

FULL PROGRAM FOR CELEBRATION IS OUT

Committee in Charge of Plans for Homecoming Demonstration and Farmers Picnic Finishes Work

WILL OPEN AT NOON THURSDAY

Address by Hon. David S. Rose of Milwaukee Will be Feature of Second Day's Program. Something Doing All the Time

The complete program for Escanada's big home coming celebration and farmers picnic on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, was announced in detail by the members of the celebration committee last night.

The greater portion of the work in preparing for the three day program has been completed but a number of details yet remain to be adjusted and the early days of the week still continue to be busy ones for all of the different committees.

Throughout the city yesterday gratification was expressed at the success of the committee in being able to secure Mayor David S. Rose of Milwaukee to come here to deliver the principal address of the celebration on Friday afternoon. Mayor Rose is recognized as one of the leading orators of the west and his coming to Escanada will attract visitors from a wide range of territory.

Following is the program of the three days announced by the committee:

THURSDAY, AUGUST 26,
Home Coming Day.
During the day there will be band concerts on Ludington street, an automobile ride about the city and surrounding points of the home comers and a home comers reception. A committee of fifty prominent citizens will have charge of the reception and entertainment of the home comers 7:00 p. m.—Opening of exhibits at Peterson's hall, to continue open throughout Friday and Saturday.

8:30 p. m.—Wonderful electric wire performing act by Prof. Frederick Dabell, corner of Mary and Ludington streets.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 27.

DETROIT PASTOR DISAPPEARS AND FLOCK WONDERS

PROMINENT CLERGYMAN HAS LEFT FAMILY FOR PARTS NOT YET KNOWN. SCANDAL HINTED, BUT CHURCH TRUSTEES ARE UNABLE TO EXPLAIN ACT.

(Special to Morning Press.)
DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 21. The Rev. Carl S. Jones, who was associated with Rev. William Byron Forbush in the pastorate of the North Woodward Avenue Congregational church, has disappeared.

On Sunday morning, Aug. 1, he preached to the congregation the last sermon before his vacation. That afternoon he took dinner with his father.

Early in the week, his wife, who had been spending the summer with him and their two young sons at Canaan lake, near Ann Arbor, received a letter from him stating that he would be detained in the city until Wednesday or Thursday.

As he did not arrive on either of those days, the last of the week Mrs. Jones telephoned to his father and she waited until Monday, the 8th, when, returning to their home at 138 Josephine avenue, she found papers that indicated he had made a deliberate and permanent departure.

ALONZO HONORED

The many friends of A. R. Northrup will be gratified to learn that he has been appointed by the authorities at Washington as the premier gardener of Escanada for the year 1910. This is the second time that Mr. Northrup has been so highly honored and it is doubly gratifying both to himself and friends that on each occasion the honor has come without any solicitation on his part. Mr. Northrup has been so signally arranged is looked upon as an authority on all matters pertaining to gardening in this immediate district and undoubtedly any suggestions made by him will be gratefully received by others striving to achieve the honors he has already attained.

NEW RESTAURANT IS OPENED HERE

Mrs. Minnie Barnes, who has been employed in different restaurants of the city for some time, has opened a new eating house on Elmore street immediately off Ludington. Mrs. Barnes is an excellent cook and has fitted up a neat dining hall at the new quarters.

PRESENTIMENT KEPT MAN FROM BEING SERIOUSLY INJURED

Only a strange presentiment of a threatened accident prevented T. W. McLean, editor of the Square Deal, from being seriously injured yesterday morning at his home at 1311 Hale street. Mr. McLean was at work in his study at the home when an inexplicable feeling came over him that something was about to happen. Although he was in the midst of an article which he was writing, he left his work and walked outside to the porch. Scarcely had he reached the door when with a crash the entire ceiling in the room in which he had been sitting gave way. Great pieces of plaster fell about the spot where he had been sitting and had not Mr. McLean received the peculiar warning he undoubtedly would have been hurt.

DIVORCE EVIL FOUGHT BY STATE LAW CRITICS

PURPOSE, UNIFORM LAW FOR MARRIAGE AND TO STOP JUVENILE WEDDINGS

(Special to Morning Press.)
DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 21.—The commissioners on uniform state laws expect soon to get down to the consideration of a uniform state law governing marriage.

The committee has aimed to draft legislation that will not only prevent improper marriages but that also will prevent common law marriage by making the latter an offense.

A physical examination of parties to a marriage will not be included, but the age provisions will be strict. Couples under 21 years of age must have their parents' consent, according to the committee's draft, and couples over that age must furnish ample proof of their age statements.

ELECTRIC IRON SMELTER.

Redding, California, is trying the electric iron smelter with excellent results. The iron is said to be the finest for casting and can be delivered at $25 a ton. Iron beds far from fuel supplies will be conserved by this method.

BUCKET SHOP LEAK FOUND BY POLICE

ST. LOUIS QUARTERS OF CON WHICH SECURED QUOTA. TIONS, RAIDED.

MAN WITH GLASS READ FIGURES FROM WINDOW.

PHONE CARRIED INFORMATION TO "CENTRAL" WHERE WIRES SUPPLIED BRANCHES.

(Special to Morning Press.)
ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 22.—Four hundred and sixteen "bucket shops," stretching from Jersey City to Denver are without quotations to day, following the discovery by St. Louis police of the alleged headquarters of the concern.

The evidence that the police have gathered will be laid before the grand jury in September.

The discovery of the headquarters was an accident on the part of the detectives.

They entered a building near Pacific and Twelfth streets and went up stairs where telegraph instruments were heard clicking. On the third floor, over a harness shop, they came upon the operators' room. There ten operators sat at ten telegraph instruments, ten boards were busily making entries.

Then a second detachment was sent and investigation made. One telephone was found to run to an office building overlooking the chamber of commerce. In this office a man with his head in a telephone gear and with a spyglass in his hand scanned the boards below and he phoned the quotations to headquarters operators.

CALLS MINISTERS "LOT OF HIRELINGS"

(Special to Morning Press.)
PHILIPSBURG, N. J., Aug. 21. Mrs. George Frey, who for 14 years has suffered under the suspicion of her neighbors that she had flogged done away with her husband is now enjoying her day of triumph.

With the long-missing husband seated beside her she is driving throughout the countryside, calling farmers' wives from their homes and exhibiting the man.

After a quarrel with his uncle, Frey ran away. He went to Cuba go, where he says he has since accumulated a modest fortune as a building contractor.

SUFFRAGETTE FLAYS MEMBERS OF NEW DANISH CABINET REMOVED.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 21.—The members of the Folkensberg, who met for the first time since the formation of the new ministry, were treated to a lively overture by Mlle Westenholtz, a suffragette.

