ALLEGED FORGER TAKEN BY RUSE

Otto Ranke, a man who poses as an instructor in languages and who is wanted on charges of forging at Manitowoc and other cities was arrested in Green Bay by a clever ruse.

It is said by the police that Ranke has tried to work the purchasing of furniture and other articles and offering a large sized check in payment.

Warning that Ranke might reach Green Bay was received from the Manitowoc police.

Among the business houses notified that Ranke might visit them was Fjeldsen & Gretser, furniture dealers.

He examined some furniture looking here to teach German, French and other languages. He departed and returned about 5 o'clock. Henry Fjeldsen got Ranke to walk up stairs to see some pieces of furniture, and while on the second floor left him for a moment.

Mr. Fjeldsen then sent in a hurried call to the police.

FEARS SECRET; KILLS WIFE; THEN HIMSELF

(Special to Morning Press.)
HOUGHTON, Mich., Aug. 7.—Fearing his wife would divulge a secret, Joseph Hensler, returned from Chicago, where he has been since December, went to the farmhouse, four miles south of Houghton, where his wife lived with her five children and two adopted children, and murdered her by slaying her throat with a razor.

Then he ended his own life by severing his jugular vein. Both died almost instantly.

Hensler, who was 42 years old, married the woman about eight years ago, shortly after her first husband Mertes had died under peculiar circumstances.

Mertes was killed at his farm by being crushed to death on a heavy hay press.

Fred M. Olmsted Has Grasshopper Tale That Outhops all Hopper Effusions

Reports of depredations committed by grasshoppers have been coming in from all parts of the peninsula but the grasshopper story now being related by Poor Commissioner F. M. Olmsted outhops the grasshopper tale that has yet come to light. Mr. Olmsted claims that so thick are the grasshoppers in the district along the line of the Beaver branch that a man virtually takes his life into his hands when he ventures there for so voracious have the insects become that everything edible including human beings and clothing, is being attacked. Mr. Olmsted asserts that the Beaver branch of hoppers have a peculiar fancy for clothing of every kind and has a mangled coat and

MENOMINEE WILL GET LARGEST PLANT FOR MAPLE PRODUCT

This Means Work For 150 More Men There

SUCCESS SEEMS SURE

Outlay of $150,000 Will Cover New Plant Which Will be Complete and Modern in Every Detail

J. W. Wells, who recently sold out a large interest in the L. Stephenson company at Wells, is about to launch a new project at Menominee. The Herald-Leader announced that Mr. Wells will probably be the largest maple flooring plant in the world, which will represent an outlay of $150,000 and give employment to from 125 to 150 men, in addition to the force of 200 employes already on the pay roll of the J. W. Wells company in this city.

The maple flooring factory will be erected on the J. W. Wells property by a company to be organized by J. W. Wells, who will hold the controlling interest. The main factory will be 150x350 feet and will be constructed of steel and concrete and will be entirely fire proof.

There will be in addition to this, immense dry kilns and large sheds for storage.

The material will be supplied by the Wells mills at Dunbar and Wausaukee, from which it is expected one third of the product will be drawn.

The success which Mr. Wells has achieved in the many lines of the lumber business which he has developed in the upper peninsula of Michigan and northern Wisconsin leaves no room for doubt that the maple flooring factory will enjoy success and prosperity from the start.

PAVEMENT REPAIRED

The work of repairing defective spots in the asphalt pavement on Ludington street will be started on Monday. A representative of the Barber Asphalt company has already arrived in the city and yesterday morning the tools and equipment for carrying out the work here, were delivered in the city. The company's crew of repair men will arrive here tomorrow morning and the defective spots will be relaid with fresh asphalt once.

The Barber company has been particularly punctual in responding to the city's request for repairs on the pavement and within a few days the thoroughfare will be as perfect as when first laid.

SO GLAD TO SEE SON-IN-LAW, SHE DROPS LIFELESS

(Special to Morning Press.)
ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 7.—Joy at meeting her son-in-law is believed to have superinduced an attack of heart failure which ended the life of Mrs. Hattie Mochrie, 63 years old, of Covington, Ky., soon after she greeted him at Union Station. Mrs. Mochrie came here to visit her daughter, Mrs. T. A. Line. Her son-in-law was at the station to greet her. He stepped toward her as she left the train, and the aged woman smiled in return.

WHITE SHIRT AIDED BY DUST PAN SAVED LIFE OF NICK WHELAN

(Special to Morning Press.)
HOLLAND, MICH., Aug. 7.—A white shirt and a dustpan saved the lives of Nicholas J. Whelan, former speaker of the state legislature, and his brother-in-law Ed Robinson, of South Haven, when they were being tossed helplessly about by waves and wind in a disabled boat and the stiff breeze was blowing them out into the lake.

GERMAN ACTRESS KILLED BY CHINESE

(Special to Morning Press.)
BERLIN, Aug. 7.—When Leon Ling, a Chinese, murdered Elsie Sigel, in New York the German press made violent attacks on the ignorance of American women.

The tables are turned, as a Chinese named Tien Yon, shot and killed a variety actress named Hoffman in her apartments in Frankfurt, and then killed himself.

No murder in years has so thrilled Germany with horror and indignation.

Tien Yon was rich, and he and the girl, noted in theatrical circles for her beauty, lived together in a beautiful apartment in Berlin. She grew tired of him.

