TANK EXPLODES; WOMAN BURNS ALIVE

(Special to Morning Press.)
 WAYNE, Mich., Aug. 28.—Mrs. Chas. Merrell, wife of a wealthy farmer living two miles east of here was so badly burned by the explosion of a gasoline stove that she died several hours later.
 Mrs. Merrell attempted to fill the tank while the stove was burning. Rushing from the house, the frenzied woman screamed for help, but the nearest neighbor lived 50 rods away.
 The children, terrified by the mother's plight and unable to aid her, were found running about the farm yard screaming frantically.

WOMAN SUICIDE NEAR MANISTIQUE

MRS. JOHN MCGREGOR TOOK DOSE OF CARBOLIC ACID AT THOMPSON.

(Special to Morning Press.)
 MANISTIQUE, Mich., Aug. 28.—Mrs. John McGregor of Thompson died at the home of her sister Mrs. Gaspard Gilmet, as the result of taking carbolic acid with suicidal intent.
 After she had taken the fatal draught, she notified her sister.
 The deceased was a Deloria and was a native of Garden. After her marriage to Mr. McGregor, she became a resident of Thompson. Later she and her husband left for the state of Washington.
 She returned to Thompson, with her two children. Constant brooding over troubles evidently drove her to suicide.
 The funeral services were held at Thompson. She was 35.

PROMINENT MAN DEAD

Announcement was received in Escanaba Saturday of the death of C. D. Lawton, former regent of the University of Michigan and father of Atty. Eugene Lawton, who has frequently visited here, at the home of the family at Lawton, Mich.

He was a man of learning and influence and his death is regretted by prominent men all over the state.
 Charles DeWitt Lawton was born in Rome, N. Y., in 1835 and was given his early education there. He graduated from Union college at Schenectady. He came to Michigan in 1859 and located at the town which bears his name. His first enterprise in Michigan was the nursery business. He later entered the University of Michigan as an instructor in mathematics and engineering. When he gave up this position he returned to his farms near Lawton. He had acquired considerable acreage there and was the most prominent citizen of the district. Mr. Lawton helped to organize Michigan Republican party, and he had ever since been a staunch supporter of the party. He was a fluent speaker.

The deceased was an honorary member of the United States Historical society and of the Michigan Horticultural and Agricultural societies. For years he held the position of regent of the University of Michigan. He was the second mineral statistician of Michigan and held that position for twelve consecutive years. In this position he succeeded Charles Wright, his nephew, whom he had assisted. He was never a resident of the upper peninsula, but had many interests above the straits and visited this district many times on his geological trips.

Mr. Lawton is survived by a widow and nine children. The children are C. L. Lawton and S. L. Lawton of Hancock; Dr. F. Percy Lawton of Traverse City; Attorney Eugene Lawton, of Lawton; N. O. Lawton, superintendent of the Miami mine at Globe, Ariz., and the Misses Margaret, Stella Marion and Genevieve Lawton, all of Lawton.

DEATH AT BIG AUTO SPEEDING

Indiana's Awful Record Outdone at Brighton Beach—Don't Stop

Twenty-four Hour Race Barely Started When Number of Smashups Occur

(Special to Morning Press.)
 BRIGHTON BEACH, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Fatalities on the Indiana automobile race track recently, were put into the shade here, almost at the start of the 24 hour race at the "motor-drome" here.

Louis Cole, mechanic of the Stearns car was killed and the driver, Laurent Gross, was fatally injured.

Patchke and Maynard, the crew of the Acme, were only slightly injured. The Stearns and Acme No. 4 collided. There was an explosion and the wreckage of the broken machines was scattered for 100 yards or more.

The gasoline tank of the Stearns car exploded.
 The race was stopped at once, but was resumed in ten minutes.

Less than fifteen minutes later to avoid another collision at the same point, Vantine, driving the other Acme entry, risked death by steering (Continued on page six.)

