had impressed him more as an adjunct to Alice than any thing else. And now she was coming to visit them. He had not thought of her since five months before, when he had made some excuse to get out of accompanying Alice down to see her.

Alice was one of those selfish little women who often make the most devoted of wives. Just as her mother had worshiped and waited upon her she adored and petted Jack, but there was no room in her heart for any one else except her baby. They had been married a year now, and a little Jack had recently come to them-a red-faced, bald-headed baby-but Alice was very proud of him, and she wrote for his grandmother to come and see him.

Jack was the best-hearted fellow in the world, but he had been brought up very differently from these simple country people. Sometimes he was a little bored even by Alice, although he loved her dearly; but her mother! he was sure he could not stand that, and so he planned to be at home as little as possible during her stay. The gentle old lady felt strange and out of place in Alice's home. The busy city doctor, the pompouts nurse, the servants were all so different from the people she had known, and Jack-she was terribly in awe of Jack. Alice was full of plans and projects for the baby, and her mother was left a great deal to herself. The poor old lady strayed about lonely and homesick in the great rooms, feeling that they all, even Alice, seemed like strangers to her-all but little Jack. Babies are babies, rich or poor, city or country-and she had nursed a good many of them in her day and she did not feel shy with little Jack. And he was part hers—her little grandson. She wished that they would send the nurse away and let her care for him. She held him in her arms and rocked him and crooned an old song in a cracked little voice, quite forgetting that the dignified nurse was in the room. And the nurse's heart softened toward the dear old lady as she beard the song-for her own mother had sung just such songs over her years before.

It happened to be at this time a sort of between seasons for the funny men on the newspapers-that is, too late for the annual ice jokes, and a little early for the ones about the coal-dealer-so they ran in all the old mother-in-law stories of the last decade. Alice's mother read the daily papers from end to end. There was much in them that she neither liked nor understood, but reading helped to pass the time, and she had so much time. She had always subscribed for the little sheet that had come out at "Green's Corners" every Saturday for forty years, but that was purely local. Another man had once bid for trade there, but old Johnson, the "Ed." had told him that he had furnished the brains for that town and had set his own type for forty years and that neither his brains nor his fingers showed any signs of giving out for some time yet. So the Bulletin went on in the old way, giving the deaths and marriages and town topics, and the mother-in-law joke had never penetrated to its columns; and thus it came that to one reader these paragraphs were a novelty.

She pondered much over them, poor woman. She knew that there were such women-Andy Clumm's wife down at the "Corners" was a terror; and the report was that Joe James' mother-inlaw made it so hot for Joe that he had to leave. But then Andy was shittless and Joe was a drunkard. It seemed buruel to her that the men who wrote

ose to them as a man with a motherin-law, for men usually like to pose as something and he was tired of being simply a "good fellow." So he began to take a great many of his dinners down-town and stay out late at night, telling Alice and her mother that his business worried him terribly and needed his constant attention He didn't lose any flesh over these business troubles, but he talked about them a great heal and got a lot of sympathy at

Oue day Alice's mother went down to her home on a business errand It was rather a mysterious affair, but Alice was too much taken up with baby to notice her mother's pervouspess, and nobody else paid any attention to her At night she returned, pale and tired, with a little oilskin bag pinned securely in her pocket.

Jack did not come home that night. he telephoned Alice that business was pressing, and then he went to the theater with some of his friends

The next day the old lady prepared for another expedition She hated to bother Alice, so she set off alone without telling her plans. She was not used to the city and after many mistakes and much walking she reached Jack's office. She was shown into his private room. It did not look as though he were suffering for want of money There were soft rugs and luxurious chairs, and the box of cigars on the table was of the very best. Two of his friends were with him and the air was dense with smoke A bottle of wine stood open and it must have been that the fumes of that had made him a little dull, for he could scarcely comprehend that his mother-in-law stood before him.

When at last he did understand it and she had whispered her errand a flush of shame went from his forehead to his very toes. She was sorry for him. She, whose name he had made a jest with these friends of his; she was afraid that she had been a builden an extra expense to him. She knew his business worried him, and she had mortgaged her little home and had brought him the money to help him out of his em-barrassment; and she was planning to live carefully enough to lift the mortgage so that in time little Jack should have a home whatever happened

One by one her words worked themselves into his muddled brain; and a dim vision of the little one-story-and-a-half cottage, where he had courted Alice, came before him. He put his arms around her and led her to a chair, telling her that he could not talk of it just then, but that she had saved him He didn't say from what, and if she thought it was from financial ruin it was just as well.