FINAL ARGUMENT LEAVES PITTSBURG MAN IN WAITING

NOW, WHAT RESULT? One of Many Verdicts May be Expected From Court Which Promises to Give its Decision on August 12

(Special to Morning Press.)
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Harry K. Thaw's latest struggle to regain his freedom is over. Several possibilities confront Thaw. The court may grant his plea and make him absolutely free. It may decide that he has not established his sanity and refuse to interfere.

He may feel that the young man's mental condition is still in doubt and for that reason delay a final order, meanwhile paroling Thaw.

Or, he may declare Thaw insane, but moved by his mother's complaint regarding his surroundings at Matteawan, send him to some other state hospital not peopled by criminals.

In his closing argument in the insanity hearing today, District Attorney Jerome declared that he believed the entire Thaw family was rather weak minded.

Jerome further declared that he believed that every witness except Evelyn Thaw had told the truth and that he was of the opinion that she had maliciously and deliberately lied.

Jerome closed by declaring that Thaw was an unsafe man to release.

Nick Nicklas was buried in the cave-in with Johnson.

Six miners were caught by the fall of ground, but four were soon taken out and were not badly hurt.

GIRLS HELP FLASHY WOOER BREAK JAIL

(Special to Morning Press.)
BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Aug. 7.—Aided by girls with whom he had become popular because of his charming manner, Frank Wilson, dug his way out of the jail at Buchanan, a village east of Benton Harbor, and escaped 15 minutes before Chicago officers arrived to take him across the lake on a charge of burglary.

Half the young women in Buchanan rejoiced last night while officers searched for the girl or girls who passed a hoe to the prisoner, enabling him to flee.

When it first became known to friends that Wilson was in a cell there was a secret meeting among girls of the village, and it is said several notes of consolation were passed through the bars to the handsome young prisoner.

A hoe was smuggled to Wilson Monday at midnight. With this he tore up the floor of his cell and then dug through the earth to a vault which led to liberty.

The only clue on which the Buchanan authorities are working is a slip of paper which was found in Wilson's cell. The paper bears the word "tonight" and the signature "Alice."

MONOPLANE AND BIPLANE.

The crossing of the British channel is no great matter, except as a spectacle. Longer flights, straight away and in circles, have been made over land. From the trouble the Wrights have with varying air currents over hills and valleys, we should think flight over a level sea easier. It is safe enough with torpedo boats strung along below like nets under a rope walker.

There is more interest in the Bleriot performance and the brilliant failure of Latham as the popular introduction of a new kind of airship. Both these flights were made with monoplanes. That is a smaller, lighter, swifter machine, much affected in France, though not unknown here. These advantages are considered by the friends of the biplane to be more than balanced by its greater stability, shorter radius of turning and perhaps greater carrying power.

The difference is fully expressed by the names. The Wright machine has two parallel sets of wings like the box kite out of which it developed. The Bleriot has only one set of planes, spread out like the wings of a bird. We do not know how far they are movable, but probably not far. These little machines look in pictures like soaring birds. Probably they act like them, the motor and propeller taking the place of muscular power.

But the monoplane has not yet gained the power of moving in any direction like the bird that flies as it soars. It is most effective in the straight course like that just tried by Wright after making circles over

Views of Editors From Other Cities

The country is so sick and tired of the new tariff that, once it is out of the way, heaton of it will be avoided by the capital and labor which have been held up during all these weary months of speechmaking and debate. Tariff post-mortems will appear in vain to the public. Long ago the chief issue ceased to be good tariff or bad tariff; it became a settlement of the tariff uncertainty, so that the industries and business of the country could resume active operations. When capital and labor are back at their old posts, with rising prosperity on all sides of them, the Cummings and Beveridges and Aldriches of the senate and the czar and servants of the house will look pretty much alike to everybody, for the reason that they will not be inspected with one thousandth part of the interest that has been fixed upon the crops, the manufacturers, the merchant transactions, the pay rolls

York Post.

Forty-nine new homes have been nearly completed in the town of Goodman. These with the new saw mill, hotel and other buildings, constitute a good beginning for a five-year town. It is a town that was literally hewed out of the wilderness. There were no settlers there before the Goodman company began operations. A fine new school is one of the advantages which Goodman affords and from time to time other improvements will be made. The community seems to be a happy one. Robert Goodman is the moving spirit of the place and under his guiding hand the town is taking its place on the map. The large mill of the Goodman company is now in operation and is giving employment with its allied industries to several hundred hands. The company will see for a score or more years there and as it is the center of a fine lot of hardwood lands, it will in time become also an agricultural community as well as a lumber town. The country has started on a new era of prosperity and Goodman has started with it and will become one of the substantial, prosperous towns of Marinette county and northeastern Wisconsin. — Marinette Eagle Star.

Walter Mason twangs his lyre to the tune that nothing is so bad that it couldn't be worse," says the New York Mail. Mr. Aldrich probably would consider that quite a compliment, only we suppose, the senator is by no means certain Mr. Mason ever read the tariff bill as proposed by the senate.

Why does the scrub horse always win?" inquires the Denver Post. He does not. That is a fallacy as pronounced as that the amateur poker player always wins.

According to the fellow who juggles figures, India has 26,000,000 widows. No wonder the poor Englishmen are having trouble.

Wouldn't it be dreadful if some of those Thaw alienists should forget which side of the case they are now on?

Who would have thought that a brain the size of Harry Thaw's could have caused so much discussion.