AWFUL CRIME IS CHARGED

Mortimer C. Hitchcock, sign painter and for many years looked upon as one of the city's most highly respected citizens, was arrested last night on a serious criminal charge preferred by his daughter Alice Hitchcock, 18 years of age. Mr. Hitchcock strenuously denies the offense that is charged and alleges that his daughter's mind must be affected to make such a complaint against him. The warrant was served on Mr. Hitchcock shortly after 8 o'clock last night after the girl had had been to Judge Emil Glaser's office where in the presence of the judge, Pros. Atty. H. R. Dotsch, Chief of Police George Rowe, Officer George McCarthy and a representative of the press, she unfolded one of the most startling tales ever revealed in any court. The prisoner was arrested on Ludington street by Officer McCarthy and Chief Rowe as he was awaking on the street and was taken at once to the county jail where he spent the night. The story told by the girl is horrible in its details and was related by her only after she had been placed under oath and the full significance of her position explained by both Pros. Atty. Dotsch and Judge Glaser. It was alleged by her that the wrongful acts of her father had continued over a period of several months when he had threatened to take her life and on one occasion had held a revolver at her head when she attempted to break away from him.

GREAT CELEBRATION CAME TO CLOSE WITH "HONKS" AND HILARITY

LIGHTNING DOES A QUEER PRANK

CLEATS ON BALL PLAYERS' SHOE DRAW LIGHTNING BOLT WHICH KILLED HIM.

(Special to Morning Press.)
 ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. Aug. 28.—William Bedford, the star second baseman for the Cuban Giants, a resident of Calro, Ill., was struck by lightning and instantly killed just prior to a schedule game between that team and the Atlantic City col-legians.

Bedford reached to catch a batted ball, and as he threw his body forward there was a loud report and an apparent bursting ball of fire. His right shoulder was torn to shreds. His head was cut and his cap torn to tatters.

It is believed the lightning was attracted by a steel shoe cleat held in place by screws.

According to dispatches from Duluth, a new line of freight steamer will be operated on the lakes by the Northwestern Dredging company, with headquarters in Milwaukee.

EDITORIAL

The great fair, grangers' picnic and homecoming of 1909 is history this morning.

It is a piece of history which Escanaba can be proud of.

Even Old Sol, who is wont to cut up queer antics with affairs of this kind, favored Escanaba most extraordinarily. While it rained almost everywhere within a radius of 300 miles, Escanaba had ample sunshine and balmy temperature for receiving its thousands of guests this week.

It is well. Business and professional men, regardless of personal matters, took their coats off and worked like a hive of bees to make this event a success. They worked intelligently, unselfishly. Some of them didn't find time to get to their homes all through the three days' events, so exacting and arduous was the labor required of them.

And they worked for the benefit of Escanaba, and for Delta county. The result? Thousands of people have gained a better and more lasting impression of Escanaba. Scores went home with delightful memories of events furnished at great cost, especially of unselfish work.

A stronger tie exists between Escanaba city and the surrounding country. That was one of the purposes—the big purpose—of the men who gave freely to make these three days successful; they certainly were a success in every respect.

Greater things are to come. Watch out for Escanaba's 1910 event. Work and brains that could make such a magnificent success of it the past week will profit by experience and more than that cannot fail of making for events next year that will far outshine the last three days, big and great as they were.

SCIENTISTS INDORSE BENZOATE OF SODA

NATIONAL PURE FOOD MEN APPROVE USE OF DRUG AS PRESERVATIVE.

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 28.—President Roosevelt's famous Remsen "referee board of consulting scientific experts" was indorsed by the Association of State and National Food and Dairy Departments on Thursday.
 After a fight in which the term "medicated garbage" was used, the association approved of the use of benzoate of soda as a food preservative.

3 STACKS TOPPLED

Three steel smoke stacks, each 30 feet in length, on the local North Western machine shop toppled over yesterday. One of the stacks, whose foundation had become loosened fell toward its mate carrying it down and the second hit a third, piling them all up in a heap. The work of repairing the damage is now under way.

Escanaba's First Farmers' Picnic and County Fair Passes Into History Leaving Pleasant Memories With Guests and Hosts

AUTO PARADE WAS FEATURE

Machines, Horns and Sirens Mixed With Din of Hilarious

Amid unbounded hilarity hundreds of people who filled Ludington street until nearly midnight, Escanaba's big three day celebration came to a close last night.
 After a busy day for all of the celebrators who took part in a program which opened at 8 o'clock yesterday morning and continued without interruption until midnight. The people by common consent flocked to the downtown district where amid a din of horns a musical program by the band and the throwing of confetti the celebration of Escanaba's launching of a series of county fairs culminated in a tumult of excitement.

Yesterday's program was made up of a trolley ride in the morning and athletic sports on Ludington street in the afternoon and with the band furnishing a program throughout the day. Last night the band was out again and at 8:30 o'clock the free street act at Ludington and Mary streets was given for the last time.