Forcing her way past the door keepers, the woman planted herself in front of the president's chair and gave the deputies a verbal trouncing.

"Here you sit," she cried out, "you Danish men, haggling selfishly in a lust of power over the woe and woe of the women. But the omen of Denmark, I tell you, disown you and brand you as a lot of hirelings, belonging to no country, who betray the honor of Denmark."

The bell of the president and a fire of interruptions from the deputies had no effect on Mlle Westenholtz, who concluded her speech before officers seized her and removed her from the chamber.

BODY IS BROUGHT HERE FOR BURIAL

The body of John Foy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Foy formerly residents of Escanada who died at the home of the family at Minneapolis, was received in Escanada yesterday morning and after being taken to the undertaking rooms of J. A. Allo, was removed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Burney at 321 North Jennie street. Funeral services will be conducted over the body at St. Patrick's church at 9 o'clock on Monday morning. The body was accompanied to Escanada by the mother and yesterday the father and sister of the young man arrived here from Milwaukee.

DECLARES FOR CITY GAS PLANT

PORT HURON COUNCIL FINALLY DOWNS THE FRANCHISE PROPOSITION.

(Special to Morning Press.)
PORT HURON, Mich., Aug. 21.—By a vote of 18 to 1 the common council of this city has declared against farming out the gas business in the form of a franchise to a private corporation, and in favor of establishing a municipal plant.

The franchise of the Port Huron Gas Co., has expired. It was furnishing gas at 50 cents for fuel and $1 for lighting but when a renewal of the franchise was balked in the council it boosted the price to 50 cents flat and again asked for a franchise. This was refused. The rate was then made $1 flat.

TROUBADORS TO ATTRACT GREAT CROWD TO HALL

It is expected that St. Patrick's hall will be crowded to its greatest capacity tonight when the Troubadours will appear at that place in one of their delightful programs. The troubadours have appeared in Escanada on other occasions and each time have delighted large audiences and it is fully expected that former triumphs here will be duplicated tonight. Miss Emily Murray is easily one of the most accomplished readers ever to come to this city and associated with her are talented musicians who add much to the attractiveness of programs that are arranged.

"VICTIM" RETURNS AFTER 14 YEARS

Officials of the Northern Asylum for the Insane at Newberry will arrive in Escanada on Monday to take charge of Henry S. Severin, an inmate of that institution who escaped three weeks ago. The insane man was captured by Under Sheriff T. J. Curran at Maple Ridge and is now locked up at the county jail.

ARRIVALS AND CLEARANCES.

Arrived: Merida, Bancor; Cleared: Maryland, McKimney, Roman, Christopher, Lake Erie; Portland, Portland.

Morning Press Job Work orders will be taken at fair prices during twenty-four hours every day except Sunday.

JAMS MAN'S BODY INTO SIDE OF BARN

RUNAWAY THRESHING ENGINE CAUSED DEATH TO ITS OPERATOR.

(Special to Morning Press.)
WAYLAND, Mich., Aug. 21.—The bell can operated the separator ran off the pulley of the engine being run by Abner Watkins and in its flight struck the chain and started the engine backward.

Watkins fell off the platform and was pinned between the engine and the barn and crushed to death.

His body was wedged between the engine and the building in such a manner that a large section of the barn siding had to be chopped out before it was released.

Watkins had operated a threshing outfit for 20 years.

COMMITTEE IS MAKING PLANS FOR CELEBRATION

Members of the special committee named by Mayor Solomon Greenhouse to arrange definite program for home coming day in Escanada, met at the city hall last night and outlined plans that are to be followed. Different sub-committees were named last night by Hon. John Power, head of the general committee and on Monday evening the sub-committees will report at another meeting at the city hall. Today the different working committees will meet at different places and plans for the undertaking will be made as elaborate as possible in the time that is given.

ESCAPED INSANE MAN IS CAUGHT

Officials of the Northern Asylum for the Insane at Newberry will arrive in Escanada on Monday to take charge of Henry S. Severin, an inmate of that institution who escaped three weeks ago. The insane man was captured by Under Sheriff T. J. Curran at Maple Ridge and is now locked up at the county jail.

BODY IS RECOVERED FROM BOTTOM OF BAY

Working under the direction of Coroner L. O. Kirtine and Patrick Coffey searchers yesterday morning recovered the body of John Lauder ville from the bottom of Little Bay de Noc where he was drowned on Tuesday while attempting to save the life of his son.

The body was recovered nearly 200 feet north of the spot where the man was seen to sink beneath the waves and was excellently preserved, decomposition not having yet set in.

Immediately after being taken from the bay the body was removed to the undertaking rooms of J. A. Allo where it was immediately prepared for burial.

At 1:30 o'clock this afternoon funeral services will be conducted over the body from the undertaking rooms and the interment will be at St. Joseph's cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. David Derosier of Wetmore, Mich., mother and step father of the drowned man arrived in the city last night and went at once to the undertaking rooms where they were permitted to view the body. Mrs. Derosier fell into a deep swoon on seeing the body and it was several minutes before she could be revived by a physician who was called.

Other relatives who have arrived in the city to attend the funeral are: Mrs. M. M. Scott, Joseph Scott, Mr. and Mrs. V. Ketcham, Mrs. Bodette, Fannie and George Bodette, all of Wetmore. The surviving brothers and sisters of Mr. Lauder ville are William, Joseph and Charles Lauder ville and Mrs. M. M. Scott.

COUPLE MARRIED HERE LAST NIGHT

In the presence of a great number of friends and relatives Miss Irene Holm and Peter Backlund, were married at their home last night. The ceremony was performed by Judge O. V. Linden and the home was crowded with guests to witness the affair. Following the ceremony a reception was held and the guests made merry until a late hour.

CHILD RECOVERING FROM INJURIES

Although suffering a long cut across its face and forehead and a the mother and yesterday the father of Louis Johnson of Escanada township, who so nearly escaped death in a runaway last Sunday, is fast recovering. The child has now almost fully recovered from the shock and the injuries are healing rapidly.

RUNAWAY AT ALFRED RESULTS IN DEATH OF TEAMSTER WHOSE HEAD WAS CRUSHED UNDER WHEELS

Thrown from a heavy wagon during a wild runaway at Alfred on Friday Frederick Springer a teamster employed by the H. A. Bauman company, met instant death, when one of the wheels of the wagon passed over the unfortunate man's head crushing his skull. Springer was engaged in hauling shingles from the mill and in crossing a railroad track two of the bunches fell from the load striking the two horses.