Latest News in the World of Finance and Trade

BOSTON MARKETS

BOSTON.—The Boston market was again active and strong through out the session. The interest at the moment seems centered around the Lake coppers, principally Lake and North Lake, the former closing 33 1/4 the highest price. We still believe in higher prices, and the buy will spread through the rest of the list. The New York market was very strong, new records being made in a number of stocks, Union Pacific and Steel being the leaders. The better grade of coppers should be bought in anticipation of a rising metal market.—HERSEY, of Paine, Webber & Co.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK.—Most of the trading today centered in Union Pacific and Steel, and vigorous strength was noted throughout the session. The crop report to be issued Monday will receive considerable attention, and the strength displayed today is expected to attract large buying Monday. Bank clearings are at high levels and trade reports are very flattering. It does not seem likely that the element in favor of lower prices will make much headway in view of the aggressiveness of the bull leaders. Total sales, $42,300.

THE CURB MARKETS

CURBBS.—The curb market was all Cactus again today, with stock offerings without difficulty as yet, taken up to 4%. The buying is persistent and seems able to absorb the offerings. The copper country is inclined to take profits on this bulge. The close was 4 1/2 to 5%. Indiana subscriptions will open Monday and close on Wednesday of next week. The strength and activity in Lake and north Lake will be of great benefit in a market way to the new issues, and the flotation should be over-subscribed. The stock will be offered to the public, and has been underwritten by strong Eastern people. Live Oak is attracting attention on account of the good showing on its own property and the activity of Miami, its nearest neighbor. The small amount of stock issued makes it difficult to trade in, and present holders seem inclined to hold their stock for much higher prices. Inspiration is one of the low priced curb issues of merit not yet participating in the market activity. Its location, acreage and management, all tend to make it attractive, and it will sell higher. Davis Daly keeps strong and the buying is good. When it seems the price should be higher than it is at present.

MILWAUKEE MAY HAVE CAR STRIKE

(Special to Morning Press.)
MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 7.—It is now practically certain that plans are a foot among street car employees in Milwaukee to organize a branch of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America.

It is said that the result of that plan will be an eventual tie-up of the street car lines here in a strike. It is reported that 350 car men are now pledged to become members of the new organization.

Conditions as We Make Them.

In a way we are all children, but destiny is a good mother when we are obedient to the laws of honesty and goodness. We must work for what we get. We can avoid illness by taking care of ourselves. We can avoid heartaches by growing strong and self-sufficient. We can draw friends to us by being a good friend. If destiny hits us over the ears, or trips us up on the journey, it is a little rebuke that is coming to us and which will make us keep our eyes and ears open and watch the way better.

The Chilly Homes of England. It is largely our own fault if England has earned the reputation of an impossible country to winter in. As a nation we are, I verily believe, the greatest living amateurs in the science of keeping our houses warm. An Englishman's home is his castle; it is also, ninety-nine times out of a hundred, his refrigerator. The truth is that England in winter time is one of the chilliest spots on earth. After some years in America it took me, I recall, 30 months on my return to London to get warm again.—London Chronicle.

Ireland's Story Well Told

History of Race Whose Oppression for Years Attracted World Notice is Told for Benefit of Press Readers.

CHAPTER XI

From Norsemen to Normans.

77. MALACHI AGAIN BECOMES HIGH KING.

On the death of Brian Malachl once more became High King, and filled this office worthily for eight years more, dying in 1022, at the age of seventy-three. During the closing years of his life, he stamped out the last sparks of Danish resistance, and once more defeated the late allies of the Danes, the men of Leinster. We shall find the same provincial kingdom playing a leading part in the events which brought the Normans to Ireland, more than a century and a half later.

78. THE POLITICAL DIVISIONS OF IRELAND IN THE ELEVENTH CENTURY.

Ireland was at this time divided into five provinces or provincial kingdoms, with the kingdom of Meath in the center. In Ulster, the descendants of Niall of the Nine Hostages still ruled, their tribal name being "Sons of Niall." Hy-Nell, or O'Neill. A branch of the Hy-Nell, the Hy-Lochlainn, or O'Loughlin, at this time held the dominant power among the Conohbar, Hy-Conobar, or O'Conors, were the ruling family. In Munster or Muma, with its two divisions of Tuad-Munster, or North Munster, later called Thomond, and Deas-Munster, or South Munster, later called Desmond, the family of Brian, victor of Clontarf, dominated, the Hy-Brien, or O'Briens, Leinster, the fourth provincial kingdom, was governed by the descendants of the king whom we found allied to the Danes (see section 63), and perhaps because the Leinstermen had shared in the defeat of the Danes at Clontarf, we find their kingdom at this time under a temporary eclipse. Each of these warlike chiefs were hardly less powerful than the provincial kings themselves.

79. STRUGGLE FOR THE HIGH KINGSHIP.

The O'Loughlins of Ulster, the O'Conors of Connaught, and the O'Briens of Munster all equally desired the title of Ard-Rig, or High King, which carried with it the overlordship of Ireland and the possessions of the central kingdom of Meath. The period after Malachl the Great, who died in 1022, is filled with the struggles of these families to wrest the overlordship from each other. First one and then another gained an advantage, but none of the contestants was entirely successful in asserting his authority over the rest.

The first to gain a temporary ascendancy was Donogh, the son of Brian Boru, who won preeminence for Munster. He was deposed in 1064, and the overlordship passed to the king of Leinster. Eight years later however, in 1072, Munster again gained the upper hand under Turloch O'Brien, grandson of Brian Boru. Meanwhile Ulster had remained practically independent of the High Kings. Turloch O'Brien made a vigorous effort to assert his power over the northern kingdom, but was defeated by the men of Ulster at the old frontier ford of Al-Fodlad, or Ardee, where Cucauldin, the champion of Ulster, had long centuries before defeated Ferdiad, the champion of the armies of the south and west. The feud passed on to Turloch's son, Murkertagh O'Brien, who became king of Leinster in 1086. For a generation he fought with the chief of the family of Niall, Donald O'Loughlin, for the title of High King.