Yesterday the exhibit hall was packed with visitors throughout the day and many were the comments of praise on the excellence of the exhibit in spite of the early date fixed for the fair and the short time given to its preparation. The judges yesterday completed their work and turned the list of premium winners over to the secretary who was busy throughout the day issuing checks to the winners.

The complete list of premium winners will be published as soon as it can be secured from the secretary of the society.

Last night the pleasure seekers were turned loose on Ludington street and throughout the evening a great crowd of people made merry.

One of the features of the evening's program was an automobile parade with nearly 25 machines in line and which covered the street several times with a great honking of horns and sounding of sirens adding to the din aroused by horns and shouts of people filling the sidewalks.

Last night's demonstration was a fitting close to a celebration that was a marked success from start to finish.

BENEFIT SALE OF TICKETS IS GROWING ACTIVE

NO NEED TO TALK FURTHER.

Colored Man Recognized That His Longed-For Affinity Could Not Wait for Busy Lawyer.

"Uh-well, sah," began a ramshackle-looking colored citizen, who had percolated into the office of an attorney of Polkville, Ark. "I des like to extricate a little 'o' de law fum yo', if yo' please, sah. Aims to git a divo'ce fum de wife 'o' mah buxom, if yo' has de time to 'tend to de 'flections of a culud man?"

"Well-h'm!" a bit ponderously returned the legal luminary, lhying his hand on certain ominous-looking documents on his desk. "It will be some little while before I can get around to your matter, Stookey. These papers, here, pertain to a suit to determine whether a dependent and supplemental bill was properly filed in aid of a court's jurisdiction upon an amended and ancillary supplemental bill which was filed, in a suit brought on a creditor's bill to marshal the assets for the purpose of enforcing an action at law in the state courts, and—"

"Yassah! Yassah!" interrupted the caller, visibly impressed and much disappointed. "An' if yo' is bleeged to routineze all dat legality befo' yo' 'rives 'round to my ticky little case, dar is n't no fuuder, uh-kaze why: By de time yo'-all gits th'oo pesterin' wid all dat pomposity 'o' de law, uh-good Lawd, sah, dat yallah gal 's uh-admin' to marry when I gits shed 'o' mah black wife will bene mar'd and gone to de doose knows whuh! Well-uh, good day, sah! 'Bleeged to yo' for yo' 'frugality; but, well-uh, good day, sah!"—Puck.

Change of Evil.

Wife—"Do come with me to call on the Joneses; they'll make you feel perfectly at home." Husband—"Well, then, what on earth is the use of going?"

BOSTON MARKETS

BOSTON.—The market was rather dull today with exception of Smelters, which again showed considerable strength, selling up to 56 1/2 on large buying orders. North Butte was well bought around 60. There seems to be a scarcity of selling pressure in copper stocks. New York market was again very feverish, and we look for this to continue next week. THE CURB MARKETS

CURBS.—The curb market was very dull today, with little demand in evidence for the curb issues lately so very prominent. Calumet & Montana still rests after the spurt of a few days ago and is offered in fair volume at 1 1/2. Sierra was sold at 6 1/2 today, but is offered at 6 1/4 at the close. Superior & Boston was more active today, with no special news to account for it. The stock is scarce and very little demand is necessary to put the stock higher.

TREASURE HIDDEN IN EARTH.

Priceless Relics So Concealed Must Some Day Be Restored to the Light of Day.

The actual prosaic instances of treasure trove and the Old World ceremonial involving "crowners" quest law" to decide the legal rights are to be found in any text book on the subject. More interesting, with a certain fascination of romance, is the reflection that even in our own country, there are probably numerous buried hoards, says the London Chronicle.

One cannot always ignore tradition, and throughout the length and breadth of the land are to be found old legends of hidden treasure, sometimes guarded by a curse, sometimes by a special warder. There is probability almost amounting to certainty that valuables were hidden by the Romans, and even more probably by the Romano Britons. The treasures of the Incas and of pirates such as Kidd are still existent in theory; the buried wealth of India is among the rudimentary facts known to all students of the east.

But perhaps most startling and alluring of all is the theory that among the treasure trove to be at some time recovered from Persian sands or ruins are the Sacred Breastplate and the mysterious Urim and Thummim of the Jewish priesthood.

Thiers and MacMahon. M. Thiers disliked Marshal MacMahon and never lost a chance of saying something to the soldier's discredit.