The team bolted and although the driver made a desperate effort to control them he was unable to bring them to stand still. Plunging from the road into a strip of cut over land the wagon struck a log and Springer was pitched forward. He fell beneath the wheels of the wagon and one of the heavy rims struck him at the back of his head causing instant death. The runaway was witnessed by a number of employees of the company at the mill, who rushed to the fallen man's side and it was seen at once that no help could be given.

The coroner of Dickinson county was notified but as the accident was witnessed by a number of people it was not thought necessary to hold an inquest. The body was brought to Escanada and taken to the undertaking rooms of D. A. Oliver where it was prepared for burial and last night was shipped to Danville, Mich. where relatives of the dead man reside.

Springer was 34 years of age and had been employed in this district for several years.

IRELAND'S STORY

WELL TOLD

of the soldiers died of cold and famine, an this incessant hardship discouraged the hitherto indomitable Scottish king. Believing that any more complete victory in Ireland was impossible, he returned to his own country, leaving Edward to face his troubles alone.

105. END OF BRUCE'S INVASION. The closing of Edward Bruce's invasion was fought at Faughart north of Dundalk, in October, 1318. The Normans under De Bermingham had a stronger force, but they would probably have lost the battle had not one of their leaders met and killed Edward Bruce in a hand-to-hand combat. Their leader gone, the Scottish troops wavered, and were defeated. This ended Edward Bruce's invasion.

106. CONDITION OF THE COUNTRY AFTER THE INVASION. Bruce's invasion let the country in a condition of misery from which it did not recover for generations. So many of the Normans in Ulster had been killed that the native chiefs once more came into power. This was true to some extent also in other parts of Ireland. Famine and pestilence were widespread, and lawlessness was more prevalent than before. The Anglo-Irish government, weakened as it was by Bruce's invasion, daily lost ground. The Normans were no longer able to extend their influence to new districts. Moreover, the Normans were daily growing closer to the Irish in thought, feeling, and language, and frequent intermarriages hastened this blending. Many of the Norman lords, at this time and later, were distinguished by their knowledge of the language and literature of Ireland. Thus we find the Annals recording the death of "Garrett, Earl of Desmond, a cheerful and courteous man, who excelled all the Normans and many of the Irish in the knowledge of the Irish language, poetry, history, and other learning."

107. MONASTIC ORDERS AND ABBEYS. We must remember that the possession of a common religion greatly helped this work of assimilation. All the combatants, Irish and Norman alike, were Catholics, and many of the foremost warriors of either party were fervent devotees of their religion. The Normans represented the culture of the continent, and were the means of introducing into Ireland a number of the religious orders of continental origin. These religious orders were founded by a group of great men like Saint Francis of Assisi, whose followers were named Franciscans in his honor; Saint Dominic, a Spaniard of an old Castilian family, who established the Dominicans; and Saint Bernard the younger, of Clairvaux in France, who gained great influence for the Cistercian order founded by Saint Robert at Citeaux in Burgundy, a town called in Latin Cistercium, whence the order took its name.

All these orders seem to have built their monastic establishments on a common plan: a cruciform or cross-shaped church symbolized the source of their inspiration. The choir was toward the east, whence the Light had come. The nave, or main body of the church, was entered by the great western door and the arms of the cross, or transepts, extended to the north and south. From one of the transepts, a side door generally led to the domestic buildings: the dormitory, where they slept; the refectory, where they ate; and the chapter-house where the friars or brothers assembled, under the presidency of the abbot. There were also smaller buildings, store-rooms, granaries, and workroom. The church was the center of all things, and under the stone of its floor the friars were at last laid to rest, while those who survived them carved tombs and epitaphs. These abbeys were the homes of culture and art, as well as of devotion and learning, throughout the whole period of turmoil we have described, and for the next two or three centuries. They are, indeed, among the great art monuments of Ireland and there is a world of beauty in their graceful arches, slender pillars with rare and fanciful carving and beautiful windows with many lights. Into these strong yet delicate fabrics of stone, their builders worked that art inspiration which an earlier age had embodied in the finely-wrought chalices and intricately interlaced illuminations of the sacred manuscripts.

SUMMARY.

The Normans inherited the Roman power of conquest through discipline. As they gained a more extensive footing in Ireland they secured their position by building castles and keeps of stone against which the power of the Irish was unavailing. Fighting between the two races was incessant, and, in 1210, King John headed an expedition to restore order and peace. He divided that part of the country under English influence into twelve counties and introduced Norman law, which was directly opposed to the Irish law of inheritance, and this difference later became the cause of much bloodshed.

For a hundred years, from 1216 to 1315, Ireland was kept in a continuous state of turmoil by quarrels between the Irish chiefs and the Norman barons, and by fighting among the Irish themselves. Meath, Connaught, Ulster and Munster were successively devastated and the country suffered years of famine and pestilence. In 1315, Edward Bruce was invited by the northern Irish to be their king. He landed at Larne with a Scotch army and was joined by Donald O'Neill and the native Irish. The combined forces won several battles against the Normans, and Bruce was crowned king. He was killed in the battle of Faughart in 1318. Bruce's invasion left the Norman government for the time being a very weak condition.

Ireland owes to the Normans the introduction of the religious orders of Franciscans, Dominicans and Cistercians, all of whom built many beautiful abbeys the ruins of which are still standing in many places.

BOSTON MARKETS

BOSTON. North Butte continues reasonably strong today. Traders are all bullish on the stock and predict 65 for it next week. The demand for East Butte around this level is increasing and the stock is very scarce, being 1 1/2 bid with only odd lots offered at 12. The reports from the mine continue favorable, and it is only a question of a short time before we see some real earnings on the property. All through the room it was very noticeable how few stocks were offered, and prices will jump quickly when the bull movement is resumed. The New York list was very strong, but should be a sale on any further rally.—FOSTER, of Paine, Webber & Co.

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK.—Important covering occurred during the day's session, resulting in sharp recoveries throughout the list. The buying was for the most part in the nature of evening up, together with replacement on a moderate scale. Confidence in the stability of the market has been somewhat weakened, but the action of the prices is still indicative of good control on the part of strong interests, although the latter do not seem adverse to encourage the creation of a good sized short interest.

THE CURB MARKETS

CURBS.—An unconfirmed rumor from Globe saying Superior & Globe had encountered sulphides brought about a demand for the stock, but the market is bare of offerings. The bids are not urgent, but a verification of the story will mean higher prices with a rush. Ely Central sold under the dollar mark today. The location of this property, with the big rading in Nevada Cons., its nearest neighbor, makes this stock attractive at present prices. The curb market was fairly active with a demand for Cactus at 4%, Chief sold at 1 1/2. Calumet & Corbin was heavy with sales at 90c and stock offered at that price when the market closed. The Eastern markets showed more strength today, and the outlook is for a resumption of the bullish activity during the coming week.