80. TIGEARNAC'S HISTORY OF IRELAND.

It must not be imagined, however, that this was merely a time of warfare amongst the provincial kings. On the contrary, science, art and literature flourished greatly. One of the great Irish writers of this period, Tigearnac, the chronicler "aparanog of learning and history," as the Annals call him, died two years after the accession of Murkertagh, leaving us his great Latin history of Ireland. This history is a monument at once of the classical learning of the Irish schools and of the historical spirit which had been handed down from the bards and annalists of pagan times. Tigearnac enriches his history with many quotations from Latin and Greek writers like Eusebius, Orosius, Julius Africanus, Josephus and Jerome.

81. THE ROCK OF CASHEL.

This was also the golden age of Irish native architecture. Murkertagh O'Brien, king of Munster, like his great central fortress on the rock of Cashel in Tipperary. The word Cashel means "a stone fortress." Murkertagh made a grant of the rock of Cashel to the church, the beautiful religious buildings which still stand there were shortly afterward begun. The rock itself is which these buildings stand rises sharply to a height of three hundred feet, and thus dominates most interesting building on the rock is King Cormac's chapel, built by Cormac MacCarthy, chief of South Munster, and consecrated in 1134. It is the most perfect example of native architecture in Ireland. King Cormac's chapel has the high pitched stone roof of the early native churches like Saint Columba's house at Kells and Saint Kevin's at Glendalough. These steep stone roofs were so well built and so strong that they have lasted for centuries, while the roofs of much later buildings, supported by wooden beams, have fallen to ruin. Square towers of about fifty feet high stand on each side of King Cormac's chapel, one of them having a pyramid top. The arches in this chapel are semi-circular. In the style later called Norman, but really handed down from the Romans. The cathedral beside Cormac's chapel was founded in 1152. It is a cruciform or cross-shaped church, its ground plan being in the form of a cross. In the cathedral the arches are pointed, or what is usually called Gothic, and the clusters of pillars are elaborately sculptured. Beside the cathedral rises a round tower or more than ninety feet high. The cross of Cashel stands close to the cathedral. At its base the kings of Munster were formerly crowned.

82. ARCHBISHOP MALACHIAS.

The most prominent figure in the religious life of Ireland in the period following the battle of Clontarf was Malachias, to whom the biblical name of Malchias was also given. The Chronicles tell us, under the year 1148: "A synod was convened at Saint Patrick's Isle by Malchias, successor of Patrick at which were present fifteen bishops and two hundred priests, to establish rules and morals for all Ireland, by the advice of synod, went a second time to Rome, to confer with the successor of Peter." A few months later, the Annals record his death: "Malchias, that is Malchias, archbishop of the chair of Patrick, the only head among the Irish and the Foreigners (Norsemen in Ireland) obeyed, chief paragon of wisdom and piety, a brilliant lamp which illumined territories and churches by preaching and good works, faithful shepherd of the church in general, after having ordained bishops and priests, and persons of every degree; after having performed every ecclesiastical work throughout Ireland; after having bestowed jewels and food the mighty and the needy; after having founded churches and monasteries, for by him was repaired in Ireland every church which had been consigned to decay and neglect, and they had been neglected from times remote; after leaving every rule and every good moral in the churches of Ireland in general; after having been the second time in the legateship; after having been fourteen years in the primacy; and after the fifty-fourth year of his age resigned his spirit to Heaven on second day of November and was buried in the monastery of Saint Bernard, at Clara Valls (Clarvaux) in France."

83. THE FOUR ARCHBISHOPS OF IRELAND.

At this time there were four archbishoprics in Ireland: at Armagh, Cashel, Dublin, and Tuam, in the provincial kingdoms of Ulster, Munster, Leinster, and Connaught respectively. The primacy belonged to Armagh, as it had been founded by Saint Patrick. A sentence in the Annals shows now the church revenue were raised at this time: "a horse from every chieftain, a sheep from every hearth."

84. STRUGGLE FOR THE HIGH KINGSHIP.

(See section 79). The kingdoms of Ulster and Munster, headed by Donald O'Loughlin and Murkertagh O'Brien, fought steadily for the overlordship of Ireland for more than thirty years. Worned of strife, these two kings finally left their thrones and entered monasteries, the king of Ulster sought retirement at the abbey of Lismore, in Waterford, where he died in 1119. The ex-king of Ulster passed away two years later. The strife between these two kingdoms weakened them both, and advantage was taken of this by Turloch O'Conor, king of Connaught, who claimed the title of High King, and fought for it against Murkertagh O'Loughlin, king of Ulster, until his death in 1156. This Turloch O'Conor is celebrated in the artistic history of Ireland as having ordered the making of the beautiful Cross of Cong, one of the finest examples of native art and jewel work.

85. REIGN OF RODERICK O'CONOR.

Turlough O'Conor was succeeded by his son, Roderick O'Conor, who carried on the fight against Ulster. Several characteristic and important events and changes took place in his reign, which marked

86. GROWTH OF NATIONAL FEELING.

As a result of the great assembly convened by Roderick O'Conor, national feeling began to assert itself and with it a recognition of the method of conciliation and mutual understanding, rather than an appeal to armed force. Roderick also established a fund for the instruction of the youth of Ireland and Scotland in literature.