Then he put on his hat and coat, and, calling a carriage, said he would go home with her. He helped her gently into the carriage, and then excused himself for a moment and went back to tell the "boys" that the baby was sick and him to come home.—Chicago Tribune

NEW DEMANDS OF SCIENCE.

Larger Opportunities for Scientific Research Needed. Every large university which follows the development of modern science and mathematics is compelled to add new courses of study continually to the curriculum in order that the special investigator shall have the means of pursuing research. In spite of the activity in large universities, thought of modern scientists is even more progressive, and it is possible for the complaint to come that universities do not yet offer wide enough opportunities for study Such a charge is made by Cleveland Abbe in the Atlantic Monthly His plea is for a greater recognition of the claims of terrestrial physics, which embrace the problems "in which we consider the land, the ocean and the atmosphere, respectively, as units, or as parts of the greater unit which astronomers call the earth." The branches of the subject comprise many interesting fields of modern scientific research. Already the conditions of the interior of the earth and the reaction of that upon the surface are the subjects of experimental work. The crust of the earth forms an important branch of study Geology may observe phenomena, but it has not yet been explained whether the general locations of the features of the continents and ocean beds have always been as now, and what the mechanism is of the rise and fall of mountain chains. The subject of earthquakes or seismology has not yet been satisfactorily studied. Nutation and rotation of the earth and the mysterious forces of terrestial magnetism are still secrets held fast by pature. The relation between the ocean and the land, and the problems of the ocean, which forms the branch of oceanography, offer a series of particularly interesting problems The atmosphere is a part of the earth, and great progress will be made in the future in the prediction of daily weather, of extensive climatic changes and droughts and floods. Our signal service and State weather service would undoubtedly be improved by collegiate support. In this rapid review of the suggestions made in an important article it may be seen that quick and lively scientific demands are pressing the universities to recognition of great fields of study. The day of exclusive devotion to ancient literature and the classics has passed, and it is already a question whether the universities will maintain an equilibrium between science and the arts. Modern curiosity is unbounded, and the world holds great secrets for the earnest student.—Boston

A woman whose daughter had recently married was asked how she liked her new son in-law "Oh, he's splendid!" was the hearty sply "Libble couldn't of done better. Why, that man gets up of a morning, gets his own breakfast, does up the dishes, sweeps and dusts, and makes the papers rated all mothers-in-law dishes, sweeps and dusts, and makes with such as they, and she grew so sensitive about her own relation to him that she hardly dared address Jack less he think her a moddler.

Jack read these fanny stories too and the fellows joked him, and he began to the fellows joked him, and he began to the papers rated all mothers-in-law dishes, sweeps and dusts, and makes Libbie a nice dup of coffee and takes it up to her room before he goes to his make o'ry morning. I tell you, Libbie did well to get a man like Frank. IN THE ELECTRICAL WORLD.

-A patent has been taken out in France for an electric furnace for the rapid incineration of human temains. -A lighting plant of eight thousand incandescent lamps is to be installed in the imperial palace in Vienna. -A professor in the Lemberg polytechnic academy professes to have discovered a successful method of photographing by electro-magnetism,

-Henry Kramer, a lineman, recently received an electric shock at I onice lie, Ky., and has become hopelessly insane, believing he is pursued by an electric

-An electric street railway car can be heated by the expenditure of one horse-power of electrical energy. There is no dust, no cinders, and no room is taken from the seating accommoda-

-A new idea in arc lamps is the substitution of a hollow carbon cylinder for the usual upper carbon point and a disc for the lower rod. The edges of the cylinder and disc are in contact, and the light is formed at that point.

-The discovery of electrical tanning which reduces the time of the process from many months to a few days has its counterpart in the alleged discovery of a process by which the time of the manufacture of champagne is reduced from eight months to forty hours.

-A waiter at one of the hotels in Cincinnati came up to the clerk early last evening and said that one of the electric lamps in the dining room wouldn't burn because it hadn't been "filled." Inquiry developed that what he meant was that new carbons had not been put

-It has been calculated that the electro-motive force of a bolt of lightning is about 3,500,000 volts, the current about 14,000,000 amperes and the time to be one-twenty thousandth part of a second. In such a bolt there is an energy of 2,450,000,000 watts, or 3,284,-182-h.p.