MATTHEWSON IS CINCY'S "JONER"

(Special to Morning Press.) NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The great Matthewson humbled the Cincinnati Reds today for yesterday's slaughter winning out 1 to 0.

Matthewson was pitted against Roth and both pitched great ball. The score:

R. H. E.
New York	1 4 0
Cincinnati	0 5 1

Batteries: Mathewson and Meyers; Rowan and Roth.

BROOKLYN TURNS ON ST. LOUISANS

(Special to Morning Press.) BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Brooklyn turned the tables on St. Louis today and took sweet revenge by putting over two victories in a double header.

The first game the locals took 1 to 0 and copped off the second 6 to 3.

The first game was a grueling 13 inning struggle which developed into a pitcher's battle between Bachman for the visitors and Scanlon for the locals and with both pitchers in great form. The score:

First game:	R. H. E.
Brooklyn	1 9 0
St. Louis	0 9 1

Batteries: Scanlon and Marshall; Bachman and Bliss.

Second game:	R. H. E.
Brooklyn	6 6 1
St. Louis	3 8 2

Batteries: McIntyre and Marsh; Harmon and Bliss.

FAST LOCAL TEAMS MEET ON DIAMOND THIS AFTERNOON

This afternoon at South park the Continentals and the Passows, two of the fastest amateur teams ever organized in this city, will meet in a contest that promises to be full of interest from start to finish.

The Passows and the Continentals have been rivals for diamond honors throughout this season and each is able to point to a brilliant string of victories won over fast teams of this district.

In bringing the two teams together today, intense rivals are pitted against each other and neither team will leave any action undone that will aid toward a victory. In a game played early in the season, the Continentals trimmed the Passows 4 to 2 and since that time the defeat has rankled in the minds of the Passows. Today they are to be given an opportunity to prove that they were working under a handicap in the game every minute to defend the honors already won by them.

Either Smith or Hess will probably be sent to the mound for the Continentals today while "Bud" Carroll, a promising young south paw who has recently established an excellent record as a twirler, will go the distance for the Passows.

Every member of both teams is in perfect condition and only unfavorable weather conditions can prevent a fast baseball program being offered to fans of the city this afternoon.

PIRATES HUMBLER ONC'T, AT LAST

(Special to Morning Press.) PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 21.—After a long string of victories the Pirates were humbled today in a brisk 12 inning game by the Phillies.

Corridon and Sparks held the visitors to seven hits in the extra inning game while Cannitz and Willis were found for eleven. The score:

R. H. E.
Philadelphia	6 11 2
Pittsburg	5 7 5

Batteries: Corridon, Sparks and Doolin; Cannitz, Willis and Gibson.

TIGERS WIN IN SPITE OF SELVES

SENATORS ARE TROUNCED IN AN OLD FASHIONED SLUGGING MATCH.

FOUR ERRORS; YET DETROIT TROITS WIN OUT.

GET FIFTEEN HITS WHILE THE OTHER FELLOWS MAKE ELEVEN.

(Special to Morning Press.) DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 21.—The Tigers won today's game from Washington 9 to 7 in spite of their selves.

Both teams hit the ball hard today, Detroit getting 15 hits off Reising and Washington copping 11 swats off Killian.

The play of the Tigers was ragged, four errors being made which counted in the run getting for the visitors. The score:

R. H. E.
Detroit	9 15 4
Washington	7 11 1

Batteries: Killian and Schmidt; Reising and Street.

BATTLE ELEVEN INNINGS; VAINLY

(Special to Morning Press.) CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 21.—New York battled with the Sox today for 11 innings without either team being able to score the winning run and the game was finally called on account of darkness.

Both Doyle for the visitors and Scott of the Sox staff pitched great ball in every inning.

Batteries: Chicago, Scott and Owens; Doyle and Kleinow.

MR. BERGER IS UPSET A BIT

(Special to The Morning Press.) CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 21.—Berger was slaughtered by the Athletics today who copped off an easy 10 to 6 victory from the Naps.

The visitors got to Berger for a total of 15 hits while Dygert was touched up for 11. The score:

R. H. E.
Philadelphia	10 15 2
Cleveland	6 11 4

Batteries: Dygert and Livingston; Berger and Easterly.

BOSTON CLIMBS UP THE LADDER

(Special to Morning Press.) ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 21.—Boston started on its upward climb again today when the Browns were defeated by the visitors 4 to 0.

Arrellanes was invincible today allowing but four hits while Waddell and Dineen were located for 15 swats. The score:

R. H. E.
Boston	6 15 1
St. Louis	0 4 5

Batteries: Arrellanes and Donahue; Waddell, Dineen and Stephens.

FOR BIG GAME MONDAY AFTERNOON

Final arrangements were completed yesterday for the baseball game to be played on Monday afternoon at South park when the business and professional mens team will clash for the all star championship of the city. Announcement made by Dr. R. E. Hodson, captain of the professional mens' team, on Friday night that he would consider his aggregation beaten if they did not shut out the opposing team without a score, aroused considerable resentment among the businessmen yesterday. Before 10 o'clock yesterday morning three separate wagers of $25 each had been laid by businessmen of the city that the professionals would not be able to shut them out and last night in a heated discussion over the boasts of Dr. Hodson, a prominent businessman and a professional nearly lame to blows and bloodshed was only prevented by the intervention of friends.

The members of both teams are thoroughly in earnest and the game while in its character, should be one of the most interesting played this season at South park.

The entire fund raised through the game will be turned over by the business and professional men to the treasurer of the regular city team and will be used in bolstering up the local lineup with classy players.

Following is the line of the businessmen's team:

Kates, c; V. Blomstrom, p; J. Alon, 1b; F. Portance, 2b; Man Smith, ss; Grosbeck, 3b; P. Lemmer, lf; Sandy Oliver, cf; F. M. Olmstead, rf; Geo. McEwen, c; F. Kaufman, p; B. McKilloan, 1b; Wm. Goodman, 2b; Meyer, 3b; J. Patton, lf; F. Kleist, cf; H. Paul, rd.

Subs—Sheddo and Serner, Jr.; T. A. Cleary.

Best Bait for Certain Fish.

Worms known as "night walkers" are not merely a substitute bait for eels' catfish and bullheads, but are, in fact, the best bait that can be used.

ESCANABA WINS GAME

By a score of 7 to 3 the Escanaba baseball team trimmed the crack Niagara aggregation at Iron Mountain yesterday afternoon in the first game of a series of two Jack McDonald Escanaba's premier twirler who one week ago covered himself with glory by pitching a no hit game against Oconto, as on the slab yesterday and worked in great form in every inning.