Malachl succeeded Brian Boru and ruled till 1022. Then followed a long struggle for control till Roderick O'Conor became High King in 1156. He held, in 1167, the first representative civil assembly of the whole country. Archbishop Malachias, who assembled the church synod of 1148, was the chief religious figure of the period. Ireland was at this time divided into five provinces. There were four archbishoprics. Progress in the fine arts was shown in Cormac's chapel and other epoch. Like all sovereigns of his time, he made many raids and incursions against the neighboring rulers, to bring back "a countless number of cows." With this end in view he undertook a work which, for those times, was a wonderful piece of construction: a pile bridge at Athlone, over the great river Shannon, in order to lead his army into Meath, a fertile field for his raids. This bridge was the first of its kind ever built in Ireland, and was in structure something like the famous bridge built by Julius Caesar across the Rhine, or like modern wooden bridges built on pile foundations.

In 1162, an army was assembled by the king of Ulster, Murkertagh O'Loughlin, to march against Al-Chiath, that is, Dublin, and attack the Norsemen and Leinstermen there. Roderick O'Conor joined the expedition, bringing an army of his own Connaughtmen and the men of Meath. The foray was successful, and "a peace was concluded between the Foreigners (Norsemen) and the Gales; and six score ounces of gold were given by the Foreigners to O'Loughlin, and five score ounces of gold were paid by Dermot O'Melaghlin, to Roderick O'Conor, for West Meath." Here we see the beginning of the modern method of war indemnities paid in money, as against the ancient system of cattle raiding.

Murkertagh O'Loughlin died in 1166, and the claim of Roderick O'Conor to the overlordship was admitted without dispute. In the following year he convened a general assembly from all parts of Ireland. We have already described the great religious meeting, the church synod called together by Archbishop Malachias in 1148. We now come to an equally representative civil assembly, the first which embraces the whole country. This is how the Annals describe it: "A great meeting was called together by Roderick O'Conor and the chiefs of Leat-Cuin, both lay and ecclesiastical, and the chiefs of Ath-Boy (The 'Yellow Ford' in Meath). To it came the successor of Patrick, the archbishop of Connaught, the archbishop of Leinster, the lord of Bregia, the lord of Cril, the king of Ulster, the king of Tara, and Ragnall, son of Ragnall, lord of the Foreigners (Norsemen). The whole of their gathering and assemblage was nineteen thousand horsemen, of whom six thousand were Connaughtmen, four thousand with the lord of Bregia, two thousand with the king of Tara, four thousand with the lord of Cril and the king of Ulster, two thousand with the chief of Offaly, and one thousand with the Foreigners of Chlat (Dublin). They passed many good resolutions at this meeting respecting veneration for churches and clerics, and control of tribes and territories, so that women used to traverse Ireland alone, and a restoration of his prey was made by the chief of Offaly at the hands of the kinds aforesaid. They afterwards separated in peace and amity, without battle or controversy, or without any one complaining of another at that meeting, in consequence of the prosperousness of the king, who had assembled these chiefs with their forces.

In this year, a second assembly was called by Roderick O'Conor to settle a dispute as to the boundary line between the territories of two neighboring chiefs, both of the royal line of Ulster. The Annals say: "They arrived at Tir-Eogain (Tyron), and allotted the part of the north of Silveog Gullion (now the eastern part of Derry; to Nell O'Loughlin for two hostages, and allotted the part of the country of the clan to the south of the mountain to Aed O'Neill for two other hostages." This dispute, half a century earlier would have been settled by bloodshed.

Timely News and Notes for the Realm of Women and Girls

By Fredericka Herman

The SEVENTH PERSON BY BEN MCCUTCHEON

ing a companion. After reading the instructions in the City of Mexico he decided that Mike O'Connor should go with him, but now that he had heard from the engineer and had decided that his services could not be counted on any longer, he felt he could do no better than to accept some experienced man suggested by Mr. Hallington.

Shortly after noon the next day, after he had learned much from Mr. Hallington relative to the trip into the mountains, he went to a restaurant with an appetite that could easily be satisfied. He sat at a table from which he could look into the street, and as he nibbled at his victuals his gloom was inexpressibly great. The coffee had just been brought to him when his eyes almost popped out of their sockets.

Casting his eyes from one side to the other, Mike O'Connor was moving slowly down the street. Jerry rapped on the window frame so excitedly that the waiter and other customers were startled. Mike did not see him until he called out at the top of his voice. A minute later the engineer, a smile lighting his rugged features, was grasping the almost ecstatically eager hand of Jerry Chambers. Mike sat down at the table and soon was trying to answer question after question that Jerry hurled at him.

"I told you I'd stick to the finish, didn't I, Tommy?" said Mike; "and I meant what I said."

"But what are you doing here?" "I was with 'em till I got to Jimenez, and I know just about where they're cooped up now. Oh," proudly patting his chest, "an Athlete man knows how to do a thing or two."

"At Jimenez?" "They got there last night and immediately shot off in a carriage to a small boat in the Florida river, on the edge of the town. They're in the mountains now, for sure, and they're right where things are as tough as whit-leather. I know the man that drove them from the station, and I know a copper who is familiar with that part of the country. He says it's infested with gangs of criminals. I couldn't follow them, and I figured you'd have to be with me in keeping 'em up the chase."