"Aha," he said on one occasion, standing with his back to the fire in his drawing room as he was wont, "have you heard MacMahon's last? He went to the hospital to see some invalid soldiers. And what has been the matter with you?" he asked a patient.

"Scarlet fever, mon general." "Ah! Bad thing that! It either kills a man or makes an idiot of him. I have had it: I ought to know!"

DERIVATION OF DOLLAR MARK.

Has Long Been Subject of Discussion, and Many Are the Theories Advanced.

The origin of the sign $, as representing the unit of our money system, has long been the subject of discussion and not a little doubt. It has been variously accounted for, the derivations generally advanced being: 1. A combination of the letters U. S. After the adoption of the federal constitution these initials were prefixed to the federal currency, and according to many who have given study to the subject, the two letters were simply run together so as to make the mark $, the loop of the U disappearing in the operation. 2. An adaptation or modification of S, once used to denote a piece of eight reals, or, as a dollar was then called, a piece of eight. 3. A form of H. S., which was used to mark the Roman unit of money. 4. A contraction of P. and S., used in Spanish accounts to indicate peso, (dollars). 5. A device formerly seen on the reverse of a Mexican Pillar dollar, (a Spanish coin), representing the Pillars of Hercules, connected by a scroll displaying the words Plus Ultra. 6. A contraction of the Spanish "fuertes," (hard), to distinguish the silver, or hard, dollar from paper money. In all of these cases it must be admitted that there is no little speculation, and up to this time there is no prospect that the question will ever be definitely settled. The student of the subject can take his choice, and doubtless will be able to find some kind of authority for any one of these diverse explanations.

FAST BOYS TEAM WIN FROM COSYS

Garden claims the distinction of having the fastest juvenile team in the upper peninsula. One week ago the juveniles trimmed the Garden Cosys in a fast 11 inning game and today the two teams will meet again on a wager of $200. The Cosys are reckoned as one of the fastest teams ever organized at Garden and the feat of defeating them is a considerable one. The boy team is made up of lads 14 years of age and are said to put up a particularly fast article of baseball.

PREROGATIVE OF FAIR SEX.

As This Writer Says, Her Age Is Her Own and Mere Man Must Not Question It.

Man has no right to question woman's age— even think about it. A woman, bless her, is as old as she makes out, or makes up, and not a day older. Man is out of his latitude when he begins trying to locate woman's age longitude. It is her privilege to conceal her age in any form or manner she may choose, and it is man's prerogative to assist her as much as possible rather than hinder or question her in any way. Man owes it to himself to see that she is supplied with every means of concealing her age, or any new wrinkle which she chooses to keep from the gaze of the over-curious public. Man is not supposed to be young or beautiful. He couldn't be if he wanted to be, and he wouldn't be if he could. With woman it is different. She wants to be, and can be, and is, whether she wants to be or not, and it is a whole lot better for her and for her admirer, or admirers, as the case may be, that her age be carefully guarded under that charming veil of mystery which should ever be hers by right of possession. Forget that she has an age, brother, and you will be happier and so will she, but don't, for heaven's sake, forget that she has a birthday. —Boston Herald.

Brown was on the slab for the Cubs and while his support was not first class it was far better than that given Mathewson. The score:

In a game filled with many spectacular features and which was never safe for either side until the last ball had been pitched Escanaba's pennant winners defeated Gladstone's crack aggregation 5 to 4 at South park before an audience which packed the grounds to overflowing. Both teams played in top form throughout the game and gave to the spectators numberless thrills by their at times brilliant work. Both teams played a spectacular fielding game Nick Walsh in the left garden for the locals and Boyer in right field for the visitors each bringing the crowd to its feet by what seemed to be impossible catches. Love, a Chicago twirler, was on the slab for Escanaba yesterday and let the visitors down with five hits, one of which however was a beautiful home run by Gravelle of Rapid River who was playing with Gladstone yesterday. Frendenberg's Gladstone's regular staff also pitched almost perfect baseball and with better support at least would have held the score of the locals lower. He was located for eight hits however and all but one of which could be said to have counted in the run getting.

COBB ACCUSED OF SPIKING MAN

CONNIE MACK CLAIMS BAKER HAD NARROW ESCAPE FROM TY.