His support throughout the greater portion of the game was gilt edged and in spite of the excellent slick work and fast base running of the Niagara players the locals and the victory safely in their hands for nearly the entire distance.

The locals will meet Niagara again today at Niagara in the second game of the series and it is expected that "Big Mike" Walsh will be sent to the mound. Walsh has not worked in a game for several weeks because of an injury and has not pitched since early in the season but the locals are pinning their faith on his ability to land a victory and another defeat for the Niagara aggregation is confidently expected today. The score:

R. H. E.
Escanaba	7 11 2
Niagara	4 8 2

Batteries: McDonald and Matt.

A Wayside Observation.

"What I want you to immediately do," said the woman with a determined look, "is to unceremoniously pick up that ax and before eating this lunch to carefully spit some wood."

"Alas!" exclaimed Plodding Pete, "how unreasonable some women are! They think wood is as easily split as an infinitive."

Every observing Londoner must have noticed the haggard appearance of the police. Your modern London policeman has no time for steak and midnight soporifics. The shaded area knows his bulky form no more; alas! there is no bulky form to know—London Sketch.

Would Be Valuable Knowledge.

An Austrian physician insists that every man has a bad A.C. periodically—a day when everything goes wrong for him and when his mental and physical powers are at their worst. It is too bad that the physician is unable to furnish a chart whereby every man's days might be readily indicated, thus making it possible for his family to take steps to keep him from buying things on margins.

His Fun.

"What is your husband's chief amusement?" asked the curious neighbor. "Doing things I don't want to do," replied the wife quickly.

MEET WINNERS

Members of the Richter baseball team, a local amateur aggregation which compares favorably with either the Continentals, or the Passows, will challenge the winner of today's game at South Park.

The management of the Richter team claims that a determined effort has been made to book games with both the Passows and the Continentals and have been refused date for no reason. The Richters are a classy bunch of players and should be given an opportunity to meet today's winner that the local amateur championship question can be definitely settled.

CHAPTER XIII.
CONSOLIDATION OF NORMAN POWER.

96. THE GENIUS OF THE NORMAN. When William, the Norman, gained possession of England, one of his first acts was to secure his position in the capital by building the Tower of London. This immense stronghold, which crowns upon London even today, after the lapse of nearly nine centuries, is typical of the Norman genius. It illustrates the method by which the Normans secured their position in England and later in Ireland. William himself built about fifty other great Norman castles throughout the length and breadth of the Saxon land which he had conquered, and in these castles placed his feudal nobles, who acknowledged him as their lord and master.

When the Norman warriors came to Ireland, they were at first mercenaries of Irish princes like Dermot MacMurrough; but they were soon granted land, either by the Irish chiefs who sought their services, or by the king of England, after he had asserted his claim to be overlord of Ireland. The Norman warriors immediately put in practice the lesson taught by William the Conqueror. They built just such keeps and castles as the Tower of London, though not on so large a scale, and many of their strongholds are still standing. The plan of these castles included an outer wall, encircled by a deep moat or canal filled with water, which surrounded the whole castle, and could be crossed only by a drawbridge. This bridge could be drawn up from within the castle, and when it was drawn up, all access from without was cut off. The strong outer wall of the fortress was pierced by a single doorway, high enough for a knight on horseback to ride through without dismounting. This doorway could be closed by an iron portcullis, a gate running in grooves in the wall, which was raised by chains from the top of the outer wall of the fortress. These openings gave the wall the toothed appearance, like the edge of a saw, which makes them so picturesque in modern landscapes. Inside the wall were dwelling houses, and the whole was dominated by a keep or central stronghold with a high tower with very thick walls, also pierced for archer, into which the garrison could retire. If the outer fortress was taken, the De Courcy was one of the greatest builders of Norman castles in Ireland, and one great stronghold of his over Dundrum Bay in Down is today almost as perfect as during his lifetime. The other great Normans, De Lacy, De Clare, and the rest, were not behind De Courcy. They erected Norman keeps and castles at every point where they gained a footing; and it was the presence of these fortresses of stone which made it almost impossible for the Irish chiefs to drive out the Normans as they had earlier driven out the Norsemen.

The use of armour in battle was another evidence of the same instinct of self-defense. The coats of mail of the Norman knights were even more imperishable than their castles, and they are to be found in every museum today. A third element of strength was the sense of rigid discipline which the Normans brought with them to England and Ireland, and which was an inheritance from the ancient Roman armies. In this they excelled the Irish tribal forces, just as they excelled the Saxons at the battle of Hastings, and many of their victories in Ireland were due rather to superior order than to superior valor. The Irish had never submitted to discipline, which ran counter to their tribal instincts. They fought in masses rather than in regular ranks, and had no system of tactics. They still adhered to the habits of warfare developed in an earlier age, relying on the wildness of the country on the forests and bogs, for their defense, rather than on fortifications of stone. Later when the sons of Ireland mastered the principle of ordered war, they became very formidable warriors, winning battles in every part of Europe and leading the armies of many nations. The Norman invaders brought with them the French language which they had learned in Normandy, and many French knightly traditions. It is worth remembering that the Conqueror's great grandson, Henry II, who was the first invading sovereign, had larger territories in France than in England, and that the part of Ireland over which he exercised real authority, a very small part, was one of the divisions of a realm which stretched from the south of Scotland to the north of Spain.

97. KING JOHN COMES TO IRELAND. King John came to the throne of England in 1199. He remembered the condition of confusion and turmoil which reigned in Ireland. He therefore determined to go there again, to attempt to bring order to chaos. He did not carry out his intentions until 1210, however; in that year he assembled a formidable army and sailed to Waterford, landing at Cape Crook. His arrival was the signal for a general cessation of hostilities. Even the most restless of the Norman chiefs left the native chieftains unfeared, and stopped quarrelling amongst themselves, during the visit of their king. John had thus no fighting to do and devoted himself to establishing the principles of civil law, and asserting his authority. He divided the part of Ireland in which his power was recognized into twelve counties, that is to say, districts under the authority of a count, a name and title brought by the Normans from France. The twelve counties formed by King John are, Dublin, Kildare, Meath, Louth, Carlow, Kilkenny, Wexford, Waterford, Cork, Kerry, Limerick, and Tipperary. Five of the twelve, namely, Dublin, Wexford, Waterford, Cork, and Limerick, were old Norse or Danish districts, thus showing that the Normans were able to gain a footing first in the regions already weakened by Danish invasions. We shall speak later of the formation of other counties, as the central authority was extended. John founded law courts, and appointed magistrates, who were ordered to administer Norman law. An element of strife was thus introduced, which produced much harm and misery for centuries, since the Norman law was founded on principles, largely borrowed from Rome, which were not in harmony with the traditional law of Ireland, as developed by the Brehons. It is true that John intended to apply the Norman law only to Normans and English settled in Ireland, but this distinction was later lost sight of, and the imported legal system was gradually extended to English and Irish alike. For many years to come, the native Irish remained outside the jurisdiction of the newly established courts. John returned to England, leaving Ireland fairly quiet, and this condition was maintained until his death in 1216.