"By George," exclaimed Jerry, "but luck is still with us! To-morrow, Mike, you and little Tommy duck to the mountains. I'll pay you a hundred and fifty a month, U. S., and you don't have to handle a pick unless you—" "Handle a pick?" exploded Mike. "You see—that is, I'm going to try my hand at mining a bit—when we're not on their heels, of course," fumbled Jerry. "I've arranged with a local mining concern to make a few investigations in the mountains near the source of the Florida, and the money will be easy for both of us. Don't you see?"

"Why, that's where the copper said a lost gold mine was—the San some thing or other. You're not after it, are you?" "We can keep our eyes open for it," said Jerry. "But we are after them. Why, Mike, this whole thing is just like a novel, isn't it?" "It is that," said O'Connor, "and there'll be some mighty excitin' readin' afore we reach the happy end, I can tell you."

and who got into the carriage with the bunch at Jimenez. What do you suppose he is—" The man came out of the store with a basket on his arm, and Mike did not finish the sentence. O'Connor, tanned almost to the complexion of a Mexican, went into the waiting room and stood near the ticket-seller's window when the white-whiskered old man entered. He moved up a few feet as the man stepped to the window and took out his purse. Although Riaz spoke in a low tone, Mike's ear was keen enough to catch the word—"Rosario!"

Then he went back to the baggage room, his eyes blazing with excitement, and whispered to Jerry: "He is going to Rosario!"

CHAPTER XXIV. The Old Man of the Adobe.

It would be too difficult to express the surprise and consternation of Jerry Chambers and Mike O'Connor when the train of two old-fashioned, well-worn coaches, in which the total number of passengers was less than 15, stopped at the mountain village of Rosario and Riaz did not get off. They were simply dumbfounded. True, they did not ride in the same coach with him, desiring to be together and not wishing to be seen together by him, but every step.

"He must 'a' floated out of the window," said the mystified O'Connor, as the two stood on the platform and watched the train move southward. "The old trier's a wizard, and simply made himself invisible."

"I'd take an oath he was on the train after we pulled out of Paloma," said Jerry, "for I saw him dozing in his seat, the basket at his side."

"But the train didn't stop between Paloma and Rosario," said Mike, "and the clip was too fast for him to get off. That fellow's a devil in white whiskers, Tommy, and—" Here he stopped and his hand came down hard on his knee. "I know it now!" he exclaimed. "He looks as old as Methusalem, and a man of his age has had enough time gettin' off a train that's standin' still. Riaz ain't an old man at all! He's a young devil in disguise, and he slipped from the rear end while the train was skimm'in' along."

At the end of a few hours they had bought a small skiff and had it laden with their boxes and packages, and it was not long thereafter that Jerry was leisurely pulling down the narrow stream. While he rowed Mike did most of the talking, the subject of greatest interest, of course, being the mysterious disappearance of Riaz.

"If you're sure you saw him at Paloma," said Mike, "he can't be a million miles from Rosario, and where he is they are. I'd like to run into the whole bunch, but I'd hate for only us two to meet 'em face to face."

The sun had just sunk behind a distant mountain when the intersection of the two branches of the river was reached. To the right of Mike great ragged cliffs rose thousands of feet, and to his left mountains, blackish-green in spots, rolled far to the north. The skiff was grounded on the bank a few hundred feet below the fork, at a spot which promised a suitable place for the camp. The small tent was put up about 40 feet from the bank, behind a clump of bushes, which screened the view from the other side of the stream, and the boat was carried into the brush.

Both men were thoroughly tired when they lay down and smoked their pipes. "Mike, this is the most secluded place on earth," said Jerry, after a long silence. "Wouldn't it be fine to turn a few owls loose and let a lost dog howl 'round here in the dead of night?"

After partaking of some coffee, bacon and bread they stretched themselves out and fell asleep. The earliest sign of day found them awake and much refreshed. The first thing Mike said was: "I had a devil of a dream, Tommy. I dreamed I saw a man goin' down the other side of the stream with a lantern in his hand, and he had a dog with him. The dog barked and the man—I think he was old, from the sound of his voice—talked to him just like he was a man, too. Then the old coddler turned into the bushes and disappeared. The dog kept barkin' and barkin' till it sounded like it was miles away. I think I woke up, but I'm not sure about it."

"What's the old saying about dreamin' the first night in a new bed?" laughed Jerry. "It's a sign the dream comes true," answered Mike; "but I don't want this one to come true. That dog was a big devil, and the man looked all in a hump. I don't remember what kind of a face he had, but it must 'a' been a dandy to wake me up."

He was surprised to find fresh foot-prints in the soggy soil. Going into the bushes he found a well-worn path. He did not venture far, but hastened back to the camp, which Mike had reached a few minutes before. His excited manner brought Mike to immediate attention.

"Mike O'Connor," said Jerry, "I'll bet you didn't have a dream last night." Mike simply stared. "You did see a man and a dog. I'll stake my life on it."

"How do you know, Tommy?" "Where was it the man disappeared?" "Right over there," answered Mike, pointing in the direction of the opening in the bushes.

"Then, that's where you saw a real man and a real dog, so I found an opening and a path right there, and in the path were fresh prints of a man's bare feet and a dog's feet. There is somebody else around this locality, Mr. Michael Aloysius O'Connor. But who in thunder can it be? Who could be going around bare-footed with a dog? Surely, not Andre or Felipe, and I don't think it could be Riaz. There are too many burs and rocks along the bank for anybody with the price of a pair of shoes to be going bare-footed."

"Shall we investigate?" asked Mike. "Of course, but we must be mighty careful. It may be that one of those gangs the copper was telling us about has its headquarters around here, and if we ever stumbled on to it, it would all be off with two fellows I'm acquainted with. What have you to suggest?"