-In handling any wire lying over any of the ordinary street wires especially such as convey currents for electric lighting, use a dry hand line for the purpose, or grasp the wire with the insulated pincers. An ordinary clothesline may become the conductor of a deadly current.

-We can take the condenser or a leyden jar and store up electricity in any quantity, and keep it there for a considerable time, and then discharge it at will. We can not do so with light or magnetism, and yet we know that all of these are the one and same thing with only a difference of degree.-Electrical Age.

-A system of electric cabs has been introduced in Stuttgart, with a degree of success that promises the permanent relegation of the cab horse to other fields of usefulness. The new vehicles are already popular, though at present, their novelty has much to do with the patronage they receive.

-The electric motor is a formidable rival of the gas engine, the hot air engine, and the small steam engine; but it has not displaced the large-sized steam engine anywhere. On the contrary, the building of these has been greatly stimulated by the demand for electric light and power stations. Street-car motors of ten or twentyhorse power are common enough, but no one has yet ventured to replace the steam locomotive, generating from a hundred to a thoward horse-power .-

Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph. -An experiment in long-distance telephoning in combination with the phonograph took-place in Orange, N. J., recently. James B. Dill, the legal adviser of the New York and New Jersey telephone company, connected the longdistance telephone in his house with the transmitter of his phonograph and through the central station was connected with Trenton, Philadelphia, New York, Jersey City, Yonkers and finally Boston. A large number of phonographic cylinders were repreduced, and the reports from all the stations were that the records were received with perfect clearness, except in the case of Boston, where the circuit was frequently broken on account of the pressure of commercial business.

-Another electrical engineer, C. O. Mailloux, indorses the opinion of Edison that the real solution of rapid transit demands it to be found in underground roads run by electricity. The invention of electric motors, it should be observed, has removed the chief objection to tunnels, which was that the smoke from engines made it difficult to ventilate them except at great cost. With electric motors there would be no products of combustion to be taken care of, ventilation would become a simple matter, tunnel and cars could be made as light as day by electric lights consuming no oxygen, and trains could be kept running continuously without danger of collision by the use of double tracks and an electrical block system .-Philadelphia Ledger.

CURIOUS MARRIAGE CUSTOMS.

A Russian Bride Binds Up Her Hair-The Sudiar Widow an Outcast.

Among the Russian peasantry a girl after she is married binds up her hair under a colored handkerchief and makes a change in the arrangement of her dress, wearing a second petticoat pinned back over the coarse white linen gown, bordered with red, that falls below her stout knees.

A Turkish woman shows her face to none but her husband.

The Japanese woman scarerly goes out of the house after her marriage, The Sudiar widow—be she a child of The Sudiar widow—be she a child of fourteen years—is a drudge, a pariah, an outcast from the family fife.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL

-All the ame,-A Cincinnati shoe maker bought an old pair of boots of a tramp, who had doubtless stolen them, and when he came to repair the soles he found six one hundred dollar greenbacks nicely tucked away and in good condition.

-Geing It Alone .- A . German of wealth, who has got tired of the world, has chartered a ship to take him to some island in the Indian ocean where he will be entirely alone with himself. In about a month he will hate himself all over, and the fact that he'll have to endure his own society makes his relatives chuckle and grow fat.

-Senator Jones, of Nevada, is one of the most popular as well as one of the most picturesque,men in congress. He is a man who has made a number of fortunes, and his knowledge of the ins and outs of silver legislation makes him one of the best-posted authorities in the senate on financial questions. One cause of the senator's wide popularity is his loyalty to his friends.

-Vinnie Ream Hoxie, the sculptress, is a very little woman, who has been compared to "a plump brown sparrow fluttering in the sunlight." She is quite short in stature, and her hands are infinitely small and delicate. Her face is brown, her eyes dark and vigorous, and her wide forehead is almost covered with a few bangs. She is an emotional little creature, with an alternate tear and smile in her eyes.

-A very graceful compliment was that paid to Mrs. Blanche Roosevelt, the American authoress, by the Russian ambassador to Great Britain. Before leaving St. Petersburg he asked the czarina what gift he should bring her on his return, and she said: "The photographs of six of the most beautiful ladies in London." When the Russian empress received her gift she found five small pictures of Mrs. Roosevelt in different poses grouped around a larger one of the princess of Wales.