98. NORMAN LAW. The chief principle of Norman law which came into opposition with Irish traditions concerned the possession of land. Generally speaking, the districts of Ireland were the possession of the tribe, that is, of the supposed or real descendants of a common ancestor, who held the land in common. Their elected chief had a separate portion of the land for his own use, and was absolute owner only of this separate portion. It descended, not necessarily to his eldest son, but to his elected successor. The Norman principle was quite different. William of Normandy asserted his direct ownership of all the land of England, and made grants of it to his followers and officers. They became complete owners of the soil, which passed to their eldest sons, according to the system called primogeniture. The Norman lord of the land was thus in a much stronger position than the Irish tribal chief. He was complete owner of the whole region under his authority and he could be certain that it would pass undivided to his son. All disputes of succession were avoided and the estate was preserved intact. It is evident, of course, that here was an element of strength, similar to the great Norman castles; and these two things were joint causes of the physical and moral power of the Norman invaders. It is equally evident that this strength was gained by decreasing the rights of the tribe, who, under the Norman system, became mere tenants of the lord, instead of free warriors owning their own land. In exactly the same way, the Norman system of inheritance often did great injustice to the younger sons, who were, perhaps, the most gifted, but who received little or nothing from their father, while the eldest son received everything. The Irish chief, on the contrary, was elected, so that the worthiest and strongest was put in power. The coming of King John marks the beginning of the conflict between these two legal principles.

99. CONDITIONS IN LEINSTER AND MEATH, 1216-1315. From the accession of John's son, as Henry III, in 1216, to the invasion of Edward Bruce, in 1315, that is, for exactly a century, fighting went on incessantly in Ireland. The great Norman lords carried on a series of savage struggles among themselves, each trying to seize the estates and wealth of the others; they also joined in the traditional quarrels of the native princes, aiding one side or the other, and receiving a share of the plunder. Typical of these struggles was "the war of Meath," which broke out in 1224 between two Norman families, the De Lacy's and the Marshalls or Marshalls of Leinster, and which did not end until Meath was completely devastated. The "war of Kildare" was a similar struggle. When William Marshall, who had taken a part in the "war of Meath," died, his estates passed to his brother Richard. Richard Marshall had a quarrel with the English king, and fled from England to Ireland, where he hoped to escape pursuit. Three powerful Norman lords, Geoffrey Marisco, Maurice Fitzgeraid, and Hugh de Lacy entered into an agreement to attack Richard Marshall and divide his estates. They invited him to meet them in Kildare, and in a pretended quarrel attacked him and wounded him so severely that he died shortly after. When Henry III heard of this treacherous act, he banished Geoffrey Marisco and executed his son, who had also been implicated in the plot.

100. AFFAIRS IN CONNAUGHT. In Connaught the native chiefs were still dominant. Here a bitter struggle for the kingship of the western provinces was fought out amongst various members of the O'Connor family, the descendants and relatives of Roderick O'Connor. The Marshalls, De Burgos, and other Norman lords took part in this quarrel, because they saw in it opportunities of plunder. In 1249, Phelim, one of Roderick's nephews, succeeded in seizing and holding the throne of Connaught against all opponents, Norman and Irish alike. He reigned over the western province for six teen years, until his death in 1265, showing the continuity of Irish tradition and kingship, side by side with Norman rule.

It must be remembered that the life and culture of the Irish tongue continued unabated. Poems were composed, and the poems of older days were recited; the harpers practised their art in the halls of the chiefs; the Brehons settled questions of law; and, for centuries to come, the intellectual, moral life of the purely native Ireland continued an unbroken stream.

101. THE STATE OF ULSTER. In Ulster, things were not less disturbed than in Leinster and Connaught. Maurice Fitzgeraid aimed at the complete subjugation of the northern province, and, for this purpose, led an army north through Connaught. He had gone as far as Credran, near Sligo, when he was met and defeated by Godfrey O'Donnell, lord of Tyrconnell. Both leaders were wounded in the fight, the Norman so seriously that he died shortly after. O'Donnell was disabled by his wound, and his army was left without a leader for several months. Brian O'Neill, prince of Tyrone, O'Donnell's old rival, seized the opportunity and invaded Tyrconweak to lead the army, but, in order to give courage to his men, he had himself carried to battle with his army. As a result of this exertion and exposure, he died shortly after. In 1260, the Ulster chiefs made some efforts to unite against the Normans under the leadership of Brian O'Neill. Their efforts were unsuccessful, however, for they were defeated in a hard fought battle at Downpatrick, and Brian O'Neill and several other Irish leaders were slain.

102. TROUBLES IN MUNSTER. In Munster, the fiercest fighting took place between the Norman Geraldines and the old Irish family of the MacCarthy's of Desmond, who were aroused to opposition by the perpetual encroachments of the newcomers. In the year 1261, the MacCarthy's won a battle at Callan near Kenmare. Then they proceeded to overthrow the Norman strongholds throughout the south of Munster; but, as happened too often with the Irish chieftains, they soon lost through lack of unity what they had gained by valor and hard fighting. These rivalries and contests, which were politically inconclusive, were nevertheless the causes of limitless evil to the land. The masses of the people, whether of the old Irish race, or the English retainers of the Norman newcomers, asked for nothing better than to farm their lands in peace. These were the people who suffered most, not only from the direct evils of fighting, but even more from the famines which followed the wholesale destruction of their crops and the carrying off of their herds; and from the pestilences which came in the wake of famine sickness finding easy victims among multitudes of half-starved and emaciated men and women.

103. THE INVASION OF EDWARD BRUCE. In 1314, Robert Bruce gained a victory over the English king, Edward II, at Bannockburn in Stirlingshire, and this established the independence of Scotland. The news of this defeat of the English armies so aroused the Irish of the north that they decided to make another effort to drive out the Normans, and invited Edward Bruce, brother of the Scottish king, to come over as their leader. The proposal was accepted, and in the month of May, 1315 Edward Bruce landed at Larnem, in Antrim, with six thousand Scottish warriors, cousins of the Irish, and speaking the same tongue. He was met by an Irish army under Donall O'Neill and the two leaders joined their forces. They at once proceeded against the Normans of Ulster, and won several battles. In order to deprive their opponents of food and shelter, they burned houses and devastated fields, thus causing great misery to the common people. Richard de Burgo, the "red earl" of Ulster, with Sir Edmund Butler, the lord justice, led an army against the Scottish and Irish forces. A contest of great cruelty and severity was now begun. Though there was a famine that year, and a general failure of the crops, orders were nevertheless given by the commanders of both armies to destroy all food except what was required for their own support, regardless of the starvation inevitably inflicted upon the people. Phelim O'Connor, the younger king of Connaught, at first joined De Burgo, but was soon compelled to return to Connaught, on account of an outbreak among his own people. The Norman force was thus greatly weakened, and De Burgo was completely defeated by Bruce at Connor, in Antrim, a short distance to the south of Slemish Mountains where the apostle of Ireland once tended his master's flocks.