"Well, afore we follow up that path," said Mike, "we might climb up the cliffs and see if we can locate any tents or shacks from a distance. We might be able to get a line that way. Then, if we can't see anything up there, we'll simply have to take a chance and pick our way along that path till it brings us somewhere or another. And we might as well start right away."

Half an hour later Jerry and Mike were climbing the cliffs on the other side of the stream, but although they got a good view of the land, they saw no sign of habitation. They had almost reached the base of the cliff when the faint barking of a dog reached their ears.

"Did you hear it, Tommy?" asked Mike. "It was that same dream dog of yours, Mike." "Then, by golly, it wasn't a dream after all, was it? It sounds just like it sounded last night." The barking of the dog sounded nearer and nearer, and the two secluded themselves.

"It's lucky we hid the boat in the grass," said Jerry. "Oh, an Athlete man thinks of a thing or two," whispered Mike. Presently they saw a big dog run up the bank, barking as though in play, and then plunged into the water. As it swam back to the bank an old man, bent with age, moving slowly, appeared in view.

"That's the old devil," whispered Mike, "and now I can get a look at his face. By golly, he must be 1000 years old, and I'll bet he don't weigh 16 pounds. Did you ever see such a skinny old cuss?"

A few minutes later the old man reached a spot within 20 feet of where the boat was hidden, and sat down laboriously. In faint, trembling Spanish he talked to the dog.

"Yes, you shall have food," said he, his arms around the dripping dog's neck, "and you shall have sport. But what are you going to do when old Jose is gone, faithful brother? Who will play with you then? Who will get you fish and game? Who will help you—" Here he brought his hands to his eyes and shook with sobs. With great labor he got to his feet and started to retreat his steps. Jerry and Mike picked their way after him, going through dense underbrush, and, to their surprise, soon reached a pathway. They no longer heard the barking of the dog.

"Let us follow this path," suggested Jerry, and a moment later he was leading Mike through the brush alongside the crooked pathway. After half an hour they came to an open space, and the path was lost.

"Now, where do you suppose the old devil went?" said Mike, scratching his head. "There's nothin' afore us now but the mountains, and we don't know which way to go."

They decided to lie in wait another hour for the old man and to station themselves near the opening in the underbrush. When they returned to the camp they tried to figure out who the man could be and what he was doing in this part of the country, far away from any habitation and, judging from the words they had heard him speak, with only his dog for a companion.

For three days, from the first sign of dawn to the fall of night, one or the other was stationed at a spot immediately across the river from the beginning of the pathway in the bushes. But not once did the old man or his dog appear.

"I guess we'll have to go out and hunt him ourselves," said Mike. "He don't seem to be comin' our way himself."

Early in the morning of the fourth day Jerry and Mike, armed with revolvers, started out to find the old man. They had walked about 100 yards when they came to two paths, one turning abruptly into much heavier undergrowth.

"This is a new one," said Mike, "and the chances are he didn't follow the other at all when we saw him."

They followed the new-found way for several hundred yards, finally coming to another open spot. Again the path was lost.

"Now, what do you think of that?" said Mike, "I don't know what he's doin'."

Money is character; money also is power. I have power not in proportion to the money I spend on myself, but in proportion to the money I can, if I please, give away to another—

some prints in the sand, but there ain't a sign of a foot." "The chances are, Mike," said Jerry, "that he turned off the path somewhere back in the bushes. Let's go back that way and keep our eyes open wider."

They retraced their steps about 100 feet when Jerry suddenly stopped and clutched Mike's arm. "Hear?" he whispered. "It's a groan," answered Mike. "It's to our right. Hear? There it goes again. It's the old devil! What shall we do?"

"Let's find out," said Jerry, and it must be confessed that his fingers were very nervous when he gripped his revolver tighter. They picked their way through the bushes, the moaning of the man becoming louder and more distinct. Presently they emerged to find themselves within 20 feet of a thatched-roof adobe. ## GIRL OF 14 SOON TO BE A BRIDE

(Special to Morning Press.)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 7.—Helen Stobba, aged 14 who will soon marry a man 26 years, cannot understand why public comment has arisen from the fact that she intends to continue playing with her two favorite dolls after she has been given the prefix Mrs.

Little Miss Stobba blushing admitted that she was rather young to be married, but defended her position by saying: "Leon and I have been in love ever since he came to board with my parents. He is able to make a living for both of us, and I can keep house as well as my mother; so why should we wait any longer?"

"I am going to live with my mother for a while after my marriage, so it won't be as if I were going away where I could never see my parents again," said Miss Stobba. "While I am home I will keep my dolls, but when we go to live by ourselves I will give them to my younger sister. I admit I like to play with dolls, and my getting married won't make me care less for them."

Miss Stobba is to have a regular church wedding with flowers, bridesmaids and flower girls.

1221 Ludington Street Escanaba, Michigan

WILL OPEN HERE

Through arrangements that have been made by Manager Benjamin Sallinsky of Ben's theater that amusement place will be reopened to the public on Aug. 23, with strong repertoire companies the house being opened by the Maude Henderson Company, one of the strongest repertoire aggregations in this district coming here a week's engagement.

"Paid in Full," the reigning success of both the New York and Chicago seasons, is under lined and throughout the week the company promises a line of plays never before seen in this city at popular prices.

"Over the Ridge" a sterling story of life in the Tennessee hills during the reconstruction period immediately after the Civil War, is another of the bills. The plot of the play is well knit, smooth running and the clear cut story is told in simple language with very little straining for dramatic effect, the situations, coming of themselves naturally.