-As a writer and speaker, Premier de Freycinet, who has just been elected a member of the French academy, has a thin, elegant, and lucid style. He excels in clear statement, an orderly marshaling of facts, and delicate though striking inuendo. In arguing most he never seems to argue, but gently compels his hearers to deduce the conclusions at which he wishes them to arrive. He is a delightful fireside talker, and one of the best chess players in France. The English of thenew academican is almost as fluent and felicitous as his French.

HUMOROUS.

-Fore-handed .- "But' Carl, you don't kiss me any more?" "How unreasonable! Did I not send you a thousand kisses in my very last latter?"-Fliegende Blatter.

-A Little Irony.-A stove leg passed through the Easton (Pa.) post office the other day. It is not known whether it was on foot or not.

-Mike-"Why do thim false ayes be made of glass, now?" Pat-"Shure, an' how else could they say throo 'em, ye thick head?"-Yale Record.

-Comparing Notes .- "Did you hear the new play at the Thespian last night?" "No. I saw it. Theater party. Did you see the new play at the Histronic?" "No. I heard it. Hat."

-Benevolent Citizen-"You should be ashamed, a man of your physical powers, to be begging a quarter." Tramp-"Ah! Possibly. How would a half dollar harmonize with my prowess?"-N. Y. Her-

-Wife-"I priced the bath-robe you admired so much and found it was thirty dollars." Heavens! You didn't get it, did you?" Wife-"No. I thought it was more than you wanted to pay, so I got a new bonnet instead."-Boston Traveller.

-A Fallen Star .- "Do you know Mouthem, the actor?" "Yes; he is a star; starred it from San Francisco to New York." "So? I didn't know that." "Yes; he counted the rails at night and slept under the hedges by day."-Chicago Times.

-Embarrassing .- "Why is the girl in the middle aisle admiring the frescoes on the ceiling of the church so intently?" "Why, because she's forgotten both her prayer book and her purse, and the man with the plate is approaching her pew."-Brooklyn Eagle.

-Rather Unpleasant .- "Are you out with Mr. Dreamy, the poet, Ethel?" "Yes, I am, the nasty thing. He wrote some lines about a girl at the seashore and dedicated them to me. He had the audacity to call me a sand witch. Made me feel ridiculous."-N. Y. Sun.

-Why He Kicked .- "You want an equal division of wealth, hey? Do you know that if all the property of William Waldorf Astor were divided among the people of this country your share would be only about $1.15? It's a fact. Then what are you kicking about?" Brooks-"I'm kicking for my $1.15."-Chicago Tribune.

-A Keen Sense of Propriety.-Mrs. Toophine-"What have you in gold ear-rings?" Jeweler-"We have bright gold, dull gold, filigree work, incrusted work, etched gold, enameled gold and colored—" Mrs. Toophine—"That last is what I want. Iron River gave Champlin 48 majority but the republican regents 127. The homestead ers backed Champlin.

If you can't, just stay at home and use Dr. | not fail to see, but this calls your attention in

Now and then a fellow will get filled up with "bug juice" before he takes off his working suit, and will be seen on the streets for several days in this perular dress; but usually the woodsman will hasten to/ his boarding place or some clothing store, and will soon appear dressed as well as anybody. The scene is an old one here, yet it never loses its picturesqueness and novelty.-Star, Marinette.

Blaine vs. Gladstone.

Blaine's famous reply to Gladstone has been ssued in pamplilet form. This is one of the ablest presentations of the benefits of Protection yet published, and should be widely read Send for a copy to the American Protective Tariff League, 23 West Twenty third Street. New York, inclosing a two cent stamp. tf

THE PICTURE that the "woods boys" present as they come into town from the lumber camps after four or five months of camp life, is an interesting and novel one to those who have not seen it before. Attired in heavy, fancycolored Mackinaw flannel blouses, with pants, of the same material tucked into huge socks, worn on feet encased in rubbers or shoe pacs, and with a common grain sack which contains his entire winter's wardrobe thrown over his shoulders, he presents a really picturesque scene as he saunters down street from from one of the depots to his boarding place, stopping here and there to greet some old friend whom he may not have seen since his departure for the woods the fall before.