104. BRUCE IS CROWNED KING. Soon after this battle, Bruce was crowned king of Ireland, and, marching into Meath, defeated a Norman force of fifteen thousand men at Kells, and again in the early part of the year 1316, routed the Normans in Kildare. By this time, Phelim O'Connor had restored order in Connaught, and now gave in his adherence to Bruce, and led his army to Athenry in Galway. Here he suffered the severest defeat that had been inflicted on any Irish army since the first coming of the Normans. In a battle against William de Burgo, eleven thousand of the Connaughtmen were killed, including Phelim himself and most of his nobles.

In 1317, Edward Bruce was joined by his brother, Robert Bruce, king of Scotland, but little was accomplished through his help. The two brothers attempted to reduce Dublin and afterwards Limerick, two of the strongest fortresses in the hands of the Normans, but failed in both attacks. Their army suffered greatly on its long marches through a country previously devastated. Man-

THEATRICAL NOTES

Possibly there is nothing that appeals to theater goers as strongly as a child artist and Master Bobbie St. Clair has won unstinted praise for the quality of his singing voice and his method of rendering the classic songs which have made his reputation for him. The Maud Henderson company which opens their week's engagement at Ben's theater Monday, Aug. 23, has Master Bobbie as an especial feature among a galaxy of seven specialties.

"Over the Ridge," a story of the reconstruction days just after the Civil war in the Tennessee Hills is the announced play for Monday evening and if we are to judge from the press reports preceding the company we are to have next week an exceptional line of plays presented by a company of players, who have had years of experience and training under stage directors of acknowledged ability. Mr. N. E. Primrose the leading man and stage director of the organization served apprenticeship under Mr. David Belasco and it is due to him that the Maud Henderson company has won such favorable comment for their work in the larger cities of the middle west.

Prices for the engagement will not be raised from the regular admission at Ben's and 10, 15 and 25 cents will be the rate. Seats are now on sale at Groos' Drug store.

The Bijou program for today not only includes the Vardells in a clever new comedy singing and talking act with new pictures and new illustrated song by Mr. Specht, but also one of the greatest feature pictures ever shown entitled "A Strange Meeting."

In a boxy dance hall we find Mary Rollins associated with those poor souls who walk in the valley of the Shadow of Death. One of their number is a youth whose mother appears and tried to get him away from the place, but appeals are in vain and she goes to the lit John Stanton, the pastor, who is the good shepherd willing to seek the lost one. Stanton's entrance in the dance hall occasions vile derision from the mob.

Here he meets Mary, through whose glance he sees a pure soul, which is being forced into the quagmire of crime by conditions. Before leaving with the boy, Stanton hands around cards on which is printed Psalm 23. These lines impress her so deeply that she is drawn to the little mission.

Blue she is compelled to join her father and brother in a burglary at the apartments of Rev. Mr. Stanton. Mr. Stanton takes this opportunity to plead with her to give up her present life and wins.

The prices for this afternoon are five cents to everyone and evening prices ten cents for adults and five cents for children.

Miss Emma Komp of Hermansville is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Stegath.

Watered Butter.
An ingenious fraud in the butter line was brought to light recently in England. In that country the amount of moisture in butter is limited by law to 16 per cent. Australian and New Zealand butters, on the other hand, usually contain only 8 per cent of water. Taking advantage of this fact, several firms imported large quantities of these colonial butters, to which 8 per cent of water was then added, thus bringing them down to the British standard. As the added water naturally cost nothing and the product was sold at the current butter price, a substantial profit was made.

A New Peril.
Sir William Bill writes to the papers to suggest that appendicitis arises from our habit of sharpening knives. "The head of every family invariably sharpens his carving knife as he stands before the joint. This means a shower of microscopic steel shavings on the meat." Appendicitis has increased enormously of late years. Perhaps our grandfathers always used blunt knives or dissected the joint in ways of which polite society has kept no record.—Westminster Gazette.

THE KNOCKER.

There is not a bore, so tiresome
As the pessimistic crank.
Who is sure there's nothing wholesome,
But that everything is tank.
Who sees no good in any,
Who at hopefulness doth mock
And whose mission self appointed,
Is to knock-knock-knock!

He's the millstone of all progress;
He is wholesome effort's bane;
He can just see the evil,
Naught to him is safe of sane.
He is there to put a dagger
On all projects to unhook
New doors to progress, coming
Just to knock-knock-knock!

He paralyzes effort,
He invites distrust and fear;
He pulls down and dismantles
Where another man would rear.
Would that in his chair electric
We could stop with fatal shock
The man whose object
Is to knock-knock-knock!

An Inquisitive Son.
A promising youth recently surprised his father by asking:
"Father, do you like mother?"
"Why, yes, of course."
"And she likes you?"
"Of course she does."
"Did she ever say so?"
"Many a time, my son."
"Did she marry you because she loved you?"
"Certainly she did."
The boy scrutinized his parent closely and after a long pause asked:
"Well, was she as near-lighted then as she is now?"—Home Topics.

Putting Life into the Game.

EXCURSIONISTS TO LEAVE CITY TODAY

With favorable weather conditions prevailing today it is expected that a great party of pleasure seekers will go to either Marquette or Sturgeon Bay aboard the steamer Maywood on the special excursion arranged to those points by the local Danish Brotherhood of America. The boat will carry pleasure seekers both from Gladstone and Escanaba leaving the Upper Bay City at 8 o'clock. Returning the excursionists will be brought back to Escanaba shortly after midnight. On next Sunday the Maywood has been chartered for an excursion from Marquette to Green Bay. The Marquette city band has engaged the boat for that day and will take a party of pleasure seekers to Green Bay.