The Maude Henderson Company this year, is even stronger and better balanced than the excellent organization that was here under the same management several years ago, the players all having evidently been chosen for their fitness for the roles they are to portray.

The specialties, of which there are quite a number, are far above the average. "The Tie that Binds," Clyde Fitch's most successful play, is included in the list with strong specialties arranged for every performance.

A Cockroach Remedy. A housekeeper who was recommended to try cucumber peellings as a remedy for cockroaches strewed the floor with pieces of the peel out not very thin and watched the sequel, says a writer in Suburban Life. The peels covered the peel in a short time so that it could not be seen, so voraciously were they engaged in sucking the poisonous moisture from it. The second night that this was tried the number of cockroaches was reduced to a quarter and none were left on the third night.

SLIPPERY RAILS ARE TROUBLESOME

The Norway Current says:—"A local switch crew was "up on the carpet" in Escanaba, Thursday to stand examination for a wreck which happened on the Saginaw spur, Wednesday.

"The boys had taken down a string of eight loads and were backing down with eight more. The rails were slippery—it was a case of non-control and a heavy bump resulted when they reached the eight cars standing with brakes set. The tender was badly disfigured.

Air and sand were both tested before starting down and found all right."

Mirror for the Sick Room. "Only a hand mirror should find place in a sickroom," said a doctor, "and it should be one flattering to the patient—the kind, for instance, which if the face is too broad, will lengthen it a little. And the patient should only be allowed to look in the mirror at propitious times. Many a patient has been frightened literally to death by his haggard reflection—as looked, sighted, and renounced hope. But many another patient in a really bad way—really desperate, too—being given a look at himself just after he has taken a stimulant, has buckled up wonderfully. In fact, a sickroom mirror, wisely handled, is a curative agent, while recklessly handled it may kill."

INSTEAD OF LIFE

(Special to Morning Press.)

GLASGOW, Ky., Aug. 7.—Considerable surprise and disappointment was manifested here to-day when the sulphur well was closed down by the order of the City Council.

This step was taken on account of a recent analysis of the water which showed it to be impure.

The analysis was a surprise, as the water has been used all the season by almost the entire population of the town, who thought it contained fine medicinal properties.

The well was drilled in Court Square several years ago and at a depth of slightly over one hundred feet of fine flow of sulphur water was struck.

Recently a seeming epidemic of typhoid fever prevailed in the town there being cases in almost every section. This has been the source of much speculation. As a last resort a sample of the water from the sulphur well was analyzed with the above results, which leaves but little doubt that Glasgow's famous well is the source of most of its ill ness.

In Current Magazines

The slogan "Save the Children," which has been raised in the attempts of reformers to remedy the evils often threatening child-life in the home, school and factory finds ringing echo in Physical Culture Magazine for July. Bernarr Macfadden, the editor, makes some strong and striking statements. He accuses the government of evading its responsibility in not assuring to every child the environment and advantages necessary to bring it to vigorous adult life.

In his opinion every motherless or fatherless child should be educated and cared for by the government. This issue also adds impetus to the current crusade against consumption in an enlightening discussion of the consumptive germ, and methods of resisting it, and supplies a series of remarkable remedial exercises for those suffering from weak lungs or incipient consumption. A seasonal article on swimming, the aspect of religion to the Physical Culture movement, and an interview of Horace Fletcher, the world renowned authority on mastication, also appear in this number. Other interesting articles are: "Rounding out Unsightly Hollows," "Ironworkers of the Sky," "America's Decreasing Birth-rate," "Fruit for Strength Building," and two splendidly illustrated lessons on the art of Jiu Jitsu. The monthly supplement, illustrative of exercises for "Developing a Powerful Physique" accompanies this unusually strong issue of a always interesting publication.

QUEEN OF FAKERS CAUGHT IN FRISCO AFTER A LONG CHASE

(Special to Morning Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—Accused of having swindled railroad companies in New York, Portland, Seattle, Tacoma and other cities by means of sham injuries received in alleged fake accidents, a woman giving her name as Mrs. Maud Myrtle Johnson was arrested at the Merritt hospital in Oakland. She will be held pending action by the Seattle authorities.

Frank and Luther Johnson, who were traveling with her, also were taken into custody. The alleged identification was made by a claim agent of the Oakland Traction company, who went to the hospital with detectives and declared he recognized her as "queen of the fakers," for whom many railroads have been searching.

According to the police, Mrs. Johnson's method is to throw her limbs out of joint and put a red powder in her mouth to simulate hemorrhages indicating internal injuries.

WOULD STOP SALE AND USE OF ALL TOBACCO

From various points about the State of Michigan has come the word that the W. C. T. U. is planning to follow the anti-liquor crusade with one against public smoking. At several W. C. T. U. meetings out in the State, speakers declared that we would have this prohibition in 1911 and that this would be immediately followed by war on the use of tobacco.

Mrs. Annie L. Andrus, prominent in W. C. T. U. work in Detroit, declares that these plans will be followed out. She says:

"We are sure to win not less than twenty counties to prohibition by the local option vote next spring and our battle cry for this year is 'State-wide prohibition in 1911.' In the meantime our work for social purity and against the use of tobacco is going forward steadily, as is witnessed by the action of the Michigan Legislature in its legislation against the sale of cigarettes last winter. Our work for social purity and against tobacco is going forward hand in hand, and I am sure that within a very short time, immediately after we have won the State for prohibition, we will have obtained the strength necessary to legislate out of existence the manufacture, use or sale of tobacco." Square Deal.