(Special to Morning Press.) DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 28.—The spiking of Baker of the Philadelphia Americans by Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers in Tuesday afternoon's game will be taken up with the league by Connie Mack was the statement of the Athletic's manager. Baker's side of it: "Cobb cut me deliberately. If that gash had been an eighth of an inch deeper it would forever have ruined my career as a baseball player."

In the temporary absence of the beauty editor this question was handled by mistake to the sporting editor: "How should one get rid of superfluous hairs on the upper lip?" "That's easy," he wrote in reply. "Just push the young man away." —Liverpool Mercury.

Ireland's Story Well Told

History of Race Whose Oppression for Years Attracted World Notice is Told for Benefit of Press Readers.

At the request of many readers who admire the series of Irish History which the Morning Press is now running, it has been decided to give the history twice a week, Sundays and Wednesdays, instead of only on Sunday morning as heretofore.

CHAPTER XIV.

NORMAN RAIDS TO ENGLISH RULE.

108. OLD AND NEW INVADERS. By the beginning of the fourteenth century, the government of England had ceased to be exclusively Norman, and was gradually becoming more truly English in institution, law, and language. English literature was blending the older tongue of the Angles and Saxons with the French imported by the Normans from France, and a mixed speech, half Germanic, half Latin in origin, was being formed, of great flexibility, color, and strength. The conquered English were absorbing and assimilating their conquerors.

This change naturally affected Ireland. The first comers from Britain had been Norman knights like De Lacy and De Courcy, with French names, and speaking French. They often married Irish wives, a daughter of Roderick O'Connor thus becoming the mother of one branch of the Fitzgeralds. The children of these marriages of course learned Irish as a mother-tongue and it is safe to say that many of these Celto-Normans never knew a word of English, passing directly from Norman-French to Irish. The common religion drew them closer to their adopted country, and we find Irish princes and Norman nobles vying with each other in founding the early Cistercian and Franciscan abbeys. Many of these first settlers became so completely acclimated, and felt themselves so much at home, that they took Irish names, as well as the Irish tongue, and of them it was said that they were "more Irish than the Irish themselves."

109. FEUDS BETWEEN THE NORMAN AND ENGLISH SETTLERS. As Britain became more English, a new race of invaders began to come to Ireland, no longer Norman, but distinctly English, in thought and speech. As they were much more in harmony with conditions then prevailing in England, they were constantly favored by the Dublin government at the expense of the older Norman families. A keen rivalry grew up between the two elements, and the English newcomers spoke contemptuously of the older Normans as the "degenerate English." A result of this hostility was the quarrel between the Germans and Savages, from among the newer English on the one side, and the De Bermingham family on the other. Sir John de Bermingham, who had defeated Edward Bruce at the battle of Faughart, together with his brothers and nephews, and a number of his followers, a hundred and sixty in all, were treacherously murdered by his rivals at Braggans-town near Ardee in Louth, in the year 1329.

Another similar affair happened one Sunday morning in 1333. Young De Burgo, called the Dun Earl of Ulster, was on his way to church at Carrickfergus on the north shore of Belfast Lough. He was attacked and murdered by Richard de Mande'ville, his uncle by marriage. As De Burgo was a great favorite with the Norman families, they avenged his death by killing all persons suspected of having a part in the murder, so that nearly three hundred of De Mande'ville's followers were slain. De Burgo had vast estates in Ulster and Connaught, and at his death this territory fell to his daughter, then an infant. Two kinsmen of the Dun Earl, seeing that under Irish law, with its principal of election, the vast estates would probably fall to them, and not to the helpless girl, determined to seize the property. They announced that they had broken off their allegiance to England and English law, and in all things adopted the life and customs of the Irish. They founded two powerful lines of the Burke family.

110. "THE PALE" AND THE "BLACK RENTS." The English settlement in the immediate neighborhood of Dublin, which later came to be known as the "Pale" (meaning "an inclosure," the same word as "palling," a fence from a n embankment which was built around it in the fifteenth century,) was the only region which was really subject to England, and was now the stronghold of English government in Ireland. Wars, famine and pestilence had so weakened the inhabitants of this small district that they were no longer able to defend themselves. The powerful Irish chieftains made the English of the Pale pay the tribute for protection from attacks by bodies of Irish raiders; and this tribute, which was called "Black Rent," was sometimes paid even by the Dublin government.