FORMER ESCANABA GIRL IS DEAD

Announcement has been received in Escanaba of the death of Miss Amelia Jepson daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Jepson, formerly residents of Escanaba, at the home of the family at Marinette. Miss Jepson was 22 years of age and having been born in this city where she lived until her parents moved to Marinette, leaves a great circle of friends here who received the announcement of her death with deep regret. Concerning the death of Miss Jepson the Marinette Eagle Star says:

Death came suddenly at an early hour this morning to Miss Amelia Jepson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Jepson, at the family home 1931 Hall avenue. Miss Jepson had not enjoyed the best of health for some time, but was not ill yesterday. In fact she appeared to be unusually well and in the best of spirits all day on Thursday. She was elated at the prospective visit of an absent sister, Mrs. Welch, of whose coming she spoke frequently antcipating the visit with more than ordinary pleasure as she had never seen the baby who arrived since the last home visit of the absent sister. She went down town Thursday afternoon and purchased gifts for each of her sisters and retired in a most happy mood. Toward the midnight hour, Mrs. Jepson was awakened by her daughter coughing and arising she went to her room adjoining to give her some medicine to allay the coughing. Replying to her mother's question she said she would take the medicine, but as she did not sit up, her mother assisted her to a sitting posture, when she immediately seized with a convulsion from which she did not rally, death occurring at 2 o'clock. Physicians were summoned at the first sign of illness, but were unable to save the life of the young lady. The parents and sisters are prostrated over the sudden death of their loved one and are scarcely able to realize that she has gone from them forever.

Streaky Butter.

Streaky or mottled butter may be caused by the salt or it may be due to the working of the butter. The salt is so evenly diffused in the finest kind of butter that, as is shown by a microscope, every grain is surrounded by a film of clear and transparent brine, which points out the necessity of avoiding the overworking of the butter before the salt is added. In the first working every particle of the milk should be got rid of, but enough clear water should be left to dissolve every grain of salt in twelve hours before the next working. If this is done there will be but little danger of streakiness in the butter, but to get the best results the salt should be very finely ground.

Bokhara Sheep.

The department of agriculture is seriously considering the introduction into this country of Bokhara sheep, from which comes the fur called Persian lamb. All astrakhan fur is now raised on territory tributary to the Caspian sea. The best fur is taken from the lamb when it is only four or five days old. The Bokhara sheep also makes good mutton.

Logleal.

A common aphorism is, "Nothing is sure in this world." Now, if nothing is sure in this world we can't be sure that anything is sure, consequently, we are not sure that nothing is sure.

E. L. Arnott, an enthusiastic advocate of "Fletcherism" the science of food mastication, has written some greatly condensed instructions for them which he entitles, "How to Learn Fletcherism," as follows:

Do not take more than one-fourth to one-half teaspoonful of food into the mouth at one time, especially the first week or two. Do not take any more food into the mouth until this has been swallowed. Chew the food industriously. Some Fletcherites take about two motions of the jaw per second. All particles of food should be broken up and reduced to a liquid or liquidified form. Do not swallow the food until it loses its original taste. Do not try to swallow at all; just keep chewing the food and enjoying it until it disappears, by involuntary swallowing or by "swallowing itself." If you do not have time to chew your food properly it is better to eat a smaller amount or not to eat at all until you do have sufficient time. The last taste of the food is the best. The habits of a life-time cannot be changed in a day; you must have perseverance and determination if you wish to succeed.—Physical Culture.

BIG PICNIC TO BE HELD TODAY

A party of nearly 50 Escanaba men, members of the Pebble Beach club, will hold their fourth annual picnic at Pebble Beach, on the east shore of Little Bay de Noc today. The club has been in existence for the past four years and the annual outings have been sources of keen enjoyment for all of the members. This year particularly elaborate plans have been made and early this morning the members of the club will leave for the picnic grounds aboard a large launch that is chartered for the day.

The following effusion concerning the picnic has been submitted by one of the members:

The Comrade's Song.
From the glare and the heat of the city laid,
To the calm and the rest of the wood shade,
And, the scents of the balsam and clover.
Oh, the dewy morn with the chorus bright,
Of the myriad wild-bird's bringing
And the croak of the frogs in the pit at night,
And the whilp-poor-will's sweet singing.

CHORUS.

We will sing our song as we sail along,
Till the welcome spot we reach—
Away with care when we anchor there,
On the sands of Pebble Beach.
How the soul of the woods, as a gentle dew,
Comes o'er our senses stealing.
In the genial life of that merry crew,
With their wealth of brotherly feeling,
Our host, with his kindly face alight,
The spirit of welcome showing,
Old Pringle's stories of humor bright,
With the current of mirth o'er flowing.

Fresh cheer when friends Todd and Mark, are there,
The life of the comrades sharing,
Its rest and its mirth, and the viands rare,
Of our brother Jim's preparing.
And for all, what pleasure more vigorous than,
O'er the hills and the valleys roaming,
In an eager hunt for the old horse Dan,
Through the scented woods in the gloaming.

No ailing is there, for the healthful air,
New life through our veins diffuses,
And isn't our Dr. Dippy there
To heal all our pains and our bruises.
A link in the chain of joys we will forge,
A memory, through life to follow,
Of the friends, and our host, whom we style, George,
In his summer home in the hollow.

THERE'S A MORAL IN THIS ARTICLE

Does advertising pay?
The Escanaba Morning Press has preached advertising persistently.

Two Ludington street business houses are concerned. Their names are somewhat alike. One of them paid for an advertisement for an office girl. He got one right away, and "then some." The other of the two aforementioned didn't advertise, not needing an office girl, but he had so many applications for a job that he called up the Morning Press and asked them what in thunderation he were about, because the girls all said they'd read his "ad" for a girl in this paper; and he hadn't advertised.

"Guess I'll have to advertise I don't want one," he said.

Says the Mantisque Tribune:—"The busiest man in Escanaba is Rev. Fredrick Spence, pastor of the M. E. church. He appears to be a human dynamo. Aside from his ministerial work, he makes from one to six addresses weekly."

Rail earnings are 10 per cent above last year.

ESCANABA TOWNSHIP NOTES

Escanaba Township Grange held a meeting, over 37 members being present and about nine new members were admitted. Among the new members were Miss Lisle Jones, Miss Caroline Baron, Mike Reno, Jim Leach, Ira Collins and Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Champion. This grange now has about 45 members.

Pete Weber, Ralph Stibeth, Victor Johnson and Herman Bittner accompanied by Mrs. Dona Duranceau went to Rapid River in their 200 horse power auto and had an exciting time coming home as they made a bet that they could run around by way of Ishpeming and beat Alex Duranceau, Arthur Barron, Tom Jones and Miss Dona Duranceau with their fast trotters home. It was a tie, they all came in together two days after.—Reporter.

About $1,000,000,000 of bonds have been sold on the New York exchange since Jan. 1, which is 50 per cent more than last year. Just now there is little activity in bonds.

July imports were $112,000,000 and exports $109,000,000. This is the second month for many years that the county has had an unfavorable trade balance.