111. WEAKNESS OF THE ENGLISH GOVERNMENT. By 1336, the English government at Dublin was so weak that the lord lieutenant called in the help of Maurice Fitzgerald, one of the powerful Norman lords, to ward off the attacks of the Irish chiefs, and gave him the title of first Earl of Desmond. Although Fitzgerald won a few battles for the English, his presence did more harm than good, for he quartered his immense army of ten thousand men on the poor settlers of the Pale. For example, he permitted his soldiers to pay themselves in money and food, wherever and whenever they could find them. The result was the dire impoverishment and almost complete extinction of the settlement. The colonists left the Pale in hundreds and returned to England. The Irish chiefs daily regained some thing of their lost power. The poor people, both English settlers and native Irish, were equally miserable. The great Norman barons careless of everything but their own interests, and fortified in their strongholds, were becoming more and more formidable. Edward III made three unsuccessful attempts to break the power of these barons between the years 1331 and 1334, but none of the governors sent by him to Dublin were able to accomplish anything. The strong castles were effective against the Dublin armies as against the Irish chiefs, and the barons preserved their position of almost independent sovereignty for nearly two centuries more.

112. LEGAL INJUSTICE. The Normans and the Irish had begun to mingle, in many places living together in comparative peace. There was, however, one powerful influence always at work to make their enemies rather than friends; namely, the condition of the law. Ever since the first coming of the Normans, there had been two codes of law, the English and the Breton. (See sections 97, 98.) The former was for the colonists only; no other Irishman could seek its protection. The result was that an Irishman injured by an Englishman could not seek redress under English law, and the Englishman was not compelled to submit to Breton law. On the other hand, if the Irishman were the offender, he was at once tried by English law and punished. Thus all the native Irish were liable to licensed persecution. The Irish repeatedly asked that they might receive equal protection under English law, and Edward I and Edward III had been willing to grant this demand. But the great barons, realizing that their own power would thereby be lessened, had persuaded the king to refuse the petition of the Irish.

113. STATUTE OF KILKENNY, 1367. Not satisfied with these existing causes of separation between the Irish and the English, the third son of Edward III, Lionel, duke of Clarence, when lord lieutenant, introduced a new law in 1367 called the Statute of Kilkenny, which widened the gulf between the two races. Lionel had married the daughter of the Dun Earl Ulster, whose murder had been recorded. He thus acquired the titles of Earl of Ulster and Lord of Connaught through his wife. He was, however, full of bitter hatred to the Irish, and not without cause. He had been in Ireland three times before this, twice as lord lieutenant, in which office he had several times suffered defeat at the hands of the Irish, and thus became convinced that the natives could never be subdued and brought under English law. He therefore went to the opposite extreme, and tried to make laws which would cut off all intercourse between the settlers and the natives. (Continued Next Wednesday.)

Extremely Dry Weather. Several Kansans were talking of dry weather in the state in the earlier days.

"I drove through a western county a number of springs ago," said one of them, "and it hadn't rained for a long time. 'Pretty dry, isn't it?' I ventured to a native. 'Bet your boots it's dry,' he replied. 'See that old sow over there?' 'I told him I was looking at her. 'Well,' he went on, 'I had to drive her down to the creek, three miles away, and soak her for three days before she would hold slop. She was mighty dry, I tell you.'"

ORIGIN OF THE RESTAURANT.

May Be Said to Have First Appeared in England About the Time of Shakespeare.

In primitive times, the only places in London where the public could be entertained with food had been the cooks' shops. The famous East Cheap was a great thoroughfare, down which the stalls of the butchers alternated with those of the cooks. You chose a joint at the flesh market and you carried it next door to be cooked for you by a certain hour. If you wished for wine, you must bring that with you, for the cooks sold no liquor, although they seem to have provided, as time went on, more and more of the natural accompaniments of meat, such as bread, vegetables and pastry. This habit continued until well into the reign of Elizabeth, and so long as such an inconvenient custom prevailed there could have been no real comfort for any citizen who chose to dine abroad. He must have had as much trouble with portage and baskets as a country party has to-day at a picnic. But about the time that Shakespeare came up to London a remarkable change took place in the customs of the town, and the practice of public hospitality and entertainment was singularly facilitated. The nature of this change lay in the sudden development of the tavern and the consequent withdrawal of the cooks. The worshipful company of Pastelars, as the cooks were called, ceased to enjoy the monopoly of providing hot meals.

Pineapples in Queensland.

Altogether there are some 3,000 acres devoted to pineapple cultivation in Queensland, giving a yield of something like ten million pines a year. Two crops are gathered during the 12 months. Most of the owners of the plantations started without capital, and are now reaping about $250 an acre net profit. It is an industry from which returns are quickly obtained. Fifteen months after planting the grower is securing his first crop. Next year he should double his crop, because, like the banana, once the pineapple has borne fruit the stalk dies down, and its place is taken by one or more suckers, which, in their turn, fruit and die. A cider of remarkably fine quality can be made from the fruit.

World's Busiest Street.

The shortest and busiest street in the world is Mansion House street, London. It is only about 500 feet long, and runs between the mansion house, the official residence of the lord mayor, and the Union bank of London, and everything and everybody that passes between "the city" which is the ancient section of the metropolis, and the rest of London have to go that way. Not long ago policemen were stationed to count the vehicles, two on either side. They were relieved every hour, because counting is very tedious work and acts upon the nerves. One set of counters reported 37,852 vehicles, another set counted 37,616 and the other two reports reported totals between these two extremes.

LOVEMAKING IN OLD MEXICO.

American Youth, Unless Coached, Would Find Himself Something of a Novice at the Game.

In the uncertain illumination of the electric lamps some of the señoritas of Tepic City appeared very attractive in breezy, fluffy gowns and fetching mantillas, and they knew it pretty well, too. They like to have you look at them directly and admiringly, and they will not drop their eyes. If you have the nerve to give one a look of this kind—such a look as would be considered extremely rude in any American city—the chances are, when you meet her for the next turn you will be rewarded with a smile and a challenge from the black eyes, and if you have a sufficient stock of nerve in reserve, you will speak to her, and pay her some complimentary remark, upon the first opportunity that offers. This is good breeding and will not be resisted. Should you then become infatuated with the lady, you will search out her home, visit her barred window and mope under it for an hour or two every morning; and if you impress her favorably, she will make your heart glad by talking with you through the bars, or dropping little scented notes to you. Should you become real serious you will hire a stringed band to serenade her at night now and then. To conform with the custom you should start your band out at midnight and let it play as long as your money lasts.—Outing Magazine.

The Man to Be Watched. Always suspect a man who affects great softness of manner, an unrefined evenness of temper, and an unexcited staid, slow and deliberate. These things are all unnatural, and bespeak a degree of mental discipline into which he has no purpose of craft or design to answer, cannot submit to drill himself. The Spanish method of producing salt, as employed near Cadiz, is by allowing the sun to evaporate the water from what are known as "pans," small ponds prepared for the purpose of a uniform depth of about eighteen inches. These are flooded directly from the sea three or four times a year, and in time there is left a deposit of about three inches of salt, which is piled in the open in the form of small pyramids until sold. This method has the advantage of being inexpensive and of not requiring machinery. The only requisites are a hot sun and a soil which will not permit the water to filter through, as the salt in solution would then be lost. Something depends also upon the analysis of the water. For instance, the water of the Mediterranean has a greater specific gravity than that of the Atlantic. The Second Fiddle. The second fiddle is, on the whole, the most widely played of all instruments—fortunately, since it is so especially the instrument of harmony. A great many men have an aptitude for the second fiddle, and where they take it up at once without too much vain experimenting with more pretentious parts, they find much satisfaction in it. There is plenty of poor work done with the second fiddle, though. Men who are forced to it by marrying or other mischance are very likely to play badly. A master of the second fiddle is not least among masters, and he has besides the promise of inheriting the earth.—Puck. The Editor—This phrase "He led her to the altar" makes me tired. Society Reporter—Why? The Editor—It's hackneyed, for one thing, and in the second place it's nonsense. Led, indeed! Most girls have to do the steering because the man has blind stagers.—Cleveland Leader. Human Life. Human life is everywhere a state in which much is to be endured, and little to be enjoyed.—Johnson.

What Robert Was. The mother of Clara, aged four, and of Robert, aged six, was looking at flats. Robert accompanied her. Finally she found an apartment at her price which she thought she would like. The janitor's wife, who acted as agent, thought she would like Robert's mother, too, but she wasn't sure about the children. "You say there is another one at home?" she said. "That makes two. We have a rule against admitting children. Still, if the little girl is as nice as the little boy seems to be," here she patted Robert's head affectionately, "I don't know but what it will be all right." Robert brushed off the approving hand impatiently. "Don't you fool yourself about me," he said, indignantly. "I'm a regular devil of a fellow, I am."
